PANDORA RANGE

A convenience much appreciated by every owner of a Pandora is the towel rod attached to the range. As one-third of the rod is made of emery, it makes a splendid knife sharpener, too. It's always there handy for you. You need waste no time hunting around for the easily misplaced "steel." Bright idea, eh?

*****

An accurate thermomometer is a reliable guide to successful baking, while an inaccurate one is a "cheat" of the worst kind.

Every Pandora thermometer is carefully adjusted and undergoes a practical test by heat—is proven correct before being sent out.

The figures, which show the required degree of heat necessary for the successful baking of bread, cakes, pies, etc., are plainly inscribed in black on a white enamel surface, so that they are easily readable, even when the day is dull.

If your local dealer does not sell the Pandora, write direct for free booklet.

The Church Problem

To Adapt Itself to the Physical Mental and Social Needs of Its People

(Toronto Globe.)

Bishop Potter, of New York, may not always be wise in his methods, but his point of view as regards the function of the church is right and his purpose is commendable.

At Chautauque the other day, in an address on "the church and the social problem," he arraigned the church because of "its indifference to the physical, mental, and social needs of the working people."

It is a righteous arraignment, and one to which the leaders of the church in Canada as well as in the United States would do well to give most earnest heed.

The reason for this indifference to the social problem on the part of the church is not strange or far to seek. For the most part the church is as yet so sorely aware that there is a social problem, or what it means, or that the church is in any degree responsible for its solution.

The horizon of the church is only slowly widening beyond the lines of the individualistic philosophy of life. The creed of the church is almost untouched by the new sociological movements which have completely changed the conditions of life for the average man.

The church has not yet got the range of the democracy, and its message has not yet compassed the problems of the organized life of the enfranchised masses.

And not until the church appreciates more adequately and at first-hand the social situation will it be keen about the physical, mental and social needs of the people.

Had an Awful Time

But Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy Cured Him.

It is with pleasure that I give you this unsolicited testimonial. About a year ago when I had a severe case of cholera I got caught out in a heavy rain and the measles settled in my stomach and bowels. I had an awful time and had it not been for the use of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy I could not have possibly lived but a few hours longer, but thanks to this remedy I am now strong and well. I have written the above through simple gratitude and I shall always speak a word for this remedy.—Sam. H. Gwin, Concord, Ga. For sale by W. A. WARREN, Pharm. B.

AN IMMEDIATE SETTLEMENT OF TELEGRAPHERS STRIKE DEMANDED

Chicago, Aug. 14.—The directors of the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday authorized the president of the Board of Trade to appeal to President Roosevelt to appeal to President Roosevelt towards effecting a settlement of the telegraph strike. President H. H. Sages sent the following telegram to President Roosevelt at Oyster Bay:—

"The business men of this great country, which is suffering such serious loss to the extent of millions of dollars each day on account of the strike between the telegraph companies and the employees demand an immediate settlement of the differences at issue so that a national catastrophe may be avoided. In this great emergency we look to the chief executive of this country to take a personal hand."

CHAMBERLAIN'S COLIC, CHOLERA AND DIARRHOEA REMEDY BETTER THAN THREE DOCTORS.

"Three years ago we had three doctors with our little boy and everything that they could do seemed to be gone. We began using Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and in a few hours he began to improve. Today he is as healthy as a child as parents could wish for."—Mrs. B. J. Johnston, Ixtion, Miss. For sale by W. A. WARREN, Pharm. B.

A Proven Cure For Indigestion

A healthy stomach does two things—1st—gives up enough gastric juice to digest food—and 2nd—churns food, by means of its muscular action, until digestive juice and food are thoroughly mixed. An unhealthy stomach is either too weak to properly churn the food or it does not give up enough gastric juice to make digestion complete. Then you have indigestion—Heartburn—Distress after Eating—Sour Stomach—Headaches—and finally chronic Dyspepsia.

They give you a healthy stomach. "Fruit-a-tives" actually strengthen the muscles of the stomach—increase the power of the churning movement—and also enable the stomach to excrete sufficient gastric juice to completely digest every meal.

Thousands have been cured of Indigestion and Dyspepsia by "Fruit-a-tives" alone.

and Biliousness with which so many Dyspeptics suffer. "Fruit-a-tives" are intensified fruit juices, combined with tonics and antiseptics—and are an infallible cure for all Stomach Troubles. Try them, 50c a box—6 for $2.50. At all dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

MINARD'S LINIMENT CO., LIMITED

Gentlemen,—In June, '98, I had my hand and wrist bitten and badly mangled by a vicious horse. I suffered greatly for several days and the tooth was refused to heal until your agent gave me a bottle of MINARD'S LINIMENT, which I began using. The effect was magical; in five hours the pain had ceased and in two weeks the wounds had completely healed and my hand and arm were as well as ever.

Yours truly,
A. E. ROY,
Carriage Maker.

WHERE THE MONEY GOES.

Money is scarce these days. It does not require the aid of a microscope to discover this. The tightness of the money market has been attributed to many causes, but probably one of the best explanations is to be found in the large amounts invested in the wild-cat schemes of Cobalt. These are hundreds and thousands, who, in order to make fortunes out of the rich silver mines of that district, mortgaged their furniture, life insurance policies and any other collateral they possessed to raise sufficient funds to enable them to buy Cobalt stocks. Millions of dollars have been tied up in these investments, many of which are not only unproductive, but worthless. Loans in Cobalt stock nearly proved the undoing of one Canadian bank, and for a time caused much uneasiness in financial circles. So long as people are ready to invest in wild-cat schemes, we will have more or less of wild-cat money market. Money that should be invested in legitimate industries is placed at the disposal of men whose whole prospectus is made up of wind. Just now considerable space is being given to mining schemes by Maritime Province newspapers, but the man who has a few dollars to spare had better assure himself thoroughly as to the soundness of any scheme before investing his hard earned dollars.—Kings Co. Record.

Miss Mier, of the Travelling Dairy School, who has been visiting her aunt, Mrs. Gifford Potter, returned to her home last week.

OUR SCHOOLS.

In a few days the public schools open up. Everything is swept, garnished and in running order, and all that are eligible are expected. Boys and girls, be there the first day. It's the best day in all the year. Don't miss it, but make the first days enrollment the greatest in the history of the schools.

To make our schools eminently successful there should be the co-operation of teachers, scholars and parents. The first two we have, will the parent now do their duty?

The true purpose of education is to cherish and unfold the seed of immortality already sown within us, to develop to their fullest extent the capacities of every kind with which the God who made us has endowed us.

Education commences at the mother's knee, and every word spoken within the hearing of little children tends towards the formation of character.

LOOK AFTER THE AGED.

Deal gently with the aged that are still among you. The time will come when you will wish you had given a few moments to brighten the declining years of father or mother. It is so easy to become engrossed in the things that belong to your own life and to seek refuge behind the claim that you are too busy. We forget how much little tokens of interest are treasured by those who themselves are not any longer able to do anything for us. The time will come for all of us to go back and sit down, and ours will be the pain of seeing other strong hands do what was once our joy to undertake. May ours not be the greater pain of seeing those we once nurtured and cared for as our own life become cold or indifferent to our happiness, or worse still, impatient with our weakness or childlessness. One of the sweetest things we have seen in many a day was a young woman on a railroad train endeavoring to make her aged mother comfortable and soothing her gray, furrowed head on her bosom. One of the commitments that needs sounding in the ears of the more mature as well as the young, is, "Honor thy father and thy mother."—Home Journal.

TO PUNISH ROCKEFELLER AND HARRIMAN.

Washington, Aug. 12.—John D. Rockefeller and Edward H. Harriman will stand ere long in the criminal dock if Atty.-Gen. Bonaparte can put them there with the conviction that he can land them in the penitentiary.

The attorney-general returned to his desk this morning after his vacation at Lenox. On his way to Washington he had stopped off at Oyster Bay and had discussed with President Roosevelt the question of the criminal prosecution of the men who are at the head of the great corporations, whose defiance of the laws this administration is determined to stop.

It is clear that President Roosevelt and Atty.-Gen. Bonaparte are entirely agreed that the most effective way to make the corporations obey the laws is to punish the head officials by merely assessing fines upon the corporations.

COAL PRODUCTION LAST YEAR.

Statistics compiled for the Geological Survey by Edward W. Parker, show a remarkable increase in the coal mining output of the United States during 1906 over the preceding year.

The production in 1906 was 414,039,581 short tons of 2000 pounds, valued at $512,610,744. In 1905 the output amounted to 392,919,241 tons, valued at $476,756,983. The increase in quantity was 5 per cent, and in value 7 per cent.

West Virginia supplanted Illinois as the State second to Pennsylvania in coal production, attributed chiefly to the almost complete suspension of mining in Illinois during all of April and a part of May, when the miners and operators were in conflict over the wage scale.—Washington Post.

Puzzle Corner

Dear Girls and Boys: In answer to our inquiry of last week, asking if you would like stories and poems, we have received but one reply. We think Marguerite's suggestion is a very good one, but would like to hear from all who are interested before we drop the puzzles. We want to give you what you will like best.

MARGUERITE'S SUGGESTION.
Dear Puzzle Editor:
I read your letter about changing the Puzzle Corner and I thought I would offer a suggestion. I would like it much better to have stories and poems published, and I think it would be nice for the boys and girls to send in their favorite poems to be published. What do you think about it?
Yours truly,
"MARGUERITE."

Dear Puzzle Editor:
Please accept my sincere thanks for the nice book awarded me for sending answers to puzzles. I have always been interested in the Puzzle Corner. I am sending answers to the one given last week.
Gratefully yours,

HIDDEN FLOWERS.

A Floral Love Story.
Fair Margie! a maiden was, sweet
William was her lover,
Their path was twined with bitter-sweet,
It did not run through clover
The lady's tresses raven were, her cheeks a lovely rose,
She wore fine ladies' slippers to warm her small pink toes.
Her poppy was an elder who had made a mist of gold,
An awful ailment plagued to make one's blood run cold.

His temper was like sour grass, his daughter's heart he wrung
With words both fierce and bitter—had an adler's tongue.
The lover's heart was like the flax, of pure Germanic type;
He wore a Dutchman's breeches, he smoked a Dutchman's pipe.
He sent marmalades by the pound and chocolate wintereven.
She painted his forget-me-nots the bluest ever seen.
He couldn't serenade her within the night-hush dark,
For over time he tried it, her father's dog would bark!
And so he set a certain day to meet at four o'clock.

Her face was pale as snowdrops, 'er skin whiter than her frock,
The lover vowed he'd pine and die, if she should say him no,
And then he up and kissed her beneath the mistletoe!
"My love will live forever, my sweet, will you be true?"
Give me a little heart's ease, say only "I love you!"
She faltered that for him alone she'd orange blossoms wear,
Then swooned like simple willow and tore her maiden hair.
For madder than a hornet before then stood her Pop,
Who swore he'd cause the fellow until he made him hot!
Oh, quickly up rose Mary! She cried,
"You'll rue the day
Most cruel father! Haste, my dear, and let us flee away!"
But that inhuman parent so pined his birch rod there
He settled all flirtation between that hapless pair!
The youth a monastery sought, no damned the black monk's hood!
The maid ate poison ivy, and died within a wood!

NOT TO BE HOODWINKED.

A Bishop, accented in an eastern city by a neat but hungry stranger, took the newly one to a hotel and shared a gorgeous dinner with him, yet, having left his episcopal wallet in the pocket of a different episcopal jacket, suddenly faced the embarrassment of not possessing the wherewithal to pay for the entertainment. "Never mind," exclaimed his guest, "I have enjoyed dining with you, and I shall be charmed to shoulder the cost. Permit me." Whereupon the stranger paid for two. This worried the prelate, who insisted, "Just let me call a cab and we'll run up to my hotel, where I shall have the pleasure of reimbursing you."
But the stranger met the suggestion with "See here, old man. You've stuck me for a bully good dinner, but hang if I'm going, so let you stick me for car fare."

THE LAW OF COMPENSATION.

Bridget had been going out a great deal, and her husband, Mike, was displeased. "Bridget, where do ye spend yer toime nights? Ye're out 'N'ry avenin' for two weeks," he said.
"Shut up, Mike! I'm gettin' an education," she answered.
"Ah, phat are ye learnin'?" said her indignant husband.
"Why, to-night we learned about the laws of compensation."
"Compensation," said Michael.
"What's that?"
"Why, I can't explain; but for instance, if the sense of smell is poor, the sense of taste is all the sharper, and if yer are blind, ye can hear all the better."
"Ah, yes," said Mike, thoughtfully. "I see it's like this. For instance, if a man is born wid wan leg shorter than the other, the other is longer."

NEVER SAW THEM COOKED.

A story is told of a new cook, who was helping her mistress to prepare dinner. All went well until the macaroni was brought out. The cook looked with surprise as she beheld the long white sticks. But when they were carefully placed in water she gave a choking gasp.
"Did you say, missus," she said in an awed voice, "that you were going to eat that?"
"Yes, Jane," was the reply, "that is what I am going to do. But you seem surprised. Have you never seen macaroni cooked before?"
"No, ma'am," answered the cook. "I ain't. The last place I was at they always used them things to light the gas with."

DOO ANXIOUS.

A gentleman of Hebraic ancestry possessed a small sailing boat, and being a keen companion to venture upon the ocean for a short sail.
During one of these expeditions a squall suddenly came on, and the proprietor, when attempting to run the course of the craft, was pitched overboard. As he was struggling and fighting with the waves his friend peered out anxiously over the side and ejaculated: "If they, they, old man, if you don't come up for the third time, can I have the boat?"

Many quaint sayings of Lord Young, a famous Scotch lawyer, who has just died, are being recalled by the English press. It was not long ago that, looking across the table at a public dinner at the over-rubricated cheeks and fishy eyes of his opposite neighbor, he inquired who the owner of the vinous countenance might be, and was told he was the president of a water trust. "Ay," said Lord Young, "Well, he looks like a man that could be trusted with any amount of water!"
Some one told Lord Young that the House of Lords had on a recent occasion affirmed a decision of his. "It may be right, after all," was his Lordship's reply.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 14, 1907.

The schools are about re-organizing for the coming season's work. Before the end of this month the majority of the youth of our province will be again enlisted in the service by which they are being trained and equipped for the battle of life.

Why not then, before it is too late, get them into the ranks of the higher service? Why not take them off the streets where they loaf and linger, imbibing impurity, dishonesty and all the catalogue of evils, and give them some food for their minds and occupation for their hands?

As for Bridgetown, no better investment could be made in building for its future than to open that vacant room in the school-house, which its builders wisely planned for, and summon from the highways and byways the neglected class, which more than all others need instruction, and put them in the care of the best instructor that can be found to suit their needs, and then see that they are kept there under mental, physical and moral guidance until they are of suitable age to be released. It is impossible for the teachers in the various grades to do justice to this class, therefore a special room should be provided. This is no Utopian scheme, but simply a sensible and profitable investment of the people's taxes that will return them in the end a hundred fold profit.

14 Miles of Rambler
Roses in Bloom

(Boston Herald)

Fourteen miles of crimson rambler rose bushes are in blossom at Dreamwood, Thomas W. Lawson's farm at Scituate. It is probably the greatest rose show in the world.

The white fences around the estate, the barns, the farmhouses and the dwellings are covered with the crimson flowers that are said to be the best in richness of color and abundance of blossom that have ever been grown on a private estate.

Entering the gateway and looking up the road it seems to the visitor that an army of red roses has invaded the place and decided to patrol all the available highways and besiege the houses. The first building that one sees in getting off the train is the picturesque little office, and behind this is the post office. Both of these are overgrown with the rambler vines, and from every branch flaming clusters of flowers are looking upward and waving, like richly colored plumes, in the breeze from the nearby ocean.

There are nearly 40 roses to each cluster of blossoms, and the number of clusters on one bush can hardly be counted. To view these separately, blossom by blossom, is a delight, but the marvel comes when the eye rests on a stretch of brilliant, vivid crimson that seems, beside its own color, to hold some of the dancing scintillations of the sun's rays. So rich in tone are the petals that the whole scheme of color seems alive and to belong to something living, not to inanimate objects, like flowers.

These are stretches of road at Dreamwood that both dazzle and delight the eye with the unusual blaze of live color.

The rose bushes number 6500 and originally they were placed 16 feet apart. It was Mr. Lawson's idea when he was planning this vast estate, to have at every other fence post along the 14 miles of fence that enclose the grounds a crimson rambler planted. This was done nearly five years ago, but the bushes were stolen almost as fast as they were set out. Mr. Lawson, however, with his usual determination, replaced the stolen ones and kept replacing them until the thieving stopped. Now the bushes are so large that it would be impossible to steal them except with a great deal of manoeuvring—too much to make the thief worth while.

The bushes were started, as Mr. Lawson planned, at every fence post, but they were rambler roses, and true to their name, they rambled. One glorious bush, just above the Dreamwood smithy, has spread along the space occupied by seven fence posts and is evidently not through with its ramblings yet. Its blossoms are just as fine, in spite of their profusion, as those on the smaller bushes.

Never before since the estate was laid out have the roses made such a fine display. Visitors from all over the country are flocking to see this interesting sight, and some eminent floriculturists have thought it worth their while to journey to Dreamwood to study the dazzling array of plants. All are delighted with what they find at the Lawson estate, for, they say, never were crimson rambler roses in such profusion and never were they so rare in color and size.

It is unusual to see so many flowers, all of one color. The dazzling whiteness of the fences, the sun-rouned Dreamwood and the green of the rose leaves form the only contrast to the deep crimson of the thick-lashed blossoms. In some places there is no fence to be seen so thickly have the roses grown up. More plants have been set out this year, and the ones already planted will be larger next season, so that the display in July, 1908, ought to be something to challenge any similar sight in any other part of the world.

At the race track one can get the best view of the display. The mile track that goes around the polo ground is hedged with the bushes and standing in the judges' stand, one looks off over a sea of red. The Highway, as the road is called, that leads to Dreamwood Hall, the home of the Lawson family, is literally a path of roses, and the roadway that goes past the track is a glorious sight, with its banks of roses on either side.

Not only is the ornamental part of the estate decorated, but the working part of the farm, which, in this case, happens to be ornamental, also has its quota of brilliant buds. They twine on either side of the Tollway, which leads to the farming part of the estate, they climb over the smithy and the stables and cover the chicken house, which, by the way, is as aristocratic as its inmates. Each paddock pasture and driveway is ablaze with blooms, and wherever one goes on the farm, he is greeted and led on by the business of the roses. Around the paddocks the colts sometimes chew off the leads and blossoms, but they cannot get any damage, where there are so many of the rich blossoms, and their paddocks are a glow of crimson just the same.

The bushes have been in bloom for over a week, and every day brings them nearer their fulfillment of most profuse beauty, and, unfortunately, nearer their final fading and dying.

FLIES AS DISEASE BEARERS.

The Common House Variety Are a Menace to Health.

The United States Department of Agriculture has started a crusade against the common house fly and is carrying on extensive experiments as to the best way of banishing it from the abodes of man. The fly has been found to be not only a nuisance, but a menace to man's health. Its hairy body carries both disease and death. Many epidemics which sweep over communities in the hot season have been traced to the fly. Having its origin in filth, it brings with it the bacteria which breed in filth. And as it moves about, now crawling over refuse, now over the food on the table, flying from the lips of the sick to the lips of the healthy, it is said to be more dangerous to modern society than were the wild beasts to primitive man.

The high mortality among the children in the congested districts of a city, where families are closely crowded together, where refuse accumulates fast, where food is often kept in living rooms, is due to a large degree, so scientists now say, to the fly. The infant diseases chiefly prevail in the hot season, when the flies abound. Dr. J. T. C. Nash, in the Journal of the Royal Sanitary Institute, giving his experience as an English health officer, says that the fly is responsible for the death of many children because of polluting the milk which they drink.

"It is a matter that has been entirely overlooked," said Dr. C. O. Probst, recently, "but we now know that the common house fly is an agent of importance in carrying the germs of typhoid fever. It was formerly believed that the germs were only carried in water, milk or other liquid food. Flies both breed and feed in places where the germs are to be found, and then, flying into our houses, no doubt often carry the germs and deposit them on our food."

CONGRATULATIONS.

(Boston Post.)

Yesterday's news told about a Kansas bride whose eyesight was destroyed by having rice hurled at her, and of a Michigan groom who was crippled for life in a runaway caused by an old shoe which was meant to hit him, but struck the horse instead.

No other country on earth can beat us when it comes to giving good-bye to newly married couples. We leave nothing undone. In trying to show that we wish our newly-weds good-speed we leave no stone unturned. There is no length to which we will not go in order to manifest our congratulations.

Naturally a bride who has her eyes put out with rice does not see the joke. She will no longer look forward to the joyous married life as she used to. The groom, who starts out upon his matrimonial venture in a wheelchair, did not contemplate doing so before he got married. He didn't know that having a cripple for life was a part of the ceremony. However, this bride and groom should not forget the spirit in which the rice and the shoe were tendered—they should take what they got as it was intended. The wedding guests meant well, you know.

It is our private opinion that there is a large number of young folks who are on the verge of matrimony and who would take the plunge without hesitation were it not for the dread of the gauntlet they must run after they are made one. It is embarrassing for a bride to lose her eyesight just when she is starting in to see if she can't keep down household expenses. It makes a groom blush to get snarled up in a runaway and be brought back in an ambulance with a dislocated vertebra.

PREMATURE BURIAL.

It appears that in England the bury of modern life has extended to the chamber of death, making the period between death and burial so short as to involve a serious danger of embarrassing the living. An association for the prevention of premature burial has been formed. At a meeting of this association statistics were produced by two of the members, purporting to show that one hundred and forty-nine persons were known to have been buried alive, while two hundred and nineteen narrowly escaped the same fate, and ten had been dissected alive. The evidence for these cases is not given, but two medical men, Dr. J. Stenson Hooker and Dr. Brimley James, were at the meeting and seem to have accepted the facts. Nothing more horrible can be imagined. The law governing the giving of death certificates was denounced by Mr. George C. Greenwood, M. P., as scandalous. Our own form of death certificate appears to be defective. It does not give the date of the medical practitioner's last view of the deceased.

BUSINESS MAXIMS.

It is a good maxim to say, "Keep out of debt." But there may be times when to apply that strictly would be the worst thing one could do. It is sometimes just as wise to go in debt and it is, at other times, wise to keep out of it. Many a business has been saved from failure by incurring a judicious indebtedness, and many a man has been able to take advantage of a valuable opportunity in the same way. Still the advice remains good, "Keep out of debt." In other words, avoid debt unless it can bring you some definite advantage.

No business maxim can be applied with the invariableness of the multiplication table. A man who has a good opening before him shouldn't place too much faith in the adage that "A rolling stone gathers no moss." Neither should he leave a good place to follow the maxim, "Sell in the best market," but he should find to his sorrow that "A transplanted tree does not always thrive." Business maxims are all right in their place—a part way of putting the thing, but many of them are only half-truths to begin with.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed it has a running sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever, nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

DANGERS OF GASOLINE.

An explosion attended with loss of life occurred at Toronto a few days ago on a gasoline yacht. An expert in the handling of gasoline told a Toronto "Globe" representative that there is absolutely no danger in the use of gasoline, provided one is careful. Said he: "Gasoline itself will not explode. You may take a saucer of gasoline and drop a lighted match into it, and it will put out the match. It is only when the gas coming off from the gasoline becomes mixed with a certain proportion of air that it will explode. The danger comes only in the confining of the gas, and then on being exposed to a spark it ignites.

"You never hear," he said, "of an automobile gasoline tank exploding from any such cause, for the reason that if a man is careless in filling his tanks and lets the gasoline slop over, or if he has a leaking tank, it runs on the ground, and he leaves it behind. But let it be confined—let it run on the floor of a room or a brick stable that is shut up, and as the gas rises and mixes with the air, a spark fifteen feet away will start it. Or let it run down on the floor of a boat, or—as there is generally some water in the bottom—on the water, it will spread over and being confined the gas of course will ignite when the man starts his engine up. Or if some fellow drops a cigar stub or lighted match, off it goes. A 'snake-and-break' on the engine will explode the gas; or, if the piping is leaky or defective there is the same danger. The whole secret in handling gasoline is to see that the tanks don't leak, and to have a vent so that the gas evaporating from any slop-over has a chance to escape. Carelessness, some where is the explanation of every accident with gasoline."

Just Our Own

Dear Just Our Own Folks:

I want to tell you of a happy thought that came to one of my friends, when she had a lame foot and was unable to keep on her feet to do her housework. She had cutters put on a kitchen chair, and was then able to push herself all over the kitchen. Hoping this hint may benefit some one who may need it,

A FRIEND.

Dear Juanita, Happy Housewife and others—I am pleased to find that my suggestion for a special column of our own has met approval, and I hope our circle will expand from week to week, until the Editor may be induced to give us two columns.

I have used Juanita's recipe for Salmon Scallop and found it a nice dish to add to my summer menu. Our men folks ate with keen relish Happy Housewife's haricot steak one night after a hard day in the hayfield and I can foresee it is going to be a favorite dish in our family.

I am also indebted to some friend for the recipe for oat crispies.

Here is a recipe I want you to try during the blustery days. It has been a favorite of mine since childhood.

1 1/2 cups blueberries.

Try this, Happy Housewife, and I know if there are any little ones in your family they will want mother to make it again.

Did you not all enjoy Lillian Gillis' lovely poem? I hope she will come again, don't you?

Much attention is now being paid to the selection of feeds for our farm animals and but little heed is given to the comparative value of foods for the human family. We quote the following paragraph from Prof. Atwater:

"A quart of milk, three-quarters of a pound of moderately fat beef, six-ounce steak for instance, and five ounces of wheat flour, all contain about the same amount of nutritive material, but we pay different prices for them and they have different values for nutrition. The milk comes the nearest to being a perfect food. It contains all of the necessary ingredients for nourishment, but in the proportions best for ordinary use."

The Pilot's Story

We had grown up together, as it were, Molly and I, our parents being near neighbors, and firm friends as well.
Our parents being such good friends,
it naturally resulted that Molly and I followed their example. We went to school together, played together, and somehow, when Molly was sixteen, and I twenty, we agreed to travel together all our lives, and were happy in that arrangement; in fact, no other would have seemed right or natural,
either to us or to our parents.
From the earliest days of my boy-hood, I had evinced a fondness for the water, haunting the palatial steamboats that floated on the great Mississippi river, on whose banks nestled the city in which we dwelt and, at the period to which I am about to refer, I had just secured a position as pilot on a small freight steamer.
It was not much of a position, to be sure, nor was there much of a salary attached to it, but small as it was, Molly and I declared that we could make it answer for two people.
So, early one bright morning, having obtained a day's leave of absence, Molly and I were married, and stepping into a carriage I had hired for the occasion, we started off, having decided on a day's excursion to a celebrated cave near by, this being all the wedding trip we could allow ourselves.
We had scarcely driven beyond our own street, however, when we were brought to a halt.
"Here is a note to you from the superintendent." Thus it ran:
"Am sorry to have to recall your leave today, but you must immediately go on board the Mobilia, which is ready to start up the river. The pilot is too ill to attend to duty, and you are appointed to take his place for the present."
"Does our wedding trip all smash," said I, as I read the order to Molly.
"Why so?" she asked.
"You see I must go to the pilot
house of the Mobilia."
"Very well," she replied, "we will just go up the river instead of the cave. But on, Bob; let us go down to the wharf in state."
"But you can't go into the pilot house with me, little goose."
"Of course not. But I can sit on the deck outside," laughed Molly,
"and we can look at each other."
"And so it came about that I took possession of the Mobilia's pilot house, my heart glowing with love and gladness, for I was to be with her below me, on the little forward deck, sat my sweet bride, with pride, because the Mobilia was one of the finest "floating palaces" of the Mississippi, and to pilot such a one had for years been the height of my ambition.
The steamer was fitted up with a double cabin, one above the other,
the upper one opening on a small deck reaching out towards the bow, near the centre of which, on a raised platform, was placed the pilot house.
This deck was always occupied by passengers, and this morning it was particularly crowded, for it was heavily laden with people taking advantage of the beautiful weather to make an excursion up the river.
Suddenly a cry broke forth from the cabin behind me. "Fire! Fire! Fire!"
A horrible cry at all times, but most horrible of all when it rings forth in the midst of gay, unsuspecting hundreds, floating in fancied security in the midst of the water.
An instant awe-struck silence succeeded that awful cry, and then three hundred voices of men, women and children united in fearful heart rending shrieks for help.
"Fire! Fire! Fire!"
Aye, there was no mistake about it;
no false alarm. No one could tell how it had commenced, but there it was, creeping along the roof of the upper cabin, with the deadly flames greedily lapping up every awning and curtain they could find in their way, ever and anon darting long tongues of flame down to the floor, to clasp in the light chairs and tables and settees in their fiery embrace.
The people darted down from the blazing upper cabin to the forward deck below, where as yet the foe had made but little headway, and there
our brave captain—who was that rara avis, the right man in the right place—succeeded in partially quelling the panic.
"Keep quiet!" he ordered—"Keep quiet and stay just where you are, or I will not answer for the lives of any of you. The steward will provide every one of you with life preservers;
but there is no reason for any person to get overboard yet awhile. At any rate, unless suicide is desired. Keep dashed open the little door and pushing Molly inside, passed in myself and drew the door close again, thus shutting out the eager flames, whose angry roar pursued us, as we dropped gently down into the shallow water and crept out from beneath the wheel.

Our appearance was hailed with a shout of delight and relief, for all had given us up as lost, and we must have been but for the heaven-inspired thought of the wheel house.
Now that the danger was over, poor little Molly fainter, and no wonder.
But she soon came out all right, and as the people began to find out that the brave little girl, as they called her, was really a bride of only a few hours, and that we were on our wedding trip, there was a regular ovation followed up by deafening cheers.
The island upon which the Mobilia had been beached was low, sandy and unshaded, although not an inviting place for three hundred people, without a particle of shelter, to pass half a day upon, yet, even in this plight, there were few grumblers in our midst.
Before night-fall several small steam boats arrived, and after that but a few hours elapsed before we found ourselves safely at home, and our adventurous wedding trip at an end.
But its results were not ended by any means. The terrible nervous strain I endured, combined with severe burns on my face and hands,
threw me prostrate on a bed of sickness.
Years have gone by since my brave
wife and I had so nearly journeyed out of the world on our wedding trip.
From pilot I have come to be captain and part owner of one of those beautiful floating palaces that used so to excite my envy; but never do I pass without a shaking shoulder the little island where the Mobilia ended her last race.
When I was able to report for duty again, two weeks later, I learned that a noble gift from the Mobilia's grateful passengers—no less a sum than two thousand dollars—lay in the bank awaiting my order.
Not only this, but the steamboat
company had voted me a gold medal and the appointment of pilot of the finest steamer of their line.

"Molly, Molly!" I cried, "for Heaven's sake, go back, go back!
Don't you see how the flames are clearest, my own true wife. Don't un-man me by making me fear for you.
Go down where I can feel that you have a chance for safety."
"Rob Thorpe," she exclaimed, with her eyes looking bravely right into mine, "am I your wife?"
"Surely, surely, thank God," I uttered. "But go, go."
"Your post is here, just as much as yours," she answered firmly, "I will stay here, Rob, and if you die I will die, too. We will make our wedding trip together, my husband, even if it be in the next world. Keep to your duty, and don't mind me. Rob, there is hope for us yet, and if it comes to the worst, why— and a brave, sweet smile crept round her lips—"we are still together, dear love."
I saw it was of no use to urge her
any more.
"Thorpe!" shouted the captain,
"come down. Lower her and yourself over the rail. We'll catch you. You cannot stay there any longer. We are very near the shore, now, and the next we'll take our chances for."
"It was an awful temptation. I knew that did I follow the captain's advice, both Molly and I would be safe, for I was a good swimmer, and I could save her and myself. But then, if I did this, would I not deliberately expose every one of the three hundred souls on board to destruction?—Yes,
the boat might keep her course, during the short space remaining to be passed, merely from rapid impetus of her approach; but again she might not—and then?"
I looked at my wife inquiringly.
"Stick to your post, Rob," she said.
"No, sir," I shouted back. "I shall stick to my post. I shall stay here until I run her on the shore, or the first."

TO HAVE AND TO HOLD.
By Jean Blewett.
O, the friends we find in this good
old world,
Loyal, and loving, and true, and
strong,
That are glad with us when our hearts rejoice,
And staunch and helpful when things
go wrong!
O, the friends we lose in this sad old world,
The friends who whisper a long
good-bye,
And the friends who grant us never a word—
The friends who change and the friends who die!
We each have murmured our broken
plaint;
The vanished hand with its tender touch,
And the old-time glance, and the old-time word—
The faith and the friendship that meant so much!"
Yet the friends we find in this glad
old world—
Friends worth the finding, say what you will,
Who share our sorrows, our hopes,
our joys,
And love us with boldness through
good and ill.

And, soon or late, they all come up
And blossom; also deeds.
