Potato Warehouse Not Going Up

T. W. Caldwell, M. P. for Carleton Place, who was in the city in connection with the potato warehouse to be erected by the Federal Government on the West Side, held conference yesterday with Commissioner Bullock, J. C. Cheesley, agent of the Marine and Fisheries Department, and R. E. Armstrong, secretary of the Board of Trade. He was disappointed to find that nothing had been done towards erecting a frostproof warehouse and expressed a fear that if it were not erected soon, a large portion of the potato shipments would go through Boston, which port was clamoring for the business.

The hitch appears to be a clause in the lease which the city offers the Government, respecting the wharfage, which is not acceptable to the Government. Mr. Caldwell obtained the local viewpoint of the situation yesterday and he left for Ottawa last night, saying: "Whatever obstacles there are in the way, I am not going to give up until I put it through. The potato shippers need that warehouse and I intend to see that it is erected."

WHERE DO YOU STAND?

Are you with the majority or are you with the minority? It is perfectly evident that the majority is not Jesus God's way today. And of those who comprise the membership of the Christian church a large percentage are not very enthusiastic about their religion, nor do they regard their membership in the church as a matter of very great importance. They have a name that they live but are dead.

Standing with the majority or with the minority? Or God's message to the church, will be the subject of the sermon next Sunday morning at the Hartland Baptist church. In the evening the pastor will again preach and will take for his subject "The Signs of Shunning." Special music will be provided for both services by the choir.

A crowd of 15 men with Allison M. Shaw as foreman, dug 55 holes and put up 15 poles in one day on the main electric power line between Lakeville, Jacksonville and Hartland.

About 100 holes were dug in an average time of seven minutes by the use of dynamite on their section. This crew have put up 17 miles of line. If anyone has a record to surpass this, they would like to be heard from.

After singing "God be with you till we meet again," prayer was offered and the company dispersed, all feeling that they had spent a very pleasant evening.

C. OF E. CONCERT

A concert given on Tuesday evening at last week by the W. A. of Trinity church, assisted very ably by Mrs. S. S. Miller, was a triumphant success and $78 realized for the building fund. The theatre was completely filled and the audience proved very appreciative of the most excellent program that ran for more than two hours.

It is rare that so much talent and so many trained voices can be assembled in a town so small as Hartland. The most outstanding number of the program was a male quartette, composed of Messrs. Birmingham, Sykes, Haigh and Coysh. Their rendition of "The Lost Chord" and "Annie Laurie" was magnificent.

So many others deserve special mention that it is best to simply say that the whole program was first class. It here follows:

Piano and Traps, Mr. Sherlock, Mr. Teddie.

Duet—A Woman in Gray—Mr. Haigh, Elizabeth Hayward.

Recitation, Wm. Hayward and Irene Harter.

Solo—Neath the Watching Stars—Mr. Sykes.

Solo—Hello of the Sea—Muriel Miller.

PLEASANT EVENT

AT SUMMERFIELD

On Tuesday evening, Nov. 13, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lunn of Summerfield were surprised by a large number of their friends who gathered in to spend a social hour with them preparatory to their going to Lowell, Mass., for the winter. The visitors had not previously made known their intentions and Mr. and Mrs. Lunn were much surprised and greatly delighted when they arrived. The evening was spent in music and social conversation. A delicious luncheon was served which was much enjoyed by all. Rev. D. R. Chayen, in a pleasing speech referred to the high esteem in which Mr. and Mrs. Lunn were held as members of the community, being much interested in and always ready to aid in supporting every good work. Mr. Lunn in a few words fittingly replied.

After singing "God be with you till we meet again," prayer was offered and the company dispersed, all feeling that they had spent a very pleasant evening.

WHAT TRUSTEES REQUIRE OF TEACHERS

Secretary-Treasurer of the Carleton A. Paper Given by J. Stirling King, Co. and N. B. Trustees and Ratepayers' Associations, before the Carleton-Victoria Teachers' Institute, Woodstock, Nov. 8.—Presenting Four Great Points of the Teachers' Influence and Leadership—Community Interest in the School—Power of Maintaining Order and Discipline—Moral Influence—Student Attraction.

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen: I wish to thank the members of the executive committee of the Institute for their kindness in extending to me a very hearty invitation to address this meeting today. To be quite frank with you I was delighted to find that some months ago this committee thought of giving me a place on the program, not that I coveted this honor for any selfish aim or purpose or to further my own personal interests, but I felt that this decision manifested a desire on the part of the leaders of this organization of teachers to reach forth the cordial hand of welcome to the end that the interests of both the teachers and trustees might be placed on a clearer, broader and more intelligent understanding; that the present good feeling might be still further promoted; and that the plan of co-operation might be encouraged and built up.

It is a sad thing to see, to hear about and to read of the feeling of coldness, lack of interest, distrust and suspicion that is so prevalent everywhere today, not only in school or educational matters, but in society, politics, business and even in religion. Selfishness is at the bottom of it all—we are so afraid that the other fellow is going to put something over on us—this party or that province or state or country is so anxious about its own interests that very little or attention is given to finding a basis on which together they can study, and promote the best interests of both. It does seem so childish—just like the actions of ill-natured and disagreeable children—for one country or section or organization to draw itself away and say "You cannot have what you wish from me unless you give me what I want and just as I wish to have it." Don't you see it's the spirit behind all this that makes the difference?

And so I repeat, I am very pleased to have this opportunity to do my bit toward the development of the mutual interest of teachers and trustees. I wish I had the ability to present this subject "What Trustees expect of Teachers" as it should be presented to such an assembly of alert and well trained educationists as it before me. Our methods and devices in consequence or demand anything that you must do, nor am I going to attempt any flights of eloquence, but in a friendly, sincere and openhearted talk try to draw your attention to some of the more outstanding qualities of mind and heart that trustees expect to find in teachers today.

And when I speak of teachers or trustees I mean in a general average way. You know and I realize that we have trustees who have very few qualifications for the office as it should be filled today. Time was when it made very little difference who was trustee in a community, but today everything is much more complex and intense, changes are swift, increasing demands for more and better equipment, former luxuries are now necessities; in short the old order of things has passed away and we need the services of the very best men of the community on the trustee board. But the people are busy and not always alive to their own best interests along educational lines. And so I see a great opportunity for the teacher in that district. No, I don't mean that the teacher ought to go out and drive all the ratepayers to the school meetings—no; but I believe the teacher has a service to perform right here in "drawing" them to the school meetings, because, while she may not demand better furniture, blackboards, globe, maps, etc., she can interest the people in their own school house, in the progress of their own children and thus start an agitation for better equipment; and if the trustees are not satisfactory they will soon be replaced by others who will take an interest. You will readily understand that if a teacher goes into a district and begins to "demand" this and that she will soon have a commotion started, but not in her favor.

Why? Because all she seems to be after is to increase the expenses, roll up the tax bills. "Yes sir, the school house and everything is plenty good enough, times are hard, we cannot afford anything more." That is a sample of the talk you may hear. But my idea is for the teacher to so interest the pupils by one means or another that they will interest the parents, following this up with good well directed personal work, so that the parents themselves will demand the needed facilities. And trustees, knowing that public sentiment is favorable, will be encouraged to go ahead and make the needed improvements, both they and others will be visiting their school, talking about their school, and soon more pupils will be going to Normal, to College or be preparing for some other useful position in life.

Oh! but you say that's a big job! I know it is, in its fulfillment, and the teachers that can do it is a "big" teacher, as far as qualification measurements are concerned. But don't be frightened or discouraged by the size of the job viewed as an accomplished act and faithfully, with tact and perfect, but do your bit every day, earn-serveance and watch your influence grow. And let me say right here that while a large number of trustees realize the need and expect the teacher to start something along this line, many more have not yet visualized nor given any thought or expression to this phase of a teacher's influence.

Now aside from a teacher's influence on the parents and ratepayers in the district, restricting ourselves ourselves to educational matters, there is the matter of the teacher's influence over the pupils in school. You are required to maintain order and discipline and to diligently and faithfully teach. But if the pupils are not disposed to learn, become unruly and do not pay proper attention, then the order and discipline problem becomes a serious one, as your success as a teacher is very closely linked with this matter. Every now and then we hear of the "unruly boy" problem in the cities and large towns; a problem that is rapidly growing more serious, and is a far greater menace to school children and society in general than most people realize. And in my opinion, the children of the small towns and villages and even the country are in a general way getting much harder to manage and control. It is much more difficult to secure that quiet, steady attention that I would call "receptive," that state of mind and body too, when all outside distractions are unheeded and the pupil eagerly follows the eye, the word and the whole personal expression or impress of the teacher. Some one would call it the "proper atmosphere." Well, how to get it—there's the rub.

Trustees expect you to get it without a very necessary resort to the rod, though that is much necessary at times. Personally I do not favor the use of heavy rulers or rods, but am quite in favor of the old-fashioned birch and switch, and many times if more of this remedy were used at home the teacher would have a much easier time. However, to meet these modern conditions in the school room the teacher must train and equip herself with new influences, methods, devices and plans; must study, develop and practice her powers of mind and will to subdue and control the minds and wills of her pupils; to so develop her whole personal magnetism so that by the use of vari-tion with this the pupil is more and more forcibly attracted to the accomplishment of whatever is in hand, and gradually directs his or her whole mental attention to the duty of the hour. I almost said, "task" because that used to be a very common name for a pupil's work. But it should never, never be used—no pupil should be taught that his duty is a task, but in so far as he can be got to regard his school work as a pleasure, so far has he got on the road to success.

There is a force of repulsion and a force of attraction but the latter is the mightier and most in evidence, and if you will cultivate your powers along this line to the utmost, your problems of order and discipline will not give you so much trouble. But it will cost you study, effort and energy. You cannot attain unless you toil. Success is your reward. And you have secured a power and a force very much better than physical force. I think it was Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm—who said her mother was not so beating as her sister. Well, you do not wish to be more "beating" than the teacher we had before. And before I leave this point I would like to bring to your notice a little idea that I noticed in the last issue of the Maritime Merchant which briefly I will put this way—in trying to attract the pupil to his work do not expect to do it by taking a negative or repellent mental attitude; that is, don't be going about radiating the thought or conviction that the pupil can't do this or that any way. Let me tell you that I believe that you will convict and convince the pupil of the same thing. On the other hand I can personally witness to this power of the opposite mental attitude. A pupil says "Jack, you can't do that." "Yes, I think I can, teacher thinks I can." "How do you know? Did she tell you she thought you could?" "No, but I know she thinks I can and I am going to do it too." Is not that a power and a force in operation just as truly as that which keeps this old earth in its course?

Again let us consider for a few minutes another phase of the teacher's influence, one that has been touched upon quite strongly by the trustees in convention assembled, viz. the moral influence. And in that connection I think I should say that teachers ought not to feel at liberty to over exhaust themselves by too much exercise, over study or late hours evenings or Saturdays and Sundays. I think it is nothing more than fair to the trustees that the teacher should be required to present herself or himself before the school every morning and particularly Monday morning in the very best physical and mental condition. Besides from the moral viewpoint you are being watched by the people, especially by the children and consciously or unconsciously, according to your power and influence over them, they are taking the same attitude toward all these things as you are personating to them. Do you reverence holy things? The children will soon know it. Do you regard a lie lightly as a "fib"? "Teacher thinks it is not much wrong—only a fib," the pupils say. And the disregard of religious services—in all these ways and many others perhaps, you are wielding a power of very grave importance.

Once more and I am through. A man whose influence is still mighty in the world, once wrote to a young man, "Study to show thyself approved, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed." You sign an agreement to diligently and faithfully teach the school. To my mind, to do that it is imperative that you keep up your studies more or less, more if possible. You cannot leave off study when you get through Normal or through College and expect to keep with progress and success. You are either going ahead or going backward. If you are not interested enough in the various subjects to keep brushing up with a new book by some other writer, by magazine or newspaper articles, by a lecture now and then or by a little special work during holidays, then the fire of your energy and enthusiasm will soon go out; that "grip" on your pupils that we have been trying to point out as so necessary will soon relax and success will no longer perch on your banner.

Your pupils are interested when you are interested; they will feel the "urge" to know more when you yourself are in the grip of that desire to seek for the golden nuggets of knowledge. Study to show thyself approved. Approval, that is the voice of success, one of the prizes of the profession. A workman not ashamed. Of course we cannot all reach the same heights but we can all do better if we try. The mere effort will keep us from going to sleep or becoming dead on the job. Some day you will look back over your work. It will stand as a monument. I hope you will not be ashamed.

Have you heard about Peps? Peps is a scientific preparation put up in pastille form, which provides an entirely new and effective treatment for coughs, colds, chest and throat troubles.

Peps contain certain medicinal ingredients, which, when placed upon the tongue, immediately turn into vapor, and are breathed down the air passages to the lungs. On their journey, they soothe the inflamed and irritated membranes of the bronchial tubes, the delicate walls of the air passages, and finally enter and carry relief and healing to the lungs.

In a word, while no liquid or solid can get to the lungs and air passages, these Peps fumes get there direct, and at once commence healing.

FREE TRIAL Cut out this article, write across it the name and date of this paper, and mail it (with 1c stamp to pay return postage) to Peps Co., Toronto. A free trial packet will then be sent you. All druggists and stores sell Peps, 50c. box.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL ITEMS

On Wednesday evening of last week we enjoyed the film success "Success." The story although sort of an allegory, showing the close relationship existing between the two final twins Success and Reputation, was a remarkably good one and most cleverly carried out by the several participants. A laughable comedy was also shown. On Saturday evening one of Jack Boyle's Boston Blackie stories was shown featuring William Russell and Eva Novak. The play was a most thrilling one, having to do with prisons, convicts and jail breaks, in nearly large enough proportions to make it a blood and thunder yarn. A Pathe news and an educational reel were also shown. Read the advertising for coming attractions on the page of Hartland locals.

The gymnasium hasn't lost any of its lure yet, and many of the late younger generation spend evenings strenuously tossing the basket ball around.

VICKS FOR BABY'S COLDS

Nova Scotia Mother Swears By Vaporizing Salve

Some children seem to take one cold after another—never have a chance to build up any strength. This is apt to make them puny and delicate—just sets them back for months.

Every day more and more mothers are finding that they can best break up a cold with Vicks Vapo-Rub, the ex-ternally applied vaporizing salve. While it acts like a liniment or plas-ter, it is also inhaled as a vapor, and so gets into the throat and lungs im-mediately. The cold is often broken up over night.

Vicks is prompt, too, in croup and equally good for skin hurts and itch-ings.

Mrs. Sherman Black of 3 Silver St., Amherst, Nova Scotia, writes: "I tried Vicks VapoRub on my thirteen-months' old baby, who had bronchitis. It relieved his breathing when he was choked. Vicks was also good for my other little boy who had the croup. I advise anyone who has a cold of any kind to use Vicks. I think it is the very best remedy I have ever tried, and I have tried many, for bron-chitis. I even sent to England to get medicine, but none is as satisfactory as Vicks."

At all drug stores 50c a jar. For a free test size package, write Vick Chemical Co., 344 St. Paul St., W., Montreal, P. Q.

Though Vicks is new in Canada it has a remarkable sale in the States. Over 17 million jars used yearly.

BATH BREEZES

During the past week this town has noticed a revival in miniature, resembling somewhat the activity which was presented during the days of the war. A large number of teams are employed in the transportation of lath from McIntosh Bros' new mill, which is situated at Keenan Bridge. This lath is being loaded for export to the American Market. Pulpwood and hay are also on the move. Many cars have been shipped while others are now being loaded.

What is thought to be a fair day's work in threshing was the return of 374 bushels of oats by Perry Barker, which was accomplished between the hours of 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. While engaged for George Craine, of Gibson Settlement this amount was threshed.

Edward McSheffery, has altered the entrance to his blacksmith shop, so that now instead of entering it from Mechanic street, the doors are facing Church street. This should make it much warmer during the winter months, as the doors formerly faced the north.

A thrilling experience which not many readers would care to emulate, occurred during the past week, when Mr. and Mrs. Watts Giberson lost their way while out hunting. After spending a night, a day and another night in the forest, wandering out into the clearings to the headwaters of the Miramichi. They first entered the woods back of Johnville. However, Mr. and Mrs. Giberson are now explaining the thrills of being lost to their friends, but at the same time are thankful that they came through safely and that they are now able to relate their experience.

Miss Jewett, R. N., Fredericton, is nursing J. W. Bohnan, who, although still confined to his bed, is doing as well as can be expected.

GREEN CAPS

By Clarence Ludlow Brownell, M. A.
F. R. G. S.

Abroad one grows accustomed to all sorts of services from many sorts of servants: sweepers who precede you with a broom as you cross the street and are "pleased as Punch" with a penny; men to call at regular intervals to wind all the clocks in the house; men to polish door knobs and knockers; girls to scrub the steps; charwomen; and chimney sweeps, and what not; but personal service to people rushing through railway stations to catch trains, to recover children who have strayed through the wrong gate; to telephone back home for lost papers which must be sent on the next train following; and other services, all different, hundreds of them, is in evidence, as yet only in the great railway terminals, in Yankee land.

The GREEN CAPS are the men who perform the myriad services for the forgetful, the nervous and the bewildered. They are part of a great corporation's effort to serve. They are of recent appearance, and already function, famously. Their wits are nimble and ever on the alert. They have patience sufficient for prime minister, and capacity for meeting emergencies that require inventiveness, prompt decision, and tact to the nth degree. Altogether, the absolutely essential qualifications for the Green Cap Squad are somewhat more rigorous than those necessary for an ambassador to a first class power.

They are a sign of the times, these general and speedy utility men. They are a good sign. Indeed they are one of the significant indications that even corporations may have souls. Ever since corporations came into existence, the public has looked at them askance. The public disliked them as organizations that were never neighborly and never human—cold-blooded as fish, with neither bodies to be kicked nor souls to be damned. There was no way in which an individual could reach a corporation except through the stock market, and an individual was seldom big enough to do that.

But the Green Cap is testimony to the effect that the processes of evolution affect even such gross organism as the hitherto altogether detested corporation. A soul is developing within it. The soul is beginning to show. The name of the soul is SERVICE. Service is the keynote of the Sermon on the Mount. As the service sense develops and expands within the corporation, this heretofore abominated body will develop into an ethical organization. Many corporations will go through this process. Those that do not, will fall by the wayside. Only the fit will survive.

Therefore, there is much for the traveler as he sees the Green Caps in the great railway termini of metropolitan cities. He is a traveler not by rail only, or by steamer, but is speeding on with the perplexity adventure of life, whither he does not know, and often hopelessly, it would seem. But let him take notice. Let him be of good cheer, for the Green Caps bear witness that the journey is growing pleasanter. The wayfarer need worry less. As he waits for the raucous announcement "All aboard for ALBANY, BUFFALO, CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE, PUMPKINCORNERS, MINNEAPOLIS, SAINT PAUL AND ALL POINTS WEST" he a lost child loses its bewilderment and fright and choke down its sob because a Green Cap has found a way to soothe it. He sees a distracted mother rushing up with tearful thanks for the rescue of her precious offspring.

He hears a nervous woman whose boy has come to the station to see her off explaining that "While he has two weeks yet before vacation comes and is so likely to oversleep and be late to school." Wondering what it can possibly have to do with the function of a Green Cap, the traveler redoubles his wonder when he hears this service man say—

"I know how it is with boys, ma'am. Was one myself once you know. Don't worry about William. Just give me your telephone number. I'll call him at 6:45 and again at 7: every school day. He'll not be late."—and the traveler hardly believing he could have heard right sees an immensely relieved mother kiss her son and joyously pass through the gate.

Another traveler has left a friend in bed in the hotel over the way. The friend is ill and needs certain medicines which the traveler has been so late in getting that he will miss his train if he returns to the hotel.

"I'll take it over, sir," says the Green Cap. "I'll see he has a dose every three hours—four shots a day." (Continued from first page)

Don't worry about it, sir. Your address please. Thank you. I'll let you know how he is." And so it goes until the waiting traveler is so absorbed in listening to these evidences of service and watching its efficiency, that he does not hear "All aboard for ALBANY, BUFFALO, CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE, PUMPKINCORNERS, MINNEAPOLIS, SAINT PAUL AND ALL POINTS WEST"—and would have missed a most important engagement in the windy City had not a Green Cap mind reader touched him on the arm saying "Beg pardon, sir, were you going west? The train's made up, sir."

The Town Council is to be sincerely congratulated on the recent by-law that has been passed making it obligatory upon all persons offering wood for sale to have with them a certificate signed by an official of the town telling the exact amount of wood on the load, and the quality of the same. For a long time householders have suffered from the wood sellers, all kinds of wood, and all sizes of loads, and yet it was always according to the seller the best quality, and always there was an exact cord, or a half a cord. Now when we buy a load of wood we shall know how much we are buying, whether it is dry, and whether it is of good quality. The certificates, the proof of which the Editor has seen, is a water tight document, and Mr. Guerette, the Town Clerk, who drew it up, is to be congratulated for the manner in which he has worded and arranged it. The Town has appointed the following to be surveyors, within the town limits: Jos. E. Verret, St. Francis street, Pitt Verret, St. Francis street, Leonard Martin, Canada road, Malcolm Amos, Canada road, and Eliezer Ouellette, Victoria street.

Order Printing Now

Now is the time for produce dealers and other business men to look over their stock of office supplies and place their orders for printing before the big rush that usually sets in around the first of September. We can handle any orders sent in now very expeditiously, but if orders are deferred they may come at a time when we have weeks of work ahead. Letterheads, invoices, envelopes, all the various needed blank forms may as well be ordered now and be ready the instant they are required. We can at any time deliver blank typewriter paper, second sheets, from stock in hand, and we supply any form of special "cover" or other blank as quickly and as cheaply as they can be secured elsewhere. The facilities of The Observer Newspapers printing plant are not equalled in the province, being quite equal to the best equipped city offices. The most expert craftsmen we can secure are employed and the enterprise needs your patronage and we will lend our best effort to satisfy every customer in quality, service and price. Orders sent by mail will be filled promptly, and at just as low a price as if we gave competitive figures—and if you must have an order filled in a great rush we will never take advantage of your necessity. The regular customer, the "stayer," gets our best prices. We try to fill every order as that, we may hope for the next one with reasonable assurance. The Observer Newspapers Ltd., Hartland, N. B.

"How good it smells"—for it is packed fresh roasted, and the doubly sealed can preserves its rare aroma and flavor.

PEOPLE OF CARLETON !

Probably there is not one who will read this paragraph but has to a greater or less extent the pernicious habit of "sending away" for every-day purchases. This is not fair to your home town merchants, nor is it fair to yourselves.

True, it is reasonable that one should buy where they can get the most or the best for their money. True, also, the mail-order houses are constantly making new and tempting offers and naturally "one shops where they are invited to shop."

If the merchants of Carleton county could be assured of the cash trade of all the people within the county, they could and would give just as good values as may be secured from the mail-order catalogue; and also give the added advantage of seeing the goods and making your direct choice from the whole stock before you pay out your money.

Surrounding this panel are thirty-two mute, wordless appeals of the most enterprising merchants in Carleton county. No doubt they take this matter of sending away so much to heart that they are too full for utterance.

Perhaps they will find words to express themselves next week. We hope they will.

WORKING AGAINST
A POTATO TARIFFProposal to Continue Pulpwood Export
If U. S. Admits Tubers Free

Fredericton, Nov. 22.—Those interested in the potato trade in this province have made the suggestion to the Federal authorities that the agitation for a embargo upon the export of pulpwood be used as a means toward the removal of the United States tariff on potatoes which has practically killed the potato trade with that country except for special shipments and seed stock. The suggestion has been considered quietly for some time and it is believed that something may come from it. The proposal that Canada stop exporting pulpwood in a raw state to keep mills in the United States going is receiving the attention of a royal commission at the present time. R. W. McLehane, a Fredericton man, being one of the commissioners. The idea is based on a reciprocal arrangement in regard to the two commodities, pulpwood and potatoes. Free interchange of them would be mutually beneficial to both countries.

At present the potato trade is slack. The United States market is taking practically nothing but seed stock. The Canadian market has not yet absorbed the huge crop of Ontario and Quebec. The Cuban market still is disturbed as a result partly of the competition among three syndicates of New Brunswick exporters. Cuban buyers are using the price-cutting war among the three to their own advantage and are getting New Brunswick potatoes at remarkably low prices at Havana.

Export stock for Cuba is reported to be piling up at St. John. Twenty thousand bags have arrived there and are in storage.

Pulpwood interests in the United States, which are extremely desirous that the free export of Canadian pulpwood be continued, may support the contention of the Canadian potato growers and shippers.

BEAR AND HUNTER
WELL STARTLED

Carleton Co. Man Sees Animal in Cave, and Finally Kills Him

Fredericton, Nov. 22.—Mutual surprise and embarrassment on the part of bear and hunter are reported from Shogomoc. Henry Wilson, of Lakeville, Carleton county, was the hunter. He was after big game in the vicinity of Flat Top Mountain on the Shogomoc. He caught sight of an animal going into a cave formed by some rocks and decided to investigate. Peering in he experienced a distinct shock to find himself, and a bear regarding one another at a distance of a few inches. Mr. Wilson withdrew with the speed which the circumstances warranted and sent a shot into the cave. The shot produced the bear in the open, wounded. The hunter then finished the animal.

Others in the party were Edward Morse and two young men named Morrison, from Lakeville. They have reported that there were plain evidence that the fight on the part of bear and man was mutual.

Sewing Circle Gossip

There was some discussion at the Circle this week about winter trips to Mediterranean. The wife of the new Bank Manager said that if she ones started she would like to go as far east as Luxor or the Nile. She thought that if this place were only half as interesting as LUXOR ORIENTAL COFFEE is satisfying, it would surely be worth a visit.

PHASES OF SLEEP-WALKERS

Rarely Come to Harm Unless Abruptly Awakened.

Sleep-walkers, though they often move in most dangerous places, says a London paper, very rarely come to harm unless they are abruptly awakened. But in one case recently a lady fell out of a window in her sleep, awaking to find herself lying in the courtyard below the window. Somnambulists are supposed to be able to see with their fingers when sleepwalking. Extraordinary as this may sound, it has been proved over and over again that a sleep-walker who takes the precaution to put on gloves, before going to bed, will never walk in his sleep. The gloves should be firmly fastened at the wrists.

Another prevalent of sleep-walking is to put upon the carpet by the side of the sleepwalker's bed a strip of sheet metal, iron or zinc, wide and long enough to make certain that in getting out of bed his feet will rest upon the metal. The sudden chill is supposed to awaken him.

Yet doctors say the sleep-walking is more common in cold countries than in hot, so that if you are given to sleep-walking you should see to it that you are thoroughly warm in bed.

Another odd fact is that fair-haired people are more given to sleep-walking than dark-haired folk.

The feats of some confirmed sleep-walkers are absolutely amazing. While sound asleep, men have been known to saddle and ride horses, to walk for miles, to thresh corn. One Californian, actually swam two miles down a river and continued his sleep upon the bank after leaving the water.

Another, a schoolgirl, anxious to pass an examination, rose night after night, lit a candle and studied, yet was totally unconscious of what she was doing, and amazed to find that she knew her lesson when to all seeming recollection she had not yet opened the book.

Oddest of all, perhaps, was the performance of a tradesman at Milwaukee, who one morning woke to find that, in the night, he had stripped all the paper off the walls of his bedroom.

A Bird Monument

In Salt Lake City, Utah, is one of the two monuments in the world—the other is in Italy—erected to the memory of birds. This monument commemorates the fact that about the year 1880 the original settlers in Utah were saved from starvation by sea-gulls.

After their arrival the white settlers were alarmed to observe that their crops were being devoured by myriads of crickets and grasshoppers, which overran the country until it was as if it had been scorched by fire.

Attempts were made to stop the plague, but without result. At that time the nearest point of civilization was 3,000 miles away, and it seemed as if the people must be starved.

Prayer was resorted to, and one day, as if in answer to their appeals, there appeared a great flock of sea-gulls, which proceeded to devour the insects, and it was not until the "cane" had been completely annihilated that the gulls took to their wings and disappeared.

The monument commemorating the event was unveiled in 1913.

The Real Reason

A minister in a small Scottish town noted the regularity of one particular member of his flock in his attendance at the Kirk.

Meeting him one day, he thought it his duty to commend him for his good example, and express his appreciation.

"I'm delighted," he said, "to see one of my parishioners take such an interest in the Kirk, and I wish to thank you personally for being so regular in your worship. I trust you are enjoying spiritual comfort from my ministrations."

"It's not that, man," replied the supposed devotee. "I'm the father of a big family, and there's aye a steer on the Sabbath mornin' that I'm gied to get out o' the house. When I get to the Kirk, I jist like to fauld me airts, shut me eyes, an' think about—nothing!"

Henry Ford

Henry Ford owned the first motor car in Detroit. It made a racket and it scared horses. Also it blocked traffic. It left alone even for a minute some inquisitive person always tried to run it. Finally he had to carry it on a chain to a livery stable, where he left it and went. And then there was trouble with the police. He got a special permit from the mayor and thus for a time was the only licensed chauffeur in America. He ran that machine about 1,000 miles through 1895 and 1896, and then sold it to Charles Atwater of Detroit for $500.

A Striking Compliment

Gen. Robert E. Lee received a striking compliment from an enemy on the day of his surrender at Appomattox Court House. The Federal general (Meade) was a former friend of his in the "old army," and when the formalities of capitulation were over he remarked pleasantly to him: "Meade, years are telling on you; your hair is getting quite grey." "Ahi, Gen. Lee," was Meade's prompt reply. "It is not the work of years. It is you who are responsible for these grey hairs."

"Pressure" Proves

Maurice Hewlett was once a guest in an old English country mansion, dating from Edward II. The same family had always had it. In the ante-room of the library he found books, the overflow of the shelves beyond—directories, Bradshaws, and things of the kind and took down at random a tall old book, bare-backed, but with faded green sides. He opened it, then looked quickly for the title-page and portrait. All were there. It was a first folio Shakespeare worth $20,000.

SOCIETY'S WORST PEST

HOW THE BLACKMAILER PLIES HIS EVIL TRADE.

Human Vulture Patterns on Secrets of the Dead—Willing to Be Silent, But His Silence Must Be Paid For—Is Pitiless and Merciless.

The blackmailer is pitiless and merciless. This human vulture fattens on the secrets of the dead, and his prey are the defenceless ones who can never speak or deny the foul charges brought against them.

He is willing to be silent, but this silence must be paid for, and so he extorts money from those who loved and honored the dead and who pay the price asked, in order that no disgrace may rest on their dear one's name.

"When a man is dead he can deny nothing," is a motto which might be adopted by a class of scoundrels at work nowadays, whose methods are as cunningly ingenious as they are heartless.

A man who started his career in Australia, and subsequently built up a big business and made a large fortune in England, died, leaving a son who was ambitious of entering Parliament.

Scarcely had the coffin been lowered into the grave when an individual appeared with an allegation of certain black transactions in which the deceased man was supposed to have participated at the Antipodes.

The son disbelieved the story; but he was afraid that a scandal, even if in reality a false and unjust one, would ruin all his political prospects before he could disprove and silence it. So he very foolishly paid to have the whole matter hushed up—and by paying once practically put himself in the power of the blackmailer, and had to submit to pitiless extortion for a number of years before he accidentally discovered that the charge against his father was as completely supposed, a lying fabrication.

"It is because the dead cannot come back to defend themselves that this sort of thing is possible," remarked a private inquiry agent, whose attention was drawn to the matter.

"One can understand it would be very unsafe to suppose that all the stories brought forward by these vultures, flourishing on the secrets of those in their graves, are false. Some are lies, but others are true, and frequently the truth and falsity are so intermingled as to render it impossible for even an expert to judge where one ends and the other begins."

"One scoundrel of this stamp was a person of some education and distorted talent, who used to devote practically all his time to gloating details about the careers of men who had made their way up from nothing to eminence."

"Most men who have had this experience prefer to leave their humble post in obscurity, and the vulture took full advantage of this. An example will throw some light on his methods."

"A man found his way to a country town where no one knew him, and worked hard until he became the chief banker of the place, won a name for unimpeachable worth and probity, and eventually married the daughter of a country magistrate."

"Then he died, and as his coffin was about to be carried from the house, the blackmailer appeared at the door and demanded to see the father of the widow."

"He had discovered that the dead man, in his earlier days, had served a long term in prison, although contriving to conceal the fact in the town where he had retrieved his lost and he threatened to reveal his secret to the funeral guests unless his silence was purchased at a heavy price. He got what he asked, so that there should be no scandal."

"When he was finally arrested there was found in his possession a diary, entries in which left no doubt that he had made a systematic practice of 'marking' likely victims during their lifetimes, and learning everything possible concerning their past careers, so that when they died their widows and grown-up sons and daughters could be compelled to pay for the suppression of the different secrets."

"The blackmailer's net was ample enough to sweep in any and every sort of prey. Among his victims was the widow of a small shopkeeper, who paid a few shillings a week—a considerable sum to her—to prevent the revelation of the fact that her husband had been guilty of fraudulent bankruptcy."

"While he was grinding every possible shilling out of this poor woman the blackmailer was extorting heavy sums from a peer of the realm."

"In an office was a clerk—a man of a prying and cunning character, who took no pains to make himself popular with his fellow-clerks. He was the son of a friend of the elderly head of the firm, and was retained solely on this account and out of pure good nature. On the old man's death it was taken for granted by the staff that the obnoxious individual would be discharged by the new head of the business, the old man's eldest son."

Instead of this, however, he was promoted to the chief clerkship at once, with double his former salary, and subsequently advanced from one post to another, although no one could guess what he had done to deserve it.

He had done nothing at all, but he had discovered a guilty secret in the life of his dead master and benefactor, and rather than allow his faithful name to be disgraced the son had consented to accede to the demands of a blackmailer, who thus became a regular old man of the Sea to him—TIT-BITS.
