USERS OF DYNAMITE ARRESTED

Seven Anti-Conscriptionists Arrested by Police in Montreal
HELD AS SUSPECTS.
Accused of Being Responsible For Destruction of Atholstan Home

By Courier Leased Wire.
Montreal, Sept. 1.—The police this morning arrested seven anti-conscriptionists in connection with the dynamiting of the country home of Lord Atholstan.

Lord Atholstan's house was dynamited Aug. 9. Six men in an automobile were seen driving away from the vicinity in the early hours of the morning. Lord Atholstan had received numerous letters threatening him with death on account of the conscription policy of his paper, the Montreal Star.

Seven anti-conscriptionists, whose release on a writ of habeas corpus had been applied for, and A. Langevin and X. Gauthier, two men arrested by the police in last night's abortive attempt at demonstrating against the military service act for carrying concealed weapons.

The features of the arguments on the habeas corpus writ for Lalumiere, was the announcement by Captain Carter, Dominion police officer, that after he had secured all the information he required from the prisoner, he had offered him his freedom, but Lalumiere had refused it. As protection the police had kept him in the immigration offices. He had now been formally arrested on a warrant charging him with attempted murder.

Anti-conscriptionists last night broke into the store of Duffault of Reid, Ontario street, hardware merchants, and robbed the premises of all the knives and revolvers there.

The pursuance of its policy of crushing demonstrations of anti-conscriptionists in the streets, the police have ordered that no banners dealing with the military service act shall be displayed in the parade on Labor Day.

Viscount Haldane Reveals Secret Chapter in History of Pre-War Negotiations With Germany; Plans Were Drawn in 1906 For The Invasion of Britain

By Courier Leased Wire.

London, Sept. 1.—Important revelations, which form a valuable chapter in the history of British and German negotiations during the eight years before the war are published by The Manchester Guardian today. The revelations are a detailed account of the negotiations which Richard Burdon Haldane (now Viscount Haldane), then secretary for war, conducted with Emperor William, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the German imperial chancellor, Admiral von Tirpitz, minister of the German navy and other German leaders, including striking conversations.

Haldane was the foremost student of Germany among the British public men and his career has been a storm centre since the war, the gist of the attacks upon him being based on a charge that he knew of Germany's designs, but had re-assured his fellow countrymen that all was well.

The Manchester Guardian prefaces the article with the following: "We hold no brief for Lord Haldane. Indeed, on the whole question of secret diplomacy—a diplomacy so secret that its workings in even very vital particulars are not always known beyond the bounds of an inner cabinet—we hold a view quite different from that which he and too many statesmen have been accused to act upon."

Haldane visited Germany in September 1906 as minister of war. He was working in close connection with Sir Edward Grey (then foreign minister). He took part first in conversations with the French general staff. The idea of these conversations was if Germany attacked France, Great Britain should be prepared to give military assistance and help hold the frontier opposite Belgium.

Haldane was convinced that assistance could not be given France within a reasonable time, and bent all his thoughts toward organization for extreme rapidity in mobilization and transports, which meant complete reorganization of the British army.

Emperor William read a speech Haldane made to London Germans and invited him to attend the manoeuvres. Haldane was anxious to get useful information about the German organization so he accepted. On his way he visited King Edward, who was stopping at Marienbad. "He there saw King Ferdinand of Bulgaria," says The Guardian, "who was worrying King Edward with a project, that, if the rumor is true, boded no good to Greece. King Edward very properly did not want to talk politics with Ferdinand. He told Lord Haldane that he must put an end to all of Ferdinand's conversations with himself, who could act only through my ministers."

Haldane not desiring to hear Ferdinand's projects against Greece talked so volubly on other topics that Ferdinand could not get in a word edgewise.

The Guardian then relates a story of an English author of how Emperor William at the grand review galloped up to Haldane, who stood with a top hat and frock coat in his carriage, and said:

"A splendid machine I have in this army, Mr. Haldane. Isn't it so?"

What could I do without it situated as I am between the Russians and the French. But the French are your allies so I beg your pardon."

Haldane replied that it was in the emperor's place he would feel quite comfortable.

Haldane and two assistants went thoroughly into the organization of the German war office, rubbing some of the officials the wrong way. They afterwards thawed out, however.

Lieutenant General von Moltke of the general staff, in a conversation asked Haldane to put whatever questions he liked.

"In that case," replied Haldane, "I shall call for the plans for an invasion of England."

Van Moltke replied: "We have not one in the building," to which Haldane, looking out of the window towards the Admiralty, said:

"Perhaps they are there," von Moltke admitted that they were there and that they were very good plans too. The article gives for the first time Emperor William's negotiation of the Baghdad railway agreement. While visiting Windsor Castle in November, 1907, Emperor William took Haldane aside the first evening of his visit and said how sorry he was there was so much friction over the Baghdad railway.

"My answer was we wanted a gate to protect India from troops coming down the new railway," said Haldane. Asked what he meant by a gate, Haldane replied that he meant control of the farthest off section of the gateway—the one nearest the Persian Gulf. To this Emperor William replied:

"I will give you the gate."

The foreign office regarded the negotiations favorably, but it was considered necessary to bring in France and Russia, whose interests also were involved.

A conference in Berlin of the four powers was arranged with the support (Continued on page eight)

PROBLEM OF THE CHURCH AND STATE

Relationship Between Bodies Subject of Deliberation in Russia

CHURCH AUTONOMOUS

Ecumenical Congress Holds
First Business Session In Moscow

By Courier Leased Wire.

Moscow, Thursday, Aug. 30.—The Ecumenical Congress of the Orthodox Church which is empowered to reform the church within the limitations prescribed by the holy writ and by the dogmas, canons and traditions of the church held its first business session today. The congress is expected to sit continuously for two months, completing its labors before the convocation of the constituent assembly to which body the proposals of the congress for the future inter-relationships of the church and state will be submitted for confirmation.

Within the next few days there will be laid before the congress a large number of reform bills, prepared since the revolution by M. L. Goff, who recently retired as procurator of the holy synod, and all of which had been given provisional sanction by the synod.

The underlying principle of the reform is that the church, while remaining established and closely linked with the state, will be entirely autonomous. This is in accord with the vote of a conference of clergy and laity, which met here early in the summer. The church, as heretofore, will receive monetary support from the state, the church property where not managed for profit-making purposes, will be free from taxation, and clergy will be absolved from military service and the departments of state will observe the church holidays.

In relation to the family the church will retain its present priority and official position. Its registers of births, marriages and deaths will be legally valid. Its divorce decrees will hold good and it can consecrate a marriage in which at least one of the parties is orthodox.

Another reform ready for submission regulates ecclesiastical jurisdiction. Another project is for the re-organization of parishes, while another regulates the ownership and administration of church property, reforming the management, enforcing better book-keeping and providing that the property of parishes and monasteries is alienable only with the consent of the higher church authorities.

Another bill is for the reform of monasteries and church services and provides for the establishment of monastery libraries, for the higher education of monks and for monastic missionary work. The education of priests is a radical reform of modern spirit. The training colleges for priests are placed on the same level as secular secondary schools and the same standard of general education will be required from candidates for the priesthood. A new theological institute also is proposed.

Present expectations are that the reform movement will reach its height by the revival of all Russian, orthodox patriarchate, which has been in abeyance since the days of Peter the Great. The greatest interest is displayed in the proceedings of the congress and hope is expressed that the reformed and re-spiritualized church will operate as a stabilizing influence, a magnet attracting and concentrating the patriotic elements and tendencies as during the national crisis, early in the seventeenth century.

BEEFING OVER BEEFLESS LAW

Food Controller Evades Exact Definition of What Meat is Beef

STEW IS UNDER BAN
Hotels and Restaurant
Keepers Puzzled Over
Status of Fancy Dishes

What is beef? This is a question the managers of many restaurants throughout the Dominion are anxious to have answered. The Encyclopedia Britannica defines beef as "the flesh of the ox, cow or bull, as used for food." Hotel and eating house owners whose duty it is to feed the public would like to know if this definition takes in any and every part of the animal. As the matter stands now a great deal of confusion seems to exist as to what the act really means, and attempts on the part of various interested parties to have those in authority definitely construe it have not been very successful.

Among the vexed questions puzzling local bonifaces is that concerning other parts of the animal than the carcass. For instance: Does the word "beef" apply to such things as tongue, liver, brains, tripe, sweetbreads and other organs of a beef commonly used as food? Or are these exempt? Is veal also exempt under the act?

Inquiries at the food controller's office in Ottawa brought forth the information that the order-in-council regarding meatless days had not been interpreted in any way by them. It would seem, therefore, that where "beef" is prohibited, it is an open question whether it is meant the carcass only, or also liver, sweetbreads, tripe, etc. The general, if not the official acceptance, of the word "beef" is that it means the regular cuts, rather than the organs of the animal body.

A statement issued from the food controller's office this week makes it clear that beef stew must not be served on beefless days. Managers of numerous restaurants were under the impression that they were within the law in serving such dishes as beef stew on Tuesdays and Fridays; but this is erroneous and punishable by a fine of $100 for first offenses, subsequent infractions making erring ones liable to a $500 fine or three months' imprisonment, or both.

In the meantime, restaurateurs would like to know where they are at!

BACK ON DUTY.
Chief of Police Slemin returned to duty this morning after a week's vacation spent at Bradford and Toronto. While on his holidays, the chief visited Camp Borden, over which he is highly enthusiastic. "It is a beautiful and magnificent place," he said this morning.

ITALIAN POET WOUNDED WHEN RAIDING POLA

Gabriele d'Annunzio's Airplane Pierced by 177 Bullets in Raid

Paris, Sept. 1.—Gabriele d'Annunzio, the Italian poet, took a prominent part in the recent Italian air raid over the enemy lines above Pola and was wounded slightly, according to a Havas despatch from Milan. On the morning of August 15, d'Annunzio remained over the enemy lines for forty eight minutes at an altitude of between 300 and 800 metres, attacking the Austrian infantry with machine gun fire. He repeated the performance in the afternoon.

The poet's machine which he calls "the Ace of Spades" was pierced by 177 bullets. D'Annunzio was wounded slightly in the left wrist.

Thirty-three permits were issued at the office of the city engineer during the month of August, for a total value of $10,975. This is a decrease of $90,495 as compared with the corresponding month of 1916.

THOUSANDS OF LIVES LOST

Heavy Death Roll From Fire
Which Swept Kazan,
Russia

Petrograd, Sept. 1.—Several thousand persons are reported to have been killed and injured in the fire which swept the city of Kazan, on the Kazanka River, 430 miles east of Moscow, early this week. The fire burned for 36 hours, driving most of the population outside the city.

H. C. OF L. COMMITTEE.

An immediate re-organization of the committee on the high cost of living will be effected if the recommendation of that committee as at present constituted are adopted by the city council. A special meeting was held in the Mayor's office at the City Hall last night when the above action was decided upon. The committee suggest that two members be appointed from the city council, two from the Board of Trade and three from the Trades and Labor Council. The city council will be asked to take immediate action as there is much important work to be consummated during the balance of the year. The council will also be asked to take the initiative in regard to the fish question and all the correspondence that had passed between the food controller and the committee will be returned over to the civic fathers.

What
 is doing

IN DAYS OF WAR.

If I were King, ah, Love, if I were King.
 What tributary farmers would I bring.
 To pour potatoes in your lap, and fling
 Lump sugar in your tea
 You'd have an onion in your hair.
 A bean would be your solitaire.
 And you could have a necklace,
 every head a pea.
 But I'm not King.
 Far in the kitchen I hear beefsteak
 fry,
 I've ordered Porterhouse for you and I,
 I could not buy any costlier thing,
 If I were King.

On Tuesday, Aug. 28th, the Kerby House, Brantford, celebrated its 133rd birthday. The old hotel has been the scene of many social events.
 Half a century ago it was the headquarters of the British officers stationed here. It was at the Kerby House that the Prince of Wales, afterwards "King Edward the seventh, the beloved," was entertained at a dinner. Every Governor-General since Confederation has been lunched or dined or entertained there and the handsome dining room and drawing room for over half a century before the war was every year the scene of gorgeous dances and festivities. Possibly no hotel in Canada, with perhaps the exception of "The Queens", Toronto, is so replete of memories of the leading figures in Canadian history and social life.

Pledge Cards Distribution
 The Executive Committee of the Women's Auxiliary to the Organization of Resources Committee decided to suggest that the week beginning September 17th should be observed throughout the Province for the distribution of the pledge cards issued by the Food Controller's office. The report issued by Dr. A. H. Abbott, Secretary of the Organization of Resources Committee is as follows:
 "The Executive Committee of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Organization of Resources Committee met yesterday to consider matters relating to the campaign to secure signatures to the pledge cards issued by the Food Controller. In spite of the fact that it is desirable to have these cards distributed at the earliest possible moment, the Council too felt that considering all the facts it would be advisable to suggest that the week beginning September 17th should be observed throughout the Province for the distribution of these cards. While it is not desired to interfere in any way with local committees which have already arranged to have their canvas earlier than this date, it is felt that the effect of combined action throughout Ontario would more than compensate for the few days' delay which might result in a number of cases."

Customs Returns At Simcoe Show Slump For Month of August

TOWN COUNCIL SITS Will Welcome First Contingent Heroes Back From Trenches

BOY HERO IS PRAISED Teddie Richards Congratulated for Bravery in Saving Chum's Life

Write Simcoe Agency Box 311 or phone 356-3 all matters regarding delivery or subscriptions; News items or advertisements.

Simcoe, Sept. 1.—(From Our Own Correspondent)—Local customs receipts for August took a slump and the first decrease in twenty-one months occurred. The figures $18,872.70 against $25,165.98 for August 1917 and $38,718.47 for the preceding month.

Receipts Below County's Giving. The sum total of patriotic fund disbursements for June allotments including expenses is $3472.87 while the county's grant is $5,000. Several dependents have left the county and the influx is not sufficient at present to offset this.

Town Council in Session. The town fathers held a three hour session last night for way of preparation for the regular meeting to be held on Tuesday.

Will Welcome Heroes of First Group From Simcoe. His Worship Reeve Carter and

OTTO KING, Who was rescued from drowning at Simcoe by Teddie Richards.

Alderman Langford were appointed a committee to arrange for a reception to Gordon Thompson and Guy Winters, now in Canada and expected home early in the week.

In the case of these men arrangements have been made that the time of their arrival will be known before hand. The town bell will ring half an hour before the arrival of the train to notify all citizens who desire to go to the depot. On arrival of the boys at the Depot they will be received by their relatives and then by the committee. The town bell will ring again and the committee will be obliged if all other school and church bells and factory whistles join in the welcome home.

Owners of automobiles are requested to tie on their flags and form a procession from the depot. The procession will halt at the armories or in front of the court house for a few moments while his worship bids the boys welcome home. It has been a long and cruel war, and there are many sad hearts in town but hearing it all, let Simcoe turn out and welcome those boys who as His Worship remarked, "Went early and stayed long."

"Teddie" Richards Congratulated. Alderman Langford-Reeve Carter. That this council of the Corporation of the town of Simcoe, Norfolk Co., Ontario, record their admiration of the gallantry and courage of "Teddie" Richards, aged eleven, in his returning to rescue his companion Otto King, aged seven, and in successfully assisting the latter to a capsized boat in the waters of Lake Erie at Turkey Point on August 16th, 1917 after the little fellow had gone down three times; which bravery was shown at Turkey Point on the 9th inst.

We recommend recognition for life saving from the usual authorities on his behalf. And that a copy of this resolution signed by the Mayor and clerk and sealed with the corporation seal be forwarded to Mr. and Mrs. A. Richards for their delectation. It was suggested that recognition from scout headquarters should be supplemented by observance from the Carnegie Life Saving fund.

Different at Paris. Alderman Jacques called attention of Council to the fact that the Brantford Courier reported a junk-dealer's license having been imposed shrimps, icings, baking powder, margarine. In the sugar market steadiness prevailed with a disposition to mark time in view of an easier position in the primary market in the United States. Ontario winter wheat flour was lower in price. Manitoba flour remained unchanged and mills are looking ahead for no greater period than thirty days, owing to the uncertainty over control of the industry. Business was fairly good in grocery trade during the week.

Will Proceed With Memorial. The Parks Committee reported having located and secured a rustic boulder and submitted quotations describing and inscribing for a bronze tablet to be affixed thereto and erected in the park, to the memory of, and acknowledging the gift of the park by, the late J. Point acts as a wood preservative because it closes openings in the wood and prevents the entrance of decay producing organisms. A thoroughly well seasoned piece of wood will last indefinitely if well painted.

To get results from painting it is essential that good paint be used, that is, paint that is made from pure linseed oil and white lead, and scientifically mixed.

Moore's Paint fulfills all these requirements; that's why it pays to use Moore's—it preserves.

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

Interest in the grocery trade was focussed on the recent order of the Food Controller in prohibiting the sale of canned goods in Canada in the West until Oct. 1, and Eastern Canada until October 15. Wholesale sellers assert that there will probably be very little difference in trade returns as a result, owing to the small consumption of this particular class of canned goods during the months of September and October. There is only one class of people on whom it may bear somewhat heavily, namely, the farming communities of the West during the harvesting season, as they are big consumers of canned commodities at that time. Prices on canned salmon were not announced during the week, there being some possibility that domestic trade might not have the option on 1-pound sockeye tails at all as the pack is expected to be light.

There was a movement toward higher prices in provisions, induced by the recent high price of hogs. Live hogs, however, took a big drop and this may presage easier prices in meats, coming as a result of the British embargo on bacon. Both butter and eggs were higher. Cheese was also slightly firmer in price. New crop honey is reported light and prices are higher in consequence.

There was considerable activity in the dried fruit market during the week, as the California Raisin Association named their opening prices, which were considerably higher than the opening of last year. Prunes also advanced at Coast points. Raisins are in firm market and a more general shifting toward higher levels took place during the week. Other lines in which advances were registered during the week included, artichokes, lobsters, compound jams,

THE SITUATION

The Italians are maintaining their terrific offensive without abatement and are still making gains on the Bainsizza Plateau, north of Gorizia. They have likewise resumed their attacks south of the Carso Plateau. The capture of many more war prisoners and material is recorded. Their task is still a hard one before they can reach Trieste, but their progress thus far has been most marked.

Official announcement is made that British forces have made a gain on the Palestine front and advanced their lines southwest of Gaza on a front of eight hundred yards. The losses are reported to have been insignificant.

Matters on the Western front just now are comparatively quiet.

It is believed that the enemy is preparing for a big offensive by land and sea against the Russians. Airplanes have been dropping bombs on Riga it is believed as a prelude.

The Germans still continue to cling most tenaciously to Lens despite heavy pounding and gas attacks. The Canadians continue to surround the place closely and the enemy has great difficulty in bringing forward food and ammunition. The Hun losses are stated to be very heavy.

Another suggestion for helping to curb the submarine menace comes from Italy. It is that big airplanes should be employed to be built in the United States.

U. S. Congress to-day will be asked to vote another $559,642,000 for war purposes. This makes the requests of the Administration for the week $1,500,000,000.

THE POSITION OF AFFAIRS.

Sir Robert Borden is still endeavoring to form a Union Government, while Sir Wilfrid Laurier, aided by Oliver, Graham and others, is seeking to prevent such a consummation. Certain Liberal papers, such as the Stratford Beacon and the Brantford Expositor, have hailed his decision to name half of the conscription bill committee as an evidence that he may be tending towards that method of reinforcing troops after all. No one need fool themselves by any such belief. Quebec papers scout such an idea and Le Devoir of Montreal makes the explanation that Sir Wilfrid acted as he did for the reason if he had abstained.

"He would have exposed the conscription to grave injustice, because otherwise the Government would have had the choice and chosen only its own creatures."

It may be taken as an unalterable fact that the Liberal Government will never consent to enforced aid for the brave Canadians at the front, and that in this attitude he will at the polls have the backing of all the elements against any further Canadian help in the war. The Winnipeg Free Press, the leading Liberal organ of the West puts the matter thus cogently:

"The party led by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, whatever may be the integrity of its leader, is already exploiting and threatening to sweep into one dominant reactionary interest every insidious impulse of racial separatism, every starchy suspicion of fictitious class sectionalism, every element from Atlantic to Pacific that is secretly selfish or slack or recreant or hostile to our cause in this war. That policy may remain unavowed, but it is almost automatic in its operation. In such company the best of leaders are hunting with a poor pack. Add to this the bid for party allegiance to Sir Wilfrid Laurier—the sort of mad hatter's frenzy that has bedeviled party politics in Canada for a whole generation—and it would be stating the facts with moderation to say that the most definite issue since Confederation now faces this Dominion. The issue will be definite of our national solidarity at home and of our status among the democratic nations of the world. It is not too much to add that that issue is trembling in the balance."

HEBREWS OBJECT TO JEWISH REGIMENT

40,000 of their Race Already At Front With Other Units

By Courier Leased Wire.
 London, Aug. 31.—A deputation of prominent English Jews headed by Swaythling, visited the Earl of Derby, secretary for war, yesterday, says The Daily Mail, and urged the abandonment of the title "Jewish regiment" which had been adopted for the new Hebrew regiment recently organized. The deputation pleaded that 40,000 Jews now serving in the army were fighting not as Jews, but as British subjects, and wished to continue to do so. Lord Derby agreed to the abandonment of the title and promised to give the regiment a new designation.

The Daily Mail adds that the deputation was received with great regret by the promoters and organizers of the regiment.

tunes of the country cannot now without disaster be entrusted solely to the determination of one political party. That avowal was made in accepting the resignation of an implacable partisan in the Conservative party. The stormy opposition through which the principle of National Government had to pass before it received official recognition is a matter of record, but at the present time surely partisanship is coming perilously near to treason. The principles of the two are approaching identity of every day that passes. Face that fact, our reader, in your own conscience, for if this Dominion goes down to infamy in November, those who saw their duty and failed to do it will be more culpable than those who failed because they saw it not.

The threatened crisis is certainly one which it behooves every thoughtful man and woman to take directly to heart.

LABOR DAY.

It is very fitting that one holiday in the year should be set apart under the above caption for all of those who work are the actual producers and the future is going to hold a much wider recognition of that fact. In Great Britain a realization of the circumstance has led to the appointment of a "Minister of Reconstruction" and it is pointed out that the largest question before the new Minister will be that of carrying out the government's pledges to labor unions that their pre-war position will be restored to them. Employers frequently have argued that this will be impossible. Union leaders insist that the government has given its pledge and must fulfill it.

Discussing this phase of post-war conditions, Professor L. T. Hobhouse, head of the department of Sociology in London University and one of the Government's advisers on Labor, points out that the business of the Minister of Reconstruction is to think out the best methods by which the half-formulated, half-understood impulses of the masses of people can get themselves expressed in a reasonable manner. The first problem with which we shall be faced is that of reconstructing trade union conditions. I say reconstructing advisedly, because if we were to speak of restoration there would be those who would say at once that it is impossible in view of the total change in conditions which the war has brought about.

But this is a problem in which the good faith of the Government is involved. Nothing could be more definite than the pledge to trade unionists that the alterations involved in dilution of labor and the suspension of customs of the trade should hold only for the period of the war. If this pledge is not fulfilled it will be a fatal blow to the confidence of the public in the good faith of governments. If it is shown that it cannot be fulfilled because circumstances have altered, the answer must be that we can only vary a pledge with the consent of the persons to whom the pledge was made.

If it is true that old labor conditions cannot be restored, then it will be for the trade unionists to determine what arrangements they would accept as a substitute for the old conditions. The Reconstruction Committee has already taken a step in this direction by suggesting the formation of Industrial Councils in which both employer and employed shall be represented and have considerable powers in shaping the course of each industry. In such councils it will be possible for trade unionists and employers to discuss frankly and fully the new situation, so as to secure a renewed progress of British industry with fair conditions for the worker. Any system to which the trade union members of such councils agree might, for that industry, be taken as the fair equivalent of that restoration of conditions which was pledged.

Much of the unrest in the labor world to-day, attributed to doubts as to the fulfillment of this pledge, might be overcome if such a method of redeeming the pledge were adopted.

VISCOUNT HALDANE

Continued from page one of Emperor William, but was defeated at Berlin on the ground that an agreement about the Baghdad railway was no business of Russia. This, says one article, was the first and clearest indication of two facts about the German foreign policy—that the emperor was not quite master in his own house and that official Berlin was divided into two parties, one anxious for a working agreement between England, France and Germany, and another not yet avowedly a war party, regarding all these attempts hopeless or dangerous or both. Then for some time afterward, Emperor William belonged to the first party and genuinely anxious for friendly relations with England. The Crown Prince with Admiral von Tirpitz and the general staff and probably Prince von Buelow, belonged definitely to the second.

The party division became much sharper and later was persisted in by Germany, even after the war began. Haldane had German sympathizers in the same sense that Emperor William had English sympathizers or William had English sympathizers who believed it was for the good of the world that England and Germany should come to an understanding. The key to Haldane's policy was while preparing against the eventual triumph of the anti-English party, to as far as possible strengthen those in Germany disposed to be friendly.

"The vulgar idea of the Kaiser as a deep and consistent schemer," says the article, "is almost certainly wrong. He is, before everything else, a power, an actor. He desires before anything to cut a figure on the world's stage. He is usually asking himself: 'Am I or am I not of the stuff of the great Frederick, inasmuch things as in the great?'"

"He once prepared a paper on the reform of the English militia, and sent it to the British War Office where it was read and filed and he was as pleased as possible when a new war minister in a conversation told him that he had both seen and read it."

Viscount Haldane visited Berlin again in the spring of 1912, not to negotiate a treaty, but under instructions by Sir Edward Grey, to discuss affairs freely and refer everything to the cabinet. The subjects of conversation were the general European situation and the German shipbuilding programme in consequence of the growth and power of Germany as the head of the triple alliance. Naturally there had been others powers which tended to approximate thereto, but there was no reason why the triple alliance and what was called the triple E-J-tense should not be friendly.

SUNDAY SCHOOL. Lesson X.—Third Quarter, For Sept. 2, 1917.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Ezek. xxxiv, 11-16, 23-27—Memory Verse, 12—Golden Text, Pa. xxiii, 1—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Staarna.

A better title for this lesson rather than the one given would be "The Shepherd of a Restored Israel," for it is the record of a time yet future when they shall never again be a prey to the nations (verses 27-31), when the King of Israel, the Lord, shall be in the midst of them and they shall not see evil any more (Zeph. iii, 14, 15). Then shall the twelve tribes be one nation in their own land, and one King shall be King to them all, and they shall never again be divided into two kingdoms, and God shall make with them an everlasting covenant of peace and dwell in their midst forevermore (Ezek. xxxvii, 25-28). There are still those who say and teach that God is done with Israel as a nation because of all their sins, but such people must be wholly deaf to the words of the Lord in Jer. xxxi, 33-37; xxxiii, 23-26, where He says that until sun, moon and stars cease to shine He will never cast off His people Israel, notwithstanding all that they have done. The testimony of the Spirit through Faith, just the same in Rom. xi, 1, 2, 25-26. They are the only nation that God ever chose specially for Himself and called the everlasting nation (which is the literal translation of two Hebrew words in Isa. xlvii, 7, given in the A. V. as the ancient people). They will be the first righteous nation on earth, and then will many nations be joined to the Lord and the earth be filled with His glory (Isa. lx, 1-3, 21, 22; xxvii, 6; Zech. ii, 10-13). Our lesson is one of the greatest shepherd chapters in the Old Testament, but Jer. xxxiii is another, and there we read that when the King, the Righteous Branch, shall have been raised up unto David the deliverance of Israel from all nations will be so great and wonderful that their coming out of Egypt shall not seem anything to be compared with it (Jer. xxxiii, 9-13). The Lord says that when He takes us back to Gen. xlii, 24, and on to Ps. lxxx, 1, and Isa. xl, 11, and Rev. vii, 17, and only in the glorious future will our precious Pa. xxiii have its complete fulfillment.

Many cannot see in the lesson of today any more than the Good Shepherd who saves us as individuals and keeps us and cares for us in every way and carries us in His arms, and on His shoulders; the Great Shepherd who lives His life in us and the Chief Shepherd who will reward us at His appearing (John x, 1, 2, 11, 12, 17, 18). He said to the two on the way to Emmaus, "O fools, and slow of heart, to believe all that the prophets have spoken!" (Luke xxiv, 25).

In the days of Jeremiah and Ezekiel there were those who were more interested in the welfare of themselves than of others, who ran without being sent by the Lord, who spoke lies out of the deceit of their own hearts and caused the people to err by their lies and their lightness (Ezek. xxxiv, 2, 8, 10; Jer. xxiii, 16, 17, 21, 23, 28, 32). It is possible that there are still such false prophets, and the Lord will reckon with them in due time, for He is against them, and the reckoning will be a very serious matter for them. Every true prophet or teacher should be the Lord's messenger with the Lord's message, and His word to them is, "Hear the word of the Lord, hear the word at My mouth and give them warning from me" (Eag. i, 13; Ezek. xxxiv, 7, 9; iii, 4, 17). To all such the comfort is that His word will never fail to accomplish His pleasure, and He will watch over it to perform it (Isa. lv, 11; Jer. i, 12, B. V.). Let us always remember that while in all the Bible there are words for each individual heart, when God says Israel He means Israel, the descendants of Jacob, who was called Israel, and not the church, and I have not yet found any place where the church is called Israel or Israel the church.

Ezekiel was a prophet of the captivity and evidently carried away in the second deportation with Jehoiachin (Ezek. i, 1, 2). Daniel had been taken in the first company in the reign of Jehoiachin. Jeremiah was left in Jerusalem (Jer. xxxix, 11-14). These men had a "Thus saith the Lord" for all they said, and through them He was comforting and encouraging His people. Our lesson verses, 11 to 16, are certainly plain and clear statements concerning the gathering of Israel from all the countries where they have been scattered back to their own land. Verses 23 to 27 tell of the one true Shepherd who shall then rule over them, the true David, or Beloved, the Son of Mary, of whom Gabriel said that He would sit on the throne of His father David and reign over the house of Jacob forever (Luke i, 31-33). Lesson verses 17-22 give light on the sheep and goat judgment of Matt. xxv.

ROTTERDAM FULL OF RUSS REFUGES

Over 6000 Fugitives, Escaped Prisoners, Etc., Have Gathered There

(Associated Press) Rotterdam, Netherlands, Sept. 1.—A Russian invasion of Rotterdam is causing the city fathers some concern, and the burgomaster has just had an interview with the Premier, Cort van der Linden, on the subject. As many as 6,000 Russians have been added to Rotterdam's population since the outbreak of war, most of them refugees from Germany and others escaped prisoners-of-war. The former's stay in Germany dates from before the war. They were employed in the mines there, and were not permitted to leave when hostilities broke out. Ultimately food scarcity drove them to seek refuge in Holland but they are in many cases even German in their sympathies. In Rotterdam their wants are supplied by the Russian Consul.

CITY'S ASSESSMENT SYSTEM RANKS AMONG MOST EFFICIENT

Instructive Address Delivered at Convention of Ontario Municipal Association By A. G. Ludlow, Local Assessor—Sidelights on City's Methods

The Ontario Municipal Association conferred upon City Assessor A. G. Ludlow the honor of requesting him to read a report on the assessment system that has been adopted and is in operation in this city. The method of appraising property for assessment in this city has been worked out by Mr. Ludlow and is a solution of the difficulties that confront assessors in their work under the old system. The subject has been covered by him in a comprehensive and interesting manner, and the assessors in attendance at the conference from all over Canada displayed great interest in the same and many personally questioned him on the success that his plan has met with in the Telephone City. The paper in full follows:

As requested by the Secretary of the Ontario Municipal Association to address the Annual Convention on the assessment methods adopted and applied in the City of Brantford. I take pleasure in submitting a report on this work. I have the honor of being the Assessment Commissioner which position I have held for the last five years and have developed considerable time in working out what would be a very simple method of appraising at an equalized assessment on buildings. I have tried a great number of ways to get a speedy and accurate way of equalizing building values. As you are all aware there is no fixed value on any real estate. You cannot be governed by contract prices of building. For instance you will request your Architect to draw you a set of plans and specifications and ask for tenders say for a house supposed to cost Six thousand dollars. You will receive tenders from possibly Five thousand dollars upwards to six thousand five hundred. Now the point I wish to make is this, when practical builders will vary so much in their tenders when they all figure on the same specifications and possibly the party having the house built will have a holding contract. I will award the contract to a much higher figure than the possible lowest tender. Or we will say that a contractor builds several houses in or near the same locality at exactly the same cost only some minor changes which do not add to the cost very materially, but may suit some intending purchaser better than the others. He will therefore be able to get a considerable better value for one than for the others. Now this being the case which no Assessor will dispute for a minute, what has the Assessor to govern him in making his valuation without some system to enable him to make an equalized assessment, as he cannot be justifiably governed by the sale price, and as I have stated, there is no fixed value on any property. Consequently one must have some system that can be applied in arriving at valuations so that Assessors can justify themselves as such. The system I have applied in Brantford is, first to classify lands in residential localities and fix the land value per foot frontage according to locality and depth of land, placing say from two to twenty feet on corner lots according to the use they could be put to in subdivisions. The business section is treated according to rental value on possible sales, according to locality in which situated. The land value is much easier to value than the buildings. We try to assess land at about 85 per cent of its value and buildings at 65 per cent. Building values consists in grouping houses into classes according to quality and finish and conveniences and the buildings are valued by the factor of the class to which they belong, of which we have several. The system is to measure all houses outside measurement, and the height. Add the total distance to the height, then multiply the total by the cube by which the house belongs, adding to this plumbing and heating and verandas. This method will give you an equalized value, by the same method right or wrong. As to the actual cost of the house you will have them equalized for assessment purposes. I might say that your judgment will have to be used in citing how far as according to the locality. In some instances the house will be too good for the locality especially in a subdivision where there is no restriction as to quality of building. I have just mentioned some points in order to bring out a full discussion of the many different ideas in arriving at values. I have always been in favor of having an Assessment Convention when different assessors could explain their methods and possibly bring in recommendations to our Provincial Legislature that would be of assistance to them in forming statutes for our Province. One that I have in mind is the income derived from industrial concerns. This I think should be assessed the same as any other income. In the first place nearly all of the industrial factories have a fixed assessment at a very low rate of taxation. Consequently if I hold stock in any of these industries when I am getting 3 or 4 per cent on my investments, I go scot free, and the retired person unable to work possibly has an income of over four hundred dollars. They are assessed on providing they have a small house besides the one they live in or are able to do some kind of work. Any little savings they might have would be assessed no matter how small it might be. Now as regards the assessments in our City. Ten years ago the total amount of all assessments including Realty, Business and Income was less than seven million dollars and for the year 1916 we had a total of $21,941,530. The increase received was brought about principally by the system adopted in computing values and

CO-PARTNERSHIP BETWEEN LABOR AND EMPLOYERS

Urged by Baron Leverholme As Solution of British Labor Problem

AFTER WAR SITUATION Six Hour Working Day and Other Reforms Recommended

London, Sept. 1.—(Correspondence of The Associated Press)—An option of a six-hour working day for labor and general establishment of co-partnership between British employer and workmen after the war are urged by Baron Leverholme, formerly Sir W. H. Lever, a large employer of labor and formerly a member of the Central Board of Control to deal with the drink problem. "Whatever attempt is made at settlement of industrial troubles," said Lord Leverholme in a statement on labor conditions after the war, "I think the wages system cannot be abolished, it must continue to be the basis of the new conditions. But it needs improvement and modification. Wages should be on the highest possible scale, but no change ought to impair the supremacy of management. The first thing we must note in any effort at improvement of working conditions is the tediousness of mechanical work. The remedy I propose is the shortening of the day's task from eight to six hours. I think six hours at monotonous work is long enough for any man or woman. It is a noteworthy fact that in the history of labor the shortening of hours has meant not a decrease, but an increase in production. The successive changes from thirteen hours in the day to twelve and again to ten so resulted. Even more marked was the results of the change from ten to eight. Production was augmented, loss of time from sickness and inefficient handling of machinery was lessened. The loss under the old system owing to absence from sickness alone was 25 per cent. I count on similar advantages from the reduction of working hours to six. "How is that saving of hours to be turned to the workman's advantage? With a six hour day he will not be too weary to take advantage of educational opportunity. The young workman should have his mind cultivated and his body exercised. In early manhood these hours might be partly used for military exercises. Beyond thirty he will find time for some hobby, say gardening. And all this time he will be gaining in efficiency and character. "So we shall be opening up fresh resources for the good of the nation. The precious plant inventiveness is not grown in a close atmosphere of prolonged labor. It is the product of leisure hours, when a man's mind is free from taskwork. "The six hour arrangement must not, if need hardly say, involve any reduction in wages. Personally speaking, I want to see wages go higher, for higher wages mean more efficiency and more production. The more machinery we have the greater the output. "Along with shorter hours I look to co-partnership as a great remedy. Such a system brings employer and employee into family relations; it gives the workman a personal interest in the work. Strict care should be taken that it is not used as a device for reducing wages, so that any advantages are neutralized. That would be a fraud and a sham. The fierce objection men had to the piece-work system was their fear of such a device. There are critics who would substitute higher wages for the benefits of partnership. That is not my idea. Increase of wages adds to cost of production; sharing of profits does not. Besides, the latter system gives the workman a personal concern in the firm's affairs. It is so, I think, and hope, that the gulf between capital and labor may happily be bridged.

MENTION TO MOTORISTS

A squeak is one of the most annoying and most elusive troubles to which a car is subject. Usually it is located in the springs, and so they must be oiled. Jack up the frame, taking the load off the springs. Pry the leaves apart and apply graphite grease by means of a knife or thin stick, as most of the squeaks come at the tips of the springs. This treatment usually stops the noise.

A device on the market to spread the leaves saves the trouble of jacking up the wheels. Although this makes the process easier, it acts on the screw and wedge principle and separates the leaves as far as may be necessary.

Of course the spring clips holding the ends of the leaves together must be removed. On some springs a piece of metal is folded round two leaves while it is red hot. This makes it difficult to put oil between them.

A useful trick is to place the graphite grease in an oil can and set it over a hot flame. When melted the grease is squirted in between the leaves, especially the part close to the bolts that hold them to the axle. As squeaks frequently come from this part this is especially recommended. It puts graphite grease into places which it could not reach otherwise.

But squeaks do not always come from the springs. After spending enough time on them, take an oil gun and squirt oil wherever two metal surfaces come together. Hood and radiator, or dash, fenders, running board, brackets, or anywhere else. Squirt it in with plenty of force, and you will probably stop it.

Re-modelling of Market Stands.

As the lowest tender for alterations by which to convert the market into a fire hall ran over $5,000, the work cannot proceed, as it was learned after a tender had been accepted that council would be obliged to submit the proposition to the people. Alderman Doughty had given his rough estimate as $3,500 earlier in the year. The architect will be paid for the plans and any temporary alterations made will be along the lines defined therein.

Sidewalk Contract Let.

The Maple Leaf Artificial Stone paving company tendered for the Metcalf street sidewalk at 14 cents for walk, 16 cents for crossing and $1.25 per yard for filling.

Messrs. Robert, Alway and Russell Post made a straight offer of 70 cents per foot, which the council construed "per running foot" and the contract went to the latter.

More Street Lights

A gas lamp will be set at the corner of Metcalf and Hendry streets, owing to the difficulty of getting wires across the track and an electric street light at the head of Bank street, opposite the lane leading out to Norfolk street.

In deference to the engineer's advice, the new crossing ordered across the head of Argyle street was struck off. A temporary fill will be made here instead, in anticipation of a possible concreting of the whole intersection here in the near future.

All the members were present except Alderman Krompart.

Dr. Burt made a leaping catch last evening when a horse drawing a buggy, but without bridle or lines, dashed down Lot street, and in turning north on Colborne fell on the pavement in front of the barn. He had the animal by the nasals as it scrambled to its feet between the broken shafts and prevented any more carousing. The horse had just been driven out to the Glazebrook farm, and while the owner took out some parcels, pulled he bridle, circled the orchard a couple of times and then returned to town via West street, about a two mile jaunt, and going all the time.

THE DOUBLE GUARANTEE

TWO reputations guard your investment when you purchase a Gray-Dort.

Two liabilities are your assurance of doubly-satisfactory use and service.

Two institutions striving in united effort to maintain the foundation on which they have been built—full value to you, the purchaser.

In Chatham, Ontario, the Wm. Gray & Sons Company and Gray-Dort Motors Limited—the one hale and solid at sixty-two, the other strong and lusty in two years.

In Flint, Michigan since 1885, the Dort Carriage Company, since 1915, the Dort Motor Car Company.

Gray—the Industry and its Builder

Our fathers and grandfathers rode in Gray carriages and found them built on honor and character.

In 1855, William Gray built the first of them—built them so well that Gray quality became proverbial.

Growing up in this atmosphere of big business, of successful enterprise, of worthy endeavour, was Robert Gray.

Under his guiding hand the Gray institution has been builded solidly on its original foundation—value and service to the purchaser.

When others rushed into the motor car industry, Robert Gray bided his time.

Others experimented—on the motorist.

Others gained the reputation of a day—and lost it.

Robert Gray knew that the car bearing his name must have the same underlying qualifications as the Gray Carriage—so he waited.

Dort—at the Same Time, in Flint

Paralleling the growth of Gray in Canada, was a similar institution in the United States.

Blue Ribbon Buggies were to Americans what Gray Buggies were to Canadians.

J. D. Dort, too, was building in Flint, as Robert Gray was building in Chatham.

J. D. Dort, too, was analyzing the motor car industry.

In 1915, Robert Gray decided that a good motor car could be built and sold at a reasonable price.

In 1915, J. D. Dort, studying the situation from the same angle, came to the same conclusion.

The two men met. Their identical views and aspirations inevitably attracted them to one another.

They chose as the engineering groundwork for their organization, Etienne Planche, designer of the world-famed Peugeot motor. They surrounded him with men of equal calibre, who round out an institution unique in its man-power.

After Such Preparation—

With two institutions so solidly founded the first Gray-Dort was built.

Is it any wonder that in three days the entire 1916 output was sold?

It was to be expected that a doubled output for 1917 was heavily oversold.

The output for 1918 is double again—and may be inadequate.

CUT CLOTHES TO FIT KINESTHESIA, SAYS PROFESSOR

"Duds Lecture" Leaves The Pupils Gasping For Breath

Boston, Mass., Sept. 1.—Some 30 proprietors and representatives of department stores are digesting the words of Prof. George Van Ness Dearborn of Cambridge, Mass., today and trying to assimilate his theory that to be strong and happy persons should dress according to the "sthen-europhoric ratio."

Prof. Dearborn attempted to explain why salesmen should try to sell clothes to fit the personality of the customer and why the customer should buy that kind of clothes. Apparently the subject was simple, but as Prof. Dearborn said:

"No psychological laboratory has taken up the physiological psychology of clothes thus far save in a questioning manner."

Clear as Mud

When he had finished, one of the class asked, "Professor, what in a general way have you been getting at in this lecture?" And here is the professor's answer:

"That clothes should fit." The professor added that any questions on his discourse would be freely answered. There were no questions.

Prof. Dearborn's theme was built around the announcement that "clothes are almost a vicious skin." He described the several divisions and subdivisions one of which was the relation of clothes to bodily action.

"As to freedom of bodily action," remained unchallenged was: "Clothes certainly do proclaim the man."

said the professor, "I am in the habit of using a term with which you are all familiar—kinesthesia."

Amazing Conclusions

"Here we have the interesting fact," the professor continued, writing the word on the blackboard, "that each individual has a group of actions which the tailor must fit. The diaphragm, the heart action, and the comfort of one's arteries must be considered by the tailor."

After the lecture the students came to the conclusion that a man "buys shoes for comfort instead of style," and that a woman reverses the formula. Another axiom that

FRANCE PLANS TO CONTROL PRICES

Government Authorized By Parliament To Requisition Goods For Civil Life

FIX PRICE OF SHOES

First Reform Measure Inaugurated Will Be "National Footwear"

Paris, Sept. 1.—(Correspondence of The Associated Press)—Before adjourning for summer vacation last week, parliament passed a law on requisitioning which allows the government to requisition, or take over at a fixed price, any commodities necessary to civil life, just as it has always had power to requisition anything for the army.

The new law will allow several measures intended to alleviate the dearth of living to be put into immediate effect as all necessary preliminaries have been arranged for weeks, in readiness for the moment that this law would give the authorities power to act.

The first measure will be to inaugurate "National Footwear." This does not mean that everybody is to buy and wear the same boots, but that good boots will be available to the people at a fair price. The price of boots and shoes soared since the war to such a height that only well-to-do people can buy them. The cost of footwear, other than of leather, even of wooden sbots, has of course greatly advanced owing to the greater demand from those who are now unable to buy leather boots.

"National Footwear" will, of course, be standardized. The Ministry of Commerce, in collaboration with the Army commissariat, will requisition the necessary leather and the boots will be made for civilians in exactly the same way as they are already made for the army. The prices will be stamped on them so that no one need pay more than the official rate. Men's boots will be sold at $5.50 at pre-war exchange; women's at $4.50; boys and girls at $3.50, and children's at a price not yet fixed, between $3.00 and $3.20. These prices allow a fair profit to the intermediary between manufacturer and buyer.

The Army Commissariat has undertaken to supply 500,000 pairs of boots a month from the present time and to double that output very soon. As the average demand for "National Footwear" is estimated to be 2,000,000 pairs a month, it will be some time before the supply can satisfy it. The output, therefore, at first will be reserved for the working classes and will be sold through their co-operative societies.

The next measure, already under way, will be the creation of a "National Cloth," for which stocks of

Hurrah! How's This

Cincinnati authority says corn dry up and lift out with fingers.

Hospital records show that every time you cut a corn you invite lock jaw or blood poison, which is needless, says a Cincinnati authority, who tells you that a quarter ounce of a drug called freestone can be obtained at little cost from the drug store but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus. You simply apply a few drops of freestone on a tender, aching corn and soreness is instantly relieved. Shortly the entire corn can be lifted out root and all, without pain.

This drug is sticky but dries at once and is claimed to just shrivel up any corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin.

If your wife wears high heels she will be glad to know of this.

SERBIAN GIRLS ARE DEPORTED TO TURKISH HAREMS

BULGARS AT BOTTOM
Ten Thousand Girls Of Tender Age Have Been Thus Kidnapped

London, August 31.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press)—Ten thousand Serbian girls from ten to fourteen years old have been kidnapped and deported from Serbia to the harems of Constantinople, to Bulgaria and Asia Minor, says advice received by M. Pasitch, the Serbian Premier, who is now in London.

"These deportations," said M. Pasitch, "have been going on since February 1916, but the number was very limited until a few weeks ago. Now it has been systematized under Bulgarian controllers, and it is impossible to predict how far it will go.

"Eight thousand girls have been sent to Constantinople, and two thousand more to Bulgaria and Asia Minor. Prisoners whom we have taken on the Saloniki front tell us that the traffic in our girlhood has grown to be a byword in Bulgaria and Turkey.

"The girls are kidnapped and taken away secretly, particularly from the smaller villages, until at present dozens of small towns have been quite denuded of the young female population.

"I do not think that the Turks are the actual instigators of this gross violation of the rules of civilized warfare. All our information indicates that the Bulgarians are the prime movers and the Turks only incidental beneficiaries of the traffic.

"The girls are too young to be of any use for laboring purposes, besides neither Turkey nor Bulgaria is seriously handicapped for labor, and in Turkey the use of young women for outdoor work is practically unknown.

"It is very difficult for us to do anything to help these unfortunate victims. Our affairs in Constantinople and Sofia are now in the hands of the Dutch government, and we have made the most earnest possible protests through that government. But you know how difficult it is to get any action from Turkey. We have suggested, for instance, that some scheme of repatriation be put into effect immediately, that the girls should be sent back to some place beyond the war zone. But I fear it is too late to save them, and that we can only wait in patience until peace comes."

REFORM CAMPAIGN COMING IN SPAIN

Comprehensive Program Was Decided On By The Cabinet Yesterday

By Courier Leased Wire.

Madrid, Thursday, Aug. 30.—After a cabinet meeting presided over by King Alfonso to-day Premier Dato announced that a comprehensive program of reforms was in preparation and would soon be announced after which General elections will be held. The King will return to Santander to-morrow.

There have been widespread strikes and disorders accompanied by bloodshed in Spain at intervals for several months. It is evidently in the hope of quieting this unrest that the government has determined to propose extensive reforms.

GOVT. TEACHER ON TRIAL FOR MURDER

Alaskan Official Charged With Killing His Native Wife

By Courier Leased Wire.

Seward, Alaska, Aug. 31.—Efforts were being made to-day to bring to an end by Monday the trial begun here yesterday of A. F. McLean, a government teacher at Nushagak, Bristol Bay, charged with the murder, January 2, 1916, of his native wife, because the government desires to avoid the expense of maintaining witnesses here through the winter.

Some of the witnesses brought from Bristol Bay would be compelled to remain this winter if the trial is not ended by Monday when a steamer leaves here on the last trip of the season to that district. The trial promises to be the most expensive in the history of the territory. Witnesses first were taken nearly two thousand miles last fall to testify before the grand jury at Valdez and brought almost as far to testify here.

ALSACE GIRLS TOIL, LAME MEN ENROL

Germans Still Fated Province of Cattle, Metal Utensils and Clothing

PEOPLE ARE KEPT IN IGNORANCE

Know Nothing of Success Of Allies and Believe The Teutons Invincible

Lausanne, Switzerland, Aug. 31.—News from Alsace is received here regularly and is more and more depressing. The suffering of every sort endured by the Alsatians seems to grow worse as the war continues. Alsace, isolated by innumerable German spies, gagged and almost isolated from the rest of the world, is wasting away in the expectation of a better destiny which is all too slow in coming.

There perhaps has been some astonishment at seeing this people endure the desolation of its German masters with so much patience, and this resignation has perhaps led to the belief that the Alsatians have finally accepted their fate. The truth is otherwise. If the Alsatians have not revolted it is because they know their own weakness too well, and that they are inclined moreover to exaggerate the strength of their oppressors. The Germans, by skillful propaganda, have understood how to exploit their success in the eyes of all those whom they oppress. The dogma of German invincibility has been believed by those who for three years have had only one source of information. The least conversation with Alsatian deserters, who succeed from time to time in escaping into Switzerland, throws a curious light on this subject.

"Think Germans Invincible. 'How strong they are,' say these deserters, referring to the Germans. 'They can't be beaten and our poor country will remain in their hands.'"

To designate the Germans they always say "them" or "they." "That they" will be the victors was decided long ago, is it not so?" The majority of these unfortunate people show absolute ignorance of the chief facts of the war. They are surprised to hear of the victory of the Marne, which ruined the projects of imperialistic Germany. They are astonished to learn that France still has a large army formidably equipped. Certain ones, among them were convinced that grave dissension existed between England and France, and that the latter would in time be glad to accept the aid of Germany to drive "the English" off its territory. The "English" who do not want to go. The idea that France continues to fight only because she is constrained by England to do so, is also anchored in the minds of the majority of Alsatians. For three years the Germans have applied themselves to representing France as the unfortunate victim of its leaders and "perfidious Albion," and it must be admitted that their efforts are not always in vain.

Everything Taken from Alsace

The disease from which Alsace suffers most cruelly to-day is that of requisitions. Little by little, by inflexible mathematical progression, the property of the inhabitants has been requisitioned and the Alsatians have seen themselves gradually dispossessed of every object necessary to their existence. First there was the requisition of clocks, of organ pipes, of doorknobs, of wires, and of copper utensils of every sort, without influence on the physical life of the people. Then came the requisition of cattle and the formal interdiction to slaughter the smallest amount. After taking the cattle, household provisions were claimed; smoked beef, dried fruits, potatoes, vegetables, wheat, flour and cereals of every kind.

Farmers, who form the majority of the population, saw themselves reduced to the same allowance as the laborers of the towns. They, too, were given meat cards, bread and potato cards. Yet these unfortunates had one appreciable privilege, the free disposal of milk and the products of the poultry yard. This privilege, however, no longer exists. German soldiers milk the cows and collect the eggs. Only very young children, the aged and a few invalids are now able to obtain milk. The other civilians have long forgotten the taste of it.

Cattle Taken From Peasants. The requisitions of cattle, which at about twenty trucks, conducted by first were moderate, are now made on a large scale. Up to the present as many as ten head have been taken at one time from a peasant. Consequently, many breeders have laid claims to the goat—the poor man's cow—which now brings a price formerly unknown. An inhabitant of Ferrette purchased last week one of these creatures for 250 marks ($50). Butter, coffee, oil, are unprocureable. Tea can still be had by paying 40 marks per kilo (over $5 a pound) and chocolate costs 30 marks a kilo (about $3.50 a pound). An inferior quality of wine costs 4 marks ($1) a liter. A Swiss who recently came from Alsace, before his departure, sold a liter of cherry brandy for 20 marks ($15). A small cake of soap regularly brings 6 or 7 marks ($1.50 to $1.75).

Not finding it sufficient to starve the inhabitants, the Germans impose hard labor on the Alsatians, including Ausonian school children. In Courtauvon old men and women and young girls worked last spring in the trenches under the close supervision of the soldiers. On the slightest occasion the owners of horses are called upon to harness them and to place them at the disposal of the military authorities. They are used principally for the transport of wood gathered in the forests that belong to the French. The products of this wood cutting may be estimated at millions of francs. For weeks now civilians, meet each morning before the Ferrette saw mills, where they collect quantities of sawn timber and carry it to mysterious depots.

Mobilize the Lame and the Halt. All men able to stand are incorporated despite their infirmities. The Lucelle postman, though paralyzed in the arm, has been called to the barracks. A tailor of Winkel, afflicted with a pronounced limp, has suffered the same fate.

Those who are able, fly to Switzerland, but the German sentinels keep close watch on the frontier, and when the deserters have succeeded in escaping their vigilance they have still to cross the celebrated electrified barrier which separates Alsace from Switzerland. The electric current, doubtless for economy, is intermittent, which enables the deserters to pass the barrier at certain propitious hours. Gossip even asserts that this terrible barrier is merely bluff; that no electric current has ever circulated there, the Germans not having the power to waste. An elementary prudence is nevertheless necessary in such a case, likewise a little malice.

The Alsatians are ingenious. Two more have just succeeded in making their escape to Switzerland—a soldier, 47 years old, worn out by two years' war, and a young man of 15 years, who was about to be mobilized. They escaped, bringing with them a cat, which they threw against the barrier to ascertain whether or not it was electrified. The cat passed over it without effect and they followed its example.

Only One Suit Allowed. After having requisitioned the Alsatians' food, the Germans attacked the wardrobes of the unfortunate "watches." In future civilians will only have the right to own one suit. All other wearing apparel must be handed to the kommandantur; bedding and body linens have also been seized; private individuals are only allowed what is strictly necessary. Such is the regime to which Alsace is subjected.

Germany is still discussing the subject of dividing Alsace-Lorraine between Prussia and Bavaria, and perhaps also the grand duchy of Baden. M. Lebaud, professor of law at the Strassburg University, after having in a long article published in the Deutsche Revue, studied the question of this eventful division, explains that many difficulties attend thereon. He concludes by affirming that, as regards these two provinces, there must be a return to the conditions existing before the war with the constitution of 1911.

The Taegliche Rundschau, speaking of the coming session of the landtag of Alsace-Lorraine, expresses its distrust of this assembly, from whom, since the declaration of war, it has been impossible to obtain a clear declaration, showing the Alsace-Lorraine problem in its true light. This paper has knowledge of the project to divide Alsace-Lorraine between Prussia and Bavaria. It believes that in view of the prominent part Bavaria has played in the present war, it will be necessary to consider the wishes of this state. Moreover, Alsace, through its racial character, forms a part of south Germany; it is a German state. At all events, matters cannot remain as they were. A new order of things must be established in Alsace-Lorraine, and to succeed in establishing it, it will be necessary to use "an iron broom."

From what is passing at present in Alsace and in Lorraine, one can easily imagine what the life in these provinces would be after the war if they were forced to continue to suffer the German yoke.

CATARRH LEADS TO CONSUMPTION

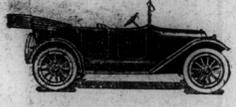

Catarrh is as much a blood disease as scrofula or rheumatism. It may be relieved, but it cannot be removed by simply local treatment. It breaks down the general health, weakens the lung tissues, and leads to consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla is so successful in the treatment of catarrh that it is known as the best remedy for this disease. It purifies the blood. Ask your druggist for it.

"THE COOK OF CANYON CAMP."

"If I had my way," said George Rehan, the celebrated character comedian, who will be seen at the Brant on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday in the Morisco-Paramount production "The Cook of Canyon Camp," all of my pictures would be taken in the mountains, but they would be taken in the summer time.

"We were up in the mountains taking the scenes of 'The Cook of Canyon Camp' for two weeks and really it was so cold I never expect to get warm again. The scenes in the picture only show patches of snow, but I want to tell you that ice in the air every minute we were there. Of course we were all dressed for the cold, but clothes did not seem to keep out the chill and the man that handled the oil stoves was the most popular man in the company. We had to keep an oil stove under the camera all the time and then five or six others around to keep warm when we were not working in the scenes.

"When Donald Crisp and I worked out the story, in my enthusiasm as an author, I gave Jean, the character which I play, some clever scenes in bank. These scenes were concocted in a nice warm room in Los Angeles, but they were taken in the ice-cold mountains about eight thousand feet above sea level.

"We went out to take the scenes where I turned cartwheels through a snow bank. I was carrying an oil stove in each hand and wishing I could balance one on my head, when Crisp told me to get ready for the tumbles. Right then and there my good opinion of the author vanished and I began to ransack my mind for ways to re-write the story. The wind was coming from a great field of snow high above at the rate of about sixty miles an hour and the snow was the coldest-looking snow I ever saw in my life.

"I suggested to Crisp, the director, that we eliminate these scenes, but he was a doggone sight crisper than the weather and told me that as I helped write the story, I should stand by it and go through with it, so there was no argument. I had to tumble through the snow for nearly an hour, and although that was four months ago, my hands are not warm yet.

"The only thing I had to bring any pleasure into my life at all was the fact that the trout season opened when we were up there and Crisp bagged the biggest catch of the day. The next time we go into the mountains we will see that it is good warm before I suggest any ideas for mountain stories."

"THE SQUAW MAN'S SON"

"Mr. Raymond Hatton's assertion that I slam him around too roughly shows that that young gentleman has no appreciation of art," said Wallace Reid in mock sincerity. Mr. Reid will be seen at the Brant on Thurs., Fri., and Sat., supported by Anita King, in "The Squaw Man's Son," the sequel by Edwin Milton Royle of his famous story, "The Squaw Man."

The foundation of the remark was the fact that Raymond Hatton, the clever character actor, requested the company to select somebody besides Reid to knock him about, as Reid did the job too thoroughly.

"It's true," Mr. Reid continued, "that the Fates have so decreed that I throw Hatton about more than any other member of the company—still that is not my fault. Mr. Hatton's fate is in the hands of the scenario department and as long as he is selected to play deep, dark and more or less dirty villains, and I am selected to portray Ray and festive, as well as courageous and careless heroes, will I be forced to knock him about. Mr. Hatton should remember that I throw him through a window and he lands twenty or thirty feet away in a bed of cactus, he should say—'Ah! this is true art. There was no deception about that throw at all. I know that I was hurled through a window and landed in the cactus and the public will know it, and say that there is no intention to deceive and defraud in our work.'

"Then as he applies soothing liniments to his injuries he should consider them libations poured on the altars of realism in art.

"I offered to fix it so that he could be thrown about by Miss Anita King, but he said after seeing her fight with Frank Lanning in the present picture, that although it would be a change, it would probably be just as painful.

"Miss King, although she doesn't look it, is a very athletic young woman and, after the struggle in the cabin, Mr. Lanning told me that he had his hands full every minute and that his life was only saved when he was shot by Donald Bowles as the missionary. Now," concluded Mr. Reid, "I must depart from here to get ready for another fight, and much to Raymond Hatton's delight, I don't have it with him."

THE COMEDY TO COME

When Mack Sennett discovered the astonishing natural phenomenon that a custard pie brought into forcible contact with the human face spreads considerable, he became the father of the slapstick "movie" and the soft pie picture, and he made it fashionable. The pie throw was of his own invention. Neither pie nor stick were the least of his discoveries, however. There was water. Formerly people imagined that the funniest thing one could do with water was to pour it over men and women. Mr. Sennett showed us our error. He poured his men and women over water, shooting the chutes with them over lakes and ponds and watery streets and the bounding billows.

Mr. Sennett made other discoveries. One was that slapstick comedy without a comedian to do the slapstick is not slapstick at all. He picked his comedians, all of whom are now engaged in his new Paramount-Sennett comedies and for them he will be remembered when the slapstick turns to rotting wood. It was because of his ability to pick and train comedians that he has become the most famous of comedy film producers. To his pies, his waterworks and his spectacular situations he owes much of his reputation. Other men have followed him along the way he blazed through the wilderness and some there are who can throw pies straighter than Mr. Sennett's first assistants, but they are not comedians. There are far-devils who will drive motor cars over steeper cliffs than Mr. Sennett selected for his luckless actors, but they belong in the circus. So it is that he is known as the pioneer of the pie frame.

But after the slapstick and the pie—what then? Already "Fatty" Arbuckle is said to be using watermelons for the necessary squishiness of comedy pictures. And Mack Sennett is supplementing his force of comedians with netty girls in bathing suits—Sennetts, they call them out on the west coast.

Can it be that the swing of the pendulum is to bring us gentler comedy—not quiet comedy, heaven forbid—but comedy wherein the comedians' clothes are not so spotted with water? It is up to the pioneer-comedian to tell us when. When Mack Sennett says slapstick must go, then s.m.g.

What we get will be worth waiting for. The Charlie Chaplins, Mack

THE REX

Two excellent vaudeville attractions have been secured by the management of the Rex for the first part of next week. Dorva and DeLeon will present a high class singing and musical sketch, and the Ozaves will give an exhibition of comedy novelty and juggling.

"THE DEVIL'S NEEDLE"

In "The Devil's Needle," Triangle drama to be seen at the Rex theatre next week, Norma Talmadge and Tully Marshall are co-starred, and the latter is seen in the kind of part in which he achieved his greatest fame on the speaking stage—that of a morphine fiend.

It was in Clyde Fitch's last play, "The City," produced on Broadway several months after his death, that Marshall appeared as a victim of the "devil's needle," and gave such a marvellous impersonation that on the opening night several women fainted and had to be carried from the audience. His individual work was more largely responsible for the success of "The City" than any other one feature of the play.

In "The Devil's Needle," written by Chester Withey and Roy Somerville, Marshall makes his first appearance on the screen in the role of a dope victim. He appears as David Stanley, an artist of note. Rene, his favorite model, played by Miss Talmadge is a child of poverty, and through evil associations in her early girlhood has acquired the morphine habit. This is one thing that she has never told Stanley, the other being her love for him.

One day Wynne Mortimer, a society girl, visits Stanley's studio with her fiancé, Hugh Gordon. She falls in love with the artist, breaks her engagement to Gordon, and marries him. Rene, controlled by evil impulses when she finds the artist in love with another woman, induces him to try the "needle," as a spur to his artistic inspiration. The habit fastened upon him, Stanley sinks lower and lower after his marriage, until his career is ruined and his wife's heart broken.

Seeking to rescue her husband from an opium dive, the girl is kidnapped and in peril of her life when Rene, realizing the horror she has wrought, comes to the rescue and succeeds in saving the wife from peril and the husband from the deadly habit, which she herself has overcome after witnessing his frightful communications to the man to whom she has become attached.

In the supporting cast of Miss Talmadge and Marshall are Marguerite Marsh, as the wife, and Howard Gray, as the jilted suitor, who plays a strong and manly part in the events which follow his disappointment.

"A gentleman, a scholar and a judge of good whiskey," is "Rummy" the part played by "Ired Lucas" in the Triangle-Fine Arts photoplay of that title, to be seen at the Rex theatre Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

In this play a young newspaper man, fast rising towards success, becomes a wreck when he loses faith in his wife.

"It happens like that in real life every once in a while too," Director Paul Powell said, reminiscently. "I remember one case that remains the biggest mystery that ever came under my personal observation. I had a friend on one of the newspapers where I worked, a fine, sober, brilliant fellow—just like 'Rummy' at the beginning of this play. I never knew that boy to take a drink until one day he showed up for work roaring drunk. We sent him home to sober up, he came back each noon drunker if that is not more than the day before. So the boss laid him off, but told him that he would make a place for him if he would get sober and stay sober. But he never did. We all tried to straighten him up, but nothing we could do or say did any good, and after about two years he just disappeared.

"The strangest part of it is that no one ever found out what started him on his intentional, deliberate ruin. It wasn't a love affair, I am mighty sure of that. If a man hasn't lost any money—this boy never had any to lose—and if his work is going fine, as his was, and if he hadn't any love affair, and I am just positive he hadn't for I knew him that well, what in thunder, then, was the cause of his blowing up that way? No one knows. I don't suppose anyone ever will. It is the biggest mystery I ever met.

"This has been a hard picture to direct, for I keep seeing my poor old chum in Lucas's realistic work. I'm mighty glad Pauline Starke, as the wife in this play, pulls 'Rummy' through—I would have hated to direct the picture, otherwise."

"Redemption" At the Grand Opera House on September 10, 11 and 12, there will be presented the powerful photoplay drama "Redemption," with Evelyn Nesbit and her five-year son, Ripston Thaw, as leading features, in the production. Following are some New York opinions regarding the presentation:

"Redemption" movie sold out. Hundreds turned away at Cohan Theatre, New York World.

"Redemption" is a surprise—a revelation.—New York Telegraph.

"Redemption" is the redemption of Evelyn Nesbit. A picture you will remember as long as you live. Gigantic and stupendous story of a woman's life.—New York Evening Journal.

"Redemption" conveyed a sense of courageous womanhood which had a strong appeal.—New York Times.

Mr. Steger worked a miracle in "Redemption." A masterpiece I would not have missed for a thousand dollars.—Rev. Thomas B. Gregory, in New York American.

Miss Nesbit leaped with one bound into the front rank of screen stars. A brilliant debut.—New York Evening Sun.

Miss Nesbit, struggling to get away from her past, did surprisingly well.—New York Herald.

Big production worth seeing.—New York Globe.

Episodes in Evelyn Nesbit's life are of sympathy for women.—New York Evening Telegram.

NOTABLE MAGICIAN
Carter, the notable magician, will be seen at Grand Opera House, on September 14th and 15th. An exchange in a report of his performance says:

"After a semi-humorous lecture on sealed envelopes were collected. Carter sent out 12 more cards and envelopes, and on them were written requests—things for the girls on the stage to do. He was to give the envelope to be opened by some one in the audience to see if the thought had carried correctly.

After shuffling the envelopes he gave one to a little miss to hold. In the tense silence, with his face to the stage he called "Commence." The little dancing girl stood up and looked rigid and blank for a few seconds. Every one was rigid and blank watching her. She smiled and stopped suddenly, and oh! anticlimax! pulled off the slipper from her foot and scratched her head with it. The little lady had to blushing acknowledge that the card held that request."

WOMANHOOD
Womanhood or the Glory of a Nation, the big super feature which is coming to the Brant, September 10, 11 and 12th, should create twice the stir that was created by the Battle Cry or Peace. The picture is bigger, better and the story with its patriotism taken away would still be inspiring.

The cast includes Alice Joyce, Harry Morey, Naomi Childers, James Morrison, Joseph Kilgour, Peggy Hy-

THE WORLD OF LABOR

Gleaned From the Exchanges and Other Sources
A Budget of News for Those Interested in Labor

Calgary laborites will have a candidate in the field for the federal elections and expect to repeat the victory they won in Centre Calgary in the Provincial election.

The highest price ever paid for meat of any kind live weight, in the Province of Alberta, was paid last week in Calgary, where a carload of hogs sold for $17 a cwt.

Moose Jaw, Sask., reports all lines extra brisk, the factories are all brisk and going strong, printers report that trade was never better with all shops working up to the full limit and no typos unemployed even prices keep climbing right up.

The Metal Polishers, Buffers, Platers, Brass and Silver Workers now have eight live local unions in the Province of Ontario, every one of which is in first-class working condition and in a position to enforce decent treatment for their members.

At the request of the Journeymen Barbers' Union and the Master Barbers' Association, the Winnipeg Municipal Council has changed the law respecting Saturday night closing of barber shops by reducing the time from 11 to 10 o'clock p.m.

The machinists now have a 100 per cent organization in the Calgary shops of the C. P. R. Business is good and vacancies for a number of good men exist. The other crafts in the shops are also well organized, and all are affiliated with the Shopmen's System Federation.

Business Agent Lucas of the Iron Moulder's International Union of North America, says that all reports received for last month show that there was a very material increase in the membership of the Canadian locals. Nearly all the Canadian organizations are in good shape and going stronger than ever.

Things are humming in the C. P. R. shops at Montreal, which are not only running on full time but are putting extra men on night work. Quite a number of machinists are being taken on and many new engines will be turned out. The outlook is good for a long run of work ahead.

The threatened strike of the members of the recently organized Fish Packers' Union in Prince Rupert, B. C., has been averted by their employers agreeing to advance to a minimum of 50 cents an hour, 60 cents an hour for overtime and 75 cents an hour for Sunday labor or work done on legal holidays.

Reports from all sections of Western Canada show that organized labor has largely regained the commanding position it occupied prior to the war. In nearly all cases wages are higher than at any time during the last five years, and local unions were out of commission have been revived and placed on a solid footing.

Reports from Montreal state that a number of the war munition plants in that city are reducing their staffs and have dispensed with a number of machinists. The American Locomotive Works has ceased the manufacture of munitions entirely, but have large contracts for locomotives ahead and will have to maintain their staffs up to the full standard.

Reports from Belleville, Ont., show that the work of organization in that city is still making headway. The unions recently formed are all increasing in membership and two others are about ready to organize. It is hoped in the near future to have enough unions established to ensure the formation of a live Trades and Labor Council.

The Brotherhood of Railroad Carmen report a large increase in the membership of its Canadian locals during the last eight months, the spirit of organization is in the air everywhere, and the Dominion shows up good in the returns of this international organization which is making headway on both sides of the international boundary line.

The United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners has made phenomenal headway in Canada during the last two years, during which time many new organizations of the craft have been organized in the Dominion. Some idea of the substantial nature of the progress made may be gauged by the fact that at the preceding the U. B. has 93 local unions chartered in Canada, of which 43 are in the Province of Ontario.

Reports from New Ontario show that where the big forest fires of the last three or four years denuded the forest reserves of the province an exceedingly larger acreage of land is under crop than would have been possible if the fire had not occurred, and it is gratifying to learn that the crops in these devastated districts are more valuable and promising than they have ever been at any time previously. Outside of the loss of life which occurred, the big fires apparently have made for the easier settlement of the north country.

The members of local Union 117 of the Journeymen Tailors' International Union, Brantford, recently secured a most satisfactory agreement with the merchant tailors of the city which provides for a considerable increase in the price list. An advance of 50 cents on coats, 20 cents on vests and 25 cents on pants will make a healthier looking pay envelope in future. This local has been financially embarrassed in the past, but at the present time is making good progress, and conditions are being steadily improved.

H. J. Halford, president of the Journeymen Barbers' Federation of Ontario, and executive board member of the Journeymen Barbers' International Union recently rendered great assistance to the members of the Ottawa, Ont. local, who have secured a new scale of prices carrying with them a guarantee to all journeymen of $15 a week and half of the earnings over $23. The price of a shave was placed at 15 cents and 35 cents for a hair cut.

The recently organized Teamsters' Union in Vancouver according to the B. C. Federationist, is making most marked progress. At a recent meeting fifty new members were initiated, bringing the total membership up to over 250. It is proposed to take steps looking to the opening up of negotiations with the employers in an effort to secure a better schedule of wages, and it is interesting to note that a number of firms are anticipating what organization means by increasing wages and bettering work conditions. With all the transportation trades organized, the teamsters will have many allies to help them in building up a union that will be worth while.

All the shipping yards on the big lakes look for big things to happen this winter. It is proposed to send all the shipping possible from the big lakes to carry ocean freights when navigation closes on the inland seas. Many of these ships will never return, and it is proposed to replace them as far as possible in the spring by the new vessels constructed. The United Brotherhood is taking steps to see that the ship carpenters are organized, and only men who carry the union card are employed. The great problem however will be to secure the necessary help to man the new vessels if any large number of inland sailors volunteer for salt water service. In any event wages will be high on the great lakes next year, and the unions in full control to an even greater degree than they are at present.

The threatened strike of the Great Northwestern Telegraph Company's operators and linemen has been averted for the present at least by the appointment of a board of investigation and conciliation by the Department of Labor. David Campbell will represent the union and F. Markey, K.C., of Montreal the company. It was only after the decision to strike had been arrived at that the company finally gave way and consented to appoint a representative on the board. This action was taken at the last moment, and any further delay would have resulted in the whole system being tied up. The telegraphers, who are affiliated with the Commercial Telegraphers' Union are splendidly organized, and felt confident they were in a position in case of trouble to hold up their end and win out. The decision arrived at is accepted on all hands as a tribute to the efficacy of the splendid organization that has been built up.

th ending to-day amounted to $20,103,111 as compared with $15,364,278 for the corresponding month a year ago.

GALT MOURNS LOSS OF LEADING CITIZEN

High Tribute Paid To Late Martin N. Todd, of L. E. and N.

LOYAL TO HOME CITY Deceased Was One of Dominion's Best Known Railwaymen

(Galt Reporter) In the death Wednesday afternoon of Mr. Martin N. Todd, Galt suffered an irreparable loss and the city as a whole mourns his demise. A native of Galt, the deceased gentleman had spent practically all his life here and was always a booster for his home town.

The news of Mr. Todd's death came as a great shock to his friends, as it was also to his family. He had been in poor health for some time past and last winter went south, where he was much benefited, but on his return suffered a relapse. Of late he had been practically all his time to his home, although only a couple of days previous to his death he had paid a visit to his farm east of the city. He had been feeling much better of late and thus his death came unexpectedly.

The late Martin N. Todd was born in Galt and on July 27th last celebrated his 59th birthday. He was educated at the Galt public school and Tassie school. On leaving the latter institution he went to Hamilton, where he commenced his railroad career in the employ of the old Great Western Railway and in his early education stood him in good stead in later years. After a few years spent in Hamilton he returned to Galt to become associated with his father, the late Thomas Todd, in the milling business, and later in the commission business. The late Thomas Todd was one of the principal organizers of the G. P. and H. street railway which operated between Galt and Preston, and he was the first President of the company. On his death Martin N. Todd succeeded him as President in January, 1900, and he had held that position up until his death. When the C.P.R. acquired the Lake Erie and Northern Railway, Mr. Todd's success with the G. P. and H. was recognized by his appointment as General Manager of the new line. Deceased had taken a very active interest in the completion of the L. E. and N., and was responsible for this line being electrified instead of being a steam road as planned by the promoters.

The late Mr. Todd was one of Canada's leading railroad men and known as the controller of the finest system of electric radials in the Dominion, famous for the high standard of equipment. He was a shrewd business man always courteous and cooperative in a pleasing and winning disposition. He had great faith in electricity as the coming motive power, and was a strong supporter of the Hydro-Electric system, which now operates both of the radials which he controlled.

A Loyal Citizen. While of recent years the late Mr. Todd had devoted most of his time to his railway interests, he had at all times taken a keen interest in the welfare of the city and was one of Galt's most loyal citizens. A lover of the horse, it was natural that he should be connected with the Galt Horse Show Association in its infancy, and he was a past President of the Association. Although of a quiet disposition and never seeking public office, he had been a valued

SEE THE "Studebaker" GOLD CAR

At the Toronto Exposition

This year Studebaker is exhibiting at the Toronto Exhibition one of its Series 18 cars finished in 24 carat gold—a Gold Car evolved from the famous Gold Chassis of a year ago.

It is the most beautifully finished motor car in the world, and yet it is a standard Studebaker Car in every detail of construction, with the exception of its brilliant gold and white finish.

WHAT IT REPRESENTS:

This Gold Car is but a symbol of Studebaker worth. The gold finish exemplifies, as nothing else could, the quality, the beauty of finish, and the fineness of workmanship that have made Studebaker cars the choice of discriminating buyers throughout the Dominion. It symbolizes the superior quality that Studebaker puts into every car bearing its name. It puts the spotlight on all the little—but important—details of construction that would be passed over in the ordinary exhibit.

The Standard 18 Series Studebaker is exactly the same in every detail except for the finish and top. Every Studebaker has the same distinction of lines, the same masterful power, the same luxurious comfort, the same perfection of design and workmanship.

The Studebaker Gold Car is exhibited for the first time in Canada at the Toronto Exposition. It occupies the place of honor in the Studebaker booth on the main floor.

Be sure you see this wonderful Gold Car while it is in Toronto, and with it the complete line of Series 18 Studebaker cars—built in Canada at the Studebaker factories, Walkerville, Ontario—representing the greatest automobile values the industry has ever known.

In religion the late Mr. Todd was a Presbyterian, a member of Central church. Of recent years he had spent most of his spare time at his farm, east of Galt, where he went into the raising of horned Dorset sheep, in which he took a great pride. He was also an ardent follower of Isaac Walton and a small game hunter.

CHAPTER V.
Conspiracy.

"My dear sister!" interposed Mr. Savage with an imitation so exact of the woman's tone that he nearly brought a smile even from Sally. "Do calm yourself—don't make a scene. The matter is quite easy to explain."

"But what?"
"Oh, give us a chance. But, permit me!" He bowed with his easy grace. "Adele, this is Miss Manvers, my sister, Mrs. Standish. And now, Miss Manvers, I have started from her chair and Mrs. Standish acknowledged her existence by an embarrassed nod—do sit down, Adele."

With the manner of one whose amazement has paralyzed her parts of speech, the woman sank mechanically into the chair which Savage (having thoughtfully waved away the hovering maid) placed beside the table, between himself and his guest. But once seated, precisely as if that position were a charm to break the spell that sealed them, promptly her lips reformed the opening syllables of "What does this mean?"

Mr. Savage, however, diplomatically gave her no chance to utter more than the first word.
"Do hold your tongue," he pleaded, with a rudeness convincingly fraternal, "and listen to me. I am deeply indebted to Miss Manvers for your very life, in fact. Oh, don't look so blamed incredulous; I'm perfectly sober. Now will you please give me a show?"

And, the lady executing a gesture that matched well her look of blank resignation, her brother addressed himself to a terse summing up of the affair which, while it stressed the gravity of the adventure with the fat burglar, did not seem to extenuate Sally's offense in the least, and so had the agreeable upshot of leaving the sister in a much-placated humor and regarding the girl with a more indulgent countenance than Sally had found any reason at first to hope for.

As for that young woman, the circumstance that she was inwardly all asunder didn't in the least hinder her exercise of that feminine trick of mentally photographing, classifying, and cataloguing the other woman's outward aspects in detail, and, at the same time, distilling her more subtle phases of personality in the report of instinct and minutely analyzing the precipitate.

The result laid the last lingering ghost of suspicion that all was not as it should be between these two—that Blue Serge had not been altogether frank with her.

She had from the first appreciated the positive likeness between Mrs. Standish and the portrait in the library, even though her observation of the latter had been limited to the most casual inspection through the crack of the folding doors; there wasn't any excuse for questioning the identification. The woman before her, like the woman of the picture, was of the slender, blond class—intelligent, nervous, quick-tempered, inclined to suffer spasmodically from exaltation of the ego. And if she had not always been pampered with very luxury that money has induced modern civilization to invent, the net was not apparent; she dressed with such exquisite taste as only money can purchase, if it be not innate; she carried herself with the use of affluence founded upon a lack, while her nervousness was amply due rather to impatience than to the vice of worrying.

"And now," Mr. Savage wound up with a graceless grin, "if you'll be good enough to explain what the dickens you're doing here instead of being on the way to Boston by the eleven train, I'll be grateful. Miss Manvers will quit doubting my ver-city—secretly, if not openly—and we can proceed to consider something I have to suggest with respect to the obligations of a woman who has been saved the loss of a world of gew-gaws as well as those of a man who is alive and whole exclusively, thanks to—well, I think you know what I mean."

"Oh, as for that," said Mrs. Standish absently, "when you turned up missing on the train, I stopped it at the Hundred and Twenty-Fifth Street station and came back to find out what was the matter. I've been all through this blessed place looking for you—"

"Pardon!" Mr. Savage interrupted. "Did I understand you to say you had stopped the train?"
"Certainly. Why not? You don't imagine I was going to let myself be carried all the way to Boston in ignorance—"

"Then, one infers, the eleven train doesn't normally stop at One Hundred and Twenty-Fifth street?"
"No. I had to speak to the conductor. Do be quiet. It doesn't matter. What were you going to say?"

"Nothing much, except that the clothes Miss Manvers stands in are hardly to be considered an adequate reward."

"True. But you mentioned some suggestion or other—"

"Without being downright about it, thereby sparing Miss Manvers any embarrassment she might feel should you disapprove, as I'm confident you won't—"

"This was the woman's turn; she silenced him with a gesture of infinite ennui. "Why is it," she complained, "that you never get anywhere without talking all around Robin Hood's barn?"

"Objection," Mr. Savage offered promptly, "on the ground of mixed metaphor."

"Objection sustained," his sister conceded. "But do come to the point."

"I wish only to remind you of the news imparted by our respected aunt in her letter of recent date."

The woman frowned slightly, as with mental effort; then a flash of comprehension lightened her blue eyes. "Immediately her brows met, she circumscribed a question. A look of profound but illegible significance passed between the two. Mr. Savage nodded. Mrs. Standish pursed speculatively her thin, well-made-up lips and visibly took thought, according to the habit of her sex, by means of a series of intuitive explosions. Then she nodded vigorously and turned upon Miss Manvers a bewildering smile, for the first time addressing her directly.

"My dear," she said pleasantly enough—though, of course, the term had no accent whatever of affection—but this half-witted brother of mine once in a while stumbles upon the most brilliant inspiration imaginable. I'm sure he has seen enough of you in this last hour to be making no mistake in offering you as an answer to a very delicate question which has been distressing us both for a long time. If you're not over scrupulous—"

"I'm sure I don't know what you're driving at," Sally said bluntly; "but I'm hardly in a position to be nicknamed about trifles."

"We're offering you a chance to get away, to enjoy a summer by the seashore, to mix with a lot of mighty interesting people, and all that sort of thing—everything you tell me you've been pining for—if you'll consent to sail under false colors."

"Please!" Sally begged with a confused and excited little laugh, "I can't help it! Indirection is Walter's long suit," Mrs. Standish took up the tale. "First of all, you must know this aunt of ours is rather an eccentric—frightfully

SIDE TALKS

By RUTH CAMERON

HASHING UP THE GUEST.

Not long ago I was a guest at a little week-end house party, at which one of the chief indoor diversions was discussing and making fun of the guests of the previous week. It was amusing in a way, for our hosts were clever mimics and good satirists. They could pick people to pieces to perfection. One couldn't help laughing. But even while one laughed a cold shiver ran up one's back—a shiver of premonition as to what would happen next week when someone else was the audience.

Our Grandmother Do It. I think this habit of talking over guests in front of other guests is one of the unfortunate tricks that people nowadays permit themselves all too often. Perhaps our grandmothers did, too. I don't know. I prefer to think that they didn't, for the matter that our grandchildren won't. I hope it's just a passing phase of bad manners.

I wish we talked guests over much less, even in the privacy of our immediate families. It is sometimes a temptation when one has carried the guest's bag to the train and picked up the guest room and drawn a sigh half of regret at his going, half of relief at the inevitable let down, to serve him up at the next meal for conversational sauce.

Takes the Bloom Off Hospitality. In a way there is nothing wrong about it if one guards one's tongue and says nothing untruthful or needlessly unkind. And yet I don't like it. It takes the bloom off the flower of hospitality.

In some families the habit of criticizing outsiders, guests and others, is second nature. The children grow up in this atmosphere of sharp caustic criticisms, sometimes witty sometimes not. And I call it a very unhealthy atmosphere. Of course human nature is the most interesting thing in the world. To me at least, I like books with as much as possible about people and as little as possible about scenery, in them. Also I infinitely prefer portraits to landscapes. And one would lose a big interest out of life if one did not discuss one's friends and neighbors. But discussion, fair, analytical, kindly discussion, is one thing and the habit of unamiable criticism is quite another. Which do you have in your home?

A TRIP TO SEASAWLAND

"Let's make a teeter," cried Joe as he and Polly played in the garden.

The idea suited Polly, so they found boards under the barn and placed it across the fence rail. Joe held the board steady while Polly seated herself on one end.

"Hold on tight. I'm going to bounce you into the sky," cried Joe. He jumped on the other end, and Polly lost her balance and wizzed through the air.

Up, up into the soft clouds Polly floated. She seemed to rest on fairy wings, her feet arms seemed to hold her tightly, so Polly wasn't afraid.

"Where are you taking me?" asked Polly.

"Why to Seasawland," answered the beautiful fairy.

Polly sighed and lay quiet. Her head hurt but she didn't mind the throbbing as long as the lovely fairy played her finger on Polly's hip.

Before Polly rose a golden tower that sparkled in the sunlight. Crowds of queer little men stood guard at the base of the tower with guns over their shoulders. The fairy placed her finger on Polly's hip.

"Sh-sh—!" whispered the fairy. "In that tower Princess Makebelieve is imprisoned. You must save her. See that teeter-totter over there?"

Polly nodded—"sit on one end of it and the little men will climb on the other. When they bounce you into the air fly straight for the tiny window at the top of the tower. Here are three wishing berries, you might need them," said the fairy, and she sat Polly down among the guards.

Polly put the berries in her pocket and ran for the teeter-totter, the little men after her. They grabbed the end of the board and Polly bounced into the air and through the window into the tower.

A big black cat sat guarding Princess Makebelieve, who was asleep on a golden couch. When the cat saw Polly she sprang at her.

Polly quickly swallowed a wishing berry. "I wish you were a bird," she cried.

At once the cat was changed into a black bird. She flew at Polly's head. Polly swallowed another berry. "Fly away to the mountains!" cried Polly, and the bird flew out of the window.

Polly awakened Princess Makebelieve. "Hurry, we must leave this dreadful place," exclaimed Polly. "But there are no doors, and the tower is so high!" cried the princess.

Polly placed a board across the couch. "Sit on the end and I will come you out of the window," whispered Polly.

The Princess did as she was told, and Polly jumped on the other end of the board and the Princess flew out of the window into the arms of the fairy who was waiting outside.

A cool hand touched Polly's head. "Polly, are you hurt?" asked a voice. Polly opened her eyes.

"I'm sorry I bounced you so high," confessed Joe.

"I'm not," Polly declared. "Why if you hadn't I couldn't have rescued Princess Makebelieve from the black cat." And she told Joe where she had been.

"And I have one wishing berry left," whispered Polly.

But when she put her hand in her pocket the pocket was empty.

A Tale From the Trenches, of The Destruction of An Unpleasant Neighbor

Behind British Lines in France, Aug. 31.—(Correspondence of The Associated Press)—"Minnie" is a very forward young lady who lives as a rule in German front line trenches. She has no pretensions at all to beauty. She is for use, not for ornament. She is a trench gun, and her projectiles remind one of plum puddings attached to sticks. They fly very irregularly in that part of No-Man's Land furthest removed from Minnie's temporary lodging.

Just before the latest push around Ypres, there was a particular Minnie located a few miles from Ypres, which was more than usually a nuisance. The British trench was not well sited, nor very well protected. Consequently when Minnie was active, she made things very uncomfortable for the occupants of that British trench. Moreover, she had no regular habits, she worked on no plan, lady-like she did just about as she wished.

The young British subalterns hated her with a persistent, pervading hatred, and concocted many schemes for her undoing, but to no avail. But one night, chance brought into the trench a very irritable old artillery officer, just as Minnie was active. One of Minnie's puddings soiled his boots, and thereby aroused in him a grim determination to devote himself to her destruction.

He stayed in the trench all that night, studying Minnie's location and characteristics, and on the morning he returned, followed by his orderly, uncoiling wire as he walked. At the trench end of the wire, a temporary telephone was fixed. The far end of the wire led back a mile and a half to a battery of field artillery.

Along about noon Minnie opened up for her midday strafing. Promptly the artillery officer verified his observations of the night before and spoke a few figures into the telephone. A minute later a boom announced the arrival of British shell just across on the other side of the trench.

The British officer swore softly, and spoke again into the telephone. The first shell had been at least thirty yards off. The second was perhaps twenty yards on the other side. Again the officer spoke into the telephone, and for the third time the gun spoke. "Bull's Eye" sang the officer into the telephone, and packed up his belongings in business-like fashion. Minnie was deceased.

BAKED APPLES. Take Baldwin apples, remove the core, keeping the apples whole; fill with sugar and bake until soft in a slow oven; serve with whipped cream.

BOYS' NORFOLK SUIT.

By Anabel Worthington.

Proud of being dressed in a suit so much like his big brother's is this small man in the Norfolk suit. It is a style which is particularly appropriate for wash materials and has the advantage of being quite easy to make. The jacket has box plaits at front and back and a broad belt passes under them through slots. A boyish turned back collar finishes the neck. The jacket is single breasted. The style of the sleeves is to be decided by the mother, as both long and short ones are included in the pattern. Straight trousers are given. Galatas, kindergarten cloth, pongee and serge are suitable materials.

The suit pattern No. 8387 is cut in sizes 2, 4 and 6 years. The 4 year size requires 2 1/2 yards of 36 inch material with 3/8 yard 39 inch lining.
