TALE OF MURDER AT GRAND FALLS

Young Girl Brutally Shot to Death by a Rejected Suitor.

Phoebe Bell, an 18-year-old girl of Grand Falls was on Thursday afternoon shot dead by Newman Clark of Four Falls.

The murder took place at the home of Herbert Wood, who lives across the river from the town, and was committed almost in the immediate presence of several witnesses. After firing four shots at the girl he turned the revolver on himself and inflicted such wounds that he has since been confined to the hospital.

The inquest on the body of Phoebe Bell was held before Coroner George A. Ryan. The jury was made up as follows: W. V. Powers, R. A. Rideout, F. L. Dixon, L. J. Burgess, Dennis Paradis, L. C. McCluskey and Charles Mignault. The first witness called was Claude Murphy, of Andover. He testified to being at Herbert Wood's house on the afternoon of Thursday, March 26. Ida Pelletier, Phoebe Bell and Newman Clark were there. Phoebe seemed to be cross. She went to the next room, a bedroom, and Clark followed. Witness did not hear their conversation, but soon after heard three shots. He went to the door and saw Phoebe Bell fall on the bed as Clark fired the third shot. Clark then went to the sitting room and told them not to be frightened. He then bared his chest and said, "If you want to see me go, watch me."

He fired three shots at himself. Witness then went through the bedroom and saw Phoebe Bell lying on the bed gasping for breath. Ida Pelletier, the next witness, gave practically the same evidence. She heard Clark ask the girl to marry him and she heard her say "no" just before the shots were fired. She also told that he said he had killed the girl because she would not marry him. She left the house after he fired the first shot at himself.

Dr. Lorenzo Chapman testified to being called by telephone to Herbert Wood's house. A little before 6 o'clock he examined the body of Phoebe Bell and found that she was dead. He found a bullet wound in the chest in the region of the stomach, and another in the neck. In his opinion either of the wounds would be sufficient to cause death.

The verdict of the jury was that Phoebe Bell came to her death as the result of wounds received from bullets fired from a revolver in the hands of Newman Clark.

Thursday night, when his life was despaired of Clark made his will disposing of his farm and other property, valued at $30,000 to relatives. Clark is said to have had two wives and two children, one by each wife.

The second wife of Clark has been located at Houlton. Nine years ago, Clark married Miss Elizabeth Nickerson, of Four Falls. He was divorced from her on July 3, 1917, and nine days later married Miss Fern Inman, of Tobique, a cousin of his first wife.

The second Mrs. Clark obtained a separation and is now living in Houlton. Mrs. Clark had nothing to say when questioned regarding the tragedy. She has a child a year old who has been boarding with Mrs. Herbert Wood at Grand Falls, where Miss Bell was shot and killed.

Clark is recovering from the self-inflicted wounds at the hospital and no date has yet been set for a hearing.

THE MIRACLE MAN HERE TONIGHT

With Large Advance Sale of Tickets—Centreville Delighted

This evening the first showing of The Miracle Man, the marvel of the year in the photodrama world, will be given in the Star Theatre. The advance sale of seats for the opening has been remarkable and it is certain that the hall will be filled to capacity. That one dollar should be the price of admission to a "picture show" in Hartland seems to stagger some people. But the miracle man was shown to 16 times 1900 people at the Imperial in St. John for the same price. In Boston this week this photoplay opened its third season—at $1.00—but so great were the crowds that after the first day the price was raised to $1.50. The showing tonight will be the full story, unbridged, and with complete orchestral interpretation.

It is unfortunate that the dates conflict with evangelistic services going on in town, but the dates were assigned weeks ago and can not be changed. The management makes no appeal to any to leave church to attend this later form of spiritual awakening, but it does appeal to the clergy and all their flocks to attend the afternoon performance tomorrow at 3.45. Much of the evils of New York's underworld is shown, but the denouement will touch the hardest heart, as in the story the wicked lives of the characters are cleansed and they face the future with a new vision of purity and virtue.

At Centreville "The Miracle Man" was shown before a large and captivated audience last evening.

Remember the dates: Tonight, tomorrow afternoon at 3.45 and tomorrow evening at 8 sharp. The play lasts nearly three hours. Reserved seats $1.00; rush seats 75 cents; children at matinee 35 cents.

Evangelistic Services at the United Baptist Church.

Growing interest is manifest in the evangelistic services being conducted at the United Baptist church by Rev. H. R. Bell. Each night a powerful discourse is given and the message is being driven home to the large congregations. The three services last Sunday were well attended, the service for men in the afternoon seemingly making a deep impression. At the evening service the church was filled to the doors. Services are continuing throughout the week and will go on through the week following. On Sunday there will be a prayer and praise service at 10.30. At 3.30 the evangelist will preach a special sermon to the Knights of Pythias, who will march to church and occupy the central part of the auditorium. Mr. Bell will also preach in the evening from the subject, "An Awful Mistake."

For Sale—Pure bred Shetland pony, harness, saddle, cart and bangor buggy; two-seated carriage, arched bottom. Been run about 75 miles. One Massey-Harris fertilizer or eleven drill grain seeder. Apply to E. A. Savage, Centreville.

ELECTRIC CURRENT FOR ST. JOHN VALLEY

Premier Foster Outlines the Government Scheme for Developing Provincial Water Powers

On Friday Premier Foster submitted to the Legislature the government's scheme for developing the water powers of the province and introduced a bill to enable the project to be carried through with as little delay as possible. The Premier evidently has given the big question a great deal of careful study, and it is said his presentation of the matter was as plain and clearly understandable as though it had been prepared by an expert hydraulic engineer.

The premier explained that the two great water powers of the province were Grand Falls on the St. John and Grand Falls on the Nepisiguit. The latter was at present being fully developed by Bathurst Lumber Co., who would distribute light and power in that territory, using the greater part of the electricity generated in their immense lumber and pulp enterprises. Grand Falls of the St. John, said the premier, were just where they always had been, wasting thousands of horsepower yearly throughout the ages. This great power has been tied up with speculators for years and it is now to be sold. At the present time the franchise is in the hands of the International Paper Company of the United States, who deposited $50,000 with the government in 1915. They were allowed until one year after the termination of the lease before completing development, and if at the end of that time they had not expended $100,000 in development work their deposit would be forfeited. Latest reports say that this company will at once commence development work and by so doing prolong the life of their franchise. But, the premier declared, they must make real development or make way for others who will.

The government plan of water power development does not at present include Grand Falls. The towns and villages of the province are sorely in need of electric light and power and it is to supply this need that the new scheme is being put through. There are in the province many water powers provided by nature and it is the lesser ones that the government will put in operation first. It is proposed that the whole matter be handled by a commission, which will include expert engineers. The province will at the present time be figured into several sections that can be supplied from central plants. That most interesting to Observer readers will be a plant at the mouth of the Shogomoc, in York county, that can supply all the present light and power needs of Fredericton and all the St. John Valley north to Perth, where the line may be linked up with the N. B. & Maine Electric Co.

A single unit, it has been learned, can be placed at Shogomoc Falls capable of developing 3,132 horsepower continuously or 7,517 for 10 hours a day. This will be ample power for all requirements of present business of Fredericton and the whole upper St. John Valley, with power to spare. If there comes need of more power, Pokiok Falls, only a short distance from Shogomoc, may be harnessed and bring the power up to 6,402 continuous or 15,581 ten hours.

SHE LOOKS LIKE ANOTHER WOMAN

Edward Young Praises Tanlac For Restoring His Wife's Health.

"I have never seen anybody in as miserable condition from indigestion as my wife was, but now since she has taken Tanlac she has gained ten pounds and is in better health than for years," said Edward Young, a well-known employee of the Robin, Jones & Whitman Co., living at 199 Grafton street, Halifax, N. S., while telling of the experience of his wife Mrs. Anna Young with the medicine.

"My wife has suffered so much for the past eight years that she was almost a physical wreck and had fallen off in weight until she was a mere shadow of her former self," he continued. "Her appetite had about left her and she suffered for hours after every meal. Gas bloated her up and caused her heart to palpitate so bad that she could hardly get her breath and her nerves were in such a wretched condition the least little excitement would upset her. She was subject to severe headaches nearly every day. She would give completely out and would be in bed for three or four days, then would get up and drag around the house for a day or so and then back to bed. Her strength and energy left her and she lost thirty five pounds and was so weak and miserable that she was on the verge of a complete nervous breakdown. Not so long ago I took her down to our old home at St. Margaret's Bay and had her rest up for six weeks, thinking the change would do her good, but as soon as we came back she was as bad as ever.

"So many people were talking about Tanlac that I made up my mind to get her a bottle. She began to improve right away and now that she has taken five bottles she looks and acts like a different woman. She has a fine appetite and eats anything she wants without suffering any bad after effects. Headaches and nervousness have both left her and she has not been in bed a single day since she started taking Tanlac. Her strength and energy have returned and she is gaining back her lost weight as fast as she can. She says Tanlac is the grandest medicine in the world, and I certainly have every reason for believing it."

Tanlac is sold in Hartland by Estey & Curtis Co., and by the leading druggist in every town.

70 YEARS

Seventy years ago when our grandparents were young, they treated their colds and coughs, etc. with what was considered the reliable cough medicine.

SHARP'S BALSAM

of Horsehound and Anise Seed

Since then it has been the family remedy for coughs, colds, croup, sore throat, asthma. It was good for your grandparents and their children—it will do you and your children good.

IN MARCH 1883

Mr. M. Smith of St. John's, N.B., writes: "For sixteen years I suffered from asthma, often being obliged to sit in bed to prevent suffocating. I tried all the usual medicines, but without effect, until I obtained some Sharp's Balsam (which was recommended to me) and after using two bottles, I found the relief so long sought for."

When you need a cough medicine ask for this famous old remedy. Sold at drug and general stores everywhere—25c.

delightful two weeks visit with her brothers, Rainsford and Hubert, of Lowell, Mass., returned home Wednesday.

Mrs. C. R. Hatfield, Simonds, was the guest of her cousin, Mrs. Roy Rigby, on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Dickinson were over-night visitors this week at Mr. Dickinson's old home at Newburg. The many friends of Mrs. Robert Kidney are glad to know she has recovered from a severe attack of flu contracted while nursing her sisters at Victoria who were suffering from that dread disease. Mrs. Kidney was able to return to her home Thursday.

Roy Rigby and son, Carl, were week-end visitors to St. John. Mr. Rigby was representing the Hartland Branch of the G. W. V. A. at the Provincial Annual Convention of that society.

Mrs. Ernest Seely and Mrs. Roy Rigby were very pleasantly entertained at tea on Thursday by Mrs. Wm. Dickinson.

A large number of the friends of Ernest Seely gathered at his home Tuesday evening. The party broke up at a late hour after a very enjoyable time of games, entertainment and refreshments. Mr. and Mrs. Seely are about to move to their new home at Jacksonville.

Mrs. Bert Day, who has been receiving treatment at the hospital, Woodstock, returned home Saturday.

Bristol Brevities

A representative gathering of our progressive people enjoyed a great treat on March 17 at the play given by our amateur dramatic club. The play was FERGUSON OF TROY and was a farce comedy in three acts by Bernard Francis Moore. The characters were taken as follows:

Walter Hawley, an elder of the Reformed Church—E. R. Marich.

Tom Ferguson, M. D., a sport from Troy—L. A. Noble.

Charley Marshall, Susette's fiancé—J. Banks.

Lionel Fairfield, a crank that lives next door—H. McDougall.

Mike Murphy, Policeman—Jack Hood.

Ellen Hawley, the elder's wife—Mrs. A. O. Phillips.

Belinda Ferguson, Tom's wife—Mrs. E. R. Marich.

Susette Hawley, the elder's niece—Mrs. D. W. Rogers.

Johanna Mulrooney, maid—Mrs. M. Colter.

These were all well taken as great talent was displayed, but Mrs. D. W. Rogers and Miss Colter deserve special mention while E. R. Marich as an irate husband brought down the house. The duel scene was very fine and here Susette won honors.

The pianist of the evening was Miss Crystal Davis whose talent in that art is so well recognized that it needs no mention here. The soloist was Mrs. A. O. Phillips. Upon request she sang the ballad "Mother Machree" in a sweetly pathetic voice that never fails to move her audience.

The song, "When You Dance With Your Soldier Boy" was gracefully rendered by the Misses Doris Phillips and Zaida Rogers.

Under the efficient management of E. R. Marich, L. A. Noble and D. W. Rogers everything went well and the hall was literally packed. There is no doubt but that the attendance would have been larger had space been available. We understand that the young people hope to improve the hall so as to make it a suitable place for holding high class entertainments. We are sure that their efforts are praiseworthy and deserve the support of a progressive public.

A town that has three electric light plants, seven stores and three fine churches surely needs an opera house.

Primitive Baptist Quarterly Meeting

The Primitive Baptists met in quarterly session at Wakefield with a good representation of ministers, delegates and lay. Weather and road conditions were exceptionally good for the time of year. First meeting was held Saturday morning with a "Good Old Times Religion" element. The spiritual tide continually rose until the close of the session on Monday evening. Many souls during the session expressed their desire to get right with God.

Monday morning was devoted to business when considerable denominational business was transacted. Hymn Book committee reported progress and expect to have the book completed and before the public in three or four months. A predominant feature of the session was the presence of some seven or eight individuals, who were converted under the preaching and baptized by the late Rev. G. W. Orser, at this place, Wakefield, 46 years ago this month. It was gratifying to hear them express in this day of religious decline that the meetings were characteristic of the same element and spirit they possessed near half a century ago. Among those present from a distance were Brother F. T. Giberson, sister F. Walters and daughter, Ruth, of Caribou, Brother and sister Cogswell and Brother W. Orser, of Fort Fairfield, R. A. Nixon and W. Sewell, of Ludlow, Daniel Brooks, Ashland, and many others that space would not permit us to mention. All join in the sincere belief that Primitive Baptists stand for principles and church polity that must continue to increase.

Annual conference is announced to be at Carlisle first Saturday in July.—Clerk.

Boswell's House on the Market

ACCORDING to the New York Times, the Mansion House of Auchinleck, of which James Boswell was once the Laird, in Ayrshire, Scotland, which he vainly sought to represent in Parliament, is on the market. Here is a chance for some fortunate Boswellian to settle himself congenially, if he be not afraid of income tax and death duties, in Boswell's old home, which he so loved to be away from. It is Burns' county, too, and doubtless still rich in "whisky, soul of quips and cranks," whose unpermitted flow surely the devotees of Jimmy Boswell, one of the most amiable of fossopots, may be forgiven for deploring. The new American Laird, rich in cars, can travel in them as Jimmy in his youth described himself as travelling "in post chaises, miles without number"; he can eat "of every good dish, especially apple pie"; he can drink "old hock," if any is left in the world. He should have a "very fine temper"; be "some-what of a humorist."

"He was pleased to listen," writes Boswell of his Great Bear in 1763, "to a particular account I gave him of my family and its hereditary estate, as to the extent and population of which he asked questions and made calculations, recommending at the same time a liberal kindness to the tenantry, as people over whom the proprietor was placed by Providence. He took delight in hearing my description of the romantic seat of my ancestry, 'I must be there, Sir,' said he, 'and we will live in the old castle; and if there is not rodn remaining there, we will build one.'" Johnson went there, as we all know, and the place is described in the "Tour of the Hebrides." In his old age Mrs. Boswell asked him to come again. Polite letters passed between them. Yet she cannot have forgotten that "his irregular hours and uncouth habits, such as turning the candles with their heads downward, when they did not burn bright enough, and letting the wax drop upon the carpet, could not but be disagreeable to a lady," and "I have seen many a bear led by a man, but I never before saw a man led by a bear."

Bozzy loved to talk about the "woods and rocks," "the romantic groves" of his ancestors. In the old days "the Laird of Auchinleck had an elegant house, in front of which he could ride ten miles upon his own territory, upon which he had upward of six hundred people." His own father, Lord Auchinleck, was a strong and disagreeable character, worthy of Stevenson. One loves to think of the cultivated old patriarch, snoring, however, wrongly. "There's nae hope for Jamie, mon. Jamie is auld dommie; he kepted a schule, and can't it an academy." One repeats unblushingly all these ancient and beloved Boswelliana and Johnsoniana. They have become ritual. They cannot be repeated too often, especially the old Laird's fine saying to Johnson, who had asked him to tell of what use Cromwell was: "God, Doctor, he gart (made) kings ken they had a lith (joint) in their neck."

Some of us dote on Auchinleck because near it was the place of Miss Blair, that heiress whom Boswell's father wanted him to marry and to whom the volatile young man made love in person and by deputy. Bozzy sighed and adored and quarrelled with his "dear indel." He dressed in green and gold. He even played his part with "Spanish stateliness." He squeezed and kissed "her fine hand while she looked at me with those beautiful black eyes." Does she have any particular liking for him? No. "I like many people as well as you. I like Jeany Maxwell better than you," says the frank lady. Sir Alexander Gilmour is the favorite. Bozzy laughs off his disappointment, and writes a ballad:

She told me with a scornful look,
I was as ugly as a tawney;
For she a better fish could look,
The rich and gallant knight, Sir Sawney.

Dear old Bozzy, Bozzy ever fresh and young! Most un-Scottish of Scotchmen, one of the most mixed of men; unconventional conventionalist; a Tory prop of state and church, who loved to picnic on the coast of Bohemia; amateur, scholar, buffoon; sentimentalist and cynic; generous and sordid; affable and candid, vain and an analyzer of his own vanity; collector of celebrities, sycophant of genius! He wanted a high place at the bar and in politics, and he won. Most sociable of men, a good fellow, though not without traits of Rousseau. The Mansion House of Auchinleck ought to be a national monument, but money is scarce over on the other side.

Mrs. Will Crooks.
Mrs. Will Crooks, wife of the labor leader in the British House of Commons, is active in a propaganda for reducing the drudgery of housework. Apropos of this, she said recently: "In all the talk we hear about shortening hours of labor one might easily imagine that the world consisted of men only, or at least that women's hours are already so short that any relaxation for them was of no moment whatever. The facts are exactly the opposite. Not only does the number of women exceed that of men, but her hours are as indefinite as the number and character of her household duties. Tens of thousands of mothers have next to no leisure at all, and their work is tiring, worrying, trying, and exhausting."

"What did her father say when you asked permission to marry his daughter?"
"I didn't ask him."
"You didn't?"
"No. She and her mother said it wasn't necessary. They were running affairs in that house."

Thoroughly Trained.
"Now, sir," said the captain of the club, "you understand we want a secretary who is thoroughly accustomed to managing men."
"In that case," said the applicant, nervously, "I'm afraid it's not me you want, but my wife."

Save your Hair! Get a small bottle of Dandurine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is a sure evidence of a medical scalp, or dandruff—that awful scalp. There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. ## Electric Current for St. John Valley

The bill is very lengthy and only its general principles have as yet penetrated the public mind, but so far as it is generally understood, it is the biggest and best measure for the good of the greatest number of people that any government has yet brought forward. It is made plain that the electric current will be sold at slight advance over cost of production and the provision for a sinking fund to eventually take care of the original expenditure.

It is believed that the intention of the government is to make haste, using due caution with the project. One needs not be possessed with the vision of a prophet to see what this great enterprise will mean for Hartland, Florenceville, Centreville, Bristol, Bath and all the villages along the river.

Probably no measure was ever brought forward by any government that has been so gratefully received. Even the Opposition is warmed to a degree of enthusiasm and the Standard says that if Premier Foster succeeds with the scheme as outlined the public will owe him a lasting debt of gratitude.

Funeral of Miss Elta Belyea

The funeral service of Miss Elta Belyea was held in the United Baptist church at 3 o'clock in the afternoon Friday March 26. The service was conducted by the pastor, E. A. Trites, assisted by Evangelist H. R. Bell who rendered two beautiful and appropriate solos. Rev. Mr. True, Adventist, was also present. The floral contributions were magnificent, the one accompanying the remains and contributed by the doctors and nurses of the hospital, showed how Miss Belyea had endeared herself during her short stay among them. More beautiful than the most costly flowers is a tribute whose fragrance will last when the roses have ceased to blush and have lost their perfume, is a letter addressed to the mother of the deceased which follows:

Bellows Falls, Vt., March 24
My Dear Mrs. Belyea:—Although a stranger I cannot refrain from sending you greeting in this hour of deep sorrow which has come upon us all. I wish you could know how your daughter had endeared herself to every one with whom she came in contact here; to the patients at the hospital, to her fellow nurses, and to the friends whom she met at the church. I have often had the patients speak to me in her praise, of her faithfulness and good cheer. She was like a flower that carried comfort wherever she went. She used to come to our young people meeting at the church regularly when her work permitted. Since her injury to her knee and her assignment to night duty, I have not seen much of her except at the hospital. It always did us good to meet her, and feel her cheery spirit. A great change came over her this fall and winter. I have never seen a girl unfold into womanhood so quickly. It seemed a miracle of transformation. Her beauty seemed to be multiplied, marked with freshness and color. She gave one a wonderful impression of Purity and Strength. She was as lovely as a picture. I thank God that we have the picture stored in our memories though she has passed on to make others happy and to serve elsewhere. May God give you and all your family in your perplexity and sorrow. May you find as Joseph found, that even of this you shall be able to say ere long, "God meant it unto good" With very kindest regards from Mrs. Clark and myself.

Sincerely yours,
JOHN L. CLARK,
Pastor of Baptist Church.

Whooping Cough.

Mr. Arthur Hainge, Ashton Farm, Perley, Sask., writes:—"Two years ago whooping cough was very bad in this part of the country, our eight months old boy caught it and had a very severe attack. A neighbor advised the use of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and we gave it and nothing else with splendid results. When the older brother took the whooping cough we used this medicine promptly and prevented serious trouble as the cough passed off in two or three days.

The Poor House for Publishers.

The Port Fairfield Review has this sad item:

J. W. Correll, a life-long printer and publisher, former owner and publisher of the Victoria County News, Perth, is now spending the remainder of his life in a poor house in St. John. And a lot more of us printers may have to spend our evenings in the poorhouse also if prices of paper and everything that go into the running of a printing establishment keep on increasing. They are certainly bad enough now, but every mail brings news worse and worse.

Eczema on Baby's Ear.

Mrs. F. Clarke Belmont, Man., writes: "My baby had eczema on her ear. The sore was very bad and nothing seemed to do her much good. Hearing of the remarkable cure Dr. Chase's Ointment was making, we sent for some, and after the third application the sore began to heal. I am glad to say that it is quite well now and we give the credit to Dr. Chase's Ointment. We cannot recommend this preparation too highly.

A Recluse and Queer

By S. B. HACKLEY

(Copyright, 1915, by the McClure News-Paper Syndicate.)

"How would it do to invite Nathan Craft over to see Miss Roberta, Mamie?" Jim Leverance, in the saddle, looked inquiringly at his wife, who had just left her newly arrived guest.

"Mercy, Jim! Bert would marry him right out of hand! Dora's entertaining her at 12 o'clock lunch tomorrow, and she doesn't want him to drop in and meet Bert and the other girls she's invited. Can't you get him off to town tomorrow afternoon on some pretext?"

"I guess I can get him to drive in and get that piece of freight we ordered together; but, say, Mamie, don't you think you girls are exceeding your rights?"

"Oh, hush, Jimmy boy!" Mamie cried lightly. "We are safeguarding little Nathan's interests!"

Jim's snort was not complimentary to their sense of justice. They, his wife and all his wife's people—since Dora, the youngest Hunter girl, had married Burrell Craft, the younger of the two bachelor brothers, who, together, owned a thousand acres of the richest land in the Blue Grass, and raised blooded horses and cattle for the market—seemed obsessed with the fear of Nathan's marrying.

When the Hunters, newcomers, discovered the two bashful bachelors, pretty Dora had annexed Burrell skillfully. There had been no other daughter for Nathan, and after the advent of Dora's little boy, the family, seeing a possibility of the child's being some time heir to his uncle's share of the farm, had determined nobody else's daughter should "capture" Nathan.

When Burrell married, Nathan very sensibly took his cases of insects and moved into a big, comfortable log house on the back of the farm and gave the big red brick home up to his new sister-in-law—a most pleasing arrangement to the Hunter family. Nathan, living alone in his own house, a bit isolated, could be kept from meeting their unmarried women guests.

"Mamie's a dear, and Dora's good to Burrell," Leverance mused as he rode off. "I call it rotten they don't want to see old Nathe, the most affectionate fellow in the world, happy with a woman, too! They have eyes filled with Burr's head with the advisability of keeping Nathe single. That—that's getting within a man's rights! Well, I promised to send him off ten miles tomorrow, but, darn it, I feel mean!"

The next day Nathan Craft, at the station, stepped into the danger zone Jim wished him to enter. An erect elderly lady with very white hair and very black eyes spoke to him. Did he know of a small cottage in the country and somewhat isolated from the road she could rent until September? Her daughter, Miss Hagar McNaught, a teacher, had been ill, and was ordered to the country.

When she introduced the daughter, a graceful girl with particularly beautiful black eyes, Nathan felt that fate could hold nothing better in store for him than to allow him to take this winsome creature in his arms and carry her through life!

Yes, he knew of such a place, a small stone cottage on the river cliff. Nobody was living in it, but it was in good repair. This house (which fact he did not mention) was on the five miles distant cliff on which he spent every Sunday afternoon in summer with his butterfly net. A man had committed suicide there some years before, but Nathan withheld this fact also. If they knew nothing of the unhappy story the cliff would be an ideal resting place.

Three days after, on Sunday afternoon, Nathan took his butterfly net and set out for Reed's cliff. Under the seat of his runabout he slipped while Shadrach, his negro cook, was not looking, a peck basket of yellow-meat, pink-cheeked peaches. At the foot of the cliff Nathan secured his horse, and with a strangely beating heart, climbed the rugged path.

Back of the cluster of cedars that stood between the path and the cottage he paused uncertainly. Then he heard voices.

"Oh, mother! isn't it beautiful here? That nice man that sent us here—don't you love him, mother dear?"

This came clear through the cedars. Nathan's foot struck a stone noisily. He could only go on.

"Good afternoon!" he stammered, "I was passing by and I remembered there was no fruit here—I have brought you a few peaches!"

And the cliff was covered with ripening blackberries!

They greeted him with gentle friendliness and after a while walked with him down the river path where the butterflies hung over the fire pinks.

With his hobby before him Nathan forgot his shyness. His clear brown eyes grew brilliant in his enthusiastic explanations, and Hagar—Hagar wondered if the supper they had prepared was good enough to ask him to sit down to. She wanted him to stay.

It was not until sunset that he took reluctant leave. "Once in a while," he prevaricated, "I get over here in the middle of the week, as well as on Sunday, with my butterfly nets, and I'd be glad to bring you pears, apples, etc., any time I happen to come."

Miss Gardiner stayed a month with Mamie Leverance, but not once did she see Nathan Craft, whom, whenever mentioned, Mamie contrived to speak of as a "recluse, and too queer to talk about, Bert!"

After Roberta, who was of the "marrying sort," left Mamie breathed freely again until Jim's cousins, Mina Pleen and Harriet Cable, came for another month. Politeness required that they be entertained at Dora Craft's at dinners and tennis parties, and when a function was on, Burrell (somewhat protestingly) took the baby over to see Nathan at his cottage (a visitation that Nathan loved), thus forestalling any possible disastrous meetings of husband-seekers.

But despite Burrell's aid both Dora and Mamie trembled until the girls left lest they should "discover" the "recluse." When Burrell's auto took his visitors to the train the sisters openly rejoiced.

"Keeping them off Nathe's trail is enough to give any one a brain storm!" declared Dora. "I told them everything under the sun, both truth and fiction. I all but told them he was odd to insanity, but you never can trust women to believe you on the subject."

"But I must say, Dora," her sister interposed, "Nathe has kept himself in the background more beautifully than I ever knew him. He rode by our house occasionally, but he never so much as looked toward the girls. And I never saw him look so well as he does this summer—he's got positively good looking, Dora," she ended regretfully.

"He gets crazy happy every summer over his insects, the boob!" Dora laughed. "Shadrach says he goes off with his nets three afternoons a week now, and has even bought a canoe and taken it somewhere over on the river where he makes his catches. I guess he catches dragon flies from that!"

"Well, the summer's over and we can breathe freely again for a while!" Mamie reiterated.

At that precise moment, while Mrs. McNaught fried the fish Nathan and Hagar had caught in the river that afternoon, Nathan—an glorified Nathan, and Hagar, an eager-eyed, radiant Hagar—sat out under the fragrant cedars.

"Next month is October," he was saying, "a beautiful month to be married in—can't you be ready by the 20th, dear heart?"

One afternoon, late in October, Nathan asked Jim Leverance to go with him to witness his marriage. "I want you to keep it secret, though, Leverance, until you get back," he told that gleeful, worthy "I want to surprise the folks! Think they'll get it about 'You bet they will! Jim's about as triumphant. 'Man—man—I congratulate you a thousand times! I love to see a fellow exercise his rights!'

DISLIKES BADGE OF BEAUTY
Modern Man Apparently Not Recommended to That Idea of His Predecessors "Adam's Apple."

Man's badge of beauty and brains in his Adam's apple, that projection in the fore part of the neck which has been so called, from the notion that it was caused by a bit of the forbidden fruit which stuck in Adam's throat.

Scientists have many theories on the subject, and have told a long story of the evolution of the apple—how man came by long descent from ill-formed, spineless things that came into his by chemical action. Then came fish, which, as soon as they got backbones, began to develop something like Adam's apples. From the primitive forms of the ancient seas are believed to have come the mammals from which sprang the human race.

It is a long story, but the fact remains that as the human race developed and became more civilized the Adam's apple in man became more prominent. The ancient Greeks depicted their strong heroes and highest types of beauty with prominent "apples," although modern artists and sculptors rather ignore it in their works. As a matter of fact, the wearing of high stocks and collars would seem to point to the fact that man is not altogether proud of displaying his badge of beauty.

THE OPEN HAND

An Indian Tale of Maine and New Brunswick

Founded on Historic Facts and Sustained by Tradition.
Written by W. D. Kearney and printed in 1864 by W. S. Gilman at Presque Isle, Maine

The Observer is about to undertake the re-printing of the above well-known volume, now almost out of print. To print a new edition of this quaint book involves an outlay upwards of $500. Before we undertake the work we must have a reasonable guaranty that we can sell a sufficient number at $1.00 to pay us.

We feel certain that there are a number of people, especially among the older generations, both in New Brunswick and Maine who would desire a copy of this book. It will be printed in quarto form, 9x12in, and nicely bound in stiff board covers. It will not be a large volume for the money but it is certainly a volume that every descendant of the early pioneers will want to own.

If you want one, please fill out the following blank.

PROBLEMS SOLVED BY ANTS.

Ant-hill is an Example of Pure Democracy.

The insects have solved many problems that still vex the human race, writes Edward Step, F.L.S., the famous naturalist, in "Tit-Bits".

In the ant hill we find an example of pure democracy. It may consist of many thousands of individuals without a monarch or leader of any sort; without a Government. Each ant does exactly what it pleases, without either instructions or permission to do it. But what it does is just what is best for the entire community. There is no self-seeking, no profiteering. Each one does what needs to be done when it needs doing, the welfare of all being the impelling motive.

A score, or a hundred, or a thousand workers are engaged on some big piece of work. A worker ant comes in from a foraging expedition. "Here, Polly" she says, to one of the miners or masons, "let me take a turn at that while you rest a while."

The resting one asks for food, and the newcomer at once shares what she has gathered on her journey. Some others come along and notice that the resting worker has become soiled with labor. They immediately set to work to clean and refresh her by washing and brushing. Nobody tells or asks them to do it; they merely see that they need doing, and once set about their self-imposed task.

During some extensive mining operations a stone is dislodged from the roof and falls upon a worker, injuring her so that she can scarcely crawl. Several rush to her aid, and bear her away to a quieter gallery, where her hurts may be properly tended.

Ants are full of resource to meet extraordinary situations, and they have invented so many ways of getting a living that, in the course of time, they have branched off into more than 2,000, different species, each with distinct form and habits.

So important are they in the scheme of nature that they have brought about numerous modifications of plant life—many flowers have had to invent hair fences to prevent the ants from stealing nectar intended as a bribe for the pollen-carrying bees; other plants have produced glands, from which a sweet liquid flows, to induce the ants to patrol their leaves and stems and destroy caterpillars and other nuisances.

They have also set up alliances with various small creatures for mutual benefit. Some like the greenfly supply them with sweet food (all ants have a "sweet tooth"); others, like certain beetles, become their domestic pets; others are scavengers, encouraged or tolerated in their nests because of their usefulness from a sanitary point of view.

Their industry in construction shows a considerable amount of varied ingenuity. Some are miners in the earth, and tunnel wonderful galleries of great extent, whilst others tunnel in wood. Some construct papier-mache nests on the boughs of trees and pens for their domestic insects, whilst some, instead of laboring in these ways, frankly avail themselves of the provision made for them by plants.

There are ants that store grain; ants that grow mushrooms, and prepare suitable beds for their growth; ants that keep dairies; ants that are mere nomad freebooters, sallying forth in their thousands, and killing and eating all other insects in their path, possessing no city of their own, but camping temporarily where their march of pillage and conquest has brought them.

When Brides Must Weep.

The wedding day in most countries is the bride's day, says "Tit-Bits". It is her part to look happy, however long a face the groom may pull. Only in Lithuania is it a day of ostentatious gloom for her when, after being led through the lighted church by two young men, followed by her bridesmaids, she takes her stand in front of the altar, to be joined by the groom, also accompanied by several young men.

Behind the wedding party come the two mothers. While the priest performs the ceremony, the bride must weep incessantly. If she is unable to hide her real jubilation and cannot squeeze out a tear, she is considered guilty of a serious breach of etiquette and the ceremony is rendered more interesting by a vigorous scolding administered by the two mothers. Thus the maiden is expected to show the boon she is conferring upon mere man by becoming his wife.

This same attitude towards the Lithuanian woman is proved by all the customs of the little Baltic state that has declared itself a republic. It is shown, for instance, in old photographs. In these the woman is not standing with her hands on the shoulder of her seated lord, like our own photographs of a former period, but throned in state, with her husband and sons, standing gallantly beside her.

Watches Invented by Frenchman. At Nuremberg there is a statue to Peter Henlein, who is credited there with being the inventor of the watch. But Leopold Reberchon shows in La Nature that, after all, Henlein invented nothing but the ring by which a watch is held to a chain, for clocks with springs, and stacked and already been made for nearly a century, and all he had to do was to make small ones.

Henlein was born in 1480 and became a master locksmith in 1509. Now in 1504 Julien Couderoy of Blois, France, was already a master watchmaker of the first class, as is proved by an order on the cashier of Louis XII to pay 29 livres and 4 sous to him as "watchmaker to the King." And in 1518 he made a watch for Francis I so small that it was inserted in the pomel of the King's dagger. It is therefore more probable that Couderoy was making watches before Henlein.

SUSAN or KEZIAH?
 By LAWRENCE PERRY

Judge Tommie Crane put the last shutter over the front window of his store, closing the bar across and snatched the padlock. Then he turned and gazed thoughtfully along the turnpike to where a single light glimmered through a grove of cherry trees. The judge always became sentimental at this hour of the evening. As a matter of fact he was in love and, what is more, admitted it to himself. This takes rare courage sometimes, but it takes even rarer courage under certain conditions to admit it to any one else. That was what bothered Judge Crane.

The judge was not much over fifty years old. His store, the one town store, yielded good profits. He was a bachelor, not a widower; was well preserved, a former judge in the town court and always a deacon. Oh, no; he was not ashamed of his personal aspects. The trouble was that he was not quite sure with whom he was in love. There were two of them—two maiden sisters, Susan Appleby and Keziah Appleby. Both of them appealed to Judge Crane in one way or another, and for ten years he had been trying to decide which one appealed to him the more. But thus far his efforts had yielded him little satisfaction.

He paced thoughtfully up and down the porch, with his hands locked under his coat-tails. He closed his eyes, and the picture of Keziah drifted slowly across his mind. It was in church that he loved her most. He could see her now in her pew just in front of his. Her shoulders did not come very far above the high back seat, and a few curls straggled from under the black bonnet. One eye was hazel, the other a watery blue, and her hands were folded demurely in her lap. She wore a black waist cut down a little at the throat and edged with lavender silk and lace, and she had a humorous little slimper at the corners of her mouth. On Sundays the slimper was allowed to fade, but the telltale lines remained.

There was no nonsense about Susan—tall, straight, angular, her bonnet perched up straight on her head like a grenadier, blue eyes and a straight, tight shut mouth. She could say things, and she got up church societies and missionary societies. Judge Crane sighed.

A few minutes later he unclasped his hands and transferred them gleefully to the armholes of his vest. He had come to a decision. He would consult a third party. Whom? There were two he had in mind, Zebulon, the brother, and Matilda, the eldest sister, a widow. All in all, he thought Zebulon would be the better of the two. Yes, he would go to his old friend and confess all. He would secure information as to the qualities of both from the standpoint of one who had spent his life with them, and he would also make inquiry as to which one would most likely award his suit with a favorable answer.

"Hello, Zeb!" It was Zebulon himself who stumped up the steps and sat down at the top with a grunt. "Nice evening."

"Hello, Zeb—um—yes, a to-be evening. How air ye?" And the judge seated himself beside the prospective adjuster of his destiny.

"About as well as a man kin be with a parcel of women folks about him all the time," grumbled Zebulon, filling his pipe.

"What's the matter of 'em?" queried the judge, apparently unconcerned.

"Matter?" snorted Zebulon. "Matter? Why, everything's the matter. Ef it ain't one thing it's another—sewin' societies, home-learnin', visitin', church, prayer meetin', entertainin' the parson an' talk, talk, talk, nothin' but talkin' from sunrise to supper. Bah! Women is well enough in their places, but three on 'em is too darned much. Two on 'em old maids too! Why don't Providence send some one to marry 'em? It ain't right, it's ag'in' natur', for one woman to be postered so."

"Um—well, that is kind of bad, Zeb. I'm sorry they've riled ye, because I was jest a-goin' to ask yer honest opinion which one to pick out. I'm a-goin' to get married if I kin." And Judge Crane blew his nose vigorously.

"Arrump! Huh!" Zebulon sat up. The judge sat with his jaws tight and his eyes stared fixedly into the road. Zebulon snorted again and regained his self-control. Had heaven smiled on him at last? Had he said too much? He knew whom he wished married. Keziah would do, but Susan was the one to whose wedding he would dance all the way. He recalled her mastery ways, her trenchant tongue. Was it to be stilled for him by the bonds of matrimony? He turned to the judge.

"Well," he said, drawing his handkerchief across his eyes, "I kin talk an' growl, but when the pinch comes, Judge, I don't see how I kin live without 'em. Keziah is good, Judge, but Susan, she is the one for ye. I know. She wants to get married. She said herself 'twould sartin' be, although Lord knows she don't need it. She's good an' kind an' lovin', an' she's got a good strong mind—a good strong mind. Yas, sir, I recommend Susan," concluded Zebulon.

"Well," said the judge, "ye ought to know, Zeb. Wants to get married, does she? Well, she would a' been long ago had I not been afeared to ask her. I'm scared yet, Zeb, to tell the truth. What I want is the ice broken, an' if anything which might strengthen the judge in his quest. He actually offered to take the judge to his sister, stated case and then leave the two alone. For reply the judge rose decidedly to his feet. "Come," he said.

So they trudged along the road together. Zebulon quietly radiant, the judge stern and determined.

Ten minutes later they entered the Appleby house. A raucous, twangy voice came from the parlor.

"She's in there," whispered Zebulon, and he pushed open the door and entered with his hand reaching back holding the skirt of the judge's coat.

Both were there—Keziah and Susan. "How'de do, judge?" they exclaimed, rising. But the judge made reply by pushing Zebulon forward.

"Susan," said Zebulon, flushing guiltily. He knew Susan could see right through him. "Susan," he repeated, "ah—ahem. The judge here—well—ah—"

"Well, ah what?" exclaimed Susan, with sharp impatient inflection.

"The judge," repeated Zebulon weakly. "Well, I bring him here—O Lor!" and Zebulon dashed for the door. He stopped at the sill and, pointing at the judge, added, "The judge, Sue, there he is!" Then he disappeared.

The judge was frozen into a dignified statue. He could see now that it was Susan, but he dared not. Suddenly he thought of Matilda. Ah, she would break the ice for him. Matilda! His face flushed.

"Ladies," he said in sepulchral tones, "will ye kindly inform yer widowed sister Matilda that I desire to see her? Alone," he added.

The sisters swept out of the room, confident that Zebulon and the judge had suddenly gone crazy. Then Matilda entered. She proffered her hand in welcome, and the judge seized it as a drowning man grasps at a straw. He held on. Here at least was something tangible.

And then—well, Susan was not half so tangible. Matilda!

Ten minutes later Zebulon peeked into the parlor. The judge was very close to Matilda, and he was holding her hands. Everything was very still.

"Well, I'll be darned!" said Zebulon.

G. T. Lloyd, who has written a book of his early days in Australia, says that the big forest kangaroo is now nearly extinct. He once measured several successive leaps made by one of these animals in a slight declivity and found them to average thirty feet each, although the kangaroo had to rise five or six feet with each jump to clear dead trees and limbs.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL ITEMS

Old General Jax still has our town in a state of siege. The ball that the committee staged here on Tuesday evening proved a most successful affair, and loving couples arrived early from the adjoining towns to spend an evening "where all went merry as a marriage bell." Some complaints were made that a little too much singing and sundry noises were in evidence in the wee sma' hours when Major Fox-trot and his band got through with the last one-step, but we have to allow for a few unseemly actions from exuberant youth. The real trouble with most of us lies in the fact that we seem to forget just how bad we once were ourselves.

Major H. H. Donnelly and wife were guests here on Thursday of friends.

Mrs. Jennie Beckwith of Houlton, was in town last week disposing of her residence and property on Florenceville Road. Rumor has it that she has sold to an out of town customer for a tidy good sum.

Miss Amy Tompkins spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Long.

G. W. Bishop spent last week on the Tobique. He has rented the Hayden hotel at Riley Brook and will take possession forthwith.

At the annual session of the Wilmet District S. S. Convention, held in the U. B. church March 11, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Pres. Joseph F. Anderson.
Vice-Pres. Carey C. Shaw.
Secy-Treas. Clark A. McBride.
Supt. Children's Division. Mrs. Geo. R. Smith.
Supt. Young People's Div. Mrs. B. W. Campbell.

Supt. Adult Div. Mrs. W. W. Wilson.
Supt. Educational Div. Percy Cunningham.
Supt. Gen. Officers John A. Watties.
Supt. I.B.R.A. Div. Wm. Crandlemire.

The following are the results of the financial drive in connection with the U. B. Forward Movement among the churches on Rev. S. Johnson's pastorate. Centreville $1045, Carvell $345, Good Corner $232, Brookville $104, Lakesville $104, total $1830. Allotment: $1100.

Dr. Geo. J. Burt of Fort Fairfield visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Burt, last week.

Dame Scing has begun to make a few subtle passes to give us warning of her approach. She surely is so welcome that she need not knock. Let her walk right in, say we. Even the most slothful of our townsfolk are beginning to brighten up a little earlier in the morning and getting a share of nature's best spring tonic—fresh air.

There are symptoms of an early breakup in our highways, which, on account of the great amount of hauling yet to be accomplished would be most disastrous. The abnormally high prices for all agricultural products however, should keep the farmer's face a-grin despite the extra difficulty in transportation.

The theatre goers were sorry that the program of pictures that was to be put on here Saturday evening failed to materialize owing to some little slip up in the management.

Dr. H. W. Peppers made a professional call to Mattawamkeag, Me., last week.

Major C. G. McLaughlin of Woodstock was in town Thursday and Friday looking into some pressing military business.

Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Burt of Woodstock spent the week-end with friends here.

Miss Margaret White of Aroostook Jct., is visiting her grandmother, Mrs. Alice White.

The Oddfellows' banquet which had been proposed for the evening of April 5 and for which the necessary arrangements had been made, has been, owing to unstable weather conditions, postponed to some evening in the near future when the Almanac man will scarcely be so full of pranks. All Oddfellows will take due notice thereof and govern themselves accordingly.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Cogswell and Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Vail are anticipating a very pleasant trip to California within the next month. They plan on going by way of Vancouver.

Everett Noble and Miss Cora Noble of Blaine were in town on Thursday.

Miss Georgia DeLong of Brookville was the week-end guest of her cousin, Miss Hildred DeLong.

Jonathan Jones and son Donald spent Friday and Saturday with Mr. and Mrs. G. G. London.

Mrs. Israel Drost.

The funeral services in connection with the interment of Mrs. Israel Drost took place at the Methodist meeting house, Wicklow, on March 2. Rev. G. O. Howlett, B. A., B. D., preached the sermon and Rev. G. A. Gibers assisted in the services. The large gathering that quietly followed the remains to their last resting place spoke of the respect for the departed and the hearty sympathy proffered to the bereaved family.

Mrs. Drost, formerly Miss Smith, leaves to mourn one brother, Aaron Smith, of Rowena, and one son, Chester, with whom she lived, also an adopted daughter, Nellie. The deceased was very highly esteemed as a Christian woman. Among many other good qualities she was always most willing to aid anyone in sickness or distress. She will be greatly missed by a large circle of acquaintance, and long be remembered by many in Wicklow and vicinity for her kindly deeds.

When Moon Was Blue.

The expression "once in a blue moon," meaning that occurrences are so widely separated by time as to almost never recur, is not a figure of speech. It has a basis of astronomical fact, says The-Bits. The phenomenon has been twice observed in both Italy and Austria, and once in America. There is no available record of it having been noticed in America.

A blue sun has been recorded only once. That was in August, 1843, in Java. A day or two before there was a very violent eruption of a large volcano about a hundred miles from Batavia. The eruption ended with an explosion, in which a range of mountains was destroyed, a vast cavity being left in its place, more than a thousand feet deep at one point. Billions of tons of rock, mud, and dust were thrown high into the air, and the sun was obscured over a large area. At Batavia the darkness became so deep that street lamps had to be lighted in the middle of the forenoon. That condition prevailed until toward sunset. Then the volcanic cloud began to clear away, leaving the sun visible. Instead, however, of it being red, as it usually is when viewed through a smoke cloud, it appeared as a magnificent deep blue disc, remaining that color until it sank below the horizon. The phenomenon was seen by everyone within thirty or forty degrees of the equator.

E. Neil Brodie has completed plans for a fine new school house for Florenceville and tenders will be called for the work next week. In the basement will be located accommodation for manual training and domestic science classes. Toilets will also be included and the place will be heated by steam. As there is no water system in the town, a gas engine will be installed for operating a water pumping plant and a private electric lighting system.
