MATCH-MAKING SECRETS.

Interesting Stories of Weddings Brought About by Fate.

If it were not gossip I would write something about match-making, not in general, but in particular, now interesting official circles, writes the Springfield Republican—Washington man. They say official society is made up of gossip. Every body talks it, every body reads it, and every body scolds about it.

When the Chamberlain-Badstott courtship began, it was by the design and deliberate management of other people. Mr. Chamberlain and Miss Badstott met at the Chinese Minister's ball, and took a turn or two, arm-in-arm, about the ball room. It was enough. Their friends at once began the dinners and little maneuvers, at which Mr. Chamberlain and Miss Badstott were invited guests. They were thrown together daily in this way by the people who plotted in making such a "good match."

A hostess gave a luncheon to young women and asked Mr. Chamberlain. He was the only man present among twenty or more ladies. Even the husband of the hostess was not asked. I need hardly say that Mr. Chamberlain's seat at table was next Miss Badstott's. A thousand and one well-planned social affairs favored and urged along the acquaintance to friendship and friendship to courtship. It was all plain as day, and it was all legitimate, but none the less amusing. And now the match-makers are busy again, in the same way, managing a widower and two widows, the three very prominent in official circles.

The gentleman, though not a young man, is a "great catch," the match-makers say, not only on his own account, but because of his high position. The ladies who have just laid aside their mourning—and it was the deepest mourning—were attractive women, one younger than the other—perhaps fifteen years younger. They are not only attractive in personal appearance, but they are women of fascinating manner. They are not rich, but are too comfortably off to make a mercenary marriage. The sentiment of love would hardly control either of them, for that is with their past. But their ambition is for position and the power that goes with it. The only temptation to a second marriage would be to regain their old place and power. The widower and the widows are at all the notable dinners, not the three at the same dinner, but the ladies as alternates. For instance, the gentleman and one of the ladies are guests at a dinner. Then the gentleman and the other lady are guests at another dinner. There is nothing like a dinner to bring out the best of men and women in attractive qualities.

STRANGE COINCIDENCES.

Water Besant's Experience with an Artist and a Lovesick Youth.

Water Besant has a lengthy paper in the Independent on coincidences, with examples from his own experience. Three of them are as follows: The following is an illustration of the coincidence that can not be classed as coincidence starting. The other day I was consulting with an artist about the face and appearance of a character in a novel which he was illustrating. "Do you know," I asked, "such a one?" He had never met the man, but he had never met the woman either.

About this time the bees got a move on them from the hive and by accident or design the queen settled down on one of the branches waving over Uncle Reuben's mule. The rest followed suit, and in two minutes the animal was loaded. She had come to a halt of her own accord and the old man sat with his mouth open and gazed in astonishment. Not for long, however. Some of the bees skimming around on the outside concluded to feel of the old mule and see what she was made of, and about fifty stingers entered her feelings at once she reared up, uttered a terrific snort and started off at break-neck speed. Uncle Jerry was dumped into the road at the first jump, and as he scrambled up and saw the mule on a dead run, with the sticks of wood flying and the wheels shedding spokes at every turn, he raised his hands and shouted: "I take it, as a matter of fact, that I had better get out of here. I'll take it back, Julius! I said back that I'd sell you two dollars an 'a' little 'possum, but now I see it's five hundred dollars an 'a' thousand 'possums, an' I'll add ten per cent. every minute till you're outen sight!"

A HORSE'S MEMORY.

He Remembered the Trick He Had Played Two Years Before.

"Say, friend, you are on my horse," said one gentleman to another as he reined his horse before the door. "Your horse! Oh, not why, I bought this horse two years ago." "You did?" answered the other. "Well, I lost my horse. It was stolen just two years ago." The conversation took place under the shade of an old-time plantation home, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. A planter was surprised to see his horse return home after two years, and ridden by a gentleman who evidently had bought the horse in good faith. After some conversation the old owner of the horse, with much earnestness, said: "Well, sir, if you will dismount, unsaddle the horse, and he doesn't go to the fence, take the bars down, walk to the well, and if he doesn't find water in the buckets let it down the well, and then walk off to his old stable. I will give up, and that horse isn't mine." "At your word, the horse is yours if he does all that," cried the visitor, and leaping from the horse, unsaddled it. What was his astonishment when the horse went straight to the fence, let down the bars, crossed over, went to the well, and finding no water, let the buckets down, and then, as though he had left home yesterday, walked to the old stable. The animal remembered the trick and the owner recovered his horse. There are those living who can attest to the truth of this story, though it happened years ago.

The Latest Petticoat.

The latest petticoat is straight from Paris and is untrimmed. It is simply a well-shaped skirt that looks as if it were made of leopard skin, but it is in reality a broad silk representing the skin of the wild beast. It is pleasantly warm to wear and has a barbaric look delightful to the smart girl who likes to imagine that she can have a sweet-heart brave enough to go out and kill wild animals, the skins of which she may use to keep her pretty self warm. Women to-day are just as fond of thinking that men are brave and capable of manly sports as they used to be sure of it before the dude, the monocle and the absinthe cocktail were in vogue.

The Old Way Much Better.

"Rubbing alcohol on the lips to make them shiverred in all way pretty for awhile," said a leading doctor recently, as a young lady passed him, "but the alcohol hardens the skin and soon leaves the girl with disfigured lips."

"RATTLE HIS BONES."

A Wild, Weird Story Told by a Michigan Baggage-Man.

A Grand Rapids Telegram-Herald reporter was standing in the baggage-room at the depot the other day, observing the great variety of packages that were standing about the room. There was every sort of baggage, from the small hand-satchel to the big commercial packing case, and a long, mysterious-looking chest.

"I suppose, if you only knew it, you sometimes get some very strange baggage?" said he, speaking to one of the baggage-men. "You may have a dead man in some of those big boxes."

"I presume we do occasionally have some baggage we should object to, if we only knew it," he replied. "Once in awhile we get some emigrant baggage that has been for weeks in the storage of a vessel, and we find the favor of it very rich. The smell of some of it would justify a suspicion of all the crimes in the calendar."

"Did you ever discover any thing very peculiar among your packages?" "Well, I should say so. I remember one time, about twelve years ago, when we had a decided sensation here. There was a big square box unloaded from the train, and as it was not immediately called for, it was ordered, to the back part of the room. The box was clumsy and lopsided, much heavier on one side than the other, and the man who grappled with it was possessed of a good deal of energy. When he had rolled it nearly across the room, one of the sides gave way and out rolled a human skull and about a bushel of bones and other debris. It was a mighty tough-looking mess, and the fellow who had been handling it lit out as if he had opened a barrel of rattlesnakes. The police authorities were immediately notified, and upon investigation it was found that besides the human remains the box also contained a tombstone, with the name and age of the deceased, and an epitaph inscribed upon it.

"While all hands were deliberating over the matter, a man came in and claimed the box. He explained that the contents of the box were the remains of a near relative of his, who had died a couple of years before in Pennsylvania, and that now he was transporting them to his home in the northwestern part of the State. For the sake of economy and convenience he had put the whole business in a home-made box.

"The box was speedily repaired, and went on to its final destination."

MULES WENT UP.

The Bees Heard Uncle Reuben and Made His Animal Move.

One spring day, about a mile outside of Decatur, Ala., a hive of bees belonging to Colonel Clark went on a swarm, a matter which should happen to every well-cared-for hive about once in so often. Just at that time, says the New York Sun, Uncle Reuben Slathers, an old colored man, was coming into town with his mule and a "jag" of wood. The road was pretty heavy and the mule very lazy, and to keep his feet off the board Uncle Reuben had stuck several branches into the harness. Coming along toward the Clark place the old man was saying:

"Now, yo' good-tur-seat mow, yo' lift dem hoofs an' walk along er you'll 'lar from me! If yo' halt' de latest dog, I'll leave de church. Why, sah, I'd sell yo' fur two dollars an' one leetle 'possum!"

About this time the bees got a move on them from the hive and by accident or design the queen settled down on one of the branches waving over Uncle Reuben's mule. The rest followed suit, and in two minutes the animal was loaded. She had come to a halt of her own accord and the old man sat with his mouth open and gazed in astonishment. Not for long, however. Some of the bees skimming around on the outside concluded to feel of the old mule and see what she was made of, and about fifty stingers entered her feelings at once she reared up, uttered a terrific snort and started off at break-neck speed. LOCAL AND PROVINCIAL

From the Daily Colonist, July 14.
The will known case of Brule vs. Johnson, arising out of the transference of property by one person to another conditional on the maintenance of the former for life, was argued yesterday before the Supreme Court, Chief Justice Sir Matthew Begbie, and Justices McCreight and Walker.

Mr. Cooper, architect, has completed the plans for the new school at Vancouver, it is expected that the school will be opened in the fall. The school will be a two-story building, with a front entrance, and will be a fine specimen of modern architecture.

William Smith, a bricklayer employed on the new Colonial hotel, was struck on the shoulder by a falling piece of timber yesterday afternoon, and very badly injured. It was at first thought that the bone was broken, but it is now believed that the injury is not so serious.

Mr. R. Herring, C.E., of New York, who is expected this evening to report upon the plans for a sewage system for Victoria, has been in the city for several days, and is expected to leave tomorrow.

Several gentlemen interested in the business, and who have a relative acquaintance of the province in order to ascertain the prospects of this season's supply, report that the number of cattle will this year be about the same as last, they will be much fatter and in consequence heavier.

A patriotic British Columbian, who is well known in the city, has been successful in getting a subscription list opened at once in Victoria for the purpose of purchasing a number of copies of the book, "The History of British Columbia," which is a very interesting and valuable work.

At the Jubilee Hospital, yesterday, William Houghton, a pioneer of 60 years, died of a heart ailment, after a long illness. He was a well-known and respected citizen, and his death is a great loss to the community.
