ARE YOU DEAF? ANY HEAD NOISES?

ALL CASES OF DEAFNESS OR HARD HEARING ARE NOW CURABLE by our new invention. Only those born deaf are incurable. HEAD NOISES CEASE IMMEDIATELY. F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS: Baltimore, Md., March 20, 1901. Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion. About five years ago my right ear began to ring, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely. I underwent a treatment of the most eminent specialist of this city, but that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever. Then I saw your advertisement, accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and today, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours, F. A. WERMAN, 730 S. Broadway, Baltimore, Md.

OUR TREATMENT DOES NOT INTERFERE WITH YOUR USUAL OCCUPATION. YOU CAN CURE YOURSELF AT HOME at a nominal cost. INTERNATIONAL AURAL CLINIC, 596 LA SALLE AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.

Scotland.

A SCOTCH CONVERT'S "PLAIN REASONS."

Mr. John M. M. Charleson, late minister of Throniebank Parish Church, Scotland, whose conversion to Catholicity was recently announced, has published his reasons for joining the Catholic Church. He says that some years ago he began to make a critical study of the Synoptic Gospels, in order, by applying the strictest tests, to discover from these authentic records what was the real teaching of Christ. To do this effectively he resolved to enter upon the work as if he had previously known nothing of Christianity, and to view the sayings and actions of our Lord in their ascertainable historical setting, and in the plain and direct grammatical meaning of the words and especially to omit nothing, however tempted he might be to do so. For (he proceeds) it was evident to me that many commentators either explained away disagreeable passages or perverted their meaning so as to bring them into greater harmony with their general system of belief. This danger I was most anxious to avoid; and I seem justified in saying that I succeeded on the whole in doing so. As the work progressed, and especially when it was finished, I WAS CONSIDERABLY AMAZED AND DISQUIETED.

For in these first three Gospels I found several things which were not according to our Scottish Protestantism. In order not to believe or set harshly, I determined to approach the problem from other points of view, such as the liturgical, the historical, the dogmatic, and especially the patristic. This last appeared to me to be the most important. For evidently the early Fathers, who were instructed in the truths of the Gospel by the Apostles and their immediate successors, would in their writings reveal how the glorious martyr Church of the first centuries believed and worshipped. Hence I made a careful study—which lasted for several years—of the actual writings of the early Fathers of the Church, and for the time being heeded not other men's dissertations and explanations regarding these ancient writings. I read the writings themselves. I listened to the very voices that still reach us through the printed page, from the Church of the first days up to the great Council of Nicaea in 325 A. D. After detailing the passages which specially influenced him, Mr. Charleson stated that from believing these he considered it to be his duty to impress them on the minds of men by all means in his power. Though many of these ordinances and truths were neglected or denied, or LOOKED ON WITH SUSPICION IN THE CHURCH OF SCOTLAND, he "considered it his duty to do more to teach and practise them, than the pure, and Scriptural, and ancient faith, in all its spirituality, and beauty and comfort might be restored to his people, and through them the good seed carried to others." In short, after much study of the words addressed by our Lord to St. Peter: "Thou art Peter, and on this rock I will build My Church," he arrived at the conviction that the simple and natural meaning of the words addressed by our Lord to St. Peter: "Thou art Peter, and on this rock I will build My Church," was the right meaning; that it was the Papacy, nothing less nor more; and that his position as a minister of the Church of Scotland was untenable.

England.

DEATH OF THE BISHOP OF CLIFTON.

Quite unexpected was the sad news of the Bishop of Clifton's death, which took place at Bristol; England. Since the beginning of the year Dr. Brownlow has suffered from weakness of the heart. But such was his interest in the education question that, though really very ill, he attended the meeting of the Bishops at Archbishop's House, Westminster, and when, two hours before his death, he commissioned Mgr. Provost Russell to write his Advent Pastoral. He asked him to make that the theme. During the Bishop's visit to London he contracted a severe cold, and from the time of his return he steadily grew worse till Saturday afternoon, when he passed away. The son of the Rev. William Brownlow, M. A., rector of Wilmsham, Cheshire, and of Frances, daughter of Mr. Robert James Chambers, William Robert Brownlow was born at that rectory on the 4th July, 1830. He was educated at Rugby School and at Trinity College, and took his B. A. degree with mathematical honors (9th Senior Optima) in January, 1852, and his M. A. degree in 1855. For ten years he was a clergyman of the Church of England, holding appointments in Staffordshire, London, and Gloucester, and was subsequently curate of St. John's

There is no excuse for neglecting it, it makes its presence known by so many signs, such as glandular tumors, cutaneous eruptions, inflamed eyelids, sore ears, nodes, etc., etc., wasting and general debility.
Children of J. W. Medlin, Woodstock, Ont., had scrofula seven so bad they could not attend school for three months. When different kinds of medicines had been used to no purpose whatever, these sufferers were cured, according to Mr. Medlin's voluntary testimony, by Dean and Chapter and the clergy of the diocese at an assembly in the Chapter Room, and in the course of his reply he said: "I take my Bishop's seat among you as the representative of the representative of the Holy Catholic Church and the immortal constitution of this realm." It was upon this passage that the interesting controversy arose between the two Prelates, and our readers will remember the lucid and telling discourses of Dr. Brownlow which were then given in the press. During the seven years of his bishopric Dr. Brownlow not only discharged most conscientiously his manifold duties throughout the wide area of the Clifton diocese, but found time to take an active part in many movements that had for their object the welfare of the citizens; from the first he showed a public spirit which was alike admirable and exemplary. He was well known as an archaeologist and antiquarian, and was prominently identified with various societies in Bristol and the neighboring counties. He was an author of many works on religious, historical and archaeological subjects, and his book on "Slavery and Serfdom in Europe" has been widely circulated. On the catacombs of Rome he and Provost Northcote have been perhaps the greatest authorities in this country, and even in Rome the highest value is attached to the deceased Bishop's writings on that subject. Dr. Brownlow was gifted with an attractive personality, broad-minded, genial, and with a kindly greeting for everyone, he won the affectionate regard of all who came within the sphere of his influence, and enjoyed a large measure of popularity amongst both old and young.

The oldest Catholic priest in England is mentioned as the Right Rev. Mgr. Croxall, D. D., rector of St. Mary's Church, Levensham. Next January, if spared, he will complete his ninety-fourth year, and as he was ordained priest in 1836, he has already been in the ministry over sixty-five years.

It is said that letters have been found in the Vatican Library which make it clear that Rizzio was not a professional musician, but a priest who had adopted a disguise that he might say Mass and otherwise minister in safety to Mary Queen of Scots and her Catholic attendants. Whether this was so it ought to be possible to discover from ecclesiastical registers. If the discovery is genuine, it will go far to give the death blow to the cruellest calumny propagated by the enemies of the unhappy Queen.

According to the report just issued by Propaganda Fide, the number of Catholics in England and Wales in 1901 is 1,429,850, as compared with 1,339,840 in 1895; in Scotland 413,000, with 363,000 in 1895. But

In Ireland there has been a decrease from 3,543,216 to 3,538,305. In Canada there has been an increase from 2,199,530 to 2,201,660 within the five years. In Australia, Tasmania and New Zealand the Catholic population has grown from 3,008,390 to 4,507,980, and in Africa the Catholics, who were about 400,327 in 1895, now number 484,782. In India their number about 750,000.

Father Patrick Russell, superior of the Irish Dominicans of Lisbon, died recently at the age of ninety-six. Father Russell, who had lived in Portugal from his youth, had earned the respect of all classes of society, and retained it even in times of revolutionary agitation.

A scrofulous theft has been committed at the Italian shrine of Our Lady of Pompeii, unknown miscreants having despoiled the statue of the Blessed Virgin of all its ornaments and precious "ex votos," valued at several thousands of francs.

Under the presidency of the Duke of Norfolk a committee has been formed, with headquarters at Norfolk House, for the purpose of promoting the project for erecting a memorial church to Cardinal Newman at Birmingham. The committee will confine its operations chiefly to London and the south of England. The sum now in hand amounts to over £10,000. The total amount required is £20,000.

Father Thurston, S. J., of London, has been involved for some time in a controversy with a contributor to the "Espresso." The writer in this publication made a bitter attack on the Jesuit order, insinuating, among other things, that the members of the order have taught and do teach the doctrine that the end justifies the means. Father Thurston has demanded proof of this calumnious charge and has persuaded the editor of the "Espresso" to appoint a committee composed of Catholics and non-Catholics, whose duty it will be, after hearing the evidence to be adduced, to decide whether the charge has been substantiated or not. This course of procedure is eminently fair, and can have of course, but one issue—that is to say, the establishment of the absolute innocence of the Jesuits as a body.

The roofs of all the ancient English cathedrals and many of the great churches and monasteries were constructed of lead, which was a scarce and valuable commodity. The despoilers under Cromwell looked upon it as most desirable "loot." In an English exchange writer says: "It is interesting to speculate what must have been the total value of the lead removed from the roofs of ecclesiastical buildings at this time. That from the church and monastery of Bury St. Edmund's was estimated at £3,302, and thousands of tons were flung down the Savaire in Bristol, thence to be exported. About Gasquet quotes a grant to one John Smith of Bristol, for his ship ready to sail in consideration of £200, five hundred fadders of lead out of each of our stores as there remains, good weight."

In consequence of the crowded condition of our columns this week, we are obliged to leave out editorial and other matter.

The letter of Mr. David Egan, agent of the Mount Stewart Post Office, published in this issue, deserves careful perusal. The office was wanted for a Grit healer, and in order to pave the way for him the salary of Mr. Egan was cut down, on the plea that the business of the office had decreased. Mr. Egan's letter shows that the decrease was not real, but on the contrary the business had increased. The Patriot referring to the letter, without publishing it, with characteristic dishonesty informs its readers point blank the business of the office had decreased. All patrons of the Mount Stewart Post Office, regardless of politics, are indignant at the action of the Government in this matter.

The steamer Dalton Hall, that had been here loading produce for the old country took her departure yesterday morning with a cargo valued at one hundred and fifty thousand dollars. This is certainly a valuable cargo of the products of this Province to be got together at short notice and at a season of the year when the bulk of what our farmers have to dispose of had already been sold. This shipment under such conditions affords some evidence of what a productive province we have and of what could be done in shipping our agricultural products to the old country if proper facilities were afforded. Many cargoes such as that shipped on the Dalton Hall could be sent from here to the British markets if steamers were supplied for their conveyance. At least four or five such shipments as the one in question could be sent yearly if the people had an assurance that the facilities of shipment would be supplied. It is a decided advantage to have our products sent directly from here to the British market. In this way what we send will reach its destination in the shortest time possible and in the best condition. Besides these direct shipments serve to advertise our products, and as nothing but the best will command the higher prices in the old country, these products will necessarily become a distinct feature of the British markets. Success in shipments of this kind will stimulate our producers and shippers to greater efforts in providing cargoes and improved methods of farming, so as to get from the soil a very much greater yield of valuable products than at present, something easy of accomplishment. In view of all these considerations we trust every success will attend the Dalton Hall enterprise.

The sailor found afflicted with smallpox on board the schooner Robin Hood at Georgetown, was taken to the Marine hospital at Keppoch on Monday of last week, and at latest accounts was reported progressing towards recovery. It is now in a fair way towards recovery he cannot, according to all accounts, attribute all his good fortune to the prompt and good management of the Local Government. It appears the law prescribes that when a mariner develops contagious disease after the vessel has entered at the custom house in this case the care of the patient devolves upon the local authorities, instead of the Dominion Government. In consequence of this the patient could not be attended by Dr. Conroy, port physician here, who is an official of the Dominion Government. The position is explained in the following instruction from the proper authority:

OTTAWA, Dec. 7. P. Conroy, M. D. Am wiring McDonald, Georgetown, transfer of patient not within jurisdiction of the department. All we can offer is to allow him to be placed in quarantine building, Charlottetown, to be attended and maintained there at the expense of Georgetown municipality.

T. MONTZAMBERT, M. D., D. C. P. H. Of course Georgetown having no municipality the responsibility in the case devolved upon the Provincial Government. This responsibility of the Provincial authorities were very slow about assuming, saying at first they had nothing to do with the matter. Finally they made a start by sending to Georgetown a man named Musick to bring the sick man to Keppoch in a buggy. Music appears to be of very convivial habits and on this occasion was completely intoxicated. In consequence of his drunkenness his driving was very reckless, and he ran into telegraph poles, truck waggons and anything else that offered. The result was that the buggy broke more than once on the journey. Kind hearted people came to his assistance and at one place near a school, all the pupils came out to take observations. Now, all will admit that this was a good way to communicate smallpox to those unsuspecting people. He succeeded in reaching Keppoch and on the following day quite unassisted came to the city and strutted about until he was arrested and quarantined. The negligence and blundering of the Provincial authorities did not end here. The patient was suffered to remain in the hospital, together with the nurses already there, from Monday till Thursday evening with out medicine or medical attendance. Not only that; but the authorities sent out no provisions till Thursday evening. On Thursday afternoon the Provincial Government sent Dr. Handraban to the hospital; but in the meantime the patient might have died. In such conduct as that anything of which a Government should feel proud?

The Herald's Scoop-Net.

Christmas is getting mighty handy. You can tell that by the smell of spruce which comes floating down Queen Street on the cold December air. This is the time of year when the bird which happens to be so unfortunate as to be born a goose or a turkey is liable to get it on the neck—and make its departure from this vale of tears without even getting time to murmur a last goodbye to home and relations. The poor dumb animals, especially of the bovine kind, are also liable to drop off very suddenly about this time; and all to satisfy the appetite of that hungry glutton—man! 'Tis a season of joy and gladness, indeed; but the poultry if they could speak, would undoubtedly object strongly to the season being marked by so much "fowl play," and the cows would voice their sentiments in a series of indignation meetings, holding forth that the human race must be very careful in their future behaviour as the cows would not be responsible while their lives were at stake. But such foolish talk as this must not be further allowed to enter the meshes of the Scoop-Net. We will not cloud our intellects with such light and empty vapourings. We will take a walk up the street and see how our advertisers are getting along. If you wish you can accompany me—in your mind's eye. The first store we strike on Victoria Row, is that of Messrs.

PROWSE BROS. & CO. The metre is purely accidental and no poetry was intended in the above; so kindly excuse me this time. Oh! Yes, Prowse Bros. are doing a booming business just now. Three stores in one and always more than one in the three. What the people want and always have it on hand. Their Xmas display is simply grand; as a small boy remarked, "it beats the band,"—but there I go again—can't help it. Although Prowse Bros. got a bad scorching in Sydney they are taking it with a good grace. They need never fear a worse scorching later on if they continue to act right in this world.

STANLEY BROTHERS store, a little further on has a display of Dry Goods for Xmas, right up to date. Their Dry Goods are good goods, goodness knows. They are good men; they have good customers and they give good bargains, and everything seems to look good for them in the future. They are not saying much, but are getting there just the same. The establishment of

JAMES PATON & CO., of which we gave an extended account last week, is now the centre of attraction for the youngsters, yes, and the soldiers too. The kids come to see Santa Claus and the grown-ups come to see about his stock-in-trade. Santa is getting to be an old man now, but he doesn't show it. After we get out of the excitement at Paton's we move further up and stop a moment at

E. W. TAYLOR'S. This is the finest jewellery store in Charlottetown and he sells real jewellery. He is making special bargains for Xmas—no need to mention that. If you need a good watch, try him. He doesn't sell turkeys. But we have no time to mention all the pretty things sold here. Mr. Taylor has a store full of time, so you had better call on him quick.

JOHN NEWSON the furniture man keeps a splendid variety of everything in his line. Read his ad. in this paper. Everything he sells is useful; no fear of your buying a nuisance at Newson's. If you want a suit of clothes as good as can be obtained in the city drop into the store of

D. A. BRUCE. He has a staff of experienced workmen who can fit you out in a I shape. No cutting out the cloth with a broad-axe here. You should see the overcoat he can sell you for $9.00. It's all right. He carries everything in Men's Furnishings. The clothing sold by him will stand hard wear. Talking about hard wear reminds me that the hardware store of FENNEL & CHANDLER is right alongside. A good Xmas present for your boy would be a pair of skates or a jack-in-the-box. Both and keep his mind from wandering. This store is also headquarters for stoves. It would warm your heart to see them. Oh, Fennell & Chandler are the men who know all about the hardware trade. Now, if you don't mind we will cross the Square to Sunny-side. My Gracious!

F. PERKINS & CO., are doing it up brown this year. Their splendid large store in the new Prowse Block is doing a business as rushing as any, and the others are not a bit idle. The display of nice millinery is simply grand. Words fail me. Hard by F. Perkins & Co.'s is the large furniture store of

MARK WRIGHT & CO. This is indeed a large store. If you cannot get what you want in furniture here, it can't be got anywhere. If you mark right what I say you will not be astray. A few doors west we come to P. E. L.'s greatest crockery store kept by

W. P. COLWILL. He carries on a continual war with China. He says China must go. He believes in the Open Door Policy. That is—that everyone is welcome to inspect his goods even if the door has to be left wide open to accommodate them all. Everything in Crockery is sold and special Xmas inducements are offered. We were almost forgetting that HASLARD & MOORE'S bookstore is situated between Wright's and Colwill's. Just look at their two windows filled with beautiful and desirable articles suitable for Xmas presents, and all at bargain prices. You will Haasard nothing but going inside and will gain Moore by going inside. On Upper Queen Street Mr.

P. MONAGHAN keeps another big crockery store. He believes in buying a vast stock and then rushing the whole thing out in a hurry at bargain prices. A good idea, too. Turning down Queen St. we come to the Talloring and general Dry Goods establishment conducted by

JOHN McLEOD & CO. He keeps on hand a vast supply of English and Scotch tweeds, broad-clothes and all accessories of the trade. He can rig you out in grand style. But perhaps you do not feel like leaving all your patronage with one merchant, if so

GORDON & MACLELLAN a few doors up, are well able to take a hand in the game. Their unequalled supply of cloths and their fine work have gained for them an enviable reputation in the tailoring line. Further down Queen we come to the great book store conducted by

GEORGE CARTER & CO. It is whispered that Santa Claus is going to take up his headquarters here. Don't see how he manage to be in so many places at once. But it seems he can manage it. This is a mighty store. Upstairs nothing but toys, toys, toys; downstairs books, books, books. Every child in the city seems to find attraction in this store. Can't blame 'em. I would like to stay there myself until I got hungry and then I would gravitate into

BEER & GOFF'S great grocery store a little further down. The supply of Xmas groceries is something extraordinary. Of course everybody knows Beer & Goff's and nothing we can say will enlighten anyone on the subject of that store. The great dry goods establishment of WEEKS & CO., next claims our attention. It's not easy to say anything very original about a dry goods store nor is it necessary; but it seems strange to think that although you can get everything in collars, braces, hats, etc. in a few minutes yet it takes Weeks to supply them. And Weeks is the man who knows how, especially in the happy holiday season. It is too bad that Messrs.

DRISCOLL & HORNBY should meet with an unfortunate fire just at this time. They have the sympathy of all for they are good obliging fellows. We hope to see them on their feet again soon. Right across the street is

J. B. McDONALD'S new store, at his old stand. This store has been especially fitted up to meet the requirements of his ever-increasing trade. Mr. McDonald's reputation for cheapness in selling dry goods and boots and shoes is well known, and you need never go bare-footed if you call on J. B. There is another store a little further down conducted by

A. M. MORGAN who also sells footwear, and good footwear. His window is full of rubbers just now and there are a good many "rubbers" outside the windows as well. This store is also headquarters for trunks and valises. Right across the street beneath the Herald Office

R. F. MADDIGAN & CO. carry on a big business in the grocery line. They have laid in a tremendous stock of raisins, currents, fruits, spices and the other eatables required for the season. Now we are deluged with fish. Stripped bass from Kildare where, as already reported it is being dug out of the low in large quantities, has been coming in somewhat freely, but it has been caught among the wharves and a day or two ago several consignments of herring caught off Malpeque last week were brought in. W. Taylor, without cost. No bands were on hand to play the boys off on their departure. Some of their friends were there however, and they managed to raise a cheer. The music and the shouting have ceased, and Mr. B. Kipling would say, "We read that the men from Toronto, Montreal, St. John and other cities all got a grand and enthusiastic send-off. But the boys from Prince Edward Island, although treated so cordially by our patriotic Government will, no doubt be able to survive the grand farewell they didn't get."

An Imposing Ceremony at Nazareth Convent, Rochester, N. Y.

(From the Rochester Catholic Journal.)

November's sun has seldom, if ever, shed its golden radiance on a fairer scene than was presented at Nazareth Convent chapel on the feast of the Presentation of Our Lady, November 21st.

The day was uniquely chosen for the ceremony, for, as Mary the Immaculate Queen presented herself in the temple of old, a holocaust to the Lord, so did the nine young ladies who, having completed their term of probation at the Nazareth Normal Training School, present themselves to become the betrothed brides of Christ.

At the same time eight novices, having successfully passed through their long course of seven years novitiate presented themselves for the completion of their sacrifice by making their final vows.

The scene in the sanctuary was made more brilliant by the presence of two bishops—our own Rt. Rev. Bishop McQuaid and Most Rev. Dr. Clancy, Bishop of Elphin County, Sligo, Ireland. Each bishop was vested in the royal purple and precious lace that belong to the vestments of the episcopal dignitaries of the church.

Right Rev. Bishop McQuaid admitted the postulants to the novitiate and received the vows of the novices. Most Rev. Dr. Clancy preached the sermon and celebrated Holy Mass.

The order of the ceremony was as follows: The hour appointed for the ceremony was eight o'clock, but it was 8.30 when to the stirring strains of the organ playing an inspiring processionary march, the bishops and priests entered the sanctuary, passing through the main aisle of the chapel.

Following is a list of the attending clergymen: Very Rev. Thomas F. Hickey, V. G., Cathedral; Very Rev. Dean McDonald, M. R., Geneva, N. Y.; Rev. P. J. Lynch, Sligo, Ireland; M. O'Dwyer, Elmira, N. Y.; J. Moriarty, Waverly, N. Y.; J. Breslinhae, Churchville, N. Y.; S. Fitzsimmons, Lima, N. Y.; A. M. O'Neill and W. Gleason, Immaculate Conception Church; D. Carran and J. Winter, Corpus Christi; Rev. T. A. Hendrick, St. Bridget's, Rochester; Angelo Lugero, Chaplain Nazareth Normal School; George Eisler, St. Bernard's Seminary; J. Van Ness, Holy Rosary Church; E. Gaffel, G. V. Burns, P. Golding and Dr. Nolan of the Cathedral; B. Gommenginger, Caledonia, N. Y.; J. Dougherty, Detroit, Mich., and E. Lapham, St. Bernard's Seminary.

The clergy having reached the sanctuary, the grand organ changed its tones, and the sweet notes of "Come, Thou Bride of Christ," were heard, and in response thereto the nine young ladies entered, preceded by the cross bearer, Miss Minnie M. Stand, and six children, all clad in white and wearing pretty wreaths of flowers, each two bearing between them flower trimmed baskets containing the habits and veils of the new novices.

The sweet joyous faces, the stately and graceful steps of the postulants, in bridal array of silken trains, flimsy veils and orange blossoms, all bespoke the happy brides, and any one not convinced of their happiness must quickly believe it when the firm, but gentle voices so pleasingly besought the venerable bishop to admit them to the rigorous life of the novitiate.

As this band of volunteers in the army of Christ left the chapel to don the humble garb of a sister of St. Joseph, many a head bent low to hide the tears that started unbidden to the eyes of parents and relatives, as they considered the sacrifice their loved ones were making.

The band of novices, carrying lighted tapers, now approached, led by the Rev. Mother and her assistant, and kneeling, begged to be admitted to the full membership of the order. The novices proposed are as follows:

Sister M. Emerita Bernhardt, Sister M. Raymond Walsh, Sister Febronja Lannan, Sister Josephine Ibbittson, Sister Irmalina Clancy, Sister Clement Smith, Sister Irmalina Wall, Sister Leonilla Murphy.

The presence of Most Rev. Dr. Clancy was owing to the fact that his niece, Sister M. Irmalina, made her first vows. He came from his island home to be present on this happy occasion, as also to attend the reception of three young ladies of his diocese, who are now novices in the order.

The names given the young ladies received are as follows: Miss Louisa Frits, Sister Mary Walburge; Miss Louisa Morgan, Sister Mary St. James; Miss Catherine Stokes, Sister Rose Innes; Miss Sarah Paine, Sister Rita Marie; Miss Helen Lannan, Sister Mary Georgina; Miss Sarah McGuire, Sister Mary Oswin; Miss Catherine Nevin, Sister Mary Lella; Miss Rosanna McDermott, Sister Mary Aidan; Miss Margaret M. O'Brien, Sister Mary Adelaide.

A reception was held during the day in the convent parlors, so that the newly professed and the novices might receive the congratulations of their parents, relatives and friends.

The sermon by Most Rev. Dr. Clancy was listened to with much attention by the immense audience that had gathered to do honor to the auspicious event. The musical programme was rendered by the concert choir, assisted by some of the pupils of the Academy.

(Two of the young ladies above mentioned, Mary Ann and Helen Lannan, are daughters of our esteemed friend Mr. Thomas Lannan, Summerside. The first named, who went to Rochester seven years ago, taught school for some time at Little Pond, Albany Plains and Avonville. Her father's school at East Baltic for four years and subsequently at Cardigan North. They have many friends in these places who will be rejoiced to learn of them choosing the better part.—HERALD.)

Another Fatal Shooting Accident

A dreadful accident took place at Lower Montague on Saturday afternoon. Lawrence Kelly, of French Creek, went away from home to go rabbit shooting. His mother tried to persuade him not to go, having a presentiment that some danger was impending. He went, however, but as he did not return during the evening some of the neighbors went in search of him, but he was not to be found. The search was resumed on Sunday morning, and about seven the searchers were horrified to find his lifeless remains in the woods on George Wright's farm, about a mile from home. A dog belonging to John Jeffrey warned the party by barking of the discovery. The body was face downwards with the empty gun, an old fashioned single muzzle loader, and four rabbits deceased had shot, lying close at hand. One side of the head was completely blown away, and every particle of clothing, excepting a portion of underclothing on the back, had been burnt off, down to the tops of the boots. The fish was a charred mass, burned in some places half an inch deep, and the features disfigured beyond semblance of human shape.

BETHLEHEM.

Outside the walls of Bethlehem Town, All in the light starlight, A little lamb walked up and down, And cried into the night.

No other lambkin of the fold So flawless and so fair, No other sound upon the world Fell on the midnight air. And tenderly the shepherd said, "For thee no gold, nor price, So pure thou art from foot to head, Dear Lamb of Sacrifice!"

Inside the walls of Bethlehem Town A new-born infant smiled, And seraphs bright with song look down Upon the Holy Child.

Shepherds their Shepherd saw amazed, And bowed them to the floor, Kings on a mightier Monarch, gazed, And gave Him costly store.

But she, whose silent pondering In paths prophetic trod, Knew she had borne that Holy Thing

Which was the Lamb of God, —Ziella Cocke, in December Lipicott's.

Blandine of Betharram.

BY J. M. CAVE.

(American Messenger of the Sacred Heart.)

PART II.

"It shall be as heaven will," said the good lady. "Not for any selfish wish of mine will I hold back from helping to deliver that sweet innocent."

"You do well," said her husband, who at once took up on himself the duty of opening up correspondence with Graf Z.

To be asked to do a favor for his old pupil was a source of immense joy to Mr. Barde, so long shut out from companionship with all save menials. He took no part in the nightly reunions held at Karloff.

He showed the letter to his wife, who, at first suspicious, finally came to the conclusion that it had nothing to do with any of Blandine's friends.

She, too, felt elated at being in correspondence with the house of Z. Gregory was invited to fill the post of confidential attendant to Mr. Barde himself, who would answer for his safety till such time as he should be recalled by his master.

Henceforth it will be only through Gregory's letters that news of Blandine can reach her friends.

The first letter, that long-looked-for assurance of her safety, brought not a lull to the heart of Margaret Dacre. A precious letter it was, full of information concerning her darling, full of consolation.

Gregory told how he had been many months at Karloff, in close attendance upon his new master, before he could say more than that the young girl looked well. He saw her at a distance, sometimes, either in company with Miss Sophie, or little Master Barde, the foolish lad, who kept the household on the quiver for accidents, by his mania for creating excitement, and his thirst for signs of danger or horror. His joy was to see a village in flames.

And this was no uncommon sight from the tower of the house. Master Ferdinand would have fired them every one, for the pleasure of watching the consternation and grief of the hapless peasants.

He learned that she was gaining great influence over the dreadful boy, whom the peasants looked upon as an evil spirit. They made no secret of their belief that all the misfortunes that befall their crops, or cattle, or household goods were owing to the demon within him. They prayed for his death. They thought he ought to be put to death or put out of the way, for only harm could come of him.

As the young girl gained in influence over him, so it came about that he was allowed to visit the apartments of Mr. Barde, and thus Gregory made his acquaintance. Soon it became safe to let him pay a daily visit, without fear of a catastrophe. He was very talkative, when in good humor, and could mimic every one with the utmost ease. He began to enjoy the freedom purchased by his good behavior, while attributing all the credit to himself and his own cleverness.

"I have changed things in this house," says Rattle, "I am sick of cry-babies, and onwards, and sneaks I have a new sister. I give Sophie in the Domovay. She says she'll give me to him, and he'll stuff me up the chimney some night, and in the morning there'll be an old owl hooting in the hallow oak, and some one must shoot the old grey screech owl, and when he's dead she'll have a new brother. So I'm not going to wait for that, you know. I have a new sister, who isn't afraid of Domovay." She's a good sister, the new one.

"Who is this new sister?" asked Mr. Barde.

"What do you want to know for, Uncle Charles? Perhaps you'd like to take her away from me? Take Sophie, she's a sneak, and ready to kill poor little flies."

"I knew a little boy once who killed flies, and tried to kill little birds!"

"He doesn't do it now," cried Rattle proudly. "His new sister told him it was mean and cowardly, and he hates cowards. I—I say, I—Uncle Charles," Rattle stammered in his eagerness to change the subject, "I say, why don't you come out of this room? Come out, do, and take me up in the loft. Sophie says you have the keys, and there are all sorts of beautiful things up there!"

"There is nothing in the loft that could amuse you, my boy. Sophie is mistaken. There is only a quantity of old rubbish there. We shall speak of it another time. You may go now."

Gregory opened the door and Rattle withdrew. Had Gregory not been there the refusal might have borne unpleasant consequences for Uncle Charles.

"I know a way to get there without his keys," muttered Rattle under his breath, "and if I do, I'll burn some of the old rubbish he wants to keep all for himself."

He tried to be as good as his word without much delay. The next night he made his way along the gallery that ran round two sides of the house, climbed like a wild cat up the great wooden water spout, out upon the projecting roof of a porch, whence a beam gave him access to a little window under the loft. His ascent had been perilous in the extreme, Rattle was unconscious of any danger.

Seeing a great pile of muslin curtains and draperies lying near, he dragged them towards a trunk and piled them around it. Then he struck a light, the lace flamed up and the mad child danced and shouted with glee. "I'll go back now," he said, "and cry fire."

But he could not long happily out of the window and scream with all his force. His cries alarmed the dogs, then the watchmen. A ladder was quickly brought and Gregory carried the terrified boy down in his arms.

"Gregory," he whispered, "I know they'll want to kill me now. Please look me up with my sister Sacha."

"Do not be afraid," said Gregory. "No one shall hurt you. Where is sister Sacha?" She was there waiting in great anxiety, for the house was in imminent danger, the flames had made such headway. She led the way to her own room, and placed Rattle in her own bed, while Gregory hastened back to give what help he could. Blandine uttered not a word of reproach. She covered the shivering limbs and prepared a warm drink, and tried her best to soothe the insane terror of the little culprit, who kept whispering: "I know they'll want to kill me now."

She assured him, as Gregory had done, that no one would hurt him, but she had to let him see her lock the door before he would resign himself to lay his head on the pillow. He was ill and in danger of death for weeks, delicious most of the time, and frantically calling out for Gregory or his sister Sacha to save him. And that was how Gregory came to speak to Blandine for the first time. He had been obliged to wait for months before he could give her the blessed consolation of a message from her loved ones. By Rattle's bedside he finally slipped into her hands her

"I must go to her now. She will be lonesome for me, she loves me. Good-bye, Uncle Charles, thank you for letting me sit beside you in the big chair. Take me Gregory."

Gregory took him and carried him to Blandine.

And now the useful, beautiful country life is coming to an end. A whole year and more has elapsed since the lawn was gay with laughter, the laughter of little Rattle, who was as merry as a bird, lying in the sunshine on the pleasant terrace. And songs were sung that summer long, for Rattle's entertainment. Blandine sang the hymns she learned at Betharram, and Rattle's favorite was the "Ave Maria Stella," which she had to repeat over and over again. The songs and the sunshine of that summer are ended. Rattle is quiet. The clouds are gathering. Madame is coming home from abroad with a guest. She is impatient to come, but seems waiting for something. When she hears that there has been a grave dug on the hill yonder, near the church, she fixes the day and the hour. And she comes with the guest, who proves to be no stranger to Blandine; no stranger and no friend. And there shall be changes manifold, henceforth, in the family life at Karloff.

That Cough Hangs On

You have used all sorts of cough remedies but it does not yield, it is too deep seated. It may wear itself out in time, but it is more liable to produce la grippe, pneumonia or a serious throat affection. You need something that will give you strength and build up the body.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

will do this when everything else fails. There is no doubt about it. It nourishes, strengthens, builds up and makes the body strong and healthy, not only to throw off this hard cough, but to fortify the system against further attacks. If you are run down or emaciated you should certainly take this nourishing food medicine.

SCOTT & BOWNE, TORONTO CANADA

B.B.B. Makes Blood Pure.

If the blood is pure the whole body will be healthy. If the blood is impure the whole system becomes corrupted with its impurities.

Burdock Blood Bitters transforms impure and watery blood into rich pure blood and builds up the health.

Disease germs cannot lurk in the system when B.B.B. is used.

Miss Effe McDonald, Lacombe Mills, Guy Co., N.S., writes: "I have found B.B.B. an excellent remedy for purifying the blood and curing sick headache. I had tried many remedies, but none of them did me much good. B.B.B. has made me so well that I feel like a new woman and I am constantly recommending it to my friends."

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP.

This pleasant remedy heals and soothes the lungs and bronchial tubes, and cures lingering and chronic coughs when other remedies fail.

A young man contemplating matrimonial felicity took his intended to the home of his parents that she might be introduced to the old folks.

"This is my future wife," said the young man, proudly turning to paternal family, who was a canny Scot.

"Now, father, tell me candidly what you think of her."

The old man eyed the blushing bride-elect for fully two minutes, then answered with deliberation, "Well, John, I can only say you have shown much better taste than she has."

Professional Men.

It's the constant strain and worry under which the professional man labors, the irregularity of his hours, and the loss of rest that makes him peculiarly susceptible to kidney troubles.

First it's backache, then urinary difficulties, then unless it's attended to by Bright's Disease and death.

Biram Wood Tragedy. The examination into the tragedy of November 18th, when Captain C. M. Morris, master of the British bark Biram Wood, shot and killed the steward, Charles Jeffries, and three days later jumped overboard and was drowned, has ended at Mobile, Ala.

The affair took place as described by the mate on the craft's arrival at Mobile. Suspicion was entertained that there had been foul play, resulting in the murder of the captain and steward, but this has been set at rest by the following letter in Captain Morris's handwriting:

"Bark Biram Wood, Nov. 29, 1901. To whom it may concern: This is to certify that I have shot and killed the steward, Charles Jeffries, and I shall pay the penalty at my own hand. Let no man censure me too badly, but pray God that he may never be placed in the same position. What I have done was no part of my nature. I have done no man willful wrong. I write this to clear the officers and crew of any part in what has happened, not to clear myself in any way, or to ask sympathy from the world. I know what I have done and the sin I have committed.

"C. M. MORRIS. Worms affect a child's health too seriously to neglect. Sometimes they cause convulsions and death. If you suspect them to be present, give Dr. Lyle's Pleasant Worm Syrup, which destroys the worms without injuring the child. Price 25c.

MARCONI IN NEWFOUNDLAND.

William Marconi, inventor of wireless telegraphy, arrived at St. John's, Nfld., on Friday accompanied by two assistants and bringing two portable balloons, which will be employed in suspending wires to be used in making his experiments. He will probably select Signal Hill, overlooking St. John's, which is topped with the Cabot memorial tower and is 600 feet high, as a site for his station, instead of Cape Race, as previously reported. He expects to transmit messages 400 miles, thus reaching ships when they are in midocean. He will spend three or four weeks in experimenting in St. John's, and will then proceed to Nantuxet.
