Bosnitch resurfaces at Concordia

Injunction naming Bosnitch as respondent granted to CUSA

by Aime Phillips

Recent allegations by Concordia University Students Association co-President Charlene Nerocified John Bosnitch as partly accountable for the controversy surrounding their spring elections.

Bosnitch is the student politician considered by some fully responsible for the mismanagement of student union affairs between 1985 to 1987. An article from the Daily Gleaner dated May 22, 1987, titled "Judge Says Actions Without Merit" reports Bosnitch was referred to by Justice Dickson as being controversial: "All or most of his terms of office with the student union appear to have been marked by controversy with, and a defiant and controversy, toward, the university administration and latterly, perhaps especially toward the president of the university (Dr. James Downey)."

Bosnitch was served notice under the Trespass Act S.N.B. (1983) C.t. 11.2.5.2, as amended) by UNB Security on March 24, 1987, preventing Bosnitch from coming onto both UNB Fredericton and Saint John campuses.

Since that time, Bosnitch has apparently attended McGill University and been in Japan. Bosnitch described his presence at Concordia as being temporary: "I'm back in Canada on a visit to renew my visa status in Japan. While I'm here I'm staying with my girlfriend Lana Grimes (past UNB SU vice president)." Lana Grimes was a vice president at CUSA this past year. Bosnitch continues "She asked me if I could help her out, give her some tips from an old retired student politician."

Nero describe the events leading up to a Quebec Superior Court injunction which cited Bosnitch, Grimes and Hugh Brown (another past student politician at UNB) as respondents.

On February 18, 19, 20, CUSA General Elections were held for the term commencing April 1, 1992 until March 31, 1993. At Concordia, only the positions of "Co-Presidents" are elected as opposed to the entire executive. The executive are then appointed by the elected co-presidents. When the election was over, there was some controversy over the number of votes cast at a particular polling station. Nero and his running mate had won only by 31 votes. Nero claims she waited with "baited breath" to see if a recount would be requested during the required four day deadline during which a recount may be requested. She further claims a recount was never requested during that period. Bosnitch claims a ballot discrepancy of 110 ballots was noticed by ballot counters after the Chief Returning Officer announced the results. This total could reverse the co-presidential results. Bosnitch claimed one of the losing candidates could not reach the CRO before the four day deadline.

There were accusations about irregularities which soon bloomed into accusations about ballot rigging on Nero's part, electoral fraud on her part, and about her "owning" the Judicial Board, which administers the student elections. After the four day period, the ballots and materials were shredded. "Now there is no way to investigate anything" Nero admits. "But that (procedure of shredding the ballots) is a matter of course."

An annual general meeting, like a shareholders meeting, was held. Nero states: "We normally get 30-40 people, struggling for quorum, but 150-200 showed up and 117 voted not to accept the CRO's report." Nero angrily stated "It's not required a motion be passed to accept the report. A report is received when a report is given."

"It became apparent over a course of time" Nero continues, "that Mr. Bosnitch, Ms. Grimes, and Mr. Hugh Brown were attending all our regular Board meetings, meeting fairly frequently with individuals who were trying to overturn the elections."

Lana Grimes submitted a statement to the student newspaper, the Link, which was printed in their March 24 edition, saying "I hereby declare my full support for a complete annulment of our recent general election and for the immediate organization of a replacement election to be held before the end of classes this year."

Bosnitch, Nero claims, kept showing up. The board would call meetings, and at one point "The board endeavored to pass a motion which essentially impeached my former colleague and I in our term which only ended April 1."

"Soon" Nero alleges, "Mr. Bosnitch was on the mezzanine with a 'democracy petition' calling for a new election." Nero said he collected 1800-1900 signatures. "Bosnitch was attending meetings, advising the board what to do."

"The really amazing thing they did was start a meeting on March 31. The meeting did not have quorum, because a number of directors, who I would characterize as being on our side, wouldn't attend the meeting because they disagreed strongly with the motions to be considered and they had been told repeatedly by our legal council that the motions were illegal. They convened informally until midnight. At midnight they declared that it was now April 1 which is, coincidentally, the first month of the new term. They declared we were now in summer quorum, which is 2/5 instead of more than half, so they had quorum and they passed all these motions annulling the elections. They passed a motion to call elections on April 7, 8, 9."

Bosnitch explains the board called a special election, just to re-vote. "No new candidates, no campaigning, no change whatsoever in the ballots. The nominations procedure in February, nobody ever questioned, so it was kept. Whoever was nominated stayed nominated, whoever did not withdraw then was not allowed to withdraw from this vote."

Nero stated that not all candidates wanted to run again, because they did not see the legitimacy of the election, some because they recognized the level of violence associated with it. Nero said death threats and physical violence has not been uncommon during the campaigning. "Because no one will make an official complaint, we have no recourse, no forum in which to defend ourselves," Nero went on.

An injunction was sought against the elections, which was granted temporarily on Tuesday, April 7. Nero said that Bosnitch, Grimes, Brown were named as respondents, along with other Concordia students, because they have attended all or many of the meetings in which the illegal motions were passed, and "it's quite clear they've acted as intimate advisors."

Nero confirmed that the CUSA bank account has been frozen, but "for a number of reasons. Primarily because a group of renegade directors changed signing authority in an illegal meeting and have refused to rescind it." The student newspaper, the Concordian, however, reported that the accounts were frozen due to an overdraft of $154,000 in their March 19 issue.

The university has also created a commission to look into whether the association needs overhauling.

Bosnitch, while commenting on how he has become involved in yet another student government controversy, in closing stated: "When I see an aspect of my character, and the character of the people I consider my friends, any where in the world, if we see something that's undemocratic, and if we have some way to personally contribute and to express our opinions freely, we exercise our freedom of speech. And it just so happens I have a loud voice; when I make a little peep in Montreal there are people who have very sensitive ears in Fredericton who tend to hear it."

Nero concluded that she asked Bosnitch why he believed she should step down as co-president "We didn't lose, nobody made a complaint. He said 'because you only won by 31 votes; democracy should have its day.' Well, democracy isn't voting over and over again. Democracy is not who can last through the most elections, or who can keep calling referenda, or what have you, until they win."

Gender Issues Committee resigns

by James Rowan

The UNB Law School's Faculty Council recently approved a proposal by the faculty's Gender Issues Committee to affirm their commitment to gender issues and curriculum development and to incorporate the proposal into the Law School's Mission Statement.

However, during a previous meeting of the Faculty Council, on March 28th, the document presented to them by the Committee was tabled without discussion; this was the last straw, and the Committee decided to resign.

"Something as important as this needed to be discussed. It is integral in the development of curriculum in our schools," said Arlene Glencross, a member of the Gender Issues Committee. "In fact, there are 50% women in first year, which indicates that with more and more women coming into law school, these things have to be addressed," she said.

The resignation was intended to bring the issue to the forefront, as the committee had had difficulties in getting the attention of people who could do things in the Faculty.

Faculty Council in the past in regards to the passing of some of their suggestions.

With the resignations, the committee got far more interest than they expected. Student reaction to the resignations, which were publicized within the faculty by notes on the doors and a "memo-war", drew great support from the student body, both male and female.

A meeting held by the Law School's Faculty Council had already had difficulties with the Student's Society to address the issue drew five times more people than had been expected. The Law School has already appointed a Chair of Women in Law, who will arrive on July 1.

The Gender Issues committee had asked the Faculty to affirm their commitment to the issues of equality and equity before her arrival, but some members of faculty wanted to wait until after the arrival of the new Chair.

Glencross stated that the Committee felt that it was in the best interests of all if these matters were dealt with immediately. Furthermore, Glencross added that an affirmation of principles that are so basic should be done from time to time as a matter of course.

With the passing of the motion to affirm these commitments last Friday, coupled with the open discussion and airing of views that the controversy has caused, the matter has come to what one committee member described as "a happy beginning."

Aitken Centre fire

by Karen Burgess

As reported in the Monday, April 6th edition of the Daily Gleaner a fire at the Aitken Centre early Saturday morning has been confirmed to have been caused by arson.

The fire apparently broke out around 2 a.m. in a basement storage room.

The AUC's sprinklers system helped to contain the fire which caused extensive damage to hockey equipment of the Fredericton Canadiens.

Gordon Lebel, A.U.C. Director, says that the fire, which is the Centre's first, was contained quickly by the building's sprinklers, and caused no structural damage.

Shown is a participant in Friday's Jones House Mud Dive VII. The event, which was held with the theme "Go Ahead, Muck My Day!", raised over $1,000 for Big Brothers and Big Sisters and brought out 1500 spectators. For those who missed the event on Friday, the Mud Dive will be aired on MITV's Sports Replay on Saturday. Michael David Smith photo.

STU SU elections controversy

by Mark I. Minor

Saint Thomas Student Union elections were held March 18th of this year. Voter turnout was roughly 42 percent according to past V.P. (Administration) Tony Sekulich.

Sekulich attributed high voter turnout to the transition from a single poll to a 5 poll system.

For most Executive positions, margins of victory were very small. The Presidency was won by 10 votes, V.P. (External) by 3 votes, V.P.'s (Administration, Finance and Activities) by 1 vote each.

The Brunswickian has been informed that controversy arose when a poll worker confided to a friend that he or she had stuffed 12-15 illegal ballots into a ballot box. The friend then approached a candidate who, in turn, approached the poll worker in question. After these discussions took place, the poll worker contacted Tom Marshall, the STU SU Ombudsman and admitted to ballot stuffing and crossing off names from the list of potential voters. Marshall also received complaints of SU Bylaw violations such as polling stations not opening on time and at least one ballot box remaining unsecured.

On Tuesday, March 31, the STU SU executive (old and new) met with Marshall. He said he believed the poll worker and thought that further investigation was warranted. At this point, Marshall was instructed to continue a verification process of contacting voters and asking them if they had voted at the poll in question. He already had found two voters whose names had been crossed off the list and who claimed that they did not vote.

Marshall was asked to attend a council meeting on Saturday April, 4 and submit his report. At this time he reported to council that he had completed the verification process and was prepared to table his findings. Having been able to contact approximately two thirds of the voters whose names had been crossed off the list of the poll in question, he still found that only 2 voters claimed that they had not voted there.

Marshall's report consisted of two parts. The first related to the bylaw violations. These were not considered serious enough to justify a new election. The second part addressed the alleged election fraud which would have resulted from ballot stuffing. As only 2 voters out of all those surveyed claimed that they hadn't voted at the poll where the alleged stuffing took place, council decided to accept the election results. It was mentioned that if new evidence arises, proper action will be taken.

At the STU SU meeting on April 7, council was told by Marshall that only 7 voters could not be reached and the result was still only 2 voters claiming that they didn't vote at the poll. According to Bruno sources, he commented that the poll worker's story was probably just that: a story.

SU banquet held

by Aime Phillips

The Student Union's 3rd Annual Banquet was held last Friday to distribute the Activity Awards for those students who have made significant contributions to student life on campus.

The recipients of the Gold Awards, intended for those students who have shown an outstanding commitment to student activity in a variety of ways are: Kevin Bourque, Kevin Ferguson, Greg Lutes, Jim MacGee and Steve Williams.

The Silver Awards in recognition of an outstanding contribution during a limited part of their time at UNB went to James Chappelle, Arthur Doyle, Derek Dunnett, Mark

Subsequently, the new council has been seated and the election results accepted. However, a petition has been circulating around STU in support of a new election. Sources say that after rejecting the petition on first submission, the SU has had to recognize it as the number of signatures on the document exceeds the 20 percent minimum required by SU bylaws.

Fletcher, Reil Givan, Chantelle Hanley, Jon Lazar, David Robinson and Lynne Wanyeki. Merit awards recipients are: Shelly Allen, Alane Marie Boudreau, Dawn Carrier, Jodi Cruickshank, Sean Daly, Angie Dickson, Werner Disselkamp, Rich Gaigneur, Melanie Lloyd, Susan Magasi, Brigitte Menard, Kate Rogers, Stephen Seabrook, Paula Shott and Adrian Tan Teckwah. Councillor of the year is Jodi Cruickshank, with Honourable mentions to Andrew Fuller, Patty Smith, Jim MacGee and Jon Lazar.

Kevin Bourque was the recipient of the Dr Downey Leadership Award.

Astronauts on UNB campus

by Jeff Czopor

Some people have their heads up in the clouds or are rather spaced out. For Canada's first woman astronaut, Roberta Bondar, this description is quite literal.

Bondar, a neurologist who takes a compliment from being called a professional lifetime student after being schooled in a number of scientific fields, says that there is always something new to learn (especially on a mission of the space shuttle).

The mission of the Discovery which took place between January 22 to the 30, Bondar's first journey into the vast realm of weightlessness, and it was probably this aspect of the voyage that was the most difficult to adapt to.

What constituted Bondar's first voyage marked the 45th mission of the shuttle program and the fourteenth for the Orbiter Discovery.

Indeed, Bondar found the flight extremely thrilling but claims that the time constraints and deadlines for the various tasks that need to be done left no room for adjustability and adaptability.

Bondar touched upon a number of experiments with plants and microscopic animals, including an American plant in good ole Canadian soil which grew larger than normal. As well, various crystals were grown and research into human reflexes, the lymphic system, and anti-biotics were also conducted.

One aspect of the voyage that Roberta found particularly thrilling was the international crew that accompanied her. Scientists and specialists from Canada, the United States, and Europe worked together to further plan for what will hopefully soon come to be: life colonies in space and the pioneerization of homo sapiens.

As well, Bondar amused her eager listeners with stories about keeping one's sanity, glasses, and lunch while in weightlessness and how sometimes one must give up the fight and roll along until coming upon to a wall.

Bondar was joined by Ken Money, payload Specialist on the Discovery, who delightfully provided background information on the mission. The mission involved 220 scientists in all. Thirteen of the scientist were Canadians and 45 experiments were conducted in all. Perhaps the highlight of Money's anecdotes was his description of how one must become a "bathroom expert" before voyaging off into space, "the seat is nine inches across, the hole is three inches. It requires a certain degree of accuracy."

Bondar fervently persuaded the audience to continue the pursuits in science. She explained how she felt when she flew over various continents and not only witnessed geological wonders such as eroded rivers and canyons, but environmental dangers as well. Perhaps her most important message was that it is not unfeasible to want to become directly involved in the Canadian Space program and have this dream come true.

Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are Dead - But Theatre in Fredericton is Not

An intelligent production of a brilliant play, this past week saw the performance of Show Stoppard Production's interpretation of Stoppard's Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are Dead. Alison Luke's vision of the piece came to life flawlessly, and once again Fredericton was witness to a production where absolutely everyone in the play knew what it was he/she was doing and why and how it fit into the context of the piece.

Thoroughly entertaining performances by both Shawn Malley as the confused and bumbling Rosencrantz and Richard Spacek as the hyper-philosophical Guildenstern crystalized the production into a cohesive whole; the players worked not to or around but with each other. This is tough stuff; Stoppard's creation takes elements from everywhere from Shakespeare to Woody Allen, and manages to create intense, thought provoking and immensely funny dialogue which batters back and forth in word play that simply must be understood and believed to perform with success.

It's tough to review this production in the sense that, as is sadly rare in Fredericton, we got to see the play. Let me explain. This is, as I said before, a brilliant play. It's premise alone (merely looking at the idea of the other side of the story for Rosencrantz and Guildenstern from Shakespeare's Hamlet) is enough to make one goggle; to have the characters so stridently defined and so definitely constructed in the context of farce and satire with a heavy ladelling of death-oriented philosophy is beyond belief. And it works so wonderfully. Now, the problem is that when this work is performed as well as it was by the Show Stoppard Theatre group, one tends to forget that there are actors on stage and gets wrapped up in the wonderful complexities and subtle to slapstick humor of the work itself.

Alison Luke's direction and blocking were, for lack of a better term, right on. Rosencrantz and Guildenstern spend a lot of time engaged in intense and complex dialogue, and to find something for them to be doing in the midst of this is a challenge. From a rhetoric game sword fight to Spacek and Malley's Laurel and Hardy -esque movements and interactions, the dialogue not only came across, but came to life with a physical reality. Awesome.

Also of note were everyone else in the cast - not a weak link to be found. Kent Thompson's performance as The Player gave just the right amount of contrast to the two main characters as they follow him around with a mixture of disgust and desperation. The Tragedians (choreographed by Kent Thompson) were also wonderful, and even in roles where there is no dialogue, these people knew why they were on stage

"We are tied to a language that makes up with obscurity what it lacks in style" and what their part was in the whole thing. Great stuff.

A few words of thanks to Michael Friesen, the Composer/Musician, who made me believe, as I haven't for a long time, that live music in the form of soundtrack-style embellishment can not only work, but can truly enhance a production.

The stage was effective and interesting, as was the lighting, as were the costumes, good lord, there must be something bad I can say. I hate Mem Hall for plays. There it is. Stuffy, old, and not meant for theatre, Mem Hall is yucky.

Whoopie. let's hope Show Stoppard Productions will do it all again next year. Thanks again.

Vamon "Slut" Starling. We love you almost as much as you do. Maybe you could give some love to us at the bash tonight. We know the three of us aren't enough woman for you, but we'll try. love always & forever. Bull, Bart & Modroc

Dear Den-doll, I've had the hole for two years. I spotted you at the CHSC Saturday night. You looked so cute, like you. And when I say "like", I mean "like" if you know what I mean (and I know you do!) It was really nice being in the same room as you. Too bad there wasn't enough room for me and your big head. Tami Geldart. Thanks for being the best proctor ever. Happy belated Birthday, you deserve formal party animal love. Sherry, Brown & Lori

The Ladies of Tibbits would like to thank Conrad Coughlan and Mooshead Brewster for their support in making this past year so successful.

Bandnamen: So you're a tough guy eh? Remember words are nothing unless you back them up. But then you wouldn't want to write the clothes, since they're so fashionable. I think pink is more your shade, putz. I'm glad you're graduating this year so I won't have to look at you again next year. Finally the SUB will be clear of your presence. Get a life. Big Brother P.S. what are you really hiding under that Bandana.

Dear Pat the body inspector, it was nice comparing sizes. We'll do it again soon at Fergie's Love. Serge CHSC Goodfellaes. Felias, you're really have to stop this exaggerating. My game is really not THAT good! Though your not exaggerating by much, stop! You know, it's getting hard to maintain my modesty, and you know what I am doing my absolute best now to keep it within self-defended parameters!! "Peace and Long life"

To KDH: I'm sorry for being so shy! I really wish we could meet. If my s&rl interested, meet me in the SUB cafeteria at 1:30.

To The A.U.C. worker with dark hair and beautiful green eyes. I like working with you. "Somebody" you will have to show me your "anaps". From Your Competitive Friend

To Karen Holder: There is a big void in my heart without you. You like a spring day, bright, a beautiful Spring is the time of love and I hope we could meet. (You know my friend, he's like a Wolf) The Sky Guy

MacKenzie House would like to thank Seen Miller and James Campbell of Labells, and Greco Family Restaurant for their support of our successful MacKenzie Social Bob and Doug

BBO everyone welcome, 20 Chases Ct. Friday Pm Last class Bash warmup. Bring your own beer & food

To the arrogant guy who resides at 690 Graham Ave. I can't forget your rudeness. I sure hope that you never need a ride again, because too Bad! You know how to get a hold of me if you want me. 459-TAXI

To the Rooster! (Dick) I sure hope that you got over that Bernard fever. Will the rooster be back this year. If not I know where there is two (large ones). You had better wash your sister under the Bandnamen. Oh by the way I like the way you handle all the socks in the dressing room.

To Peter: I wrote you a note saying I was pregnant. I'm still in this condition and I haven't heard anything back from you. Why won't you get in contact with me. Or do you not care. I'm beginning to get our night together on fresh week meant nothing to you. It meant everything to me - It was my first time! Still looking for your help & support

Harry Forest: How's the H.B. get in any rights lately (Mr. Probert). Too bad that you ain't singing. I'm not going to prove themselves. Oh well there's another year. HOT! Well I hope, or should I say know that you will do awesome on your exams. Good luck! You're #1 Fan Tom

ADA: Friday was amazing and so are you. Let's do it again sometime. Luvs who

Bubble-gum politicians

Chewing gum tycoon Pay-me van Realty has recently announced a $14,000 initiative to ensure the popularity of Student politicians across the country.

van Realty, known in some circles as "Sex Machine" says that his new flavour "Lutey-Fruitey" will be advertised and distributed nation-wide this month and will help everyone in Canada to realise "what a sweet bunch of guys we really are."

Journalists make the news

The usually mundane weekly meeting of the Stupid Union proved to be an exciting session last Wednesday when two otherwise responsible journalists burst in apparently inebriated. After enticing the S.U. vice president Pay-me van Realty to dance on the table tops, the two were escorted out of the room by Rambo Norris, screaming "maybe if you *%!! ever accomplished anything we wouldn't have to make our own news!"

Petwasher to promote Elvis

Slimm Petwasher, V.P. activities and promotions of the Stupid Union confirmed her acceptance of a job offered by the Office of International Promotions for Elvis, at a press conference yesterday. An Elvis representative commented "If Petwasher can make a $6,000 profit off this dead campus, think what she can do for Elvis!" Petwasher was quoted as saying she is thrilled at the prospect of a real job. When asked about the proposed salary increase, Petwasher refused to comment, saying only "its about ten times the Bumswickan projected deficit."

NagGee, Lourque honoured

Stupid Union councillors Jim NagGee and Kevin Lourque were recently awarded the International Award of Distinction for the Upholding of Robert's Rules and Regulations in a Room Full of Whining Stupid Union Geeks.

NagGee and Lourque both say that being the joint recipients of the I.A.D.U.R.R.R.F.W. S.U.G. is the highlight of their political lives. The prize, which consists of a $14,000 cash prize and a leather-bound edition of Roberts Rules, is awarded annually to the most vocal councillor in the Union.

Representatives of the awards committee noted that the award usually goes to the council President, but that a close examination of the council minutes showed that these councillors clearly dominated the speakers list in 91-92.

Yourself spies for Artsies

Gorge Yourself, once esteemed president of E.R.S (Enginerds'R US) was found guilty of 13 counts of espionage and one count of theft for the "Rulers of the Real World", the weekly Humanities and Fine Arts newspaper of New Brunswick. Yourself pleaded no contest to the counts of espionage but admitted to one theft of a beer fridge. Said Yourself "I really thought no one would even notice." Yourself, who will also undergo psychiatric counselling to reverse the damages done while working undercover as an engineer, promises to write his full memoirs while in prison in accordance with the rules and regulations of Form and Format.

Trilliams wins court battle

Peaved Trilliams, notable for his long time crusade against responsible student journalism, emerged triumphant from a recent court battle. Trilliams was awarded a whopping $14,000 in damages from a former college from the Jock-Strap Maniac who allegedly clubbed him with a rolled up copy of the Bumswickan - the liberal minded Mecca of responsible journalism in New Brunswick. Trilliams claims that the attack wounded him both physically and mentally, instilling in him a better aversion toward the Student Publication. Trilliams says these kinds of attacks should incur the harshest punishments from the Canadian government but that he "kinda enjoyed the spanking part."

Bumswickan cartel to rival Irbings'

Stupid Union fears advent of all-powerful student media

BY STEPHANIE BURNIT
 The Old and Stale

Bumswickan Publishing Inc. today announced a takeover bid for CHRS Broadcasting and Engineers Ruin The World Publications, which sources in the latter two organizations have described as hostile.

Bumswickan Publishing, which produces the highly respected weekly newspaper the Bumswickan, has announced that it has begun legal proceedings to have the two companies placed under its firm control. This action has been greeted with howls of protest from the Engineering department of UNB and from the radio station management.

"It's an outrage! They're trying to become the biggest cartel since the Irbings!" said Jeff Wimple, Station manager of CHRS. This note of mixed horror and outrage was a common theme as the news spread through the university community.

"We're just worried that soon they'll have more power than we do."

a worried Student Union President Grey Flutes said. "Soon they'll be big enough to take us on, and we don't honestly know if we can stop them . . . it was bad enough when they only came out once a week. Sure, they were annoying, but by the time the next issue came out, everyone had forgotten about the bid blunders, ooops, I mean minor irregularities in the regular functioning of the campus, that [the Student Union] had been responsible for the week before. Now with the up to the minute reporting capabilities of CHRS, I'm afraid to think of how bad we'll look."

"If you had listened to me there wouldn't be this problem right now! I still say we should have stomped them flat last term!" an irate Steve Chilly-Willyams screamed at our reporter. This sentiment was also expressed by certain members of the finance committee.

When asked if this did indeed constitute an attempt to take over the entire campus media, Allan Cartwheels, Managing Editor for the Bumswickan responded "No, its not really a hostile takeover. We're simply diversifying our interests. I don't understand why the other organizations are so upset. I mean, its not as if this is going to affect the way they're being run. Of course, there will be some change when we complete the transition. For example, we're renaming ERTW the AFRW, "The Arts Faculty Weekly Revue", and CHRS is going to undergo a format change - we're thinking of calling it CHRS Lite and Easy Rock - from the Eagles to Barry Manilow, 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. I like the sounds of that. We're also planning to sell off the assets of the ERTW (since we don't really need anything they've got) and hopefully get enough money to buy CHRS a couple of 90 minute tapes."

Neither ERTW nor CHRS could be reached for further comment, as they all began bleeding from the ears, going into wild convulsions and frothing at the mouth when they heard this news.

Lynne Wannahickey, Editor for Life of the Bumswickan, was heard to cackle with glee "First we consolidate control of the media, then we take over the Student Union, and then . . . the University itself! Soon we'll control everything!! EVERYTHING! Hahahahaha!!!" Wannahickey has already been observed measuring the UNB President's office while muttering "Well, the wall will have to go to make room for the couch, but other than that . . ."

"Well, that's that. I guess I'm out of a job, then." said UNB President Wobbin Armst Wong. "Not that their ideas are all bad . . . eliminating engineering and sciences altogether, annexing STU, moving the now empty Head Hall up the hill and turning it into the Bumswickan Annex of the SUB . . . Those are sensible policies I can live with."

More details are not forthcoming, as every reporter in New Brunswick is now a part of either the Bums or Irbing cartels.

BILLBOARD TOURS COUNTRY -- A group of concerned citizens, hoping to promote student radio and keep meddling Stupid Unioners out of student media have begun the promotion of their cause through the circulation of this novel billboard. Jeff Wimple, organizer of the group, "Friends of the Station", says that he has paid as much as $14,000 out of his own pocket for the commencement of the project. (Assorted Press)

Traumatic stapler attack on student

BY PETER COOKED
 The Old and Stale

Fredericton (NB). A UNB student, after recovering from the psychological trauma of a stapler attack, becomes a voice for challenging New Brunswick's educational standards.

According to a Biology student who witnessed the incident, a Forestry student at the UNB Science Library was trying to use the library stapler when a librarian fervently attempted to stop him. The librarian, disregarding the student's desperation, snatched the stapler from his trembling hands and said: "I'll staple your lips together if you try that again." The student, having resigned himself to the aggression of the librarian, stood in line at the photocopying machine. When the photocopier broke down, the same student nervously went to the librarian for assistance. The librarian suddenly screamed: "you un-employed brat! it's you that has been ruining all of our equipment isn't it? I bet you're the one that has been mis-shelving the books too!" In a mad frenzy, the librarian jumped on the student and stapled his debit card to his chest. Luckily, some Chemistry students nearby were able to retain the librarian until UNB security arrived. The student's injuries were not life-threatening. Presently, the librarian (who wishes to remain anonymous) is undergoing psychiatric treatment.

The student is suing UNB for payment of the therapy he had to undergo as a result of the stapler trauma. However, the event has reached nation-wide attention because the student has launched a campaign against "Science Librarians' discrimination of students". It has also been brought to the attention of the media that the Science Library at UNB had refused to supply the students with more than one stapler and one photocopier.

The irony of the Science Library situation has created a public scandal for the province of New Brunswick. The ethics of the educational system are under severe scrutiny.

The student desires that the UNB senate undergoes group therapy and role reversal therapy so that it can rediscover its function as the instruments for student learning.

CbC appoints new chair

First move in office will be to replace all paid staffers with students

By CHRISTOPHER HAIRY
 Arts Reporter

ExSTUPid Student Union President Jeff Lowdown can stop looking for a new job now-he has been named as the new Chair of the Canadian Boardcrossing Corporation, and has named Pay-Me van Realty and Anna McMatrix as his appointments to the CbC Steering committee.

Prime Minister Brian Baloney, when announcing the appointment, described Lowdown as "a hard working fellow, whose views and previous experience make him perfect for the job."

Lowdown has announced that his first act will be to fire all paid staff at CbC and to hire students to replace them. "This will simultaneously advance my doctrine of student empowerment, and provide a replacement for the poorly funded student loan program."

Lowdown has also been misquoted as saying "I also intend to bring back Fraggle Rock, and will be launching a new enterprise to combat the audience erosion caused by American television- we'll call it The Senseless Violence and Gratuitous

Sex Hour. Let's face it, that's all you get South of the border anyhow, so we'll just concentrate it in one hour a day and save the rest of our viewing schedule for more traditional fare."

Lowdown realizes that these actions will be unpopular with some, and that their attacks are taking a toll on his reputation, so he has hired the consulting firm of Bostitch, Braithweight and Bourke, Inc. to do some image rebuilding. "They are highly respected media manipulators and spin doctors. Really, if you want to twist the truth there's no one better. I've seen those boys in action, and its scary. My only worry is that the senior partner, Johnny Bostitch might be too busy with some current projects of his at Concordia to assist, but we'll see how it goes."

Adrian Clark's-son has been appointed to lead the defense of the network. "We're just trying to preserve the cultural heritage of all Canadians. We trust that you'll support us so that outrages like the ones Lowdown has proposed don't become reality."

Realizing that the people might not support him, Lowdown is going to call a nationwide referendum on the matter. The question will be worded "Do you support measure C-666, which would allow for certain changes to be made in the functioning of certain bodies which may or may not include the CbC, and which would give power and authority to certain groups which, upon closer examination, might or might not include one Jeff Lowdown, or, by voting no, do you want to doom the CbC to an eternity in budgetary hell without any programming?"

"I think it's a fair and straightforward question. I did the wording up myself- I think that the people will understand that a vote for yes is a vote for democracy and free speech. Of course, if a majority of people vote no I'm going to ignore them and do it anyway."

There have been rumours circulating about a possible petition calling for Lowdown and his Steering Committee to step down, but in light of recent events, it is not expected that anything will come of it.

Six-point plan Pull Canada away from constitutional abyss

BY JEFF HARLOT
The Old and Stale

With the very real possibility of the right-wing Bloc Quebecois party coming to power to represent Quebec, and the equally right-winged Reform party coming to power to represent the rest of Canada, the ten provincial premiers have decided to pull back from the abyss and are to present to the nation a solution to the constitutional malaise. The proposed six-point plan is as follows:

1. Take away Brian Mulroney's dice and let him play with marbles, preferably the ones that fell from his head.
2. Jean Chretien is to be sent to Alberta to learn to speak English and Joe Clark is to be sent to Quebec to learn to speak proper French.
3. Table or barricade native concerns before a Senate committee.
4. Abolish the Senate, but keep the doors closed so no one will know the difference.
5. Heed Jacques Parizeau's demand that his face be placed on some dollar denomination (this after all, is all he ever wanted - that and to be called Monsieur Presidente).
6. Open monsieur Presidente restaurants in Quebec that will specialize in frites and Peri burgers, which will accept Canadian loonies and/or Parizoonines. The Parizoonines are to equal to but not exceeding the value of Canadian Tire money, which is what it would have been worth had Quebec separated.

The premiers express a collective faith and hope that these proposals will accepted by the people of Quebec. If, however, the people of Quebec decide by referendum to secede, the premiers from English Canada have taken the precautionary step of recruiting the negotiating talents of Don Cherry and Eric Lindros' mother.

Student Directory - In a cost saving measure the Student Unions of both the University of New Brunswick and STUPid have decided to print the upcoming year's student directory with only two covers and nothing in between. "Students couldn't possibly get more pissed off than this year," incoming UNB SU Pres Eric Molehill said, "and this is more fair: now nobody gets their name in the book."

University falls to massbantonics Surveying students discover rare phenomena

BY TIMOTHY ITCHARD
Arts Reporter

(AP-Fredericton) At the University of New Brunswick a rare phenomenon known as massbantonics has been sighted as the cause to the ever increasing slope to the University's campus.

The problem first arose when professors in the Department of Survey Engineering noticed differences in the results from first-year students' labs. The labs are performed every Fall to introduce students to the concepts of surveying. The results are compared to the known measurements to verify the students' work. "The results were very strange this year. The results for the entire class weren't within 10% of the expected results. We (the department) checked the equipment out, and found it to be working fine" said Professor Slant. The students results calculated a grade of 21.1° for the slope of the campus, against a known slope of 17.8°. After two days of meetings the department dismissed the results to human error on the part of the students. Dr. Plate, Dean of Surveying, said "At the time we felt that it was the only reasonable explanation."

This Spring prof. Slant was curious to see if he and his graduate students could reproduce the known results as well as those of the undergraduate students. After a week of measuring the course from the top of the campus to the bottom he found that their results were farther off than the students. Prof. Slant's results came to a slope of 21.8°. "I was very confused. I mean, I've done surveying for a long time and I know we didn't make any mistakes. I know this campus like the back of my hand, but I couldn't explain where I went wrong. We shouldn't have been off by that much" Prof Slant, along with the Department of Energy Mines and Resources organized a laser survey of the campus to be made as well as a set of satellite measurements. These tests would prove once and for all what the slope reading should be for the campus.

The tests were performed over a 10 day period, from March 16 to March 26. "These results were stange, the slope rose every day, as if something was moving" said Dr. Uplift of E.M.R. As a result of these tests a Geoplate scan was performed on April 6 showing that stress fractures in the secondary crust at the base of the campus were sinking and bringing the rest of the campus with it. Initial studies show that the introduction of Gillian Hall, a five story extension of the engineering building, cracked the secondary crust plate under the building resulting in the sinking of the lower part of the campus. The bottom half of the campus rests very close to the old river bed. This makes the primary and secondary crust plates acceptable to shifting and sinking given the right circumstances. This form of movement is called 1° and 3°, over many years. Massbantonics movement is very rare in North America," explained Dr. Uplift.

The laser reading found the slope to have increases almost a-half-a degree in the last three weeks making the slope of the campus 22.2 degrees. The rate of growth of the slope is almost 9 degrees a year. "Its too early to tell whether this will continue, all we can do for now is to monitor the situation and hope for the best" said Dr. Plate. He also adds that a study will be initiated to keep track of the problem and to look into correcting the problem as soon as possible. One idea that has been mentioned is the construction of a Football stadium at the top of the hill. It is predicted that a large weight at the top fo the hill would counter balance the sinking. James Bomb, UNB Athletic Director, has not official comment on this idea, but adds that he personally wouldn't be upset to see football return to the school. "There are a lot of financial as well as logistical questions that need to be answered first before we can consider football. The first, and foremost, is how do we stop the sinking of the campus. If this means a football stadium needs to be built, then it needs to be built."

Wobin Armstrong, UNB President, said yesterday that he feels that everything is being done to rectify the problem, that it is an isolated incident, confined to the campus, and will not effect the surrounding community. He also added that this will not effect the present operation of the school.

Erik Birchhillside, UNB Student Union President elect, said that the Executive has postponed a SUB expansion study in favor of a Tramcar study. The Tramcar would carry students from the top and bottom of the school. "In a couple of years it may not be possible to walk from the bottom of the hill to the SUB," said Burchillside, who adds, "It will be the only way to travel up and down the campus."

WEATHER / National & International

British Colomba: Tornado periods. Chance of a really huge hail storm or maybe a hurricane. Snowstorm in the Northern-Eastern-Southern region. Highs 987 to 1 in the interior of the plane and a bit lower elsewhere.

Yokoon: Big bad snowstorm with plenty of rain pellets.

Albarta: Cloudy with some sun and snow and the nasty tornado and lots of other great things. Highs -90 in the south-eastern- northern coast and a bit warmer elsewhere.

Ontareo: As always, perfect weather and the only place in Canada where the grass grows green and the sun shines brightly. Temperatures will be perfect and really nice and beautiful and make everyone else wished they lived in this fine province.

Kebec: Due to separation we cannot reveal such information, but we can say it's really cold over there.

Maratames: Generally all these provinces can expect nasty snowstorms, hurricanes and lots of really fun tornadoes. However this evening the temperature will rise dramatically to an all time record of, you guessed it, -34.

Oldfoundland: Pretty well the same as the Maratames however everything will occur a half and hour later.

Labreodoer: A few snowstorms and lots of ice and maybe the same weather that Oldfoundland is going to get. High -90.

New Brunswick's Bursary Ballet

Intense choreography and dynamic movement intermingle with beaurocracy and a real look at the hard life of student aid workers

Arts Review/ New Brunswick's beautiful Bursary Ballet, educates as well as, entertains

Dwarves dressed as comptrollers in frilly and elegantly designed tutus cavort gaily about the stage tossing confetti and Kraft Dinner

The New Brunswick Irving College of Political Design - sponsored tour of the Bursary Ballet gets underway with a premiere performance at Memorial Hall, UNB campus this week. A truly introspective look into the working world of Student Aid employees, this innovative and exciting production promises both laughter and tears from civil servants and students alike (but mainly respectively). Broken up in to three separate sections, choreographer Vaughn Blaney says that each section "acts to synthesize the whole drama into romance, greed, political beaurocracy and starvation. Oh, and education, can't forget that."

The NBBB's integration of student life and the long hours of the Aid employee offered an intriguing double glimpse of Choreographer Vaughn Blaney's talents. From the first segment entitled "SIN Number, Please!" set to the music of BTO's Takin' Care of Business, we see Blaney's dancers as not just 40,000 dollar-a-year civil servants, but as hybrid creatures of human and animal quality. Tripping lightly and sure-footedly about the mahogany desks, the dancers move with grace and flair as they ambitiously leave the phone off the hook and toss a caricature dummy "student" back and forth between each other. The overwhelming power of Blaney's vision comes to climax as the dummy student is slammed with finality into an office trash can and dimes are tossed in after him with genuine feeling that sends shivers down the audience.

Segment two, entitled "The Wait" sees the dummy "student" in his apartment, as the spectres of starvation and debt dance feverishly about the small, dimly lit room to the strains of If I Were A Rich Man from Fiddler On The Roof. As the spectres swirl closer in aching descending spirals, the angels of the Bursary come down to the Halleluia Chorus from Handel's Messiah. The dream-like quality and the triumphant arrival of the angels put the audience on its feet in an unprecedented mid-performance ovation. Dwarves dressed as comptrollers in frilly and elegantly designed tutus cavort gaily about the stage tossing confetti and Kraft Dinner.

The true highlight of the evening comes with the final segment called "Bursaries? I see No Bursaries!" The stage is in darkness and is covered with information forms and carbon paper. This compelling portion of the performance saw the solo dance of Blaney himself as the jester, symmetry and power interlinking in his every step. True innovation met grace and style as the office workers returned to the stage to dance with coffee cups and lit cigarettes around the giant cheque placed centrally. The NBBB gave a gutsy, compelling performance as the final curtain came down on the full cast as they mooned the dummy student.

The brilliance of Blaney's conceptualizations and actions were expressed beautifully in the graceful yet sure movement of the dancers. An inspiring work, this production kept pace with the tradition that has brought us such memorable performances in the past as McKenna's Fences To Sit On, Bird's All I Want For Christmas is An Honorary Degree and Bosnitch's virtuoso performance in Prime Minister For A Day.

The NBBB continues at Mem Hall until the due date for confirmation of earnings, with a final show on Registration Day.

(Above) Choreographer Vaughn Blaney is noted for his individualistic style, which he credits to his commitment to higher education. "We are training students for the real world. If they can't survive for ten months a year as students, on $3360.00 how can they expect to survive as civil servants when their wages are frozen at $40,000 a year?"

(Right) Prima Ballerina Francois Rioux (here seen as the jester in the ballet segment entitled "Bursaries? I see no Bursaries!"), a recent graduate of the New Brunswick Irving College of Political Design where he specialized in Light-footed Shifiness with a minor in Passing The Buck says of the production: "I like to think of this as bringing my real self onto the stage - I've always been a song and dance man at heart, and that's what I want to continue to give the people, especially the students."

National Red And White

The World's Smallest Co-Ed Kickline

Despite intense protest from the National Association of Sensitive New Age Engineers, the National Red and White Revue opened to a full house last night at the Pantages Theatre in Toronto. Those expecting to see "Phantom Of The Opera" were pleasantly astonished by the change in plans.

Celebrating the 125th anniversary of Canada, the Red and White gathered the most pretentious "semi-professional" performance acts from universities across this nation into a Woodstock for cabaret fans.

The Stars and Stripes Dance and Rodeo Posse, performing their own eclectic brand of cowboy hip-hop horseback dancing, opened the show. Some twenty-five semi-finalists from the Fly Girls auditions danced to the familiar strains of C&C Music Factory, only once falling off their high horses.

Various cover bands performed their original permutations of popular songs, to which the crowd clapped and sang along. Between Bad Carmen's rock and roll rendition of "Rubber Duckie" and Eight Sneakers' acapella version of "Enter Sandman," those seated could barely keep from rising to their feet.

Emcees Sarah Staley and Mark Siphon added their own brand of humor and spark to the show with a running "love story" gag, a revival of the lost art of Wayne and Garth impersonations, and occasional obscure jokes concerning the lynching of high school students. (The jest may have been carried too far when a teenaged girl was burned in effigy onstage).

"The World's Smallest Co-Ed Kickline" appeared in the second act. The six members, arranged boy-girl, raised their legs to the world in tandem to the pounding rhythms of "There's No Business (Like Show Business)."

As a Grand Finale, the much-debated National Engineers' Jugband gave a slightly censored performance of "Oh Susanna," aiming to please the NASNAE by covering up the slang terms with loud beeps. Political correctness may not have been achieved, but the masses did seem to find the act humorous.

The National Red and White Revue ended with a standing ovation... all those remaining in the audience at the end of the show were clapping and shrieking madly as they rose from their seats to approach the stage. Security, however, was not threatened by the mob.

When asked if the Revue would be done again next year, director Suing Magazine had only this to say: "I don't know. After all, they are only university students."

Eric Lindros and mother decide he'll play at UNB

Say drinking age and education are factors for decision

BY AL KOHOLIC Sport Reporter

FREDERICTON --Considered to be one of the best all-round hockey players in the world, Eric Lindros has decided to further his education rather than play professional hockey. Lindros will attend the University of New Brunswick in the Fall and likely play for the university hockey team, the Red Devils.

year $50 million contract with the Quebec Nordiques last year, played last season for the Canadian Olympic team that captured the silver medal at the Games. In announcing her son's decision, Eric's mother Bonnie said that the choice was simple. "There isn't as much tension concerning the language issue in Fredericton as there is in a place like Quebec City. As well with Eric enrolled in the Business Administration program at UNB, hopefully both of us will learn that earning $5 million a year and playing professional hockey is better than spending $10,000 to go to university to play hockey." When the Quebec Nordiques drafted Lindros in 1991 as the first overall pick they felt they had a legitimate shot at signing him if they put enough money on the table, but that was not the case. Instead Lindros played part of the year in the Ontario Hockey League with the Oshawa Generals and with the Olympic Team. Lindros had the opportunity to play university hockey in the United States, but decided against it for one simple reason. "I'm only 19 years old and that means I have two more years to go before I can legally go to a bar and have a beer," said Lindros. "As everyone knows having a beer after a game is a ritual and to have to go back to the hotel room alone while everyone was having a good time would be tough. "In the Maritimes the legal age is 19 which means I can drink," continued Lindros. "So after a game, I can go with the guys to the Social Club and have a few. In the US it wouldn't be like that."

UNB Red Devil coach Mike Johnston could not be reached for comment as he was said to be still appealing some sort of decision that occurred during his team's playoffs. However, Red Devils Promotions Director, Mr. Peter McLaughlin did say Johnston was extremely pleased with Lindros joining the team. "Everyone here is pleased with the announcement. It should boost our attendance numbers and give more exposure to our Minor Hockey showdown we run during the intermissions."

The Red Devils have enjoyed a fair amount of success the past few seasons. They were ranked nationally all of last year before being ousted in the second round of the playoffs. "Certainly part of my decision, I mean Eric's, to go to UNB was influenced by their success," said Bonnie Lindros. "He's always played on a winner and I don't want that to change."

UNB assistant captain Rob Boldon (right) welcomes Eric Lindros to the Red Devils. Lindros will play for the school in the Fall.

REALISTICO

Fredericton awarded Olympics

BY BEN DOVER Sport Reporter

FREDERICTON -- In an announcement issued on Wednesday April 1, The International Olympic Committee (IOC) awarded the city of Fredericton the right to host the winter Olympics in 2000.

"This is the happiest moment of my life. My dream has just taken the biggest step towards reality," said Neil Bumstead, chairman of the Fredericton Organization of Olympic Lobbyists and Supporters (FOOLS). "We've put together an organization of professional and dedicated employees. We've also had to work around a shoe-string budget. Hearing the news last week, it seemed that all our time and effort was rewarded."

At a press conference held yesterday, the FOOLS committee announced the details of their Olympic report which reveals many exciting changes to the Olympic format. Bumstead explains that the general trend is to use a futuristic theme to match the turning of the millennium. "We rejected the idea of a modern theme, instead our slogan will be 'Back to Basics'. We'll be using very traditional venues for the events and the whole Olympic process will mirror those of the early 1900's."

Though Fredericton had arguably the strongest bid, they beat out some tough competition from Boise, Idaho and Lotske, Bulgaria. Both entries offered excellent venues and rivaled Fredericton in sponsorship and TV contracts.

Venues haven't been determined for some sports however the UNB campus has been chosen as Olympic Center and most sports will take place on campus. Barbed wire fence will keep ticket-less spectators out and athletes in. Residence housing will be used to house the athletes.

All Olympic hockey games will take place at The Lady Beaverbrook Rink. Hugh Jass, director of hockey for FOOLS says, "We decided on the LBR because it most resembled early 20th century rinks. It's decay and poor spectator seating is phenomenal." Jass also stated that St. Thomas University, whose home rink is the LBR, has agreed to forfeit the four games they will miss due to the Olympics claiming that chances are they would have lost them anyway.

All downhill skiing events will take place on Buchanan hill. Skiing director, Chuck Deadstone says that organizers are expecting record times in all events. Spectators will be funnelled into the woods to the left of the hill and behind the fence below the field. The relatively new sport of speed skiing will take place on Dineen Drive beginning outside STU and ending in the LBR parking lot. Deadstone also stated that due to a lack of flat terrain at the bottom of the hill, large nets will be designed to catch the skiers, expected to reach speeds in excess of 250 km/hr. Spectators will not be permitted to view this event because FOOLS cannot cover the insurance premiums. Few skiers are expected to participate anyway.

Mackay road will host both the bobsleigh and luge events. The start house will be situated in front of D'Avray Hall and will end outside the LB Gym. This venue is ideal because maintenance will be minimal. During January, the road is so icy and unkept that very little extra work will be necessary to prepare the track. In keeping with the theme 'Back to Basics', organizers have decided to eliminate the iced bankings which line the corners to reproduce the original bobsleigh course. This should increase spectator interest and the athletes' agility to control the sled.

The Fredericton Games will see an outdoor figure skating rink for the first time since 1942. The events will take place at the Queen's Square tennis courts. The facility offers an excellent ice surface and no rental rates. A lack of spectator seating will not pose a problem. It should be noted however that for the duration of the competition, outdoor hockey time will be slightly restricted. This may cause a fuss with many pro-outdoor hockey activists in the area.

It is quite evident that Fredericton offers some new and exciting twists to Olympic history. One of these is the fact that all profits will be donated to charities so that the repercussions of the games will live on for years to come. Bumstead hopes that this new idea will be adopted by all Olympic organizations in the future.

unparalleled in the university newspaper offices across the country. Obviously, Mr. Fisher feels he got a steal in luring Frank from his lucrative position at UNB. According to Fisher, "Frank is one of those elite newspaper specimens which come along only once in a life time. He is similar to what Gretzky was early in the 1980's". Frank will one day rule the sports media world with the same finesse, maturity and eloquence as Wayne Gretzky does with hockey.

We cannot express in words what it means to everyone on this campus, to see Frank Denis go except - good riddance! All he did was complain that we never had this column in by the deadline anyways.

Why is smoking still legal?

For centuries, non-smokers have been subject to the weaknesses of people who will do anything for a cigarette. Why is smoking still legal? Even the airline companies have realized that smoking is hazardous to society. In fact, some American cities are starting to ban smoking in public-anywhere. Banning things have become a tradition. In any decent city dog owners are banned from walking their dogs if they don't have one of those things to pick up doo doo. However, walking one's dog should be illegal. So should smoking.

So why is smoking still legal? Perhaps it has something to do with the fact that millions of dollars are being made everyday from an addiction. For example, many people enjoy sweets, yet some people eat too many sweets and all their teeth start to rot out. Thus, their dentist will advise them not to eat sweets. However, eating sweets should be illegal. So should smoking.

So why is smoking still legal? Maybe it has something to do with people's rights. Recently, gun laws have become a major issue and advocates for more gun control believe that there should be less violence and every city should look like Disney World. Therefore, they argue that safety in society is a right everyone should have. However, gun owners feel they have the right to bear arms like John Wayne. Indeed, there is a big problem here. But there is no problem with smoking. Smokers should not have rights and smoking should be illegal.

So why is smoking still legal? Everyone inhales exhaust from cars. Everyone has eaten food which is not healthy. And everyone has tried sitting in the kitchen sink. All these activities are detrimental to one's well being, but everyone has tried them. But not everyone smokes, therefore, smoking should be illegal.

So why is smoking still legal? It might have a lot to do with our work force. Many smoking workers argue that they are good workers and they deserve a smoke break just like non-smokers deserve a coffee break. However, many smokers who are supposedly on a smoke break also drink coffee. Why are such actions tolerated? Furthermore, some smokers feel they are an asset to their company and know that no one will complain about their unCanadian habit. But I also feel I am an asset to my company, but I don't try to test my boss and see if he/she will tolerate some of my actions. While I have no intention of smoking on the job, I'd love to run around in the nude and show off my heart tattoo or make funny noises during conference meetings. But I do not engage in any such pleasurable behavior, so why should smokers? Smoking should be illegal.

So why is smoking still legal? Maybe it has something to do with the fact that millions of non-smokers are just too wimpy to tell someone who is smoking that they will have to put out their cigarette if they want to live in this healthy society. Of course, most people do not want to involve themselves in what could become a very uncomfortable situation. Therefore, some things to remember if the person is not happy with you asking him/her to put out their burning stick of filth.

First of all, reassure them that everyone in society has to take on responsibilities. For instance, we cannot run around in a our nude or make funny noises because we feel like it. Secondly, let them know that they can do activities which are detrimental to their health and also fun, such as sitting in the kitchen sink. And thirdly, ask them to pretend that they are on a plane which does not tolerate smoking and if anyone is caught smoking they are immediately thrown off.

By taking such measures we can make our country a better place for kitchen sink sitting, coffee drinking and all those people who don't own dogs but walk in the park anyway.

Separation and potholes

The separation issue has gone on long enough. It is time for the country of Canada to say no not only to drugs and smoking, but also the province of New Brunswick. If New Brunswick wants to separate then let them go. Unlike their new nearby country, Kebec, New Brunswick has nothing to manipulate and scare other Canadians with, therefore we can tell them to go to hell. And like Kebec, no matter what the rest of Canada does, New Brunswick still would not be happy.

No, separation is up to them and if they think they will be able to get funding from the federal government for a Trans-Canada highway after they separate, they are highly mistaken because with separation comes potholes - just drive in Kebec to have that notion confirmed. Thus New Brunswickers better think twice about separation or bad roads will become a horrible part of life - forever.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Sickening! (sic)

You could never imagine how royally pissed off i (sic) am with that incredibly pompous (sic) rag the Bumswickin (sic) based in New Brunswick. I wrote a letter to that (sic) paper and was horrified to discover a plethora of sics (sic) all over my goodly work. Is there a problem with being human? I make mistakes, they make istakes, (sic) but do they have to announce it to the hole (sic) world. How can we begin to teach good writing skills if the vcontnue (sic) to show such (sic) scant disregard for the editing process? Thank god (sic) for the Old and Stale. Please treat my article with the kind (sic) of conscientious (sic) care that (sic) you are known for.

Peeved Trillions, New Brunswick.

Sic.

We have learnt that people are upset that we use too many sics in their letters. It seems only fair that we explain why sics are used.

1. We use sics when the word used is too long and unfamiliar to us. If the word is too complex for us Editors why should anybody else understand it?
2. We use sics if we are really pissed off at the writer. So write bad things about the paper and you get sics.
3. We think sics are kind of cool especially when letters are very boring.
4. We have found that sics add to copy. Sics usually get into really short letters.
5. We use sic when we find a statement that is very brilliant. We figure more people will read sic marked letters.
6. We are not sure what sic stands for so we have decided that it means special reading skills required here. I just made that up, but that is the nature of sicology. (sic) hey, in the Bible they use selah, nobody complains about it, so why the sic can't we use sic when we sicing well feel like?

Al Martyr Editor (sic) in (sic) chief, the b(sic)umswickin.

Thank you, thank you!

I am writing to thank the author of Mugwump for what his wonderful writing has done for the Harried Irbing Library. When he referred to our illustrious leader as one looking like a bum, it peeked the conscience of thousands of alumni from all over the world and the donations began to flow in. We have been showered with gifts of money, food, and clothing, and we can say with full satisfaction that we have the best dressed and best fed library staff in Canada today. However, we are asking that people stop sending suits for the Head of Libraries, now. He has enough and we assure you that he looks wonderful these days. Thanks again to the thoughtful Mugwump writer of the Bumslickin.

President should quit

I am most upset with the members of the Stupid Union Executive who have been uttering disrespectful words about our illustrious president. I was in the women's room recently when I heard two people, a man and a woman, discussing the president behind his back. They said he did diddly-squat all year! They actually said that! It was a good thing that I was in the perfect position for such stomach churning and vitriolic outbursts. My constipation cleared at once. I am appalled. I think he should resign out of anger and indignation. Those awful executive members don't deserve our president.

Alice Kissingass, New Bumswick.

New name, new look, Kudos!

Finally, finally! Kudos to the staff of ENG for their latest issue. The new name is perfect, I always found Enginerds Rule the World a bit vain. Bumswickin is like, most witty and perfect, and it shows that these enginerds are looking in the right place for role models. I know, I know, some of the layout is almost Old and Stalish, almost; well, almost Bumswickianish, but, hey, that is fine, heck, they could have picked a worse model, you know. But its like some of the old guard is still there, and, well, like what was it with all that old format in the middle? Don't be afraid, kids, we love the new format, and I am sure the Bumswickin will help you perfect it, just ask them. Go for it. Arts watch out, the enginerds are coming! Wowee!!!

Chris Like Cool Jones, Ont.

Position now open

Staff and workers at the bumswickin a asking for your indulgence as we write this brief advertisement for a vacant position in the paper. We are looking for a lazy, obnoxious, foul-mouthed, incredibly insensitive, tasteless, wry humoured, profoundly pathetic, beer guzzling, spit drooling, sports loving, ice skating hating, baseball adoring, noisy, bambi killing, columnist who will be willing to fill the able and admirable shoes of our once illustrious sports editor, Marred Goodes AVOID. The paper has not been the same without him. People actually say good morning to each other; no one laments how much they hate life, people are actually being called by their given names, and the plants have discovered the meaning of clean air. The Bumswickin is accepting application. Please us toilette paper for stationary.

Awttawa's education policy: ignore the provinces and store up trouble

Despite all the talk of needed reform at the post-secondary education level, the edges have already begun to tatter, and the signs are foreboding. It may not be too late, but that which is most feared is seemingly becoming a reality.

In a case that could rock the education establishment nation-wide, a student is suing a university for failing in its intended task: to prepare young men and women of our nation for their lives ahead. He has said that the university has failed, and as a result fears a life of obscurity and destitution on the fringes of society.

That this can happen in system that has invested so much is astounding. A high school graduate, full of energy and ready to take on the world, should rightfully expect upon the arrival at one of Our universities to have the life blood drained from them, preparing them for a life of service to the Canadian Corporate Establishment.

Specifically, the accusation centers around a small but growing number of professors at the University of New bumswick, who, having had their own way without proper supervision, have been teaching irrelevant material about the way the world really works. Nowhere is there any goal to creating subservience in the student, a sense of ingratiation and brown-nosing that is the essence of the corporate lackey.

How accurate is Linda Frump's assessment of UNB! In her book, A Guide to Canadian Corporate Prep Schools, she identified UNB as a school where "a student could only get an education if they really wanted to." In retrospect, this is not as fitting as it seemed at the time. That UNB could indoctrinate Kebin Burk, recent winner of the Dr. Jim SoSoft Student Leadership Award, is indeed a testament to the school's abilities. But they have to be able to do it for the thousands of others as well, year in and year out. One supremely ingratiating, brown-nosing lackey is simply not enough.

In responding to the accusations, a private source at UNB, who works in Dean of Conformity's office, said that they have indeed been doing a good job. They pointed to their Engineering program, describing with pride "the inane value they place on that stupid iron ring. They [enginerds] conform in every way to what corporations expect: better than any well-trained army group!" They went on to say they were also doing a fairly good job in Business Prostration.

None the less, that a student, even a single one, could somehow have slipped through the cracks is disturbing. The legal action must have some validity, since it has been accepted by the courts. While there is no doubt that the case will be quashed, the issue is still with us.

It is imperative that our young leaders of tomorrow do not begin to perceive of this country as operating under an ideology. For if they do, the percentage of unemployed requisite to the proper functioning of Our State could conceivably cease to exist. Indeed, people such as this student could subvert Our noble populace into realizing that the petty problems of poor health care, poor education funding, improper daycare, etc., are actually fictions of a created cash-crunch. (Even worse, people may come to realize that the present recession is actually a massive cover, created to hide the movement of Our factories to Barf-allo, NY).

The problems of post-secondary education have been left to fester long enough. This will prevent Us, oops, I mean Kanada, from competitiveness on the International Playing Field. It is time for Awttawa to deal with the problem. Obviously the lack of standardized education at the national level has allowed this to happen. Further deterioration will no doubt effect the economy adversely. If you look at a map of Kanada upside down, you will see that the East is actually leaving, if not already LEFT. We must not allow it to drift any further.

IN BUSINESS THIS WEEK

Another school year is at an end with many students running around like mad trying to get their papers done. Sources have told us that the Professors have bets on who can create the most misery in a student's life. Students: if you are walking down the halls and feel someone is watching you well someone is. All the Profs are keeping an eye out for any student that starts screaming, banging their head against the walls, or just sits in the middle of a corridor rocking back and forth laughing. All of the above have different point values. The one that is worth the most is if a graduating student gets institutionalized, so students, don't sit in the middle of the corridor rocking back and forth laughing because that is grounds for institutionalizing. Presently, all of the Profs. are tied for first place.B1

INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS

The United Nations have once again requested the services of "The Man They Call Rahim". He has been hired as a hypnotist because the ambassadors have been showing signs of boredom and want to be entertained (i.e. having someone thinking they are from outerspace). When asked if would find this assignment difficult he replied, "is esy, is esy"B3

SMALL BUSINESS

Darling Ross and his BA 4108 won first prize for the Most Innovative Small Business Project this year. The crew leaves today for the grand opening of their Lemonade Stand at the North Pole. Schaefer will accompany the crew as their strategist and policy maker. Photos of the happy crew and Darling Ross in his new bikini.B7

NEWSMAKER

Phil Wright will not be going to China next month. He had to cancel his trip due to a 10 foot stack of late papers he has to correct. While sitting in his office with a line up of 64 students waiting to see him, we asked how he felt about it, his only reply was "I understand"B9

CORPORATE ETHICS

A stockbroker has been charged today for selling insider information to Prof. Bob Maher. Prof. Maher's lawyer managed to reduce his sentence for the minute he invested in the stocks, they went down 20 points. The jury felt so sorry for him that they let him off, however, the judge overruled the decision. She sentenced him not to invest in the stock market until the recession was over. She stated, "we're in enough trouble already"B12

BOOK

Prof. Pam Ritchie has written a How To book. The subject deals with how to argue with absolutely everything anybody says and part two deals with the theory of counting. She did not have the intention to split the book into two different subjects, but she argued with herself so much that her publisher made it a two-parter. The proceeds of the book will go towards her medical bills due the skiing accidents. See review of the book.B16

NEW POSITION?

Francisco strikes again. He has taken upon himself to stay home the later part of last week and the early part of this week to write up every exam for the faculty members. After showing these exams to the respective Profs., they all agreed that he wrote up great exams that would give the students major headaches. Francisco has been assigned a new position next year as the official exam writer, which all Profs are very happy about because now they can all leave in early April.B19

AWARDS

Last night the First Annual Tilley/Singer Awards were held. The students were in awe when Dean Storey made an appearance. Nobody really believed that K.P. was replaced. They just thought that the administration did not have the heart to tell them that a Dean could not be found to convince the Profs to stay and teach intercession and summer session. The winners of the different awards are as follows:

Business faculty mourns

Salut Ti-Cue, amuse toi et bonne chance

Antonio Piles (1983-1992): The Faculty of Administration at UNB mourns the loss of Professor Antonio Piles. Piles was Professor of Industrial Relations/Part Time Closet Peace Activist and Wanna Be mob boss. His most recent work was considered an apprenticeship for the latter position. He was Associate Dean of Business Administration.

Antonio was known to his better croonies as "Sneakers" because of his fetish for different coloured canvas running shoes; his most notable being the red ones. Piles was reported to actually wear the red footwear with his one Saville Row suit which he "donned" only when he was presenting research papers or preparing to hit the executive of anti-labour business entities. The infamous suit was purchased by Piles upon his graduation (Ph.D.) from Warwick (wherever that is). He claimed to have secured the garment on London's fashionable Carnaby St. but rumour has it that it comes from the rear of a lorry in the East End. Sources say it was the only place Piles could find formal clothing which bore a Union bug and had a built in shoulder holster. When Piles was consulted about the holster in 1987, he commented "Gotta fool them scabs. They're gittin' smarter!" Pictured in a rare photo, (while on the run from New York's Gambino crime family in 1988, after testifying before a Congressional Committee against their upper echelon regarding racketeering charges) Piles assumed his role in the anti-war and environmental movements. He said in an interview that "we need the fire power at home on the front (picket) lines not over in other countries where the workers who made those shells won't benefit." His comments on environmental issues followed: "With the current popularity of products such as environmentally friendly packaging we see increased production leading to more garbage. This means jobs in both areas. Due to high costs of producing such packaging no one would notice the added cost of union wages. Concession bargaining would become a historic phenomenon."

Piles is fondly remembered by his students; especially for his BA 4849 course. Former student and aspiring I.R. Guru, Mark (The Butcher) Major tearfully recounted his experiences with Piles, "Antonio was a good boy. He taught us everything from IR history to how to drink beer. "Yup, I think the first and last classes wuz his favourites. The first wuz a lecture on Hunters and Gatherers and the last wuz a field trip to the College Hill Social Club. Piles wuz the only Prof. who could hold a last class after end of term and have everyone show up. Of course students were bribed with beer tickets, a technique which Antonio learned in business school. He has been an inspiration to us all and I intend to carve his name into my 'aseball' bat when I git my first job." Major wants to restore the Teamsters to their original position as it was before the recent cleanup and build a new multi-billion dollar headquarters which will be named the Antonio Piles Memorial Labour Complex.

Faculty of Administration to adopt new focus

The Faculty of Administration recently decided to change its focus away from its traditional orientation of training general managers. Starting next year, the Faculty's decision, Dean Roland Fable commented: "We came to realise that we could no longer expect to be able to offer our programs given dwindling governmental support. We decided that we must become more proactive in seeking linkages with our business community in New Brunswick. Our adopted focus on the Pulp and Paper industry seemed like a natural fit." When questioned about the rationality of the new focus, the designer of the program, Assistant Dean Coleman Canoe admitted that although economic data seem to indicate that pulp and paper is a "sunset" industry in serious decline, and that only a fool would throw resources at the industry, recent actions by the provincial government suggest otherwise. "The concurrent actions of the government of freezing UNB's budget, while dedicating millions of dollars to pulp and paper suggest that there is probably a unique niche that we can fill which matches our strengths in business education and the government's apparent industrial development strategy" Canoe noted. The new program will be comprised of courses and an experiential component. Several courses vital to the industry - Industrial Relations, for example - are already offered by the Faculty. However, a new package of specialized courses is also under development, which includes: "Production and Operations Management Under Conditions of Negative Profit"; "Outrageous Salary Demands While in a Recession"; "Stonewalling During Negotiations"; and a capstone course entitled "Whining to Government for Unwarranted Bail-outs". An operational pulp and paper mill will also be built on the UNB campus so that students can get hands-on experience. "The mill is really the cornerstone of this new program," Canoe said, "we fully expect it to operate at a loss, which should be a real economic boom to us."

What a weird conversation

This conversation was recently heard in OTTAWA. In an effort to prevent revealing the actual names, pseudonyms will be used. Of course we all know that Ottawa is a real name but that'll be okay.

There were two "gentlemen" who were gradually being joined by others. . . The first one, a small balding man spoke first, (remember these are not their real names).
 Joe Bark (as in worse than): "Ya know Brian, I believe Robert has got a great idea" Brian Mulgoonie (as in, well nuff said): "Who Boringsow? When did he ever have a good idea? He and his kind just want to screw-up this great country of ours. We're starting to sound like the damned Americans (real name) with all their troubles with trying to fake equal rights."

 Bark: "No I think Bobby's got it right, 'This Stink' Society makes some sense to me. Now not only Quebec (real) is pushing for their own 'This Stink' Society, but many of the natives, the feminists, the gay rights, are too. We'd better hurry or we'll be the only ones left Stinking" Mulgoonie: "Ah Joe, this Society thing has nothing to do with stinking or smelling even though we get enough pollution from Buffalo and Toronto.

It's 'This Think' Society. Those Quebecers want everyone to go around thinking."
 Bark: "Some trouble that would cause, Eh?"
 Just then others began to join the first two. As the conversation grew to a dull roar, it became clear, that everyone wanted in on the new Society. The first to speak was this fellow who was a half hour out of whack with the rest of the guys.
 Clod Swells (as in small waves): "We've been on that rock for nearly 500 years. We've got too many seals and not enough cod. The damned oil companies are cutting out on us.

We'd better get our act together an have our own 'Dis Tink' Society. In fact, we 'Think' Mulgoonie is a panty waist for not sending the fleet to stop those clowns from Europe from stealing what's left of the cod."
 Mulgoonie: "Now then we don't want people out there 'Thinking', Clod."
 Swells: "We 'Think' we ought to rough up some of those slime buckets from over there."
 Another youngish, baby faced man now spoke up,
 Mike Ray (as in sting) "That's no way

Academics must publish or die 'Miserably'!

Yesterday, Mark came to me and said that he had an ASSIGNMENT for me. Immediately, reflex action kicked in. . . I began to slaver and twitch. . . you see I've had my Ph.D. for only a few years, so I'm not completely cured. . . that word!! After he calmed me down and wiped off the front of my shirt, he explained that all he needed was a short piece for the Bruns (note the proper underlining technique).
 Anyway. . . my first reaction was to say "No! I'm far too busy publishing academic stuff that nobody will ever read". . . and, if anyone ever did, I'd be up on a manslaughter count, charged with doing some poor sot in through terminal boredom.
 But then I began to think (I do this occasionally, now that I've graduated). . . If I did a really good job (i.e., an "A" ASSIGNMENT — twitch, slaver, drool), I might get to put it in my C.V. (read resume) and who knows what might happen!! Someone might see my work and quote me in a big name journal, like The Ratatarian Journal of Contemporary Inanity (notice again the proper underlining technique). . . Then. . . who knows. . .? Why the assistant dean (Dr. Coleperson) might join me for coffee (I pay). The Associate Dean might come out of hiding; the Dean might drop by my office for a (carefully-timed) two-minute chat; the Vice-President (Academic) might recognise my name; and the PRESIDENT might nod in my direction as I glide by. Oh. . . the world would be a wondrous place!

 I might even get to use statistics — and print them in backwards, so that not even my friend Francisco could understand them. Journal editors would never know. They'd clamour for more of my work (my opi magni). I'd be offered an assistant, associate editorship in the South-Western New Brunswick Journal of Linguistic Hair-Splitting (again proper underlining technique). My academic reputation would be made, my success assured!!
 And all because Mark offered this ASSIGNMENT — excuse me, must go. . . I have to wipe off the front of my shirt.
