Cut Your Fuel Bills 1/3

You should know how important it is to weather strip your house and buildings. Weatherstrips keep out cold and actually save one third of your fuel expense. Fuel is as high as ever and there is very little chance that its cost will come down soon. It is too expensive to waste.

Not only can you keep out cold by installing Ceco Metal Weatherstrips, but your house is kept free from dust, dirt and soot, and the disturbance of street noises.

Ceco Metal Weatherstrips are economically installed; they last as long as the building. They are cheaper than storm sash and are far more effective.

No matter whether your house is in the process of construction or old as the hills, let us show you without obligation the convenience and effectiveness of this most practical weatherstrip on the market.

Lord Cecil's Dilemma

The Picnic

Woodall Forest

CHAPTER XX.

"It was at the Craythornes' place on Tuesday," he continued, "and they talked of paying Hastings a surprise visit."

Gladys felt her face redden with annoyance. Why would these people get into affairs that did not concern them?

"Indeed!" she said, indifferently, and Lord Cecil was delighted to think that she did not care. He wondered what had made him so blind as to imagine that Lady Gladys loved the young baronet. After all, it might have been but a harmless flirtation. She had declared this, and he knew that she would never stoop to an untruth.

"Yes; I think it is one of Miss Ada's moves. Anybody can see that she is madly in love with Sir Charles."

"That is an unkind speech, Lord Cecil!"

Gladys even smiled. There was no trace of jealousy, and the young peer decided that he would not trouble the earl that day. There was really no need to press matters unduly. He would come again, in a day or two, feeling sure that Gladys would be forced to listen to his suit, after the earl had urged the young man's claim.

He felt annoyed with Lord Howard for wasting time, for he had been assured by Collins, the earl's steward, that his way would be immediately made clear.

"It is the truth," he went on. "The Craythornes are not particular about throwing themselves directly at a fellow's head. I have been bothered myself with Flossie, and I think that this may have had something to do with your coolness toward me of late."

"Then disabuse your mind of the idea at once, Lord Cecil," the earl's daughter said. "Your attentions to poor Flossie have been noticed by everyone, and your remarks are cowardly. If I have been cool toward you of late, it is because you presume upon our old acquaintance to speak of what you have not the gift of understanding."

He flushed redly, then his face turned deadly pale. His blue eyes grew almost black.

"Gladys Howard, are you trying your best to madden me?" he shouted.

"My lord, you forget yourself!" was the haughty and freezing rejoinder.

"Why will you goad me in this manner?" His face was sullen. "You speak to me as though I were something beneath you, while I am ready to devote my life to you. This shade has only occurred since you saw Hastings. I was well enough until then. No, no; let me tell you the plain truth. You will have to learn it soon. The earl has promised you to me, and he cannot retract! You will be my wife, as surely as you stand there! I came to have an understanding with you, and with him to-day. He is not doing his part, and I shall come again to-morrow."

"I shall never be your wife, Lord Cecil, and if you come again to-morrow, or any other time, I shall decline to see you," Gladys replied, coldly, her eyes flashing with contempt and abhorrence. "I cannot loathe you!"

She turned to leave him, an unaccountable dread at her heart.

"We shall see!" he sneered. "You had better not make an enemy of me. Within three months, I will either lead you to the altar, or your father to the grave."

He stopped, and cast a vindictive glance toward her; then, with a savage imprecation, strode away.

Lady Gladys was completely bewildered; her heart throbbled into her throat, until she felt that she was choking. She tottered, rather than walked, back to the house, while the brutal young peer crashed homeward through the park.

She met Mademoiselle Lamartine in the hall, and the maid was scared by her white face—by the way, she trembled.

"I heard that Lord Cecil was quarrelling with you, my lady," she said. "Pray do not be distressed. Come to your apartments and rest."

Gladys permitted herself to be led away by the goodnatured Frenchwoman, and when she was calmer, she asked if the earl had risen.

"Yes, my lady, I saw him a few minutes since."

"Thank you, Lamartine. I will bathe my face and go down. Is Lady Marcia better?"

"A little better, but her head is still aching badly."

She brushed her mistress' hair in an aimless, preoccupied manner. Then she stammered out something, and continued:

"You will excuse me, my lady, but I have something I must tell you."

"Certainly, Lamartine."

"It is about Lord Cecil Stanhope, my lady. He is not a gentleman, and it is only right that you should know."

Lady Gladys felt her face burning, but she replied, steadily: "I am not interested in Lord Stanhope, Lamartine. I detest the man. He presumes upon an old acquaintance. I shall certainly refuse to see him again."

"He is not a gentleman, my lady, even if he does bear a title. He offered me money to tell him about you, my lady, and Sir Charles Hastings. When I refused, he told me to keep my tongue between my teeth or it would be the worse for me. I laughed at him, but I did not mention it to you; I did not wish to make trouble."

"I am surprised to hear this, Lamartine," said Lady Gladys.

"And that is not all, my lady. I repeat that he is not a gentleman," continued the maid. "His own servants dislike him. They say that he swears at his mother, Lady Stanhope—that her life is a misery. She is very much afraid of him."

"It is not wise to listen to idle gossip, Lamartine," reproved Lady Gladys.

"But he makes bets with his coachman, my lady. His coachman is a sporting expert, and introduces all kinds of turfdogs to his master. He was in the Swinford Arms, the other night, my lady, and the butler heard that he had a bet with Lord Cecil Stanhope about you! Is it not terrible!"

"About me!" ejaculated the earl's daughter.

"Yes, my lady, Lord Stanhope and his coachman—a man who drinks beer and chews tobacco—have made a bet about you, and the coachman wanted to bet with the butler that you would be Lady Stanhope before Christmas."

The French maid paused, adding: "I knew that our butler would not make a mistake, my lady. He was dreadfully angry, and would have told my lord, your father, only I advised him not to do it, at present. I should not have told you now, only I saw that Lord Cecil was causing you annoyance."

"I am much obliged to you, Lamartine," Lady Gladys whispered. "Pray pay no attention in future to such foolish gossip."

She sat in silent thought for some time, her heart filled with bitterness. Then she rose, and resolved to see her father without further delay, and repeat to him the threats of Lord Stanhope. The earl would have to sever the acquaintance. She could never speak to the boorish young peer again. She felt that she could never forgive him; that their friendship was a thing of the past. Had Lady Marcia been well, she would have first confided in her, but it was her father's duty, now that he had returned home, to protect her from cowards.

She sent Lamartine downstairs, to inquire if he had gone out or not. The maid returned with the news that the earl was in his private sitting-room, and had been asking for Lady Gladys.

"I will go to him," she said. "And, Lamartine, say nothing of what you have told me to any one."

"No, my lady. You can trust me," Gladys walking slowly down to her father's sitting-room. He seemed to have a dislike for the library. He had never entered it since his interview with Collins.

He looked up as she entered, and she was startled by the gray line of his face. He had complained that he was unwell—the sudden change in his mode of life had temporarily unsettled him. That was all.

He smiled, faintly, at his daughter, and motioned to her to close the door.

"Good-morning, Gladys," he said. "You are looking somewhat pale, dear!"

She strove to reply, but instead, burst into a passion of tears.

Chancellor of Exchequer Makes Important Statement -- Quaker's Meeting at the Hague -- Mount Everest Climbing Expedition Abandoned -- Week End Fighting in Ireland.

GREAT BRITAIN FINANCIALLY STRONGER

LONDON, July 14. -- Declaring that the world's financial situation is still serious but that Britain is stronger financially than at any time since the Armistice, Sir Robert Horne, Chancellor of the Exchequer, delivered an address in the Commons on the third day of the Finance bill. He said that the present rate of exchange of the pound to the dollar is the best Britain's debt to the United States was nine hundred and thirty-eight million pounds.

THE HAGUE DEADLOCK

THE HAGUE, July 14. -- Both Russians and non-Russians are sitting sadly on the Scheveningen pier to-night, each delegation waiting for the other to make some move which may resuscitate the expiring conference in Russian affairs. The Russians say they will not attend another session, unless they are invited, and the non-Russians say they are willing to meet with the Russians if Livinoff will bring in new proposals.

THE RAILROAD STRIKE SITUATION

WASHINGTON, July 14. -- While optimism as to the outcome of the White House today, there was further evidence that the administration means to keep a firm grasp on the situation and that every force of the command of the Government will be utilized to insure maintenance of the necessary interstate transportation. Summarizing the strike situation as shown by Government reports received from various departments to-day, War Secretary Weeks said trouble was most noticeable in the South Western region although there were instances in various states, including Missouri, Kentucky, Ohio, and California. The War Secretary said all corps commanders had general instructions to be on the alert and act promptly on orders that might come to them, but only in regard to the situation. Denison had any specific instructions been sent from Washington that force of troops sufficient to maintain the line be held immediately in readiness.

EVEREST CLIMB ABANDONED

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 4. -- The Public Ledger in a cable dispatch from London to-night announced that the expedition to climb Mt. Everest had been abandoned as a result of an avalanche in which seven persons were killed. Three members of the expedition, C. E. Mallory, T. H. Somerville, and C. A. Crawford had narrow escapes.

MYSTERIOUS FIRING IN DUBLIN

DUBLIN, July 14. -- A sensation was caused this afternoon by a great outburst of gunfire in the vicinity of Mount Joy Prison, lasting nearly ninety minutes. The exact location or cause was not known, but it was rumored it came from the interior of the prison. Large crowds collected and among the many theories suggested was that the firing was brought on by an attempt to overpower the guards. Inquiry at the prison this evening was productive of no information, the statement merely being made that no prisoners had escaped. A report was current here to-day, that the Irregulars in Cork had seized the Banks and all the money they could lay hands on, amounting to two hundred thousand pounds, but the report could not be confirmed.

FIGHTING IN SLIGO

BELFAST, July 14. -- Sharp prolonged fighting is reported from the town of Sligo, which, according to accounts received here was captured by Irregulars from the Free State troops, who, upon being reinforced, recaptured it.

Regatta Committee Meeting.

The regular weekly meeting of the Regatta Committee was held in the T. A. Armoury last evening and was largely attended. The minutes of the previous meeting were read by Secretary Noonan, and adopted. A communication was read from the Secretary of the Guards Old Comrades' Association, asking if it were possible to include an Old Comrades' Race in the programme as their Association was prepared to enter a crew. In case three boats enter, the race may be considered by the committee. President Hancock, on behalf of the Refreshment Committee, announced they had only received one tender from the C.L.B. Ladies' Auxiliary for supplying the luncheon for the members of the Committee. On motion of Mr. P. F. Collins, seconded by Mr. J. P. Crotty, and supported by Mr. P. F. Moore, M.H.A., this tender was accepted.

The President announced that he had an interview with Lord Morris who is enthusiastic over the Regatta and will be present as a guest of the Committee. Lord Morris will also be forwarding a donation to the Committee to be put to any use they may think fit.

Hon. W. J. Ellis thanked the committee for appointing him an honorary member and announced his annual contribution of $2.00 gold pieces to the winning crew in the Tradesmen's Race.

It was decided that the crews in the Amateur, Mercantile, Football, Juvenile, Intermediate, Factory and War Veterans Races will enter on Friday night next, the 21st inst. The collectors handed in a favorable report, but more money is still required to finance the Regatta, and the collectors hope to finalize their work before the next meeting.

The Truckmen's Union forwarded the sum of $15.00 towards the cost of the Regatta.

Vice-President C. E. Hunt, of the Football League announced that the League would again donate a silver cup for the Football Race.

Mr. J. P. Crotty thought that the matter of allowing fishermen to compete in the Intermediate Race, was not in accord with the spirit of the race or the intention of Mr. Brophy, who was instrumental in having the race placed on the list. A lengthy discussion ensued, practically every member taking part, but no decision was reached. On motion of Mr. C. W. Ryan, seconded by Mr. E. W. Jeanz, the matter was left over for a special meeting on Tuesday night next so as to allow the representatives of the Reid Mtd. Co. to be present.

Before the meeting closed, Mr. P. F. Collins announced that he would introduce a motion at the special meeting to have a Fishermen's Intermediate Race added to the programme so as to allow the young lads of the nearby settlements to compete. He thought that as there was a possibility that the Press and Veterans' Races would be scratched, that it would be a good idea to include this race.

The meeting then adjourned until Tuesday next, at 8.30 p.m.

"East Lynn."

THE TYPE OF STORY NEEDED ON THE SCREEN.

The tremendous agitation now going on over the United States to place rigid censorship on the motion picture world is entirely unnecessary -- even now it is greatly exaggerated -- if we saw more productions like that of "East Lynn". This recreation of the famous story has been produced by Hugo Ballin as a Hodkinson release and will be seen at the Nickel Theatre soon.

In "East Lynn" we have a tale that has kept its popularity for sixty years among the millions who read it as a book and saw it as a play. It has survived not only for its dramatic strength, its sympathy and the great names of the stage that have been associated with it, but primarily because of its wholesomeness. Only what is straightforward and clean can stand the test of time -- especially in this country where the lurid and the lewd is but a matter of the moment.

Received Farewell Orders.

S.A. OFFICERS GO TO CANADA. Brigadier Prescott, S.A., who for the past eighteen months has been divisional commander of St. John's Division of the Army and also principal of the training garrison will be leaving shortly to take an appointment in Canada. The Brigadier, who is English by birth, has seen considerable service in other countries, particularly France and Belgium where she spent the greater part of her time during the war, helping the unfortunate victims of that great scourge, Captain Froude, who for the past year has been assistant at the training garrison, has also received farewell orders and will accompany the Brigadier to Canada. The best wishes of a host of friends will accompany these officers as they go to their new field of labor.

Grand Falls Memorial.

UNVEILING CEREMONY, JULY 23RD. The Grand Falls Memorial Committee are now busily engaged preparing for the unveiling of their War Memorial which takes place on July 23rd. The unveiling ceremony will be performed by His Excellency the Governor, and it is expected that a large number of visitors, including representatives of the G.W.F.A., will be present. The Memorial, which is a replica, on a smaller scale, of the London Cenotaph, has been erected on the station road, near the hospital. It is a splendid piece of workmanship and was imported direct from England.

Harbor Grace Notes.

Some twenty or so brethren of the Hr. Grace Lodge, A.F. & A.M., went down by the Pawnee to Carbonear on Tuesday evening to attend the installation of the R.W.M. and investiture of the other officers of Lodge Carbonear, A.F. & A.M. The party returned again at 3 a.m.

A good sign of fish is reported for the last few days. It is said that one trap secured thirty quintals on Wednesday, and others took smaller lots. At Bryan's Cove fish are reported as having struck in there in good quantity, and the fishermen are making good hauls. We trust this will continue.

Through a word received in town this week, we learn that Mr. George Pike, who was fishing at Styles' Hr. Labrador, had died there suddenly quite recently. Mr. Pike belongs to Carbonear, and is a brother of the late Mr. Henry Pike, of this town, and whose death occurred about two months ago. We tender our condolence to the bereaved family at Carbonear.

Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Proudfoot and three children of Wabana, are in town visiting District Inspector and Mrs. Sheppard.

Scht. Royle-Bella and motor boat Maud were docked here during the week.

S.S. Senef, on her way to Labrador, arrived in port last evening about 8.30 and left again after a short stay.

No Baby Carriages in Russia.

INFANTS IN ARMS ACCOMPANY MOTHERS EVERYWHERE.

PETROGRAD. -- The sunshine of summer makes evident Russia's lack of baby carriages. There are no trim nurses wheeling babies along the park paths, and only rarely is a perambulator seen at all. Thousands of babies, out for an airing, are carried in their mothers' arms. Occasionally one sees semi-Oriental women, from the Steppes and Turkestan, with their infants strapped across their backs, like American Indian papooses. Russian babies of the peasant type die by thousands in the hot summer and their tiny bodies know few or none of the cooling comforts of screened and shady porches. The use of ice for keeping milk, is practically unknown. But thousands of the hardy little infants go wherever their mothers do; seem to sleep contentedly on their mothers' breasts in crowded box cars or under dripping eaves on rainy days when the parents lie like huddled bundles of rags in the shelter of buildings.

Tourist Traffic.

By every trip of s.s. Kyle to Port aux Basques from North Sydney fresh batches of visitors to our shores arrive, not alone for the relief which change from higher temperatures give them, but for the more active purpose of trying their luck with the rod at the numerous fishing pools which nature has distributed all through that section of the coast from the Codroys to Deer Lake, and made them beauty spots which possess the lure of drawing the stranger from his foreign habitat and bringing him within our gates. The scenic magnificence of the Codroy and Humber Valleys have been frequently praised in pen and poetry. Railway folders and departmental advertising have been brought to the very last word descriptive of the attractions Newfoundland has to offer to the jaded city dweller and overworked financier, statesman and man of business. But of what avail is it to portray by the photographer's art or by the pen of the scenic writer all the advantages of climate and sport that this country has to offer to the dweller without, unless the first essential to the comfort of the summer visitor is provided. In saying this we do not pretend to make the statement that it is original. Dozens, if not more, writers have used exactly the same expression, and made it the subject of their chief argument. Of what use is it to take infinite pains in describing our numerous attractions of fishing and shooting, if we lack the one thing necessary—hotel accommodation. Had we a sufficiency of that, tourists would flock to the beauty spots of our coasts and interior in hundreds when they now come but by scores. The West Coast particularly claims the attention of those who do make annual visits, because being alive to the need of catering to the foreign visitor, the people of that section between the points already noted above, have with commendable enterprise done their utmost in providing hostelries where guests can be entertained in comfort, and thus the influx of Canadian and United States pleasure seekers turns toward that portion of the railway line, along which there are to be found hotels and rest houses. Few venture beyond Deer Lake Eastward: few are attracted to the capital city of St. John's, from which roads to numerous places of attraction radiate as spokes of a wheel. Beyond the round trippers who make casual visits to the while their ships remain in port, and who do not have opportunities of going directly to the heart of the sylvan glades that would be to them a revelation of Nature's grandeur, few tourists on lengthy visits enter Newfoundland through the port of St. John's. Do we have far to seek the reason? Not so. Our disadvantage lies in the one fatal omission of not providing hotel accommodation. Follows then that until someone with faith in such a venture, and enterprise and finance to carry it out, begins making the provision which is lacking, the rural splendors of the Peninsula of Avalon will be unvisited by and unknown to the people of the outside world.

Martin, who is to deliver the address at the morning service in St. Andrew's Church tomorrow, it must be remembered, has been speaking in the Korean or Chinese language for the last six years, and while he has to think of what he is saying, he has also to clothe his thoughts in English words and grammar, and naturally cannot be so fluent in speaking as if he had been using English all through the period mentioned.

Relief Work Closing.

PULPWOOD CUTTING STARTED. It is officially stated that relief work on the roads in St. John's are to be closed down for some time. In the meantime, however, where destitution prevails, work of a nature that will bring some returns is being provided. In this connection, and according to arrangements made with Grand Falls, the Government is giving relief by the cutting of pulpwood. Contractors' agents are now in the different bays north picking up men to go in the woods. Some 55 men from Victoria went out yesterday's train. Others from Trinity Bay are expected to leave on Monday or Tuesday. Mr. Curran's agent is picking up the men in Placentia and St. Mary's Bays some hundreds are badly off. Messrs. Gillingham and Martin are looking after Conception Bay. The pit props cut in Placentia and St. Mary's Bays last winter have not yet been shipped, but four vessels are expected to arrive there in a few days to load for England.

B.L.S.—GUARDS O.

The "knack of the Irish" is proverbial, but never was it more clearly demonstrated than in the much talked of match last night between the Guards and the B.L.S. Pinned in song and story, this little side was the wonderful goal tending of John Phelan and the brilliant defence of Dr. Power, saved the champions from at least a scoreless draw. As regards actual play, honors were about even all thru but the fickle goddess of luck graciously beamed once more on the Harps when, after the game was in progress twenty-five minutes, Eddie Phelan tried a long shot from the full back line which Moore was all set for. Unfortunately the Guards' full back, Rose, cut in and attempted to butt it out with the result that it caromed off the corner of the net—Moore's vision was blocked. 'Twas a pity too, so far as the latter was concerned as he played the game of his young life, handling seven shots in the first period when, after the second without permitting the pigskin to cross the line. John Phelan's saving of eight in the first half and two in the second was, it is said, more spectacular, inasmuch as it was only his original position that enabled him to beat them out. Walter Callahan seemed to have taken on a new lease of life last evening and got right into the game in his regular oldtime manner. His checking and slipping brought thunderous applause from the Irish roots present. The Irish roots were quite weak, and Burke's absence was quite apparent. Behind them, however Power played marvellously well, sharing honors with the two goalies on the evening, and his "let'er come" must have been heart-breaking to the Guards' forwards. In their rushes, Coultas, Ches and Charlie Quick for the vanquished were particularly good though at times their efforts were sadly lacking in support at the critical moments of the game.

It was conceded that the remaining period would find both teams ready to do or die.

The clash drew the largest gate ever recorded at a football match at St. George's Field, being in the vicinity of two hundred and fifty bones. Harry Mitchell had to play against the SRO sign hung out. Referee Hunt took the game away promptly at 7.30, with the Guards choosing to occupy the position of a very slight breeze in their favour. The teams lined up as follows:—

French Fisherman Rescued.

ASRAY FROM SCHOONER SIXTY HOURS.
Two French fishermen, picked up on the Grand Banks by the American schooner Marshall, Capt. John Marshall, of Gloucester, master, arrived in North Sydney on Saturday evening from Canso, where they were landed, says the North Sydney Herald of July 11th. The two young men, Francis Estriault and Celestin Yunguene of St. Solent, France, are members of the crew of the barque Porto, of St. Malo. They got separated from their ship during a heavy fog on the Grand Banks and were at sea for two days and a night before being picked up by the Marshall. The Marshall took the two men to Canso, where they landed and came from there to North Sydney, reporting to the French consul, M. Lacroix, on their arrival here. They are at present guests at the Albert Hotel. M. Lacroix has arranged to send the two young men to St. Pierre from where they will rejoin the Porto. They will leave to-morrow by S.S. Pro Patria.

Nfld. Graduate.

MISS MARY HARRIS HAS SUCCESSFUL YEAR. Among the graduates this year from the Academy of the Sacred Heart, Halifax, was Miss Mary Harris, daughter of the late Hon. Miss Harris attained among other awards, first Medallion and Ribbon of Merit; proxima accessit in the Bronze Medal of Honor competition; Archbishop McCarthy's Gold Medal for success in studies; Gold Medal presented by Rev. Dr. Donahue for success in Christian Doctrine; the Judge Wallace prize for Polite Deportment and the prize for Good Conduct. One prize, especially coveted by the students, is the prize for Excellence. It is rarely given because the requisite qualifications are rarely found in superlative degree. Twenty-six years ago it was last awarded. This year, Miss Mary Harris was the honored recipient. Miss Harris leaves in the fall to enter the Convent of the Sacred Heart at Kenwood, Albany.

Automatic Pump

WORKS AS LONG AS THE WATER SUPPLY LASTS.

A self-operating pump, which it is claimed may be used to pump water to any height entirely on its own operative power, has been invented by Mr. T. G. A. Allen, of Carshalton-place, Carshalton. Atmospheric pressure and the weight of a water column, are the only means of motive power used, and no machinery or attendance it is stated is necessary.

The pump works automatically on the principles of pressure and suction, and consists of a series of closed and open circular chambers placed one above the other in a river bed. Water having been conducted into the middle open chamber, falls into a closed chamber below, and forces out a quantity of air, which in turn is led off into higher closed chambers, already filled with water by the suction of the previous flushing stroke. The air entering these chambers forces out water to a higher level, where it is led off, and the air is sucked back again into the bottom closed chamber which has been emptied by a sluice. A vacuum is thus created in the higher chamber, and water rushes up from the open tank to fill it. The movement is then complete, and automatically recommences.

It is claimed that the pump which is known as a "Hydratomat," may be used extensively for irrigation in the colonies where manual labor and machinery are not available. Once started it will continue working without attendance as long as there is a water supply.

Just Folks.

THE TASK OF TOMORROW.
Success is good to win to-day.
It ends long years of sorrow,
But still keep working on your way.
You must not fall tomorrow.

The finished task is fair to see
And men will cheer for you,
But always to end their life
Another task to do.

The praise of yesterday is stilled,
The laurels grace your brow,
But vain the accolades that you build
If you're a failure now.

Not what you were, but what you are,
The busy world will view;
The past fades like a falling star,
What counts is what you're doing.

Be not content with what you've won,
Success becomes a fetter;
To-day a splendid task was done,
Tomorrow must be better.

Stay humble, spite of men's applause,
From past deeds never borrow,
Don't live on what you've done, because
There's more to do tomorrow.

Water Table of the United States Falls.

UNDERGROUND LEVEL HAS DROPPED 9 FEET IN LAST 50 YEARS.

In every region not absolutely arid there is a point at a certain distance below the surface where the ground is saturated with the water that has percolated through the topsoil or through fissures in the rock. The level that the subsoil water maintains is called the water table. Naturally the level varies in different places.

Water can rise by capillary attraction from 2 to 4 feet above the water table. It often does rise far enough to reach the roots of certain growing crops, and so keeps them alive even in the most severe drought.

Now the water table in the country is steadily falling. It is said that, taking the whole country into account, it has dropped on an average of nine feet in the last 50 years, and that in some states, as Iowa, for example, it has fallen more than 12 feet. It needs no argument to show that that is a bad thing for the fertility of the soil.

The cause does not appear to be a diminished rainfall. If there is less rain now than there was 50 years ago, the difference is small. Cutting down the forests that once covered much of the country east of the Mississippi has had its effect, for there is nothing like a forest to hold water in the soil. Millions of tons of water that was formerly held escapes each year in floods and freshets. Careful reforestation in regions that are not well suited for profitable farming would help to restore the water table to its old level.

Many observers believe also that in some parts of the country the drainage of the soil has been carried to excess, and that in the effort to reclaim low lying lands the reservoirs of soil water that nature provided have been depleted and water has been hurried out to sea that would be much more usefully employed in preserving the water level in the ground.—Youth's Companion.

UNTIMELY TALK.

Sometimes, returning from the mart, my life is full of care, with problems grave that break my heart, and ache and fester there. For silence then my spirit pants; it is the balm that heals; and I'd be glad if all my aunts would cut out foolish spels. But they've a dozen tales to tell to make me stand aghast, of piffing mishaps that befell since I was with them last. They see the ghastly sweat of grief upon my pallid brow, but they won't make their stories brief, or any rest allow. The gossip of the neighborhood I hear in all details; how Mrs. Bunk and Mrs. Blood scuffled with their finger-nails; the Smiths were driven from their flat, my Aunt Jemima drooled, because they kept an Alfred cat, which was against the rules; old Gaffer Twinkle beat his wife, with many lusty smacks, because she used his pocket-knife to pry out rusty tacks. I'm wearied by the beastly grind, I'm jaded and distraught, and I have problems in my mind that call for sober thought. And all the females of my house, my aunts and nieces nine, are chirping round like startled grouse, and wrench this heart of mine. When man, who wins the daily bread, to his bleak dwelling goes, his aunts should merely soak his head, and let him have repose.

Eczema Tortured Her on Face and Hands

HERE IS A VERY RECENT CURE IN NEWFOUNDLAND.

From September, 1920, I was a sufferer from eczema of the worst kind and I tried one doctor and the remedy he gave me would take the fire out of it but that's all. I could not even wash my face and hands, and to tell the truth I was tortured. After trying a good many remedies I said I would send to my druggist and get a bottle of D.D.D. on hearing so much about it, and I used it, one bottle two weeks and now I can use water to my face and every sign of it has disappeared from my hands. You can certainly publish this letter as my friends know it to be a real fact. Yours truly, MRS. JAMES RYAN, Princeton, N.B., Newfoundland.

Household Notes.

When preparing carrots for children use only small young ones. Boil covered in small quantity of water, and when very soft, add salt. Mash through fine-mesh strainer, and season with butter.

A bottle which will keep drinking water cool is made by padding a large water bottle with strips of an old blanket and covering with burlap. Wet the wool around bottle, and tie to the automobile where it will swing in the breeze. The motor trip will be more easily endured.

Attractive cucumber cocktails are made by forming cups of large cucumbers, two inches thick. To do this, peel around the top and leave the bottom end with skin on. Scoop out centre and put in cup cold fish in mayonnaise and top with a spoonful salted whipped cream.

When you go troutling, don't forget to take a bottle of STAFFORD'S MOSQUITO OIL; 20c. Bottle; Postage 3 cents extra.—June 27, 21.

BY ONLOOKER.

STAR VS. ST. AN. ANDREWS.
League Match Played on Llewellyn Place, July 14th, 1897—Result, Saints, 2; Star, Nil.

This fixture was decided on Wednesday evening and resulted in a win for the boys in Blue by 2 goals to nil. It was thought that a large number of spectators would be present to watch the Stars shine against last year's Champions, but at the kick off there was only a small gathering, which was, however, considerably augmented as the game progressed, and lots of enthusiasm was displayed amongst the supporters of both teams who cheered each little bit of good play on either side.

Scapelin, the Saints goalkeeper, had to defend the eastern goal for the first half, so the Stars had what little advantage there is in the ground, and they very soon had the ball down the field. The game at the start was a bit loose, players on both sides evidently watching for the weak points in their opponents' play. The Star men continued for some time to press the Saints, having hard lines on several occasions in not scoring, and it really seemed as if the Saints goal was invulnerable after the attacks made on it last night. From corners and hands almost in the goal mouth it's a wonder that it escaped capture, but Scapelin did some miraculous saving and at length it was cleared. The Saints now took a hand, Mars (who is evidently off color), going forward, having up to this point been playing left half, and play got much faster.

At length, from a run up the left wing by MacFarlane, the ball was centred to Mars, passed to McNeil, and shot through. One for the Saints. This roused the Stars, who were playing in a most determined manner—Cowan and Power, especially putting in some brilliant play, but all their efforts were in vain, and just before half time, from an unfortunate "hands" against them, right up on their goal, Mars notched up No. 2. Half time was called with the score 2-0.

On resuming it was thought that the Saints would rush it, as they now played down the slope, but the Star boys held their own for the best part of this half, and it was only during the last 10 minutes of play that the Saints put in some of their old play.

and had Mars (who was visibly crippled) been in his usual form, the score might have been increased. Be that as it may, no further scoring took place, the game ending with the score: St. Andrew's 2; Star 0. Referee, F. Maynard; Linesmen, Messrs. F. Donnelly and A. Pike.

NOTES ON THE GAME.

For the winners, Harvey Jardine at half performed wonders, making very few misses either with head or foot. We must also mention Forbes (a 2nd eleven player) who took Monroe's place in the front rank and played a good game. But the wonder of the team was Scapelin at goal, and there is no doubt of it, he is the "Demour" goalkeeper. Young at full back was also very effective. The team as a whole did not put up their usual game, and should really produce more together.

For the losers, Jack Cowan is a host in himself, and made a grand display. The others who claimed our attention were Power, Graham and Conod, whilst the goalkeeper, English, seems cool and capable, and could not have saved the two shots which took effect.

The game was brimful of excitement, especially towards the close, when P. Collins of the Stars collapsed for a few minutes having got winded, but he pluckily resumed play amidst the cheers of the spectators.

The Blues have now got through half of their fixtures, and, so far have not lost a goal. However, 'tis said that a black day is in store for them in the near future.

In connection with our Football Reminiscences of Diamond Jubilee Year, 1897, the following account of the final 5 a side contest at the Highland Games, held on Llewellyn Place on Thursday, July 22nd of that year, may be of interest to the players of to-day. It was between a Star and C.E.I. five as follows:—

STAR—J. Cowan, J. Condon, Wm. Ryan, E. Power and R. English.

C.E.I.—F. Philo, A. Hayward, E. Hutchings, R. F. Goodridge and E. Reid.

Three 5 minutes periods were played and after a keenly contested game the Star boys won the silver medal. Score, 1 goal against a corner.

The Kingdom of God.

A SERIES OF ADDRESSES DELIVERED BY PROF. GIFFORD OF WESLEYAN THEOLOGICAL COLLEGE, MONTREAL, BEFORE THE METHODIST CONFERENCE.

II.—What Was New About Jesus' Conception of the Kingdom!

Jesus was not willing that anything good in the past should be lost. He came not "to destroy the law and the Prophets" but to fulfil. But traditional standards were no longer adequate; men could not enter the Kingdom of Heaven unless their righteousness should exceed that of the Scribes and Pharisees, the very best men of His time, if judged by the standards of the time. Jesus cited several standards of the past, even those that had been accepted as given by Jehovah, and rejected them as inadequate. The old protected physical life—"Thou shalt not kill"; the new would protect the soul also—to be angry with one's brother, to treat him with contempt; to weaken his self-respect and murder his soul, was to be fit for Gehenna. The old protected the marriage covenant—"Thou shalt not commit adultery"; Jesus forbade the lustful look, would have the heart cleansed of low desire. The old said one might exact only an equivalent from the violent man—one eye for one eye, one tooth for one tooth; Jesus said that retaliation never undid a wrong—"resist not him that is evil."

"Righteousness" to Jesus, was love in action, love acting freely according to its own nature. To love God and man was the central commandment of the law. But Jesus knew that love is a living, growing thing, always gathering new insight and finding new duties. Love cannot continue to act as it did fifty or a hundred years ago. The perfect love of the Divine-human Christ made plain to him things that man had never seen before, that few men see now. Love showed him the dignity of human nature, the sacredness of personality. That is why children were not an annoyance to Him, why He violated the health laws to give fellowship to the leper, why publicans and sinners were at home with Him. Men are most at home with those who see most in them. Love showed Jesus that men belong together—social solidarity. He exalted love in others because it is the real social cement. Love is more than kindness. One may be kind because one owes it, or one may be kind because one loves. Love is not kind because one has to be, but because one desires their fellowship; but love is the social instinct and demands fellowship. Love forgives until seventy times seven because it cannot endure the loss of fellowship. Again, love showed Jesus the obligation of the strong to stand with the weak. The program He announced at the outset was one of "Good tidings to the poor." "deliverance to the captive," "recovery of sight to the blind." When John sent and asked for His credentials, He offered as proof that He was relieving human distress. When He commissioned His Apostles and thus established the Church, it was because "when he saw the multitudes. He was moved with compassion, because they were torn and thrown down," as shepherdless sheep when the wolves have gone through them. To them He drew a picture of the final test of a life. He divided men into those who had fed the hungry and visited the lonely, and had thus done it to Him who bears all humanity on His heart; and those who were indifferent. He said, in effect, if you have been indifferent to human need, out you go.

Again the time has come for a great moral advance; old standards are no longer adequate; there is new wine that cannot be put into the old wine-skins. Love must teach us new duties, and in learning them there is no danger that we shall outrun the mind of Christ.

DICE AND VIRTUES.

When you try to get rid of a fault you sometimes at the same time get rid of good quality that is on the reverse side of that fault. Take a pair of dice and turn them over. What do you find on the reverse side of the sixes, the ones. Turn the two upside down and you find fives. Reverse the threes and you find fours. "That is, in each case one side of the dice is the complement of the other."

Is it not almost always so with faults and good qualities? Turn it over.

Turn over a good quality and you find the fault that is the complement of it on the other side.

The easy going, pleasant person is inclined to be sloppy and careless about work.

The punctilious orderly person is apt to be very exacting with others and put out when things do not go just so.

The enthusiastic young girl who is thrilled at everything pleasant that happens is apt to be subject to fits of depression when things go wrong.

The high strung, intense person is delightful at times but on the other side of this quality is the habit of flying off the handle.

It is a great help in one's judgment of people to keep in mind the fact that good qualities are apt to have faults on the back of them and that if you turn over a fault you will often find a virtue.

No Thunderclouds Wanted.

For instance, if someone recommends a housekeeper to me and says, "She is thoroughly neat and orderly, does everything just right," it sounds appealing but—I remember and I say to myself: "Yes, and she will want everything in the house to go just so. She will have a fit if anyone is late to meals and if company drops in unexpectedly she will look like a thundercloud." And I look around for someone else less perfect,—and less exacting with other people.

Another interesting thing about virtues and their defects is that when you try to get rid of a fault, in yourself or someone else, you sometimes make the mistake of getting rid of the virtue, too.

And Get More.

I once knew a woman who was full of enthusiasm and vivacity. The defect of this quality was her lack of poise. She married a man who fell in love with her for her enthusiasm and vivacity and then constantly criticized her for her lack of evenness and poise. The result is that she had developed the poise and in so doing has lost the vivacity. And he cannot understand where all her gaiety and enthusiasm has gone.

You cannot have everything. If you can make up your mind on this basis, to realize that a fault and virtue are often only two sides of the same temperamental tendency, you will expect less from people,—and very likely get more.

Let Us Get Right.

It has frequently occurred to our mind as to whether the rules and regulations relative to our lobster industry have been beneficial for the preservation of that industry or otherwise. If they are right, then we ask have their administration been what they should? Strange to say that while in neighbouring waters lobsters have increased, in our waters they have steadily decreased. In conversation some weeks ago with a gentleman who for a number of years successfully conducted a lobster canner in Pictou Co., N.S., it was pointed out to us the great increase in lobsters along the Pictou coast. He told us that when he started lobster packing some years ago it would be a big day's catch for a boat to secure two or three hundred pounds, while on the day of our conversation boats had brought in seven and eight hundred pounds for the same number of pots. And what made this appear most extraordinary was the fact that while we here in Newfoundland prohibit the taking of lobsters under a certain size, along the west and north coasts of Nova Scotia there is no restriction as to size. Inspection, however, is given much attention and every facility is offered for the propagation of lobsters by the natural process. This decrease in our lobster industry affords food for investigation. Two long have we been subjected to empty theory to the detriment of the development of our natural resources and to the deprivation of many of our people the fruition of the harvests so lavishly furnished by Providence. Let us get down to something practical.—Western Star.

Freemasons to Honor Prince of Wales.

TO BE INSTALLED SENIOR GRAND WARDEN OF ENGLAND.

Coming largely on the programme of festivities organized to celebrate the return of the Prince of Wales from India and Japan, writes Frederick Cunliffe-Owen in the New York Times, is a great Masonic function in the Royal Albert Hall, where the presence of many thousands of masons and brethren of the craft, their apparel is to be solemnly inducted with the office of Senior Grand Warden by his uncle, the Duke of Edinburgh, who is the Grandmaster of the English Freemasons. The announcement thereof has led to an anonymous intimation in print on the sides of the Atlantic that the time is about to join the Order for the first time, whereas he was initiated years ago, in May 1919, as a member of the so-called Household Knights Lodge, which as its name implies, is confined to the officers of the regiments of Foot Guards, that is, the Scots, the Grenadiers, Coldstreams, the Welsh and Irish regiments, and to the three regiments of Household Cavalry, namely, the Horse Guards and the First and Second Life Guards.

ROYAL EXCEPTIONS.

With the exception of the late Duke of Edinburgh, and Sir George, and King George, every other English prince of the blood has been a mason since Frederick, Prince of Wales, son of George II, and father of George III, first joined the craft, in the fulfilment of an annoying parent, with whom he was then at odds, and who, like so many of the Continental rulers—for he was King of Hanover—looked upon the mason as a revolutionary organization. The present King, like his grand-uncle, is stated to have pleaded that he was so constantly at sea in his youth, that he was unable to join the craft, while his accession to the throne, while other obstacles have been necessary to enumerate, and it will be sufficient to point out, that although Edward was a very enthusiastic mason, being Grand Master of the craft, the retirement of the late Marquis of Cornwallis from the office, yet he felt himself impelled to resign the chairmanship of the Order to his younger son, Arthur, Duke of Connaught, on his accession to the throne. He has that his retention of the chairmanship might place him in an embarrassing position.

While he was still Prince of Wales, he was on several occasions visited by Masons, in Turkey, in India, and in various foreign parts, to use his influence, as Grand Master, to bring about the liberation of the ex-Sultan Murad from the lifelong captivity extending over a period of over thirty years, to which he had been consigned by his younger brother, Abdul-Hamid, and to take steps for the recovery of his throne from which he had been ousted by Abdul-Hamid, under the false plea of incurable insanity. Edward VII. was likewise appealed to by that very brilliant and clever Prince Halim of Egypt, and by the latter's son (who, after becoming Grand Visier of the Sublime Porte, was murdered at Rome, a couple of years ago), to assist them in securing the recognition by the Khedivate of their rights as Princes of the Blood, to a share in the Khedivate property, and the restoration of their private estates in the land of the Nile, which had been confiscated by wicked old Khedive Ismail.

In fact so many demands were made upon Edward VII. while he was still Prince of Wales, by Masons at home and abroad, to use his power and influence as Grand Master, in behalf of foreign causes, often of a political or dynastic character, that he felt the impossibility of retaining his Grand Mastership after his accession to the throne.

Another difficulty with which King Edward was confronted, in connection with his Masonic activities, while still his parent, was the position which he was called upon to take up with regard to France. In England the Masons pride themselves on the fact that their lodges are purely philanthropic and non-political, and that their doctrines include reverent recognition of the Almighty, as the Grand Architect of the Universe. Now, in France, as in most of the Latin countries of the Continent, Masonry is essentially political, on the most advanced lines, and frankly atheistical, having banned all mention of the Grand Architect of the Universe from its ritual. When this policy of atheism was adopted by the Grand Orient of France, it created so profound a sensation among the members of the craft in England that it was unanimously decided to break off all intercourse with French Masonry, and brethren of the English craft were not only prohibited from taking part in any French Masonic functions, but even from admitting any French brethren to their lodges.

It fell to the lot of the then Prince of Wales, in his capacity as Grand Master, to communicate this break in all relations between the Masons of England and of France to the Grand Orient of the latter country. This was embarrassing enough for the heir apparent. But some time after his accession to the throne, the necessity arose of renewing the edict and of rejecting advances made by the Grand Orient of France, with a view to restoration of the former relations. Now most of the leading statesmen and politicians of the republic, from the President downward, are more or less prominently connected with the Fishery Research Work.

TRIALS OF THE "EXPLORER."

Every success has attended the trials of the Scottish Fishery Board's steamer Explorer. During the trial run, which was from Leth Docks to the mouth of the Firth, a demonstration was given of the operation of the otter trawl, which was towed for a considerable distance by the wire cables. Of the Mersay trawler type, and originally built for war purposes, the Explorer has been adapted for scientific research work by Messrs. Menzies & Co., Ltd., of Leth. The vessel is 138.5 ft. in length, 23.7 ft. broad, and 12.8 ft. in depth. The steam winch for lifting and lowering the trawl is placed well forward at the bows. There is, in addition, a room for the examination and weighing of fish brought up, by the trawl, while special conduits for sea water for use where specimens have to be kept alive have been fitted.

The vessel will sail the North Sea primarily in the interests of science, but with a view, also, to practical results following, a better knowledge of the fishing grounds. A writer in "The Scotsman" points out that the work of the research vessel may be classified broadly as that of providing data of the temperature and the salinity of the North Sea, and of collecting data relative to the microscopic animal and vegetable life of the sea, and its life and maturity of the fish captured in different areas. In this way, a mass of information will be built up, from which something definite in the way of knowledge of the migration and life history of the fish may emerge. Discoveries relating to the propagation of various kinds of fish have also an important relation to commercial fishing. The Explorer during its trial trip passed over one of the areas where one of the important modern discoveries was made—that the herring spawn lies in masses at the bottom of the sea in the form of a glutinous substance which adheres to the stones and rocks. A similar discovery made in Norway was that all other fish in the North Sea lay eggs which float on the surface, these being in the form of innumerable little transparent jelly-like units. One of these discoveries enabled the scientists to say to what extent the objections to trawling on the ground of disturbing the spawn of the fish were well founded.
