HOTELS PROTEST GROCERY BEER

Numbers, Not Names, Proposed For London Streets

CITY GROCERS READY TO SELL NEW BEER

Over Seventy Places in London Have Right To Carry 4.4 Article.

HOTELS MAKE PROTEST

Others Feel Tourist Traffic Has Altered Style of Business.

When Mr. Ferguson's stronger beer law goes into effect, 4.4 beer will be sold in London in 35 cafes, 19 hotels, and about 20 clubs.

Of all the grocers seen this morning by The Advertiser, only one said he was not going to carry the new beer, and even he qualified this by adding that if there was a strong demand later on, he might change his mind.

The cafes are in the position of being 100 per cent sellers. The owners realize that a demand for beer will be part of their regular demand for meals and are preparing to install beer when the time comes to meet this demand.

As for the hotels, they accept it philosophically. They will serve it but do not look for much profit from it.

William J. Lashbrook, owner of the Belvedere, vice-president of the Ontario Hotel Owners' association, agrees with George H. O'Neil of the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, president of this association.

Not Fair Plan.

"I do not think that it is fair to the hotels to allow every club, cafe and grocer to sell this beer," he says. "The cost of maintaining a dining-room in a hotel is far greater than in a cafe.

"My opinion is that the right to sell 4.4 beer in standard hotels, restaurants and clubs at tables, is of no value to the operation of a proper hotel, but is a detriment, because it will give the restaurant and cafeteria operators further advantage over the hotel men in serving food.

"Few hotels in the province of Ontario make any money, and over 95 per cent lose a great deal of money, in supplying the class of food and service that is necessary in a hotel.

"The operation of high-class restaurants in the province of Ontario is practically nil, outside of the hotels, but a few cafeterias exist in larger centers and some of the smaller towns. The overhead and expenses of operating a dining-room in a hotel are higher than the usual run of restaurants in the province of Ontario.

"I would like to draw the public's attention to the unfair competition of clubs, etc., where food is sold at cost, in fact, in most cases below cost, where most of the businessmen lunch, and that is one reason why food is sold at a loss in standard hotels.

"It will not be to the hotels' interest to expend money for the necessary equipment for proper places in which to serve beer, as there is practically no possibility of profit for the hotel when competing with the ordinary restaurant.

"Therefore I contend that 4.4 beer should be sold in standard hotels only to give the hotelman an opportunity to offset his loss on the sale of food."

Others Differ.

Other hotelkeepers take a different view. They say that in the last seven years the hotel business has entirely changed, and that very few hotels now operate a dining-room.

"What the public now wants is a cafeteria," said another manager today. "It wants some place where it can get meals at all times of the twenty-four hours. The old style of the hotel dining-room, where meals were served for a two-hour period at stated times, is over. Any hotel which still does this is in my opinion behind the times. In the States every hotel has a cafeteria, where meals are served at all hours.

"The automobile trade and traffic have changed hotel management completely. We don't look for profit in the dining-rooms. We make it in the bed and rooms. Whether beer comes back or not, and whether it is sold from hotels or from cafes and clubs, makes no difference to the majority of hotels in Ontario today."

Want Beer.

A grocer put it this way in defence of his side of the argument:

"Most of my customers are of the kind that wants to drink his beer in the comfort of his own home. He is not going to any hotel in order to get it. Why should he not be allowed to take part in a legitimate retail trade. In the summer time it will be radio, beer and a cigar on the veranda, that's better than a hotel dining-room, and that's the kind of trade that a grocer has a right to supply."

One hotel owner thinks that the new beer is only a fad, and that it will soon die away.

"After the first few months no one will bother about this 4.4 stuff," he said. "Of course the American tourist will always lap it up. But I don't think the average Ontario man is going to buy much of Mr. Ferguson's new beer after the first summer. It's just a fad."

Peace Follows Big Blizzard

Associated Press Despatch.

Winnipeg, March 21.—After one of the worst "blizzard days" of the winter, Winnipeg and Manitoba districts reported all peaceful last night, the storm having "died out."

Drifts ranging from 6 to 10 feet high greeted the workers on their way home in the suburbs, with automobiles stalled and roadways and sidewalks practically impassable.

CLYNES MOURNS COST OF HONORS

Downing Street Expensive Place To Live, Former Lord Privy Seal Says.

PAY TOO SMALL

Associated Press Despatch.

London, March 21.—"It was a big event going to No. 11 Downing street," says J. R. Clynes, who was lord privy seal and deputy leader of the house of commons in Ramsay MacDonald's Labor cabinet, "but I do not want to live there again."

While Clynes paid no rent at No. 11, he paid practically everything else. He had to pay the staff of the house, numbering one, and an extra staff whenever special hospitality was dispensed. He was constantly asked when he made telephone calls if they were personal or official, and he eventually received a bill for several pounds for unofficial calls.

Five thousand pounds is not enough for a cabinet minister who is compelled to live in Downing street unless he has ample means. Clynes favors the advancing of the premier's salary to $40,000, from the present salary of $25,000. Cabinet ministers' salaries range from the $50,000 of the lord high chancellor, Viscount Cave, which is the highest, to $10,000, the more important receiving a salary equal to the prime minister.

BARDAWILL ALIMONY JUDGMENT DELAYED

Mr. Justice Lennox Leaves For Toronto Without Settling Case.

Although it was expected that Mr. Justice Lennox would give judgment in the Bardawill alimony case before leaving the city, his lordship apparently decided to give the matter more thought, and left this morning on the C. N. R. 9 o'clock train for Toronto.

The judge intimated that he would allow Mrs. Mary Bardawill something, but stated he would rather have counsel come to an agreement. A. R. Douglass for the plaintiff and J. A. E. Braden, counsel for George Bardawill spent several hours in an attempt to arrange a settlement but were not successful.

Mr. Justice Lennox leaves shortly for a holiday in Florida.

QUEBEC FEELS TREMORS, NO DAMAGE RESULTS

Canadian Press Despatch.

Quebec, March 21.—A short but intense earth shock was felt here between 10:24 and 10:26 o'clock this morning. The shock lasted, according to available reports from five to ten seconds, depending upon the locality. Houses shook perceptibly and great commotion was caused throughout the city, the people thinking that there would be a recurrence of the disturbance of three weeks ago. No damage has been reported, however, although several women are said to be on the verge of hysteria as an aftermath of the shock.

SEVEN ARE NOW IN FIELD FOR GERMAN PRESIDENCY

Associated Press Despatch.

Berlin, March 21.—With seven contenders, representing not less than a dozen various parties and unattached political organizations, listed on the official ballot for the presidential election, it is now commonly believed that the initial balloting on March 29 will terminate without a choice. While pre-election estimates concede Karl Jarres, candidate of the Conservative Bourgeois party, a liberal lead over all other parties, he will, nevertheless, fail, it is believed, to poll sufficient votes to give him the constitutional majority needed to clinch his election.

SINN FEIN TO FIGHT IN NORTH

De Valera Followers Will Cross Into Ulster To Seek Representation.

WANT DOZEN BATTLES

Claim Election Called For Purpose of Covering Up Boundary Fraud.

Associated Press Despatch.

Dublin, March 21.—Eamon de Valera, the Irish republican leader, made it known yesterday that the Sinn Fein chief council, after conversations with the representatives of their organization in the six north-eastern counties of Ireland, had decided unanimously to put forward republican candidates in the Ulster elections.

"We are unalterably opposed," he said, "to representatives of the Irish people entering the partition parliaments of northern and southern Ireland, which are creations of the British government, and recognition of British claims to supremacy. Could we have heard the united action of all who are opposed to a partition and English domination, our policy would have been to boycott these elections altogether.

"The results will in no sense be a true index of the wishes of the Irish people in the north, but they will be used as if they were. The elections have been called with the obvious design of covering up the fraud of the boundary commission."

The republicans are expected to contest at least a dozen seats.

TRAIN ROBBER GANG BROKEN

Shanahan and Perry Are Given Two-Year Terms, Each Fined $1,000.

TRIED IN BUFFALO

Associated Press Despatch.

Buffalo, March 21.—Three members of the notorious Perry train robber gang were convicted in federal court here yesterday of conspiracy to violate the Carlin act.

Bert Perry, leader of the gang, and a wealthy farmer of Niagara Falls and Canaseraga, was sentenced to two years in Atlanta prison and fined $10,000. Thomas Shanahan of Niagara Falls was sentenced to two years in Atlanta and fined $10,000, and Edward Kelly, a city fireman at Niagara Falls, was sentenced to a year and a day in the federal prison.

The trio were captured a few hours after railroad detectives had another member of thetaoinetaoin killed "Canadian Shorty" Garner, another member of the gang, during a train hold-up at Wilson, N. Y., in July, 1924.

ESKIMOS FIGHT OVER DOGS AND MURDER IS RESULT

Canadian Press Despatch.

Calgary, Alberta, March 21. — A special wireless despatch to the Herald from Fort Simpson, a thousand miles north, says: "News had reached here from the far north of another murder among the Eskimos. This time it appears to have been caused from a quarrel over ownership of dogs. Kent Peninsula is where it took place."

Court Crowd Cheers Sleuth At Probe Into Murder of Boy

John Wurz, Mennonite Farmer of Saskatchewan, Committed For Trial.

FEELING INTENSE

Police Unable To Quell Outburst of Approval For Detective's Work.

REV. DR. R. J. ZIMMERMAN of Toronto, who died this week at his late residence, 498 West Marion street, in his 74th year.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Saskatoon, Sask., March 21.—So intense is feeling against John Wurz, Mennonite farmer, near Guernsey, Sask., accused of the murder of his 17-year-old brother-in-law, Ephraim Jentzen, that despite repeated calls for order, a great crowd which filled the Lanigan town hall yesterday cheered Detective Sergeant Sherville of the Saskatchewan provincial police, who investigated the case, while he gave evidence at the preliminary hearing. After the hearing, which lasted all day, Cyril Stackhouse, justice of the peace, committed Wurz for trial at the next criminal assizes in Saskatoon.

Jentzen, a ward of the bureau of neglected and dependent children, was found dead March 6, near a straw shack on Wurz's farm, from a bullet wound through the heart. At the inquest a physician said the boy's feet had been terribly frozen and that he was suffering from double pneumonia, and would have died within five days.

In scathing terms, Mr. Stackhouse denounced the morbid, and what he termed, untimely interest taken in the case. He declared that if a fraction of the interest which had been shown in the case had been shown the boy, even a month prior to the tragedy, he might now be alive. Apparently, said his worship, neighbors had been aware of the terrible conditions under which the boy had been living and none had interested himself or herself in the case.

AUSTRIAN TELLS CONFRERES WORK DISPLEASES BRITAIN

Associated Press Despatch.

Vienna, March 21.—The governor of the national bank, Dr. R. Resch, told a meeting of the shareholders on his return from London yesterday that Great Britain found the Austrian government's revenue and expenditure still too high. General retrenchments were being effected too slowly and the taxation was too great. The London bankers counselled the national bank to exercise its influence to change these conditions.

GIRL USED IN SELLING BOOTLEG

"Aristocratic" Liquor Scheme Revealed in Police Court Today.

PAYS FINE OF $400

Tearful Companion Breaks Down in Giving Her Evidence.

A new system of bootlegging, termed by Chief of Police Robert Birrell, "aristocratic sale of liquor," was revealed in police court this morning when Mary Taylor, 32 years old, was convicted and fined $400 and costs under the O. T. A.

According to the police Miss Taylor is a servant of a bootlegging ring. She operates by distributing the liquor to customers in company with a man. The two together thus allay suspicion.

The manner in which Mary Taylor's arrest was brought about is novel and forms the conclusion of several week's work on the part of the police department.

Miss Taylor and a young girl friend with whom she was boarding were placed under arrest last night on charges of vagrancy. Police then visited their boarding home on Talbot street and found two large bottles of so-called "Black and White" whiskey in a suit case belonging to the Taylor woman.

Takes Stand.

When Miss Taylor's young friend was confronted with the liquor she frankly told police that they had been engaged for some time in selling. Although reluctant to give information against her friend, she took the witness stand this morning in favor of the crown, and rather than tell a lie, informed the magistrate that Mary Taylor had sold two bottles of whiskey for $6 each several nights ago to unknown men on Clarence street.

Miss Taylor herself denied that she had ever sold the whiskey. She declared that her friend's evidence, given practically under compulsion, was untrue. The magistrate, however, chose the story of the crown's witness and convicted Miss Taylor with the remark, "You better give up this liquor business or you'll go to jail."

Under Suspicion.

Police have long had Miss Taylor and her "employers" under suspicion. According to Chief Birrell, had the person directly associated with the "source of supply" been apprehended, a charge of counterfeiting whiskey bottle labels would also have been laid. The liquor found at Miss Taylor's home is said to be synthetic, that is, manufactured from ethel alcohol and coloring matter.

Further charges of vagrancy and keeping liquor for sale preferred against the Taylor girl were dropped after the imposition of the $400 fine.

It was some time before Miss Taylor's friend would give direct evidence when she stood in the witness box this morning. She was crying and declared that "I am not playing the game, I am deceitful."

She answered "Yes" and "No" to leading questions given by Chief Birrell with the consent of the magistrate. Howard Cluff, counsel for the defendant, strongly objected to the witness being heard, and offered little evidence in repudiation.

NEELY WILL CONTEST CONSERVATIVE RIDING

Secretary of E. Middlesex Association To Stand For Dominion Election.

Ald. Homer Neely, secretary of the East Middlesex Conservative association, will allow his name to go before the Tory convention here on March 28 when the Conservatives will choose a candidate to contest the seat in the next dominion election.

Mr. Neely announced to The Advertiser this morning that he had acceded to the request of a number of friends and had decided to let his name go to the convention.

Mr. Neely comes from a political family, as his father, the late George W. Neely of Dorchester was a member of the Ontario house from 1905 to 1913.

Associated Press Despatch.

Steel Co. Vice-Chief Hurries To Sydney For Conference In Effort to End Big Strike

Arrival of J. E. McLurg Seen as New Move Toward Settlement.

15,000 ARE OUT

Distress Grows Worse as Strike Stretches Past Two-Week Point.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Sydney, N. S., March 21.—Two weeks ago last night at 11 o'clock the district 26 executive, United Mine Workers, ordered all their members in the coal mines of Nova Scotia to cease work to a man, claiming a lockout by their employers, the British Empire Steel corporation, following a breakdown in wage negotiations wherein the men asked for approximately a ten per cent increase and the corporation sought to decrease the wages an approximately equal amount. From that hour until this morning not a ton of coal has been raised in the mines affected, the collieries have been protected and maintained by the clerical forces of the operating company, and nearly fourteen thousand miners have been idle.

This morning, after many proposals and counter proposals, there was no official indication that the dispute was any nearer a settlement than the day it commenced, and the only development that could be reported was the arrival in Halifax of J. E. McLurg, vice-president of the British Empire Steel corporation.

While there was no announcement made of the purpose of this official's mission to Halifax, it is generally believed that he will visit the premier, the Hon. E. H. Armstrong, with a view to making an attempt to arrive at some mutually agreeable proposal looking towards a settlement.

In the meantime a great number of miners and their dependents are being fed by public charity, over ten thousand dollars having been donated to date, together with large quantities of material, not enough, however, the relief committees report, to carry on the work adequately for more than a few days.

Many of the miners had been idle months previous to the complete tie-up and investigators have reported distressing conditions among thousands of men, women and children. The miners have agreed to resume work if assured of a four-day-a-week minimum under the 1924 wage scale, providing an independent commission goes into the whole question in the meantime.

The corporation has announced that no negotiations will be entered into unless the maintenance men return to work.

The would-be thief was struck over the head with a plank by a police officer and killed. Names were not revealed, but Chief Norman vouched for the authenticity of the incident.

CANADA-CANADIAN TO SPEAK IN LONDON

Augustus Bridle Wants Composite Canada Made Into United Dominion.

Augustus Bridle of Toronto, noted Canadian author and authority on music, is to be the speaker at Monday's meeting of the Rotary club.

Mr. Bridle, who has started Canadians thinking with his latest book, "Hansen," will talk to the Rotary club on "Selling Canada to the new "Canadian"—how to get the immigrant sold on this country, the whole country and nothing but the country.

Mr. Bridle has a wide reputation as a vigorous, witty and unusual speaker. Earlier this month he addressed a crowded meeting of the Canadian club in Montreal on "What Do You Do When You Adopt a Country?" and London may expect the same forceful and unconventional expression of arguments which impressed Montreal. Augustus Bridle is a thorough Canadian and has constructive ideas on the problem of welding a composite Canada into a united Dominion.

SPRING FLUNK LIMITS USE OF FALL SUPPLEMENTALS

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, March 21.—An important change in the system of examinations for all years in the faculty of arts at the University of Toronto is announced in the university calendar. The custom of allowing students who failed outright at the spring examinations to write again in the autumn is to be discontinued. In future candidates must obtain standing in the spring examinations in order to write off supplementary subjects in the autumn.

Students who have been prevented by unavoidable causes from taking the spring examination will be allowed to submit their cases and will receive consideration.

STREET NAMES MAY GO

Division of Numbering With Each Block Even Hundred Proposed.

MEETS WITH PROTEST

Plan of E. K. O'Connor at Present in Use in Many Large Cities.

Designation of city streets by number, rather than by name, is advocated by E. K. O'Connor, acting city building inspector. For purposes of convenience to citizens and strangers, Mr. O'Connor suggests the plan followed in some parts of the Canadian west and in some American cities. Quibbling over the right to use a certain street name in various parts of the city would be done away with, and greater ease would be found in searching for any one particular street.

Even Hundred.

It is also suggested that in re-numbering of dwelling houses, each block should commence with the even hundred. The city council expects to do much re-numbering of houses this year and will within the course of the next month or two consider improvements for the present system.

"Start each block with an even hundred number," is Mr. O'Connor's suggestion. "Then if a man is looking for, say No. 586, he knows he can find it in the sixth block from the end of the street where numbering starts."

In this way numbering of Dundas street would commence at the river. Two-figure numbers would be used in the first block. At Ridout street the first building would be No. 100. East of Talbot, the first building would be 200, and so on.

Meet With Protest.

So far as abolition of street names is concerned, such a move would meet with considerable opposition, as streets as used to perpetuate the names of many old Londoners.

To assist in street numbering, street naming and the delivery of mail and express parcels, Mr. O'Connor would divide the city into certain sections, with definite boundaries. For instance, London South would be a district by itself, with house numbering commencing from the western limits or from the river. Mail and parcels for that part of the city would be addressed to the street addressed, with the extra disignation of London S. London West would be treated in the same way, as well as other districts of the city.

CLASS BANQUETS PIONEER MEMBER

Dundas Center Honors A. E. Cowley Before His Departure For Toronto.

A complimentary banquet was tendered by No. 8 class of Dundas Center Methodist church last night to A. E. Cowley, who will leave shortly for Toronto, having been appointed sales manager for Ontario by the Sherwin-Williams Paint Company. Mr. Cowley has been connected with the class for the past 35 years.

Mr. Cowley was presented with a "Book of Letters," bound in leather. The presentation address was made by D. C. McNaughton, honorary vice-president of the club. Mrs. Cowley was presented with a silver flower basket filled with American Beauty roses, as a token of esteem.

The book of letters given to Mr. Cowley contained 210 letters addressed to him in appreciation of his work in the city, and in token of his promotion to the important post in the employ of the Sherwin-Williams Company. The letters came from all parts of the world, including every province in Canada, and a large number from this city.

The Toast List.

When full justice had been done to the inner man, President E. N. Hannah, who acted as toastmaster, called the gathering to order and evoked hearty applause. In a few words Mr. Hannah introduced the toast list, which was interspersed with musical numbers, and included "The King," which was responded to by singing the National Anthem. "Our Club" was proposed by William Edlington, and responded to by E. N. Hannah; "This School of Ours," proposed by Rev. John Garbutt and responded to by the superintendent, C. E German; "The Recruits," proposed by Frank Graham and responded to by James H. Harley; "The Age of Progress," proposed by Stephen Martin and responded to by Professor James H Bowman; "The Prodigal Sons," proposed by F. E. Perrin and responded to by E. R. Dennis.

The toast of the evening was that proposed by Sid Martin to "Old No. 8," which had coupled with it the name of A. E. Cowley. Mr. Martin, in a very reminiscent mood, took his hearers back several years, when he gathered around the festive board in argument and debate in No. 8 Club.

Disorganized by War.

Mr. Cowley, in replying to the presentation speech said: "No. 8 did more for me than I ever did for it. When a young man I travelled many miles to attend the class, and saw it grow from an acorn to a sturdy oak among the organizations of the city. When the war came our sport program was disorganized. We had formed good hockey and baseball teams, but these were disbanded. The secretary of the club, Iram Sumner, went to the battle fields and never came back. It was than No. 8 class slid back a few years. Today it carries on under the Federation of Men's Brotherhoods of London."

He thanked the club for the honor it had bestowed on him, and for the splendid gift he had received.

The musical numbers included vocal solos by Lloyd Bullen, while Bruce Wells contributed violin numbers, with Miss Dorothy Cahill as accompanist.

The convener in charge of the banquet was composed of Leonard Tait (convener), D. C. McNaughton, Arthur Beal, James H. Harley, E. N. Hannah, Heber W. Gibson, George F. Copeland and J. W. Cahill.

History of No. 8 Club.

No. 8 club is an organization of men in connection with Dundas Center. It had its beginning in the misty past, over forty years ago. Its origin was: A young boys' class became possessed of a democratic spirit and formed itself into a club under the able direction of Professor J. H. Bowman. It was greatly augmented by the addition of a large society class of boys (No. 13), led by Fred W. Matthews. It grew and continued to thrive under the same leadership, and Mr. Bowman is still the able director of all operations.

The club is greatly interested in all good work, as its creed indicates:

"For the right against the wrong,
For the weak against the strong,
Is the motto and the creed of No. 8."

Two years ago it resolved itself into a brotherhood under the presidency of Arthur Beal, but still retains the old name, and is still going forward under the leadership of E. N. Hannah. For over twelve years A. E. Cowley was its president continuously, and through his untiring energy it forged ahead.

WOMEN WILL DONATE PRIZES FOR HISTORY

Canadian Club To Make Awards For Proficiency to Grades 7 and 8.

Announcement is made in a communication from Administrator V. K. Greer's office that the Women's Canadian club will again donate prizes this year for general proficiency in British and Canadian history.

The prizes are to be competed for by each class in Grade VII and Grade VIII throughout the public schools for work of the year, September, 1924, to June, 1925. The winners are to be announced by May 8 in order that the prizes may be presented on May 22 as a feature of Empire Day celebrations.

In awarding the prizes there will be taken into consideration the work of the pupil throughout the year in the subject of history, the attitude of the pupil toward the subject and the interest in the reading of historical books, as well as the marks made on examinations.

Last year the books donated by the club were written by Arthur Hemming, a Canadian writer. This year the books have been chosen from the works of Charles G. D. Roberts, another prominent Canadian author.

The object the Women's Canadian club has in mind is, of course, to encourage the pupils in the senior grades of the public schools to become acquainted with the great men and women of Canadian history and with present-day Canadian authors.

GRIESMAN AWARDED JUDGMENT IN FULL

Insurance Company of Pennsylvania Loses Case Against Londoner.

Judgment in full for $5,000 was given by Mr. Justice Lennox yesterday afternoon in the action brought by Louis Greisman against the Insurance Company of Pennsylvania. His lordship dismissed the case as against the Queen's Insurance company.

J. M. McEvoy, K.C., who acted for the plaintiff, informed the court that the action was merely a dispute as to which company should pay the claim which was due as a result of a fire in the premises of the Royal Millinery company two years ago.

A. G. Slaght, K.C., Toronto, appeared for the defendant Pennsylvania company, and Mr. Coleman for the Queens company.

RECLUSE CLAIMS ORPHAN'S FORTUNE

John McClintock, Recluse, Believes He Is Heir To Chicago Millions.

Special to The Advertiser by a Staff Correspondent.

Windsor, March 20.—John McClintock, 80 years old, of the town of Essex, who lives alone in a small hut, believes he will inherit at least a portion, if not all of the million-dollar fortune left by the young Chicago man of the same name, for whose death by typhoid fever William Shepperd and Dr. A. Fairman are now held in custody in that city.

The Essex McClintock is somewhat of a recluse. He has little to say concerning his relationship with the Chicago man, nothing whatever to communicate.

According to officials of the town, L. O. Thiene and M. A. Ranhoff, two Chicago attorneys, visited McClintock a month ago, and, it is said, effected an arrangement by which they would represent his interests in the case.

There are two sons, Alexander, employed at the Ford Motor Company here, and John McClintock, living in Detroit.

PORT STANLEY TUGS OPEN FISHING SEASON

Fleet of Seven Boats Makes First Trip of the Year.

Although Port Dover fish tugs set their nets more than a week ago, Port Stanley's fishing fleet of seven tugs steamed out of the harbor early yesterday morning.

The course taken by the Ciscoe, a large fish tug owned by the Finley Fish Company, was seven miles south and then twenty miles west. According to the captain, they encountered quite a lot of floating ice, but managed not to hit any.

The fishermen of the port are anticipating a large catch of whitefish this year. This fish is the highest-priced offering on the New York fish market, in many cases selling as high as 50 cents a pound.

The Port Stanley boats that set their nets yesterday are expected to lift them again on Monday.

PUPILS' TRAINING HAS FIRST PLACE

Inspector-Administrator of the London Schools Declares Scholars Happiest Now.

Speaking before the brotherhood of St. Andrew's church last night, Inspector-Administrator V. K. Greer, M.A., cited the training of the children as the chief tendency of the present day school system.

"We have lost nothing from the systems of the past and we have taken on the idea that the purpose of the educational system is to train the child," declared Mr. Greer, "and not alone intellectually, but physically and religiously as well, in order that the boys and girls may become efficient members of society.

"The three R's used to be stressed in former times, the information and content side were emphasized," began the head of London's school system, "but the larger and broader tendency of today places the content in secondary position and gives preeminent place to the training of the children.

Emphasis on Training.

"The emphasis today is placed on the training of the hand, the head and the heart. Added to these the teaching of health and history with happiness as to motivating idea corelating the whole. The public school pupil today, from the kindergarten to the entrance grade, is happier at his work than ever before. Memory used to be regarded as the main faculty, but now training is given all faculties, equally and as broadly as possible.

"The introduction of new subjects," asserted Mr. Greer, "has not meant that the pupil leaving school after passing his high school entrance is any less prepared than in former times, in fact the average pupil today can handle problems given him with more initiative and better and broader understanding than in years past.

Special Classes.

"All children used to be treated alike and expected to reach the same results while the tendency today is to hold that the individual makeup, instincts and capacities of each child are different from the other. Special classes have thus been formed for children with special weaknesses and special abilities.

"Greater use of mental tests in the elementary schools," continued Mr. Greer, "will bring about better grading in the schools, more complete use of the pupil's ability, special tendencies in the pupil will be noted earlier and better vocation guidance to the pupil made possible."

Referring to religious training being given in the schools, Mr. Greer remarked that Ontario might well follow in the steps of the English system where 50 minutes each day are given to religious training. In pointing out that London schools now have the maximum religious program permitted under the present department of education regulations, Mr. Greer expressed the opinion that it would be a wise move on the part of the department to enlarge the regulations to include religious instruction, where, of course, desired to be given by the local boards.

DISCLOSURES COME WITH AUDITORS' PROBE

Developments Follow Thick and Fast As Auditors Probe Records of Divers Government Departments—Further Startling Results Are Expected.

SEVERAL MORE EMPLOYEES SUSPENDED

Send Officials To Burwash Farm As Psuedo Convicts in Attempt To Secure Evidence—Hospitals For Insane Are Involved in the Charges.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, March 20.—Information received at Queen's Park yesterday would seem to indicate that the province is on the eve of disclosures of a civil service scandal with ramifications hitherto unthought of.

In addition to the provincial secretary's department, in which arrests were made this week, audits in the provincial architect's department now have resulted in two additional suspensions. Still other suspensions from office are known to have occurred among members of the service.

It was authoritatively announced, following adjournment of yesterday's sitting of the legislature that A. Ratteray, clerk of works, and George Barron, supervising plumber, both of the provincial architect's department, which comes under the direction of Hon. Lincoln Goldie, provincial secretary, have been suspended from office, pending further investigations by government auditors.

Secure Further Evidence.

"Since the arrest a few days ago of Willard W. Dunlop, inspector of prisons, Fred H. Williams and Robert G. Kyle, Provincial Inspector Boyd has been at work on this branch of the case, and as a result of his inquiries has laid new information before General Williams, upon which these three men will be arraigned when their cases are again called in the police court.

"One of the most startling developments yesterday in connection with the civil service scandals is the information said in Queen's Park corridors yesterday to have been furnished the government from the audit of the accounts of the Queen street hospital for the insane. About five persons are understood to be involved, in statements said to be in the hands of the government, concerning disposition of supplies, including groceries, blankets, utensils and general government property. Arrests are said to be immediately pending.

"In its anxiety to obtain exact knowledge of conditions at the Queen street asylum and also the Burwash prison reformatory, the government is said to have adopted radical and sensational methods of observation. At the Queen street asylum, it is said, the government had an official taken into the institution, from which vantage point he conducted his probe.

Send Officials To Prison.

"Following the failure to obtain desired information of a similar line of approach at the Burwash Farm, because it is alleged, of the alertness of individuals, the government went to the extreme of having an individual go through the formality of sentence in open court to the Burwash institution and undergo imprisonment there, it is said, for some considerable period, during which time he gained the information now said to be in the hands of the government.

"One of the sensational bits of evidence said to be in the government's hands in the form of a report," says the article, "is that as late as Tuesday night last, despite Monday night's revelations of the provincial secretary's department and concurrent arrests, one of the staff of the Queen street hospital for the insane was trailed to his home carrying a valise, which, when seized, was found to contain government groceries and supplies. At the other end, government officials are said to have watched him fill it.

MAY QUEEN REBEKAHS BANQUET MRS. A. MANN

President of Ontario Assembly Makes Official Inspection of Lodge.

Mrs. Alexina Mann, president of the Ontario Rebekah assembly was again the guest of a local Rebekah lodge last night, when the May Queen Rebekahs entertained in her honor. In the afternoon she was the guest of honor at a theatre party arranged by Mrs. F. Parsons. This was followed by afternoon tea at Smallman & Ingram's.

Informal toasts were proposed, Mrs. Walter Scott proposing the toast to "Rebekah Assembly," to which Mrs. Mann replied with a delightful little speech; Mrs. Allan Dundas proposed "The District," to which Mrs. Arthur Borland replied. The toast to "May Queen Lodge," proposed by Miss Betty Saunders, was replied to by Mrs. W. McKay.

An interesting feature of the afternoon was the presentation to Mrs. Burch on behalf of the lodge of an armful of sweet peas.

Last night, following the inspection of the lodge by Mrs. Mann, a banquet was held in the lodge rooms. Pink and green, the lodge colors, and a profusion of spring flowers were used to adorn the tables. Mrs. W. R. McKay and Mrs. Walter Scott were conveners of the arrangements. During the evening, Mrs. Mann gave a brief but interesting outline of the work of the Rebekahs and paid tribute to the London lodges. Brief addresses were also given by William Crosby, district deputy of the I. O. O. F.; Mrs. Burch, the noble grand; Arthur Borland and John Hayward, who joined the lodge in 1884 and is its oldest member.

SANTAL MIDY CAPSULES — Easy to Take—Quick in Relief — CATARRH of the BLADDER — Safe, Successful — Each Capsule bears name MIDY — Beware of counterfeits

AT THE THEATRES

GRAND THEATRE

"Denishawn Dancers."

Once more Ruth St. Denis and Ted Shawn, foremost exponents of the dance, have come and gone. For one all-too-brief but glorious night, they, with a company of eleven artists, captivated an admiring audience at the Grand opera house last night.

It is just a year since that Miss St. Denis last vited here. If anything, last night's program surpassed the beautiful numbers of last season's performance.

The Denishawn dancers might be said to encircle the globe. They reveal the dances brought from the four corners of the earth. They steal across the line of vision with a rhythm, grace and beauty of youth to the accompaniment of bewitching music.

Gold Camp Dances.

Dances brought from old Spain, land of the matador, show merry gypsies, draped in brilliant mantillas, in solo and concerted numbers. They disappear to give way to the waltz, to a pastoral, then to a popular interpretation of dance hall of the western gold camps. Whether it be the quaint menuet or a rollicking square dance, a shiftless alley crapshooter or a simple pastoral it is done well nigh to perfection by the Denishawn dancers.

Miss St. Denis gave waltzes from Schubert for her opening number. It was treated simply and given with the dignity ever associated with the waltz.

In "Cudaro Flamenco" Miss St. Denis took the part of La Macarena, a Spanish dancer. A suitor, Ted Shawn, promises her the most wonderful shawl in Seville if she will marry him. He offers one gorgeous wrap after another and finally wins her. The settings and costumes in this were beautiful to behold.

The pretty story gives rise to a number of dances. They are carried out with ease, grace and enchanting movements.

Without Music.

Miss Doris Humphrey led in a dance without music. A program note said that Miss St. Denis offered it as an experiment in the dance independent of music.

The motif was built about love. It was carried out with simple lighting effects. The hangings and scanty costumes were of sombre tone, serving as a foil for the forms as they crouched, now, glided across the stage. It was a daring achievement, splendidly done and well received.

Ted Shawn gave a dramatic portrayal of an Indian dance ritual called "Invocation to Thunderbird." His "Around the Hall" depicting a cowboy and dance-hall characters was well conceived. It struck a true note of what is now American history.

It seems unfortunate that only a meagre audience was present to enjoy the generous and delightful program.

CAPITOL THEATRE

"Secrets of the Night."

"Mysteries of the Night," a Universal picture, featuring James Kirkwood, will satisfy those movie fans who are in search of a mild thrill. It is playing today at the Capitol theatre.

A president of a great American bank and his directors are faced with charges of embezzlement when they discover that loans made without sufficient collateral are not recoverable. The only way in which the necessary money could be secured would be from the insurance policy taken out on the life of the president. The president suggests that some of the directors kill him to save the depositors. To do so himself would render the policy invalid.

But they all lack nerve for this drastic step, and are left at midnight with the problem unsolved. To add to their miseries, a bank inspector arrives to begin work the next day.

However, during the night, at the home of the president, someone shoots and apparently kills him. So the mystery of finding the murderer starts. Police carry out a typical police investigation, each director suspects the others, and even the bank inspector is under a cloud. But the good fairy of the happy ending arrives. The murdered man is found alive. He had faked a murder to prevent the inspector going to the bank. The man who gave the notes to the bank turns up. The bank is once more solvent, and there comes the "fade-away" with wedding-bells. The program includes a Pathe news film and a Loew's comedy.

Fierce Black and White Bug Invades Trains For Port

The beautiful scenery along the London & Port Stanley Railway from London to Port Stanley no longer has a lure for passengers.

A fierce little black and white checked microbe is abroad and is occupying the time of most of the passengers on all trains.

It is known as the cross-word puzzle; also, though less politely, as the cuss-word puzzle. If one has escaped being bitten by it one must feel rather lonesome.

Those of the passengers who do not carry dictionaries (and they are few) often find it profitable to besiege the conductor and even the poor motorman with "stickers" pertaining to motors, railways and other scientific objects in a last attempt to solve their cross-word puzzle.

When it becomes too difficult for one passenger to solve they frequently move over with another puzzle-affected individual and stage a combined effort on a defiant puzzle which dares them to do their worst.

The latest cross-word puzzle fad has just come to light. A New York newspaper in an account of a court case terms the complainant a "cross-word widow" because she complained that her husband was devoting too much time to cross-word puzzles. He was ordered to work only three puzzles a day. What next!

Herriot Speeds Security Pact With Britain :: London Greets Spring's Arrival

FRENCH DELEGATE ARRIVES HOME

Reports to Herriot on Progress Made in Conference With Baldwin.

SECURITY SPEEDED

By HENRY SOMERVILLE.
Special Cable to the London Advertiser from a Staff Correspondent.
Copyright.

London, March 21.—Premier Herriot is making an effort to speed up the negotiations with Britain regarding French security.

The French ambassador had long interviews with Premier Baldwin and Foreign Secretary Chamberlain on Tuesday, and yesterday he left for Paris to report to Herriot personally.

The basis of negotiations with Britain is the German offer to join in the guarantee of France's frontiers on the Rhine and to leave the question between Germany and Poland and Czecho-Slovakia open to arbitration.

Pact Unlikely.

There is little prospect at present of an agreement between Britain and France, and Herriot is afraid of the British government deciding on the evacuation of Cologne.

Herriot needs all the prestige he can get for his domestic position. He has aroused both Catholics and Protestants in Alsace against him by his school policy, which aims at secularizing education.

Catholics throughout France are in a militant mood. They are fighting for the retention of the French embassy at the Vatican, and for tolerance of religious orders in France. These concessions had been allowed by Poincaire, but they are threatened by Herriot.

The Catholics are going further than a demand for the maintenance of the Poincairist status quo. They are attacking all the so-called anti-clerical laws embodied in French legislation during the past generation, such as divorce laws, exclusion of religious orders from hospitals, confiscation of church property, and refusal of all support from taxes to schools where religion is taught.

Issue Manifesto.

The cardinals and archbishops of France last week issued a manifesto in which Catholics were told that at the present time there was a great opportunity for successful attacks on those "Laicizing laws."

The manifesto has been denounced by the anti-clericals as provoking disobedience to law and as being an attack on the republic itself.

The debates on the clerical manifesto have led to scenes of violence in the French chamber during the past week. The socialists are the bitterest enemies of the church, and it is chiefly to propitiate them that Herriot has embarked on an anti-clerical measure, for the socialists are increasingly dissatisfied with his policy on fiscal and international affairs.

SELLS TO CONSTABLE AND IS ASSESSED $25

Julius Schure Warned He Must Have License To Sell Cigarettes.

Julius Schure, 30 years old, learned today that it is a grave mistake to sell cigarettes without a license. He made a fatal blunder when he sold a small package to a police constable for 15 cents.

Magistrate Graydon imposed a fine of $25 and costs in police court this morning, and warned that Schure must in future observe Canadian law.

Schure declared that he had often applied at the police department for a license, but had always been refused. Then Chief Birrell explained that as Schure had been convicted of selling cigarettes to minors, of selling whiskey, of keeping a gambling house, and several other offences, he thought he was not a desirable citizen to be in charge of a store or restaurant.

London Labor Party Urges National Strike In Event of Any War Declaration

Resolution Is Unanimously Passed, To Be Discussed at Provincial Convention.

VIGILANTS FORMED

Committee Will Ask Publication of Names in Shortweight Convictions.

When the provincial branch of the dominion labor party meets in convention in Toronto April 11 and 12 it will have on its agenda a resolution from the London branch, urging general dominion-wide strike in the event of any declaration of war. This resolution was presented last night by the executive and passed unanimously by the party here.

A vigilant committee was also appointed, consisting of seven members to take up matters concerning the public welfare with the city council. The request for this committee came from Pioneer Lodge, 488, of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen here in view of recent charges of short weight coal and bread transactions in this city.

"This committee is appointed to ask the city council to take the necessary steps to publish the names of all persons convicted of selling short weight coal or bread or slink veal "reads the resolution," and if the council is not able to help us in this way then to make a direct appeal to the attorney-general."

Names Are Posted.

During a long discussion on this point it was said that in Toronto the names of those offenders were posted in the city hall there. Similar publicity is desired by the party in London.

Another resolution which the London party will present at the Toronto convention is one in which it is suggested that legislative steps be taken to make all records and books of all industries the common property of all employees of each industry, instead of the private property of the owners of the individual business, as at present.

In view of the approaching federal election, the dominion party will be most strongly urged to make public pronouncements on all questions of general public interest in good time.

Military training for cadets was roundly condemned in one of these conventions resolutions, and daylight saving in another.

Mayor Gets Warning.

Mayor Wenige came in for some comment, when ex-Ald. Colbert, on the matter of publishing the names of short-weight dealers, remarked:

"The party will ask the mayor to help us in this matter. It is a vital one for the health of the people. If he does not do so, we will see that he does not fill the mayor's chair next year."

A resolution supporting the actions of Aldermen Frank McKay and Tom Cliff in their voting in the city council on the matter of the mayor's salary was passed unanimously.

After a lengthy discussion on the position of labor aldermen in the city council, a resolution was passed, introduced by John Colbert, requesting the three aldermen to get together and choose a leader, who will call them together when any matter affecting labor in the council is about to come up and in such a caucus formulate a labor policy and vote. It is the intention of the party that this caucus should effect a labor attitude in casting votes in the council which will be binding on all labor representatives.

Delegate Avery suggested that the party was to blame for not giving a mandate to all its representatives as to their votes in council. He advised dropping the matter entirely. He thought each alderman should determine his own attitude on the question.

Vote Criticized.

Ald. John Ashton's vote on the mayor's salary was the object of criticism last night. He said that the matter was one which should have been dealt with solely by the 1924 council, and that it was not fair to have passed it on to this year's aldermen. For that reason, he said, he had originally opposed the introduction of the subject. He argued that the last council should have held another meeting and disposed of it once and for all.

Ald. McKay maintained that the only measure of the correctness of an alderman's attitude on this matter was whether he voted in accordance with the legal view.

"It is not necessary for us to have a mandate from the party to decide how we shall vote on the return of money by someone who has received it illegally, in the opinion of the city solicitor," he said. "As a matter of fact the mayor's itemized account came in after the 1925 council was seated, so that the 1924 council did not have an opportunity to settle the matter."

Alderman Ashton objected that all this should come up in 1925, "just after I have been elected as a labor alderman," and stated that two years ago Aldermen McKay and Colbert differed on the matter of the $2,500 grant to the London chamber of commerce, without arousing any party criticism.

At this point Alderman McKay took a decided stand.

Attacks Ashton.

"Alderman Ashton has been spreading false statements about my vote on that matter," he said, "here and outside. What happened was this: When the estimates came in, including the $2,500 grant to the chamber of commerce, I moved that the money be used for an industrial commissioner to operate directly under the city council. The mayor ruled me out of order, and the matter was never put to a vote. I want to make it quite clear that no vote was taken."

Frank Crockford, as a member of the city unemployed, told the meeting that a council of unemployed was being formed, and that it was to be a "militant organization," which would try to accomplish for the unemployed what other organizations had not been able to do this year.

"We went to the mayor lately," he said, "and were met with the usual evasions. We want something definite. Our aims are to achieve Dominion unemployment insurance, as we believe unemployment to be a permanent feature of our industrial life today."

Water Costs.

Part of the first work of the newly-appointed vigilant committee will be to find out the reasons for the new service charge on water in London. It was stated that the new charge had been "dropped like a bombshell" on the people's heads, in spite of the fact that the public utilities commission was able to show a surplus in its water supply for 1924. The new charge was declared to be exhorbitant and uncalled for. The committee will report back to the party its findings.

Delegates Foxcroft, Frank McKay, and Brewer will be the delegates of the London party to the Toronto convention.

William Tite read the letter of the Tulley Gas company, in which the company offers to start a plant in London to produce gas at 81 cents a thousand, with British financial people willing to put up half the required capital. It was referred to the executive for consideration.

AMATEUR FARMER IS GIVEN DECISION

A. J. Taylor Must Give E. E. Evetts Old Property or $2,450.

Alfred J. Taylor, who traded his farm in Caradoc township to Ernest E. Evetts for property in Manor Park and a cash consideration, must either trade the property back again or pay Mr. Taylor $2,450, accorded to a judgment handed down by Mr. Justice Rose who tried the action at the court house at the winter assizes.

His lordship declares that Evetts knew nothing about farming, and while he exonerates Taylor from any fraud in connection with the deal, places the blame on George Colbert, real estate dealer, whom the judge states rushed the deal through. However, Colbert acted as Taplor's agent and therefore the latter is responsible, the judgment states.

"The plaintiff gave up property worth $2,600 in exchange for a farm worth less than the sum secured by the mortgage for $3,800, that is to say less than nothing," reads the judgment. The defendants must pay all costs in the case.

Evetts took over the farm last June, but knowing nothing about farming, could not make it go. He wanted to get his old property back, and in the trial which followed, alleged that the farm had been misrepresented to him as well as the value of the crops.

J. W. G. Winnett and Homer Neely acted for the plaintiff, Evetts, J. C. Elliott, K. C. for Colbert and Prouse, the real estate men, and D. B. Menzies for the defendant, Taylor.

CITY MAY LOSE CUNNINGHAM FIRM

Stated Option Secured on Property in Sarnia—Growing Company.

A despatch from Sarnia indicates that there is a strong possibility of the Cunningham Furnace and Machinery Company of London moving its business to that city, and the report further intimates that an option has been secured on part of the Muller plant on the river front, and that a strong local organization was at work promoting the interests of Sarnia as the future headquarters of the Cunningham factory.

Roy Cunningham, president of the firm, admitted to The Advertiser that there was a strong probability of his moving from London to Sarnia, and admitted that an option had been secured for part of the Muller premises, a plant that had been erected during the war, and one that was well suited to his requirements.

"The matter has not been definitely settled yet," stated Mr. Cunningham; "but it is a fact that negotiations have been carried on to a considerable extent.

Branch Company.

"It was announced some time ago that a branch company would be incorporated in Port Huron to look after the extension of our business in the American market, where there is an excellent field for electrical oven and similar installations, and Sarnia offers the advantage of having the two organizations very close together, so that they can both be operated from the one office. The control of the American business will, of course, be vested in the Canadian company."

Mr. Cunningham moved his business to London from Walkerville in 1922, and located in a factory on Glebe street in the first place, and then later on took over the premises on York street formerly occupied by the London Electric Company. The company has installed some of the largest electrical ovens and similar appliances in Canada, and at the present time it is estimated that it is doing about 90 per cent of that class of work that is being put in plants in this country.

New Charter.

Recently a new charter was taken out, and the name of the company changed to the Cunningham Industrial Furnace and Machinery Company, it being the intention of the firm to go into the machine tool business, and also to do considerable rebuilding of machinery and manufacturing special machines that are used in connection with electric installations.

LONDON DEBATERS WIN WOSSA SERIES FINALS

Central Collegiate Girls Are Given Decision Over St. Thomas.

Special to The Advertiser.

St. Thomas, March 21.—London Central collegiate last night won the final debate of the W. O. S. S. A. series, from the St. Thomas collegiate institute. The subject was "Resolved that a British-American alliance is in the best interests of world peace." London upheld the negative. Although the St. Thomas students were credited with a little better delivery, the London girls won on the weight of one very important argument, "That the alliance would bring up contrary alliances."

The girls debating for London were the Misses Chapman and Brown, and for St. Thomas, the Misses Dowler and Sanders. The judges were Dr. James from London; Mr. White from the London Normal school, and Miss Coyne of St. Thomas.

MEXICAN CATHOLIC CHURCH DISORDERS INCREASING

Associated Press Despatch.

Mexico City, March 21.—Additional disorders growing out of the schism in the Mexican Catholic church are reported in special despatches from Aguas, Calientes and Guadalajara.

In the former city a priest and a group of Catholics were arrested and fined for violating the law by organizing a procession and marching through the streets until dispersed by the police.

In Guadalajara three unknown persons attempted to set fire to the house of Arch-priest Manuel Alvarado. Only the street door of the building was destroyed, the flames being extinguished in time to prevent them from spreading.

GROCERY MERGER WILL PIVOT HERE

A. M. Woolnough Forecasts Success of Scheme After Trip Through N. Y.

That London will be one of the leading centers in a new $15,000,000 international wholesale grocery merger, is the confident expectation of financial men, who are supporting the venture. A. Marland Woolnough, Niagar Falls wholesaler, has just returned from visits to a number of cities in New York state, and success there leads to the belief that the merger will be successful with London included in the deal.

Mr. Woolnough, the promoter of the merger, has made extensive investigations during the last six weeks in Rochester, Albany, Syracuse, Buffalo and in New York city. He has expressed confidence in the ultimate success of the scheme and believes his trip to the states will prove a foundation for fruitful work in Ontario during the next few weeks.

While Toronto interests have been approached this week and will probably have much to do with the venture if the merger goes through, there are indications that London interests will not be ignored. The Woolnough interests are reported to hold options on several wholesale grocery properties here and London is expected to be the distributing center for Western Ontario should the merger come up to expectations.

NOTED REFUGEE'S WIFE WILL LECTURE HERE

Baroness De Hueck Speaks at Capital Theatre Tomorrow Afternoon.

Baroness de Hueck, the Russian, who speaks in the Capitol theatre tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, is the wife of a famous Russian refugee. After the revolution she and her husband came to Toronto stranded. The baron was later able to make use of his training as a civil engineer and is now in business in Toronto.

The baroness, who is an accomplished linguist, being able to speak eight languages, has made one or two trips through Western Canada, and is now embarking this summer on an extended trip to the Pacific coast. One advantage of her ability as a speaker is that she can address almost every small community in the west in a tongue that it can understnd.

She and her husband were subjected to the most extreme indignities nd dangers in their escape from the revolutionaries, and her experiences make the most interesting and authentic account of Russia in the last ten years yet offered to Canadians. She speaks in a delightful broken English and is a charming reconteur. She is staying with Mrs. A. T. Edwards during her stay in the city.

Bride Shuns Yellow Ring For Dainty One of White

Young Women of Today Forsake Old-Fashioned Band of Gold.

CHOICE IS 11 TO 1

Jewelers Blame Engagement Ring For Popularity of Neater Design.

THE EARL OF YPRES,
formerly Field-Marshall Sir John French, who underwent a severe operation this week.

The old order changeth. The day of the heavy yellow gold wedding ring is just about gone. White metal has taken the fancy of the young women that are today taking the marriage vows.

For every twelve wedding rings sold in London, one is the old-fashioned and now called, cumbersome band of gold, plain gold. Eleven wedding rings are dainty little creations. They are sometimes without decoration, but many of them carry ornate design of the orange blossom.

The reason for this is simple, says a prominent jeweler. The engagement ring is responsible. Not so long ago designers found that white claws or points forming the setting of an engagement ring enhanced the beauty of the diamond. The cheaper stones appeared to advantage in such settings. The high-priced stones looked infinitely more beautiful and expensive.

Had to Harmonize.

From white gold tips to white gold and platinum rings was but a step and the dutiful wedding ring had nothing else to do but follow. The two rings had to harmonize to pay homage to beauty.

Wedding rings, with diamond settings, are becoming popular too, says another jeweler. Since woman has ceased to regard the plain gold band a thing of beauty, she wents to go slightly the other way. For this reason wedding rings in the city often run well over the hundred dollar mark.

For the most part though, the inexpensive ring is most often sought. The average price paid is $10 to $15. It is the all platinum work of art set with anywhere from three to twelve briliant diamonds that chase the figures helter skelter in the bank book.

The old superstition of not taking off a wedding ring after the ceremony still holds. This is seen from time to time in the jewelry stores.

It frequently happens that a young woman with old-fashioned ideas, wants the heavy and plain band. Nine out of ten want to change in a couple of weeks. This would be but the matter of a moment if it were not for the age-old superstition of not taking off the ring. As a rule the figures show that superstition is beaten and the bride gets the ring she wants.

Back to Bible Times.

The superstition is said to go back to Bible times, when legend says Isaac sent a bracelet to Rebekah. It signified affection in a circle which could not be broken, but went on forever.

In olden times the groom gave the bride an iron ring. This was supposed to be emblematic of his strength. There seemed to be some irony in such a constant reminder of her lord's mastery, and the style soon changed to finer but still clumsy works of the designer.

The styles then turned to rings engraved with pledges of everlasting love. These were popular in the sixteenth century. When the brides tired of these, there was a reaction against the embellished ring. They said that it was not a beautiful expression of the giver. It was not sufficiently dignified.

Then came the well-known ring, plain, heavy and without ornament. Again a reaction. The orange blossom ring, engraved with a delicate tracery, symbolic of the sentiment of the ceremony, with or without diamonds, lies hopefully in the jeweler's case waiting to hear the vows of an unknown wearer.

OH JOY, IT'S SPRING AND WINTER FADES

Even Day and Night in London For This Twenty-Four Hours.

The first day of spring.

Today the sun is directly over the equator, shedding rays of life-giving warmth to the north. The drab clouds of winter struggle against the brilliance of the fast approaching summer sun.

London enjoys a period of equal day and night today. There will be twelve hours of day and twelve of night. This is not a special gift to the city. Every corner of the globe shares it. There is nothing of particular interest in this to the people on the equator. They have equal periods of day and night throughout the whole year.

Since Dec. 21 the sun has been moving northward. It arrived over the equator promptly this morning. It will continue to hurry toward the polar regions until June 21. Then it will be directly over the tropic of cancer, and London will have the longest day of the year.

Although the sun is speeding in its northbound movement, the days grow longer by leaps and bounds. The maximum speed has been reached. It means that the days are about three and a half minutes longer every twenty-four hours; that darkness sets in that much later every evening.

As June 21 approaches the three and a half minutes will be gradually reduced until the longest day sees no reduction. Then the heavenly program reverses and the nights will become long and the days short until the shortest day of the year, on Dec. 21.

The sun rose above the horizon here at 6 o'clock today—that is local time. London is about twenty-five minutes slower than the standard time at Ottawa. The sun sets at 5 o'clock. Each day it will set a little later, so that in a month's time the gardening may be done after supper and the softball fans can watch the ball until bedtime.

"Y" MARBLE DAY.

The first annual "marble day" of the Y. M. C. A. took place today, when a number of the junior schoolboys brought their "dibs" and "allies" to the top floor of the association building for keen competition.

Fre dWarren was in charge of the game.

New Bomb Chases Planes

Aircraft's Doom Heralded If Sinister Weapon Proves Worth—British Invention.

Associated Press Despatch.

London, March 21.—The Westminster Gazette reports that secret experiments are in progress with one of the strangest anti-aircraft weapons ever advised. Experts believe that it will be infinitely more potent in aerial warfare than torpedoes and submarines in naval fighting, the newspaper says. It consists of a bomb which when within a certain radius of an aeroplane "responds to the magnetic influence set up by the metal parts of the aeroplane," which influences give the bomb immensely increased velocity toward the plane.

No amount of manoeuvring by the pilot, according to the description of the newspaper, will enable him to escape and the plane is doomed. The bomb is launched from the ground and, if found practicable, will eliminate the need of aircraft guns.

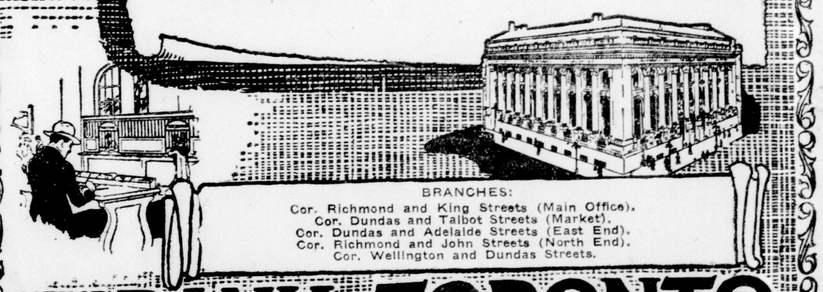

"Come in and feel at home"

THERE is nothing of doubtful diplomacy in the dealings of the Bank of Toronto with its customers. When we say, "Come in and feel at home," we mean just that, homely as the sentiment may be. Banking is a man-to-man proposition, as we see it, where the commodity handled is money, credit, service and counsel.

The Spirit of this Bank is the Spirit of Good Business. We are in a shop that deals in Tens, and Twenties, and Hundreds—a chain of stores, if you will, with a staff of men—men of understanding—to meet your every banking need.

Again we say, "Come in and feel at Home."

WOMEN and THE HOME

RECOUNTS STORY OF TUT'S TOMB

Prof. G. A. Cornish of Toronto Addresses Women's Canadian Club.

To merit the supreme privilege of holding the candle which first cast light into the tomb of Tutankhamen, after it had been steeped in darkness and solitude for 3,300 years, such was the fate of Howard Carter, archaeologist. To have the first glimpse of the treasures, which have lain there since centuries before the birth of Christ, fell to the lot of one man. And this point was brought out forcibly by Prof. G. A. Cornish of Toronto in a fascinating address on "Egypt in the Days of Tutankhamen," delivered before the Women's Canadian club in the Central Collegiate Institute yesterday.

It was the tribute of one scientist to another and might have been tinged with a little friendly envy.

To give the proper setting for his subject, Prof. Cornish showed by means of beautifully tinted lantern slides something of the country which is Egypt and the influence upon it of the great Nile River.

He pictured the tombs and temples of the people of Tutankhamen's day, then proceeded to travel with Carter's party to the very tomb of the great king, so recently excavated, near Luxor, the town which stands on the site of Ancient Thebes.

Carter and his men had labored over four years only to meet discouragement in their search for the Egyptian king's tomb, which they hoped to find intact. The speaker told of Mr. Carter's delight when at last he believed they had hit upon the tomb, his anxious waiting until Lord Carnarvon had made the journey from England, and finally their actual opening of the tomb chambers, and the disclosure of the treasures. He created further interest when he told how the coffin containing the mummy of the ancient king was yet to be opened, as was the sealed inner treasure chamber, delayed through trouble with the Egyptian government.

The speaker, in his review of the history of Egypt, made special mention of the key stone to the hieroglyphics of the early Egyptians, which now reposes in the British museum. He lauded the beautiful workmanship of the ancient man of Egypt and explained how the tombs of the kings were treasure houses in which to store up furniture, food, clothing, toys and jewels for the use of the "Ka" or spirit double of the dead king.

Mrs. P. W. Hughes presided over the meeting.

A. S. GESENSWAY,

Strange little people marked each guest's place, carrying out the pretty decoration scheme. The evening was spent in a unique and profitable way. Instead of the stereotyped bridge or euchre, the guests were asked to give brief impromptu speeches on subjects which would interest the whole gathering. Mrs. J. C. Levengood captivated her listeners by telling of experiences as a young woman in charge of an Indian reserve school in the Western States. WEDDINGS

DIMMEL—YOUNG.

The lovely Scotch bride, who was given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Mr. George Bain, wore a pretty frock of poudre blue crepe de chine with four rows of knife-pleating in the front, and her hair was adorned with a bandeaux of leaves and orange blossom. She carried an arm bouquet.

Mr. and Mrs. Dimmel will reside at 271 Waterloo street.

YOEMAN—TILLEY.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Peter's Anglican church Dorchester, on March 18, at 2 o'clock when Lois Edith, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry D. Tilley, of Surrey, England, became the bride of John Yoeman of Westminster. Rev H. Sutton officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Harold Tilley was beautifully gowned in ivory crepe and satin, with trimming of pearls. She wore a long flowing veil of net, caught up with a bandeaux of orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of roses and valley lilies. The bride wore a dainty necklace of pearls and amethyst, the gift of the groom. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Stamp of Dorchester.

After the ceremony the happy couple returned to the home of the bride's uncle, where a sumptuous wedding dinner was served. The house was prettily decorated with spring flowers.

A Sure Relief for Kidney Trouble

So Says Mr. L. Soucy of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Quebec Man Recommends Them to All Who Suffer.

St. Antonin, Que., March 20.—(Special.)—Once more Dodd's Kidney Pills have proved their inestimable value in the case of Mr. L. Soucy, a well-known resident of this place. He writes: "I can tell you that Dodd's Kidney Pills have done me much good. I have suffered for two years from bad kidneys. One of my friends advised me to take them. Two boxes have restored my health. I advise all those suffering from kidney complaints to try Dodd's Kidney Pills, they will surely relieve them."

To avoid disease the kidneys must be kept in good working order. The kidneys are the scavengers of the body. Their work is to strain all the impurities out of the blood. If the kidneys are wrong the impurities, the seeds of disease, remain in the blood, and serious trouble is bound to follow. At the first sign of trouble try Dodd's Kidney Pills.

The Astonishing Adventure of Jane Smith

By PATRICIA WENTWORTH.

INSTALLMENT XXV.

The clang of the steel gate was the net really distinct impression which Jane received. In a moment she was herself. It was just as if she had been asleep, and then, to the jar of a striking clock, had come broad awake. She listened intently.

That clang meant that the gate had been shut. One of the men had gone, probably Ember. One of them certainly remained, for she could see that the lights in the laboratory were still on. If it were Molloy he would come and find her. But it was just possible that it was Jeffrey Ember who had remained behind, so she must keep absolutely still she knew.

At this moment Jane felt that she had really had as much adventure as she wanted for one day. She thought meekly of Henry, and soulfully of her tea. Blotson would be laying it in the library. There would be muffins. She was dreadfully thirsty. Jane could have found it in her heart to weep. The thought of the slowly congealing muffins unnerved her. She would almost have admitted that woman's place is in the home. There is no saying what depths she might not have arrived at had the return of the anarchist uncle not distracted her thoughts. The heavy tread convinced her that it was not Mr. Ember, but she did not stir until he came round the corner and flashed the light upon her face. Jane blinked.

"Holy Niagara!" said Mr. Molloy. "It was the fright of my life you gave me."

Jane scrambled to her feet. She was not quite sure what the situation demanded of her in the way of filial behavior. Did one embrace one's anarchist parent? Or did one just lean against the wall and look dazed? She thought the latter.

Molloy turned the light away and then flashed it back again with great suddenness. Jane shut her eyes. Mr. Molloy pursed his lips and emitted a whistle which travelled rapidly up the chromatic scale and achieved a top note of piercing intensity. Without a word he took Jane by the arm and brought her out of her hiding-place into the lighted laboratory. He then pushed her a little away, took a good look at her, and repeated his former odd expletive:

"Holy Niagara!" he said in low but heartfelt tones.

Jane felt a little giddy, and she sat down on the bench. Her right hand went out, feeling for support, and touched a sheaf of paper. Through all the confusion of her thought she recognized that these must be the lists from which Ember had been reading.

"What is it?" she said faintly.

Molloy put down his electric torch, came quite close to her, bent down with a hand on either knee until his face was on a level with hers, and said in what he doubtless intended for a whisper:

"And where is me daughter Renata?"

Jane leaned back so as to get as far away from the flushed face as possible. She opened her mouth without knowing what she was going to say, and quite suddenly she began to laugh. She leaned her head against the brick wall behind her, and the laughter shook her from head to foot.

"Glory be to God, is it a laughing matter?" said Mr. Molloy; "whilst, I tell you, whisht, or you'll be having Ember back."

He straightened himself, and made a gesture in the direction of the roof. "It's crazy she is," he said.

Jane put her hand to her throat, gasped for breath, and stopped laughing.

"I'm sorry," she said. "It was—you were—I mean, what did you say?"

"I said, where is me daughter Renata?" said Molloy in his deepest tones.

Jane gulped down a gurgle of laughter.

"Your daughter Renata?" she said.

"Me daughter Renata," repeated Mr. Molloy sternly. "Where is she?"

Jane felt herself steadying.

"Why do you think—what makes you think——??"

"That you're not my daughter? They say it's a wise child that knows its own father, but it's a damn fool father that wouldn't know his own daughter."

"How do you know?" said Jane.

Molloy laughed.

"That's telling," he said; "but I don't mind telling you. You're my niece, Jane Smith, and not my daughter, Renata Molloy; and even if I wasn't her father, I'd always know you from Renata, the way I could always tell your two mothers apart when no one else could. Your mother had a little mole on her left eyelid, just in the corner where it wouldn't show, unless she shut her eyes. My wife hadn't got it, and that's the way I could always tell her from her sister. And my daughter Renata hasn't got it, but you have, and when you blinked, in yonder, I got a glimpse of it; and when I flashed the light on to you again and you shut your eyes, I made sure. And now, perhaps you'll tell me where in all the world is Renata?"

Jane's gaze rested intelligently upon Mr. Molloy. The corners of her mouth lifted a little. The dimple showed in her left cheek.

"Renata," she said in a very demure voice, "is in a safe place, like the money you went abroad for."

Molloy looked at her uncertainly; in the end he laughed.

"Meaning you won't tell me," he said.

"Meaning that I'm not sure whether I'll tell you or not."

"Maybe it would be better if I didn't know. That's what you're thinking."

"Yes, that was what I was thinking."

"Well, well," said Mr. Molloy. Then he laughed again. "I've the joke on Ember anyhow," he said. "He thinks he's got a patent for most of the brains in the country, and here he's been led by the nose by a slip of a girl just out of school. And what's more, he was taken in and I wasn't. He'll find that hard to swallow; will Mr. Jeffrey Ember. You'd not have taken me in, you know, even if I'd not had the mole to go by. And one of these days I shall twit Ember with that."

"Are you so sure you'd have known me?" said Jane. "Why?"

"My dear girl," said Mr. Molloy, "if you knew your cousin Renata, you'd not be asking me that. If I find a girl in an underground passage all in the dark, well that girl is not my daughter Renata. And if, by any queer sort of chance, Renata had been in that hole where I found you, she'd have screamed blue murder when I turned the light on her. Then, at an easy guess, I should say you had Renata beat to a frazzle in the matter of brains. I'm not saying, mind you, that I'm an admirer of brains in a woman. It's all a matter of opinion, and there's all sorts in the world. But you've got brains, and Renata hasn't, and Ember's had you under his nose all this time without ever knowing the difference."

Jane laughed.

"Perhaps I didn't exactly obtrude my superior intelligence on Mr. Ember," she said. Her eyes danced. "You've no idea how stupid I can be when I try, and I've been trying very hard indeed."

"The devil you have," said Mr. Molloy. "Well, you had Ember deceived and that's a grand feather in your cap, I can tell you. He's a hard one to deceive is Ember."

Jane gurgled suddenly.

"As a matter of fact," she said, "I deceived you, too. Yes I did, I really did. You know the morning you went off to America, or rather the morning you went off not to America? At the flat? You said good-bye to me, not to Renata."

"And where was Renata then?"

Jane twinkled.

"In the safe place," she said.

"I'll swear it was Renata the night before," said Molloy.

"Yes, that's clever of you. It was."

Molloy was thinking hard.

"And which of you was it in the night when we thought the roof had fallen in, and came into Renata's room to look out of the window? I'd my heart in my mouth, for I thought it was a bomb. Was it you or Renata sitting up in bed like a ghost?"

"That was me," said Jane. "You couldn't have been nearly so frightened as I was."

"Then you changed places between eight and eleven that night?"

"We changed places," said Jane, "just as you and Mr. Ember came home. I shut Renata's door just as you opened the door of the flat. I was in the hall when the lift stopped."

"Then I think I know how you did it," said Molloy. He seemed interested. "But I'd like to know who put you up to it; and I'd like to know who gave the back entrance away; and I'd like to know how Renata, who hasn't the nerve of a mouse, got down that blamed fire escape alone"

Jane dimpled again.

"You do want to know a lot, don't you?" she said.

There was a pause. Then Jane said:

"And now, what happens next, please?"

"That," said Molloy, "is just what I'm wondering."

"I ought to be getting back, I think," said Jane.

"Ah, ought you now?" said Mr. Molloy thoughtfully.

There was another pause. Jane thought she would leave Mr. Molloy to break it this time. She sat considering him. Her eyes dwelt upon him with a calm scrutiny which he found extremely embarrassing. The longer it continued the more embarrassing he found it. In the end he said:

"You want me to let you go?"

Jane nodded.

"And not tell Ember?"

Jane gave another nod, cool and brief.

"Oh, the devil's in it," said Molloy, with sudden violence.

"You don't need the devil; you've got Mr. Ember," said Jane.

"And that's true enough, for it's the very devil and all he is, and, if I let you go, I'll have him to reckon with—some day. I'd rather face the day of judgment myself."

"I tell you what I think," said Jane. "I think Mr. Ember is mad. That is to say, I think he is the sort of fanatic who sees what he wants and sets out to get it, without knowing half the difficulties and obstacles that block the way. When he does begin to know them he doesn't care, he just goes along blind. Where a reasonable man would alter his plan to suit the circumstances, this sort of fanatic just goes on because he's made his plan and will stick to it whatever happens. He isn't governed by reason at all. He doesn't care what risks he runs, or what risks he makes other people run. He goes right on, whatever happens. If the next step is over a precipice he'll take it. He must go on. Mr. Ember is like that. I think he is mad."

Mr. Molloy stared hard at Jane, then he nodded slowly three times.

"Now you're not like that," said Jane. "You're reasonable. You don't want to run appalling risks when there's absolutely nothing to be gained by it. Of course, everyone's willing to run risks if it's worth while. I'm sure you are. I'm sure you've done awafully dangerous things."

"I have," said Mr. Molloy, with simple pride. "There's no one that's done more for The Cause, or run greater risks. I could tell you things—but there, maybe I'd better not."

Jane clasped her hands round her knees. She leaned back against the wall and regarded Mr. Molloy with what he took to be admiration.

"Now do tell me," she said—"when you speak of The Cause, what do you mean?"

In her heart of hearts Jane had a pretty firm conviction that, to Mr. Molloy, The Cause stood for whatever promoted the wealth, welfare, and advancement of himself, the said Molloy.

"Ah," said Mr. Molloy reverentially. He spread out his hands with a fine gesture. "That's a big question."

"Well, what I mean," said Jane, "is this. What do you really call yourself? You know, I always used to call you 'the anarchist uncle,' but the other day someone said that there were no anarchists any more, so I wondered what you really were. Are you a Socialist, or a Communist or a Bolshevist, or what?"

A doubtful expression crossed Mr. Molloy's handsome face.

"Well, now," he said, "it would depend on the company I was in."

Jane had a struggle with the dimple and subdued it.

"You mean," she ventured, "that if you were with Socialists, you would be a Socialist, and if you were with Bolshevists, you would be a Bolshevist?"

"Well, it would be something like that," admitted Mr. Molloy.

"I see," said Jane. "And, of course, whatever you were, you'd naturally want to be sure that it was going to be worth your while. I mean you'd want to get something out of it?" She waited a moment, and then went on, with a complete change of voice and manner. "What are you going to get out of this?" She spoke with the utmost gravity. "If you don't know, I can tell you. Disaster—at best a long term of imprisonment, at the worst death, the sort of death one doesn't care about having in one's family. The question is, is it worth it? You're not in the least mad. You're not a fanatic either. You are a perfectly sane and reasonable person, and you know that what I'm saying is the sane and reasonable truth. Isn't it?"

"Faith, and wasn't I saying so to Ember myself," said Molloy in gloomy agreement. "We've got money enough, and we can live on it retired, so to speak. The life's all very well when you're young, but a man of my age isn't just so keen on taking chances as he was, and that's the truth. Then there's the old times come over him, and he thinks of the place where he was born, and he thinks, maybe, he'd like to see it again. Why, with the money I've got," said Mr. Molloy, "it's a fine house I could have in Galway, and a car, and a horse or two. That's what I'd like."

Jane saw his face light up.

"It's a fine town Galway," he said, "and there are people I'd like to see there, and places too. The people would be changed, I'm thinking, but not the places. I'd like well enough to go up the river past Menlough again. It's the grand woods there are there, and then there's a place where you'd see nothing but reeds, and no way at all for a boat. But let you push through the reeds and a way there is, and you come out to the gray open water and the country round it just as bare as if you'd taken sand-paper to it. They used to say that the water went down to hell, but I'm not saying that I believe it; but deep it is, for no one's ever touched the bottom. Many's the stone I've dropped in there, and wakened in the night to wonder if it was still sinking; and many's the time I've played truant, and gone there fishing for the great pike that they said was in it. Hundreds of years old he is by the tales, and once I could swear I saw him, only maybe it was only a cloud that was passing overhead. What I saw was just a gray shadow, and all at once it come over me that I should be getting back to my work. It was black frightened, that's the truth, but I couldn't tell you why."

WOMEN and THE HOME

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

Correct Negligee Demands as Scrupulous Attention as More Formal Dress.

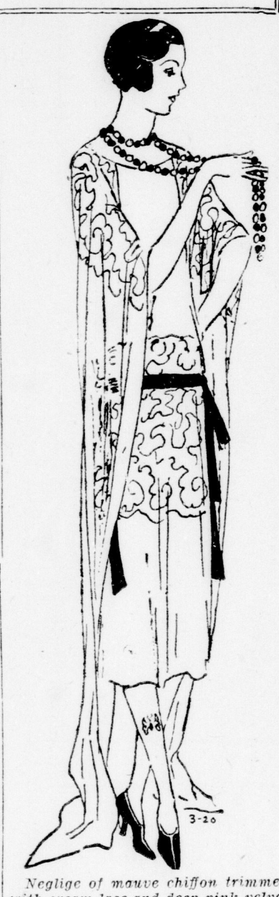

Much of the negligee attire of the present day is anything but what the name originally indicated. For often women are as much "dressed up," as well groomed and as perfectly "soigne," as our French friends would say, as when dressed for golf or the opera.

Moreover, with many women negligee apparel demands no very great privacy. To be sure, a woman would not appear in the dining-room or reception-room of a hotel in such negligee, she would not appear in her garden so clad, unless it was one of those delightful walled Spanish gardens that one sees built about some of the new California bungalows. She would not appear in negligee in her own home at a formal dinner, but she would appear in this new sort of elaborate negligee when she entertained fairly intimate friends at a small informal dinner or luncheon.

Of course, usage differs with different families and in different households, but one very distinguished daughter of a distinguished statesman used to entertain distinguished friends of her husband's, choosing for her own costume a perfectly circumspect but rather startling suit of Chinese pyjamas.

Nowadays the careful woman is as particular that the various accessories of her negligee attire should harmonize and be appropriate as she is concerning those little things when dressed in formal dress. Slippers, stockings, garters, jewelry are all chosen especially to go with the negligee. The slippers indicated in the sketch are of pink velvet piped with mauve satin. There are interesting negligee slippers of gold, or some bright color, made with high heels and toes that turn up in Turkish manner. Sometimes a fringe of gold is placed all around the top of such slippers.

Doubtless one thing that makes the negligee appeal to many women, is that this type of garment does not really have to be in the accepted fashion at all. Many women, in fact, design their own negligees while conforming most rigidly to the prevailing mode in choosing the rest of their wardrobes. Color, too, is indulged in more lavishly in the making of this little gown that is to be worn only against the sympathetic background of one's own rooms.

Neglige of mauve chiffon trimmed with cream lace and deep pink velvet ribbon. The slippers to match are of pink velvet piped with mauve satin and the flesh silk stockings are embroidered with mauve and pink butterflies. The pearl necklace is in the two colors of mauve and pink.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

PARIS HAIRDRESSERS.

They say now in Paris that the hairdressers are the most contented group of workers in the great French city. The craft is a very, very old one there and for generations and generations these rather humble workers have handled the scissors and curling irons, following obediently in the wake of fashion. Only very rarely does the hair-dresser appear who is daring enough to think of originating a new fashion in hairdressing. To be sure, there are such masters of the art, but they regard themselves almost in an entirely different business.

The prevailing opinion seems to be that the hairdressers take their cues from the milliners, and that hair is bobbed or shingled nowadays almost entirely because the milliners are making hats that make this wellnigh imperative. Change the mode of the milliner and you will probably change the mode of the hairdresser.

However, the opinion has been expressed that it the other way around and that the milliners shape their hats to fit the prevailing mode of hair arrangement.

When the enormously high "comodes" of the latter part of the eighteenth century were worn, then hats were queer little flower and feather trimmed plaques that fastened on the front of the high pompadour in front, with flowers and lace filled in at the under side of the back. Maybe our hats are what they are today because women choose to cut their hair.

What a Falling Stone Did To Johnny and Polly Chuck's Home By the Wall

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.

While Polly Chuck chuckled to herself as she listened to Johnny Chuck boasting about their new home to Peter Rabbit, she agreed with all that Johnny said. She really felt that it was the safest and best home they ever had had. She couldn't find one thing the matter with it. She couldn't think of a thing that could possibly happen to it in any way to make it less than the perfect home it seemed to be.

Of course there was a back door. This back door opened between some of the stones of the old wall a short distance away. Polly didn't think that they would ever need to use that back door, but when she dug that home she made the back door just the same. She was wise enough to know that it is never safe to have only one way out of a place.

It was just after the Black Shadows had crept through the Old Orchard that night that Farmer Brown's Boy was taking a short-cut home from the Green Forest. He came to the old stone wall just back of the new house of the Chucks. He put his hand on a big stone on the top of the wall, intending to vault over. But that big stone was loosely placed, and when he put his weight against it it rolled off the wall and fell down on the other side. Farmer Brown's Boy didn't think anything about it at the time, but climbed over the wall and went on his way home whistling.

But when that big stone fell from the top of the wall it fell right in the entrance of the home of Johnny and Polly Chuck and just filled it. They didn't know it at the time. They didn't find it out until the next morning when they started to go out. Perhaps you can imagine how they felt when they discovered that their doorway was closed. They tried to dig around it, but couldn't. You see, there were other stones in the way. It was these other stones that had made that home seem so safe to them. There had been just room between them for their hallway.

"Oh, dear!" sobbed Polly. "Our new house is ruined."

Of course they at once hurried out through the back door and around to see what had happened. There lay that big stone closing their front doorway. They couldn't move it. That doorway was as firmly closed as if there had never been one.

There were tears in the eyes of Polly Chuck as she and Johnny stared at the great stone. Who could have done this thing? They hadn't the least idea.

"Oh, dear," sobbed Polly. "Our new home is ruined. Now we'll have to look around for another place, and there isn't another as good as this anywhere in the Great World. I just know it."

"But we can still use the back door," said Johnny Chuck soothingly.

"But that won't do," retorted Polly. "I simply won't live in a house which has only one entrance."

"Perhaps we can dig another entrance from the other side of the old stone wall," said Johnny hopefully.

"I don't believe we can," replied Polly. "Anyway, we will be on the wrong side then and have to climb over the old stone wall every time we wanted to get some sweet clover. No, we've got to give this home up. And I did love it so! Oh, dear! oh, dear!"

Johnny Chuck did his best to comfort Polly, but she wasn't to be comforted. All that day they wandered around looking for a place to build a new home. But they couldn't find a place to suit them.

Regularity Should Mark Child's Physical Life

Small Body Must Be Made to Follow Daily Routine.

CAN MAKE APPEAL

By JULIA HOYT.

In my last article I stressed the importance of considering a child as a personality, and yet it must not be forgotten that children are in one sense little animals, as well as human beings with temperaments, brains and sensibilities.

They must be thought of as little animals from the physical point of view. Regularity in their every-day routine is essential to a child's growth physically and, consequently, mentally. Their meals should be at regular hours, their exercise, their sleep and, later, their studies and recreation; all should be per schedule.

If one sees a very healthy, happy child and finds out anything about its life, one will almost invariably find that only on the rarest occasions is anything allowed to interfere with a daily ordered routine of life. Just as a convalescent is made to follow a daily routine in order to regain his strength, so it is absolutely necessary for a child, who every day is building body and brain tissue, to have nothing in his life that will divert his energies from that process.

Simple Matter.

The physical life of a child is ordinarily simple to deal with if one follows this method; naturally, the mental and emotional side is much more complicated but decidedly simplified if the child is kept in a well, sane, physical condition.

As far as mental training goes, there is only one way in which one can make the comparison of the child and the animal, and that is in the insistence on obedience to orders. From its youngest days, the child should be taught to obey. This is important to it not only when young, but a great help from the point of view of training and, consequently, a help when meeting questions and difficulties in later life.

It is often very annoying to the child to have to obey; but we all have to do things we don't like, and the earlier we begin to do them smilingly, the easier it comes. There is nothing less kind than to bring up a child in the belief that it can have and do anything it likes. The awakening later is a very rude one, and life is much harder for that child than for the one brought up with the other training.

Appeal Can Be Made.

However, I am wrong to compare children with animals even in this one phase of their mentality. For, though they must be taught to obey, unlike animals one can appeal to their reason when ordering them to do something they do not at all want to do, I believe that from the moment they are able to understand speech we should, wherever possible, try to make a child understand our reasons for commanding them to do or not to do. Even if they are not quite able to appreciate the reason, they do appreciate the fact that we are troubling to explain to them and, above all, that we, in our minds, have what we consider a good reason.

Make them feel that you are considering them as sensible human beings and in your dealings with them genuinely trouble to study them as such, and a great part of the battle many adults have in their relation with children will disappear.

ST. PATRICK'S PARISH GIVES IRISH CONCERT

Successful Entertainment Given by Splendid Talent Is Greatly Enjoyed.

A very successful concert was held in St. Patrick's parish hall this week, when the social committee of the parish put on an Irish entertainment. Mrs. Alice Henderson was unable to appear, owing to the death of her brother, but through her kindness the following artists were secured from her company: Miss Mary Bishop, Miss Hilda Griffith, Miss Freda French, Miss Bradly, Mrs. Munro and Sam Munro.

Others taking part were the Kelleher brothers, Miss Helen O'Donald, Miss Madeline Fitzgerald, Miss Dorothy Clifford, Miss Alice Fitzgerald, Miss Mary Fitzgerald, Miss Mary Murphy, Miss Irene Reeves, Miss Jessie Chisholm, Howard Chisholm, Miss Francis Haines, Miss Helen Murphy, Billy Mullins, M. Green, Joe McInnis, Joe Gorman, James Gower and George and Jack Insell. Mrs. Murray, Mrs. Munro and Miss Margaret Smith were the accompanists of the evening.

The hall was attractively decorated in green, with shamrocks, ferns and palms adding an effective note. Potted shamrocks also lent an Irish touch to the decorations. John O'Donald acted as chairman of the evening.

Following the attractive program a dainty lunch was served to the assisting artists by the ladies of the congregation.

REAL GERMAN COFFEE CAKE.

One and one-half cakes yeast, one cup milk, scalded and cooled, one tablespoon sugar, three eggs, one cup sugar, one-half cup butter, three cups sifted flour, one and one-half cups mixed citron, raisins, currants in equal parts, one-fourth teaspoon salt.

Dissolve yeast and one tablespoon sugar in the tepid milk, add one and one-half cups of flour. Beat well. Cover and set aside to rise one hour. Add the butter and sugar creamed, the floured fruit, the rest of the flour, the salt, and eggs well beaten. Stir for ten minutes. Pour into well-buttered molds, filling them about half full, cover and let rise until molds are nearly full, then bake in a moderate oven.

The Bird's Spring Song.

Who taught you how to sing, sweet bird,
The gladsome song of spring?
A prima donna? No, methinks,
It was some potent king.
You, feathered songster, learned your song
From Him who gave you breath.
You echo praises all day long,
O joyous one and blest.

Please tell me how you dare to sing
From dawn until the dark?
Those who would kill and work you ill,
Are near you, yet I hear
Your vibrant note, your song of love
Falling upon my ear!
You little creature simply trust,
Without a thought of fear.

Sing on, frail atom, now I know
'Tis best let come what may, to sing a song
When things go wrong.
And chase dull care away.
Sweet songster, you who did not hold
Your note till all lauded bright.
Teach me to launch a song of hope,
E'en in the darkest night.

"FATHER AND SON" MOVEMENT GROWS

Many Are Turned Away From Banquet—Rural Young Folk Banquet.

Special to The Advertiser.

St. Thomas, March 20.—The gymnasium of the Y. M. C. A. was the scene of the most successful get-together father and son banquet ever held, with an attendance that overflowed into the lobbies and many were turned away. Rev. James Findlay, a former St. Thomas resident, now living in Courtright, gave a stirring address. He presented the father and son problem from both angles and gave both many excellent pointers for the companionship between them.

The evening was peppy, with community singing led by Frank Holcombe and Carmen Millyard, and with several contests.

Dr. C. B. Taylor, chairman of the board of directors, acted as chairman, and toasts were responded to by C. E. Raven and J. A. Taylor. Harold Hopkins proposed the toast to the "Dads," which was responded to by Mr. Findlay. Short speeches were given by Frank Holcombe and George Richardson.

The banquet which was prepared by the women's auxiliary was excellent. During the supper and following it several selections were given by the Central Methodist Sunday school orchestra of 21 pieces, led by Mrs. (Dr.) Mitton.

Some idea of the growing enthusiasm in the father and son movement can be gathered from the fact that, when, in conformance with other years, 250 places were laid at the table, 340 persons sat down, and over 50 were turned away, due to lack of accommodation.

Institute Banquet.

Members of the Elgin Girls' Institute and Junior Farmers' Improvement Association, with their parents and friends, to the number of 400, gathered in the Engineers' hall this evening for a get-together banquet. The tables were neatly decorated in the club colors, blue and gold, and an excellent repast was supplied by a local association.

Donald Begg, president of the improvement club, acted as toastmaster, and, after the toast of "The King," called on J. D. Galbraith to propose the toast to "Our Country," which was replied to by Mr. J. B. Reynolds of the Agricultural College, Guelph. President Reynolds dwelt on the need of co-operation between the farmer and the merchant, and the boys and girls of Canada. The speaker thought that too much may have been made of Canada's material resources and not enough of those individuals who are responsible for the development of these material resources.

"Young People's Organizations" was proposed by J. C. Campbell and responded to by Miss Ethel M. Chapman, assistant supervisor of institute branches of department of agriculture. Miss Chapman urged the reaching out, development and co-operation of institute branches throughout the dominion. She remarked on the creditable record of the Elgin Girls' Institute, and urged them to continue their work, thereby improving the rural conditions for the young life of the country.

"Our Guests" was proposed by Miss Jean Ferguson and responded to by Mayor G. H. Sloggett and Warden W. M. Anderson. The remainder of the evening was spent in dancing.

The visitors included Mr. McLaren and others from the O. A. C., members of the county council, city council, Kiwanis club, chamber of commerce and county board of trade.

Delegates Named.

A delegate of three was delegated by the advisory committee of the Lake Erie Fishermen's Association, which met this afternoon, to attend the conference between the south shore association and the Canadian fishermen to discuss closing dates and other matters pertaining to the fishing industry which touches both the Canadian and U. S. fishermen on Lake Erie. The three delegates appointed are the president, H. Dromgole, George Van Order of Port Burwell and C. W. Barwell of Port Dover. The meeting will likely be held in Buffalo next Thursday afternoon, and delegates from Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York states will be present at the conference.

The local committee decided to ask for a maximum catch of 60,000 pounds of fish, a closing date of December 15, and a standard mesh for both gill and pond netting. cig; ksAaag

Discuss Bus Problem.

The Grightmire proposition for the installation of buses to replace the street railway was taken up by the special committee this afternoon, but no definite conclusion reached. The committee decided to ask Mr. Grightmire to come to the city to discuss his proposition. He operates a string of buses between Dundas and Hamilton, and, according to his letter, is prepared to give the city a bus service at a 7-cent fare or 15 for a dollar, with a 5-cent fare for school children.

Oppose Daylight Time.

Sentiment in the city does not favor the adoption of daylight saving hours in this district. The claim is advanced that the confusion that arises, both in the city and in respect to other cities, is sufficient to offset any benefits that the saving hours might represent.

Hog Prices.

Hogs on the St. Thomas market reached the $13 mark Thursday at the packing plant, and today in Shedden Mr. McDonald reports a similar raise in price.

Fathers, Do You Really Know Your Sons and Daughters?

"My husband is the best man in the world, the kindest and the most generous, but he is a bad father," said a woman to me the other day. "Except for purposes of respectability, my children had as well have no father at all as the one they have.

"If any one should tell him this, he would be horrified and amazed and indignant. He would say, 'Don't I toil like a slave to support my family? Do I ever deny them anything that is in my power to give them? Haven't I spent thousands of dollars on their education? Haven't they a fine house to live in, and fine clothes to wear, and fine automobiles to ride in? Don't they go off traveling and to cool spots in the summer, while I sweat in an office making the money for them to take life easy? Me not a good father! What more can a man do? Where do you get that bad-father stuff?'

"And every word that he says is true. He is a model father to his children, according to his lights, which are all financial lights. He adores his children, but he says it with a check book, and he honestly and truly thinks that he has done his full duty to his boys and girls by giving them the things that money buys.

"But he has been so busy giving them things that he has never had time to give them himself. He has never even taken an hour off to get acquainted with them. Why, there aren't a group of flappers and jellybeans anywhere in the world that are greater strangers to him than his own boys and girls! They know each other so little, and have so little in common, that they haven't a word to say to each other. When they are left alone together they are embarrassed to death, and there are great chunks of solid silence between them that you could cut with a knife.

"Of course, my poor, dear husband is riding for a fall. He is preparing for himself a bitter disappointment, because he believes that when the boys are grown-up men a miracle will happen, and that he and they will be chummy and that they will repay all the sacrifices he has made for them by being devoted to him, and going into the big business he has built up for them, and that they will just be two souls with but a single thought about the factory and everything else. And he thinks it is going to be sweet to have a loving young daughter to nestle against his shoulder and confide all of her love affairs to him.

"But nothing of the kind is going to happen. You can't wait to get acquainted with the children until they are grown. You have to meet them in the cradle. You can't force their confidence. You have to win it, and if a man is going to be Friend Father, he has to establish that relationship in the days when a little tot holds on to his finger and has long yellow curls; not when he is a varnish-haired college man who thinks he knows everything on earth.

"My husband has always left the entire management of the children to me. I have had to bring them up single-handed. I have done the best I knew how, but the job is too big for me, especially now, when they have reached the hobbledehoy stage when they need a firmer and stronger hand than mine on the reins and more knowledge of life than I possess as a guide.

"You know, there comes a time in the life of every boy when he has a contempt for women, even his mother, no matter how much he loves her. He feels that he is a man and he patronizes her and derides her opinions. I don't blame the boys. After all, most women's lives are shut in and free from temptations. We can only guess at the dangers they will have to meet.

DEPARTMENT URGES LARGER SCHOOL SITE

Petrolia Board Likely To Erect New Collegiate On Fair Grounds.

Special to The Advertiser.

Petrolia, March 20.—The department of education regards the present site of the high school as inadequate for high school purposes, since the local board has failed to secure additional property, according to a letter received by Secretary J. J. Mathews. The department favors the fair ground site.

A stormy session of the board of education was held last evening, and as no word had been received from the department, no site was selected. As a result of the information received today, the new high school will be built on the fair ground site unless the board make a special appeal. Construction will commence April 1.

Critical Times in Woman's Life

Mrs. James Muir, Anten Mills, Ont., writes:—

"I suffered from nervousness and despondency, and at 65 lost all control of my limbs, so that for two years I was unable to walk. The doctors thought I would never get better at my age, but I read of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and bought and used a dozen boxes. In a short time I was able to walk again. I am now 79 years old and have enjoyed good health for the past fourteen years, thanks to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

IN woman's life there are periods of excessive nervous strain. If she can safely pass these times the chances are good for happiness and long life.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is woman's best friend from childhood to old age because it comes to her aid during these critical periods.

Headaches, sleeplessness, indigestion, irritability, tendency to worry are the symptoms which tell of a failing nervous system.

Rest and the persistent use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is the most rational and most effective treatment for the building up of the nervous system. Many thousands of women willingly verify this statement.

SATURDAY, MARCH 21, 1925.

The New Liquor Regulations.

The Ontario Temperance Act, 1925, is the name of the bill the Ontario govrenment has introduced in the legislature. Its provisions are that beer of twice the strength allowed under the Ontario Temperance Act the people voted for will be sold in standard hotels, restaurants, cafeterias, grocery stores and clubs.

The regulation that doctors shall be limited in the number of prescriptions they can write per month to thirty should tend to tighten up a loose practice. It will make no difference to the physician who has consistently refused to sell his services to those seeking "pers," and it should check up those who have supplemented their income to the limit by issuing as many orders as they could secure.

Jail sentences for bootleggers is also an idea that is commendable. A fine has not been much of a hardship to them; they have been making large profits, and the taking away of a portion of these in the form of a fine was simply an incentive to redouble the effort and recover the amount of the levy.

The government calls its sanction to sell 4.4 beer a "permit," but it is in reality a return to the license system under another name. The government does not know whether its new beer is intoxicating or not; some of its members claimed it is not, but it is notable that provision is made "that permit holders may eject persons from their premises when such person or persons is or are there for improper causes, after he or she has refused to leave by request." That means, without any contortion of the imagination, that a person who drinks too much of this new beer may become noisy or boisterous, and that it will be quite all right under such conditions to throw him out.

There must be some doubt in the government's own mind on this point because there is the further restriction that a boy under righteen cannot purchase the 4.4 beer. There is no such barrier between a boy and a bottle of pop. It must be that the government has some graver doubts about its new budget-balancing beer than it cares openly to admit.

A Great Opportunity.

The Ontario legislature, according to one writer, is in "for a hot time before it gets through with legislation dealing with the distribution of church property and educational institutions of the Presbyterian church in this province."

The matters at issue in the Ontario legislature are different from those dealt with at Ottawa, where right was given to legally proceed with the uniting of three denominations. The Ontario legislature has the power to sanction the disposal of the properties of the church between the unionists and the non-concurrents.

Committees of both sides have done a very wise thing in holding sessions in Toronto prior to the matter coming before the legislature, and in this way trying to iron out as many of the controversial points as possible. It would be an excellent thing if they were able to report to the attorney-general that they have found it possible to reach an agreement that would preclude a protracted debate either in committee or in the legislature itself.

Rightly or wrongly, the average man looks to a church body to do business in a way that is different to other institutions. He expects to see in their deliberations a reflection of the great underlying principles of the Christian church. He knows that in the competitive business age of today the theory of an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth keeps crowding in for recognition, and he is familiar with the fact that there is not much mercy shown or quarter given to the man whose back is against the wall.

It is for that reason that he looks to the leaders of church business for something better. They are exponents of a gospel that teaches that riches do not consist in the abundance of things a man possesses; they have read of the man who prepared to tear down his old barns and build greater in order that his wealth might be a source of personal gratification, only to find that his impoverished soul was soon to be demanded of him.

Standing as we do in an age that is inclined to be skeptical, the leaders of union and those who conscientiously differ with them have a great opportunity to give to the world a practical demonstration that it is possible for Christian men to deal with a difficult problem in a way that displaces acrimony with kindly thought, that gives love the precedence over ambition, and beyond all else demonstrates that above and over all the man-made forms and differences there is the great common purpose of advancing the kingdom of God.

Neither Smiles Nor Tears.

May Goldhaar is fourteen years of age and lives in New York city. As far as is known she is the only girl in that city of millions who can neither laugh nor cry, and just the other day she was awarded $25,000 for the injury that caused this peculiar condition. Last July she was knocked down by an automobile and dragged along the pavement.

When taken to the hospital she was unconscious and remained in that state for several days, doctors being then of the opinion that she had concussion of the brain. She lingered between life and death for weeks and in that time it was ascertained that she had neither a fractured skull nor an injured spine. A specialist was called and it was his skill that turned the tide in the battle. She had wasted away to thirty pounds when he operated, now she is an even hundred.

Since the accident she has neither smiled nor cried, and she never will because the nerves controlling the action of her facial muscles and the ducts leading from the tear glands are paralyzed, and a jury decided she was entitled to $25,000 for the absence of these emotional organisms, smiles and tears.

So May will have to get along as best she can—if she is pleased she can't smile, if she has a fit of the blues she is denied the comfort of tears. Twenty-five thousand dollars is a goodly sum for a fourteen-year-old girl, but no smiles and no tears is a large sacrifice to put up for it, because after all life is cheered only by smiles and comforted by tears.

Henry Ford On Free Trade.

Henry Ford, in a recent interview with an Advertiser representative, expressed a tariff theory which is both surprising and significant, coming from a great manufacturer.

Mr. Ford out-Liberals the most extreme of the Liberals and out-Progresses the most radical of the Progressives.

Mr. Ford says: "I am for free trade, unrestricted and unhampered, among the nations of the world. The free, unhampered and unrestricted trade between the forty-eight states of the United States is a perfect demonstration of the line that world trade should follow."

The greatest manufacturer in the world believes that his opinion is more than a theory; he believes that it will become a reality. "Such a course," he said, "will be followed when we come to know that all tinkering and monkeying with natural free trade hurts and restricts all legitimate business and industry. Such world trade, based on labor and fair exchange of goods and no favors, does not need armies and navies for its protection."

These are extraordinary views for a manufacturer to hold—extraordinary, at any rate, to Canadians. No person can know whether or not Mr. Ford is right in so sweeping a theory. He is a dreamer and some of his dreams seem absurd. But he was also a dreamer twenty years ago as a modest mechanic, and his dreams of twenty years ago are not absurdities today. Henry Ford has an uncanny habit of seeing straight and thinking right.

Those Happy Town Editors.

What a fine time some of the town editors have. For instance, here's William McDonald of the Chesley Enterprise writing in his paper this week the following:

> "John Krug drove up in front of our office on Monday afternoon with his pockets filled with bottles. He had just come from the 'Delectable Hills' of the 6th concession of Sullivan where the sugar maples grow. . . . We have sampled the syrup and pronounce it the kind that touches the very cockles of one's heart."

So there's the season's supply of maple syrup attended to and the price is the fervent benediction of the sage in the Chesley sanctum. In a few weeks more another subscriber will come in with a sheaf of rhubarb and lay the offering on the editorial table—likewise the first green onions and the first strawberries will go the same way.

By the same token Johnny Hunter of the Kincardine Reporter receives the first nine-pound salmon that is hooked off the docks in his town. The problem of existence becomes a very easy matter for these gentry. All they do is utter superlative words of unstinted praise and the first fruits of the land pour in.

An Expensive Method.

Two commissions appointed at Ottawa have held inquiries, made investigations, and reported. The cost is:

Pulpwood commission	$ 75,672
Grain inquiry	167,606
Total	$243,278

There is a tendency in recent years to have more commissions rather than fewer. There may be useful information brought out, but very often it occurs that the reports contain information already known, and material that could be secured by the facilities already possessed by the government.

There is also the common tendency on the part of these bodies to operate in a big way; call witnesses from a distance; have a following of special reporters, and finally put all their activities in a blue book that is issued to far more people than will ever read it.

There must be a simpler way of accomplishing the same purpose and the government would be well advised to seek it out.

Note and Comment.

The people of Ontario did not vote on the 23rd of October, 1924, for places licensed to sell beer.

Palm Beach hotels were destroyed by fire, but Andy Gump jumped out of the window in plenty of time.

All sorts of freak happenings are reported from the Indiana tornado belt. There is no record, though, of a mortgage being blown off a farm.

Labor department says the family budget for February was $21.99, compared to $21.09 for January. The 90 cents difference is accounted for by father getting a new spring suit.

Church union is not a new thing, for very often the young man from the Methodist church waited outside the Presbyterian kirk on Sunday night, and union almost invariably followed.

Home Doctorin'

Ned Whiskers swears how liniment will rid my carcass of its ills, Hi Rickey havin' other views and bringin' in a mess of pills.

When comes the springtime of the year the mornin's fair as man could wish, by night the rain has soaked my smock, the day's fit for a speckled fish. 'Tis on a time like that what come the achin's in my crippled frame, 'tis then I get the ointment out and hobble on a basswood cane.

Then come the friends around the block to cheer me when I'm feeling blue, each tellin' me about the things I should be startin' in to do.

Ned Whiskers come last night to call, him hearin' I was limpin' bad, Ned fetchin' in some liniment, a kind his folks had always had. Ned says if I be rubbin' this 'twould take the kinks from out my back, I'd feel so full of life again I'd bite heads off a carpet tack.

When Ned was gone I takes his stuff and soaks it on my achin' shin, believin' it would do for me the things what it had wrought for him.

As I was rubbin' at my joints Hi Rickie comes in for a bit, remarkin' how he'd heard from Ned as how I wasn't feelin' fit. He seen me comin' home at night a-limpin' on my basswood pole, and sayin' that I had a gait like cartin' in a ton of coal.

Hi always doctors at himself and seems to know 'bout what to do, he's always squintin' in the stores a-searchin' there for somethin' new.

I often think that Hi would bust if nothin' had went wrong with him, he's always tinkerin' with his health or rubbin' ointment on his skin.

Of late Hi's kind of took to pills to cure his fifty-seven aches, he's shootin' pills inside his works the very minute he awakes; at noon he gobbles down six more to cure a pain inside his head, at night he rolls the pellets in before he puts himself to bed.

When Hi he seen me rubbin' there he says this ointment plan was bunk, for he had fourteen different kinds a-restin' in an attic trunk.

Hi had some pills along with him, the newest kind what he had seen, if I would take a pail of them I'd dance upon the village green. So Hi he fishes out a dose, I rolled them in my innards then, a-hopin' how with Ned and Hi I might be feelin' well again.

Between Ned's ointment and Hi's pills I'm feelin' like a corn-husk tick, I'm hopin' for the best, I be, but limpin' on my basswood stick.—ARK.

Sixty Years in One Family.

Recalls His Father Bringing Home the First Edition of The Advertiser to the Old Home in Westminster Township.

Editor of The Advertiser:

Sir,—In renewing my subscription for The Advertiser, I wish to state that we have taken The Advertiser since the very beginning over 60 years ago. I remember when living at the old homestead (2nd concession, Westminster) my father bringing home the first issue, a small paper of two leaves, when I was a boy, and he told us that Mr. John Cameron was to be the editor.

We are always pleased to see The Advertiser come into our home and the homes of my family. We are pleased to see the steady growth it has made, and consider it one of the best papers in Canada as to early insertion of news, markets, and matters of importance, but more especially for the high moral tone which it maintains.

Wishing you continued prosperity, I remain, yours truly JOHN D. GRIEVE.

About Broughdale Water.

Resident Recalls That City Put in Well and Drained Area That Supplied the Houses Before.

Editor of The Advertiser:

Sir,—The water service charge to Broughdale citizens is an outrage. Two years ago, and previous to that, we were well supplied with water, all residents having wells, excellent water and lots of it. Then the city well drillers arrived and sunk a well deep enough to drain the whole section, and we were without water then. We had to go the expense of putting our own water lines in, and pay double water rates to the city—just a mere oversight of our county officials. I believe the city is going to put in a 12-inch main to the Broughdale well. I suppose the service charge will have to pay for it, and the water that rightfully belongs to us. Hoping this letter reaches the eyes of our 1925 county council, so that there won't be a mere oversight on this deal.

About the Rectory School.

Resident Thinks a Mistake Would Be Made in That Way and Suggests Another Site For the Collegiate.

Editor of The Advertiser:

Sir,—In regard to wrecking one of the best built schools in the city, I would like to ask the board of education, through your paper, especially Mr. F. S. Lawrason and Mr. Cairncross and school board in general, if they were spending their own money would they wreck a building worth $75,000, also where are they going to put 375 pupils in this district, when you have been saying that all the schools were crowded? Why not buy the property on the northeast corner of Glebe and York streets and build the high school there? It would be more economical for taxpayers, as we are assessed very heavily now for schools and it seems as if you don't want to economize a bit. JAMES C. PARK.

A FINE STOVE.

In the picture at the movies a cook was using a gas stove. Two housemaids in the audience were watching the scene with great interest.

WOODSTOCK PLAN FOR HALF HOLIDAY

Majority of Stores To Close Wednesday Afternoons For Three Months.

BUTCHERS OBJECT

Special to The Advertiser.

Woodstock, March 20.—Retail merchants will close their stores on Wednesday afternoons during the months of June, July and August. The decision was reached after several lengthy conferences. The butchers, however, had a petition out today which was signed by a majority of the meat men, agreeing to close on Wednesday afternoon for six months in the year, commencing with the first Wednesday in April. The barber shops of the city close on Wednesdays the entire year round.

Flood Recedes.

The flood which inundated the lowlying portions of the city and transformed Southside park into a large lake have materially receded today. No serious damage occurred but an embankment, reinforced with concrete, at Southside park was penetrated by the torrent from Southside pond, and a deep furrow has been cut across a section of the amusement park. Superintendent of Parks Dent says this year's flood is the worst in many years. The section of Governors road completely submerged yesterday is again open for traffic.

MITCHELL CHOIR LEADER GIVEN RING AND PURSE

Special to The Advertiser.

Mitchell, March 20.—On Wednesday night seventy of the Presbyterian unionists, who are now attending the Methodist church, gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Campbell and spent an hour or more in singing Scotch songs and having a real social time. During the evening, Miss Gladys Black, who was organist and choir leader of Knox church for a number of years, was presented with a purse containing a beautiful onyx ring and a sum of money.

BRITAIN TO HONOR CURZON IN DEATH

Funeral Services Will Be Held Wednesday in Westminster Abbey.

Associated Press Despatch.

London, March 20.—The honor of a funeral service in Westminster Abbey is to be accorded Marquis Curzon of Kedleston, one of Great Britain's most distinguished statesmen, who died early this morning after a brief illness. The ceremony will be attended by representatives of the royal household, members of both houses of parliament and a great gathering of prominent personages in all phases of national activity.

The funeral ceremony will take place Wednesday and immediately afterwards the body will be conveyed to Kedleston, where it will be buried on Thursday in the presence of the family of the marquis and personal friends.

As a mark of respect the house of lords, in which Lord Curzon was government leader, will not carry out its usual business on Monday. A motion for adjournment will be the signal for funeral orations.

The dead statesman, who was lord president of the council in the present British cabinet, through his long occupation of the office of secretary for foreign affairs and his world-wide travels, was better known abroad than most of the other British statesmen. As a consequence at his London residence today there was a constant stream of messengers bringing telegrams of condolence and sympathy from all parts of the world. These included messages from numerous heads of foreign governments.

Sir Herbert Barker, a specialist in manipulative surgery, and who had known Marquis Curzon for many years, said tonight: "The real tragedy in Lord Curzon's life was the incurable injury to his back received during his childhood, which rarely left him free of a dull, wearying pain, and doubtless did much gradually to sap his vitality. But he always rose above what would have reduced most men to chronic invalidism or irritability, and courageously continued to render the world noble services that we all must feel proud of."

Dr. Barker was referring to the injury received which necessitated the constant use of braces for his back.

That Tired Feeling In Springtime

Not Sick, But Not Up to the Mark—You Need the Help of That Sterling Tonic.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

They Give New Vitality—and more.

With the passing of winter many people feel weak, depressed and easily tired. No particular disease, but the system lacks tone. You find yourself tired, low-spirited, and often unable to get sound sleep at night. All this is the result of indoor confinement of the winter months, and shows that the blood has become thin and watery. New, rich, red blood is what you need to put you right, and there is no other medicine can give you this new blood as surely and as speedily as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. This new blood goes to every part of the body and quickly improves the general health. Digestion is toned up, you have a better appetite, nerves are strengthened and sleep is sound and refreshing.

The value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills when the system is run down is shown by the experience of Mr. William Mitchell, R. R. No. 1, Bedford, P. E. I., who says: "A few months ago I found myself in a badly run-down condition. My appetite was poor, I was easily tired, and did not sleep well. I tried several so-called tonics, but did not get any relief. Then I decided to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial and soon found that I had got the right medicine. Gradually my strength came back, the dull, tired feeling disappeared, and after using the pills for about a month, I could eat heartily and was as strong and active as ever I had been. I can most cheerfully recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as an unsurpassed tonic."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Tide of Freshwater Emigrants Turns Again Home

The PEOPLE THAT ARRIVE IN DETROIT DAILY FROM WINDSOR ARE NOT ALL IMMIGRANTS · THOSE IN THE REAR CAGE ARE GOING TO WINDSOR

The OCCUPANTS OF THE CAGE MUST MEET THE APPROVAL OF THE SWARTHY FACED OFFICIAL IN BLUE.

THERE ARE CROWDS AROUND DETROIT'S EMPLOYMENT AGENCIES JUST AS IN ANY CANADIAN CITY

Detroit Largest Canadian City in U.S.A. — 100,000 Canucks Living There — But Heavy Movement Across Line Is Over—They're Coming Back Now at Rate of Eleven a Day at Windsor Border—Natural Attraction of the Big Cities, Rather Than Discontent with Canadian Conditions, Has Sent Many Young Men From Ontario Rural Districts to Detroit

By GREGORY CLARK

IN Detroit they call Canadians "freshwater immigrants."

Nevertheless, Detroit is the largest Canadian city in the United States.

Canadian cities rank as follows by population: Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Vancouver, Hamilton, Ottawa, Detroit.

One hundred thousand is the estimate of the number of Canadian born who dwell in Detroit. Of its million population, one in ten is a Canadian. Detroit ranks as fourth city in the United States. But it is only the seventh Canadian city.

Every big city draws population. London is the big city of Western Ontario, but right on Western Ontario's doorstep is Detroit, bigger than any city in Canada.

If Detroit were in Canada it would be expected to attract population from the surrounding territory. The boundary line does not remove that attraction.

Much of the movement of Canadians to Detroit results merely from the natural drawing power of a big city, be it Canadian or American.

It costs only five cents to cross the "imaginary line" on a ferry.

So to Detroit may we turn for light on the emigration of Canadians to the States with respect to which the politicians are crying out loud.

The minute you set foot in Detroit you know it is a city. Its skyscrapers have four fronts.

The sign of a city is when the city architect discovers that a skyscraper can be seen from four different directions and therefore has four fronts. Skyscrapers with one stone front and three homely brick backs are the continuation of the village institution of false-front stores—two-storey false fronts concealing a one-room shanty behind.

You step into Detroit. Its pavements are not as good as Toronto's or Ottawa's. But they are better than Montreal's. A large bus, two touring cars and a limousine nearly run over you. With a loud Canadian exclamation you hug the inside of the sidewalk. Two well-dressed panhandlers stop you boldly and touch you for a quarter apiece. They are framed, as they stand there, hands modestly extended, against a vista of beauty—ah, silver minarets against the blue, high, higher, highest skyscraper posed against skyscraper, far and away. A policeman dressed like a motorcop taps you smartly on the shoulder.

"Hey! Move on!"

Apologizing to the two handsome panhandlers for so niggardly a gift as a quarter, you move hurriedly on.

Such are your first five minutes in Detroit.

Still, Detroit is not so bad. It has 100,000 Canadians.

It is the gate through which pass by far the largest number of Canadians who enter the United States for other than a mere visit. In the opinion of the United States inspector of immigration at that port, about one-quarter of all Canadians who cross the continent-wide boundary cross it at Detroit. Here, the facts of the exciting emigration of Canadians may best be dug up.

"The flood is past," says Inspector A. M. Doig, in charge of immigration at Detroit. "From the end of the war, until 1923, the number of Canadians paying the head tax—that means those who come for a visit of more than six months—has been on the increase. It reached its peak in the year ending March, 1923. The decrease is rapid. For the past few months, the number of Canadians entering this port has fallen to what we call normal constant, an average of between thirty and thirty-five a day.

"Of course, there are local peaks during every year—one at the end of the harvest, when the farm laborers come south, and another in the spring, after the breakup in the bush, when the lumbermen and laborers come out of the Canadian bush and come down for summer work. These farm laborers and lumberjacks constitute a very large roving band who cross and recross the border.

"Of those other than seasonal workers, the peak is past, and I imagine quite large numbers of them, who have come over in the past five years, are returing to Canada."

"Does the fact that a person pays the head tax mean that he leaves Canada for good and takes up permanent residence in the States?" we asked.

"Oh, no," replied the inspector. "All who enter for more than a brief visit pay the $8 head tax. They may collect it again if they return to Canada within six months. Of those who pay the head tax, about 70 per cent. do not reclaim it."

"Meaning," we said, "that 30 per cent. do?"

"Yes. And of course we have no statistics beyond that. While we believe that a good many of that 70 per cent. who appear to have stayed actually do stay, yet the past six years have been abnormal and very unsettled, and there is room to doubt any conclusions that we may draw from general experience," said the inspector. "But the immigration of Canadians to the States is not a new thing. It has been going on for a century. There has always been a steady trickle of Canadians over to us. They are perhaps the most desirable of all newcomers, because they are so quickly absorbed. A Canadian is the only immigrant you cannot tell from a native-born American at a glance."

992,388 to U. S. in Decade

AND here follows the rate at which Canadians have been going over the border—the whole United States border—for the past ten years:

1914	86,136	1921	72,317
1915	82,215	1922	46,819
1916	101,551	1923	117,011
1917	105,399	1924	200,690
1918	32,452
1919	57,782
1920	90,025	Ten-year total	992,388

The present slump has occurred in the fiscal year 1925, ending this month.

About 70 per cent. of these have not reclaimed their head tax. That is, they have stayed more than six months, or forgot to go to the trouble of writing and recovering the eight dollars.

It is, of course, within political license to say that the whole 992,388 have abandoned Canada. But the only facts are that 70 per cent. of that number didn't collect their head tax. It is not safe even to assume that the whole 70 per cent., or 690,000, have stayed in the States during the past ten years.

Canada, unfortunately, has never kept tab on the number of Canadians who come back home from the States. But since the politicians who are "out" have been raising the cry of emigration to show how bad conditions are, the government has started to keep count, which shows in the last ten months that 39,000 who had taken up residence in the States had returned to Canada.

At the Detroit border, where Canadians are going over at the normal constant rate of thirty a day, they are coming back across the Windsor border at the average rate of 351 a month or eleven a day.

If Detroit were not so handy to the border counties, which she drains as naturally as she drains Michigan counties—would emigration to the States have been so great? Is not Detroit a special factor in the whole case which throws out of joint all the reasoning by which emigration can be traced to business conditons?

Why does a young fellow leave Bowmanville for Toronto, Dundas for Hamilton, the Manitoba village for Winnipeg, or the little Quebec hamlet for Montreal?

In that answer, you find the junction between economics and human nature.

Big City's Natural Attraction

CHARLES MITCHELL, well-known Toronto man who for five years has been in Detroit organizing the Independent Order of Foresters there, is president of the Canadian Club of Detroit.

"I would estimate," says Mr. Mitchell, the number of Canadian-born in this city at over 80,000. And these include many who have been here since childhood. I know plenty of old man in this city who were born in Canada and came across nearly half a century ago. It is quite as logical for young men to come to Detroit as it is for young men to come to Toronto. The big city attracts. The bigger it is, the bigger the attraction. The most prosperous year Coboconk ever had probably saw some young men light out for Toronto. Economic conditions undoubtedly have something to do with migrations of population, but don't forget the human factor of youth in its determination to 'see the world.'

"These figures you show seem very impressive. But do you realize that a very large part of them are farm and bush workers who follow the seasons around; that builders and mechanics in large numbers, when the Canadian climate suspends building, come over and go to the southern states to work at their trades? And, of course, perhaps as high as 80 per cent. of the whole lot are single men, young men, free to move and therefore—moving!

"Don't forget another thing: Canadians as workers are very highly esteemed here in the States. Bank clerks, accountants and other skilled office men in particular. Just a moment."

And right before our eyes, Mr. Mitchell took the telephone and called up the head of a Detroit printing establishment who was known as one who favored Canadian printers above all others.

"Why is it that you prefer Canadians, and why have you a staff largely of Canadians?" Mr. Mitchell asked this gentleman, himself a native born American.

The answer taken down was this:

"They are more thorough, more reliable, a little better schooled than our own printers."

"Why are they more reliable?"

"By that I mean that they are not so free-and-easy and off-hand as our own people. They have a better sense of responsibility in their work. They stick to the job better."

Detroit Favors Canadians

MR. MITCHELL hung up the phone.

"You see? Democracy is a mighty fine thing. I admire it intensely. But it has its drawbacks. Canadians as a class are more conservative than Americans. Not so free-and-easy. This quality is highly prized in Detroit by business men. I can, if you like, call up bankers, business men, merchants, and all will say the same of Canadians. Now, there is another factor in the case. Not only do Canadians come here: they are wanted here."

"But," we said, "we can't print a free ad. for the States like that!"

"Why not?" said Mr. Mitchell. "There are millions of Canadians who wouldn't live in the States anyway. Oh, Canada has its advantages."

He looked out of the window, where Detroit was beginning to make its five o'clock roar.

While there are a little under a million people in Detroit itself, there is almost another million living close around it. From towns and villages as far away as sixty miles, commuters come in every day of their lives, by two-hour steam railway journeys, to work in the city. It has a vast foreign population—other than Canadian—mostly Polish and south European, who live in communities packed all about. You can go up Toronto's Yonge street by street car six miles. But up Woodward avenue you can go fifteen. The street numbers go to 3500 on Yonge street. But on Woodward avenue the 20,000's are still in town.

As you get up into the five figures of street numbers you get into the three-figure values of houses. Queer little bird-boxes, close packed, with no hope of ever expanding into a brick residential district. Huge suburbs entirely of negroes. Swarming regions where even the policemen speak English with difficulty.

We Canadians have a peculiar impression that the United States is a sort of big British brother who has left home and is living by himself. It is with a peculiar apoplectic sensation that you are herded into a wicket at the Detroit border, while an Italian, wearing a blue uniform and the eagle on his cap, halts you, eyes you coldly and calculatingly, and asks you all about yourself and your assumption that you are free to go into the United States.

If you don't look good to him, this swarthy gentleman with the flashing eye will put a head tax on you.

Thirty thousand Canadians commute daily from Windsor over to Detroit to work. And a peculiar turn of affairs is that several thousand Americans are moving across to the Canadian side to live, though their work is in Detroit.

Some of the emigration is not deliberate.

Dr. Prentiss, the director of immigration at Detroit, told us of a dentist and his wife from Nova Scotia who came on a tourist trip east as far as Detroit. They had friends in the city with whom they stayed a month. And they found an opportunity for establishing a practice in Detroit which looked good to them. So they decided to stay. But they had to return to Nova Scotia to have their passports made out.

How Population Drifts

A GUELPH business man, on his way for a winter holiday in California, stopped off in Detroit to see some business friends. He played around his own line of business, and within a week saw certain chances that made him stay two and ultimately four weeks. He did not go on to California at all. He made up his mind to open a business like his own right in Detroit. He is now the head of one of the city's thriving manufacturing firms.

"We have no end of cases," says Dr. Prentiss, "of Canadians who came over on a holiday who remained. Of course, that is also true of Canada and our own people."

One emigrant to the States takes another with him. That is shown in the above table of emigration for the past ten years. In the train going to Detroit we met a prominent young Ontario financial man and promoter, who has interests equally distributed in Canada and the States.

"Ontario," said he, "is bound to be a contributor to the population of Detroit. In my own family connection along the border there have been several families move to Detroit. They have moved, not because Detroit is an American city, but because it is a big one. One of my relatives found a good job in Detroit, as he might find in any city. This success spread about amongst relatives and several of them moved. Not all have been a success. Two have come back again. But emigration moves that way. It can not be said to depend on national business conditions."

It is possible those who decry this emigration to the States have some scheme whereby human nature can be muzzled and youth held down so that it will no longer want to roam and see the world.

For as far as other factors are involved, the emigration from Canada has fallen back to normal. Canadians who, in the confusion and excitement of the end of the war, when half a million ex-soldiers were cast upon a dominion all at once deflated from munitions wages, went south to where the greatest accumulation of war wealth in the world was located, are now on the home bend.

Let's hope they are all bringing nice fat chunks of that war wealth back home with them.

SPEEDING THE CROPS

DR. METHODI POPOFF, professor in the University of Sofia and Bulgarian ambassador to Berlin, lays claim to having increased the yields of many crops, including cotton, cereals and tobacco, by from 20 to 50 per cent. by a process of chemical treatment of the seed. He has used various stimulants, such as magnesium chloride and a number of metallic salts which are poisonous to vegetable as well as to animal life when taken in large quantities. He immerses the seeds in the proper chemical solution, leaving them there for a fixed time. If left too long, the seed life is destroyed; if not long enough, the chemical is ineffective.

LISTENING TO WORMS

BY connecting an ordinary wireless headphone and an unusually strong microphone to an apple, a South American scientist has been able to detect the sounds worms made in gnawing at the fruit and in biting the leaves and twigs, says Popular Mechanics. Another experiment enabled him to detect the presence of weevils in corn in the same way. It is expected that this will be the basis of a practical means of determining the condition of various crops.

Moving the World's Population to Canada—Lord Grey in a Miner Role —Those Golden Voices

A. S. EVE, professor of physics at McGill University, Montreal, says in the current issue of the Atlantic Monthly, that the population of the whole world could be dropped into Lake Ontario "and have plenty of room to float or even to swim for each person would have no less than sixty square feet to himself."

Considering the size of Lake Ontario compared with the area of the whole Dominion, the human race is not such a tremendous crowd after all. Every man, woman and child on the face of the earth could move into Canada, and, if the country were evenly divided, have a tract of land sufficiently large to erect an eight-room house for his or her personal needs.

☆ ☆ ☆

LORD GREY of Falloden appears this spring in a Miner role. In other words, he is the British counterpart of the Canadian bird-lover, Jack Miner. On his English estate he has converted two little ponds into a home for wild fowl. The birds have now come to recognize his love for them and return the great statesman's affections. As soon as his footsteps are heard they flutter up to get the food he is sure to have ready for them.

☆ ☆ ☆

CHARLES CHAPLIN is perhaps just as famous a character as the president of the United States. He is beyond the shadow of a doubt one of the most widely-known citizens of that republic. Some months ago, he brought his mother, Mrs. Hannah Chaplin, out from England to live with him. German air raids during the war had affected her health considerably, and he wanted her to have the benefit of the much-advertised California climate.

But the immigration laws have the laws of the Medes and Persians beaten to a frazzle. Mrs. Chaplin cannot stay in the United States with her son. She must leave by the end of this month.

And since she is a confirmed Britisher, she plans to become a Canadian and live in Vancouver B.C.

PEOPLE with golden voices are usually people well able to turn their voices into gold, say those who should know.

Galli-Curci is listed as a good business woman. Tetrazzini has never been classed as a financial failure. She knows the fee to ask, sticks to it—and gets it.

A concert manager once protested the sum she demanded for one concert. He declared it was more than the president of the United States got for twice the time.

"Then get the president of the United States to sing for you," was Tetrazzini's suggestion.

WILLIAM HOHENZOLLERN, JR., says a cable despatch, is followed by crowds of people as he walks the streets of Berlin, some of whom shout: "Hoch!" At that, there must be a considerable portion of the population which is not shouting "Hoch!" or anything like it. At present, he is vitally interested in horse shows, and particularly those where blooded cavalry mounts are on exhibition, which all goes to show that some people never learn much from experience.

Senator James Couzens, of the State of Michigan, who began life as a Canadian and learned the rudiments of the R trio in the schools of Ontario. Senator Couzens is now taking part in a battle of sorts with the United States treasury which alleges that he owes ten million dollars in back taxes. The senator disputes it.

Pioneer Among Medicos Had a Very Ready Wit

AMONG the pioneer medical men of the dominion was Dr. Ussher, a cousin of the late Lord Roberts, and the son of a British army colonel. After his course at McGill University, he practised in Walkerton, Ontario, and one of the most amusing incidents of his career occurred during a malpractice suit against a Chesley doctor who is now dead. Dr. Ussher was one of the witnesses for the defense, and the story of his cross-examination during the case was resurrected a few days ago at a luncheon of Ontario physicians.

Dr. Ussher made a certain positive statement. The lawyer examining him said heatedly: "If the professor of surgery at McGill absolutely contradicts your assertion, what have you to say to that? Or have you ever heard of the professor in question?"

"Why certainly. He was my teacher," was the reply.

"Then will you, a country doctor, dare to question his opinion?"

"You must admit that the circumstances are entirely different," the doctor declared. "When the professor made that statement, he was merely writing a book. I am on my oath."

Incidentally, the defense won the verdict.

Curly Philips Operates a Dude Trap Line So That Soft Citifellers Can See Plenty of Life

He Studied the Habits of the Common or Garden Tourist and Then, Combining His Sense of Humor and Business Brains, Planned a Walking Tour and Built Six Feather Bed Cabins

On the Trap Line

A Lynx Caught in a Trap by Curly Phillips

One of the Snug Cabins Along the Wide Trap Line

TO have discovered and organized an entirely new and different kind of personally conducted walking tour anywhere on the face of this tourist trodden planet is astonishing enough, but to have found in Canada a two-hundred-mile route rivaling in continuous interest the famous tours of cathedral towns, chateau districts and Black Forests seems to crowd the bounds of credulity.

"The Dude Trap Line" is the title of this novel venture, and the imaginative brain that brought it into being, and the man who acts as guide, interpreter, agent, driver, clothier, host, philosopher and friend is Donald Curly Philips, trapper and alpinist of the Canadian Rockies.

The Dude Trap Line sounds as if four random words had been taken from a narrow waisted cross word puzzle and allowed to fall in a row. The sense is doubtful until you understand that there is no trick about it and that the four words mean exactly what they say.

"Dude," you may recall, was one of the venerable forerunners of "sheik," but in the west it is still held to signify a city feller, one of those men who may be able to walk across a crowded street reading the noon edition but who couldn't tie a snow-shoe hitch if given a blue print and a week-end. But it is not a synonym of "tenderfoot." A tenderfoot might be broke, such things have happened, but within the meaning of the customs regulating walking tours-de-luxe a dude is never broke.

The Dude Trap Line of Curly Philips appears to be an institution which gives to the man from the cities an opportunity to get into the woods, travel under conditions approaching luxury, and yet to see with his own eyes the life of the woodsman.

Curley's Previous Record

IN the summer Curly lives at Jasper, the only town in the Jasper National Park. There he has guided many of the thousands of tourists who have wanted to go up into the mountains, has led the pack-trains of surveying parties and hunters, and was the second man to scale Mount Robson, the highest peak in the Canadian Rockies and the goal last year of the Alpine Club of Canada.

In the winter he is a trapper. He has always been a trapper. Toddling along on a pair of diminutive snow-shoes at the tender age of five, he set out his first snares for rabbits. That year he caught twenty rabbits, which sold for ten cents each. Two years later he was following his father around a real trap line in Northern Ontario, garnering the fur-bearers whose annual crop adds so enormously to the wealth of the country. Since then his journeyings have taken him from the Peace to the Saskatchewan, and from the Churchill to the Fraser, by every conceivable means of primitive transport. He has traveled thousands of miles by pack-train; as many more on snow-shoes with back-pack, and weeks at a time by canoe or raft, or mushing a dog-team over the frozen land.

He is, in other words, one of those men who know the mountains and the plains, about whom a tremendous amount of fiction is produced weekly, and who, peculiarly enough, have seldom gotten into books.

But Philips has been a voracious reader. He has read the distortions about his own kind, and he has read the books of out-of-doors writers who sincerely try to draw an accurate picture of woods life. He knew that fiction about the life he lived, day in and day out, had a tremendous appeal to people cooped up in the cities, and he began to wonder if these people who devoured so many books about the woods and animals might not embrace the opportunity to come out with him and see them for themselves if given the chance.

His winters headquarters are at Dalehurst, a flag station on the main line of the Canadian National Railways, sixty miles east of Jasper and just outside the boundaries of the park. To the east and north his trap lines follow its boundaries and tap one of the richest fur territories in the country, because since neither trapping or hunting is allowed inside the park, as in Algonquin Park, in Ontario, a very dense animal population has developed which must spread out.

The Habits of the Tourist

FROM his knowledge of the habits of the tourist in summer, the idea of the personally conducted tour along his line of traps began to grow in Philips' mind. He knew that the tourist's idea of roughing it was about on a par of his own idea of luxurious comfort. The problem of making his guests comfortable was solved by the building of log-cabins, each containing stoves, eating utensils, and feather beds. These cabins were located an easy journey on snow-shoes apart and their sites were carefully chosen to command impressive views of woods and mountains and frozen rivers.

The visitor may enjoy the rigors of the life by traveling on his own feet by snowshoe or ski, or he may ride in regal comfort behind a team of huskies. Rightly enough the sloth who views the Dude Trap Line in this way, tucked warmly into fur rugs, with an elderdown pillow between him and the back rest, must pay higher. Up to 150 pounds the charge is one and a half times that of the guest who will use his own feet, and above 150 pounds the rates mount. Above two hundred they assume the startling perpendicularity of one of those cross-line diagrams illustrating the rise and fall of wheat.

There are no discomforts on this "dude trapline." Mrs. Philips accompanies her husband on the tour and in camp looks after the material comforts of the journey. Arriving at Dalehurst the visitors—and there may not be more than six on any one trip, are met by the universal taxi of the north: a driver and dog team. Tucked aboard, the sleds are whisked down a mile-long hill to the Athabasca river, across the ice, and through the blue and gold of sunlit timber to the main camp.

Here you would change into proper clothing for the trail. With the thoroughness he seems to have used throughout, Curly Philips writes the following warning to his prospective guests:

"Your whole comfort depends on what you wear. I know what you need and will fix you up better than some sporting goods house that will load you up with a lot of junk at fancy prices."

The clothing is much the same as would be worn in Toronto for snow-shoeing or skiing, except that two pairs of Indian tanned moose-hide moccasins and two pairs of mittens, wool and buckskin, are worn.

Taking Curley's Tour

THE trip begins. For fifty, a hundred, two hundred miles, as long as you care to stay out, you follow the white trail, along rivers, across frozen lakes, over muskegs, through dense timber, up and over the divide, from one watershed to another, perpetually on the look-out for the traps. Beside you are the foothills of the Rockies, unpaintable, undescribable, but more memorable than you had imagined anything could be.

At night are the log cabins with their feather beds, stories of the trail and sleep.

And at the end of the trip the visitor will have seen nothing but the simple facts of the trapper's daily routine, nothing will have been arranged for his benefit, nothing staged to give him an extra thrill.

But for hundreds of thousands of men and boys on this continent, who have thrilled to the tales of trapper, voyageur and trader, the simple facts would probably prove enough.

So Curly Philips of Jasper believed, and having believed so, set out, single handed, to establish in Canada the most unique personally conducted tour on the continent, or for that matter in Europe, where personally conducted tours are as common at Baedecker can make them.

A WORD OF WARNING

MR. HOWARD E. JONES of the United States of America is about to demoralize the joke business. Mr. Jones is an official of the plumber's union, and he declares that any person making humorous remarks about the trade will lay himself or herself open to censure. Incidentally, a $250,000 fund has been provided to aid in the censuring. The remark about plumbers going back for their tools must be particularly avoided.

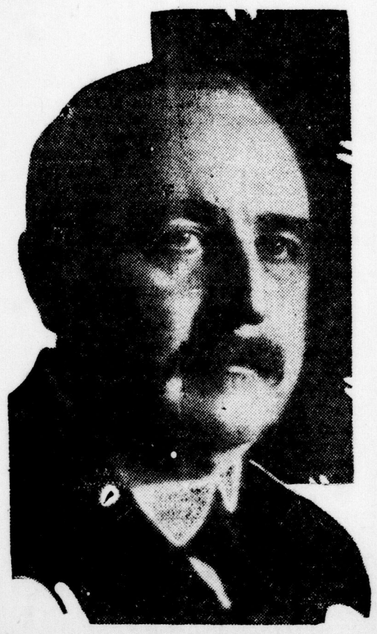

"In his work," says Mr. Jones, "the plumber may use exactly 23,345 parts or tools. Would you expect him to carry all these around with him?" And that's that.

Mr. John M. Eastwood Wins $250

WPG radio station at Atlantic City recently announced a prize valued at $250 for the best answer to the question: When is the best time of the year to visit Atlantic City?

The announcement which was broadcast over America inspired among radio fans a great number of competitors one of whom was Mr. John M. Eastwood, Linden Place, Hamilton, formerly publisher of the Hamilton Times. Mr. Eastwood won the prize. He is naturally the subject of much congratulation, particularly as his winning essay took the form of a poem. Here it is:

Dedicated to His Honor, Edward L. Bader, Mayor, Atlantic City, New Jersey, U. S. A.
January opens the season's ball,
At Atlantic City no snow at all,
February honors Lincoln's and Washington's birth,
March for "Saint Pat" a bit of Heaven on earth,
April for Easter the board walk's display.
Then zephyrs of Spring, with advent of May;
Lovers in June romantic are made,
July for day dreams a shadow a shade,
By seashore in August each one in good form
See Atlantic City in "September Morn";
October crowns the Autumn's glow,
November greets the ebb and flow,
December brings the yuletide cheer,
The "Breakers" welcome—every day in the year.

Mr. John M. Eastwood

STEWART EDWARD WHITE, the famous novelist, has decided to go to Africa and hunt lions with bow and arrows. He will be mourned by a host of friends, says the New York Times.

Chaffed the Best Man –Until the Ceremony

Then the Loyal Orangeman Had His Innings and Everyone Enjoyed the Resultant Merriment

WHEN his honor Judge Daniel O'Connell of the County Court of York, decided to take unto himself a wife, it was natural that he should select as best man his intimate and well-beloved friend D. O. C. Cameron, Protestant and Orangeman though he was. It was equally natural that Mr. Cameron should, during the period intervening between his promise to assist and the marriage day, be the victim of much bantering from intimate friends, both Catholic and Protestant. And the prospective bridegroom was just as much a sinner in this respect as the rest of them. Some of his principles as an Orangeman "Doc." would have for the time being to swallow if he were to well and truly perform his duties as best man during the marriage service, he was told. But Cameron, as is usual with wise members of the bar, winked the other eye and kept his own counsel.

On the day of the marriage everything in connection with the ceremony was conducted with due solemnity and strictly in accordance with the practice of the church—at least until the best man was officially asked his name. And then something very much out of the usual happened. "D. O. C. Cameron," came the reply, and then, after a very brief pause, he added, "of McKinley L.O.L. No. 275." The officiating priest suppressed a smile.

IN HARBOR

"O HAPPY Barque, and art thou home at last,
The harbor gained, the travail overpast?
What matter riven side and ragged sail?
Still flies the flag that hath defied the gale.

"O happy Barque, before thy patient prow
The whispering seas divide. Thy Pilot now
The homeward course directs, at whose behest
The winds are hushed, the troubled waves at rest.

"O happy Barque! Nor be thy triumph mute:
Now vail thy pennant, now the shore salute!
Then furl thy wings—Far, far behind thee foam
The foiled and vanquished waters.
Thou art home."

MOTHER GOOSE IS EVIL INFLUENCE ON CHILDREN

Mrs. Stoner, an Ex-Montrealer, Leads Mighty Drive on Nursery Rhymes— Has Her Own Substitutes

THOSE classic jingles which countless children love, the Mother Goose Rhymes, are hotbeds of corruption. They should be tossed out of libraries and nurseries and banned forevermore.

So says "Mother" Stoner. These verses, she says, exert a vicious influence over the growing infant, and she has some verses of her own to substitute.

"Mother" Stoner is an ex-Montrealer, the wife of Dr. J. B. Stoner, who was connected with the immigration service there for some years. She is a kindly, middle-aged woman and the mother of the famous Winifred Stoner, who was an author, poet, athlete and musician at the age of fourteen and passed her examinations for university entrance at nine.

Winifred is now twenty-one, very good looking and very healthy. Her mother points to her as conclusive proof of the effectiveness of her educational theories.

But to deal directly with the evil effects of Mother Goose, here are a few of the better-known jingles and Mrs. Stoner's criticisms of them:

"When the bough breaks, the cradle will fall—Down will come baby, bough, cradle and all."

This describes a serious and possibly fatal accident due to parents' negligence. It will ravage the nervous system and develop a fear and hatred of parental authority.

"As I was going to St. Ives,
I met a man with seven wives—"

Gives Rise to Bigamy

THIS may instil in the boyish mind the wicked and expensive idea of having several wives. To satisfy it, he may commit bigamy or get around the law by a series of divorces.

Little Jack Horner has also been blacklisted. He was not exactly depraved, but he did exhibit atrocious table manners and then had the nerve to say that he was a good boy.

"Three Blind Mice" would not be so bad if the farmer's wife had drowned the rodents in warm water instead of cutting off her tails. Little Red Riding Hood, while not in Mother Goose, is also objectionable because it gives rise to a fear complex.

Mrs. Stoner offers in turn some of her own verses as models of what a small child should learn. It is only fair to say that they, too, have been criticized by educationists. One or two of them follow:

IMITATE THE ELEPHANT FOR POISE
By "Mother" Stoner"

"Swaying, swaying, swaying to and fro
Like an elephant I love to go;
Swaying, swaying, swaying to and fro,
Thus in grace my body will soon grow."

This has been objected to on the grounds that an elephant is not a particularly graceful animal. The next one also deals with animals:

IMITATE THE MONKEY FOR YOUR LIVER

"Climbing, climbing, climbing up a tree,
Like a monkey I would like to be;
If I climb each day this tall, tall tree
BILIOUSNESS will never bother me."

Objections Here, Too

THE objection here is that the jingle might tempt a child to break his neck. Finally there is Mrs. Stoner's most famous informative and educational poem which is as follows:

"In my head, so nice and round,
Twenty-eight strong bones are found;
In my trunk are fifty-four
That I add to my bone store;
While my limbs have plenty more,
Full one hundred twenty-four.
Thus each perfect person owns
Just two hundred and six bones."

Mrs. Stoner

Heywood Broun, the author and New York World columnist, objects strenuously to small children being conversant with these facts. In the first place, it would tend to make them extremely conscious of the delicate mechanism which goes to make up each human form. They would be appalled by the thought that each and every infant had to operate a regular battalion of bones and might refrain from romping and playing out of pure fear and a desire to avoid breaking, splintering, cracking or otherwise injuring all these priceless parts.

In addition, an American doctor has declared that he himself, a graduate physician, cannot tell exactly how many bones there are in a body or where they are. He does not think the average person or the average doctor needs to know, and this rhyme merely crams the childish cranium with useless and harmful knowledge.

Let the battle rage.

At Sunrise

By Ex-Soldier

THE Questions and Answers Editor handed over this query:

"What time elapsed between the sentence of death and the execution of a soldier? Did members of his own regiment have to carry out the execution of a comrade?"

And at once we hear the long, melancholy wail of "Lights Out" sounding over the village that night John went on his extraordinary adventure.

"You will detail," read the confidential order from brigade which arrived by special runner at that hour of the night, "one officer and twenty other ranks for a special duty. Dress, drill order, with haversacks and twenty-four hours rations. A motor lorry will report to your headquarters at midnight to-night to transport this party. The driver will have instructions where to proceed and to whom to report. Acknowledge."

"Well!" exclaimed the colonel. "This is a funny one!"

"It isn't for duty forward," said the adjutant, "or there would be some other dress than drill order."

"And it is not for long. Twenty-four hours' rations," said the colonel. "Well, who will we send on this mysterious adventure?"

"John," said the adjutant. "He is always keen for weird adventures. And five other ranks from each company."

"All right. And have them turn out a smart party, for we don't know who will be seeing them," said the colonel.

At half-past eleven there gathered in front of the village schoolhouse where the orderly room was situated the twenty figures in the gloom, whom John, that adventurous subaltern, lined up and numbered off.

"Stand easy—break off," said John. "Just sit down around here until the lorry comes."

"What's up?" asked the sergeant detailed by B company.

"Not an idea," replied John. "Drill order, twenty-four hours' rations; it looks like something soft, anyway."

"Staff officers do get some queer notions after dark," said the sergeant.

The party smoked and chatted in the night. Afar up the road came the hum of a motor lorry.

It stopped down the road and John, lighting a match, waved it. The lorry came on, halted.

"Party of twenty? Blank battalion?" called the driver.

"Right."

"Where Are We Going?"

THE party climbed aboard the lorry. John got up in front beside the lone driver.

"Well, where are we off to?" asked John.

"We have to report to a Major Carr at Lotinghem, sir," said the driver.

"Lotinghem!" cried John. "Why, that's forty miles away! And away down near Calais!"

"Yessir," said the driver. The sergeant from within shouted "Ready." The lorry lurched away into the night.

For three hours, on the wide, straight highways of France, the lorry pounded heavily on its way. The men inside made no sound. Probably asleep in strange attitudes on the bumping lorry floor. Occasionally the flare of a match showed through the cracks behind John's head. John found the driver a dumb sort of fellow, so he leaned back on the stiff seat, his legs braced in front, and dozed.

The sky was taking on that peculiar greenish tinge so familiar to soldiers who watch through the long night, when the lorry slowed up in the cobbled street of a silent town. It would be, thought John, about half-past three o'clock.

"Our man will be here somewhere," said the driver.

Half-way down the street, a light burned in the shuttered window of a shop. From the door a tall figure stepped, flashing a torch.

"Major Carr?" said John, leaping down.

"Get your party out and formed up quietly," answered the tall officer, who had the carriage and manner of speech of a British regular.

He went inside and came out carrying his cane.

"March them in file, at ease, behind us," said the major, starting to walk away.

John fell in step beside the tall major. The party came clop-clopping behind them on the cobbles. The silent town loomed beside them in the first faint green of dawn.

John loved the mystery of this, the strange houses, tall and shuttered; the hard, stiff figure striding beside him; the familiar, homely sound of feet tramping and shuffling behind him, his men, close behind him.

"Well, sir," said John, "here we are, but where we are off to we have no idea."

He put a friendly little smile into it.

"We have about a mile to march," said the major shortly.

Drama at Dawn

JOHN receded into silence. They went out from the town, past farmhouses walled along the road, then on to a highway through wide, misty fields. Elms stood still and chill along the way.

Ahead, two figures appeared on the road, in the fog of dawn.

"Hand your party over to the sergeant-major," said the major.

A stout, wooden figure advanced, saluted the major, and, turning to John, said:

"Very good, sir. Party, march at—attention! Slope—arms!"

John, the major and the other stranger, an officer sunk down in a heavy greatcoat, fell in behind and followed the smartly marching party. They had to walk faster.

The party turned down a side road. In the dawn a farm building loomed ahead. Beside it the party turned into the field. To low, sharp commands from the wooden sergeant-major, the men piled arms. Then they marched around to the back of the walled farm. The officers followed.

Dawn began to fade from green to yellow.

Against the back wall of the farmstead a large white sheet was tacked up to wooden supports. On the white sheet was a small black round spot, a bull's eye. As John saw this, his men were being marched smartly, hurriedly, with barked commands from the sergeant-major, on to five little pyramids of stacked rifles about twenty paces out from the sheet.

A rooster crowed hoarsely over the wall.

"What—what—" stammered John.

"Keep still, please," said the major.

The white sheet began to glow sharply in the slow flood of dawn.

The party were standing, facing the sheet, with rifles in their hands. The sergeant-major was in front of them, talking rapidly and forcefully.

"Some of those rifles," his voice was the clipped, chesty tone of the English drill master, "are loaded with ball, and some are loaded with blank. On the command, 'Ready!' you will take up the standing loading position. On the word 'Aim!' you will remove the safety catch—the rifles are all ready loaded—and removing the safety catch you will aim at that black bull. On the command 'Fire!' you will instantly fire. None of you knows if your rifle is loaded with ball or not. Steady there, you!"

The harsh caution brought the little party still as statues.

"And if you don't want to be here all day," said the sergeant-major, "aim straight. Are you ready? Ready!"

The sergeant-major looked over to the major. John could now see the wooden drillmaster's face. It was pale as death. But the voice never faltered.

"Aim!" he commanded. The soft sound of safety catches dribbled over to John.

The Shaking White Sheet

RAISING his stick slowly, the sergeant-major thrust it forward with the command:

"Fire!"

A perfect volley crashed out.

"Party!" roared the sergeant-major, before the sound had passed, "ground arms! In file, left turn, quick-march!"

The white sheet was still shaking from the volley fired at it, when the little party was already rounding the farmstead wall, away, out of sight.

John was gripped in an awful speechlessness. He turned to the major. But the major was striding towards the sheet. The other officer sunk in the collar of his greatcoat was standing with bent head, his cap in his hand. John saw he was partly bald and grey-haired. His face was terrible to see, and his mouth was moving. John then saw the cross of the padre on the cap trembling in an old veined hand.

A young officer, with some shining instruments in his hands, in rubber boots came swiftly from around the corner of the wall. He disappeared behind the sheet with the major. At once they reappeared.

"All right!" called the major, sharply, to John. "You will rejoin your party and return in the lorry to your unit."

John turned to the elderly padre for a word, a gesture. But the grey head, partly bald, was still bent and the lips moving.

In a chill sweat, John stumbled around the wall. His party was disappearing smartly up the side road. He hurried after them. On the highway, he stepped abreast the wooden sergeant-major, whose face was now the familiar purple again.

"I'll take my party now!" said John fiercely to him.

"Very good, sir!" snapped the sergeant-major, falling out, swiping his cane under his arm and saluting all in the one cold, formal motion.

John did not turn to face his men. The lorry was standing where they had left it. John didn't look at his men when he ordered them aboard. He was trembling when he reached up to take his seat by the driver. The town, still and silent, was bathed in the first clear, limpid light of day.

"Well?" said the Questions and Answers Editor.

"It was usually several weeks from the time the court martial passed sentence until the papers, reviewed by brigade, division, corps and army, came back down to the regiment. Meantime, the man lay in the clink. Then he was hustled out in front of the battalion, in hollow square, and the sentence was read out. Right away, he was sent somewhere to await the firing party. No; his own comrades never took part in the job. They got a party from some remote unit, another division, another army even."

"Were there many?"

"Practically none. Only the very worst sort of hardened offenders."

"A blessing!"

A River That Gets Rusty

CAN you imagine a river that gets rusty? There is one which is subject to this phenomenon—the River Ob, which falls into the Arctic Ocean and runs through the north of Siberia.

The Ob contains a great amount of iron. Every year when it freezes over the iron is cut off from the air. The result is that the metal precipitates, or, in other words, instead of being dissolved in the water, becomes a solid.

The whole underside of the ice is covered thickly with rust, and even the fish and other creatures become rusty. In the lower reaches, where ice does not form, the water, ordinarily quite clear, becomes cloudy and discolored. The whole river, 2,300 miles long, becomes poisonous.

People living near it have to quench their thirst with melted snow, and most of the fish leave the river and seek safety in the sea. They are told by instinct when the time arrives for their annual exodus.

In the spring the ice thaws and the air renders the river free from poison. The fish immediately return. They swim up the stream in such vast numbers that they are packed tightly together. Any boat that tries to navigate the river at this time forces thousands of fish on to the flat banks, where the natives kill them with sticks.

The Magistrate and the Hobo

From the Soo Daily Star

Stories of W. H. Plummer, one of the most outstanding builders of this part of Ontario, and also one of the best loved, are always in order. Old residents like to tell them. Here is a new one. Mr. Plummer, as magistrate, had an American hobo brought before him. The charges were: first, drunk and disorderly; second, using profane language, and thirdly, resisting Her Majesty's peace officer—that is the cop. Mr. Plummer, with proper decorum, and emphasis, explained to the gentleman that in Canada these were very serious offenses. For getting tanked, the law provided up to a year in prison; for using profane language, up to five years, and for resisting Her Majesty's peace officer, a man might be hanged.

"However," so the story goes, "as you are a stranger and so ignorant of British law, I will take a lenient view of your case. How much money has the prisoner on him?" This to the constable.

"Ninety cents, your honor."

"Very well, hand it over. This court can't be run for nothing. And we will excuse the prisoner for 24 hours to settle up his affairs."

Needless to say, the prisoner got out of the reach of the court in a fraction of the time allowed him.

Collections and Care of Pets Show Boys' Worth at Hobby Fair

PETS FIND SURE PLACE IN LIFE OF NORMAL BOY CHOICE RANGES WIDELY

James McCormick Prepares For Greatest Entry of Animals Made Yet.

PLANS ARE COMPLETE

All Sorts of Animals Will Be Welcomed by the Judges.

The instinct to ally oneself with something alive is one of the most deeply-rooted and the surest of all nature's traits. Humans look for counsel and friendship from their kind, not from inanimate objects. When the state of being alone begins to pall, this primeval instinct prompts a man or woman to seek a mate.

It is that ancient urge again that tells a lad his outlet for friendly emotions will be pleasantly cared for if he has a dog he can call "all his own." Tastes differ. Youth's desire for dumb friends runs the gamut from rabbits and bantams to canaries and even monkeys.

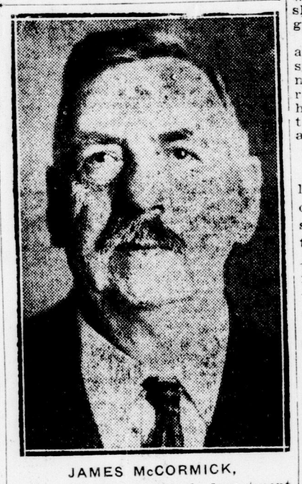

The vital role pet stock plays in the development of the general run of youngsters is fully realized by those who have charge of London's second hobby fair which will be staged at the arena under the auspices of the Rotary club the week of April 13.

Last year's deluge of entries came rather as a surprise to many of the officials. By the time the motley array of two-footed and four-footed friends were assembled inside the building it was found that, unfortunately, inadequate accommodation had been allowed with a resultant crowding that brought barks and squeals from the more aristocratic of the throng.

This year will see a far different situation. James McCormick and his able crew of veterans had the foresight to place accommodation at the head of the work to be done. They are still working on the housing problem but plans have reached such a satisfactory state that Mr. McCormick has given his assurance that there will be plenty of room and fresh air for every lad's pet at the April show.

Careful Work.

The pet stock show may justly be called a miniature of the best of international professional events. Careful classification will enable the boy in his teens to gain a comprehensive knowledge of the workings of a big show and this cannot help but stimulate his future interest in pets.

JAMES McCORMICK, director of the pet stock department of the Rotary club's hobby fair.

The department is divided into six sections, rabbits, guinea pigs, pigeons, cats, dogs and poultry. This suggests limitations but Mr. McCormick asked The Advertiser to make it clear that any sort of pet may be entered though no class appears for it on the program. Unusual pets will have just as good a chance of carrying off the supreme honors of the exhibition as the commoner animals, Mr. McCormick emphasizes. He expects quite a few canaries this year, mayhap a billy-goat or two and maybe a monkey because there are known to be a few of these pets in the locality.

The pet stock department bears the distinction of being the largest in the entire fair, comprising as it does forty classes. Being the largest in size, it is only meet that it should boast the largest number of awards and it has, with eight shields, one medal, four cups and 120 ribbons.

Exemplifying the thoroughness that has marked the planning of the 1925 department is the fact that only expert judges were chosen to pick the winners in the various classes. Each of the men picked to co-operate in the work is skilled in handling animal shows and their presence will insure the difference between a slap bang affair and real honest-to-goodness pet stock show.

The enthusiasm of Mr. McCormick and his brother helpers has waxed stronger through the duties in connection with the preliminary arrangements have steadily grown heavier and would indeed be irksome to persons lacking feeling for dumb animals.

Great Friends.

"Nothing can take the place of a live hobby," Mr. McCormick declares. "There is a certain understanding between a boy and his dog that it is impossible of duplication. All my life I have held a high regard for the value of an animal friend to a boy and with each year the conviction that it is the most absorbing and most fruitful of hobbies has grown stronger."

Although rabbits are not kept for pets to the extent they were ten and fifteen years ago this section is one of the most colorful in the fair. Competition among the schools is keen and last year the Chseley avenue school entry won the Fred Nye cup. A class called "A.O.V." appears in rabbits as well as in other sections and this abbreviation has puzzled many lads who have called upon Mr. McCormick for an explanation. The letters mean "any other variety," according to the director. This is about the only thing in the program to perplex would be exhibitors with the exception perhaps of "parti-color" in the poultry section. This means a fowl with more than one distinct color.

While a large number of the dogs entered are usually pure bred, the veriest mongrel pet of the smallest boy is welcomed. Hybrids have more than once carried off high honors in boy fairs and the lads are urged to bring their pets no matter if they do resemble a cross between a Chinese spaniel and a Klondike husky. Everything from a toy dog to Newfoundlands or other super-dread-nought types are invited.

Of course, cats are invariably supposed to be pets of the little sisters, but there is nothing in the rule book that bars a red-blooded Canadian youth from entering the back kitchen tabby or grownup Kathleen's fluffy Persian as long as they are on friendly terms with the said feline.

Boys' Work of Collection Builds Pleasure of Work In Man of Years to Come

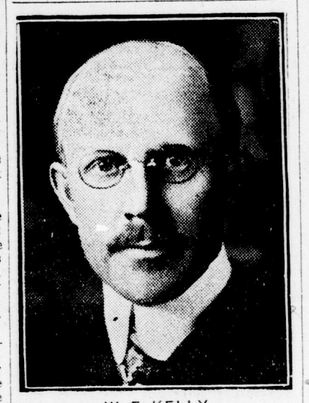

W. E. Kelly Points to Hobby as Method of Teaching Youth to Concentrate.

INTEREST IS KEEN

Added Rivalry Shown Following Success of Last Year.

Second only to the mechanical department of this year's Hobby Fair, the collections department will figure as the most popular and representative of the industry of London's youth.

Stimulated by last year's large exhibition at the Hobby Fair, London boys have apparently taken an added interest in collections, for in the forthcoming Hobby exhibit at the arena an exceptionally large entry of hobby collections has been made. Postage stamps, mounted drug and grocery samples, post cards, Indian relics, coins, advertising buttons or souvenirs, price cards, ribbons, medals and cups won by exhibitors, will all be there. And with each collection a pleasing and glad story of a boy's ingenuity can be told.

director of the collection department in the Rotary club's hobby fair next month.

The birds' eggs collection complete will mean the culmination of a summer's search in woods and fields. The collection itself attests to hours of enjoyment spent in the study of nature and the healthful occupation of summer's outdoor search. The coins mean time and money well spent. The stamps mean hours of geographical and historical study. The relics, the samples, the souvenirs, the ribbons and medals, in fact, all the novel collections which go to make up this department of the Hobby Fair represent leisure time profitably employed with a return of a fund of information.

Aids Future.

"It is through concentration on hobby collections that a boy's future success often lies," W. E. Kelly, who is director of this department, says. "The boy expends energy, and this quality is one that will always stand him in good stead in his future years. In the collecting of stamps, his association with foreign countries will give him a general geographical knowledge that cannot be gained in any school. The concentration the average boy gives to a collection makes for a commendable attribute."

Considerable interest has already been shown in this year's exhibit, according to Mr. Kelly, and it has been found necessary by the committee in charge of the collections department to increase the space at the arena for the exhibition. Children who saw the many interesting collections at last year's fair evidently resolved to equal them or better them themselves this year, for they have taken on an added interest. Many entries have been already received by boys and girls who did not enter or did not have a collection last year.

Unique Collection.

One of the most unique forms of a child's collection, and one that has grown to great popularity in the city recently, is that of the collection of drug and grocery samples. Many children have entered all varieties of sample manufactured articles for the Hobby Fair. Small packages of well-known products have been obtained at the Western Fair from exhibitors there, from grocery stores and through the mails. There will be a large number of these exhibits, according to Mr. Kelly, and, of course, a suitable prize will be offered for the largest and best presented array. The prizes in each class will include a large and small shield and a ribbon for third place.

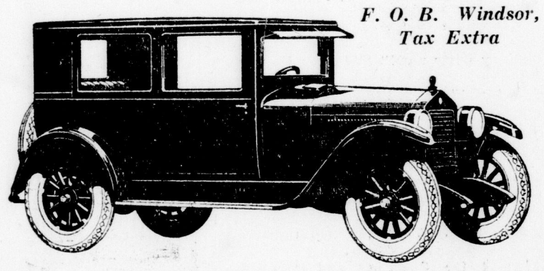

The entries for the stamp collection contest have been exceptionally large this year, Mr. Kelly says. Many who turned in exhibits at the last fair have enlarged their collections, made improvements gained through seeing the manner their competitors entered their collections, and have registered their entries again this year intent on gaining a prize. Valuable individual stamps are included in the collections of some local boys, although in the winning of a prize this factor is not considered to such an extent as neatness of mounting and presentation.

SCARF STILL POPULAR.

Romance attaches to the designing of the latest and most colorful styles in scarfs. A Russian [illegible] who created the costumes for the imperial ballet has latterly devoted his talents to these graceful accessories and has presented some designs of artistic importance. They are in that bold style of large geometric or conventionalized floral pattern, batiked, in very beautiful intense colors. A border is usually done in color and the patterns is painted and stamped within, to form decorated ends or an all-round design. There is a primitive picturesque quality in these scarfs done after the Russian idea, and although the colors are elemental they appear to harmonize with almost every type of dress, especially with the delicate shades in so many of the evening gowns.

None Can Copy Its Chief Value

The Chassis is Patented

Essex is a totally different type. It gives results no other car ever gave.

Low price, without disappointment in looks or reliability.

Economy without sacrifice of performance.

Stability and highest roadability without unnecessary weight.

The riding ease of large, costly cars. The handling ease of a bicycle.

Utter simplicity in design.

The lowest maintenance cost, we believe, of any car in the world.

Two of every three Essex buyers come to it from those who formerly owned cars bought chiefly for their low first price.

Just as the Coach body and Coach name have been extensively copied, even by costliest cars, so must future mechanical design seek to approximate the results Essex gives.

But the patents which make the Super-Six the most enduring, smoothest motor and give it all advantages, also prevent any from copying its chassis.

Surely you cannot be satisfied with less than Essex offers. Its cost is but little more than cars of the lowest price.

FREAK STYLES ARE GONE FROM FASHIONS FOR MEN

New Trousers Call For Wider Hips and Much Deeper Cuff.

FOUR-BUTTON COATS

The style treaty that has existed between England and this continent evidences even a stronger bond of sympathy and acceptance this spring.

This is by no means to be taken as a submergence of our ideas to that of the English mandates, but rather a following out of our own preferences because these styles have been found to make a strong appeal to the Canadian taste. In other words, we accept what we like, and what we like we like to the exclusion of all else.

Hence what you have become accustomed to know as the English type of modelling in both suits and topcoats are the sort of styles that the well-dressed man will be expected to wear for the coming spring.

"Over there" they have launched some new departures in their modelling that will, of course, influence the new phases over here. These changes are such that tend to add grace, character and dignity to the new modes—things that are in keeping with the ampler lines that are characteristic of these English styles.

Call For Wider Hip.

For instance, the new type of trousers calls for wider hips with a slight tapering from the hips to about a 17-inch bottom. So as to lose that abrupt wideness at the bottom that ofttimes tends to produce a dangling effect that throws the entire contour of trouser leg out of kilter.

To obviate that the spring trousers will show a considerably deeper cuff —not less than two inches, to give more weight at the bottom, to hold the trousers more firmly set to the instep and lend an appearance of more snug fit.

While these trousers are wide at the hip and from the hip down to the knee, there is an absence of the "peg top" appearance that is usually associated with wide top trousers. As stated above there is a graceful, gradual tapering that has style and distinction and is far removed from any tendency toward "jazzing" the style.

Freak Styles Are Gone.

"Jazz" styles are out. The "sheik" who goes in for this type of dress will be sorrowfully put to it to remain true to his type and still conform to the prevailing fashion of the season. He is either going to have to find a new niche of fashion in which to impress his own type of dressing or he is going to succumb to the preponderance of influence that these new English type suits have made upon the Canadian gentlemen.

So, gentlemen, look for the almost straight-hanging trousers when you choose your spring suit—that is if you want to be truly and definitely in tune with the strictest mode.

For those men who want a more conservative compromise there will, of course, be slight variations of the style—a moderation of the real loose hanging trousers by more severely tapering the leg shape and giving more body-conforming lines to the coat.

The coats in these strictly English suits carry broad shoulders with a slight tapering at the waist. The sleeves are fairly ample in width and the chestiness of the coat, while it is there, is lost from notice by the straight down effect of the coat fronts.

There is more spread to the front of the collar which fits snugly in back and then flares out a bit to meet a fairly broad, blade-like lapel. This detail is particularly prominent in the double-breasted suits of which there will be many worn this spring —more than is usual in the spring season, for the double-breasted suit has always been more seriously considered as a winter style.

Some Four-Button Styles.

Both two and three-button single-breasted suits are in the vogue and in the more decided models even some four-button suits—a type we have not seen much of in the recent seasons. There is very little of pocket or cuff ornamentation in the mode. For the most part the pockets are of the inset order or with the plain flap.

Cuffs are either severely plain or having a slight vent of the French cuff nature.

Single-Breasted Vests.

Vests are for the most part single-breasted, though many of the models for the younger men show double-breasted effects. These vests are cut high and have only a slight V at the top and even slighter V at the bottom. The front modelling is of the straight-front order. The double-breasted vests have almost a semi-circular bend from top to lower buttons. Many of them are double-breasted.

Topcoats are of two models. The most fashionable in London just now is patterned after the Guard overcoats. That means very chesty, narrow shoulders, body-tracing at the waist and a decided flare to the skirt. These coats are just slightly below the knee in length. The other model is a tubular coat.

This is a straight-ranging affair from armpits to bottom. It falls to the calf of the leg and is severely straight, with but very little fullness to the skirt. These tubular topcoats are mostly single-breasted, button-through models. A few are fly-front models. These excepting that they are longer are modelled very much along lines of the conservative chesterfield.

Belted coats, even the back-belt styles, are sparsely shown and where shown at all are in the raincoat textures.

Scotch Thrift Still Prevails

Associated Press Despatch.

Elgin, Scotland — The town council has not erred on the score of extravagance, or upset any of the theories regarding Scotch thrift, by appointing a caretaker to look after the town war memorial for two shillings and sixpence a week. For this sum the caretaker must—

Remove all withered flowers and leaves from the memorial;

Carefully arrange the wreaths daily;

Prohibit the parking of motor cars near the memorial;

Prevent people from standing on the memorial steps and see that the memorial and its surroundings are kept clean and neat.

CLOSER WEAVES OF STRAW.

The tendency in this season's hats is toward fine quality in material and to the smaller, closer weaves of straw. Neapolitan braids, especially for dress hats, are very good. These are shown by some of the best Parisian milliners in the larger hats that are coming out for early summer, but the most attractive models now shown among the French hats are small, of sheer material and much more trimmed than they have been for several seasons. A charming model is built of fancy horsehair braid, a yellow beige in color and lacy in weave. It is shaped like a soft toque and is trimmed straight around with large silk flowers somewhat like dahlias, in natural shades, but brilliantly glycerined. Small velvet flowers in French blue are tucked in at intervals.

STRAWBERRY TRADE GOOD.

Hammond, La., March 20. — The strawberry movement his risen to two carolads a day, and is expected to increase steadily. The crop is in good condition. Prices are around $6.25 a crate.

TORNADO VICTIMS ARE LAID AT REST

Search For Bodies Continues As Many Go Unaccounted For.

Associated Press Despatch.

Chicago, March 20.—Burial of the dead resulting from a tornado which struck portions of five states Wednesday was begun today, while kinsfolk and friends of many mourners continued the dismal task of recovering bodies from the tangled debris of the storm-swept areas.

In the wreckage of the cities and out in the byways of the rural districts relief and rescue workers reported additional cosualties would be discovered. Unidentified dead still rest in many morgues, awaiting recognition or unknown burial.

The casualty list tonight carrying the names of those actually identified, totalled 738. The estimated and known dead from all sections numbered about 800, according to latest advicee. The injured totalled around 3,000. The homeless number upwards of 15,000.

These refugees are as safely and comfortably sheltered as is possible, however, and tents, equipment and food supplies have been rushed into all centers.

Forty men worked all day digging graves at Murphysboro, Illinois one of the worst stricken cities, and tonight they expected to have seventy of the victims buried.

At West Frankfort, Illinois, which ranked second in loss of life and damage, 100 men were engaged in preparing graves.

SILK FOR CHILDREN.

Spring clothes for little girls employ organdies as dainty as butterfly wings; trim little prints, linens and ginghams, all the usual things included in the category of "wash" dress. They are all so summery that they will for some weeks to come be covered with a warm coat, but they establish the fashions for the coming season.

The one real novelty is silk, especially tub silk, for children's dresses. These new silks are not of the kind that repeats the quality of maturer dress and gives to a child's costume the effect of being overdressed.

PETER PAN HAT.

Many close-fitting toque effects are smartly developed, and for the young girl there is a number of attractive youthful styles. A hat which has an irresistible appeal is developed entirely in brown felt trimmed with ribbon. This is called the "Peter Pan" hat, and has the band around the lower crown bound in grosgrain ribbon, the lower corner of each piece being folded back, while a bunch of the ribbon with the ends pointed off is stuck jauntily on the top of the high crown, resembling a shuttlecock.

COLORFUL NOTE IN SPRING SHOES

Smart Little Buckles and Tailored Bows Embellish Footwear.

Variety is the keynote of all styles this year and nowhere is this feature more conspicuous than in the smart footwear of entirely novel inspiration. Not for many generations has footwear been so colorful and varied in effect, and it is a matter of question as to whether the styles of days when shoes were slashed and ornamented in odd designs were as artfully contrived as those which are shown today.

Three features of the new season are first, variety of style and treatment; second, the demand for color, and last, the vogue of combined effects which has given rise to the ensemble suit, and other style combinations.

Gores Much Used.

Gores are much used and give a very smart finish to the shoes in their present interpretation, which is far removed from the former shoe gore, which consisted of an inset of elastic of rather countrified appearance. These gores have lovely designs in cut leather applied. Other effects on plain colored shoes, among which tan takes a prominent position, are the smart little buckles and tailored bows of leather. This treatment is also used in the patent leather shoe, which more frequently has a ribbon bow.

Leather combinations are extremely smart this season, and the use of tan or alligator with patent is admirably suited to a season where brown shades are so much favored.

One of the smartest shoes is developed entirely in alligator leather, built on beautiful lines, which support the instep and give sufficient room to the foot to insure perfect comfort in walking, an unusual feature in a shoe of smart appearance. The shape of the shoe is a matter which has been carefully studied, and the tendency is to depart from the sandal effect of former seasons, which was rather trying to many feet, while the flat heel is still preserved. Fashion has no bias where heels are concerned, however, and she approves everything from a flat heel to one of the smart French type.

Buckles As Embellishment.

Suede and satin shoes are both quite prominent this season. Smart buckles sufficiently small as not to divert attention from the beautiful lines of the shoe, and yet serving to give it a finishing touch, are generally placed on these shoes.

Strap effects are well favored this season, and range from the fairly broad strap in the more practical type of shoe to the dainty, narrow type for delicate shoes in patent, oatent kid and other leathers. Much use is made of the cutwork for decoration over the instep and at the sides.

Two-tone effects are also seen in gray and black. A shoe of this type has several straps over the instep, and the vamp, or toe portion, is in patent leather. Another shoe of gray suede has a long wing effect, in the side. This style is also very effective in patent leather used alone, as the color of the stocking shows through the cut-work at the sides.

Suede in Egyptian shade, a soft brown, is decorated with appliques and straps of alligator in slim strips over the instep.

ENSEMBLE SUIT DOMINATES FASHION FOR EARLY SPRING

This New Mode Influences Almost Every Type of Garment.

MANY NEW FABRICS

In the annals of fashion, the spring of 1925 will go down as having introduced an entirely new mode in dress, whose crowning achievement is the creation of the wonderful ensemble suit. Nothing approaching this type has ever been known in former epochs of style, and its influence is felt in every phase of the mode.

The ensemble suit itself is the epitome of all that is smart in harmony of design, exquisite lines and beauty of fabric and coloring. The style is a most versatile one, and lends itself to infinite variations, from the dressy ensemble for smart afternoon affairs to the sports type, which is so strongly marked as a feature of the spring mode. These suits are shown in many new fabrics, including charmeen, Poiret twills, silk failles and the Patou and Rodier crepes of exquisitely harmonious and brilliant colorings. Where the sports type of suit is concerned, much use is made of the new kasha, a soft and supple wool fabric sponsored by the great Paris houses.

Elaborate Ensemble.

In the more elaborate ensemble, which is the predominant type, the silk fabric of the dress is used to line the coat, which is long enough to reach to within a few inches of the edge of the dress. The tunic idea is strongly marked in the dresses, which are either bordered with the fabric of the coat or are worn over a slip of which the border is made of the coat material. The becoming lines of the straight silhouette find their expression in these coats and dresses, which are, however, several inches shorter than those of last year. Both dress and coat are sometimes slightly flounced at the bottom, giving a charming variation to the line. The sleeves of the coats, and of the dresses in those models which are not sleeveless, are tight-fitting, though the coat sleeve is sometimes gracefully widened at the base or slightly puffed.

Fur Trims.

Fur trims are sometimes used on the more elaborate type of ensemble suit, usually at the border, where a band of some soft, long-haired fur, such as fox or baby lynx, gives a charming finish to the slim silhouette, while the upper portion is carried out on tailored lines with smartly-notched collar and revers or with the little stand-up collar, which, in some cases, is also trimmed with f[illegible] on the outside. In many models the coat has its only fastening at the neck in a smart little tie, which allows the dress to be seen. Many of the ensemble coats feature the tuxedo front, with straight revers to the bottom.

For those who have occasion to wear a more conventional type of suit, there are many smartly-tailored styles by such world-famous makers as O'Rossen, combining a coat and skirt. The coat is in any one of three lengths, the first being the short boyish coat of hip length, the second a knee-length type, and the third a very long coat, equal in length to that which is worn in the ensemble suit. These suits are developed in the ever-smart Poiret twill, either in navy or pencil-striped effects or in corded fabrics in some of the light fawn shades which are much favored for spring this year. For wear with these suits there are two lengths in blouses, one the short tunic overblouse in the attractive peasant style or the smart tailored blouse of broadcloth or silk.

Sportswear Favored.

Sportswear is very strongly favored for spring, and dresses of this type are developed in many new fabrics, chief among them being kashas in plain colors, including the beautiful new tan shades and many striking checked designs. These dresses are made on slim tailored lines with mannish effects in the collar treatment, and are either belted or with the line unbroken from collar to hem. The ensemble effect also finds favor in sports types, in the two-piece combination of belted overblouse and skirt in the same fabric of kasha or flannel.

Knitted wear promises to be more popular than ever, judging from the great variety of smart effects in which it has been developed. Nothing is more appropriate for sports occasions than the suits of wool and silk combined, carried out in brilliant colors and more subdued tones of brown and green. The ensemble effect is also seen here in suits consisting of a knee-length pullover with a skirt to match. The neck t[illegible]ment in knitted wear is especially attractive, the newest features being the cricket neck, which embodies several colored stripes, which are repeated sometimes in the cuff, and the tee shirt effect, which has a long buttoned opening reaching up to the smart little collar.

Store Windows Badly Damaged

Special to The Advertiser.

Chatham, March 20.—City police are conducting an investigation into a most unusual kind of prank played by boys, who are blamed for using glaziers' diamonds to make scratches on windows of downtown stores. While none of the plate-glass windows have been broken, they have been weakened so that the slightest pressure will cause them to break.

SUBSIDY BILL PROBERS NEARLY ALL CHOSEN

Eight Liberals, Four Progressives and Three Conservatives Will Compose Committee.

Special to The Advertiser.

Ottawa, March 20.—Most of the members of the select committee to investigate the Petersen contract bill have been chosen. The committee is to be eight Liberals, four Progressives and three Conservatives. The Liberals chosen are William Duff, Lunenburg; Matthew McKay, North Renfrew, and Donald McMaster, Brome. The Conservatives are Sir Henry Drayton, H. H. Stevens and W. A. Black, Halifax. The Progressives are J. W. Kenney, Glengarry; J. F. Johnston, Last Mountain, Harry Leader, Portage la Prairie, and R. H. Halbert, North Ontario.

Donald McMaster probably will be chairman. The government hopes to reach a vote tonight on the Low bill. If it comes it will be late. Some twenty speakers are now on the whips' lists.

MAN OF MANY PURSUITS NOW JOINS LABOR PARTY

Associated Press Despatch.

London, March 20.—Another of the noble lords of Great Britain has joined the Labor party, Lord Gorell, the second son of the famous divorce court judge, Justice Garell Barnes. Lord Gorell is the third holder of the peerage. His elder brother was killed in the war.

Poet, novelist, journalist, cricketer, and undersecretary for air in the coalition government, Lord Gorell has led an active life, and is now chairman of the miners' social welfare committee. He is 40 years of age, was educated at Winchester, Harrow, and Balliol college, Oxford, and became a barrister in 1909. For more than four years he was on the staff of a London daily newspaper. He served during the war, and then as deputy director of staff duties, arranging educational courses for young soldiers.

FARM LIMESTONE RAIL CHARGES CUT

Reductions Approximate Those Recommended by Agricultural Inquiry Board.

Special to The Advertiser by a Staff Correspondent.

Toronto, March 20.—Following a conference held by the parties interested, definite effect has been given to a schedule of freight rates on agricultural limestone approximating those recommended by the agricultural inquiry committee of the Ontario legislature in its recent report.

The conference was attended by Judge McKeown, chief commissioner, and S. J. McLean, assistant chief of the board of railway commissioners; Hon. John S. Martin, Ontario, minister of agriculture, and Hon. Dr. Jamieson, chairman of the agricultural inquiry committee; Henry C. Martin, general freight traffic manage, C. N. R., and W. C. Bowles, assistant freight traffic manager, C. P. R.

The schedule of rates agreed to allows delivery of agricultural limestone in carlots to any part of the province at a price the farmer can meet, and brings the Canadian railways in line in this regard with the roads of United States, which have for some time recognized in their rates that the use of ground limestone will increase railroad tonnage on farm crops, as well as increase the farmers' income.

The rates that will go into force in Ontario allow a delivered price for ground limestone only a little over one-half the prices at which limestone could be secured heretofore where the haul was 500 miles or over, and a scale of substantial reductions from 100 to 500 miles. The reductions in delivered cost apply all the way down to a ten-mile haul.

WORLD CONFLICT IN 10 YEARS FORESEEN BY BRITISH EXPERT

Believes U. S. and Great Britain Will Fight Yellow Races.

PLAN IS FORMED

Associated Press Despatch.

New York, March 20.—Sir Charles Higham, British advertising expert, believes that the world is headed for another general conflict. According to reports printed today of an address he made at a local club last night he predicts that, possibly within ten years, Great Britain and the United States will be allies in a war against Japan, Germany, and other races.

Sir Charles is quoted as saying that "in the minds of those who make public opinion" in Germany, Japan, Russia and China, a plan has been formed "for the yellow races to make an aerial attack on the Panama canal and California, and land in Mexico after having got rid of the United States defences."

Simultaneously, he is quoted as saying that Germany will attack France, Canada and Australia will have all they can do to look after themselves, and Great Britain will thus be handicapped in going to France's aid.

"It will come in less than twenty years, and most likely in ten," Sir Charles said, according to today's report of his address.

TORONTO WOMAN AWARDED DAMAGES FOR MALPRACTICE

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, March 19.—Aleta Sweetman of Toronto sued F. G. Lawr, dentist, for damages for malpractice in allowing the point of a hypodermic needle to remain in her jaw after an operation. At trial she was awarded $2,300 damages. The appeal of Dr. Lawr has been dismissed by the second divisional court with costs.

HOBBS MANUFACTURING GAINS APPEAL DECISION

Court Upsets Ruling of Trial Judge, Who Allowed Damages.

Special to The Advertiser.

Toronto, March 20.—An appeal of the Hobbs Manufacturing Company of London from a decision of Mr. Justice Mowat, which gave damages of $2,200 to William Westenfelder was allowed by the second division court today and the action dismissed. J. A. E. Braden, London, represented the London firm in the case.

Westenfelder claimed that in September, 1923, he called at the Hobbs warehouse to purchase an automobile windshield and was directed to the shipping room where a clerk dropped a heavy crate of glass on his foot, causing injuries.

It was one of two cases where persons came upon business premises without invitation and were injured, later suing and recovering damages. The other case was where a man named Conner went into Cornell's warehouse in Windsor in connection with the purchase of apples and went down a dark corridor in which was a trapdoor. He fell down the opening, and at trial before Mr. Justice Logie was awarded $1,000 damages. This is set aside.

A CHERISHED article of apparel—a negligee, dainty and elusive as a moonbeam—was about to be discarded.

OKE AND BOWMAN TO OPPOSE RANEY

Will Vote Against Motion of Censure Arising Out of Bank Deals.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, March 20.—Two farmer members of the legislature, L. W. Oke, East Lambton, and B. Bowman, Manitoulin, announced on the floor of the legislature yesterday their intention of voting against the Raney amendment to the budget resolution, which criticizes the public accounts committee of last year in its handling of the 1919 Home bank loan commission scandal.

"I cannot recall, as far as my judgment was concerned," said Mr. Oke, "that there was any time in the investigation of the committee where anything was held up or anything that was not gone into, or that was not brought forward. I don't say this for the creation of sympathy from any part of the house. I say this from my knowledge of being a member of that committee. The result is this, to my mind, that this amendment is more for political purposes than to get at the bottom of what has actually happened."

Mr. Bowman wondered to what extent members of that committee could vote for the amendment without censuring themselves. Mr. Raney, however, he said, was in a different position inasmuch as he did not attend the committee meetings, and perhaps in that way could support the amendment. No doubt an opportunity would be given at this year's sittings to go into the same matters

For thousands of years people have looked forward to the attainment of that ideal state in which happiness would be the lot of the majority, the inequality of human relationship would be adjusted, and sorrow, suffering and sin removed for all time.
Prophets have spoken of it and poets have sung about it. Modern writers refer to it as the Golden Age, and idealists still hope to see its appearance following the awful conditions which today surround us on every hand.

NEW BEAUTY PARLOR OPENED IN LONDON

Roy Bicknell Adds Attractive Feature to Present Establishment.

Roy E. Bicknell's barber shop at 286 Dundas street, long a favorite with both ladies and gentlemen, and one of the foremost in London in the matter of up-to-date equipment and real service, has added a further feature in the way of a beauty parlor which is in charge of Miss McFarlane, an expert operator, late of the Mansfield Academy of Beauty in Boston.

In the Bicknell shop all the latest styles of hair cutting are available for customers. Ladies, if they so wish, may have their hair cutting done in the beauty parlor by the lady operator. Scalp treatments, shampoos and facial and scalp massages can be had in both the barber shop proper and the beauty parlor.

A complete service in manicuring, marcelling, curling, facials and all the other methods of preserving and enhancing women's natural beauty is what this new beauty parlor provides.

Velvetex Rugs Last A Lifetime

Made From Old, Wornout Carpets.

If you are one of the thousands of thrifty home makers to whom "Velvetex" is a household word, this story will not interest you, as you already have inside information and have no doubt told the story to your friends many times, after they have admired the beautiful rugs in your home.

Now for the story, and, best of all, a true story. Down on Carling street there is a firm where they make the most beautiful velvety reversible rugs—rugs so thick and soft that the moment you step on one you feel it must be an Oriental, and the wonder of it is that they make them from your old, faded, worn and sometimes moth-eaten rugs and carpets. They gather them up, sterilize them, shred, spin and reweave them by a process which represents years of painstaking experiment. They are returned to you in "Velvetex" rugs, which will wear, not out, but practically a lifetime, growing more mellow in tone as the years go by, and never clashing in color with the other furnishings; in short, a joy forever.

"Velvetex" rugs are in the best homes in Canada, but they are within the reach of the most humble, as they are a real economy; in fact, there is nothing to compare with them for value, since they are five times as thick as the original carpets. That one of the largest institutions in Ontario had over 2,000 yards of carpet made into "Velvetex" speaks well for these rugs. Hospitals, hotels, churches, lodges and professional offices are among satisfied customers who have sent old carpets to the Canada Rug Company to be converted into fine new everlasting rugs.

Associated Press Despatch.

Steelville, Mo., March 20.—Two of five armed men who attempted to hold up the Farmers' Bank of Steelville early this afternoon were killed, two others wounded and a fifth captured, when a citizens' posse, previously informed that a holdup of the bank was contemplated, engaged the robbers in a pistol fight. Motorcycling Is Termed Greatest Outdoor Sport

In the opinion of J. A. Barnard, 338 Talbot street, exclusive agent for Harley-Davidson motorcycles in this district, motorcycling is the greatest outdoor diversion.

"Jump in the saddle, give her the gas and you're on your way. You dodge in around and through traffic. You pass 'em all and lead the parade," says Barnard.

"Who said hills? A twist of the throttle grip and your motorcycle zooms up the hills like a prairie windstorm.

"Like to hit trails and paths? They are easy for you. You can go where roads don't go with your powerful, dependable motorcycle.

"Like to breeze along on the open road? You get speed thrills aplenty with a motorcycle.

"Man, that's mortorcycling—outdoors' greatest sport.

"Touring, fishing, hunting, camping or a big day's fun with the bunch—a motorcycle opens a new and bigger world of outdoor sport.

"Now you can take more fishing trips and get out to the lakes in double quick time with your motorcycle.

"Or chuck your gun in the sidecar, take your pal along and go for a week-end hunting trip. You smile at miles now when you take such trips on a motorcycle.

"Touring and camping, too, have a real kick when you ride a motorcycle. There's none of that caged in or boxed up feeling on a motorcycle. Motorcycling is the red-blooded outdoor sport for fellows who like to live.

"Come on, throw your leg over your 1925 Harley-Davidson and let's go!"

CHAS. CHAPMAN FIRM SERVES WHOLE OF WESTERN ONTARIO

At times people are moved to seek some method of preserving back files of their favorite magazines for future use and they are at a loss to know where they can have these numbers bound in book form. The Charles Chapman Company of 91 Dundas street has for many years past done work of this description for individuals and organizations all over Western Ontario. They are doing a great deal of work of this kind at present and many of their customers who are seeking this service are ones of many years standing.

They do much binding for local libraries as well as for many others in surrounding towns. Among their clients are many of the large banks and corporations, not only in this city, but also in larger centers. The Chapman Company also does trade binding for many printing and lithographing houses.

This concern manufactures all manner of loose leaf filing and accounting systems, as well as making all kinds of loose leaf binders in leather and canvas. Another important line of this firm is the gold embossing of names or initials on all kinds of leather goods, Bibles, Bags, etc. They do individual names or quantities of gold lettering at very moderate prices, and have a well-earned reputation for turning out work of the highest order.

ALL PARTS AVAILABLE AT ENGLISH WRECKERS

Stocks Replacements For All Machines and Trucks on Market.

A trip through the English Auto Wreckers' establishment at 74 Fullarton street reveals factors that are of a decided interest to the uninitiated. Here one sees cars of all types and ages being dismantled for the parts that may be put into service again. In one corner a workman has partially taken down a rear axle of a machine whose body and top are far gone, and appear to have no better destiny than being consigned to the scrap heap. But—

'Come over here," says the workman, and he points to the gears in the differential. "You wouldn't think it possible that they could still be in such good condition when you look at the rest of the car, would you?"

"No," is the frank but incredulous reply.

"Well, rub your fingers over the teeth." This is done, and they are revealed to be as clean and free from damage as similar new ones just turned out of a machine shop—and all this despite the fact that the car being inspected has seen many years service and has travelled thousands of miles in that time. These gears will be resold at possibly one-tenth the price new ones would cost, and they are in all respects as good as the first day they were placed in the machine when new.

This is just one instance. There are scores of others. Parts from the smallest to the largest are stocked on the shelves of the English Auto Wreckers' plant, and they are ready at a moment's notice.

Baldwin's Jaunt To Canada Is Off

British Premier Will Be Unable to Come Owing to Official Duties.

Associated Press Despatch.

London, March 20.—The rumor of a visit to Canada by Premier Stanley Baldwin crops up every few weeks. Early last autumn the Canadian Press learned that the premier contemplated as a private holiday a visit to the Dominion.

A few months later, when Mr. Baldwin was called to the premiership it was duly noted that this obviously altered his ability to follow his personal inclinations, and accordingly it is hardly likely that he will make a tour of the Dominion just yet. Nothing has happened or is likely to happen to alter this view.

FIFTY YEARS IN CITY RECORD OF HOURD CO.

Prominent Local Manufacturing Concern Celebrating Golden Jubilee.

Half a century in London is the record of the local specialty manufacturing firm of Hourd & Co., which this year is celebrating its 50th jubilee. The Hourd factory on Quebec street is one of the best foreign advertisements the city of London possesses at present as the products of this corncern are marketed in Great Britain, British West Indies, and New Zealand, as well as all over the dominion of Canada.

Fifty years ago the late Arthur E. Hourd established the business which today is among the leaders in the Canadian commercial field. The initial Hourd plant on Richmond street was used until more room for expansion was required. It was then that Mr. Hourd built the factory which is now occupied by the Spramotor Company, on King street. There new lines of merchandise were added and the plant manufactured a general line of reed-work furniture, bedroom and dining-room suites.

For the past 32 years the plant has been located on Quebec street, at the C. P. R. tracks. When it was moved to that locality a complete line of furniture was made. Finally the furniture was discarded and the company, which was incorporated as a limited joint stock company on July 11, 1900, specialized in folding tables and bathroom woodwork.

Thousands and thousands of folding tables and enormous quantities of bathroom woodwork are turned out by the Hourd factory every year. Patents for the folding tables are held by the company, which give exclusive manufacturing rights in Canada and elsewhere.

Arthur E. Hourd, founder of the business, died on November 1, 1913, and since that time his son, A. Reyburn C. Hourd, has been carrying on at the head of the firm.

Throughout the years the company has enjoyed prosperity and from present activities there is every indication that Hourd & Co. will continue as one of the most active industries in London.

CONDITIONS IN GERMANY REPORTED AS IMPROVING

Special to The Advertiser.

Mitchell, March 20.—Hugo Horn of this town has received a long and interesting letter from his sister in Hamburg, Germany, in which she says that times are getting better, and that there is now work for everybody. A strange coincidence is that there has been no ice and snow this winter in that part of Germany, and that in the latter part of January and early in February trees were budding out and the grass had started to turn green. Mr. Horn says that one winter before he came to America the ice was three and a half feet thick at this time of year.

SATISFACTION GIVEN BY M'INNES COAL YARD

Maitland Street Concern Has Grown by Leaps and Bounds.

One of the most outstanding coal and wood firms in the city at the present time is the one at 276 Maitland street. Mr. McInnes, the proprietor, has gained a reputation of having only clean coal for sale. Added to that he has a system of prompt delivery which has given his old customers a great deal of satisfaction, and has drawn a huge amount of new trade.

Although this firm started with a very small amount of trade it has gradually grown to be classed among the best in Western Ontario Today its trucks and wagons are kept busy from early morning until late evening making deliveries to homes on nearly every street in London.

The best clean hard coal in every size—egg, stove, nut and pea; Solvay coke, now famous all over America for its high heat-content; Pocahontas soft coal, equally well known; and reliable cordwood, sawed into the right lengths for stove or grate, are the stock-in-trade of this progressive concern.

Because of the high quality of its different types of coal and wood, and the efficiency of its delivery system, the A. J. McInnes' coal yard can always assure customers of the utmost in satisfaction.

MAN OF THREE NAMES WANTED AT TORONTO

Hamilton Police Interview Young Woman Said To Be From Winnipeg.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Hamilton, March 20.—When police were called to a rooming house at 18 Walnut street this morning to make some inquiries about a young couple who registered there recently, they found a young woman who gave her name as Pauline Ebert of Winnipeg. She was taken to central police station, and there her eye fell upon a circular letter, asking information concerning Gerald Helptzman, known also as Dr. James W. McIntosh. On the circular was a photograph of a man.

While being questioned as to the whereabouts of her companion, she pointed to the picture and said he was the man. She gave his name as Norman Clyde. He left their rooms yesterday, and she had not seen him since. The circular announces that the man with three names is wanted at Toronto, Burlington, Kitchener, and Oakville, on charges of passing worthless checks supposed to have been signed by Dr. T. H. Callaghan of St. Michael's hospital, Toronto.

About the time that the police were through questioning the girl, word came from Oakville that Heintzman had been arrested at that place while cashing a check.

KEEP CANADA BRITISH AIM OF ORANGEMEN

Hon. Dr. J. W. Edwards Addresses 700 Delegates at Ottawa Convention.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Ottawa, March 20.—"Our ambition and our aim, of which we make no secret, is to keep this Canada of ours a British country. We do not want to take away anyone else's language; but we do not intend that the English language shall be outlawed to suit the aspirations of Henri Bourassa, or of anyone else."

These words were used by Hon. J. W. Edwards, grand master and sovereign of the grand Orange lodge of British America, in the course of an address delivered to an audience of fully 700 delegates at the 65th annual convention of the grand lodge of Ontario, which concluded the second day of a three-day session at the Orange hall last night.

Speeches were also given by Rev. Andrew Wood, supreme grand chaplain of the supreme grand lodge of the United States, and by Rev. W. L. L. Lawrence, grand master of the grand Orange lodge of Ontario West, both of whom gave a comprehensive summary of the objects and achievements of Orangedom in Canada and the United States.

When the lodge opens today little remains to be done after the installation of the new officers of the right worshipful grand lodge of Ontario East.

MRS. B. H. HART SICK FOR YEARS

Wants Women to Know How She Was Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Cornwall, Ont.—"I am now giving your medicine a fair trial and it surely is doing me good and I am going to keep on taking it. I used to feel so tired in the morning that I didn't want to get up, but that feeling is leaving me now. I also sleep better and feel more like working. For seven or eight years I have had headaches, tired feelings, pains in my back and across my body. I read letters in the newspapers saying what good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done others. My husband says I quit too soon, but I am not going to stop taking the Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine until I am better and haven't an ache or a pain. Isn't that the right way? I have great faith in your medicines. They must be good when those who take them speak so highly of them. I am recommending them to my friends and I will gladly answer letters from women asking about them."—Mrs. B. H. HART, Box 1081, Cornwall, Ont.

Mrs. Hart is willing to answer letters from sick women asking about the Vegetable Compound. c

"I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and they helped me, and after using three or four cakes of Cuticura Soap and a few boxes of Cuticura Ointment I was completely healed in three months." (Signed) Miss Vera Sweny, 1 Gibson Ave., Toronto, Ont.

Radio Answers

By C. H. LANGFORD.

This department is conducted every Saturday. Questions pertaining to any radio trouble or information required may be sent in. As many of these questions as possible will be answered in the Saturday edition. Address all communications to the Radio Department, London Advertiser, London Ont.

G. R. of Tillsonburg, Ont., writes: Will you please let me know what values of condensers and resistances to use in a resistance coupled amplifier?

Ans.—The grid leaks of the amplifier should be variable for the best results. The coupling resistance should be 100,000 ohms. Coupling condensers approximately .005 mfd.

J. B. of Stratford, Ont., writes: I am having trouble with my Cockaday one-tube receiver. When I turn the dials a click only is heard. Condensers o. k.

Ans.—Locating radio troubles at a distance is extremely hard to do and results are not as high as when the receiver is at hand. However, there are several possible causes of your trouble. Test both coils for possible open windings. Recheck original diagram carefully. Be sure to use a new mica grid condenser and try several grid leaks. This is the most probable cause of the clicks. Try reversing the storage battery connections to set. If these tests fail to overcome the clicks, write in describing in detail what you hear when different dials are operated.

F. M. of London writes: I live near the L. & P. S. railway and have a good receiving set. At times I am able to get good distance reception, but at other times I am bothered by a continuous crackling sound, which completely drowns out even local station. Is there any remedy for this?

Ans.—The high-tension wires of the electric line are probably the cause of your disturbances. A loop receiver would help if it could be determined that the interference comes from only one direction. Your distance and volume would be cut down considerably by using the loop in place of an aerial. There is no real solution of this problem up to the present time. The radio branch department, marine and fisheries, Ottawa, is conducting extensive tests and hope to be able to offer some means to combat this type of interference soon.

M. R. G. of London, Ont., writes: I have a five-tube set and need 135 volts to operate it. Should I use large or small B batteries? I would like to use small B batteries if they will be as satisfactory.

Ans.—By all means use the largest type of B batteries available. Also the best batteries to buy are those that cost the most. It will pay you in the long run. The average five-tube receiver is extremely hard on B batteries, more so than other receivers. Hence it is very desirable to have the largest B battery to withstand the heavy current drawn from it. Small B. Batteries should only be used where portability is necessary.

C. N. of Woodstock, Ont., writes: How many turns of wire should be wound on the rotor and stator of a variometer for use in the plate circuit of a regenerative receiver? I want to make one myself and intend copying the design of the wooden variometers now on the market.

Ans.—If you make a variometer of approximately the same size as common variometers, use 40 turns on the stator and 50 turns on the rotor. Use as little shellac or binding substance as possible.

R. H. of London, writes: What is the greatest number of stages of audio frequency amplification that can be used with clear reception?

Ans.—With two stages of audio frequency amplification, using the best of transformers, good tubes and correct circuit with new batteries, the signals will be as loud and clear as one can use. Additional stages have and are being used, but the additional volume is distorted and many outside noises are very much pronounced. Where the first stages are not working at maximum efficiency, a third stage can be used on the weaker stations. The best method where extreme volume and the best in tone quality is desired, is to use one or, for extreme volume, two stages of regular low ratio transformer amplification and at the output of this add a push pull amplifier with efficient circuit. This will give more volume than the average speaker can handle and will be practically free from distortion.

R. W. of Dutton, Ont., writes: Does wind affect radio waves? I have noticed that during a heavy windstorm it is difficult to tune in and keep tuned in. I have a single circuit regenerative receiver with two amplifying tubes.

Ans.—Wind does not affect radio waves. The radio wave travels at 186,000 miles per second and even a 90-mile hurricane would have no effect on the radio wave. Besides, the wind is a wind of air and radio waves pass through space and not through air as a medium, so there is no conflict. What is happening is a detuning of your circuit, since the aerial is a part of your single circuit receiver. The changing of the signals is due to the swinging of the aerial and this changes the capacity of it, resulting in the shifting of the wave tuned and losing the station. This is a disadvantage that the single circuit receiver possesses and one that cannot be helped unless an aerial can be put up that would not swing in a wind. A shorter aerial might help somewhat.

MOTHERS PRAISE BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Mrs. L. M. Brown, Walton, N. S., says: "I cannot recommend Baby's Own Tablets too highly I have found them invaluable for the ailments of little ones." Mrs. Brown's testimony is the same as that of thousands of other mothers who have used the Tablets. To use them once is a sure guarantee that they will always be kept in the home as long as there are babies or young children to be cared for. The Tablets are a laxative—mild but thorough in action—which never fail to regulate the stomach and bowels: relieve constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fevers and make the dreaded teething period easy. In fact they banish all the minor ills from which little ones suffer. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.—Advt.

Home Burned, Dies On Plain

FAMOUS OLD SIDE-WHEELER TO BE FLOATING BEER PALACE

Steamer Frank E. Kirby of Detroit May Be Transferred to Canadian Registry.

RUN TO KINGSVILLE

Special to The Advertiser.

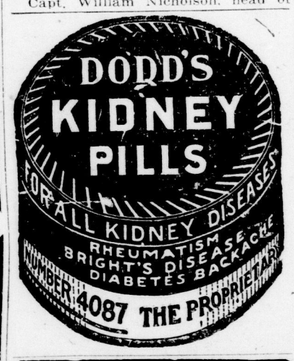

Detroit, March 20.—The steamer Frank E. Kirby, the first of the great side-wheeling greyhounds of the lakes, may spend part or all of its final period of usefulness as a floating liquor palace on the Canadian side of the international line, it became known yesterday.

Under the proposed amendment to the Ontario temperance act the famous ship could be fitted out with bar-room and cafe and ply safely up and down under the protective shadows of the Canadian shore with 4.4 beer, according to students of the politics of prohibition, giving a new meaning to the old designation of men who "go down to the sea in ships."

The Frank E. Kirby, namesake of the famous ship designer of that name, lies now in drydock at the Great Lakes Engineering Works.

Capt. William Nicholson, head of the Nicholson Transit Company, who bought the ship in 1921 from the Ashley and Dustin Line, said today the Kirby was being overhauled thoroughly for use in the coming season. He said its use would be decided on within two weeks. Two possibilities appeared to be open. Either it will be returned to its Detroit to Kingsville run, carrying thirsty Detroiters into Ontario for 4.4 beer of Ontario, or it will be sold.

Capt. Nicholson appeared to believe difficulty might be experienced in obtaining a license. A solution of that problem, it was pointed out, would depend on certain details of the proposed new Ontario bill not yet made public. The vessel would have to operate under Canadian registry.

JERUSALEM CHURCH HONORS CITY DIVINE

Bishop Williams Named One of Six Canons of St. Georges, Palestine.

Rt. Rev. David Williams, D.D. D.C.L., bishop of Huron, has been appointed one of six Episcopal canons of St. George's church, Jerusalem, Palestine.

Bishop Williams has accepted the honor tendered him as the representative canon of the Anglican church in Canada.

Stalls are placed in the church at Jerusalem with the names of the canons inscribed over them. Bishop Williams' stall will be that designated as "Gerizim," or "Mount of Blessing."

The plan of having canons for the church at Jerusalem originated with the late Bishop Blyth with the object of "showing to other countries, which have their origin or home in the Holy City, the unity of the Anglican church throughout the world."

In addition to Bishop Williams, the present canons of the Jerusalem church are: The Bishop of London, England; the Metropolitan of India; the Archbishop of Cape Town; Archbishop Lowther Clarke, late of Melbourne; Bishop Garland of Pennsylvania.

In asking Bishop Williams to accept the appointment, Bishop Rennie MacInnes, of St. George's, intimated it was because he had "so notably and so effectively supported the work of the church which is in Jerusalem."

Only a few months ago Bishop Williams declined to allow his name to be considered for the appointment of Bishop of Bangor, Wales, England, one of the most outstanding bishoprics in the Anglican church in England or in Canada.

On Fifth Avenue

"O CIEL!"

Cried the Great Worth to Captain Molyneux—and the result was the new name for the Blues that these gentlemen have engendered! "Ciel" is the perfect blue for the brunette. Almost the shade that used to be called periwinkle, but with more of the "wink" in this one! A lovely sophisticated color it is—a thunder-cloudy blue, lightened with a steely gleam. A dangerous seductive blue—the shade that all the demure grays would love to be (though they'd never admit it) if they only knew how!

THE HAPPY HOME

That has a little Dressmaker is due for a perfectly delightful season. Never were the fabrics so exquisite and alluring—so wonderful to manipulate, nor the modes so easy to make at home—if only you go the right way about it.

A careful study of your particular style—a sane summing up of your own dressmakery limitations. Then THE RIGHT PATTERNS! That's frightfully important. After that—an enormous field of choice, with everything to favor you among the materials. Possible to double your wardrobe, even on a limited income.

A YOUNG FRENCH FROCK

That blushed at Fifth Avenue near Forty-seventh Street was fashioned in a mode not hard to follow. A very simple chemise effect to the hips; from thence the skirt was sufficiently circular to give it a slight movement of its own. Just below the hips came the godets—made quite separately from the skirt, and set on. Every godet was frilled with feathers, tiny tiers of once-white feathers from the breast of a chicken dyed a delicate pink—all set on inside out, so that they curled outwards and upwards. Every tier was attached with moonbeam silver beads, EXACTLY like the silver sweetmeats that grow on Wedding Cakes! The whole pale pink confection looked ready to flutter its fairylike wings and fly!

AMONG THE MATERIALS

Kasha holds the first place. Heavy corded silks—a kind of silk rep—are shown in delightful coats, with or without fur. Delicate camel's hair linings give them warmth without weight. Black satin coats are excessively smart. Some of them are cutting their corners—round. Topcoats of light tweed are preparing to outwit the April showers. Coats of countless ensembles throw themselves proudly back to show their polka-dotted linings that go so happily with their polka-dotted frocks. Some of the skirts are appearing under the coats, like buds beneath the leaves.

Spring's on the way—and the Easter Millinery stirs and rustles in its tissue paper. Be on the watch!

ORIGINALS ARE COMING IN NEW PRODUCTION

"Stepping Out" Is Booked For the Grand Next Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Something extraordinary in the-atrical entertainment, the season's biggest laugh, is coming to the Grand opera house next Thursday, Friday and Saturday, with a Saturday matinee, when Canada's celebrated soldier performers, the Originals (including many of the original Dumbells) will present "Stepping Out," an entirely different conception of entertainment, on their annual visit to the city. Theatregoers of London look forward to the boys' engagement here each season and are assured of a rare treat in "Stepping Out." They have a comedian who is without a peer on this continent, Bob Anderson is one of those talented Lancashire fun-makers who is just naturally funny, his every appearance on the stage is the occasion for riotous laughter.

Gene Pearson, the owner of one of the most extraordinary male soprano voices before the public, and who created a sensation here last season, with "her" singing, has added greatly to his stage wardrobe, and also his vocal repertoire. In the new show he plays the role of a dashing prima donna in a one-act operetta which has been specially written for him; sings and dances in an elaborate carnival scene, and plays the part of Lady Violet Sudds, the daughter of the Duchess of Dishwater, in the new and screamingly funny burlesque, "The Duchess Performa"

The singing of the Originals has invariably been a joy, and their forces are strengthened even more by the addition to the cast of Thomas Dunn, a brilliant new baritone, and Gus McKinnon, a delightful new tenor; Bertram Langley and Jerry Brayford, as always, add much to the musical and to the humorous excellences of "Stepping Out." Alan Murray, the old favorite, blossoms forth this season in a quite new line of characterization.

Incidentally, many of the specially written song numbers sung by Bob Anderson and Gene Pearson are distinct hits, and are sweeping the country along with their delightful refrains. Bob's greatest hits are "With His Toes Turned Up" and "That's Another One Gone," both old country numbers with that unusual "swing," the type which Bob knows so well how to dispense; "Love Will Come Back," the beautiful waltz ballad sung by Gene Pearson, was written by the brilliant Canadian composers, Handyside and Harrover. Another instantaneous success is "The Love Trail," written by Willard Crocker, the well-known Montreal tennis champion. Both these latter numbers have been specially arranged for Gene Pearson.

With "The Duchess Performs," the final setting of the show, playgoers again witness the first and original "Duchess," Leonard Young, who delighted thousands four years ago as the aristocrat of "The Duchess Entertains." Lionel Broadway, the company's brilliant new juvenile, is a young Canadian artist of distinction and has already become a big favorite with the many admirers of the Originals. Norman Blume and Jimmy MacDonald are two new comedians who have jumped into immediate favor with the Canadian public.

The box office sale is now open and patrons are reminded to be early as indications point to a sell-out at all performances.

THE BEAUTIFUL NORMA PROVES REAL ACTRESS

Miss Shearer Will Be Seen at Loew's in "Lady of the Night."

One is put at a distinct disadvantage when writing of Norma Shearer as an actress, for it is difficult to remember her as anything but a tremendously beautiful person.

Miss Shearer is at the same disadvantage in convincing anyone that she is a good actress also, for critics and public alike are apt to remember only that she has an unmatchable profile and glorious eyes.

But for all that, Miss Shearer has convinced the majority of those who have seen her on the screen that she really is a very good actress, and in her latest role, in "Lady of the Night," at Loew's theatre on Thursday, she has an excellent opportunity to prove it.

In this production, which is sponsored by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and directed by Monta Bell, Miss Shearer plays two distinct personalities.

One is a dance hall girl, educated in a reformatory and cast upon the streets penniless to make her own living, the other is a rich man's daughter.

"BUDDIES," POST WAR PLAY, WILL BE SEEN

Majestic Players to Offer Hobart's Famous Comedy Next Week.

If George V. Hobart had not actually lived with the boys overseas during the late war he could never have conceived the delightful comedy situations that run all through his play of "Buddies," which will be presented at the Majestic theatre all next week. Mr. Hobart, one of the outstanding musical and dramatic writers of the last quarter of a century, had a peculiar genius for depicting life with all the color and romance there is in it—even in the most ordinary surroundings. His merry musical play, "Buddies," simply bristles with clever situations and charming lyrics.

"Buddies" is in no sense of the word a "war play." Located in Brittany, it deals, as a background, with the life of the soldier-boy after the war was over and while he was awaiting orders to sail for home.

Of course there's a love story, dealing with two young couples, Babe and Sonny, two soldiers, Julie, a French girl, and a scheming Frenchman by the name of Alphone Pettibois. Miss Leslie Rice will be afforded the first real opportunity she has had with the Majestic company to demonstrate her versatility—in drama, comedy and as a singer. Having played the part of "Julie" many times before, she can be depended upon to prove a delight to London audiences. For this production additional members are being drafted from the Hamilton company, as well as a local quartet of soldier singers.

Howard Blair will finish his engagement tonight as female impersonator in the farce comedy, "The Flirting Flapper."

PROHIBITION OF SALE OF ALL GAME ASKED

Association Protests Against Seine Fishing in Spawning Season.

Special to The Advertiser.

Parliament Buildings, Toronto, March 20.—The creation of more and smaller game sanctuaries, prohibition of the sale of all game, and limitation of the open season for deer and moose to 15 days, were among the matters advocated by the Ontario Fish and Game Protective Association to the game and fisheries committee of the legislative body today.

J. C. Richardson, one of the representatives of the association, stated that dozens of butchers in the cities were making money out of the sale of deer in season. The great majority of the hunters would agree with the association that the sale of all game should be stopped, he said.

That the carrying of hunting firearms be permitted only by license except in the case of farmers hunting on their own land, and that increased penalties be provided for infractions of game laws, also were asked by the association.

Officers of the Western Ontario Game Protective Association protested against commercial fishermen blocking the mouth of the Thames river witm seine nets during the spawning season.

The committee promised to take the various points under consideration.

Talks On Health

About Hardness of Hearing—Simple Rules On Caring For the Hair—Answers To Questions.

Edited by Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical association, and member of the staff of Hygeia.

In this column, published every Saturday, there will appear discussions of subjects related to health, hygiene and the prevention of disease, and condensed statements of articles written for Hygeia, the official organ of the American Medical Association, for the public; also answers to questions provided by authorities through the association. Requests for specific medical advice or diagnosis, which can be given only by the physician on seeing the patient, will be answered by a note to that effect. This department is especially prepared for The Advertiser and other members of the North American Newspaper Alliance, with the co-operation of Hygeia. All questions should be accompanied by a stamped addressed envelope.

SOME FACTS ABOUT HARDNESS OF HEARING.

The amount of trouble and misery resulting from deafness is incalculable. People who hear with only one ear must be constantly shifting about to get the good ear toward the people they associate with. They are subject to accidents because they cannot detect a menace approaching on the deafened side, just as those partially blind are constantly menaced because unable to perceive swift-moving objects approaching on the blind side. But even worse than that, deafness in one ear frequently results from some cause that sooner or later will attack the other ear also, unless preventive measures are taken.

Uusually Sensitive.

The deaf person, Dr. Hays believes, is unusually sensitive about his deformity, and therefore likely to be unwilling to accept help or advice. If he will learn lip-reading or wear a suitable hearing device he may sometimes be helped a great deal.

At least eighty per cent of deafness can be prevented if the diseases resulting in deafness are properly treated in childhood. The remaining cases are due to affections of the nerve-controlling hearing, or of the brain, and cannot be greatly assisted. However, much can be done for the child who has become deaf following repeated colds or as a result of blowing the nose improperly.

An examination of 100 children in a New York school showed that about fifty were suffering from potential deafness. Whenever they blew their noses too forcibly or whenever they had colds in the head their hearing became affected. Dr. Hays offers certain very elementary tests that may be tried.

Voice test.—The examiner stands twenty feet away. The child closes one ear by pressing it shut with the finger and turns the other ear toward the examiner, who calls off numbers in his ordinary tone of voice. The child should be able to repeat these at twenty feet distance without difficulty.

Watch test.—Again one is closed by the child to be examined. The examiner holds a fairly loud-ticking watch and beginning ten feet away approaches the child. The watch should be heard distinctly at about six feet distance.

But even without these more or less accurate tests, parents ought to be able to tell whether or not the child hears well. In many cases apparent inattention or lack of interest in school children is due to the fact that they do not see or hear well.

Causes of Deafness.

Among the many causes of deafness that the physicians may discover are blocking of the tube that passes from the throat to the ear; infection of the ear with inflammation so severe that the ear drum has to be perforated to relieve the pressure of the accumulated matter; and the forcing of material into the ear through too forcible blowing of the nose.

"In blowing the nose," recommends Dr. Hays, "the handkerchief should be held loosely below it or one nostril should be held at a time."

Any one of three courses is open to those with severe deafness. They may learn lip-reading, wear a hearing device or join one of the leagues for the hard of hearing that now exist in most large cities. Learning lip-reading is like learning a new language, but those who study hard and learn quickly may develop the art in three to six months.

There are all sorts of hearing devices on the market and many of them are quite worthless. The American medical association, 535 North Dearborn street, Chicago, has studied most of these devices, and will send information on request, accompanied by a self-addressed stamped envelope. Some hearing devices have been found satisfactory by specialists in diseases of the ear who have studied them carefully. Certainly those who are incapacitated by such a physical defect should avail themselves of every possible opportunity to overcome their handicap and to serve as productive members of the community.

SIMPLE FACTS ABOUT THE HAIR

Bobbing the hair is a hygienic procedure; it is then more readily cleansed and dried.

A shampoo once in two weeks for men and once in three weeks for woman is a safe general rule.

Brushes with sparsely set bunches of stiff bristles are to be preferred. Combs with wide, thick rather blunted teeth are best.

Singeing the hair is useless. The sap won't run out of the hair because the hair has no more sap than a buggy whip.

So far as known the only extra value to an egg shampoo is the little amount of sulphur there may be in the egg.

The scalp should be thoroughly dried after a shampoo, preferably with a soft towel or by exposure to the air. Most specialists condemn rapid drying with hot air blowers or similar radical measures.

Soap should be thoroughly rinsed out of the hair. The alkali of the soap, if allowed to remain, may make the hair dull, stringy or lusterless.

Hair dyes may contain harmful and even dangerous chemicals. The chief ingredient of most of them is paraphenylendiamin, and people who are sensitive may have skin eruptions following the use of such dyes.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Proper Posture for Child.

R. B. L. writes: "Can anything be done to correct shoulder blades that protrude somewhat? Is a curved back necessarily undesirable?"

Answer—Exercises to strengthen the muscles of the back and repeated posing in the proper posture will do much to correct the shoulder blades that protrude noticeably. The backs of many persons are slightly curved and not as flat as the so-called army type. If no disease is present or responsible for the small amount of curving, it need not be considered excessively harmful or Mouth Breathing, Chin Straps.

W. L. D. writes: "My little daughter sleeps with her mouth open. Her adenoids and tonsils have been removed, but she still breathes through her mouth. I have seen the advertisement of a chin strap to hold the mouth shut, and wonder if you can give me the name and address of a company that make a suitable device for this purpose. If you do not approve of this, will you tell me about something that will do."

Answer—Children sometimes continue to breathe through the mouth for a short time after the removal of tonsils and adenoids that have obstructed breathing through the nose. If this is due to some other obstruction in the nose that also must be removed. However if no other obstruction is present the child will gradually return voluntarily to the normal method of breathing. Chin straps and similar devices are worse than useless, as they merely cause discomfort and distress the child without affording any relief. If a physician has found no other obstruction in the breathing passages, let the child have time to form the habit of breathing properly.

MARVELS OF NATURE WILL BE SEEN IN 'FRIVOLOUS SAL'

Scenic grandeur rarely seen upon the screen in a dramatic photoplay forms the background for J. K. McDonald's First National picture, "Frivolous Sal," at Loew's theatre on Monday. Virtually all the outdoor scenes were photographed at Mount Rainier, in Washington, and around the Idaho silver mines. It was virgin territory from the film producer's viewpoint, and Victor L. Schertzinger, director of "Frivolous Sal," made the most of it.

WILL O.B.A.A. EXECUTIVE BREAK UP SOUTHERN?

Hamilton Rowers' Withdrawal From Intercounty Leaves Problem.

MEETING MONDAY

The withdrawal of the Hamilton rowing club from the scene leaves a splendid opening for the O. B. A. A. to send one senior team from London and St. Thomas into the Intercounty league should the governing body at its meeting Monday night decide to allow the Southern league to be broken up.

It is understood that the Intercounty officials do not favor two clubs so far west as St. Thomas and London, although they were not dead set against one club. One club meant one extra long trip to be considered by each of the clubs, which are otherwise closely grouped, but two simply doubles the car fare. On the other hand, the Intercounty has inferred by its acceptance of the Hamilton rowing club entry and also that of the L. A. A. A. contingent upon both teams entering, that it desires to expand to an eight club organization.

The inclusion of new clubs no doubt would be considered by Intercounty officials as being likely to inject new interest in the loop, which has been going for three years now and with the same clubs and practically the same players.

H. R. C. QUITS.

Hamilton, March 20.—After many weeks of careful campaigning and planning, with a view to entering a strong team in the Intercounty league to represent this city, the Rowing club has been forced to abandon all their plans, or rather, this move has been decided for them. Everything is "off," according to officials of the club, who stated this morning that they had been blocked at every turn in their effort to enter a team in the strong Intercounty circuit, and that they would not think of placing a team in the city league.

The Scullers couldn't see eye to eye with the city league, in the first place, and refused to calculate on placing a team in that circuit. Their desire, originally, was to gather the strongest representative team available, and promote the game in the city by having some of the best amateur clubs in the province play regular dates here, but forces at work against this move, successfully barred the way.

Stewart is a great center player with a wonderful poke-check.

M.-O. STILL KICKS.

The M.-O. will operate this year if the league has to maintain one club itself, judging by Knotty Lee's attempt to rent grounds in Kitchener.

Kitchener is the logical spot for a professional team and should under cheaper administration support a club in comfort.

Port Huron had a good chance that one of these days they are going to be sorry they missed.

If the Kitchener club can start fresh and unencumbered, a franchise there is going to be worth something. For the present senior amateur baseball dominates, but there will be a swing back to professional baseball unless past history, for once, fails to repeat.

There will be no new major hockey league formed. Tex Rickard is working with the N. H. L. not against it. But in the yarn that came through the other day, there is the germ of a semi-professional circuit, playing Class B hockey and affiliated with the major organization for mutual protection.

GEHRINGER BOOTS TWO OUT OF DOZEN

Detroit Tigers Beat Leafs in Patched-Up Game.

Special to The Advertiser.

Augusta, Ga., March 20.—The Tigers restored their prestige slightly here today by defeating Toronto in just a patched-up affair as the Peach himself was out with a sore neck, neither Jones nor Haney could get in the game, and Harrington played third, while Hellmann's charleyhorses forced him to stop after the fourth inning.

Despite the makeshift team, the Tigers performed errorlessly, even brilliantly, afield, while they hit a pair of former Detroit pitchers, Gibson and Smith, sufficiently to win without trouble. They were aided, however, by wretched fielding by Toronto, the Maple Leafs making no less than seven errors.

Blue featured the Tiger attack by getting himself a home run, a triple and a pass in four trips to the plate. The same teams will play again tomorrow.

CONVENERS NAMED

Special to The Advertiser.

Strathroy, March 20.—The new Western Ontario intermediate baseball league will open about May 20, with the circuit being divided into two groups, it was decided at a meeting of the executive here tonight. The eastern group will include London Orients, London McCormicks, Lucan, Strathroy and possibly St. Thomas. The western group will comprise Sarnia Imperials, Forest, Petrolia and Alvinston.

Owing to the fact that no representatives from St. Marys was in attendance at the meeting, the league decided to leave the Stone Town out.

The president and vice-president were named delegates to the annual meeting of the O. B. A. A. in Toronto on April 4.

The following delegates were present: Orients, E. Braund; McCormicks, G. Martin; Lucan, J. Stanley; Strathroy, P. Ballantyne; Sarnia, A. Sinclair; Forest, W. Rumford; Alvinston, G. Grools; Petrolia, W. McDiarmid.

Lee Interested In Kitchener

Special to The Advertiser.

Kitchener, March 20.—The possibilities for Kitchener entering the M.-O. league this season were placed before the Kitchener park board here tonight by Mayor Asmussen, who stated he had received a communication from Knotty Lee of the Port Huron club, to the effect that Lee would be here tomorrow to negotiate with the Kitchener park board for the renting of the athletic field for M.-O. baseball this season. It is understood Lee will put Kitchener into the league as the sixth club if arrangements fail for keeping Port Huron in the league.

The park board authorized the athletic committee to enter into an agreement with Lee tomorrow if he has a definite proposition for the rental of the grounds for the season.

OLD LACROSSE STAR, JAMES M'ALLEN, DIES

Member of Woodstock Beavers Club Was Noted Distance Runner.

Special to The Advertiser.

Woodstock, March 20.—James McAllen, one of the best-known of the older citizens of Woodstock, and a man who was a splendid representative of sport in this city in his younger days, died at his home last night. He was one of the few surviving members of the famous Beaver lacrosse club, which won the championship back in the seventies. He was also a long-distance runner of note, and on one occasion won a 24-hour race. He also had many short-distance races to his credit.

Mr. McAllen was born in Kingston in 1855, and came to this city when a child. For years he was employed in the grocery trade, and later with Poole & Co. The widow, two sons and one daughter survive.

WATFORD HIGH SEXTET AWARDED HOCKEY CUP

Special to The Advertiser.

Petrolia, March 20. — Watford high school was awarded the Lambton high school hockey championship and the principals' trophy when the local students awarded the play-off to Watford, owing to lack of ice. Forest high school withdrew from the series over a protest by the locals of playing ineligible students. They will not be asked to re-enter, but it is likely that Alvinston will be admitted to the league next winter. Alvinston has been trying hard to secure a berth, and these three teams should make a far better combination. This is the second year Watford has held the trophy.

PORT ARTHUR SENIORS WILL MEET VARSITY SIX

Take Round by Beating Coleman 5--1 in Final Game.

Associated Press Despatch.

Winnipeg, March 20.—The Port Arthur team, champions of Saskatchewan-Manitoba, tonight won the Western Canadian senior hockey title, and will meet Toronto Varsity in the finals of the Allan cup as a result of a 5 to 1 victory over the fast Coleman Tigers, titleholders of Alberta-British Columbia. The men from the head of the lakes won the round, 7 to 5, the Tigers having captured the first game, 4 to 2.

On the whole the play tonight was very even, but the Ports played a strong defensive game and waited for the breaks. For the greater part of the time the Alberta youngsters had the better of play, but were away off in their shooting as compared with their performance of Wednesday.

Captain Brydge put up a wonderful game and led most of the offensive plays, and his work was largely responsible for the victory of the Ports. He was ably seconded by Alex Gray on the forward line and Chaput in goal. For the losers, Thorsteinson put up a remarkably fine game; Wasnie was next best, but Sheppard, who was the star of Wednesday's contest, was away below form. Goodman in goal put up a strong game.

WINDSOR CAGE QUINTET TOO FAST FOR CENTRAL

Border City Team Gains Big Edge With 32--12 Win.

LED THROUGHOUT

Special to The Advertiser.

Windsor, March 20.—Windsor C. I. garnered a twenty-point lead against London Central C. I. in the race for the senior W.O.S.S.A. cage title here tonight by handing the Forest City crew a 32 to 12 trimming in a close, nip and tuck battle. The locals were in the lead throughout, starting out at the whistle to chalk up a big lead, and had the half-time score reading 23 to 3. They gathered their points on neat combinations, and as they outweighed the London boys they had a decided advantage. Central never really threatened in the first half. They were outgeneraled at every toss-up and failed to get going properly. Barbour, the star for the visitors, was held to one lone tally, and it came in the second half. It was a beautiful long shot from centre.

In the second half the play was even with London on the aggressive most of the time. They fought hard to score, but could not get past the local defence which put up one of its best games of the season. When the second half started Central broke away with a short passing attack which got them past centre, but then they were lost. They also had hard luck on shots. In fact the breaks of the game were all with the locals. Martin got the first point for London on a free shot. Turville fouling. Cook got the first basket for London on a long try from outside.

The third quarter saw first one side scoring and then the other. Windsor got the first on Turville's effort, Martin fouling. Malone worked in at the end of a combination, and Turville counted again on Johnston's foul. Logan broke away and scored on a long shot from centre, and Cook got a point on King's foul. Turville got in again, and Barbour ended the period with a long shot from the side. Windsor 29, London 3.

London dropped back to an almost entirely defensive game in the last period and had the better of play. Windsor kept boring in, but the visiting guards kept all their attacks out of the danger zone. Cook broke loose and forced Dawson to foul, resulting in another point for London. Turville scored on a dog shot. Logan tallied on a long backhanded throw from the side lines. Brown garnered a point on Turville's foul. This was the fourth for the local centre man, and he was banished. Cohen got the last point of the game on a free shot, Barbour slashing.

Line-ups:

London C. I.—Forwards, Barbour and Cook; centre, Logan; guards, Martin, Johnston; sub, Brown.

Windsor C. I.— Forwards, Malone, Cohen; centre, Turville; guards, Dawson, King; subs Jabenville, Chapman.

Referee—Kinsell, Detroit.

Senior Cage Tilt To Begin At Eight

In tonight's basketball game in the local armories, with the Windsor Omars and the University of Western Ontario competing, the public of London will have an opportunity of seeing for the first time the premier basketball series of Ontario. The occasion is the last game of a home and home series to decide the semi-final round. The winner will go into the finals against the winning team of the Hamilton-Toronto West End Y. M. C. A. game, which is being played tonight.

Windsor and Western are two good teams, and will provide a fast contest. It is the big event of the program, and will commence promptly at 8 o'clock. In the last game at Windsor, Western was unfortunate to come out at the short end of the 32-21 score, but 11 points is nothing in basketball. In the series between Toronto West End and the famous Dodge team two years ago Windsor won its home match by a score of 16 points, and in the return game at Toronto, West End was victorious by the same score and a third game was necessary to determine the winner.

C.N.R. A.A. Sextet Present Case

Charge Mfrs. Executive Lax Administration.

To the Supporters and Fans of the C. N. R. Hockey Team in the London Manufacturer's League.:

As we were tie with McClary's team for the second series of the manufacturers' league, we feel that some explanation should be made to our supporters why we were not allowed a chance for the league honors.

No doubt you are aware that at the first of the season, all O. H. A. players were barred from the manufacturers' league, but it was not long before two of the teams broke this ruling and played O. H. A. players from other cities, and got away with it. One of these teams won the first series.

When the second series was under way and it looked as if we were going to win, someone came along with the idea permitting London O. H. A. players to take part in the manufacturers' league. This was voted down three to one by the teams in the league, but as the executive voted, it carried. They allowed three teams one senior player each, and one team two senior players. As we were going into detail at this meeting, fighting for nothing but what was right according to the constitution, it was moved by members of one of the teams using the O. H. A. players in the first series that the constitution be scrapped and everything that had been done be overlooked and a fresh start made all over again. This was passed by the executive. Having one of the largest athletic associations in the city and knowing how it must be run to make it go, we feel this is why the manufacturers' league was not a success this year.

When it came to signing up a senior player, we found they were all signed up, so we had to take a junior, and we have no apologies to offer for doing so, but in the course of a week we signed a senior player, and in fairness to the junior man we played both O. H. A. men, which we thought would be all right, as the McClary team were playing five members of this year's O. H. A., viz., three seniors, one intermediate and one junior. Standard Drug were playing three O. H. A. members and Bell Telephone two. No complaint was made against us playing two O. H. A. men until we defeated McClary's, who then protested the game, the executive allowing them the protest, also the game, which put us out of the playoff.

The item that recently appeared in the local paper that "the wrong Desjardine played in the manufacturers' league" is quite correct, but as far as putting it over the executive, is all wrong, as one of the executive was informed of this on the night of the game, but took no action against it.

As all the teams in the league were using players illegally, we thought we had the same right as they, but as soon as we played one, everything was different and we were practically thrown out of the league.

The C. N. R. hockey team as a whole wants it distinctly understood that there is no ill-feeling toward the three other teams in the manufacturers' league, but they object to the slipshod method in which the executive ran the league.

Yours truly,

C. N. R. A. A. A.

Sydney, N. S., March 20.—Charging that the government of Nova Scotia, and particularly Premier Armstrong, was working with the British Empire Steel Corporation to defeat the striking miners in the present wage struggle, and that the offer of the men to protect the mines from damage had been spurned, the U. M. W. headquarters issued tonight the following statement:

The result of the conference held between the provincial government and district 26, U. M. W. of A., at Halifax on the 19th inst. was that the government did not accept the offer of the miners to provide protective measures for the Nova Scotia pits under the authority of the provincial government, as outlined in the proposal in that regard made by the union on March 16.

In addition, while conference was proceeding with deputy minister of mines, the premier deliberately stood up in the house and insinuated that conditions of distress in Cape Breton had been exaggerated. We take direct responsibility and characterizing this insinuation of the premier's as false and misleading and tending to assist the corporation to beat us in the present wage struggle.

Large sums have been spent in measures calculated to drive us back to the pits at company's conditions.

Now we have offered to protect property on behalf of government which measures would entail far less expenditure than measures adopted heretofore by the provincial government that they interpose on behalf of property of people of this province. We emphastize their intervention is always on behalf of corporation.

COMPANY CLAIM LOSSES.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Montreal, March 20.—In its annual report for the 12 months ended December 31, 1924, the British Empire Steel Corporation makes the poorest showing in its history, total operating income falling short by more than 50 per cent of bond interest requirements. Other charges, such as depreciation, sinking fund, bond discount and preferred dividends paid during the year created a profit and loss deficit of nearly two and a half millions, which completely wipes out the surplus accumulated since organization, and reduced the surplus as at date of organization heretofore carried forward intact, by $1,326,588. The corporation was able to "weather the storm" only by the liquidation of approximately $3,000,000 of its inventories.

CANON SCOTT ATTACKS,

Canadian Press Despatch.

Quebec, March 20.—A letter was sent today by Canon F. G. Scott of Quebec to Premier Armstrong of Nova Scotia in answer to the reply of the premier to the canon's stand on the Cape Breton coal strike, which read in part as follows:

"I regret that I have not been misinformed as to the true state of the case. The very fact that only yesterday the Nova Scotia legislature in which your government holds the majority refused to send money to the relief of the starving people in Cape Breton, leads Canadians inevitably to one of two conclusions, either that your government, like the official in the British Empire Steel Corporation, is relying on the effects of starvation which he so graphically called the 'gaff' to bring the miners to terms; or else the other conclusion, that your government is perfectly willing to play the pusillanimous part of allowing the charitable people of Canada to feed the starving thousands within your door instead of accepting the responsibility of the duty itself.

Bantamweight Championship Changes Hands

Associated Press Despatch.

New York, March 20.—Charley Phil Rosenburg of Brooklyn, N. Y., won the world's bantamweight championship tonight when he outpointed Eddie "Cannonball" Martin, defending champion, in a 15-round match at Madison Square. Newspapermen gave Rosenberg ten out of the fifteen rounds.

Rosenberg fought a well planned fight. Evading Martin's characteristic rushes and keeping away from him, Rosenberg jabbed away at long range, and then when forced in close bobbed Martin's head with a right uppercut that took some of the steam out of Martin, but failed to slow him up.

Drawn down to a fine edge by being forced to make the 118-pound limit, Rosenberg looked weak when he came into the ring, while Martin, a natural bantamweight, looked far too strong for his adversary, but Rosenberg stood up well under the strain, and at the end was going as strong as his opponent.

LONDON MACCABEES ADD TO MEMBERSHIP

Initiation Fee Advanced—Committee Arranging For Progressive Euchre April 2.

London Tent, No. 4, the Maccabees, met on Friday night in the lodge rooms in the A. O. F. hall, 227½ Dundas street, over the Majestic theatre. A number of applications for membership were presented and it was arranged to initiate the newly elected members as soon as possible.

The fee for joining was raised, as it has been felt for some time that the present fee is far too small, and does not cover the cost of the ceremony. The new fee goes into effect on April 1.

The lodge will meet every Thursday night, commencing April 1, in the lodge rooms, and on Thursday, April 2, a social evening will be held. Friends of the order have been invited to attend. Progressive euchre will be the order of the evening with prizes and refreshments. The committee in charge includes: R. Dickie, R. Newcombe, A. A. Tutt, G. C. Ackert, J. McMurray.

McCormick Club Names Manager

ACTION OVER PARK BACKED BY P. U. C.

Move For Improvements at Thames Park Pool Is Heartily Approved.

Action of South London residents in petitioning the council to approve of playgrounds estimates for the improvement of the Thames park and other swimming pools is heartily approved by the public utilities commission.

Pointing out that "it would be a distinct loss to a great many deserving families in the city during the summer if there is a lack of adequate swimming pool equipment," the ratepayers' communication asks the support of the council in maintaining the swimming pools in full accordance with the regulations of the board of health.

The appropriation of $29,500 requested by the utilities commission for the playgrounds department includes the item of $6,000 for the construction of a filter plant and other necessary equipment at Thames park swimming pool made necessary by the new regulations of the Ontario board of health.

"Unless the filter plant is installed," reads a footnote by Manager E. V. Buchanan on the estimate sheet sent to the council, "the pool may have to be closed on the order of the board of health."

Provision is made in the estimates also to the extent of $1,200 for the replacement of dressing rooms for the pool at Birkett's flats, which have been in use for nearly 15 years.

The new regulations referred to consist of an order-in-council approved by Lieut.-Governor Harry Cockshutt on July 9 last and include the clause: "No pool shall be continued in use for which approval of the local board of health has not been obtained in writing under the signature of the medical officer of health and the inspector of such premises."

The installation of what is commonly known as a gutter would have to be made at Thames park to meet the demands of the following section: "The floors of all areas adjacent to the swimming pool, shower and dressing rooms shall be effectively drained and every floor shall be constructed of impervious material."

Certain other sections of the order-in-council relative to the purity of the water render necessary the installation of a filter system and other sanitary equipment and facilities as well.

MEASURES DISCUSSED FOR CONTROL OF PESTS

Fruit and Corn Growers Join Forces at Meeting in Strathroy.

Special to The Advertiser.

Strathroy, March 20.—There was a joint meeting of the Strathroy Fruitgrowers' Association and of the local corngrowers held this afternoon in the town hall. President Dougald Graham was in the chair.

The object of the meeting was the consideration of co-operative methods to control various pests affecting these two crops, especially San Jose scale, scab and the corn borer.

Gordon Crawford of the Dominion entymological service, Ottawa, and H. F. Hudson of the Strathroy laboratory, explained the progress, and estimated damage caused by the corn borer, and the effective measures necessary to control it.

The growers agreed to co-operate in preventive measures.

W. Waddle, fruit inspector of Elgin county, and a large apple grower himself, discussed fully the modern system and practice of pruning and the necessity of spraying to combat scale and scab. Edgar Bogue, inspector for this district, spoke along the same lines.

Tourists Best Advertisement

Woodstock Uses Park To Secure Goodwill of Motorists.

Special to The Advertiser.

Woodstock, March 20.—Woodstock hopes to make up for much of the expense in connection with her park system this year by the word-of-mouth advertising of the hundreds of automobile tourists who are expected to visit the city during the summer months. The question was raised at a meeting of the parks board held tonight whether or not touriste would be charged for the use of the now famous camping facilities at Southside Park, but the unanimous decision of the board was that the high praise broadcast by tourists last year was the best advertising the city ever had, and as a result Southside Park will again be available to motor tourists without charge.

KILLING WITH GERMS NOT CALLED MURDER

Chicago Attorneys Seek Release of Man Held For Death of Son.

Chicago, March 20.—Attorneys for William D. Shepherd, held on an indictment charging him with the killing of his foster son, William Nelson McClintock, orphan millionaire, with typhoid germs, prepared today for a fight to obtain his release on bail at his preliminary hearing tomorrow.

William Scott Stewart, chief of the defence counsel, outlining his arguments, said he would endeavor to show that killing a man by giving him typhoid germs is not murder under Illinois law, which, he said, designates only certain specific methods of killing and does not include administration of disease germs.

State attorneys said they would oppose the defence line of reasoning on the ground that if it were allowed to stand it would permit murder by any means not mentioned in the law.

Meanwhile prosecutors continued searching for a girl, who several days ago called on the widow of Dr. Oscar Olson, brother of Harry Olson, municipal court chief justice, and instigator of the inquiry into McClintock's death. The girl warned Mrs. Olson to leave here, saying "it would not be healthy" if she remained.

FALSE CALL SENT IN BY GARAGE ROBBERS

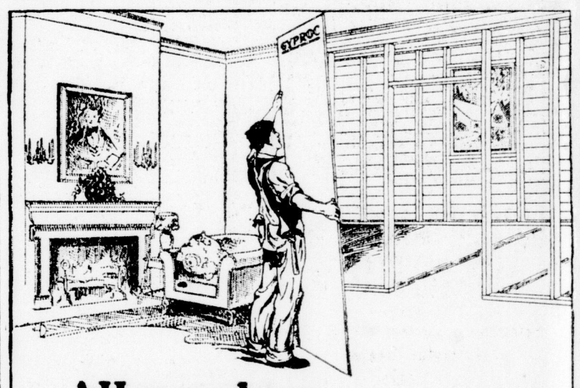

Mechanic Answers Fake Message —Till Rifled in Absence.

Special to The Advertiser.

Chatham, March 20.—A phony message took the night man in charge of the Chester Glenn garage to the city limits, where a motorist was supposed to be in trouble at an early hour on Friday morning, and provided an opportunity for thieves to break and enter the office and scoop up loose change in the till amounting to $21.

Within a couple of hours, two local men were arrested by city police on suspicion and were subsequently remanded to jail pending the outcome of the police investigation. They are Wilfrid Johnson and William Finley.

Late this afternoon, Charles Gates, another local youth, was arrested on suspicion and lodged in the county jail.

A Home where Plaster will never fall

GYPROC for New Construction.

1 It is permanent. Weather changes will not alter it. GYPROC never shrinks, warps or cracks.

2 SAVES LABOR COST. Applied in but a fraction of the time it requires for lathing and plastering.

3 CLEAN APPLICATION. Sawed and nailed like ordinary lumber. Put on by carpenters. No mixing of plaster or messing of floors.

4 DECORATE IMMEDIATELY. When the last nail is driven decorating can start. Takes paint, paper or Alabastine. Eliminates lath stains, cracks, etc.

5 If you build to sell you have the new selling arguments which will clinch the sale. "Fireproof"—"Repair Proof"—"Cool in Summer"—"Warm in Winter"—"Less Coal."

HE is a wise man who insists upon the use of GYPROC for the construction of the walls and ceilings in his new house.

Walls and ceilings of GYPROC are unchanged in appearance and efficiency years after ordinary walls of plaster crack and fall.

Rooms finished with GYPROC never will be "badly in need of repair."

The broad, ceiling-high sheets of fireproof GYPROC are applied by the same workmen who erect your house and your home will be ready for occupancy almost a month earlier than if you used lath and plaster—and the labor costs will be correspondingly lower.

GYPROC makes tight-jointed, smooth, non-warping walls and ceilings that will take any kind of decoration immediately when finished. Insist upon GYPROC—it's different than ordinary wallboard—it is PERMANENT.

GYPROC is unequalled for exterior use to replace sheathing.

WINNIPEG

Canadian Press Despatch.

Winnipeg, March 20.—Overcoming an early break of 8c, the wheat market today maintained its record of erratic fluctuations. The recovery was just as rapid as the sensational decline, and bullish sentiment ruled the pit at the close, which showed May at $1.68⅝, an advance of 2¾c from yesterday. July scored the same advance to finish at $1.65, while October at $1.36 was 1¾c higher. The coarse grain markets were more orderly, but every commodity, in sympathy with wheat showed an upturn in prices.

Throughout the session the market reflected marked nervousness, prices showing a range of about 11c. Liverpool cables came 6¼d lower, and continued weak all day. This factor forced weakness here, and May dropped to $1.57½, which, however, proved to be the low point of the session. Prices later reacted under the influence of an excellent class of buying by export houses, and the onerings became visibly scarce. It was reported that Russia was again in the market for 600,000 tons of wheat and flour.

The weakness in foreign markets was attributed by Liverpool to forced sale of "long" wheat by the Canadian pool. Heavy shipments from Australia and Argentine contributed to the initial bearish sentiment.

Trade was extremely light on all the coarse grains. The greatest activity was shown in oats, while other commodities were neglected.

Excellent demand prevailed for cash wheat, but offerings continued light. The cash coarse grains and flax were dull, with trade volume unusually light.

MONTREAL.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Montreal, March 20. — Despite the weak and discouraging advices from Europe and the absence of any important export business here, a much stronger feeling developed today in the Winnipeg cash wheat market, with prices closing 2¾c higher per bushel. No. 1 northern was quoted at $1.68⅜, No. 2 northern, $1.62⅜, and No. 3 northern $1.58⅜ per bushel, ex-store. The export business in the grain market was exceedingly quiet on account of the fact that there were few fir mbids from foreign buyers. In sympathy with the renewed strength in oats at Winnipeg, local prices for carlots advanced 1c per bushel, but business was quiet, with No. 2 Canadian western quoted at 68c, No. 3 C. W. at 60c, No. 1 feed at 57c and No. 2 feed at 53c per bushel, ex-store.

WEEK'S COLLAPSES LOWEST OF YEAR

Heavy Selling Brings Many New Low Levels on New York Market.

Associated Press Despatch.

New York, March 21.—Stock prices collapsed this week to the lowest level of the year under the weight of heavy selling for both accounts, which was stimulated by the St. Paul Railroad receivership, the severe break in wheat prices, and the inability of operators on the long side to attract a public following at the recent high figures of stocks. The reaction was the most drastic that has taken place since the bull movement started on the day after election, standard industrials and rails selling five to fifteen points below their high quotations for the year, while recessions of 20 to 70 points were noted in some of the volatile specialties. St. Paul securities touched the lowest levels ever recorded, the stocks showing a depreciation of 70 per cent in quoted value from their high levels of the year established early in January.

A sharp increase in the daily average of crude oil production followed by a series of gasoline price reductions brought about rather heavy selling of the oils, but the reaction was only temporary. This group swung upward later under the leadership of the Pan-American issues, buying of which was based, in part, upon the bringing in of a gigantic well in Mexico and reports of progress in the transfer of that company's Mexican properties to Standard Oil of Indiana and other interests.

Rallying tendencies were in evidence towards the end of the week on publication of reassuring statements regarding business conditions by Secretaries Mellon and Hoover and the announcement that freight car loadings were being maintained at record levels.

Coppers sold at the lowest prices of the year in response to the easing of red metal prices, which in turn was reflected in the lower quotations for brass products.

Despite the rather general opinion that the St. Paul's financial problem was an isolated one, and not symptomatic of railroad conditions in the northwest, the stocks of carriers traversing that territory were in free supply on the announcement of a receivership. Some of the eastern dealers also assigned to new low prices for the year in reflection of the slackened demand for bard coal, as a result of the recent warm weather.

More than a hundred individual issues established new low levels for the year during the week, the list including United States Steel common, Baldwin, American Woolen, Anaconda, Sears-Roebuck, Northern Pacific, Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, and Great Northern preferred.

ALDERMEN WILL SIFT ESTIMATES FOR YEAR

Education Proposals Expected To Take Much Attention Next Week.

Several meetings of city aldermen will be held next week to go into the estimates for the year and indications point to long hours of study before paring the preliminary figures.

Education proposals are expected to occupy the greatest attention, as the school board is advocating a $354,000 building program for this year. The technical school proposed addition stands reasonable chance of passing the council, but the new east end high school is expected to have a stormy voyage when the proposal comes up.

Mayor Wenige is not expected back until Monday. He is on a trip to Detroit and border cities.

LUCKLESS MINE OWNER IS GIVEN CITY HELP

Aged Man Had Been Turned Out by Relatives Here.

The city of London this week extended the hand of charity to a man who was once a successful prospector and mine owner in Colorado. Down and out, his hand trembling from age and ague, he got a "hand-out" from the city relief office and was subsequently given a ticket for Windsor, where he hoped to get aid from friends.

Checking up the man's vivid story of poverty through speculation, Relief Inspector R. H. Sanders found that this chap was really related to seevral London people, who had turned him out of their homes when he sought help.

According to the aged applicant, who looked much as if he had seen better days, he had been in Colorado for nearly a half century, and had been very successful until he lost all in speculative ventures. He came to London to get aid from relatives, but was turned down by his kin.

Local Market

The quantity of maple syrup on the local market this morning compelled the farmers to lower their prices from $3 to $2.50, although some still asked the first price. The quality for the most part was excellent, and buyers were anxious to purchase as much as possible. Maple sugar was also o[illegible]d and sold at 10c a cake, or three ca[illegible] for 25c.

With over 200 loads of hay sold on the local market so far this month, dealers are filled to capacity, and hence the demand is extremely slow. None passe dover the weigh scales this morning. The cause for the large supply is said to be due to the fact that very little has been shipped to other countries.

Because nearly twenty loads of oats were offered yesterday, the price has again fallen and is now quoted at $1.60 to $1.65 per cwt, as compared with $1.70 yesterday.

Wheat prices remain unchanged.

Butter and eggs were one of the main factors of trade, the former retailing at 35c per lb and the latter bringing 35c per dozen. If mild weather sets in more eggs will be offered.

A bountiful supply of vegetables were obtainable, carrots bringing 50c to 60c per bushel, turnips 40c to 50c per bushel, cabbages 50c to 80c per dozen, parsnips 75c per bushel, lettuce 80c per dozen bunches, and rhubarb $1.25 per dozen bunches.

Apples were also offered in abundance, all varieties being popular with the buyers. The prevailing price paid was $1 to $2 a bushel, according to quality.

Live hogs for Monday's shipment are quoted at $12.50 to $12.75 per cwt, and dressed hogs will sell at $18.

SELLING PRESSURE IS LIFTED AT N. Y.

Stocks Go Upward On Good Buying and Favorable News.

Associated Press Despatch.

New York, March 20.—Selling pressure was lifted from today's stock market, and prices made substantial recovery from recent low levels. Net gains in the standard rail and industrial issues ran from 1 to 4 points, with even larger advances in some of the high-priced specialties. Business, however, was in considerably reduced volume, total sales falling well below one and one-half million shares.

Bullish sentiment was created by the favorable federal reserve bank statement, the reassurance of Secretaries Mellon and Hoover that business conditions were sound, the continuance of easy money rates and record freight car loadings.

Further activity and strength of the Pan-American Petroleum shares, each of which advanced more than 2 points, was believed to forecast the announcement of the proposed reorganization plan early next week.

The advance in copper shares was accompanied by rumors that a stiffening of red metal prices was impending.

Rails showed a strong undertone, with special strength in the eastern carriers.

United States Cast Iron Pipe closed nearly 9 points higher at 194¾. Nash soared over 10 points to 295½, and then cancelled about half its gain.

Call money renewed at 3½ per cent, and then dropped to 3, where it closed. Time money and commercial paper rates held steady in quiet trading.

Foreign exchange rates fluctuated within narrow and irregular limits. Demand sterling was practically unchanged around $4.77⅝, and French francs ruled slightly higher around 5.18½c. Norwegian kroner advanced 7 points to 15.47c, a new high record for the year.

BONDS TURN UPWARD UNDER EASIER MONEY

Gains in St. Paul Issues Follow Drastic Declines of Week.

Associated Press Despatch.

New York, March 20.—The bond market today shook off recent reactionary tendencies, and prices turned upward under the influence of easier money rates, and a rally in St. Paul railroad obligations. Advances ranging from one to four points were registered by an assortment of the representative rail and industrial issues. Recovery of the St. Paul obligations extended from fractional gains to a jump of 2¾ points in the convertible 4½'s and was prompted to some extent by the belief that many of these issues had been overheld on the drastic reaction which accompanied the receivership.

The ability of the St. Paul bonds to overcome recent selling pressure encouraged a resumption of buying operations in other parts of the rail list.

Reports of progress made in the impending segregation of Pan-American Petroleum properties, with indications that the new companies would expand in both the California and Mexican fields, led to heavy buying of the six per cent. bonds which carried them up four points. Skelly, Sinclair and other oil liens joined in the advance, disregarding unfavorable trade developments. Copper and sugar company bonds also rallied.

A $16,000,000 fifteen-year seven per cent bond issue sold by the Vacuum Oil Company in 1921 may be called for redemption next year, the company indicated today in its annual report.

TORONTO STOCK PRICES FIRMER

Most of Stocks Show More Strength—Smelters Shares Off.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, March 20. — A noticeable firming of prices in the Toronto list today was in direct contrast to the sagging tendency in the two preceding days. Consolidated Smelters shares were an exception to the general trend. Most of the stocks that had shown weakness earlier in the week made small gains. There were no wide price changes in the unlisted oil groups, but this section of the market seemed more buoyant than has been the case recently.

The advance in Atlantic Sugar shares, both common and preferred, was evidently due to a resumption of buying based on active production and the securing of orders for future delivery. B. C. Fishing reached 26 during the day and finished steady at 25½. Cement common gained half point of its recent decline on sales of at 102¼ in a quiet market. A transaction in Canadian General Electric common was the first noticed for some months. This is one of the few non-dividend paying common stocks that are commanding a higher price than the preferred.

The widest price changes in the traction group occurred in the case of Winnipeg Electric common which moved up 1⅛ to 42.

A small lot of Steel of Canada common changed hands at 82½, a net gain of 1½ points, and the closing bid price was 83. The fact that there is a considerable block of Industrial Alcohol overhanging the market is doubtless the reason for the comparatively lower prices that have been ruling during the present year thus far.

Sales for the day totalled 3,509 listed; 1,305 unlisted, and $500 government bonds.

Skating Club Carnival Is Medley of Laughter and Beautiful Skating

Colorful Costumes, Clever Comedy Stunts, Brilliant Skating Exhibitions and Splendid Events by Children Make London Skating Club's Big Night a Wonderful Success.

OVER 2,000 PEOPLE APPLAUD PERFORMERS

Beautiful costumes and a brilliant program of skating marked the carnival last night which brought to a splendid close the active season of the London Skating club. The event, which was held in the arena, attracted nearly 2,000 spectators, every one of whom voted it the most colorful and interesting affair of its kind ever staged in London.

A glittering pageant of fairies and elves, dexterous skaters garbed in bizarre attire, waltzing and figure-skating exhibitions and individual performances by Prof. K. R. Mallen, professional instructor, were outstanding features of the carnival.

Spectacular exhibitions of skating by Miss Doris Belton with K. R. Mallen, Mrs. Charles Ivey with J. G. Boucher, Miss K. White with Lieut.-Col. F. B. Ware, and remarkably finished performances by little Catherine Dickinson and Master Ian Coles were probably the most thrilling events of the night, and drew gasps and applause. Little Catherine Dickinson earned general admiration by her nerve and skill, and with seven-year-old Theresa Purdom, a diminutive fairy, who skated untiringly throughout the program, completely won the hearts of the audience.

Deserve Special Credit.

The lady members of the club who took part in these exhibitions and in the waltzing events, deserve special credit for hard work and courage, because almost all of them have had only a few weeks' training in figure skating.

The club has reason to be proud of its members and its carnival. The program last night dragged somewhat at times by unfortunate delays, evidently through lack of a stage manager, but the crowd did not mind, and it was a minor defect which was more than wiped out by the quality of the performances. Next year it will probably be eliminated.

The carnival opened with a well executed grand march, in which all the skaters, dressed in all manner of gorgeous and colorful costumes, took part. There were pierrots and pierrettes, belles and beaux, toreadors, harem girls, mandarins and sheiks, gliding, turning, winding in and out in perfect time, first in pairs, then in fours, then in eights, then back again in single column which lined the edge of the arena while the children went through similar figures, with little Theresa Purdom bringing up the rear to the delight of everybody.

Splendid Children's Events.

The two children's courts, headed by Ian Coles and Catherine Dickinson, were remarkably well done, and the crowd held its breath while little Miss Dickinson executed difficult back "edges" and pivots in flawless style. A pleasing impromptu event was an additional waltzing exhibition by Miss Dickinson and J. G. Boucher.

The comedy features of the evening were highly amusing and cleverly introduced. Two clowns, a policeman and a very energetic Charlie Chaplin, in the person of Mortimer Hunt, gave continuous humor without being monotonous. The bull fight, in which a ferocious bull, impersonated by two skaters, was finally subdued by toreador and picadors, delighted the crowd, while a mock wedding march and a fake accident featured by discovery of a hidden bottle, also furnished laughter.

The waltzing numbers, in which a dozen couples or more took part, were pleasing features. These, with the single and double exhibitions, produced the real skating of the evening.

Exhibitions Gave Thrills.

The exhibition by Mrs. Ivey and Mr. Boucher was a perfect performance of various dance steps, and was beautiful to watch. Miss White and Col. Ware furnished some equally beautiful dancing and introduced several difficult figures. Miss Belton and Prof. Mallen gave the crowd thrills with some daring jumps, a beautiful butterfly spiral, quick pivots and an aeroplane whirl, as well as dancing numbers.

Apart from these and the junior solos, the thrills of the evening were supplied by Prof. Mallen in two solo exhibitions, one of figure skating and one of eccentric stunts. Mallen's skating and marvellous agility were a revelation to the crowd, and he earned the warmest applause of the night. In his eccentric exhibition, garbed in a black and white skeleton costume he was particularly effective.

Marked By Costumes.

The carnival was marked by the beauty of costumes, ranging through all the colors of the rainbow, and representing practically every nationality. The most striking costumes were perhaps those worn by Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Harris and little Miss Lucy Harris, representing three tall and weird totem poles. Grotesque heads of men and birds, in bright splashes of red and yellow were used on a background of black to achieve the effect. From the long trousers all the way up to the tall peaked hats, the figures were attenuated and presented a most unusual appearance. First prizes were awarded to Mr. and Mrs. Harris for these most original costumes.

Mrs. Charles Ivey, as a Spanish dancer, carried off the prize for best ladies' costume. Orange, green and black silk were used for this graceful costume, which was fashioned with pantaloons, and caught about the waist with a gorgeous sash. Mrs. Ivey wore a silk scarf about her head and carried a tamborine.

The costume of George Ellis was considered the finest among those worn by the men, and was awarded first prize for best costume. He came to the carnival as an Indian prince in a handsome coat of white satin, trimmed with fur and wore a real Indian turban.

Little Miss Theresa Purdom, a wee bit of humanity garbed as a fairy, carried off the little girls' prize for best costume. Her wings were of gauze, silver-starred, while the tiny skirt and bodice of georgette were sparkling with silver and edged with marabou. A crown of silver, circled her small head. In fact, from the tip of her head to the toes of her feet, she was all white and silver, a graceful little sprite.

Master Ian Coles, as a firefly of flaming blue, was awarded the first place in little boys' costume contest. His wings were of yellow and blue gauze, while a small cap of blue fitted down tightly on his head.

A particularly effective costume was the startling black and white Russian skating costume worn by Miss Doris Belton during her figure-skating exhibition. Black velvet throughout, the costume was fashioned with a tight bodice, high at the back, with rippling circular skirt edged with white fur. White fur also finished off the velvet at the throat, while white gauntlets carried out the black and white effect at the end of the long sleeves. A high square-crowned Russian hat, edged with white fur and trimmed with an ornament of brilliants in front, completed the costume.

K. R. Mallen, who skated with her, also wore a black and white Russian costume, with short Russian coat and breaches and Russian hat trimmed with brilliants and a tiny cockade. gcmfwypshrdlu

The Snow Queen.

Among the prettiest costumes of the evening was that worn by little Miss Catherine Dickinson, who, as the Snow Queen, wore a charming wee frock of white, trimmed with white maribou, and carried a large white fox muff. Her butterfly courtiers were four graceful little girls in costumes of pale, green, orchid, yellow and gold, with large gauze wings; Miss Mary Boucher in green, Miss Pat Manuel in yellow, Miss Leila McLennen in orchid and Miss Agnes Garvey in gold.

The most colorful spectacle of the whole evening was the grand march, and for this the skaters came as follows:

Miss Doris Belton, garbed as a Turkish harem lady, in black satin pantaloons and coat, with a striped sash and orange veil; Mrs. Gordon Hunt as Felly, in yellow and black; Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer Hunt, the former coming as Charlie Chaplin, while Mrs. Hunt wore a Russian ballet costume of white, trimmed with white fur and a cap to match; Miss Evelyn Harrison made an attractive sheik in a costume of peacock blue and gold; Mrs. J. A. Macgregor made a charming Spanish lady, wearing a costume of red and black, with a beautiful shawl that came from Budapest; Mrs. Hugh Shuttleworth was a quaint Irish maiden; Miss Doris Auden came as pierette, wearing a costume with a short skirt and trimmed with white ruffles and pomponns and a black hat; Mrs. George Belton, in a beautiful Chinese costume with a Mandarin coat; Miss Margaret Tilley of St. John, N. B., as Felix the cat, in an attractive and unique disguise, and Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Brymner, attractive in very bright Russian peasant costumes.

Indian Dancing Girl.

Miss Gwendolyn Davis came as an East India dancing girl, wearing a full green skirt bound with gold braid, a blue jacket and a green veil, sash and stockings; Miss Florence Fraser, as pierette, in a costume of black, trimmed with white; Major G. G. Moncrieff, of Petrolia, came garbed as a rajah, wearing white trousers with a cerise tunic, white vest, sash and turban, with green plumes; Mr. and Mrs. George Ellis, the former disguised as an Indian prince in a coat of white satin, trimmed with fur and a real Indian turban, while Mrs. Ellis was garbed as a Spanish gypsy, with a black skirt, Roman silk scarf, blue velvet Bolero and bright-colored headgear; Mrs. Ralph Freeman, as a Turkish lady, wearing silver pantaloons and veil with an old rose tunic; Dr. John Hunt in a regal costume of the K. K. K., created with a crimson cape and sash and a white overall; Dr. and Mrs. Ernest Williams, the former in a cleverly conceived costume of white satin and red dragons, representing the red dragon of mah jong, while Mrs. Williams represented night, in a handsome costume of black georgette with silver stars.

Mrs. W. H. Kippen came garbed as an Indian maiden.

Mrs. W. N. Humphries came as pierette; Mrs. Percy Banghart and Mrs. Gordon Thompson came as Spaniards, the former making a fascinating Valentino, while Mrs. Thompson made a charming Spanish lady; Mrs. Richard Ivey was an Indian maiden; Miss Marjory White was an Oriental lady, wearing the baggy Chinese trousers in coat of black and orange; Miss Kitty White wore a graceful skating costume of midnight blue; Mr. H. B. Hunter was a Dutch boy in red and blue, while Miss Mary Campbell came as a Dutch girl, wearing a costume of blue and white; Col. Francis Ware wore a gaily colored Bedouin costume, and Miss Ida Minhinnick and Miss Ina McAuley came as Gabriel and Evangeline, the former wearing black knickers, a navy blue coat and black cocked hat, while the latter wore a prim 18th century Normandy costume created of black and trimmed with white.

Mr. W. D. Smith wore a courtier's costume conceived of purple, and Mr. J. D. K. Black came a pierot, wearing a costume of black trimmed with white; Mr. R. C. Coates and Miss Coates came as pierot and pierette, the former wearing black trimmed with yellow pomponns, while Miss Coates' costume was yellow trimmed with black hearts on streamers; Mr. J. M. Gunn wore an effective Chinese costume; Mr. and Mrs. B. Howard Higgins came as pierot and pierette in costumes of black trimmed with orange; Miss Edna Stephenson and Miss G. Stone were partners, the former coming as pierot, while Miss Stone made a dainty pierette in white trimmed with black; Mr. McClary Moore made a gay pierot in a disguise of gold and black; Miss Minnie Raymond wore an effective Red Riding Hood costume; Mr. Athol McAlpine was a court jester in a disguise of green and black; Mrs. Eric Reid in a pretty Chinese costume of saxe blue and orange, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ivey came as Spanish dancers, in cleverly conceived costumes in shades of orange and green and black.

Original Costumes.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Harris and small daughter, Lucy, wore very original costumes, representing Indian totum poles, and the effects were cleverly conceived from a black background with grotesque figures of heads and animals in bright colors. A charming bit of color was noticed in the costumes of Miss Jeanetta Wilson, Miss Alma Price, Miss Kathleen Wilson and Miss Helen Macarthur, who represented the follies. Their costumes were in colors of red, black and green, made with underskirts in the green and the overskirts were pointed and in the different colors chosen by the young ladies, with the sleeves and ruffs to match. Green stockings and black pomponns completed the costumes.

An Indian Maiden.

Miss Eula White wore the dress of an Indian maiden; Mr. Stuart Gunn was disguised as an Indian chief, wearing an elaborately beaded costume, with a feathered headgear; Mrs. Goodall was also an Indian, wearing a very effective costume, while Mrs. John Wishart represented night, in a lovely dark costume, adorned with silver stars.

The children added a colorful note to the brilliant gathering, and among those who came in costume were Miss Catharine Dickinson, who appeared in a kilty frock; Agnes Garvey as pierette; Dorothy McConnell in the MacKenzie tartan; Amy Cairncross as a jester, in a costume of red and white, with bells on the tips of the points; Leila McClennan was a clown in a disguise of yellow and black; Hilda Ingram made a dainty icicle, and fur was cleverly used on her costume; Mary Spittal was an Indian girl; Mary Ware came as pierette, in a costume of white and black; Lucy Downham was a lady of [illegible] wore the colorful garb of a Hungarian dancer, and Margaret Boucher was a jester.

Jean and Grace Brymner took one back to the days of Louis XIV. with their old-fashioned costumes. Jean was the lady, wearing a yellow underskirt, over which flowered material was gracefully draped, and she wore a powdered wig, as did Grace, who made a courteous gentleman in rose knickers and a flowered coat, with a black hat adorned with a white plume. Betty Fraser was a page in a light blue suit, with a red velvet cape and hat, and Joan Cotton was a little gypsy in a costume of red and yellow.

A number of the boys came in costume too, among whom were Mack Carr-Harris in kilts; Cameron Ware as a highlander; Jack Tillmann was a courtier; Ed Orendorff as Uncle Sam; Edwin Cotton as an Indian, and William Fox as Dick Dead Eye, in a white sailor suit, and Pat Manuel in a black and white pierrette costume.

Prisoner Carries Out His Boast and Nearly Wrecks Town Jail

Special to The Advertiser by Staff Correspondent.

St. Marys, March 20.—The town jail was nearly demolished this morning as the outcome of the arrest of Russell McNamara, a local young man. McNamara, who was held on a charge of being drunk and disorderly, was assessed this morning, $79 and costs, or thirty days in jail for his attempt at wrecking.

He peaceably submitted to arrest at 1 o'clock this morning, but when he was placed in the outer cell of the jail he boasted that he would be out in twenty minutes. The night constable paid no attention to this, but returning fifteen minutes later, was dumbfounded to find his prisoner preparing to walk out. The hootch had apparently imparted marvellous strength, for he had torn down the two steel doors of the inner cells so that if caught he couldn't be locked in again and then hammered the big outer door until he forced it open.

The damage amounted to $50. Arraigned before Magistrate Butcher he pleaded guilty to being drunk and disorderly.

RHEUMATISM
NEVER CAUSED BY URIC ACID.

Furthermore, I claim that Uric Acid is a NATURAL and NECESSARY constituent of the blood—that it is found in the body of every new-born babe—that without it we could not live! Strange statements? Yes—to you perhaps, because you have always been told differently.

But my book, THE INNER MYSTERIES OF RHEUMATISM, just published, tells you the real truth about Rheumatism. Tells what actually DOES cause it and how it is now being successfully treated in all its different forms and stages by entirely new advanced scientific methods.

The writing of this unusual book is the result of my twenty years study, experience and research in this disease, and I want every sufferer of RHEUMATISM, NEURITIS, SCIATICA, LUMBAGO, etc., no matter in what form or how chronic, to read it. Therefore, although valuable, I will gladly send one complete copy only of the book absolutely free if you will send your address or that of any sufferer you may know to H. P. CLEARWATER, Ph.D., 72nd Water street, Hallowell, Maine. A postal card will bring it.—Advt.

OTTAWA GROCERS TO STAND ALOOF

Many Long-Established Firms Will Refuse to Handle Beer.

SOME ALARM FELT

Canadian Press Despatch.

Ottawa, March 20.—The proposal in the amendments to the Ontario temperance act, which will enable the new 4.4 beer to be sold by grocers for delivery to the homes, does not seem to find much support so far as Ottawa is concerned. Old-time grocers of many years' standing and repute say they will not handle it.

So far as the prohibitionists are concerned, they are strongly opposed to it.

BACK TO ANCIENT SYSTEM.
Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, March 20.—Some apprehension is felt by Rev. John Bailey, secretary of the Ontario prohibition union, regarding the proposal of the Ontario government to sell 4.4 beer in grocery stores.

"It's a long, long time—longer than most of us can remember—since the people wiped out the last grocery store license," said Mr. Bailey in an interview today. "Now we are going back to the old conditions."

The government has been inconsistent all the way through. In one breath they say this beer is not intoxicating, and in the next breath they put restrictions on its sale. I am not blaming them for placing the restrictions upon it. The more restrictions they impose the better I shall be pleased. It is better to be inconsistent than to permit promiscuous sale of the new beer.

HOTELMEN DISPLEASED.
Special to The Advertiser.

Stratford, March 20.—Provisions for the sale of 4.4 per cent beer, made in amendments to the Ontario temperance act, find little favor with hotelmen, while among medical practitioners and others affected by the changes opinion is divided.

The general consensus of opinion is that the whole matter has been more or less muddled, and that the sale of beer at tables in itself is rather a hardship on the hotels, as such a practice will evolve much added and unnecessary expense.

There is a difference of opinion locally among medical men regarding the restriction of prescriptions, which call for only 30 a month instead of 50, as formerly.

WILL SELL AT CHATHAM.
Special to The Advertiser.

Chatham, March 20.—Grocers have already commenced to call on License Inspector Matthew Side to make application for permits to sell the new Ontario beer in their stores. The inspector has had to inform them as yet he has no instructions as to the issuing of permits. Applicants included several rural grocers.

HOUSE APPROVES MOVE BY PREMIER

Votes To Send Plans To Defeat Combines To Select Committee.

MAJORITY IS 95

Canadian Press Despatch.

Ottawa, March 20.—The Conservative amendment to the government resolution on the Petersen contract was defeated in the house this morning by 108 votes. The Progressives voted solidly in support of the government, and the Conservatives solidly for the amendment.

The main motion was then carried by a 95 majority, the vote stating, yeas 133; nays 38. Some Progressive and both Labor members joined the Conservatives in opposing the resolution. Mr. King then moved that the resolution be referred to a special committee.

By E. C. BUCHANAN.
Special to The Advertiser by Staff Correspondent.

Ottawa, March 20.—"If the house doesn't carry this resolution, if it refuses to let us send this matter to a committee, honorable members will very soon find that it will be taken elsewhere." Thus Premier Mackenzie King declared the position of the government late tonight, and challenged any attempt to block committee consideration of the government's policy of securing control of Atlantic rates.

The statement was made as a rejoiner to attacks of the Conservative opposition. The prime minister further emphasized the attitude of the government on the ocean freight rates control measure by announcing that as soon as the house had passed the motion to have the house go into committee on the resolution he would move that the resolution itself, in addition to the bill embodying the Petersen contract, be referred to the special committee to be appointed.

This was implementation of the premier's repeated assertions that the government was not asking the house to endorse the Petersen contract until the whole matter had been investigated by the committee. The effect of this action is to more clearly nullify the contention of the opponents of the government that in voting for the motion members were committing themselves to the Petersen contract.

The prime minister stated that he took this course in view of the apparent feeling of some members that support of the motion comitted them to something more than approval of the principle of ocean freight rates control. Mr. King and all those who have spoken for the government have explained since the commencement of the debate that the principle of ocean freight rate control alone was being voted on in the motion to place the government's measure before the special committee.

The Conservative opposition and some of the Progressives have contended that the reference to the committee implied indorsation of the Petersen contract. The prime minister has taken this extra step in order to establish the government's position beyond a question.

The debate tonight was the most stormy of the session. It was largely being taken up with accusations from the Conservative group that the government is guilty of bad faith and of a departure from parliamentary practice and procedure in bringing on a vote on Friday night.

To this Hon. Ernest Lapointe has retorted that the Conservatives when in office have time and again forced a vote by closure, which this present government has never done. Mr. Lapointe also states that he has voted many times on Friday.

It was after midnight when the vote was called, and before that there had been more than an hour of bitter cross-interruptions participated in by Mr. King and Mr. Meighen.

During it, Boys Conservative whip, declared that unless good faith between the parties in the matter of customary arrangements was restored he would resign his position as whip.

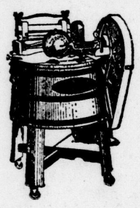

EARL OF YPRES IMPROVES.

London, March 21.—A bulletin issued this morning by the physicians attending the Earl of Ypres, the former Field Marshal French, who under went a severe operation recently, says he passed a fair night. His strength is being maintained, but his condition continues to call for anxiety.

Special Edition of One Printed To Soothe Curzon In Last Hours

Associated Press Despatch

London, March 20.—There is a story behind Marquis Curzon's death this morning that is probably without precedent in British journalism.

For days the statesman has been lying on his sick-bed, fully conscious. Every morning he appealed for his favorite newspaper, and every morning his physicians, fearful of the effect their own published bulletins recording the gravity of his illness might have on their patient, were forced to refuse his request.

Yesterday it was seen he had entered upon the last phase of his heroic struggle with death. The physicians, searching for every possible means to buoy up the dying marquis, appealed to the paper in question.

It is not usual for a great London daily to be willing to halt its presses, but the editors replied that they would issue a special edition of one copy announcing Lord Curzon's recovery.

And so, while Lord Curzon's life was slowly fading, this special "bedside edition" was prepared. But almost at the moment the huge presses had turned out their message of encouragement the end came. The one copy edition was never read by the one for whom it was published.

PARKHILL CHURCH MARKS ST. PATRICK'S BIRTHDAY

Special to The Advertiser.

Parkhill, March 18. — The Sacred Heart Roman Catholic church held a pie social at the town hall last night. St. Patrick was well remembered in the decorations, and the sprig of Shamrock worn by many present.

The crowd played euchre until eleven, when the lunch was served.

The younger people then danced till early morning.
