This introduction to the present letter may sound vain glorious-but let it, if it only serve te impress on the reader the fremen dous importance of what follows.

It would be easy enough to write this week about the Consistory at which the Holy Father is to create four (or is it five?) cardinals, or about the horrible situation which is about to be produced for the Catholies of Franch by the pernicious law for the separation of Church and State, now almost passed both houses of the legislature; or about the mison of the Bishop of Portland to the Mikado of Japan.

But all these matters shrink into insignificance before what one of the most prominent and learned of the Roman Oardinals described to Vox Urbis as "The Hereey of the Day." It has not yet reached the United States; but, let there be no illusion on the point, it will make its way across the water before long.

We especially wish to emphasize these views in consequence of continued misreprepresentation with regard to Canada's feeling's and attitude."

Thus it is with time; the future no soone becomes present than it is mediately merged into the past The present is a mere point of time; it is but the dividing line between the future and the past The past and the future ar roperly speaking the two divisions of time. This is the great difference, as regards duration, between time and eternity. Time is divided into past and future but eternity has no past and no future, it is all present.

The year 1905 like its predece ors has had its remarkable events different parts of the world It is not our intention to deal at lennth with many these; but to refer briefly to son of those which have come under general observation. The treaty of Portsmouth, in consequence which peace was proclaimed between Russia and Japan, was an event of world-wide importance in which all civilized nations were interested. Internal troubles of most serious nature have since fallen to the lot of Russia. At the closing exercises of the Union Commercial College for the Christmas holidays on Thursday evening last, the following address was presented to Principal Moran by the College students:

COMMERCIAL COLLEGE,

DEAR SIR -- We, the students o the U. C. C, desire to take this oppor tunity of expressing to you our high nsure the return of Canadians who appreciation of the college of which we are proud to be students, and of the patient, skilful and successful work accomplished by you as

The work in the shorthand depart ment, over which you preside, has during the past term, been even above the high standard of former years. Your long experience as a teacher of short-hand, and your great skill in that art, give your students a great advantage in this respect. The perfect order maintained without effort of the Militia, without regard to the and the close attention to work, coneeds of the country, with no definite stantly demanded from your classes are an unmistakable tribute to you skill as a Principal,

Aided by your able and competent assistant, Mr. E. S. Eaton, of the busibanished from the administration of the ness department, you have succeeded in pushing the U. C. C. to the very front, not only in the opinion of the students but in the opinion of the business public as well

The large number of graduates of this college now filling responsible and lucrative positions at home and abroad, to the entire satisfaction of their employers, is ample proof o the high quality of your work.

We beg you to accept the accom panying gift as a small token of esteem and with best wishes for the consion of treaties and by placing our tinued prosperity of the college and yourself, and extending to you the compliments of the season, we are.

The Christmas market, on Friday and Friday. An abundance of commodities changed hands, and the farmers and market men obtained good prices for what they had to sell. The roads were good and the weather moderate; consequently the attendance at the shops was large, Saturday evening a rushing business was done and the streets were crowded with people. Yesterday the attendence at the market was small. Price were about the same as last week. Pork stiffened in price again and yesterday brought 8 cents and 8 a pound.

Yesterday morning the Steamer Prin cess started from here for Pictou; but when she got as far as the vicinity of the bell buoy she encountered so much ice that she returned to the wharf. Shortly afterwards the Northumberland arrived from Pictou. This completed the work of the summer steamer for the year. The naturally be expected to be ready to take up the work at once. But she was not could not be under steam for twenty-four hours, and would not leave till this morn ing. This left us without outward mail and passenger communication yesterday o inward to-day. Mails for the western route left here last night at 9 o'clock and are expected inward to-day. It seem evitable that a hitch in the matter winter communication must occurr at the beginning of every winter.

"And Thou Bethlehem"

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

We love to think of Bethlebem. That little mountain town To which on earth's first Christma

Our Blessed Lord came down A lowly manger for His bed, The cattle near in stall. There, cradled close in Mary's arms He slept, the Lord of all.

If we had been in Bethlehem, We too had hasted, fain To see the Babe whose little face Knew neither care nor pain. Like any little child of ours He came unto His own.

Through cross and shame before him stretched His pathway to His throne.

If we had dwelt in Bethlehem. We would have followed fast, And where the star bad led our feet Have knelt ere dawn was past.

been An offering, as He lay, The blessed Babe of Bethlehem In Mary's arms that day.

Now breaks the latest Christmas Again the angels sing,

And far and near the children throng Their happy lymns to bring. All heaven is stirred! All earth is glad!

Far down the shining way The Lord Who came to Bethlehem Comes yet on Christmas Day!

The Russian Manifesto.

We greatly fear that the Czar's there is nothing whatever in the Manifesto, over which so many shape of a guarantee. A Cabinet people both in Russia and the West has, it is true, been appointed, with have been throwing up their cape Count Witte as its Premier. But with joy, is only a step in a revolu-Count Witte's policy is extremely tion which, for good or for evil, is nebulous; there is a threat in the still on its road to some destined but first portion of the Manifesto which obscure end. We write without any would allow of almost unlimited reof the prejudice which seems to be pression by the bayonet; while excited by the very name of Russia. We desire a liberalized Russian Monchats with municipalities and interarchy, and not a Russia blown into viewers always contents himself with fragments, with a consequent misery saying that the things they want are to a hundred and fifty millions of white people, and still less a Russian eral Trepoff, which could be decreed Republic, which would in all probaat once. The only clear sign that bility end in the rise of some great the old regime has ended is that the soldier of the Suvaroff type, who, Procurator of the Holy Synod, Pobsupported by a most ignorant peasantry, would slmost certainly try to solidify his position by the conquest of the civilized nations of Central and Western Europe. We are familiar with the workings of that process a century ago, and, though Russia is not France, the Russian people bave an immovable confidence in the greatness of their fature position in the world. Nor, we must add, do we entertain quite the contempt for the present occupant of the Russian throne which it is in so many quarters the fashion to express. He is not equal to his position; but that is a misfortune, not a orime, and we do not think it quite fair to ascribe everything be does to want of personal courage. Bemused as every modern King is by the precedent of the French Terror, it is not unreasonable that he should pro vide means of escape for his family by sea; he has no intention of departing himself, and be may well have been moved to his recent " sur renders" by causes other than the fear of any personal consequences. Just think of it for a moment. Here is the head of the greatest Monarchy in the world, who believes that he holds his power from God, who is entirely unconscious of any illwill towards his people, and who at the end of a sanguinary war, in which to his own utter amazement, he was defeated by what he had thought an inferior Asiatio State, is suddenly told by a moral explosion as sharp and as unexpected as the outburst of a volcano that his people of all grades, all professions, and all positions abhor a regime which to himself must have seemed God-derived. Think what we curselves should feel if on some day of vast excitement every dumb oreature spoke, and spoke in accents of hatred to ourselves. It would be something other than fear, surely, that would induce us to reconsider everything, and attempt, with such dim light as he had, to remove the grievances of which those voices complained. The Czar, bis vague ideae, bis vacillations, the cruelties which he sanctions, and which seem to him as necessary as a death-sentence to an English Red Judge, we except as facte, and subjects for pity rather than for scorn. The first lesson to be learned from them as we have repeated ever since the Japanese War began, is the want of ability among the ruling groups of Russia. An entire people has risen to demand toat the system under which they and their fathers have lived shall come to a summary end, and those who have administered that system cannot comprehend the prayer, are simply bewildered, and unable to decide whether they ought to resist or to yield. The want of ability is positively astounding. Not one of them all is able to speak plain-a power which Mirabeau at least possessed. The Czer himself maunders over his sorrows, as if in the deaththroes of a nation the sorrows even of a Monarch mattered to mankind : the revolutionary statesmen recommend volleys, as if bullets could stop water from flowing; and the Liberal statesmen concede everything in words, quite honestly, but with a complete want of perception that when the house is on fire it is no use to talk about what you will do tomorrow. The Czar's Manifesto, if he means it, if he does not withdraw it, and if the Army and bureaucracy will allow him to carry it out, does Our gifts, our songs, our prayers had terminate the autocracy," for he surrenders the power of legislation. concedes to the Duma a veto on legislation—that is, on the first essential "right" of the autocracy-and agrees, in the supplement of his proclamation, that the Dama shall grant the "four liberties" as they are called: the right of speech, freedom of the Press, the right of meeting, and the inviolability of the person," which means, we presume, that the practice of punishing by administrative decree shall be abolished. But nothing is actually done, or intended to be done until the Duma meets; and the very basis of that body is made uncertain, for the electoral law is to be altered, and

The Origin Of Watches

The invention of watches dates from about the year 1500, when one Peter Henlein, a locksmith in the old German city of Nuremburg, invented a portable timepiece, whose mechanism resembled that of the German clocks of that day, save in the particular that the moving power consisted of a steel spring instead of weights and pendulum. These first watches were large, clumsy egg shaped affairs; and for a long time, even after other European countries commenced to manufacture them, all watches were known by the nickname of Nuremburger Eggs.

Thus began the manufacture of what has since been developed into the most marvellously perfect mechanical product of human hands. The watches of to-day are the lineal descendants of those quaint old Nuremburger Eggs.

If the watches we now show are not quite perfection they are certainly hearly as much so as we may hope to get both in style and time-Call and see our New Regina and Wal-
