Hamiiton Get Two Points.

Third quarter.—Varsity have been steadily snowing superiority. What they have lost in weight they have more than made up in speed and nicety of play. Then, too, the college boys are sure on their feet and with their hands. If the play is rough, and, at times it is, it does not seem to bother the students, and at this stage it looks all blue and white. Maynard is running wonderfully, and Gall is kicking well. Simpson is doing yeoman service, but the other backs are slow to get away.

for their fastidious horse senses, and several attempted to run away, just to show the Varsity boys what annovance they were causing.

Banner Comes Down.

Join Lenaox & Co. had shown their pertizarship for the Tigers by fleating an immense yellow and black banner out of one of the windows of their warden. Longer the ground. That was an unperdonable sin and the students simply couldn't stand for it.

They didn't either, but sized up the situation in a moment and Lenaox's flag disappeared. The snap of the flag staff showed conclusively that the hoetile banner had fallen a victim to the invading army. Five minutes later nothing was left of the big flag. It was torn to shreds and everybody grabbed fragments to preserve for future reference in memory of the occasion.

Tiger Colors Everwhere.

Out of the windows everywhere the Tiger colors were flaunting defiance at the students procession. Even the citizens wore big yellow murns ribbons and army bands of yellow and ribbans and army hones of yellow and ribbans and strew windows were decorated gaily with yellow and black.

Varsity Noisy Bunch.

"Gee, but they're a noisy bunch," was the way one Hamilton youngster sized up the students as he surveyed the parade from the opposite corner of the street.

The yarely team were driven to thotel in automobiles and carriages.

The appearance of the Hamilton streets to-day suggests that approximately 20, 200 people are in town.

People coming from Toronto on the o'clock train said that apparently the population of the Queen City thip after moon amounts to not more than 1600. But this is not an official estimate.

Rugby! Rugby! Nothing But Rugby!
All political, social and domestic differences have disappeared completely two classes of people in this city, one is continued in Page 2 (News Section).

Thousand Varsity Roeters Tigers Parade to Grounds Carrying Dummy Corpse Labeled "Varsity"--Blood Curdling Roar of Big Striped Cats to Awe

Gally decorated with blue and white ribbons, arm bands, streamers, etc., and equipped with hot air horns as an adjunct to the already abnormally developed vocal powers of the students, the spectacle presented inside these coaches was a lively one.

A perfect mediey of university sones and yells was kept up incessantly and the one hour's journey along the lake shore seemed only to occupy about 20 minutes of actual time.

Hardly had the train arrived in Tigertown when the howling mob of students rushed out of the depot and brushed aside the little group of policemen, who stood around fite station entrance watching for any possible or probable infrongements of the law. There was nothing doing, however, as far as the blue coats were concerned. The boys were immediately rounded up by the marshals and a very orderly, if noisy, parade started for the cettre of the city.

The Parade.

The route was along Stewart to Jamesstreet, where the crowd lined up in front of the Royal Hotel and gave a few selections of yells.

Again the march was resumed till the city hall hove in sight, which was the signal for the first real activity.

A pell-mell up the steps and three cheers and the Varsity yell were given with yim.

Horses Didn't Like Noise.

The Hamilton horses didn't like the visitors, for the noise seemed too much the Varsity boys what annoyance they were causing.

RedHot Values in Scottish Woolens

TAKE a glance over your private expence account and you will find that one of the principal items will be that of your tailor. The Scotland Woolen Mills Company have solved this problem for thrifty people by introducing the system of selling you goods direct from the mills, making a suit or an overcoat at the nominal price of $15--no Suit or Overcoat more, no less. It was a happy thought, as shown by the large and growing business resulting from this idea. The cloth used is superior to that found in suits costing from $30 to $40. It is an easy matter to figure out how money NO MORE--NO LESS can be saved by purchasing your clothing here.

Scottish Woolens are made from pure wool imported direct from Botany Bay, Australia. This is the best wool procurable in the world. Woven and carded on the famous looms of Scotland; dyed by a secret process which never fades. This material is shipped direct from the mills to our warerooms in huge mill webs, and you will be forced to concede that, if any goods are genuine, these that we are showing are "all wool and a yard wide."

OUT-OF-TOWN MEN—Ordering with us by mail is as easy for you as if the measure were taken by our own cutter. The chart and the instructions positively insure that your measurement will be properly recorded. Write us for our new book of samples and for fashion plates.

Laval Professor Named as Prosecutor and Formidable Brief Has Been Prepared in Respect to Bishop's Bi-lingual School

TTAWA, Nov. 26.-(Special.)-Whe light Reverend M. F. Fallon, bishop o

The foes of Bishop Fallon have been quietly preparing a rather formidable brief. Of course, the now celebrated setter which Provincial Secretary Hanna indited "in his best reportorial style," to his friend and desk mate. Hon. Dr. R. A. Pyne, minister of education, will form the base of the accusations for which the London divine will have to answer. The "official" document which was translated for La Revue Franco-Americaine of Quebec, and later Le Devoir of Montreal will form exhibit A.

The trial, it is hinted, will prove a sensational one. Not since the troublous times of 1896, when the Manitoba school question was to the fore, nave the Roman Catholic bishops interfered in matters of politics. The creation of the office of papal ablegate at Ottawa followed the meddling in politics induged in by a number of bishops. The situation which has arisen as a result of the London bishop's campaign against the bilingual schools of Essex and Kent Counties, has become so grievous a one that the Holy See will not even entrust the conduct of this father remarkable case to Monseigneur Staggni, the new page to Monseigneur pot even entrust the conduct of this rather remarkable case to Monseigneur Staggni, the new papal ablegate.

Status of Kent Schools.

Those who are behind the prosecution of the bishop are strongest in their condemnation of his allegations regarding the status of the Essex and Kent Country about 1 Kent County schools. In short, they argue that the former bishop of the London diocese, the present Archbishop monsible for the trouble. There were an expensible for the trouble for the province until the advent of Archibertal for the advent of Archiber bishop McEvay to the See of London. All the best schools in the exclusively French-Canadian sections were converted into separate schools and the lay teachers were discharged. Winds for held out stubbornly against this inhovation until Bishop Fallon brought about a change last fall. All this, it is contended militated against the success of the billingual schools, for few persons cared to undergo the arduous studies necessary to qualify themselves for this trying profession, when only the poorer schools were within their reach. In his arraignment of the system Bishop Fallon, it is urged by the monastery last winter on Lansdowne-ave, and Marion-st., was many the prosecution, failed to place the responsibility where it belonged. There are those of the laity who are now determined to do so. Moreover, they contend that the worthy prelate did not have that knowledge of conditions to warrant his making so sweeping a statement. The French-Canadians are particularly incensed against Inspector Sullivan, who has many enemies in the eastern parts of the province.

Incidentally, they point to the fact that Bishop Fallon had only been installed in office three weeks when he made his sweeping condemnation to bishop McEvay to the See of London. All the best schools in the exclusively that Bishop Fallon had only been installed in office three weeks when he made his sweeping condemnation to Hon. W. J. Hanna at Sarnia. This information, the bishop's prosecutor allege, could have come from no other source than from Inspector Sullivan, whose cause the bishop was pleading before Provincial Secretary Hanna. H. E. W.

LONDON, Nov. 28—The Times says that a proposal is under consideration for a state-owned cable between Great Britain and Canada. The route was surveyed in 1860. It runs from Scotland to the Faroe Islands, thence to Greenland, and thence to Hamilton Inlet, Eabrador.

The estimated cost is £850,000, which, it is figured, would permit a charge of mine cents a word for ordinary, and five cents for press messages.

of Our Lady of Charity.

The remains were those of an animal, and it is probable that the land, which is one of several properties purchased by the monastery last winter on Lansdowne-ave, and Marion-st., was many years ago, the site of a slaughterhouse, which would account for an animal's bones and large bullets being found. The box was an ordinary one, and was not of coffin shape.

The property was bought in or about the month of January last, while the bones must have been deposited there many years ago.

Hundreds of people have been waiting for weeks for a complete stage service to the camp, and, as soon as the road is opened, passenger traffic will be very heavy. Hundreds of tons of freight, including food supplies and machinery, is either waiting at Kelso or is on the way there, and, with the opening of the winter road, this will be moved into the camp as rapidly as possible.

The Porcupine camp is said to be the greatest gold camp yet discovered, and the results of the work done up to the present time are more than enough to warrant an assertion of this kind. The richness of the camp, together with the excellent facilities for getting in and out, by reason of its close proximity to the railway, means that there will be a great Canadian Northern in North End.

The Canadian Northern is making its most significant moves these days along the northern portion of the city, and there is now no doubt but that it has secured a right of way from the terminal of the power line right of way which ends at Poplar Plains-road, clear across to Leaside Junction, and probably a good distance beyond that, the idea being to have its main entrances into the city north of the C.P.R. tracks, with a station at Yonge street north.

But the Canadian Northern is also doing something else in that direction, and that is buying a very considerable portion of land adjoining the Union Stock Yards, in West Toronto, so as to be able to take live stock to those yards, and also for the purpose of having standing freight yards for itself in that quarter.

NEWARK, N.J. Nov. 26.-Fifty girls were trapped this morning in the upoccupied by Louis Wolff, a manufac-turer of underwear, and many of them jumped and were killed or badly injured. The fire spread with great rapidity thru the building.

Practically all of the victims were ity thru the building.

Practically all of the victims were the King of Prussia toward the German Empire, and spoke mockingly of the Hobenzollern family deriving its powers from the Most High. He concluded:

"Electors of Brandenberg obtained the Prussian crown from the Roman Emperor, thru begging and whining, and by all means of intrigue at the court of Vienna."

Ledebour declared that "the king-emperor cannot altempt to rule against the opinion of the people. If he does his position becomes untenable. Either he must put aside his personal opinion or the monarchical system will be eliminated." The speaker affirmed that Germany must be ruled by a democratic parliament system.

Chancellor Retorts.

Replying. Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg defended the emperor, and asserted that the Socialist interpellation was inspired by republican sentiments rather than by anxisty for the integrity of the state. Herr Ledebour's remarks make it clear, he said, that he and his party are not moved to interpellate by their care for the commonwealth, but by a passionate hostility to the constitution.

The dean building.

Practically all of the victims were young women, employes of the manufacturing concerns which occupied the building. Some were saved by Jumping into life nets, but most of the killed met death in leaping from windows before the firemen arrived. The death list at 2 o'clock this afternoon had been found in the ceilar of the rulned building.

An investigation by the police resulted when Miss Sadie Henson was cleaning a carbon of an incandescent lamp in the shop of the Aetna Electric Company, lamp manufacturies on the third floor. She poured gasoline into the apparatus which she was operating, and in a twinkling there was a blaze, that flared up into Miss Henson's face, and connected with some performed by the score. Three plests from St. Patrick's Cathedral—Fathers Kernan, Dillon and Brennan—fought their way into the burning structure against the protests of persons who serted that the Socialist interpellation was inspired by republican sentiments rather than by anxiety for the integrity of the state. Herr Ledebour's remarks make it clear, he said, that he and his party are not moved to interpellate by their care for the commonwealth, but by a passionate hostility to the constitution.

The chancellor denied that the Koenigsberg speech constituted a breach of any promise that his majesty had made in 1908, saying that, when he used the expression "by the grace of God," the emperor was fully conscious of his rights and duties.

TRAINS TOO LONG.

A railroad man, speaking of the accident on the C. P. R. Friday night, said that some of the freight trains on the Muskoka line were so long and the track so tortuous that it was impossible for the engineer to get the signals from the caboose. On a train of 76 cars, for instance, there should be a second brakeman stationed half way between the engine and the caboose to transmit the signals.

CAN LAURIER STEM TIDE His Forces Surely Disintegrating QUEBEC IN FULL REVOLT

Is his power waning?

General Election Won't Settle It

Next Fight Will Be on Home Rule and Then the Real Struggle Will Be on.

A private letter from a well-known newspaper correspondent at London, received yesterday, has this concerning the election:

"I fancy the Conservatives will gain a few seats, the most folk say 'no."

Anyway, the election won't settle things, because the next fight will be on 'home rule,' and then on tariff 'reform.' I am reckoning the Unionists will get 300 seats out of the 670 in the house, but the general opinion seems to be that they will come back with 250 instead of the 273 they have now. "Wait until the government put their home rule bill into cold print, and then you will see some fun. Out of every five voters in Ireland two are autocrats against one in 60 in England; morevover, Ireland has 106 members out of 670, with a population of less than five millions, out of a total for the kingdom of 45 millions. It is scandalous that a great constitutional question should be decided by a party like Redmonds."

Not the Shortest

The British parliament, which will be dissolved on Monday, has not been the shortest since the beginning of Queen Victoria's reign. It assembled on Feb. 15, this year, and, consequently, its life was nine months and thirteen days.

The shortest parliament since 1837 lasted five months and fifteen days, from Jan. 12, 1886, to June 26, 1886. This was the Gladstone parliament, Mr. Gladstone introduced the Home Rule Bill, which was defeated by the house of commons, and the result of the election was the return of the government of Lord Salisbury, with a majority of 123.

The parliaments elected in 1859 and 1 74 sat for slightly over six years; those lasting between five and six years were the parliaments of 1841, 1868, 1880, 1886,1895,1900,1906; those between four and five years 1847, 1852; between three and four years, 1837; between two and three years, 1866, 1892.
The parliament of 1857 sat for close on two years.

Yesterday the Word of Caesar Might Have Steed Against the World, But Now," Etc.-

(By P. A. O'Farrell).

French Canadians' Aim to Remain Aloof Means Declining

the world now, etc."

And yet, Sir Wilfrid may be able to stem the tide that is now unquestionably flowing against him and his government. He is the most picturesque character in Canadian public life, and in any assembly of the great men of the English-speaking world he looms large and big. He has, besides, wonderful personal charm, and the in his 70th year, he is in robust health and ever and always as well dressed and as carefully groomed as a dandy such a man is not going to retire calmity from a great position. He holds the destinies of a wonderful country in his hands, and he will make a galiant and brilliant fight to maintain his hold.

Disintegrating.

Yet his forces in the country are disintegrating. During his long tenure of office he has fallen foul of thousands of petty aspirants for place and power. He has often made the mistake of selecting the wrong man for the right place. In all such cases the favored ones grow arrogant, while the disappointed ones grow sullen and revengeful. It is thus that all governments subject to popular support waste away. When Napoleon abdicated in 1814 the ante-chambers of his palace were crowded with marshals seeking his support for place and power under the new ruler of France. Even Napoleon, who knew men so well, was autonished. He had made them all, and they left him without a tear to worship the rising sun. "All leave me," he bitterly remarked, "save my brave Drouot," But there was only one Drouot, the rest were men, men of the world; men who thought of their country.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier has shown the world that French-Canadians have genius for government and for political leadership of the very rarest and most valuable kind. Under his premiership the people of this great Commonwealth have come to understand each other better than they ever did before, and a great national spirit has been fortered among her people. Laurieris greatest work has been the fostering and developing of this sentiment, and it is going to bear noble fruit long after he has passed away.

EDMONTON. Nov. 26.—At a caucus of the Liberal members, held at the legislative buildings the proposal of Premier Sifton to abandon the Great Waterways Railway, and to use the 47,400,000 now in the hands of the banks as a result of the sale of the railway's bonds to wipe off the debt of the province, and for other purposes of general benefit to the whole province was discussed at length. When the question was put to a vote, the result was 20 to 12 in favor of the premier's proposal.

The fact that "Punk" Thompson replaced Gatenby just before half time gave the Hamilton bunch assurance that there was still to be a struggle, as it was Gatenby who was allowed both tries. Gatenby is a superb player away from home, but when playing before his own people, he seems to suffer from a bashful species of stage fright. His tackling this afternoon was worse than amateurish, but Thompson is expected to watch Dixon and Gall better. During half time the Tiger rooters showed their confidence by singing halder than ever.

Among those present in the Hamilton stand is Lieut.-Governor Gibson and Hon. J. S. Hendrie. In fact the elite of the city and the surrounding country are here.

Emperor of Japan

The scene at the cricket grounds has never been paralleled in the city's history. Hours before the scheduled time for commencing the crowds began to pour down the streets towards the field, and at 2 c'clock the grand stands and bleechers were filled completely.

The house tops, telegraph poles, trees and even a church were crowded with sightseers. The Emperor of Japan is 58 years of age. He has never been out of his own dominions, and speaks only Japanese. Thus, altho much has been written of him as an emperor, very little has been said or is known of him as a man. A Japanese gentleman who has had many opportunities of observing the private life of the emperor, remarked: "It is almost impossible for a European to realize the change of status which has come over the holder of the Japanese imperial sceptre, and yet at the same time appreciate the reverence still felt by all classes towards the emperor of the new Japan. Lined up on the southwest bleachers were the Varsity rooters, about 1500.

The white-sweater brigade were, as usual, nearly placed in the centre, and formed the word "Toronto." When the present ruler ascended the throne in 1867 the emperor was regarded as a delty. Now he is regarded as the father of his people. He could exert much more power than that placed in the hands of a constitutional monarch, but prefers to be guided in all things by his ministers. The emperor is a tall man for a Japanese. In manner he is rather shy and reserved, and in no way outspoken. But he has a marvelously tenacious memory for facts. When he came to the throne Japan was only just beginning to leave its feudal state and to assimilate western ideas. The emperor began rather late in life the study of English and French, and he soen gave it up. This, French, and he soon gave it up. This, however, does not prevent him taking a great interest in the doings of the western world, and important news is translated for him from the newspapers. He takes a particularly keen in-terest in the doings of England, and is always anxious to hear any news about

The emporor's chief recreation is riding. Altho the emperor thinks he is a good horseman, his attendants know better, and the horses in the imperial stables are all carefully broken in and trained. His favorite pastime, however, is the writing of poetry, and he is no mean poet. The official who in Japan occupies something like the position of your poet laureate often has the emperor's work submitted to him for criticism, and he has told me that the imperial verse ranks very high sin quality. President Falconer and several members of the university faculty came up on the noen train with the rooters.

Somebody proposed three cneers for the president. This was done with a vengeance, and then some unfortunate individual shouted for the usual "tiger." He wasn't mobbed, but was allowed his liberty after he had sincerely apologized.

Tigers First to Appear. Doesn't Worry the Cattle.

People coming up from Toronto during the forenoon were annoyed at the indifferent way in which the horses, cattle and poultry were conducting themselves along the railway tracks.

These benighted animals were browsing along just as usual, apparently unconcerned as to the outcome of the greatest gridiron contest of a decade.

The Varsity rooters accorded the Tiger team a good reception.

One of the events of the afternoon occurred just before the game commenced, when the Varsity Rooters' Club paraded round the field, headed by the Highlanders' Band playing the tune "Blue Bell." Bob Christie Leads Parade.

First in line in the procession were "Christic" the popular Varsity policeman, accompanied by the redoubtable ooley," the Varsity mascot.

Dooley marched along, entirely conscious of the proud position he occupied in the estimation of the students. He looked confident that the blue and white would be victorious. Buckwheat: Some fields were caught by early frost, and there was also injury from rain at the time of cutting, but the orop generally may be classed as an excellent one.

Clover Seed: Ontario farmers are paying more attention than formerly to the raising of clover seed. The season has been a favorable one. There were only a few complaints of midge, chiefly from the western part.

Potatoes: This crop is credited with a large average yield, and many of the returns speak of their excellent quality.

Sugar Beets. These roots are increasing in popularity for feeding to live stock. They were a good crop where grown.

Fruit: The season of 1910 will be remembered as one of the poorest on record for apples, all the good winter varieties being exceedingly scarce. Spring frosts and wet weather at the setting of the fruit agre given as the chief causes of the poor yield. Some correspondents charge that there is a too general neglect of Ontario's orchards, and claim that where spraying and reasonable care were given to fruit trees there were satisfactory results this season. Quebec is in full revolt. But the Laurier government has appropriated $15,000,000 for the purpose of creating the nucleus of a Canadian navy, and it is this policy of creating a Canadian navy that has transformed multitudes of French-Canadians from friends to foes of Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

During the German war scare of two years ago, Britain's overseas dominions became almost panic-stricken at the thought that the British navy might be outclassed. New Zealand and Australia immediately offered battleships to the mother country, and there was a wild clamor from lots of Canadians that Canada should do likewise. Sie really had to do something, so Sir Wilfrid Laurier hit upon the idea of creating a navy for Canada herself, which could in emergencies be sent to the assistance of the mother country.

The idea has been carefully spread and fostered among French-Canadians that this naval policy will involve Canada in British complications all over the world, and that the sons of the habitants will be drawn from the calm pursuits of their villages and farms to be slain in some new Trafalgar fought by the English against the Germans or French.

And thus an amazingly hostile feeling has been created among French Canadians towards the Laurier policy of a Canadian navy. It is vain to point out to them that Canada must sooner or later get warships to protect her fisheries and her vast seacoast on both oceans.

Jean Can't See It.

or later get warships to protect deficiencies and her vast seacoast on both oceans.

Jean Can't See It.

It is idde to tell them that Quebec cannot remain isolated in the Dominton, nor can Canada be isolated among the nations of the arth. Canadians know that the twentieth century will see Canada grow into a nation of one hundred millions with a vast commerce and unparalleled prosperity; but the French-Canadian does not see and will not see the duties and obligations that the abounding expansion of his country calls for. He sees no necessity for any naval policy whatever, and he would gladly let the English and Scotch and Irish taxpayer pay all the costs of the navy that, must protect Canada from a Japanese invasion, for instance. The French-Canadian is thrifty and parsimonious; hei is essentially a provincial, and tho he talks about Canada as a nation, and dubs himself a Nationalist, he is all the time thinking of a Canada that Quebec shall dominte forever.

This is my calm analysis of the situation, and I am writing thus with a full appreciation of what a great and good, excellent and admirable people the French-Canadians are.

French-Canadians have not now and never had anything in common with the French of Lorraine or Languedoc. The ploneers of Canada were Bretons or Normans with plenty of Celtic blood in their veins and little or no Latin blood. There never was a braver, or a nobler or a grander race of ploneers than the men that settled on the banks of the St. Lawrence and that explored and paved the way for the colonization of the great western country from the great lakes to the Gulf of Mexico.

Prolific and Sober Race.

Prolific and Sober Race.

There were anly 160,000 French Canadians in America, when England conquered Canada 151 years ago, and very few French have come hither since, but this splendid pioneer race has multiplied and prospered so that there are 4,000;000 of their descendants in America now. They form about half the population of Canada and they are a prolific, sober, thrifty and a deeply religious people. They are multiplying as no other race on this continent is multiplying, and as they love the tand and the fileds and the rivulets and the hillsides and the woods where they play in childhood, and as they love the home a d the convent, and the church that guides their faith and shapes their characters, they love to stay close to the old, home, and to the old, church. that guides their faith and shapes their characters, they love to stay close to the old home, and to the old church, and to their associations of childhood, They have hewed down the great forests that once clothed the valley of the St. Lawrence and the Valley of the Ottawa, and they grubbed the land and millions and millions of acres that are now rich pastures, grain fields, gardens or orchards were transformed so from densest forests by the patience and sweat and toil of the French-Canadians. And they are still toiling on, hewing down forests for lumber or wood pulp, and then cleaning and grubbling, and making farms for the boys and girls who will wed and build homes on the newly created farms. Peoples of other races love to crowd the cities and the mills, and the stores. They love the glare and the rush and the cities and the mills, and the stores. They love the glare and the rush and the whirl and gaiety of the maddening throng. Not so the French-Canadian, for him the woods, the fields, the flowers, and the birds; all his ideals, gring him to the land, and when an Englishman, or a Scotchman grows tired of the monotony of farm life and wants to sell out and migrate to the city, there is always a French-Canadictory. city, there is always a French-Canadian ready to buy his farm and take his place. And so the French-Canadian farmers are multiplying in Quebec with amazing rapidity and they are buying out the English and Scotch farmers of Ontario and taking their places.

I know no people who are doing the world's work better or more effectively. They are the best farmers on this continent, and Canada is indeed fortunate to be possessed of such a race. isolation.

On the other hand it must be admitted that the French-Canadians have their defects. Complaint is constantly made that they live too much to themselves and cling too tenaciously and even passionately to their own tongue and to their own ideals. Their aloofand to their own ideals. Their adoliness of solidarity, and their passionate devotion to their own tongue and ideals, have undoubtedly helped to keep them the splendid people that they are. When they stray too far away from their native villages and from the fluence of the convent and the church influence of the convent and the church and learn the language of the stranger, they too often lose their ideals and lapse into ways that might well make their ideals. have into ways that might well make angels weep. Hence their bisnops, priests and nuns never want to see them wander too far away from the parental home, nor from the watching of the priest. It may be remarked in passing that few race horses kick from wanton viciousness when they are being groomed or dene up. Their skin is extremely tender and the frequent rubbing they receive has an irritating effect upon it. It is because they are being hurt that they hash out and bite with apparent fury at the men who hold their heads during the operation.

Once the rubbing ceases the eyes assume their tranquil gaze, the ears are erect and when the light blankets are in place and the walking process to cool the fevered blood begins, with a bunch of clover or a wisp of sweet hay to be nibbled from the attendant's hand, they are models of tractability.

bled from the attendant's hand, they are models of tractability.

It may happen that a horse has won a selling event, in which case it is the duty of the trainer to represent his employer at the auction which follows. If the horse is run up to a point where he is considered well sold he is let go, but if the amount offered does not represent what the trainer thinks he is worth he is bid in for the stable. It generally happens that there is no bid and the trainer's presence at the stand is merely perfunctory. The racing for the day concluded, the trainer goes to his stable, where the horses are brought out for walking exercise, generally taking this recreation in a ring near the quarters. The best horse in the barn is usually in the lead, and as they pass in their clean cool white sheets with a smart lad at their heads they make a handsome appearance.

While they walk the trainer looks thru their boxes to see that all is clean and regular, then the feed for the evuning neal is allotted and placed in the stalls. The horses are then looked over and after half an hour's walk they are returned to their stalls and the boys and men hove their dinner, the trainer's meal being again shared by some acquaintance, or if he is a married man by his wife or some other member of his family.

"Words fail to express our gratitude to you for the lasting results in straightening our son's, Hatfield's, eyer without an open'd which we were told would be necessary.

Seven years ago he was sick with dipatheria and the nerves of his eyes got so weak he could hardly open them for days, then his left eye turned in and we consulted you and obtained your prescription for his glasses and to our glad surprise we could see an improvement in a few weeks. In six months, his eyes were straight again but he wore his glasses for some time to ensure a permanent cure. He has not worn them now for four years and his eyes are adright. We would urge anyone with weak or cross eyes to consult you."

"Why, no woman can be too much idolized. What a thing to think! And the American women. I should say, are the happiest in the world. And why should they not be? They shave everything a waman could wish, forses, carriages, jeweis, fine clothes."

As to the old, old question, the secret of her youth, Madame Bernhardt says: "I do not grow old because I keep my thoughts young. I have not the time to grow old. The days, the weeks, the years. Ah, they mean nothing, nothing to the real artist. It is only the plodder who thinks of the time as it passes, this: The opportunity to work, to prepare for and achieve another artistic triumph."

And so it goes. Till her death, Bern-

A PRINCESS IN EXILE. Life in a Palace Regulated by Striking Clock.

From The London Daily Mail.

There have been many royal sufferers thru revolutions, but not one of them perhaps endured such fulness of misfortune as Mme. Royale, daughter of Louis XVI., whose life is described by Lady Theodora Davidson's version of Turquan's book of that name.

The remarkable woman known as Mme. Royale was born in surroundings of the greatest pomp and luxury. While an infant she had eighty personal attendants, and the yearly bill for her bouillon at the age of two amounted to £25 to $125 .

I have myself seen,' writes a visitor to the court, 'the queen superintending madame's meal in company with a little peasant whom madame had to look after and serve first, the queen saying. "You must do the honors." "

The subsequent event leading up to the imprisonment in the temple are too well known to need description. The life of the orphaned child there was pitiful, but she bore her trials bravely. "She remained unruffied by such vexations as sleeping on a chaff mattress, having no carpet, no spare body linen or shoes, sweeping out her room. The young girl at a later period of her imprisonment was dressed in a scanty.

All members of the family should be glad to contribute to the fund that will provide music-gladdening, entertaining, elevating, all-the-year-round music--- for the home. A Family Fund for the purchase of a is the most attractive and most reasonable method of making a combined gift. Such a present would be suitable for Christmas, but the pleasure of it would last the year round, yes, for a lifetime. The Nordheimer Player-Piano is so simple that every member of the family can play it, even down to the youngest. Each may play his own choice of music—operatic, classic or popular. A repertoire of 20,000 selections is at the command of the operator.

Cosy corners, or rather mossy banks, were thoughtfully provided, and weary promenading couples found them comfortable. '13 had their room fitted up in gorgeous Turkish fashion, costly rugs and draperies being scattered about in profusion. MINES DRIVEN UNDER SEA.

An Ever-Present Danger to Miners Along British Coast.

Mining under the sea is continued to a considerable extent in Great Britain. It was only a short time ago that the overhead seas of the Whitehaven mine burst thru the sea floor and drowned scores of men in the workings, making the further resumption of work impossible.

$10,000,000 have been taken from its 40 galleries extending under the bed of the sea. Its lowest gallery runs directly out into the ocean floor for a mile. A few years ago a geologist who was one of a party of visitors under escort of officials of the mine, wandered away a few yards as the rest of them talked Discovering something which resembled a plug overhead, he was fingering it when one of the officials rushed up:

"My dear sir," he exclaimed, "you must not do that, you know!"

"Er—but why not?" enquired the visitor, as the official caught his arm.

"Why, it will let in the Atlantic, you know."

It is believed that the rosy Britisher didn't regain all his color for two days Workington, a near neighbor to Whitehaven, once had its under sea afterward. mine, into which one day the waters of the Irish Sea suddenly burst, drowning the 36 men who were working out ing the 36 men who were working out the coal. In all of this mining the sea floor ordinarily is only a few yards above the workers' heads an dthe uncertainty of the ocean bed lends the chief risk to the workings.

One of the most famous of existing sea mines was the Botallack, a copper minne at Penzance. She coast is rocky there and shelves sharly down into the water. Into this hill ten galleries were driven, each of them stopping within a few yards of the floor of the sea. As the mine work went on at different levels the hill became honeycombed with galleries and mine rooms until the Atlantic began to leak in at scores of places, causing its abandonment.

Airmanship Developing Topheavy Type With Tiny Legs and Bird-like Eyes.

A being with tiny, shrivelled up legs, ferrety face, and beady, bird-like eyes

"First, tile aerial man of the future will have a large elastic heart and fuller arteries, so as to stand the strain of continual high blood pressure.

"Now limbs, not used, gradually become smaller or also weed, gradually be-man in his powers of standing intense mental strain. It's upper jaw will be greatly developed, and his expression keen, restless and eternally strained. "Probably the greatest alteration will take place in his eyes. Drey may become beady and bird-like, with the power to gaze not only before him, but herizontally outwards without movement of the head like a bird. "Of course, this type of bird-man will take many generations to develop."

Such is his portrait, pictured by a doctor who was discussing a statement in The London Lancet that flying men, being exposed to new stresses while rising or failing to different attitudes, which increase the blood pressure, must have circulatory systems which will adapt themselves to these constant changes of pressure.

"With the human heart and vessels as at present constituted," he said, "censtant high blood pressure hardens the arteries in two or three years, and anyone with hardened arteries is liable to death from heart troubles or apoplexy.

"Obviously, then, the human machine is the most adapt the heart and respectation for his ground of the greent."

"Fortunately, the human machine is the most adaptable ever invented. See, for instance, how well it has gradually adapted itself to the acrial future in the way I have shertly sketched for you. Let me claborate further.

Fraternal Delegates.

The time is at hand when the Trades & Labor Congress of Canada should send fraternal delegates not alone to the A. F. of L., but to the British Trades Congress. The moral and fillial results of such delegateship to and from Canada cannot be estimated. The sending of fraternal delegates to the A. Prettiest Girl in Naples Crowned With Much Ceremony.

On account of the cholera the authorities of Naples, where the impabitants practically live on fruit and vegetables during aummer, prohibited the characteristic feast of Pedigrotta, a festival of the Virgin. It was originally a pagan rite resembling the saturnalla, but since 1859 it has been celebrated with great magnificence in memory of the victory of Charles in over the Austrians at Velletria in 1744. This feast, which was formerly the greatest in Naples, has now become chiefly a night affair, celebrated in an uproarious manner in and around the grott, of Posilipo.

The prefect of Naples ordered all the wine shops to be closed during the aight and strong detachments of police and soldiers were stationed to disperse the crowds in case the Neapolitans, unheeding the prohibition, assembled near the grotto of Posilipo. The precautions taken were, however, useless, as the order of the prefect was implicitly obeyed and the feast was not celebrated.

But the Neapolitans were not to be deprived of their annual merrymaking, and intsead of the usual pageants which characterized the festival they organized a novel show, thus incidentally instituting a new annual festival. Following the example of Paris, the Neapolitans every year select the pretiest girl of the city, and elect her queen of the sea. The election is undertaken according to certain rules and is quite impartial.

Twelve candidates, one from each district of the city, are selected and the prettlest one among them is elected ouen, while all the others are appointed her maids of honor. The queen is proclaimed and crowned with a great parade on the sea, seated on a throne erected on a galley decorated with flowers and flags.

This year the fetes in connection with the queen of the sea were substituted for the feets of the sea were substituted

During his stay at the hotel the weather had been very hot.

"Charles," said the andlord to the elerk who was making out the bill to be presented to the departing guest, "have you noticed that the gentleman in number seven has consulted the thermometer on the piazza at least ten times every morning during his stay here?"

Charles replied that he had.

"Well." said the landlord, "charge time the price of one dinner a day, for the use of the thermometer."

In fact, in several places the people go from one quarter of the city to another by means of elevators set in steel cages, getting transfer tickets from the tramear conductors to connect with other lines.

Nevertheless, the Portuguese of the upper class must have his car, tho its purchase may have deprived the owner of all his other luxuries, and it is even rumored that he sometimes goes without he price of one dinner a day, for the use of the thermometer."

I crossed the Trossachs in a thin, off and on, drizzling rain, but the inclement weather did not greatly interfere with the enjoyment of the scenery or the coach ride. While crossing the highest mountain, where there was no sign of life or human habitation, two sturdy pipers dressed in full Highland costume suddenly appeared on the roadride, and as the conches carrying the passengers rolled past, these intrepid musicians blew up their chanters with might and main and the persuasive and penetrating music so dear to the heart of all right-minded Scots was wafted over the moun-

"buts and bens" of the grottoes at the foothilis.

The appearance of these bare-legged and brawny Hellandmen, with their wild and soul-stirring music in this romantic and out-of-the-way place was speciacular and dramatic and swoke in one a weird and thrilling seneation, mystically imbued with the exciting scenes enacted on these shaggy hills in Scotland's earlier days when Rob Roy and his bold free-booters were rampant.

The dense crowds of people and busses, automobiles, hansoms, drays and every conceivable description of wheeled vehicle jumbled together in some of the busier streets is an appalling sight and one never to be forgotten, but the police have such mastery and complete control of the street traffic, that there is seldom a block and what is more wonderful seldom an accident.

Looking on at the mass of miscellaneous vehicles writhing, squirming and dodging each other one marvels how on earth they will ever extricate them selves, but they work out in some mysterious way and so the crushing and crowding goes on day after day from Queen's Own Visit.

I was in London during the time the Queen's Own were banqueted by the City of London at Guildhall, and saw the regiment march past a point near High Holborn-street.

It was quite an inspiring sight. The Canadians presented a fine appearance and altho they lacked the fine physique, weather beaten features and military bearing of the picked company of British regulars which formed an escort, they looked very well indeed, and received unstinted praise from all quarters.

"Financially, it is of interest to note that the Duchy of Cornwall under the management of the late prince consort so improved that the rent roll rose from fil,000 a year to 550,000 during King Edward's life. When King George became Prince of Wales the revenue rose to about £72,000, and last year it brought in £87,000.

"The Duchy of Lancaster has estates in no fewer than thirteen counties and woods. Originally they belonged to Saxon nobles, who, by rebelling against William the Conqueror, had their lands confiscated to the crown. These estates have also grown in value, and are steadily increasing. Thus, while in 1865 the revenue was only £28,000, if at the stime of Queen (Victoria's death had trisen to £50,000 a year.

The Surgeon's Thread.

From The Lancet.

When Lister first advocated the employment of catgut as material for ligatures, numerous writers pointed out the objections, both theoretical and practical, to the use of this substance.

But film has seen a constant of the substance. But time has seen a change, and many surgeons at the present time maintain that the only suitable material for a burled suture is catgut, and that slik should never be employed except for skin sutures.

In this, as in so many other points, the surgeon time of Queen Victoria's death had risen to $50,000 à year.

"The report of the select committee also touches on another point, and one of more present interest, viz., the cost of external alterations and repairs of the royal palaces in the person pation of the sovereism includes Windsor Castle, Buckingham Palace, Frogmore and Mariborough House. For this purpose it recommends a sum of $27,000 be henceforth granted yearly to the king. It also recommends that a special grant of $55,000 be provided in the current year's expenditure in order to place the palaces in condition fit for the occupation of their majesties and Queen Alexandra.

"This sum, tho apparently somewhat large, has, of course, no reference to the suggested structural alteration of Richingham Palace, the front of which is generally agreed to be dingy, commonplace, and utterly unworthy of its

First-Because medical treatment fails in a majority, if not in all cases, and must necessarily continue to fail, because it coes not remove the cause of the gnawing or craving for alcohol.

Second-Because the pathological condition caused by alcohol is almost identical with pathological conditions produced by other causes which are relieved by surgical treatment.

"The drunkard in giving a history of his case usually points to his stomach as the cause of his drinking. Very few claim that the taste for light has anything to do with it. In the stomach will also be found the first evidence that the physical basis of life-protoplasm-has been injured, and the physical structure of that organ is the first to present pathological conditions.

while the "average" bank statement showed a nominal increase in surplus, the statement of actual conditions as of last night showed a decrease of $2. 600,000 in surplus, brought about by the large gain in deposits of $20,000,000 and expansion of loans of $17,000,00. The cash increase of $3,00,000 was about what was expected. The increased deposits and loans were due to the assumption of loans of out of town banks and local trust companies which, by reeson of the low interest rates, fid not care to make further loans on their own account. At such times they shift the burden to the New York banks. The report, under the circumstances, is not a bad one.

Chas. Head & Co. to R. R. Bongard: There was some slight improvement this morning. The nay's business was very limited and price changes small, closing about the same as last night. The bank statement showed a remarkably large increase in loans, $17,000,000, bringing down the reserve by $2,000,000. Outside of the National banks, however, the loans decreased $13,000,000. We still look for higher prices and should buy the better class of dividend payers on all breaks.

The Ontario Securities Co., Limited, of this city, has been awarded $116,000 dehentures of the municipality of Burnaby, B.C., of which $70,000 mature in 1922, and $46,000 in 1950. Both lots bear 5 per cent. Interest, payable semi-annually. The issue is for sidewalks and waterworks purposes. This municipality practically adjoins the City of Vancouver, contains 21,000 acres of ruch lands, and has a net debenture debt of only $270,000, against a conservative assessment of over $10,000,000.

G. A. Stoimson & Co. have purchased about $400,000 City of New Westminster bonds; $250,000 of the above are 4 1-2 per cent., and the balance 6 per cent. local improvements. French sardine fishers use as balt the roes and other waste products of the Norwegian cod fisheries. This bait is expensive and its price is continually rising owing to the increasing demand. An artificial bait, which is much cheaper, has recently been employed, but with only partial success, as it sinks too quickly and often lures the sardines downward instead of drawing them up into the nets.

From The Lancet.

The subject of imitative suicide has recently attracted attention in the public press. The mental condition of an individual who commits suicide is difficult to fathom. In one class of case a person will fancy that he is being constantly persecuted, that he is always watched, or that he is financially ruined—all these ideas being contrary to fact; he destroys himself in order to escape these imaginary evils.

Such a man is obviously of unsound mind. In another class of case a man has committed a crime or disgraced himself in some way, and in order to free himself from the consequences of his act, he takes his own life in preference to facing exposure or the punishment entailed. Such an individual is not necessarily insane. Manitoba flour-Quotations at Toronto are: First patents, $5.40; second patents, $4.90; strong bakers', $4.70.

ment entailed. Such an individual is not necessarily insane.

But there is yet another class—people who are subject to attacks of depression and who are apt to brood over real or imagined injuries. These are weak minded, or may be on the border line between sanity and insanity.

Attempts are now being made to remedy this defect. The success of these attempts would bring joy to the fishermen, but not to the dealers in Norgazian bait, who enjoy a very lucrative inding interest and has nearly led to open war between fishermen and bait dealers on the French coast.

Home Pets in England.

Testerday the ninth annual exhibition of home pets was held in the hall of St. Mary's. Plaistow. A chaos of barks, snarls and growls deafened the visitor who ventured into the dog dipartmen. for, altho fewer than 50 animals had been entered, each competitor was engaged in trying to outbark his neighbor.

The cat section was much stronger than that for dogs: no tax is nayable on cats. There was also a fair show of canaries, parrots and other birds, and a great variety of miscellanous live stock. including tortoises, lizards, hedgehogs, mice frogs, guinea pigs.

Ducks and geese, fowls and pigeons were also represented, and there was a large number of rabbits. Donkeys and ponies included "Jerry." a famous old donkey, 25 years of age, but still equal to a day's work.—London Chronicle.

ST. ANDREW FOR SCOTLAND

On the last day of the month Scotsmen all over the world will celebrate the memory of the patron saint of their country, St. Andrew. His cross, a diagonal cross of saltire, white on a blue ground, was adopted as the national fiag at an early date and survived until conjoined with the red cross of St. George on the accession in 1603 of James VI. of Scotland to the English throne. Nearly two hundred years later the red diagonal cross of St. Patrick was quartered on the flag that still as the Union Jack floats over the world wide British Empire. These clustered crosses yield to no other flag in depth of historic interest. Each different they blazon the same original, the greatest divine event of all the centuries toward which all before it centred and from which all after it drew their lasting inspiration.

Scotland's national emblem is the thistle and the two national Scotland's national emblem is the thistle and the two national mottoes illustrate that hardy plant's leading characteristic as it is that of Henry VII. into the royal arms of England. It is a mythical creature, in its Latin garb is "Nemo me impune lacessit" which freely interpreted into English reads "None touch me with impunity." The thistle is an aggressive plant and a wanderer like those who cherish it. It finds a home everywhere, not without capacity to adapt itself to its environment—another characteristic of the Scot abroad. Burns that voice of the Scottish heart could not turn down the national emblem any more than he could slay the wee sleekit, cowerin' timorous mousie whose nest he turned over. So he sings:

"The rough burr thistle spreadin' wide Among the bearded bere I turned the weeder clips aside And spared the emblem dear."

Scotland's share in the support of the royal arms is a unicorn substituted by the same James for the red dragon of Wales introduced by the country which assumed it. One of them is "In Defence" the other in that resembling the legends fathered by the early historians of the nation. The unicorn combines the head and body of a horse, adorned with a long, straight horn in the middle of the forehead, the legs of a buck and the tail of a lion. In these curious combinations patriots of imaginative mind have professed to see remarkable exemplification of the qualities of the Scottish race. But as if these were not enough Scotland also carries on her shield "The ruddy lion ramped in gold" familiar in all tents and abodes where Scotsmen congregate Scotland has had a strange, chequered history. For centuries the home of two separate peoples with sharper differences than divide those of Canada and with far keener racial antipathies, the country has become identified in the eyes of the outside world with that one of them which played comparatively little part in the development of the Scotland of to-day. It is indeed, as Macaulay points out, that the Highlander stands out as the typical Scotsman. The fillibeg, the sporran, the bonnet and plaid, the claymore and targe have become inseparably associated and plaid, the claymore and targe have become inseparably associated with the whole Scottish people. No odder perversion has ever occurred. For the Scots who fought and died for freedom and for civil and religious liberty were Lowlanders of greater kin to the Englishman than to the Highland reivers who periodically raided Lowland farms and levied blackmail on their Lowland neighbors.

These days passed with the battle of Culloden that destroyed the clan system. Love of country survived and triumphed over race hatreds and the memory of wrongs. Two generations later when the Highland regiments returned from the Peninsular War and landed on the shore of Galloway, the soldiers flung themselves down and kissed the ground that spoke of home. And thus it happens that all Scotland has one common heritage, the courage and devotion of the Highland clansman, the courage o fdevotion of the Lowland Covenanters. Bannockburn, Killiecrankie, Drumclog are eloquent whether fought against English invaders or Scottish Celt and Saxon. No more wonderful example can be afforded of love of country triumphing over hereditary prejudice and of romance clothing the naked truth of history in the color and glamor of its own story and song.

That little country of the northern sea has played no inconsiderable part in the onward march of civilization. To those accustomed to the miles which measure distances in Canada, Scotland's acres may loom Jarge when gauged by the place it holds. But when it is remembered hat all thru the years, rather centuries, which romance has made its own. the population was little, if any, more than that of Toronto to-day, the enigma becomes all the more insoluble. Scotland has before now been likened to Greece, Edinburgh's other name is Modern Athens. There is a measure of truth in the comparison and more when it is reduced to proper dimensions. For what Ancient Greece has been to Modern Europe that Scotland has been to the isles whereof it is a part.

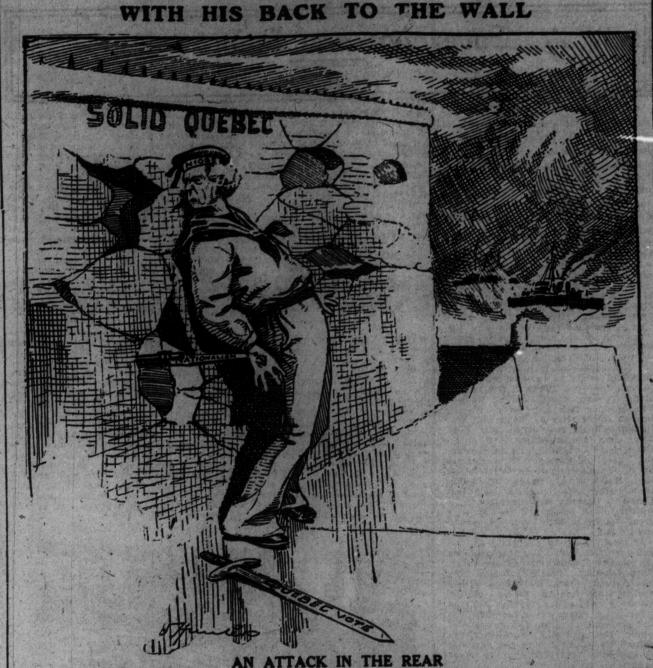

Greece was the land of adventure and philosophy and so also have been Scotland. Even in this the distinction between Highland and Lowland is perpetuated. The Highlander to a marked extent has been the pioneer and adventurer, the Lowlander the metaphysician and physicist. This indeed has been the paradox of the world, that Scotland has combined in an altogether phenomenal manner the practical and the theoretical. In this way it has become the medium between the transcendentalist and the materialist represented by the German and the Englishman. No other country has produced men who can combine these two antagonistic dispositions with equal measure of success.

Scotland has led the United Kingdom in many ways. For nearly three hundred years it has possessed an educational system which embodied the two main principles underlying all modern requirements. That is that education is of national importance and should be universal. John Knox, did not grander service to Scotland than he did in the establishment of his parish schools and thus instilling that love of learning for its own sake which has placed Scotsmen in the van of the world's advance. That Scotland has left so deep an imprint on the history of the American continent is due, in no small part, to the great reformer and to the influence of the Reformation of which he was the outstanding personality. Even more than that Scotsmen have taught the world that nationality is stronger than political antagonisms. Scotsmen stand together all the world over. Even if soldiers of fortune they do not forget the tie of country and of birth. And is this not the solution of the imperial problem? If it is not found there it will not be found anywhere.

Municipal Bakery

Good bread and honest measure is assured to the people of Budapest, Hungary. This pleasing condition of affairs, which has not always prevailed in Budapest, was brought about by the establishment of a municipal bak-

And yet the bread business Budapest is not a public monopol protect the people against the greed of a private combine, and as it has acomplished its object its sponsors are ontent with their achievement and show no disposition to eliminate competition, which could be easily done it such were the public desire.

Not long ago in Budapest the price of bread was continually rising, and as the loaves decreased in size they deteriorated in quality. When this condition of affairs grew intolerable the city fathers decided to make the municipality a competitor of the bakers' combine. The city fathers found that a pound of flour could be mixed with 200 per cent. water and potatoes without the average consumer knowing what had happened to his bread, but they didn't do it.

The municipal bakery gave the people good bread, and by selling its product by the pound instead of by the loaf gave the public better value for their money. The sanitary conditions of the public bakery were made as nearly as perfect as possible. Of course, the boss bakers fought hard against the innovation, but the people appreciated the reforms. The result that the municipal bakery has brought about a substantial reduction in the price of bread, and the private ple, on the other that of legitimate bakeries are facing the alternative of political aspiration. building modern factories or going out In dealing with these manifestations of business.

The report is a most striking argument in favor of municiapl ownership. electric light plans were examined in all parts of the United States. One hundred and fifteen of these sold electricity cheaper than the Brooklyn monopoly, fiften at the same rate and eleven at a higher rate. Owensboro, Ky., was one of the towns investigated. A municipal lighting plant constructed in 1901 at a cost of $86,235, and bettered since then to the extent of $125,573, had in eight years paid off this $211,829 in cost out of its profits and had left over $1040. And at no time was in cost out of its profits and had left over $1040. And at no time was more than five cents per kilowatt hour charged. Jacksonville, Fla., paid $171,000 for its plant. me until next Wednesday, but I am afraid I can no more pay him the 2500 dollars on Wednesday than J can to-day," Gerald replied sadly.

"But can't you get the $1000 dollars for the picture Johnson is to sell for you?"

"No, he just writes me to-day that the customer won't pay more than 750 dollars. It really looks as if one can set money only from the usurers" sald Gerald, handing the other letter to his wifs.

"Well, don't lose courage, anyway, it will all come out all right." At this, moment the patter of little feet was heard outside, the door was thrown open and two fair haired children camerushing towards their father. Gerald picked them up, placed one on each knee and the next moment all his melancholy thoughts had flown.

When the door of the studio had closed behind them and Gerald faced his work again, the worries came back and prevented him from working. Ho stopped at the big window overlooking the garden and the Long Island hills in the distance. Five years ago Gerald had built the little homestead, which had grown so dear to his heart, and now it looked as if he must love it. The five years he had spent at Freeport had been the happlest in his life, until he had been tempted to try a filer. In stocks. The venture failed and he negotiated a loan from Levy to cover his margins, only to lose he whole amount anyway.

Among all this Gerald's eyes suddenly struck something that looked like an old bag half buried in the sand. Mechanically he began to dig it out and saw that it really was a heavy officioth bag tightly tied with stout whipcord. He ripped it open with his pocketknife and found inside a belt with a heavy brass buckle and with a number of pockets. He opened one with a heavy brass buckle and with a number of pockets. He opened one of these and would hardly belive his own eyes when he found it filled with five dollar gold pieces. He duckly wrapped it up in the olicioth and started homewards. It made a heavy bundle, but he reached home without attracting the attention of anybody. Walking thru the garden he looked thru the big window and saw his wife sitting in the studio staring sadly into the fire.

He went inside, hid his bundle in the hall closet and opened the door of the studio. His wife jumped up, the worried expression disappeared from her face and she said cheerfully:

"I am so glad you came back, Gerald; have you been looking for motives?"

"Yes, dear, and I hope I have found something good," Gerald replied, throwing himself into an easy chair." I just want a cup of tea," he added, as he filled his pipe, "then I will go down to the bank and ask old Winters to come and take dinner with us. I like his company and maybe he can give me some advice."

of the visit that King George and Queen Mary would have paid to Wood Norton, had it not been for the death of Prince Francis of Teck, to meet the deposed King of Portugal, and his mother, is not readily understood by those without inside knowledge of what is going forward in diplomatic circles at the moment. There are those about King Manuel who are by no means convinced that he has left his native land forever, and who believe that one day he will be recalled to again rule over the people who have now deprived him of his crown and his throne. Will these dreams ever be realized? Rather, is it not more likely that Portugal will hold to its republican form of government with the same tenacity that France has she wn?

is it not more likely that Portugal will hold to its republican form of government with the same tenacity that Prance has she wn?

The position at the moment is a curious one. King Manuel is but a boy, and has so far shown very few of the qualities that go to make a real king. Those about him, however, are cast in quite different moulds, and are by no means inclined to accept the present position without a hard struggle to alter it. They have consistently urged upon the young king the desirability of an appeal to the powers to support him in his efforts to regain his throne, and have pointed out in fairly plain language that what has taken place in Portugal to-day may easily take place in several other countries. before many moons have past.

Seat to Man Who Sold it.

From a Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Cameron of Lochiel has come into a fortune lately and now prays to be allowed to buy back Skibo Castle from Andrew Carnegle; but Mr. Carnegle is adamant.

"Never. never will he allow the removed seat to pass out of the hands of his family." he says. "I will pay you twice over what you gave for it," says Lochiel, and Carnegle laughs at him.

"As if it would tempt me." he responds. Lochiel is getting old and the thought that never again will he reside in the home of his ancestors is weighing on his mind.

No one for a moment expects that Mr. Carnegle should part with a seat he bought fairly and for which he paid

It is for this reason that King Manuel is seeking the advice and counsel of King George. What that counsel will be no Englishman needs to be told. Great Britain will assuredly not be drawn into a quarrel to restore King Manuel to his throne. A determined effort is now being made to bring about an intervention of the powers in the internal affairs of Portugal. How far this effort will be successful remains to be seen. In this connection the announcement—pased, to all appearance, on good authority—that the Marquis de Soveral, until lately Portuguese ambassador in this country, will shortly visit Berlin, must be taken into consideration.

The Emperor William loves to pose as the war lord of Europe, and absolute monarchism is to him almost a residence which will take the shine out to be seen. If he ranges himself definitely upon the side of the depos-the part he proposes to play remains to to be seen. If he ranges himself definitely upon the side of the deposed king the attitude of England will make all the difference in the world, and those who were astute enough to sidvise King Manuel to take up his residence in this country have by no means lost sight of this fact.

Another factor in the present decidedly interesting — but terribly threatening—situation is King Alfonso of Spain. That he is heart and sout with the young king is very obvious. Indeed, there are good grounds for believing that he was extremely anxious to move his army into Portugal the moment the revolution broke anxious to move his army into Portugal the moment the revolution broke out in order to assist and protect the house of Braganza. That he did not do so was due to wiser heads than his own, and it is needless to ask whose flower heads were. But is may be of interest to mention that the capies from Medical to Lorder was best extracted. Madrid to London were kept extremely busy during the whole of the time the busy during the whole of the time the revolution in Lisbon was going on. The situation, therefore, is this: Spain is anxious to assist its near neighbor to discover the best manner in which to govern itself, a very difficult and thankless role to assume. Fireat Britain is desirous of observing a strictly neutral attitude, and doing nothing that might be taken by the provisional government of Portugal in an unfriendly spirit. France is disposed to look upon events with a sympathetic eye for the new form of government. So there is a great deal depending upon the manner in which Germany regards the situation. Austria-Hungary has no concern directly with Portugal whatever; and also died. The strange illness had not then been explained by the medical Italy may either decide to side with France, or to follow the lead of the other partners of the Triple Alliance. King Manuel, therefore, may expect very little assistance for the regaining of his crown unless Germany comes forward in his favor. Will the emperor come out in his true colors on this occasion and support his brother monarch, or will he bow to popular opinion in his empire, and in his whole situation, and a solution of the problem cannot, in the nature of things, be very long delayed.

There are good grounds for believing that until such times as he feels him-self in a position to return to Lisbon, and strike an effective blow for the throne he so suddenly and so drama-fically vacated. King Manuel will decide to remain in this country, and apply for a commission in the British

Prince Albert Pointers

P RINCE ALBERT has a population of 8,000, which is more than double the population of four years ago, and is increasing rapidly at the present time. There is not a vacant store or commercial building in the city, nor scarcely a vacant residence in the city, and there is a keen demand, ever increasing, for both classes of rentals.

Building permits for 1910 so far have amounted to $550,000, an increase of 400 per cent. over the previous year. Preparations are being made for extensive building operations for 1911, and the indications are that next year's building permits will show a similar increase over 1910.

New buildings erected this summer are: The Angnew Block, costing $65,000; Pollock Block, $20,000; The Imperial Bank, $35,000; Starland Theatre, $35,000; The Prince Albert Opera House, $50,000, which is to be one of the finest opera houses west of Winning the "King George Hotal" cost of Winnipeg the "King George Hotel," cost-ing $30,000; a new warehouse for Cameron and Heap, Limited, wholesale grocers, at a cost of $15,000, and many smaller commercial buildings. New residences to the value of $70,000 have been erected this season.

Prince Albert's assessment for 1910 is in excess of $6,000,000, which is four times the assessment of five years ago, and this assessment is made on extremely conservative esti-mates of values. Prince Albert proposes to adopt the single tax system, which will undoubtedly promote building operations.

Prince Albert is the centre of a rich farming district, which has not had a crop failure in twenty-six years. This season's harvest, which in some parts of the West was not the best, was bountiful in the Prince Albert dis-

Prince Albert is the centre which controls the output of one of the largest lumber areas in Canada. It has four lumber mills, two of them of the largest in the Dominion, with an annual capacity of 150,000,000 feet of lumber, employing 3,000 men, whose earnings contribute about $100,000 per month.

which cannot supply the demand for brick. Prince Albert has seven hotels, and work has been started on a new hotel, to be called "The Empress," which will be erected at a cost of $150,000. This hotel will be finished early in 1911, and will be one of the finest hotels in Western Canada.

Prince Albert is modern in every department of the conveniences which contribute to the comforts of living. It has an excellent sewer system, waterworks, telephones, electric light. Its streets are lighted by arc lights, and its street lighting system is the best in the Civic improvements completed this year place Prince Albert in the front rank of progressive Western centres. Granolithic sidewalks have been put down throughout the business section of the city and a portion of the residential district, at a cost of $70,000. Next season practically the entire main portion of the city, both business and residential areas, will be covered by granolithic sidewalks.

The City has already carried by-laws providing for the installation of a water filtration system, a trunk sewer system, and an increased equipment for its pumping station. This work is to be carried on next year at a cost of $250,000.

The City has undertaken the development of 10,000 horsepower at LaColle Falls, twenty miles below the city, on the Saskatchewan River. This energy will be brought to the city on high potential cables. It will make Prince Albert the leading manufacturing center of the middle

Some authorities estimate that Prince Albert will have a population of at least 60,000 within the next five years, and its possibilities in this direction are unlimited. The residential section, which is principally on the "Hill," is noted as being one of the prettiest West of the Great Lakes.

Prince Albert is the only city in the West which has not been "boomed." Capitalists from all parts of the country have visited the city within the past six months, and all agree that its future is the most assured of any center in the Canadian West. It has all of the advantages accruing from the development of a great agricultural area, besides having unlimited timber. minerals, waterpower, and raw material of almost

City View Subdivision

General Description

"CITY VIEW" subdivision, as its name implies, overlooks the city, and is located on the beautiful area known locally as "The Hill," the residential section of Prince Albert.

"City View" is distant one mile and a quarter from the City Hall and less from the Post-Office, and one-half mile from the City High School and St. Alban's Young Ladies'

The residential section of Prince Albert is becoming centred on "The Hill," and must continue to move in that direction, because the incoming railways will interfere, to a large extent, with the further filling up of the "Flat" for residences, the "Flat" skirting the Saskatchewan River. The location of "City View" overlooks the city, and the view is really magnificent.

The city is considering the early inauguration of an electric railway for its streets. The present plans indicate that this system will run along the hill, within two blocks of "City View."

Prince Albert's Wonderful Railroad Facilities

HE Canadian Northern Railway serves Prince Albert from three directions. The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway is building to the city from Watrous, on its main line, and will have a train service early in 1911. The Canadian Pacific Railway is building to Prince Albert from Lanigan, and, it is expected, will have a service in the early future. Prince Albert is to be one of the most, if not the most, important points on the Dothe most, important points on the Dominion Government proposed waterway from Edmonton to Winnipeg, for which the preliminary survey has already been made. The Hudson Bay & Pacific Railway, financed by British capitalists, with headquarters in Prince Albert, has completed 120 miles of its survey of the line from Prince Albert to Fort Churchill, on the Hudson Bay. Work on actual construction, as announced by Chief construction, as announced by Chief Engineer Attwood, is to be commenced from Prince Albert this year. with the building of fifteen miles of roadbed to the Little Red River, the bridge over which will be constructed during the coming winter. The construction of this line, which will be rushed to completion, will make Prince Albert the terminal point for one of the largest railway propositions ever undertaken on this continent. ent. It will be the clearing-house for the commerce between Canada of attracting more attention to this city than any other commercial undertaking in the history of Western Canada.

Its Picturesque and Healthful Location

PRINCE ALBERT possesses, indubitably, the most healthy and picturesque location of any city in Western Canada. The city lies on the south bank of the North Saskatchewan River. This stately stream, which is over a thousand feet wide at its narrowest point here, flows from the Rocky Mountains all the way to Lake Winnipeg. It is from the river that the city draws its supply of pure, clear water. Back of the river is "The Hill," a shaded wooded eminence upon which are going up to-day numerous residences destined, in years to come, to cause Prince Albert to be known as the City of Beautiful Homes. Upon this "Hill" section is located this modern subdivision of "City View," which is now being offered for home sites. Prince Albert is essentially the City of Home Life. One has but to look at the substantial residences to see that they have been built with a view to providing a permanent abiding place.
The pretty lawns, with their shady trees, all speak of the artistic taste of a home-loving people. The city is doing its part, too. Boulevards are being built along the ing built along the principal residential streets, and along the river front.

SHEA'S_ VAUDEVILLE. MAJESTIC--WORLD OF PLEASURE CO. GAYETY— LONDON BELLES.

Comedies Predominate

The current theatrical season seems to be one in which comedies predominate. The theatrical managers have long been known to follow, in the character of their productions, the first signal hit of the season.

Henry B. Harris started off this season by scoring the first signal success with James Forbes' comedy, "The Commuters" and two weeks later "The Country Boy," another comedy which scored a big hit. Immediately following these two productions, every manager in New York sent to the front, their contributions of comedies and as a result, from the 15th of August, when "The Commuters" was produced on Broadway, until the 1rst of November, New York has been simply swamped with plays built along comedy lines. The question now revolving in the minds of the managers is: "Has the New York public seen enough of comedies; if so, what will be the character of the next turn of the public taste?"

-Glint of Humor.

Edmund Breese, who will star in Percy Mackaye's play, "The Scarecrow," tells the following story of a prayer of two bell boys who were working in a hotel during the late San Francisco catastrophe. While the walls were shaking and fire raging one beli boy, impressed with the danger of the situation, uttered the following prayer: "Oh. Lord, send down your Son to help us in this great peril.". "Nix-nix-on that son stuff," prayed the second bell boy, "come down yourself; this is no kindergarten party."

She Changed Her mind. A story is related of an actress very well-known both in America and in England.

A manager desired her services very much for a part which he had, which fitted her personality. The actress insisted that she be featured and on

At the Princess

Now that the first stage of the new theatrical reason is upon us, and many of the big shows have already been presented here, it is possible to get a pretty clear line on the shows which will be relegated to the storeshouse, will be relegated to the storeshouse, and attention was divided to tween all the members of the company.

'On the other hand it is more than possible that the playwrights are responsible, to a great extent, for the present 'star system.' In writing a play, they made one character stand out above all the rest, and this part, over-shadowing the others, naturally gave to the actor or actress who played it, the central position. The public, overlooking the fact that the author's lines made this particular actor the dominant character, credited to him or her, the success in which the play was held. Out of this grew the idea of the manager to star the actor, and by concentrating the artillery of his forces on the favored one, created a vogue that will last as long as the theatre endures.

'The star system has many advantages. It offers to the smallest member of a theatrical organization an incentive to do his or her best, and spurred on by the reward of a stellar position, give to the public thelibest work.

The star system has aroused more interest in the theatre than any other condition that has ever existed, as regards theatricals.

GRACE VAN STUDDIFORD'S PROTEGES

As each one blames it on the other, there is no way to find out just who conceived the idea. Dorothy Wilson has known Grace Van Studd iford the longest. Perhaps it was she who put it into the heads of her chums, Blanch Betters, Grace Mille r and Blanche Babbett, to run away from the Jeanne Meade Seminary of Norwalk, Conn., and join Miss Van Studdiford in her new play, "A Bridal Trip." Anyway, these four young society misses are now learning the ways of the theatrical world instead of acquiring the polish for which the famous Norwalk school is noted. Miss Van Studdiford is so fond of them she posed specially with them for

By instruction of the hon minister of agriculture a distribution is being made this season of samples of superior sorts of grain and petatoes to Canadian farmers for the improvement of seed. Some have even insisted that Venus, Juno, and Minerva, of mythological fame, and Marie Antoinette, Josephine and Marie Louise of historical memory, if alive to-day, would fade into domignificance, placed in comparison with the thousand and one famous beauties of the hour.

As a paradox to the universal ambition of "God's fairest creatures." Eleanor Stuart, who plays "Molly" in "The Deserters," is an example. Miss Stuart, off the stage, is noted for her comely features, and to set them off is just as much interested in the latest modes, vogues and fashions as any other woman, but the artist in her, rising uppermost, submerges the feminary in my experience, at least. And to think thet these mesors ages came from those who had been associated with me in those times of play-producing which are so apt to test one's temper is all the more gratifying. No argument avails desperation. The thought unborn offends thee more than I do." from Rosalind. Fame talks in brass and marble of Damon and Pythias, of David and Jonathan, but poetry embalims mummy-like the words:" "If she's a traitor why so am I. Like Juno's swans we are coupled and inseparable." No argument; she's banished. "I'm firm and irrevocable." "Then banish me my ilege." "You're a fool." from the duke. But Celia: "Oh! my poor Rosalind, whither wouldst thou go? Shall we part, sweet in the yeart of the world with the company." So that now, she is easily the most realestatey figure in stagedom. Out of the profits of "The Widow Jones" she bought a house in West "Beauty it's cold waywakes." "Beauty it's cold waywakes."

"Let's take our jewels and wealth and Touchstone with us." At home they find her "bed untreasured" and Hesperia hears them talk of that youth that lately foiled the sinewy Charles; but no search or inquisition can find the foolish runaway; they are cosily couched on a sheep cote in the forest of Arden.

Foster Nurse.

The fame of Oriando runs fleet-footed to Oliver, who resolves to burn him and his for spite and envy but Adam warned the young man and with "500 crowns the thrifty hire as foster nurse" they away they know where. Soon Adam faints and the fond young friend drags him to shade of a great tree while he tempts the dangers of the forest wild. He soon finds Frederick, who entertains him and Adam hospitably. Now at opposite ends of the forest there are the shepherds and the sheep cote hard by the "tuft of olives" and the Curia-gallicana of Frederick, his friend and Oriando. Ranging like red deer Orlando meets the angry shepherd Ganymede, who complains that she'd soon sure the verse monger. Celia saw a chain the selfsame of Rosalind's. She changes color with emotion. "Alas, the day, what shall I do with doublet and hose." "You said you would counsel the fancy monger." "Tell me the remedy for I'm he." "Tis easy." "Come every day to woo me." They bargain. Alas, in two hours I will leave thee. "If you break one jot of your promise, beware of censure." But he breaks it and has reason.

"Are you not the owners." "Here's a bloody napkin from the youth who promised to return." "In the forest a wretched, ragged man lay sleeping—a green and gilded snake wreathed his neck and a lean kloness crouched by him and young Orlando joined in deadly combat and then from miserable slumber I awaked." The lioness had torn some flesh away and he fainted and cried upon Rosalind. At this Ganymede swoons but insists she is counterfeiting.

This may be both war and politics, but justice to the people would suggest that time should be given to bring the arguments pro and con home to them, so that they might repder not a hasty but a well-considered verdict. After all there is room for doubt if imperial politics are in any way superior to Canadian or colonial. That the rule of the lords as at present constituted is unbearable and insupportable everybody is agreed, but what is the rock on which the conference went to pieces? The public has as much right to know the opposition views as the government proposals. One thing suggests itself, namely, that with its various schemes the super-radical orsuggests itself, namely, that with its various schemes the super-radical organization at the head of affairs in Great Britain is running the nation into a fine bill of expense and a bill that will ultimately mean more direct taxation than the fair-trade policy of the opposition will ever bring about. The chap country to live in theory has evidently gone to the "demnition bow-wows."

I have a letter before me from a gentleman complaining briterly of his experience at a local theorie last Saturday evening. Here is what he says:

"I know your interest in public order and decency. Your writings all point in that direction. I wish you had been at a theatre that aspires to be the most fashionable in the city last Saturday night. Many inquirers, reading or hearing of the dangerous and mysterious qualities of quicksands, have sought in vain to find the difference between these and ordinary expanses of sand. Why do they engulf the unwary? An answer to this question is difficult to obtain and is generally unsatisfactory when found. In a lecture on the properties of sand, delivered at the Royal In lips tells us that the difference between quicksand and other sand is accidental rather than fundamental. He says, as reported in Nature, London:

"A certain amount of unnecessary mystery seems to surround this matter. I hasten to point out that the grains of quicksand appear to be in no way extraordinary. Nevertheless, the fact remains that sand in certain localities upon the coast readily gives way under a load.

"Instances are recorded where a cart driven over a wet shore has rapidly dis-appeared beneath the surface. The geaeral opinion seems to be that this is due to a soft underlying layer of clay or mud, which no doubt in some instan is the true explanation.

"Mr. Carus-Wilson, who is an expert in these matters, pointed out to me recently, however, that another factor may be the imprisoning of gas between the grains, due to decomposition of organic

"It must be borne in mind that any surface in so good a contact with wet sand that the air is excluded will be held fast by atmospheric pressure; and further, that an object so situated and tilted this way and that, will rapidly become embedded and swallowed up. It is by this simple process that the cele-brated Goodwin Sands have claimed so many victims. A large percentage of the vessels stranded upon them, however, float safely off on the rising tide, but now and then one is caught and doomed.

A Successful Education

You remember the two youths that were the biggest figures in college last commencement day. One had stuck to his books, learned all that was in them, and graduated with first honors. The other had captained his football team, stroked his crew, and—he just graduated. If you are the sort of boy that the typical parent wants his son to be you will imitate the first of these. If you are the typical boys' boy you will imitate the second. Succeed in being either, and you will be

The athlete's life is generally short. That casual injury on the gridiron has developed a chronic weakness; that strain of the four-mile row has mamed his heart; that constant and sudden variation from training to the lack of training has sapped his virility. The man has offered up his constitution to his muscles. If he has escaped, in what stead will stand him that athletic education acquired at the cost of his brain? His football captaincy will have qualified him for coaching other young animals; his rowing-arm will enable him to boss underpaid tollers for an illiberal wage. "A sound mind in a sound body?" Excellent. But not the mind developed to the point of physical enervation; not the body developed to the point of mental sterility. The successful education fits you not for topping your fortune with one cent more than you can earn, nor yet for making books or muscles an end rather than a means; the only education is that which makes you of some use to your fellow-men and forbids you to forget that your fellow-men are all mankind.—Reginald Wright Kauffman, in The Cosmopolitan.

"The real work of composition with Balzac hardly commenced until he had a set of galley proofs. What he sent first to the printer, scribbled with his crow's quill, was a mere sketch: and the sketch itself was a sort of Chinese puzzle, largely composed of scratched out and interpolated sentences, passages and chapters being moved about in a curious chasse-croise, which the type-setters discipered and arranged as best they could. Margins and inter-columnal spaces they found crowded with interpolations; a long trailing line indicated the way here and there to the destination of the inserted passages. A cobweb was regular in comparison to the task which the printers had to tackle in the hope of finding beginning, middle and end. In the various presses where his books were set up, the employes would never work longer than an hour on end at his manuscript. And the indemnity he had to pay for corrections reached

As the result of a special mission sent out by the German imperial government, the late Professor Koch established in India the bacteriology of cholera. Peter Cadogan, with his servant, Terry Creagh, aboard the scho Colleen, is making for New Orleans to pick up Lomax, prior to a cruise in the Caribbean Sea, when suddenly he is aroused from his slumbers by a cry of "Help!" coming across the water.

Investigating Cadogan finds, half a mile astern, a dory containing a young girl, Jane Todd, unconscious from exposure. He explains that he heard her call for assistance, and is mystified by her reply that

With the passing of its first passion the wind settled down to steady, persistent, tireless blowing, and brought the rain. For half an hour the decks were ankled seep in rain water when they were not knee-deep with seas. Then the downpour ceased and a pallid dawn crept out of the east, curtaing the twilight.

An hour later the clouds parted, torn to rags by the gale, and patches of

In the act she heard a voice that named her in a shriek—a voice from the deck—and started up, intuitively alarmed.

That had been Mr. Cadogan's voice; he had called her, imploringly, as if in need!

Simultaneously the schooner reeled and lurched like a stricken thing. She heard a crash on deck, and a scurry of heels across the planks, and—and somehow found herself at the head of the companionway, staring with eyes the companionway, staring with eyes momentarily terror-filled up and down

For she had found time to glance in more curiously about the deck for a clue to the whereabouts of the missing man, and had discovered it in a single hand clutching the leeward rail with a grip of iron, its owner swinging invisibly over side.

Panting, soobling with excitement, the girl bore heavily upon the helm, got a good full on her (as the saying is when a ship's sails are made to swell hard with wind), and locked the tiller. Then, leaving the Colleen for the time being to her own devices, ran to the rail and, peering over, looked down into Cadogan's strained and agonized face.

There followed breathless moments of wild work.

Handily as a cat-boat the schooner paid off; her lean canvas caught the wind and fattened on it; she gathered way, laid down to her work and forged ahead upon her former course, and the billow heaving up behind could no more than lift her and pass on.

And the girl got her breath in a quick gasp. The worst was over. But she did not pause. There was still work to be done. She durst not leave the wheel lest the schooner broach to again.

To the contrary, she must leave it temporarily at least. A life, if not two, depended upon her being able to do so.

She had earned that moment.

Cadogan, after a moment's rest, got him up stiffly, and would have gone to her assistance, but she waved him.

"I'm all right." she called down the wind. "Take Terry below and leave me to take care for the ship. I can handle her for a while." And Cadogan, staring, was forced to admit that she could, and that with

Even at that stage, when he was still trembling with shock and shivering with coldwet to the skin and childed to the bone—he found himself dwelling in admiration on the picture she presented. The wind molded her garments tightly about her, and tore at heavy tresses of hair, whipping them across her face, so that now and again she must lift and toss her head to clear her eyes —eyes that shone like stars of darkness.

THERE IS NO EASIEST WAY!

Copyright, 1910, by the

EFORE you begin work tomorrow morning answer this question: HOW LAZY DO YOU DARE TO BE?

Have you no responsibilities, no thought for the future? If so, you can be a good deal of a loafer without worry-

Have you all the money, all the reputation that you want? In that case, rest on your past achievements and spend the rest of your life telling other people how to do as well as you have done.

Are you utterly without ambition, without interest in yourself or in others? Then quote that proverb of the shiftless, "What's the use?" and continue to be a good-for-nothing and a ne'er-do-well.

If you have nothing to accomplish, there is really no use trying. Remember that all work is hard work, and that there is no easiest way to anything of importance.

If you are interested in yourself or in orners, if you are ambitious to be something more than a drag on your fellow men, if you have any hope, any ambition and desire to do credit to the mother that gave you life or the children or the wife or the relatives that depend on you, begin your work Monday morning by forgetting all about any easiest way and by courageously entering on the hard way

If you are human you are naturally lazy. But once in a lifetime you meet a man who likes to work ALL THE TIME.

Why do men procrastinate, putting off till to-morrow work that ought to have been done the day before yesterday? Why do they find excuses for quitting a little inside the quitting hour and getting down to work ten or fifteen minutes after the time for beginning?

Why do they rack their brains for excuses for slighting this and that task which presents difficulties, sidetracking it for work that can be done mechanically and without any particular mental exertion?

For the same reason that the schoolboy comes tardily to school and studies "Old Sleuth" when he ought to be studying his geography.

Laziness is inherent. And the men who work the hardest and get the most done in the course of a day often have to fight with it from the time they open their eyes in the morning till at last they lay down their working tools or pull down their desks at night.

They DARE NOT BE LAZY. They know the penalty of laziness.

It is one of the laves of the life that we live on this planet that the things most to be desired are hardest to get. You have heard that before, doubtless, and you will often hear it again. By and by you will begin to think about it, and then the man who first put it into words will have accomplished his mission in life, as far as you are concerned.

There is, of course, a difference in men—a difference in BRAINS—but even the dullest man can grow, even the commonplace plodder can make mental progress by continued trying.

In a suburban village near New York City is a young man who has a business as a public stenographer, bringing him in a good many thousands of dollars a year.

At the age of thirty he was a carpenter, and not a very good carpenter. He earned about two dollars a day, and he had a growing family which made increasing demands upon his earnings.

Instead of blaming Fate for making him a poor carpenter, this young man decided that he had made a mistake in being a carpenter at all. He had no great talent for working with tools—he lacked the executive ability to become a boss carpenter and from that get into a contracting business.

At night he spent much time thinking, and at last he went to a successful man whom he knew and asked him for advice.

"Do something else," said his adviser.
"Tackle something hard, something that you think you can't do at all. The very fact that it is hard will make you determined to do it; working at it will develop the character that

The Laziest May Often

His Youth—He Always
Suffers the Most Severely in the End.

The practice of his new calling had to be almost continuous once it was begun. A stenographer's hand loses its cunning as soon as does a billiard player's, and once the fingers cease to be lithe and elastic the quickest mind will avail the shorthand writer nothing.

But this man knew that there was no easiest way. When political jobs were offered him he refused them. They paid better salaries than he could hope to get at that time, but he knew that his steady plodding would succeed in the end, and it did succeed.

Better than any story of great painter or great author is the tale of this man's success, for it teaches that a great deal can be accomplished without native talent—that mere determination, coupled with good common sense, will get a man out of the rut of poverty and place him in comfortable circum-

An engineer who has solved many baffling problems of his profession was asked if he did not often become discouraged when he faced what seemed to be the impossible.

"Never," he said. "I forget all about the impossibility and go to work. I go at the first end of the problem that presents itself, and get away with that if I can. Then I tackle the next stage. If the thing I'm trying to do can't be done I find it out soon enough, and I get a lot of good mental discipline out of the work I have done. But usually it CAN be done. Short of perpetual motion there are not many engineering problems that can't be managed somehow, in these days of mechanical progress. And if I fail, somebody else will take up the work where I left it off and succeed."

There is no easiest way to anything great, as all the world's great men, however mighty their genius, have discovered. It is equally true that there is no easiest way to anything worth while.

The "get-rich-quick" swindlers, who pile up stolen wealth, find in the end that the easiest way they thought they had discovered was only the way of shame and unhappiness.

Here and there, to and fro, goes the lazy man, working harder to get out of work than his more sensible neighbor works to accomplish the tasks that are set him to do.

In the end he sits on a bench in a city park and, watching the more prosperous world go by, wonders why it has not paid him the living that he thinks it owes him.

Most men are not geniuses. They cannot hope to paint great pictures, to write great novels or to inspire millions with strains of noble music. Perhaps they ought to be grateful, for usually the work that is required to develop talent is ten times that necessary for ordinary commonplace success.

The latter is within reach of most men who are willing to work for it. But work they must. There is no easiest way.

will bring success. Why don't you study stenography? Good court stenographers are scarce, and they get good pay."

The carpenter thought that he lacked the education a stenographer ought to have, and said so.

"Get it then," said the other man. "Sit up nights if you have to; it will do you good, if you don't lose too much sleep."

The carpenter went home and thought this over. Better still, he talked it over with his wife, whose future happiness depended on him, and who had a right to know and to concur in his plans.

He decided to be a stenographer. He began by studying spelling.

Of course, it was hard, laborious work, all the harder at the end of a day at the bench, when 60 per cent of his energy had been put into physical exertion. But the very fact that he was trying to do something harder than he had ever done before gave him courage. There was inspiration in the thought that he was now working with his mind.

He managed to become a fairly accurate speller. Then he bought books on stenography and studied them.

. He found that he needed a teacher, and saved money to hire one.

As he gradually acquired the art of reducing words to signs and needed practice, his wife sat up with him at night and read to him speeches of politicians, which he took down in shorthand.

At the end of a year he left the carpenter's bench and got a very small job in a lawyer's office. At the end of another year his ability secured for him a court position. To-day he has six or seven men working for him, and has all the business he can do.

Now, this is no case of genius, or of special talent rising superior to commonplace surroundings. Imagine, if you can, the cruel, heartbreaking labor that this man found it necessary to perform in order to learn a business entirely foreign to anything he had done before.

While his old associates were playing cards or going the rounds of places of amusement he was spelling words, row after row, patiently and with infinite determination.

SOME FACTS CONCERNING THE GREAT-WEST LIFE

The Great-West Life commenced business on August 18th, 1892.

With Home offices at Winnipeg, the Company has now Eight Branch Offices, with a field force of 115 alltime agents, 495 spare-time agents, 9 inspectors and 1800 medical examiners.

From the commencement, the progress of the Company has been rapid and substantial—especially of recent years, as it became more widely known that the excellent results anticipated for policyholders were being amply realized. This satisfactory and consistent progress is indicated by the record of business following:

	Business	in	force	Dec.	31st.	1893	$ 2,131,500
	Business	in	force	Dec.	31st.	1897	6,792,982
	Business	in	force	Dec.	31st.	1898	8,261,877
	Business	in	force	Dec.	31st.	1900	11,701,569
	Business	in	force	Dec.	31st.	1904	20,611,399
	Business	in	force	Dec.	31st.	1905	24,216,882
	Business	in	force	Dec.	31st.	1906	27,925,460
	Business	in	force	Dec.	31st.	1907	35,258,887

	Duelnoss	40	force	Dec	21 at	1909	45:990.686

For three successive years the Great-West Life has enjoyed the distinction of selling the largest Canadian business of all the companies. The success of recent years is more than ever apparent in 1910, and in May the Company passed an important stage in its development by reaching a business in force of $50,000,000—secured Company passed an important stage in its development by reaching a business in lord of $00,000,000 in less than eighteen years.

As the business of the Company developed, it has been necessary on various occasions to move into more commodious Head Office premises—until the very large development of recent years brought the Company to a stage where it was no longer economical or convenient to rent, and the directors decided to build a suitable Home Office on a site secured on Lombard Street, next to the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, and in the centre of the financial district. A picture of the building, as it will appear when completed, is shown above. A portion of the building will be leased, and due thought has been given to the future expansion by providing foundations sufficiently massive to eventually carry ten additional storeys.

In accounting for the rapid growth of the Company, prominence must be given to the advantages experienced in the profitable investment of funds. For many years the average net rate earned has exceeded 7 per cent.—last year the net rate was 7.05 per cent., and the gross rate 7.65 per cent. So satisfactory has the policy of the Company been in this respect that the mortgage investments have increased from $47,000 in December, 1893, to approximately $6,500,000 at the present time. The importance of the interest rate is evidenced by the following statement by an eminent British Actuary:

"It may serve to indicate the great importance of obtaining a good return on the investments, if it is realized that one per cent. of increased interest on the funds of a company will, on the average, have as great an effect as a saving in expenditure equal to ten per cent. on the average income; while, if an office could count on realizing five per cent, in place of three it might reduce its premiums some thirty per cent., or double its bonuses."

Added to high interest earnings are low operating expenses. Systematic economy has given the Great-West Life a position second to none in this essential respect.

A further advantage enjoyed by the Great-West Life is found in its favorable mortality experience—the fruit of careful selection of risks. Last year, for example, the mortality was only 47 per cent. of the expected, according to the Government Valuation Table. Under these circumstances it can be readily understood that both on participating and non-participating plans the Great-West Life can offer insurance on unequaled terms.

Since commencing business, the Company has paid $1,360,383 in death claims, and there were, at the end of 1909, 25,941 policies in force. The net premium income has increased from $50,000 in 1893 to $1,594,534 in 1909. Three five-yearly distributions of profits have been made. A typical letter of appreciation is appended:

Re My Policy, No. 1578. Dear Sirs: I have just received your cheque in settlement of the above policy, and find the result of my investment is that I have received back all the money paid for premiums with compound interest at 3½ per cent, or more than a savings bank would have allowed, in addition to insurance during 15 years for the amount of the policy.

Such satisfactory results should convince those taking out insurance now of the advantage of being able to have their funds invested for them by men with such long and successful experience as the directors of your company

Those contemplating life insurance should investigate the attractive policies of

HOW OTHERS HAVE BUILT

Edited by PRANKLIN E. BELFRY

Illustrated here we have the residence of J. G. Bauld, which was built for him on the west side of Oriole-road a year or two ago. It is a modern type of house that grows in interest as you study it. Its color scheme, with dark red brick work and hedge green shingles, is a quiet combination, but well designed, with every feature having its purpose. The principal interest in this house is the arrangement of its rooms and halls and cannot help but please those who are searching for something unusual in house planning.

The loggia is surrounded with a brick parapet and the floor cemented. The main hall is made attractive with an alcove, divided from the hall with a heavy timbered screen and lighted with a large bay window with built-in-seats. This woodwork is of antique oak, stained, and with brown burlap and cream frieze and ceiling is very effective. To one who has had the opportunity of viewing so many different houses and finding the main stairs the first feature met upon entering, a treat is experienced in being received into this hall.. Your first impression is cheerfulness and hospitality. The stair hall is enclosed, but becomes convenient from all portions of the house, permitting the elimination of a rear stair and saving such space to be used in better rooms.

The reception room has the appearance of being roomy and is exceedingly bright because of its shape, its large windows and its decorations. The walls are covered with richly patterned paper of a pale buff tint and the wood trim, including the columns to the inglenook, are white enamelled. A colonial mantel, also white, trims a fireplace and hearth of white tile.

The dining room has a delightful combination and blending of browns in its walls and woodwork. Finished in ash, with a high burlap dado, buff colored frieze and cream ceiling in panels between heavy wood beams. You are undoubtedly impressed with the exceptional and practical fitting-up of the kitchen and pantry. A screen about six feet high cuts off the working space of the kitchen and this space is fitted with drop tables. In the sitting room there is a picture of comfort, with large seats about the fireplace and the broad bay window to the south. The principal bedroom has a boudoir adjoining, with its windows letting in the sun from either direction. These rooms are handsomely decorated, and altogether with the four rooms in the attic a great deal of space is gained in comparison with its general dimensions. The plans show considerable study and the result is a credit to the architect. Mr. James Thomson, whose and the result is a credit to the architect, Mr. James Thomson, whose creative ability in residential work has been appreciated by many house owners thruout city.

The Dream of Eastern Alliance.
World's Work.

The newest theory—born probably in Japan—is that all the Asiatic peoples shall form an alliance among themselves; that Japan having gained a high place in the family of nations, should be given carte blanche to train a mighty army in China; and that they together should give freedom and independence to all in Asia who would "bow down and worship" the new leader. The white race would then know its place.

So fantastic a theory needs but little probing. If Chinese find it hard to get along with the Manchus, Mongols, and Lamas, will they cast themselves into the embrace of the Japanese? A few years ago, when Japan was protesting against the Russian domination of the ancient heritage of the Manchus and was hinting Russian menace to Korea, the young Chinese (and even some older statesmen like Chang Chih Tung and Tuan Fang) clutched at the idea of an alliance of two branches of the one race for their common protection. But now Japan has an alliance with Great Britain, and an agreement with Russia, and, what is more apparent, does with Korea as it wills, and is very annoying in Manchuria. Such friendship, China is unable to appreciate.
