The Ownership of Labrador.

Winnipeg, Oct. 28.—The contention that Newfoundland can have any claim upon Labrador was disputed to-night by Bram Thompson, Barrister of Regina and Editor of the Canadian Law Times. Mr. Thompson stated that Newfoundland had never been given any rights of ownership to any part of the Labrador, but was "a matter of administrative expediency, given administrative control of the country." He further stated that the whole of Labrador "rightly belongs to Quebec. The question will shortly come before the Privy Council—Public Telegram.

The question to come before the Privy Council is not, "who owns Labrador?" but "what is the location and definition of the boundary as between Canada and Newfoundland in the Labrador Peninsula under the Statutes, Orders-in-Council and Proclamations?" Nobody has ever claimed that Newfoundland had any right to "ownership" in the soil of Labrador, for she has no "ownership" in her own soil, as most lawyers understand that word. The title is in the Crown—the King, and grants and licenses are given in his name by the Governor-in-Council, under Statutes passed by the Legislature by virtue of powers granted by the King, or by Parliament. The Governor of this Colony, with the advice and assistance of the Legislative Council and House of Assembly, has been granted power to make laws "for the peace, welfare and good government of our said Colony" i.e. the Island of Newfoundland and Labrador (as defined in the Royal Charter). The King (whose vice roy is Governor-General) with the advice and consent of the Senate and House of Commons, is empowered by act of the Imperial Parliament, to make laws for "the peace, order and good government of Canada—i.e. the four original provinces, and later additions. Canada no more "owns" itself or the Canadian Labrador than Newfoundland does herself or Newfoundland Labrador—the Crown "owns" all, for the people! We do not know who Mr. Thompson is, but he certainly is not a great constitutional authority, or he would not have broached "ownership" in this connection. The rights of Quebec—on its Eastern border—depend on the authority of a Canadian Statute, and we say that from the height of land eastward, Canada had no right of administration, and, consequently, could grant none to Quebec.

Stolen Goods Recovered.

The various articles of jewelry recently reported as stolen from the house of a Mrs. Walsh, Gower Street, have been found by the police in a meadow off Merryweather Road, familiarly known as "Rabbit Lane." The arrest of the thief will follow shortly. All the larcenies which occurred during the past few months have now been cleared up, thanks to the efficient work of the detective force.

Express Passengers.

The following passengers who were brought to North Arm Bridge by the incoming express from Port aux Basques to-day, will arrive in town tonight in motor cars sent out for them.—Mrs. S. M. Frecker, R. J. Noble, Mrs. E. Janes, Mr. Eversy, Mrs. G. Barbour and daughter, Mr. J. and Mrs. Farrell, J. P. McSweeney, Capt. W. B. Keane, Mrs. P. Howell, Mrs. R. H. Anderson, V. R. Phillips, Mrs. T. E. Tipple, Miss Brise, Mrs. D. Skoana, C. Edmunds. The Kyle is at present at North Sydney and will connect with the West bound express at Port aux Basques to-morrow night.

Fishermen Marooned.

THREE DAYS WITHOUT FOOD. Yesterday forenoon the Deputy Colonial Secretary received a message from Mr. Furneaux, J.P., Kelligrews reporting that 12 men belonging to Fox Trap, who had been fishing, were marooned on Kelly's Island, C.B., without food. The B. I. Steamship Co. were communicating with, and the Marz was ordered to the rescue. The ship has returned to Bell Island and reported there were 12 men there and that they were without food for three days. The men did not however leave the Island by the steamer, as they had to look after their boats and gear. A quantity of food sufficient for a few days was left with them.

stages of destitution because of the failure of the codfishery. It will be just as well to make it clear that the families who are making an appeal to the provincial Government of Quebec are not of Newfoundland extraction nor birth. It is so often accepted abroad that anything relating to Labrador must necessarily mean Newfoundland connection, and hence it is quite possible that column writers in the American and Canadian press may dwell upon this news item and cause it to be inferred that Newfoundlanders are involved, thus making literary capital out of a position which is untenable, and from circumstances that do not exist. The stretch of coast defined as being in a condition of starvation on Canadian Labrador is between Specatica Bay and Bradore Bay, wholly within the jurisdiction of the Province of Quebec. The places named are in approximately 51 degrees 30 minutes North latitude, and between meridians 57 and 58 degrees 20 minutes West longitude, and cover a stretch of coast line of about fifty miles as the crow flies. The indentations and contours of the land will of course increase this distance. The numbers of the destitute are not given in the news message, from Montreal, published in yesterday's dispatches, but it is safe to assume that this is a most thickly populated bit of littoral, otherwise the question of destitution and reports of starvation would not be given such prominence. That similar conditions exist further West of the points named may be accepted as fact, and there can be no doubt but that the failure of the codfishery on the Gulf coast of Canadian Labrador is general this season. Widespread dissemination of news of this nature may not be politic and it is but with an expression of hope that true stories will be told and the tales of starvation and shortage of food not made as being applicable to Newfoundland settlers and livers. Not that we will not have our own difficulties with which to cope later on. And yet it is quite within the bounds that startling descriptions of poverty and destitution prevailing on Newfoundland Labrador will be manufactured out of the news item to which reference has been made above.

Premier's Trying Journey.

SEVEN MILE WALK THROUGH SNOW BANKS. The Prime Minister, Sir Richard Squires, who returned this morning from a tour of Conception Bay and part of Trinity Bay, had some trying experiences during the trip. The object of the tour was to study conditions prevailing in the districts visited, and Sir Richard gave an account of it to the Telegram this morning. The party, which consisted of Sir Richard, Mr. W. H. Cave, and Hon. W. W. Halfyard, left town by motor car at 5.30 p.m. Friday, just as the big storm had commenced. After a brief halt at Holyrood, the party proceeded towards Brigus, despite the fact that the storm had increased in dimensions, and upon reaching that town, decided to go to Harbour Grace for the night. On the Brigus barrens weather conditions were exceedingly bad, but the second city was finally reached shortly before midnight. On Saturday morning the travellers left Hr. Grace and found the road as far as the barrens quite passable. Near the Halfway House, however, a detour had to be made as a large tree was blocking the road. A bank of snow, several hundred yards in length, was met with and a way had to be shored through this, but later several snow banks of an average depth of three feet, which extended along the road for a considerable distance, prevented further progress. The car stalled and snow which got into the magneto caused a considerable delay. In the meantime Mr. Hogan of Carbonear, who was proceeding to Hear's Content, with a horse and carriage had stuck in the same snow bank and had sent for assistance. Another horse arrived and the luggage of the Premier's party was distributed amongst the two carriages and Sir Richard and his companions walked across the barrens, through big snow drifts and under wretched conditions, to Hear's Content, a distance of seven miles. On the return journey many detours had to be made, owing to the destruction caused to the main roads by the storm. Harbour Grace was left behind at 7 a.m. to-day, and the run to town was accomplished in four hours.

CONDITIONS IN TRINITY BAY.

The storm, said Sir Richard, had a most disastrous effect in Trinity Bay and great losses were sustained through havoc wrought amongst fishing flakes, stages, and gear, whilst a large quantity of partly cured fish was also ruined. Launchways and shipways went in the general destruction. At Grate's Cove, particularly, the destruction was enormous. Nearly all the beaches along Conception Bay were completely destroyed, and many of these will have to be rebuilt this year. This also applies to several important bridges. The condition of the people on the South side of Trinity Bay is fairly good except in those places where there was a short catch of fish. In districts so affected some means will be found to alleviate the distress which may result. Labour conditions are naturally difficult by the lack of employment at Bell Island and in the logging camps. Reports from Hants Harbour state that a considerable number of people there will require assistance during the winter. The people of Grate's Cove had done very well with fish, but the ravages of the storm may offset this. In Western Bay, Old Pelican, Broad Cove and Fresh-water conditions are fairly good. Sir Richard told the Telegram in reply to a question concerning the new Railway management, that Mr. Morgan had taken office unconditionally.

Electrocuted in House.

YOUNG MAN INSTANTLY KILLED. John Churchill, son of Mr. Ambrose Churchill, of Prince of Wales Street, was instantly killed at his home last night by the passage of an electric current through his body. His brother, Everett, who attempted to rescue him, received a severe shock. John Churchill, with his brother Everett, was digging out a cellar underneath his house and last night, when he was about to resume his digging he found that a light was necessary. He thereupon made a connection upstairs and lowered the light through the window to the cellar. He came downstairs and grasped the socket of the bulb to put the light through the window to the basement when he received the shock, which caused his death. Sometime during the day, by some person at present unknown, an umbrella frame was thrown across the electric wires on the street, causing them to ground, and forcing a heavy current. When the unfortunate man who was standing on the wet road, grasped the socket he made a complete circuit to the current passing through his body caused his death. Everett Churchill, heard the injured man scream and rushing to his assistance, attempted to sever the cord with a piece of board. He succeeded in doing so, but himself sustained a severe shock. Other people in the neighbourhood received more or less severe shocks during the day, and it was fortunate that none of them were standing on wet ground at the time.

CHURCH BOARD AND PROHIBITION.

The following resolution was passed at a recent meeting of the Official Board of Gower Street Church. "We, the Official Board of Gower Street Methodist Church, hereby voice our dissatisfaction with the way the Prohibition Act has been dealt with since its enactment, and with the increasing disregard with which it is now being treated. "We desire that any defects in that law which make difficult its enforcement be remedied by the Legislature at its session, in accordance with the will of the people as expressed in the 1916 plebiscite, and pledge ourselves to use our influence with our District representatives to secure the same.

The Second Grand Dance Carnival.

The second grand Dance Carnival takes place in the Prince's Rink on Wednesday, November 9th, (to-morrow week), and promises to be even a bigger success than the first, when in spite of the snow blizzard raging all day and night there was an attendance of 1700 people, and many refrained from going in costume both on account of the bad weather and because they were of the opinion that the affair was a new idea that they would not enjoy it, but when they reached the rink and saw the beautiful decorations, heard the C.C.C. Band playing all their best Concert and Dance numbers, and noticed those in costume having a splendid time, they then realized their mistake, and made up their minds that if another such Carnival were held they would not miss it. This opportunity has now arrived, and this Carnival is going to be a wonderful success, because it is expected that there will be at least 500 Masqueraders, the decorations will be more elaborate, the music which has been ordered from New York will be all the latest, the prizes will be just as good as the last, with the exception that on this occasion four will be given, one each to the Lady and Gentleman with the most original costumes, and one each to the Lady and Gentleman with the prettiest costumes. A prize will also be given for the best all round dancer, for which competitors will be decided. You now have but 10 days to get your costume, and don't miss this big event. The prizes will be the same Masqueraders 30c. General admission 20c. on sale at Hutton's and the Numbered Reserved Seats 30c. at The Royal Stationery Store.

The Great Cotton Strike of 1878.

Mention the probability of a strike in the factory districts of Lancashire and the older cotton workers look grave with the remembrance of that time of terror—1878. There was a shortage of cotton and the market was glutted with cloth. The masters wanted to reduce wages; the operatives objected, and the result was a lock-out. The cotton Trades Unions were not so healthy in those days; funds gave out, and in a few weeks thousands of mill hands were starving, and cases of children fainting in school were common. Negotiations were entered into between masters and men, but were unsuccessful, and the masters decided to insist on unconditional surrender. Blackburn was one of the towns most affected. About five thousand men armed themselves with sticks and other weapons, and set forth on an errand of destruction. Their pockets full of stones, they stopped at every mill, and riddled every window. The police were helpless, and the rioters next attacked several residences. The distracted police authorities wired to Preston for military aid. The morning following the Riot Act was read, and the town was full of soldiers, but in spite of all this, some of the mills were wrecked. At Burnley similar scenes were enacted, and the reading of the Riot Act was listened to with contempt. It was as easy to die by the sword as from want of food, said the men. The workers had at last submitted to a reduction. They had fought hard for nine long weeks, but they and their children must have food, and as the only means of obtaining it they gave in. There were those who afterwards wrote of the discreditable acts of the operatives during the strike. When peace was declared on early November day in 1878, it brought relief to thousands of anxious hearts.

Allies Land in Mesopotamia.

On Friday, November 1, 1914, the British and their Allies landed in Mesopotamia to prevent the Turkish Government and Arabs from extending the war over a wider region, and from invading India, and the British are still there for such purpose. Mesopotamia is a name derived from the Greek word "mesos" meaning "in the midst of," and "potamos," "a river," "potamoi," "potamos," "rivers." These are the four rivers mentioned in Genesis II. v. 11-14, of which the Euphrates and Tigris are the chief, and there are two far shorter ones, but all of them unite before flowing into the Persian Gulf. In Genesis ch. II, v. 13, one of these smaller ones is said in our common English Bible to "compass the whole land of Ethiopia," but which is now called Abyssinia, but that is far away south of Egypt. This blunder was made in the reign of James the First, when nothing was known of those countries by the British personally. This arose from the Hebrew name being Cush, but this was one belonging to other countries also, and in this case to the small one on the east side of the Tigris, just where these four rivers united; are about to flow into the Persian Gulf; and that country's name is still "Khusistan."

CHURCH BOARD AND PROHIBITION.

The following resolution was passed at a recent meeting of the Official Board of Gower Street Church. "We, the Official Board of Gower Street Methodist Church, hereby voice our dissatisfaction with the way the Prohibition Act has been dealt with since its enactment, and with the increasing disregard with which it is now being treated. "We desire that any defects in that law which make difficult its enforcement be remedied by the Legislature at its session, in accordance with the will of the people as expressed in the 1916 plebiscite, and pledge ourselves to use our influence with our District representatives to secure the same.

CONDITIONS IN TRINITY BAY.

The storm, said Sir Richard, had a most disastrous effect in Trinity Bay and great losses were sustained through havoc wrought amongst fishing flakes, stages, and gear, whilst a large quantity of partly cured fish was also ruined. Launchways and shipways went in the general destruction. At Grate's Cove, particularly, the destruction was enormous. Nearly all the beaches along Conception Bay were completely destroyed, and many of these will have to be rebuilt this year. This also applies to several important bridges. The condition of the people on the South side of Trinity Bay is fairly good except in those places where there was a short catch of fish. In districts so affected some means will be found to alleviate the distress which may result. Labour conditions are naturally difficult by the lack of employment at Bell Island and in the logging camps. Reports from Hants Harbour state that a considerable number of people there will require assistance during the winter. The people of Grate's Cove had done very well with fish, but the ravages of the storm may offset this. In Western Bay, Old Pelican, Broad Cove and Fresh-water conditions are fairly good. Sir Richard told the Telegram in reply to a question concerning the new Railway management, that Mr. Morgan had taken office unconditionally.

Electrocuted in House.

YOUNG MAN INSTANTLY KILLED. John Churchill, son of Mr. Ambrose Churchill, of Prince of Wales Street, was instantly killed at his home last night by the passage of an electric current through his body. His brother, Everett, who attempted to rescue him, received a severe shock. John Churchill, with his brother Everett, was digging out a cellar underneath his house and last night, when he was about to resume his digging he found that a light was necessary. He thereupon made a connection upstairs and lowered the light through the window to the cellar. He came downstairs and grasped the socket of the bulb to put the light through the window to the basement when he received the shock, which caused his death. Sometime during the day, by some person at present unknown, an umbrella frame was thrown across the electric wires on the street, causing them to ground, and forcing a heavy current. When the unfortunate man who was standing on the wet road, grasped the socket he made a complete circuit to the current passing through his body caused his death. Everett Churchill, heard the injured man scream and rushing to his assistance, attempted to sever the cord with a piece of board. He succeeded in doing so, but himself sustained a severe shock. Other people in the neighbourhood received more or less severe shocks during the day, and it was fortunate that none of them were standing on wet ground at the time.

Capt. Kean Writes On Foreign Shipping.

Dear Sir—I congratulate you on your editorial on Saturday on Foreign Shipping competition as well as your offer to give the columns of your paper to other correspondence. I shall not take up space in telling you that I am in possession of the name of the man who has written the article. I had two sons who can claim the title of ex-soldiers; another son has braved the summer's heat in the market, as well as myself, who have not shown the white feather, and I am sure that your correspondent would not have received due recognition for my service, but do not wish to parade that fact in discussing the merits or demerits of Foreign competition, and had the writer signed his name to that effect, it would have had far more weight than it has now and all the honour that comes to me for being one time an owner of a sailing vessel, an ex-soldier, a charterer of Foreign steamers and a patriotic Newfoundlander, would have been to him just the same.

Let me refer to a statement made in all our papers the other day name of a large shipment of fish left port yesterday when the steamers Hop and Goshua sailed for the Mediterranean taking 43,500 quintals and the S. Goshua due from Scotland on Sunday next will also be loading and will take thirty thousand quintals. Does the writer think that any sane man will believe that flooding our markets with such tremendous quantities will tend to put up the price; if so then let him advise the fishermen in whose interest apparently he is working to the merchants and tell them that as much as they are sending across their fish in large shipments that will go into consumption here and they ought to put up the price and see what answer they will get. There is not a merchant on Water Street to-day but will use that as an argument why they cannot give more than $4.50 for Labrador fish. Now let us consider what he is pleased to call the few that will be benefited by using our local tonnage. I saw one of our papers that the total catch was estimated at one million five hundred thousand quintals; that is so. In my opinion fully seven hundred thousand will be sent away on foreign ships. 700,000 at $1.25 per quintal freight means the sending out of the country $875,000.00 to help build up Foreign countries. That quantity of fish sent out in 4000 qts. would employ 175 vessels taking 100 men each would mean employment for 1000 men (which was never wanted) 1050 men at an average wage of $50.00 per man per month for 100 months will give full and plenty for 100 families and distribute in their homes $250,000.00. Allowing each vessel to spend $1000.00 each in Foreign expenditures would mean there would come back to be spent in trade $700,000, which would mean $420,000.00 a revenue and all of this is what an ex-soldier and charterer of Foreign steamers is pleased to call a few dollars spent in wages and supplies. I confess that to me it is one of the gravest questions that has confronted me for many a day. The writer of yesterday says we ought to consider this question in its broadest sense. I agree with him, but now I would like to explain how it is that Norway, which is a maritime country like ourselves can build up their tonnage with the use of their ships that can take their own exports and imports to the market and come across to this country thousands of miles from their home and take our exports and imports to market, and after advocating this doctrine and flouting before the country that he is a charterer of foreign steamers, he winds up by telling me that he is a patriot. Does he fancy that patriotism is love of one's country? Incidentally he hints of forwarding steamers under the red ensign and a grave is this question for Newfoundland that I draw the line to a British ship. Let me ask ex-soldiers when he called in the great market what country did he have most in view? No doubt he thought of Britain, yet he rejoiced in the fact that Canada, Australia and New Zealand and all the Allied countries, and uppermost and uppermost was Newfoundland. That Cross erected near Gower Street, Church was to commemorate the heroism of Newfoundlanders. A question is never settled until it is settled right, and this question will never be settled right until Newfoundlanders do for Newfoundland what the Norwegians are doing for Norway, namely capturing all their own shipping trade and getting a big slice from foreigners as well. We should imitate their example and prove to the world that we are patriots in deed and not in name. Knowing the writer, as I believe I do, I would be the last to attempt to slight the noble example he played in the last great war, but I would wish to remind him when he couples the fact that he is an ex-soldier and a charterer of foreign steamers that all his comrades were not so fortunate on his return, and if he was placed in the same position as some of his comrades, who fought in the great war with him and are today walking our streets looking for work (instead of being in the exalted position of a charterer of foreign steamers) he may take an entirely different view of the situation. Newfoundland for Newfoundlanders has been used by the politician to capture votes, but it can be used in a broader and truer sense, and at this particular time we should do our best to keep every dollar in the country and so far as possible help one another. My advice to ex-soldiers is to use his great ability and talent in trying to probe deeper in this matter, and when he has given it so much time and attention as I have, then let him use his influence in getting his brother merchants together and work for the common good. Then he will prove to others that he is a patriot and let others give him the praise. Yours truly, A. KEAN. Nov. 1, 1921. Heard's Linctum Believes Neuralgia

Mr. Morine Handles Advocate.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir—I shall be obliged if you will publish the following letter, addressed to the Advocate.
I cannot understand why anybody should be proud of offending an adversary by the glamor of a disorderly crowd, but the Cokerites seem to glory in it.
Nor can I understand why I should feel any sense of shame for being an addressee or for prudently avoiding mob violence, but I am weak enough, if you regard it as weakness, to resent the imputation that I fled in disguise from any foe.
It seems to me, Sir, disgraceful that a newspaper published here, one of the organs of the Government, should evince pleasure in recalling an incident that merely serves to prove its party's intolerance of free speech, and their use of the methods of gangsters.
Yours truly,
ALFRED B. MORINE.
Oct. 31, 1921.

Editor Evening Advocate.
Dear Sir—On several occasions lately, notably on Saturday last, the Advocate, to bring me into public contempt, by ridicule, has published statements to the effect that I fled from Bonavista town, in 1919, disguised in woman's clothes, and under degrading circumstances. I took no notice of the first publication, thinking it too petty, but now that you evidently intend to fasten the story upon me, by repetition, I wish to say that as told it is a maliciously concocted falsehood. I shall sue you for defamation unless you promptly apologize and make reparation, as far as possible, by publishing this letter in the Advocate tomorrow, and if you fail, I shall prove the fact as evidence of express malice. The facts upon which the story is based are these: At a political meeting held in the Orange Hall, Bonavista, at the close of the 1919 general election campaign, our Chairman, Lewis Little (holder of the Carnegie Medal for saving life at sea), my colleagues, Capt. Wm. Winsor and Dr. Forbes, and I, were all prevented from speaking by an organized gang in which employees of the F.P.U. were prominent. It had been my intention to leave for St. John's by train immediately after the meeting, but when the hour for departure arrived, the Police Constable said that the gang which had disturbed the meeting was gathered at the Railway Station, to insult or harm me, and he suggested I should wait a while. Later, he reported that the mob spirit had appeared in the crowd, and he feared a disturbance of the peace, which he, being no police assistance, might not be able to control. It was suggested that I should be driven with horse and carriage to a station on the road to Catalina, and I, wholly undressed, was accordingly driven there by Lewis Little, not the kind of man, one would think, to participate in any cowardly transaction.

You must have a perverted sense of the decency of public life, to be able to see any credit to your friends in the breaking up of the meeting, or in the threatened assault upon me; or any discredit to me, then Attorney General, in prudently avoiding a breach of the peace by a mob. I am sure that the Clergymen and Christian people of Bonavista saw only occasion for regret in circumstances that reflected upon the intelligence and good order of their town, and I am equally sure that when they had time for sober reflection even our disorderly opponents were sorry that they had denied us the right of free speech, and menaced me with bodily harm. It can only cause chagrin henceforth to Bonavista people of the right sort that misconduct excusable only on the ground of partisan excitement should be referred to as though it were something to be proud of, and for their sakes—as well as for your own reputation for decency—I trust you will cease further mention of this matter.
Yours truly,
ALFRED B. MORINE.

Fishermen! Here's the Boot for You—"EXCEL"!

"EXCEL"

The Fishermen's Friend

All fishermen know from experience what happens to ordinary boots when used in fishing. You've seen how salt water seems to take the life out of rubber and how the uppers crack and the soles wear through in a surprisingly short time.

The "EXCEL" is a different and better kind of boot. It has been made especially to stand up under the unusually hard use a fisherman's boot gets.

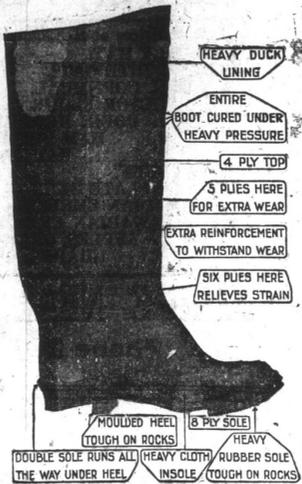

The rubber and fabric in "EXCEL" boots are of the very highest quality. But it is the special method of curing, under tremendous pressure, that makes the "EXCEL" so wear-resisting. The pressure forces the layers of rubber and fabric together so that they are actually "one-piece", without losing the least bit of the life or resiliency of the rubber. Salt water has practically no effect on "EXCEL" boots. The UPPERS remain pliable and weatherproof, and resist the drying-out action of sun, heat and extreme cold far longer than other boots. Consequently they don't crack anywhere near so quickly. The SOLES are almost wear-proof, because they are made like an Auto Tire, with 8 plies of rubber and fabric welded by tremendous pressure into a "fire-tread" sole that rivals an automobile tire for toughness and durability.

strain. There is not a single feature but what has been proved necessary and desirable by tests of severest use. Your own experience will tell you that a boot with these features simply must be a better boot.

Study this picture. Learn these features. Remember them when you compare "EXCEL" boots with ordinary boots. And remember, too, that very important point which the picture cannot show, namely, that "EXCEL" boots are cured under tremendous pressure, which leaves the rubber pliable, weatherproof and wear-resisting. It is only by the use of this tremendous pressure combined with highest quality materials that the best results are obtained.

Pliable Uppers. Weatherproof and Wear Resisting. Tough Tire Tread Soles. Made "All in One Piece."

"EXCEL" Boots are sold by all reliable dealers from Coast to Coast.

The Alcoholic Experience of Patient No. 24.

The Growth of a Bad Habit. I had been accustomed to drinking steadily ever since I left school. I could stand it rarely drank more than a couple of glasses, but I had not before indulged. I had never realized it, my appetite and mental alertness began to flag. It is a peculiarity of alcohol, I'm told, that the faster you drink the stronger does his brain grow that never was so thoroughly with himself and his world. When I received a suggestion from the Chief that I dropped my glass and poured the rest of the whisky into a tumbler in reply to the Chief's remark in lieu of the Chief's remark that was consistent as for me, I was never in better luck. I drank about as much as I could stand. I began to forget things. At first there were black hours, then days. Then there was at last a confused week or so when I did nothing but drink—and then I was walking up the street, penniless, overcoatless, gloveless, with a promise in my head—a promise I could not even remember making. It wasn't a pleasant series of adventures to recall. But my mind did memorably recall it, item by item, day by miserable day.

The Only Cure for Alcoholism.

And the thoughts these memories fostered became pretty desperate. I longed for night, and hoped that I would sleep. I smiled, back at the nurse when she came in from time to time, hung on to the iron bar of the bedside—and waited. There really wasn't anything else to do. December 6. When I wakened on the fourth day of internment in the hospital I was a new man. The physical distress, and the far more unpleasant mental depression of the preceding day, had almost disappeared. My thoughts, which up to now had been concerned exclusively with myself and my symptoms, began to occupy themselves with other things. My meals began to interest me. I was on "number one" diet: fruit, coffee and toast for breakfast, soup and a baked potato at noon, soup and vegetables and pudding at night. The doctor called in the afternoon. He took my pulse and looked me over carefully. "You're doing fine," he said with satisfaction.

"I feel much better than I did," I admitted. I was almost ready to reach for sympathy; I looked at least for a complaint on my endurance of a grievous experience. In this I was disappointed. "You've had a pretty easy time of it," said the doctor. "One of the best features of the treatment is the comparatively painless recovery to normal. And yours wasn't a particularly difficult case. Now that man—" He held up his hand a moment. "Listen!" I heard a low, monotonous moaning from somewhere down the hall, which I had dismissed, half unconsciously, as the moaning of the wind. "That man is suffering! Drug fiend!" said the doctor shortly. December 7. The night nurse came in at six this morning and woke me. I was rather surprised to feel hungry. Yesterday was the last day of the specific treatment I was taking. The remainder of the time, the nurse said, I must just rest and sleep and eat, and not think too hard. A little later the doctor entered my room. His face was calm, but his eyes showed a trace of exasperation. "You don't smoke, do you?" he asked abruptly. "No," I answered. "You've got a lot better chance of keeping away from alcohol than if you did." He thought, frowning, a moment. "We get various kinds of patients here," he said. "There are the chronic alcoholics, the epileptics, the accidental drunkards. Sometimes I feel like putting little sons of wealthy parents in a fourth category, all by themselves. It's odd," he went on, when I said nothing. "Lots of clever business men use more brains in buying a motor car and providing for its proper care than in studying their children scientifically and making certain of their care—or, rather, teaching them to take care of themselves. We get lots of such fellows here, twenty to thirty years old, with the mind of a boy of fifteen and the character of a ten-year-old. And no occupation except loafing gracefully. Naturally they take up cigarettes and alcohol, or any other vice that comes handy. They've got to do something. And just as naturally, when we get them clean and strong, as healthy as when they were born, they go right out and start smoking and drinking again. We can remove in great measure the effects of such habits, but we can't always reach the cause. "This isn't really a cure, then, this treatment?" I said. "The doctor glared at me. "The only cure for alcoholism," he said emphatically, "lies in the brain of the patient. We can eliminate the drug from a man's system in three or four days. We can make the brain function normally, if its tissues are not destroyed, by putting the body in a healthy state where its poisons do not control the mind. That's important. In most cases it's a pre-requisite to a cure. The People Who Need Watching. Furthermore, we can—and do—treat the restored brain psychologically by a common-sense appeal to its owner's intelligence and pride. Our attitude towards a patient while he's here is all directed towards helping up his self-respect and proper self-esteem. We don't weaken him by pity—by making him sorry for himself. We try to give him a new mental angle from which to see himself and his actions. The cure comes when he decides it doesn't pay to drink, determines not to drink, and doesn't drink. If, with our help, his will and judgment aren't equal to this task, he's gone. There is no talisman to take the place of manhood!" "Some people are born with less self-respect and will-power than others." "Of course," said the doctor. "Those are the people who need watching—from childhood on. Deficients, whether from congenital nervous instability, systemic weakness, or a morbid predisposition to fear and worry, fall an easy prey to drugs or alcohol. They are the difficult cases. We can give them a new start—a chance, that is all." December 8. I thought a lot about what the doctor said yesterday. The nurse lent me a novel and a sheet of magazines, but somehow I couldn't get interested in them. The doctor came in late in the afternoon, and as soon as I saw that he was going to stay and visit, I reopened the subject we have been discussing. "I have been thinking of those deficients—the hopeless ones—" "I didn't say hopeless," interrupted the doctor. "You can't call anybody hopeless—unless he's insane. There's just a strong tendency—a strong probability at most—of certain types succumbing." "One-Third of All Illness Alcoholic." "Well, among those types there must be many whose lives, except for this weakness, are worth something to themselves and the race." "Some of the finest achievements mankind boasts have been accomplished by such people. Some of the noblest and most lovable characters I have known have been sufferers from one form or another of nervous instability." "Hello!" he said. "Wasn't you inside?" "Yes," I replied. "Thought I saw you! How long were you in the madhouse?" "Seven days," I said. I suddenly recalled the querulous voice of the drunken boy across the corridor, demanding cigarettes. It was this boy's voice. "I was sent up for a week too," said the youth. "But I fooled them. The governor sentenced me, but I phoned the mater this morning and she turned off the treatment. Lord, what a show! I'll buy a drink, seeing we're fellow sufferers from reform! Come on—what do you say? I know a place!" He grasped my arm cheerfully and I went with him. I don't know why I just went, on impulse. "What'll it be?" said my companion, when we had found the "place." "Soda and milk!" I said. The youth stared at me a moment, then winked at the barmaid. "Make mine a soda and scotch," he said. We lifted our glasses. I sipped my drink and glanced at my companion. I did nothing by word or movement to interfere with his desire. I watched him as he drained his glass. "Have another?" I said. "No," said the youth; "prudence answers no." "Well, good-bye," I said. "Good luck!" "Renewed Craving for Drink." As I walked through the park, planning where I would begin my campaign for employment, was surprised to feel weak and a trifle faint. My knees were rather wobbly and my nerves unstrung. Suddenly I thought of the letter the doctor had given me. I asked a passer-by what time it was. Twenty minutes to three! I tore open the envelope and a cheque for five pounds fluttered out. There was also a note: "Better come down to the office and let me cash your cheque if you haven't had a drink yet. I want to talk to you too. There's a vacant berth I think maybe you would like when you've had a good rest." I laughed foolishly but happily, and folded up the note. It was from the Chief. April 3. It is four months, less about a week, since I wrote the words which precede. In that time I have not touched alcohol. Let me be frank, though—I have wanted to. Wanted to! There have been moments when it seemed as if a drink was the one thing in the world that I must have.

April 3. I left the hospital to-day shortly after noon. I said good-bye to the doctor in his office downstairs. He handed me an envelope as I left. "A friend of yours asked me to give you this," he said. "He wants you to open it an hour after you leave here." I took the note without comment and looked at the office clock. It was one-thirty. Outside, the brightness of the sun made me blink. When I had stood a moment I turned back and looked at the building I had left. It was a commonplace structure, like a thousand others. It was no different from its neighbours to right and left, except that the numbers above the door in the vestibule were different. I looked curiously at those numbers. They were not very and magical now. The door of the hospital opened, and a tall, slim youth, well-dressed and well-featured, with an amiable smile emerged. He stood on the step and immediately lit a cigarette which he carefully extracted from an inner pocket. He inhaled deeply and with apparent relief, then glanced at me. "Hello!" he said. "Wasn't you inside?" "Yes," I replied. "Thought I saw you! How long were you in the madhouse?" "Seven days," I said. I suddenly recalled the querulous voice of the drunken boy across the corridor, demanding cigarettes. It was this boy's voice. "I was sent up for a week too," said the youth. "But I fooled them. Dr. Chase's Ointment.

My first spell of excessive drinking came about through grief and worry, as proximate causes; grief for the loss of my wife, worry over the loss of the little stake I used to call my fortune. The physical results of this crisis were removed by the medical treatment that the Chief paid for. At the same time, along with the medical treatment and as part of the general treatment I was taking, my mind was strengthened and given a push in the right direction by my talks with the doctor. Some false mental valuations were corrected. The narrow shave, as I will call it—when I should probably have given in and began drinking again but for an accident—is over to be accounted for simply by overwork, with a consequent physical craving for relaxation, plus an occasional fear of using alcohol, which fear itself suggested that alcohol was what I wanted. As it turned out, the push my will had acquired, when waked up by the accident I had described, was enough to keep me from drinking. My subsequent talk with the doctor went far toward removing the fear of alcohol because I knew now that when I'm tired or seedy I need rest or medicine—not a drink! I have no temptation now to drink, because I have no fight with drink. I'm not afraid of it.

Headache

Recurring headaches usually come from an exhaustion of the nervous system, and they do not disappear until the vigor of the nerve cells is restored by such up-building treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Temporary relief by use of powders is often obtained at an enormous expense to the nervous system and the general health.

Get the nerves right and the headaches will not return.

Mrs. W. J. Pearce, Nunn St., Cobourg, Ont., writes: "My system became run-down and I suffered greatly with pain in my head. It was so severe that I would have to bind a cloth tightly about my head so that I could get my work done. A friend advised the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and after taking the first box I found quite an improvement in my condition. I continued using them until I had taken about seven boxes, and they strengthened and built up my system splendidly, completely relieving the pain in my head."
