

MYSTERY BACK OF THE M'NAMARA CONFESSION DID BUSINESSMEN BRING ABOUT A COMPROMISE?

Fading Health of James McNamara May Have Been One Reason.

HEAVY GUARD FOR PRISONERS

Counsel Darrow, of Defence, Says James B. McNamara Will Get Life Term.

[Canadian Press.] Los Angeles, Dec. 2.—Startling as was the sudden confession of guilt yesterday on the part of John J. McNamara, secretary and treasurer of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Ironworkers, and his brother, James B., one of causing the Llewellyn Iron works explosion, and the other of the Los Angeles Times disaster that cost 21 lives, more amazing to the people of Los Angeles today was the information that big businessmen had brought about the surrender in a novel way.

Use Golden Rule. That the application of the Golden Rule, and the principle of conciliation, founded on religious convictions, started the ball rolling toward the admission of guilt by the McNamaras, was the theory, supported and confirmed by more than a dozen businessmen who participated in the movement, which today stands out foremost as the reason for the abrupt conclusion of the trial, which was begun nearly two months ago.

But, despite this, a chain of unexplained incidents produced widespread speculation. These include the arrest of Burt H. Franklin, a defence detective, on a charge of bribing a prospective juror, the silence maintained by the prosecution as to the origin of the $4,000 secured at the time of the arrest, the mysterious appearance yesterday at the district attorney's office of Lawrence Sullivan, a detective, and the subsequent withdrawal of the prosecution when it was discovered that Sullivan's visit had become known to outsiders. The idea that a group of businessmen had put their heads together and determined that prolonging the McNamara fight might mean interminable warfare, with ramifications dangerous to the city's welfare, because of the uncertainty that might invest its business interest, is one which gains wide credence, because the prominent people were secretly acquainted with the fact that a concerted movement was on foot to bring about a compromise. The clemency shown to the guilty men, to be the reward for their willingness to yield; for the people at large there was the hope that the warfare would cease and that an era of good feeling would ensue.

Compromise, Says Darrow. Clarence S. Darrow, chief counsel for the McNamaras, reiterated today that the compromise was for all concerned—namely, James B., to get life imprisonment, instead of the death penalty, and John J., a brief prison sentence, while for the accusing side came the victory of the case with its pile of evidence, gathered after long and vigorous investigation.

It was the sequence with which things happened that drew forth most curiosity today. How long did counsel for the defence know of the guilt of the defendants? When was the compromise first broached and what of the bribery charges that were made in the midst of the negotiations for a settlement of the trial? These were the questions that were generally propounded today.

As far as the district attorney's office is concerned the defendants pleaded guilty because they were guilty. That was the explanation of District Attorney Fredericks.

As to what thing induced the defence to yield, he declared, "that is something which they alone can explain."

What Forced Compromise? Many members of the district attorney's staff, however, were of the opinion that the defence had been forced to lay down its arms, as a result, not only of the evidence which was gathered by its men, but of the fact which a conviction in the Franklin bribery case might have upon the chances of the McNamaras. That the Franklin incident forced the acceptance of the compromise by the defendants themselves is still believed in many quarters.

"We had a very strong case, which ever way you look at it," said Assistant District Attorney G. Ray Horton. On the other hand those who participated in the movement to influence the defendants to yield through their counsel, hold that the McNamaras and their attorneys saw the handwriting on the wall, and became convinced that a much better solution for all concerned than a trial could give, would be reached by a mutual agreement at this juncture.

Is James B. Dying? One of the factors which is said to have been one of the reasons for the compromise is said to have been the fact that James B. McNamara was dying.

CHRISTMAS MAILS. Montreal, Dec. 1.—Christmas mails have begun to arrive. The start was made last night, when 194 bags of English mail arrived at the postoffice. These were brought by the White Star steamer St. Louis, at New York, yesterday morning. The number of letters is estimated at 18,000.

MORE ARRESTS CERTAIN IN DYNAMITING CASE, SAYS BURNS

Says He Will Soon Have Kaplan and Schmidt Implicated in the Los Angeles Plot and Declares There Are Several Prominent Men Mixed Up in the Matter.

[Canadian Press.] Chicago, Ill., Dec. 2.—Further arrests in the Los Angeles Times dynamiting case may come at any time, according to Detective William J. Burns, who discussed the case at some length today.

"There are others in this case that are just as guilty as the McNamaras," said Detective Burns. "I do not think the plea of guilt in the case of either man should stop the prosecution of the case, and the search for others implicated in the plot. 'We will soon have Dave Kaplan and M. A. Schmidt, alias 'Smitty,' also wanted in connection with the blowing up of the Times building, and there are a number of others. It would be injurious for me to say how many or of the nature of their position in organized labor, but I will say that there are other prominent men mixed up in this affair, and I expect to keep working until the last one of them has been brought to justice."

WILL NOT CONDONE VIOLENCE SAY MANY LABOR LEADERS

Insist On Severe Punishment For the McNamara Brothers—Their Methods Would Never Be Approved By Organized Labor of Canada, Says Official.

[Canadian Press.] Denver, Dec. 2.—That the McNamaras should be severely punished if really guilty, was the statement made today by John McLennan, president of the Colorado State Federation of Labor. At the same time he expressed his belief that the plea of guilty entered yesterday afternoon by the McNamaras was part of a plot to influence the election next Tuesday in Los Angeles.

"If the men were guilty," said McLennan, "they ought to be severely punished."

San Francisco, Dec. 2.—After he had received from Los Angeles telegraphic confirmation of the McNamara confession and plea, Andrew J. Gallagher, secretary of the San Francisco Labor Council, issued the following statement: "We do not propose to condone violence of any sort on the part of anyone who thinks or pretends that he represents labor. The battles of labor are not going to be fought or won by the use of dynamite or any kindred weapons of anarchy. We sought to defend the accused men and did all in our power to aid them, because they were afflicted with labor, and because we thought them innocent. But we do not seek to go beyond the law in defence of anyone."

Montreal, Dec. 2.—Mr. Gustave French, of Jacques Cartier Typographical Union, and ex-vice-president of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, one of the best-known labor leaders in Eastern Canada, declared today in regard to the McNamara case in Los Angeles, that the organized workers of Canada would never approve of violence in labor disputes.

The workmen of the United States and Canada had contributed to the defence fund of the McNamaras about $75,000. The International Typographical Union alone had sent about $15,000. All the members were taxed 25 cents, which was cheerfully paid. Mr. French said the printers, as well as all other workers, were of the opinion that it was an organized conspiracy against organized labor, and it was the duty of the workmen to defend their cause.

He said he could hardly believe that the McNamara brothers were doing such fiendish work, and the news today astonished local labor men.

LIBERAL MEETING TONIGHT

There will be a meeting of Liberals of London at Hyman Hall tonight to consider the advisability of the nomination of a candidate for the coming provincial elections, and to complete the election of officers for the following year.

CONSIDER WELL WHAT'S WANTED SAYS MR. KING, OF ST. RAILWAY

Manager Tells How the Different Lines in the City Can Be Improved—Double Tracking Is Necessary in Some Sections of London.

The city of London will do well to consider long and well before deciding upon the construction of any particular line with the two miles or less of track due now, is the opinion of Manager C. B. King, of the London street railway.

Mr. King is going into the matter exhaustively, and has prepared sketches of different changes in the system which may be brought about to add to the accommodation in different sections.

It is thought in some quarters that it would be inadvisable to demand all

THE MARQUIS OF WATERFORD DROWNED IN THE CLODAGH

[Canadian Press.] Dublin, Ireland, Dec. 2.—The Marquis of Waterford was found drowned last night in the River Clodagh, near his residence at Carraghmore, in the County of Waterford. He was one of the most prominent among the Irish nobility. Born in 1875 he succeeded to the title in 1895. He was educated at Eton and then served in the Royal Horse Guards, afterwards transferring to the militia and more recently becoming lieutenant colonel of the south of Ireland Yeomanry. He is succeeded by his eldest son the Earl of Tyrone.

Tell It to Santa Claus Through The Advertiser

Old Father Christmas has been forced to add an additional staff of clerks in order to take charge of the letters that have been received from the children of London through The Advertiser. As many of the letters as there was space for are printed today, and with them a batch of the mail that is left for Santa Claus at Toy-town in Smallman & Ingram's.

All those boys and girls who have not yet written are assured that their letters, will be printed in good time, and that they will be forwarded to the good old saint.

Any poor kiddies will be taken care of by kind citizens who have volunteered to act as Santa Claus. But so far there seem to be few of the children Santa forgets in London.

The sooner the letters are received the better, for it takes a long time to forward them to where Santa Claus lives.

Address your letter like this:

SANTA CLAUS, Care THE ADVERTISER, LONDON, ONTARIO.

The first installment of letters is to be found on Page Six of today's edition. Read them!

MANAGER JENNINGS OF DETROIT BADLY INJURED IN ACCIDENT

Suffering From Fracture of the Skull as Result of Automobile Accident in the Mountains of Pennsylvania—Clergyman Who Was With Him Also Badly Injured.

[Canadian Press.] Scranton, Pa., Dec. 2.—Hugh Jennings, manager of the Detroit American League Baseball Club, was seriously, but not fatally, injured in an automobile accident late last night near Goulsboro, Pa., in the Pocono Mountains, 18 miles southeast of Scranton. He was in an unconscious condition for hours.

The Rev. Peter Lynett, of Matamoras, Pa., who was in the automobile along with Mr. and Mrs. David Holden, of Matamoras, Pa., was also seriously injured. Both his legs were broken and his left arm fractured. Both the Holdens, who had but a few hours before been married by Father Lynett, were slightly injured.

How It Happened. Jennings was on a hunting trip in the Pocono Mountains some days ago and his automobile became disabled. He left it at Goulsboro to be repaired and returned there yesterday with Father Lynett to bring the machine to this city. While in Goulsboro Father Lynett married the Holdens, and Jennings invited a group of them to start their honeymoon with an auto trip to Scranton.

It was about 11:30 o'clock when the party approached a small bridge over the Lehigh River, about three miles from Goulsboro. There was a light on the bridge, and the auto started across the structure at only slightly reduced speed. Just as the machine got on the bridge something went wrong, and the auto swerved, crashed into the machine, and the bridge and fell into the rail of the river. There was no water at the place where the machine landed. Jennings and Father Lynett were caught under the machine. People in the neighborhood heard the crash and, summoning help, managed to haul the wrecked auto from the injured men.

Jennings and Father Lynett and the Holdens were removed to a farm house and local physicians gave them prompt attention. All efforts to revive Jennings proved futile until today.

Later Jennings and the priest were brought to a Scranton hospital. The automobile was the one Detroit baseball enthusiasts presented to Married Father Jennings.

LONDON MAY HAVE NEW Y. M. C. A. COSTING WITH EQUIPMENT, $100,000

London is going to have a new Y. M. C. A. building, or at least the present building will be so remodelled that it will be like a new one. And what is more, new baths, new gymnasium, and all other equipment will be installed. Such was the sentiment of the board of directors and the members of the institution when gathered around the table Friday evening on the occasion of the members' annual banquet. And if enthusiasm counts for anything, the new building is as good as here.

It was sprung by the board of directors in a quiet sort of way, but the local physicians gave them prompt attention. All efforts to revive Jennings proved futile until today.

SOUTH LONDON MOTHER FEARS BOY WAS LOST IN THE PACIFIC

Mrs. E. J. Morden Thinks Son Was Drowned in June.

NO EFFORT WAS MADE TO SAVE

Man Giving Name of "J. H. Morgan" Was the Victim of the Tragedy.

Mrs. E. J. Morden, of "Maple Grove," South London, fears that it may have been her son who fell overboard from the schooner Minnie A. Caine in the Pacific last June and was allowed to drown by the captain, it is alleged, without any efforts being made to save him.

The matter came to the attention of the local police, and the story was published in The Advertiser some weeks ago. The man who was drowned is reported to have given his name as J. H. Morgan, but owing to the similarity of the names Mrs. Morden thinks Morgan may have been written by mistake.

She states that very frequently she addressed as Mrs. Morgan. In answer to her inquiries Mrs. Morden has received letters from the Bureau of Navigation, of the Department of Commerce and Labor, at Washington. She is very desirous that some knowing anything about her son should communicate with her at once.

Lived Near St. Catharines. Her son was placed on a farm near St. Catharines, but several years ago he ran away from the farm. His mother last heard of him about two years ago, when he was in Kansas City. He would now only be about 17 or 18 years of age, but his mother states that he was unusually large for his age, and might easily be mistaken for five or six years older. He was always fond of the water, and it would have been quite natural for him to go to sea.

THE FIRE LOSSES FOR DOMINION

Amount for November Over Million, Slight Increase Over Last Year.

LONDON'S LOSS $445,000

Number of Deaths in Conflagration for the Month Was Twenty—Origin of Blazes.

[Canadian Press.] Toronto, Dec. 2.—The Monetary Times estimate of Canada's fire losses during November amounted to $1,568,560, compared with $60,750 for October and $1,487,708 for the corresponding period last year.

The following is an estimate of the November losses: Fires, exceeding $10,000, $1,222,000; small fires, $8,000; fifteen per cent for unreported fires, $196,560; total, $1,568,560.

Three fires in November caused a loss of $100,000 or over in each case. They were at London, where the destruction of a business block cost $485,000; a warehouse at Regina, $160,000, and a building at Victoria, $214,856. Altogether there were twenty-seven fires called large, each of which occasioned a loss of $10,000 or over, totalling $1,222,000.

The presumed causes of fire were: Five upset lamps, three incendiaries, two gasoline explosions, two careless smokers, two over-heated stoves, two defective wiring, and one each of the following—grinder ignited grass, sparks between chimney and wall, waste paper near radiator, crossed electric wires, spontaneous combustion, overturned lantern, overheated pipes, overheated gas stove.

The origin of a large number of fires which occurred during the month were reported as unknown.

The number of deaths from fire last month were 30, as compared with 17 for October and 19 for the corresponding period last year. Unfortunately, the number does not show any signs of diminishing.

The fire losses for the eleven months ending Nov. 30 totalled $19,738,375, compared with $22,148,456 for the same eleven months in 1910, and $17,471,775 for 1909. July this year, as last, showed heavier fire losses than any other month, $5,354,500.

LONDON LABOR MEN ASTOUNDED

Shocked By the Confession of the McNamara Brothers in California.

PAID MONEY INTO FUND

Could Not Believe That Any Person Would Be Guilty of the Awful Crimes Charged.

Intense interest was shown today by London labor men and others in the confession of the McNamara brothers at Los Angeles, that they were guilty of dynamiting the Los Angeles Times building, in which 21 lives were lost, and also in other outrages.

The conspirators are condemned roundly in most quarters, there being no sympathy with such actions. The union men of this city were among those who contributed towards the fund of $19,000 raised for the defence of the accused.

The announcement that they had confessed was a great shock to the majority, who believed in the men's innocence.

"That is a Great Surprise," said Aid James Donnelly, one of the prominent figures in the local labor organization, and their representative in the council, "I could not believe that the men could be guilty of such a crime. It was unthinkable to me, and I think to all the labor men of the city. However, as they are guilty, and as they are guilty, they should pay the penalty."

Wonderful Things in Toytown

Things that amaze the grown-ups as well as amuse the children. Well, well; actually if their aren't crows and grasshoppers, the biggest I ever saw, walking about, and cowboys riding red wild bucking bronchos, cats and mice, taxi cabs with lights, and street cars running about. You must keep your eyes open to avoid being run down or jolted about by the Toytown merry dancers. "What did you see in Toytown?" a boy was asked after his visit the other day. "OH, EVERYTHING," was the reply, and that is about as near as you can get to it-EVERYTHING.

SALE OF UNDERWEAR TODAY.

BOYS, 39c; MEN'S, 69c.

With all, except the Children, the next three weeks will seem but days. So much to do-so little time. Of course, from the children's standpoint the next three weeks look like years, and they are now wondering if Christmas will really ever come. Not so with the grown-ups, who, on the other hand, would prefer to stop the hands of time and hold the calendar back at least a month.

Christmas shopping will begin in earnest next week. Wise shoppers will begin early, as the wisdom of so doing has been more clearly demonstrated already this season than any previous year, even nearer Christmas.

Shop early in the day, and as early in the afternoon and Saturday crowd; your shopping will be better, easier and more pleasantly done. Kindly carry as many small packages as possible from now until Christmas.

DON'T FORGET POOR FATHER

POSSIBLE PRESENTS FOR THE MASCULINE HEAD OF THE HOUSE

Practicality and utility are the first considerations in making a gift for father. The articles illustrated are simple and inexpensive, being made from odds and ends from the piece-bag.

The handy box is made of cardboard covered with denim partitions being made for articles to meet many emergencies. The box contains baggage tags, trunk labels, checks, key tags, gummed labels, thumb tacks, adhesive tape, rubber bands, tube of paste and twine.

This is only a suggestion for contents, which may be bought at stationers.

The box is 7 by 7 by 2 1/2 inches. A shoe box would make an excellent foundation. Cover with denim or a strong wall paper, leaving enough to turn in an inch at top and bottom. Paste denim or paper over the rough edges to finish bottom.

Make the partitions fit the contents, keeping the sections together by pasting over each joint. Cover edges with strips of paper or material.

Use the same material on the cover, which is fastened in place by a two-inch strip of denim, one-half inch wide, which is cut along the rest along the edge of box. Finish inside of cover by pasting plain paper over raw edges.

The calendar and pad combined is a useful desk adjunct. The calendar card slips out at the top, to change each month. A strip at the side holds a pen or pencil. A pad is fastened on top of the slanting box made for the purpose.

The material is cretonne, the foundation cardboard. The cut is 10 cents for calendar, 5 for the pad and 5 for pencil.

The pad rest is 7 inches long, 4 1/2 inches wide, and 3/4-inch high at front and 1 1/4 inches high at back. The frame for the calendar is 4 by 5 1/4 inches.

Make the box of cardboard, fastened together with strips of strong paper. Cover with cretonne and paste the pad in the middle.

The shaving pad is a heart of 8 1/2 inches wide and 7 1/2 inches through the middle. Cut out four hearts. Cover one with linen or burlap, on which paste or sew three small bluebirds cut from blue satin, silk or linen. The lower bird carries a card of white material on which is outlined a pocket with French for "Good-day."

Cover a second heart and overhand the two together. Cover the other two and overhand together for the back. Place tissue paper cut heart-shaped between. Hang by blue tape.

The tobacco pouch is made of silk from the ends of a discarded necktie. An oblong piece of silk is cut seven inches long, and five and three-fourths wide through the middle, the sides sloping as shown. Turn in the edges and fasten it to a piece of rubber, which may be purchased at the drug store. Cut out two pieces of silk, and two of rubber, the shape of the flap shown. Fasten a silk and rubber piece together and put on each end of nose clip. If your nose is fat, and the other side filled one into, making a compact case.

The eyeglass polisher is kid from the wristlet of an old glove. Transfer the kid to the center of the wristlet and mark the outline with black darning cotton in outline stitch. Cut the kid slightly larger, making the thickness in all, and fasten together at the tip. The ribbon is put through the outside only.

A MODERN TYPE OF LADY.
[Cornelia A. P. Connor in the Atlantic.]
They are usually of a willful fairness, with flesh kept firm by the massage; their brows are lowering, and there is the perpetual hint of hardness in their faces; their apparel is exceedingly good, but their manners are ungente, their voices harsh and discontented; there is no light in their eyes.

The Canadian Pacific steamer, Lake Manitoba, originally intended to sail from West St. John to Liverpool on Dec. 9, and later changed to sail on Dec. 14, has now been cancelled. The steamer Scotlan has been chartered to sail from Halifax on Dec. 9. I QUICKLY CURED MY SUPERFLUOUS HAIR

You May Cure Yours Too by a Simple Remedy Learned From the Japanese.

I will Give the Benefit of My Experience to Anyone Free of Charge.

Ever since I was a little girl, I was cursed with a growth of superfluous hair. I did not know what it was until when I grew to young womanhood, the humiliation grew upon me until I became a laughing stock. I finally got to the point where I was ashamed to go out of the house, and the coming of a stranger, wanted to run and hide my face. The thing preyed on my mind until there were times when my spirits were at their lowest ebb, and I often thought of a burden.

I tried every sort of powder, paste, cream, lotion and remedy that I could buy, but to no avail. The hair not only would not leave, but it grew worse. What I suffered under the need I can't describe.

One day a friend, who had travelled much, recommended a simple little remedy learned from the Japanese. It removed the hair at once and without pain, and in a few days I was the beautiful girl in America. The hair had disappeared. It left no scar, and it didn't hurt at all. Today my face is still free from any trace of it.

I am so happy at my own success that I want every other woman to have the chance to remove the ugly, disgusting hair from her neck and arms so clean, free from embarrassment, able to wear short sleeves, and go without a veil. All who want to destroy their faces as I did may secure full particulars from actual posters for reply in plain sealed envelope. ## THE WOMAN WHO SLUMPS

[By Cynthia Grey.]

There are so many women nowadays whose interest in life seems to have ended to all appearances they have no object in living. These women perhaps have been beautiful in face, figure and spirit; they have borne families and brought them up to an age where their talents or attractions have taken them into a world of marriages, business, or society of their own.

It is at this period that a woman's interest for herself should begin. If she has done her duty as a wife and mother, her family is now self-reliant, and she should look to herself. Her duty is done, her best has been given to home and children. Now she really can live her own life at its best, with or without the loving protection of a husband. Of course, if the woman has a husband she still has duties in a way, and her heart must still be in the interest in life. The woman who does this tacitly admits that man and man's admiration only inspire for her a charming toilet or a seductive smile.

LIFE THE INCENTIVE. The animal sits in the sun or sleeps on the hearth and awaits bidding to move. Don't degenerate to the level of the animal. We are given the privilege of making necessity a choice. This honor is conferred upon us by the Creator. Do not insult him by neglecting his handiwork.

Feet are given to us to walk with in God's great out of doors, where we can breathe the pure air of his heaven. Our eyes must see all his handiwork that opens before them, our hands must not cease to do wonders, because our children cease to ask, and our hearts must still be in the interest in life. The woman who does this tacitly admits that man and man's admiration only inspire for her a charming toilet or a seductive smile.

WAYSIDE GLEANINGS
By M. E. G.

[By M. E. G.]

One of the pleasures of girlhood days was the reading of "Little Women" by Louisa M. Alcott. Do you remember the funny preparations of the four "little women," on the night before Lawrence's picnic, and how Amy, the important young lady with the "un-Grecian nose," sought to improve that member by adorning it with a clothes pin? Doubtless when Louisa Alcott wrote that story the little thought that the day would come when the clothes pin would be used as a corrector of that feature by some of the "little women" of the present day.

Mrs. Lina Cavalleri, said to be one of the most beautiful women living, writes an interesting article on the use of the nose clip. If your nose is fat, and you are still young, it seems wonders can be performed. Many drug stores sell metal clamps of various sizes and shapes, but some specialists prefer to use an ordinary wooden clothes peg. In either case the nose should be well rubbed with cold cream, and the metal clamps or peg should be worn for a few days. If it is the bridge that is unsatisfactory, of course it is worn higher up. Do you think if we all adopt this habit, the women of our day will be come famous for their classical "proboscis"?

King's Parakeet Canning.

The suffragist movement has spread slowly but surely over the continent of Europe; has crossed the broad Atlantic, and has now reached our shores, now knocking at our own doors. The outcome is, as yet, only a matter of surmise, but there is no doubt but that much will be accomplished. I can hear Mrs. Pankhurst when she comes here in January to expound her views on the "rights" of women.

In the face of this, it is interesting to turn to John Ruskin and read what he has to say about women's place in the world and in the home, as written in "Queen's Gardens," a chapter from his well known book, "Sesame and Lilies." There are a few extracts: "We hear of the 'mission' and of the 'rights' of woman, as if these could ever be separated from the mission and the rights of man; as if she and her lord were creatures of independent kind. We are foolish and without excuse foolish, in speaking of the 'superiority' of one sex to the other, as if they could be compared in similar things. Each has what the other lacks; and each complements the other, as is completed by the other."

"This is the true nature of home—it is the place of peace; the shelter, not only from all injury, but from all error, doubt and division. In so far as it is not this, it is not home."

And wherever a true wife comes, peace is always round her."

"This then, I believe, to be—will you not admit it to be—the woman's true place and power?"

Cynthia Grey's Correspondence

A Wedding Query.

Dear Miss Grey: I should the bride and groom wear gloves at their wedding, or would it be all right not to wear them? 2. Suggest something for a simple noon luncheon at a home wedding.—G. J. Z.

A.—If it is a quiet home wedding, and only the members of the family present, gloves are not necessary. 3. Fruit for first course. Dainty meat croquettes or patties, with creamed potatoes, coffee and crisp biscuits for the second course. An ice and cakes of salt wafers for the last one.

Don't Be in a Hurry.

Dear Miss Grey: For some time I have been corresponding with a young man of whom I think a great deal. But he does not answer my letters very promptly, saying that he is very busy. I know his business does not keep him closely confined. Should I answer his letters as soon as I receive them or wait the same length of time he does?

A.—Don't be in too great a hurry in answering his letter. No matter how busy he is, if he were greatly interested in you, he would answer your letters promptly.

Up-to-date Coiffures.

The two strongest features in new fashions for dressing the hair are the Psyche knot and the fringe. At present fringes are merely little love-locks across the forehead and make an attractive finish to loosely waved tresses that are brought back from the face, slightly puffed at the sides, to convey an impression of abundant locks, and twisted into a Psyche knot at the back of the head.

One of the pleasing features of this revival of a classic style of coiffure is the fact that the knot may be worn high or low upon the head. A woman must study the position that proves most becoming to her face and arrange her knot accordingly.

Fur Popular.

Fur will be used for nearly every purpose of dress this winter. Fur trimming will be used on the daintiest of tulle and lace, as well as on valuing costumes and velvet coats. And every kind of fur will be utilized—mole skin, baby lamb, ermine, skunk, fish and fox. Mole skin promises to be very popular as a trimming, and skunk will be much used as collars, bands, etc., on the chic winter velvet suits. Fitch fur, which has long been demanded, also will be much used as a trimming this winter.

PAPER BAG COOKERY

Pudding a la Mayence.

Rub half a pint of bread crumbs through a fine wire sieve, add a tumblerful of any wine and water, the grated rind of a small lemon, first washed and dried, three heaped-up tablespoonsful of sifted sugar, and one tablespoonful of butter. Mix all together, and then pour the mixture into a buttered soufflé dish. Add the beaten yolks of two eggs and the juice of a small lemon carefully strained, and mix all together with a stiff froth, with a pinch of salt and sifted sugar to taste; color to a pale green with a few drops of spinach greening, and serve with a little cream sauce.

The quicker a cold is gotten rid of the less the danger from pneumonia, and other serious diseases. Mr. B. W. L. Hall, of Waverly, Va., says: "I firmly believe Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to be absolutely the best preparation on the market for colds. I have recommended it to my friends and they all agree with me." For sale by all dealers.

The PRODIGAL JUDGE

The Famous Novel by VAUGHAN KESTER.

Copyright, 1911, The Bobbs-Merrill Company

Hicks, the Belle Plain over-seer, pushed his way to Murrell's side.

"Here, John Murrell, ain't you goin' to show us a trick or two?" he inquired.

Murrell turned quickly with a sense of relief.

"If you can spare me your rifle," he said, "but his face wore a bleak look. Glancing at Betty, he took up his station with the other contestants, whereupon the young planters silently withdrew from the firing-line.

"Don't you think you've seen about enough, Bet?" demanded Murrell. "You don't care for the shooting, do you?"

"I think I'd rather see that than the horse racing," said Betty perversely. "This had been her first appearance in public since her home-coming, and she felt that it had had everybody else had ever known, and scores of new people; her progress had been quite triumphant, in spite of Tom, and in spite of Charley Norton, who was plainly not anxious to share her triumph, and his devotion being rather of the monopolizing sort."

Betty now turned her eyes to Murrell.

Children of London Tell Santa Claus, Through The Advertiser, How to Find and Fill Their Stockings on the Night of Nights

Herewith is printed the first instalment of the Santa Claus letters received by The Advertiser. Parents will find them interesting because of the quaint requests that are made, and by reason of the little touches of unconscious childish humor or pathos. Many letters have been held in reserve, and will be printed within a day or so.

Wants a Flying Machine.
Dear Santa Claus:
I am writing you a few lines, asking you to send me an engine that runs on a track, a cowboy suit that is on a big piece of card-board, a magic lantern, a sword, a flying machine. I think that is all I want. From
RAYMOND TALIAFERRO,
146 COLBORNE STREET.

An Industrious Little Miss.
Dear Santa Claus:
I am writing you a few lines, to ask you if you will please send me, a registering bath, a cap and muffer for my dolly, and a little iron, a washing machine, a little barrel of clothes pins. I think that is all I want.
PHYLLIS TALIAFERRO,
146 COLBORNE STREET.

"From Your Best Girl."
Dear Santa Claus:
I saw that we could write to you. Through the Advertiser so I thought I would write. I will now tell you what I want. Want a doll, and a carriage a nice new dress, and a little Blackboard which stands on legs. Oh yes and I want a toboggan for my doll. Bring me set of dishes because last year you brought Elvins a set and don't forget the nuts and candy, and oranges and a stick of gum to all, I will close. From your best girl,

PAULINE PRICE,

Farmers Need Not Worry About Turkey Market, Say Dealers. The Toronto Globe says: The London story that Ontario turkeys will go begging at Christmas is not troubling local poultry dealers very much. They seem to think the Yuletide market will be all right, and the prospects of high prices for beef and kindred commodities lends strength to the theory that farmers have no cause for alarm, even if the people on the sunset side of Canada do decide to shop in the neighboring republic. ## CREDIT and CASH

Now Browning was a thrifty man Who lived upon the spot-cash plan, But Browning's salary was small And he saved little if at all. Hogan, upon the other hand Lived on his credit and his sand, He paid his bills, but paid 'em slow And everyone he could he'd owe.

Result, when Browning lost his place And had a spell of woe to face, No one would trust him for a cent, They knew that he had always spent Spot-cash for everything he had And asking credit—then—looked bad. So as reward for all his care Browning was up against it square.

When Hogan lost HIS job, he bore Himself exactly as before, And if his bills ran many a day Well—they had always run that way, And tradesmen carried him, until A job he found and paid his bill. The moral of this tale, forsooth? There ain't no moral, that's the truth.

BITING NOT PERMITTED IN OTTAWA WRESTLING

Pedersen Wins From Schmidt by Clean Work While Opponent Roughs It.

Ottawa, Dec. 1.—In the fastest and most exciting bout seen in Ottawa this year, Pedersen, the big Dane, defeated Paul Schmidt, the German Thunderbolt, at the Grand Opera House here tonight. Both men showed free and easy and clean work and went at it hard and fast for 40 minutes before Pedersen ended the match in surprising style. Pedersen got a toe hold on the German after nineteen minutes wrestling with Schmidt, who roughed it throughout, succeeded in wriggling free and stalled his man off for ten minutes before he succumbed to a body hold. In the second fall Schmidt was the aggressor and finally got a head hold which sent Pedersen crashing to the mat. The Dane suddenly jerked himself free and, after a second or two, Schmidt shot over his head and landed flat on his back. He tried desperately to free himself but was unable to do so, and Referee Davy gave the match to Pedersen, whose clean, fast work made a big hit with the crowd. The second fall was gained in about five minutes and a combination body and head. The bout was rough at stages and Referee Davy stopped it once because Schmidt was biting his opponent.

Guelph, Dec. 1.—Tom Longboat defeated Fred Meadows here tonight at ten miles in the fast time of 51:50, in the Victoria rink. The track was twelve laps to the mile, and the rink was filled with at least a thousand people. It was the Indian's first appearance in Guelph, and he was given a great reception as he came upon the track. Mayor Thorp started the runners on their long journey, and Longboat took the lead right at the crack of the pistol. This lead he maintained to the end, although Meadows ran a game race and was within 25 yards of the finish at six miles. The Indian came strong in the last two miles, and finished a lap and a half in the lead. ## TROUBLE ORGANIZING HOCKEYISTS AT OTTAWA

Hitch Encountered in Formation of Ottawa Section of Interprovincial Amateur Union—Renfrew the Cause.

Ottawa, Dec. 1.—A hitch that may result in the abandonment of all the plans formed to date, has occurred in connection with the organization of the Ottawa branch of the Interprovincial Amateur Hockey Union. There was a meeting this afternoon for the purpose of combining the Ottawa College, Renfrew, Stewarton, National and New Edinburgh teams as the Ottawa section, but at the eleven o'clock hour the Ottawa University Club refused to play in the event of Renfrew being admitted. The Nationals stuck with College on the proposition and New Edinburgh and Stewarton refused to proceed with the work of organization unless Renfrew was admitted. The deadlock was absolutely unbreakable and after arguing for an hour or so the delegates dispersed to meet again on Monday next. Renfrew's acquisition was looked upon as a boon to the league, and they would have made it a very interesting series. Without Renfrew the league would confine interest to Ottawa and be far less exciting. Everything looked rosy previous to today's meeting, but the unexpected stand of College and National clubs has left it in a very unsatisfactory state.

The total loss was about $220,000. The fire started from an unknown cause shortly after 4 o'clock this morning, and was not under control until 7 o'clock. All the firms occupied space in the Hewson building, which is in the heart of the retail shopping district.

THE CLICK OF THE STEEL SHOE

A meeting of the Simcoe hockey club was held recently to organize for the coming season. There was a large attendance, and the following officers were elected: Honorary vice-presidents, C. Fryer, Collingwood, R. A. Cameron, and Point Player McGreor, are fixtures on the Tecumseh team. McGregor will probably be called the captaincy.

It was decided to enter two teams in the O. H. A., both intermediate and junior, the intermediate in the east, with Niagara Falls, Welland, Grimsby and Dunnville, and the junior team in the west, with St. Catharines, Hamilton, and Toronto. There is plenty of good material for both teams, and Simcoe ought to give a good account of itself.

Ray Marchand, the Frontenac hockey club goalkeeper, who went to Cleveland, met with an injury while at practice, and it is reported that he will return to Kingston and likely play with his old team in the O. H. A.

FORGIVING.

[Human Life.] A man had for years employed a steady German workman. One day Jake came to him and asked to be excused from work the next day. "Certainly, Jake," beamed the employer. "What are you going to do?" "Well," replied Jake, slowly, "I think I must go to my own wife's funeral. She dies yesterday." After the lapse of a few weeks Jake again approached the boss for a day off. "All right, Jake, but what are you going to do this time?" "Aber," said Jake, "I go to make me, cut the hair, a wedding." "What? So soon? Why, it's only been three weeks since you buried your wife." "Aber," replied Jake, "I don't hold spite long."

Base Ball Yarns By Billy Evans

"Where is Tim Hurst?" Time and again during the past twelve months I have been asked this question. It is strange that so well known a character could drop from sight so quickly. Scarcely two years ago he was one of the most talked of men in baseball. Tim Hurst is a resident of New York. Although born at Ashland, Pa., he has lived in Gotham so long, that residing in any other city would be camping out. For 20 years he has lived at the Bartholdi Hotel, of which he is regarded as one of the props. And don't imagine that Timothy (who lost his American League job for mistaking the face of Eddie Collins for a catcher), needs sympathy. He is worth about $100,000, and if he isn't a major league umpire combined. He is a sport promoter, boxing referee, and will umpire when the offer is attractive. And he is a real estate dealer, extraordinary. I met Tim on Broadway last summer and enjoyed a chat with him. "Long Tom" Hughes, Washington pitcher, joined us, and we talked shop, with Tim doing most of the chattering. When he left, Hughes related a story of him. I tell it in Hughes' words: "I remember the old Washington grounds, with the hospital just outside the left field fence? One day I was pitching against Cleveland, and was wearing an awful lacing, which was strange, as I usually had something on the Naps. But Lajoie, Bradley and Hickman were threatening the lives of patients in the hospital with their drives that day. Hurst was umpiring, and naturally I was sore at the mauling I was getting. I made the mistake of trying to take revenge on Hurst. I might have had a chance with an average umpire, but not with Timothy. I commented on his umpiring, and he came back sarcastically about my pitching. Finally I turned and said: "Whom pitching this game, anyway?" "Why," he drawled, "judging from the score, I should say one of those old fellows from the incurable ward over there, at the same time jerking his thumb toward the hospital. I was thorough for the rest of that game, believe me."

Tom Hughes is responsible for another of the many good stories told about Tim Hurst. It seems that a brazen young pitcher joined the Washington club, bringing from his home a reputation for a mile long. The recruit wasn't averse to talking of his ability, and one afternoon while Hurst was sitting on the bench he began to relate the way he used to stand the umpires on their heads in the bushes. "Any time I wanted a strike called I would simply yell loud enough for the fans to hear, 'How's that one? Right through the middle,' was the recipe he gave for obtaining favorable rulings. As he concluded his tale of how he lorded it over the umpires, the manager told the recruit to warn up, as he might work that afternoon. Hurst listened to the youngster's monologue with interest, and evidently made up his mind to teach the young man a lesson, for on the first ball pitched, although right through the heart of the plate, as Tim afterwards confessed, he delivered an ultimatum. "How's that one?" the pitcher demanded, turning on Tim. Looking him over in the most critical way, Hurst responded: "Under the circumstances it is a ball. If you hadn't been so inquisitive, it would have been a strike." "And that bit of advice was the best thing that could have happened," said Hughes. "I taught the kid a lesson, and thereafter he confined himself to pitching, leaving the umpiring to men hired for that purpose. Today he is a star in the big league, although not with the Washington club."

No player can bull a ball to left harder than Napoleon Lajoie. When Larry goes to the plate, third-basemen, as a rule, place almost a short left foot for him. Despite this, Lajoie seldom resorts to bunting, although he might beat out many with the third baseman so far back. Soon after Billy Purcell joined the White Sox his team played in Cleveland and he threw easily. Purcell, who had been with the White Sox for a long time, but never had seen him in action, so decided he wouldn't be shown up by another bull. When Lajoie again stepped to the plate, he again threw easily, and coming in at a 19-second clip. The next ball was in the groove, and after feinting, Lajoie pulled the ball to left a life on the last day of the season. Purcell, coming in, couldn't stop. He could not even defend himself, and the ball struck him on the chest, dropping him as cleanly as a hand book to the jaw. The story of this experience spread, and the third basemen naturally became gun shy, with Larry up. The psychological influence of the play had its effect no longer than a year, when Lajoie and Cobb were struggling for the batting championship of the American League.

In a double-header at St. Louis, Lajoie secured eight hits. Ordinarily this would not have caused more than passing comment, but it was believed for a time the bingles gave Larry the batting honor of the league, and the automobile that went with it.

The day after the game a newspaperman asked Corridon why he played so deep, and the youngster replied: "It was the first time I had ever seen the 'big fellow' I knew what happened to Billy Purcell, and I decided I wasn't going to be crippled for the rest of the season. If I had come in on those bunts fast enough to throw him out, it's ten to one he'd have cannon-balled one at me. In that case you might be buying shoestings from me to help a poor cripple instead of seeing me play."

If the Athletics win the American League pennant next year they will, of course, contend for the world's championship again. In this event, I wonder if the old cry, relative to the strength of American League catchers' staff will be raised?

When the Athletics met the Cubs in 1910 the catchers were most discussed. It seemed the unanimous opinion that Thomas, Lapp and Livingston were outclassed by Kling and Archer. It was predicted the Cubs would have an easy time on the bases. What happened is history. The Athletics presented the thrills. Thomas and Lapp stopped the Cubs without trouble. Kling and Archer had no more than their share, but he is far above the average as a mitt performer. He thinks and acts rapidly, and this spells his success. No catcher possesses more mechanical skill than Jack Lapp. With more experience he will stand out in relief among the backstops.

It seems to me Lapp and Thomas should receive more consideration if the team battles for the big title. They have proven their worth in two desperate struggles.

Connie Mack tells a story on Thomas. While not a tightwad, Mack takes care of his money. He believes that when he is through with the game he ought to have enough to keep him the balance of his days, and not be a subject for a benefit game. Someone asked Mack before the series if he had any fear about Thomas against the Giants. "None whatever," replied the shrewd leader.

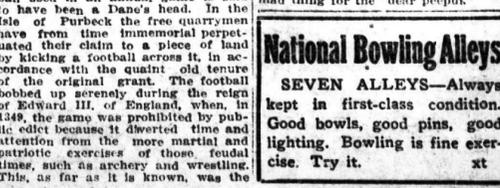

"You know, there is a winner's and a loser's end, and Ira is bound to be on the long end of the percentage." Thomas, by the way, has made more money out of world's series games than any other player. He participated in the championship battles with both Detroit and the Athletics.

Early Football. At Derby, England, football was played as the memorial of a great rejoicing for a signal victory gained over the Romish legions in the third century. At Chester, the first football used in an annual game is said to have been a Dane's head. In the life of Purbeck the first quartermen have from time immemorial perpetuated their claim to a piece of land by kicking a football across it, in accordance with the custom and tenure of the original grant. The football bobbed up serenely during the reign of Edward III, of England, when, in 1349, the game was prohibited by public edict because it diverted time and attention from the more martial and patriotic exercises of those feudal times, such as archery and wrestling. This, as far as it is known, was the first mention of the game by the popular name it bears now. Edward II, however, had previously forbidden struggles over "crosses potes" (big balls), and Henry IV, and Henry VIII, also legislated against football as a bad thing for the "dear people."

CAMPAIGN FOR GARBAGE BYLAW

Board of Health Will Let the People Know All the Facts Regarding Incineration.

WILL OUTLINE SCHEME
Dr. Stevenson Says Citizens Will Have Their Garbage Removed for Fifty Cents a Year.

At the meeting of the board of health Friday night, it was decided to commence a campaign in favor of the garbage destruction bylaw to be submitted to the ratepayers in January. The board are in favor of it, and consider that it would be a good thing for the citizens generally.

"We should give the people some facts about the incinerator," said Chairman Clarke. "I am convinced that when the people know what it means, they will gladly support it," said Ald. Stevenson. "It will save a heating system at Victoria Hospital. This will cost from $15,000 to $30,000. It will save the annual heating bill for the hospital and the Hygienic Institute. It will furnish steam in the summer for an asphalt plant, if one is established here. It will cost the citizens 50 cents a year to have their garbage removed. Now all of them pay from $3 to $8 a year, and it is not half decent to have the work done so properly and in addition save every citizen much money. We want to convince the public that there will be no offensive odors. We are covered by an absolute guarantee, and in addition we know the experience of other cities. In Baltimore, Philadelphia and other places where I visited, these destroyers are right in the centre of the city, and no offensive odors could be located at all.

The Site.
"We should locate a site within a reasonable distance of the hospital so as to utilize the heat. There is a site on the flats at the foot of Colborne street. That would be a good distance from the hospital. There is another site near the Wellington street bridge. Both of these would be suitable. I would favor the flats myself. "The hospital authorities will work with us, and if the board of health do their duty, as I think the members will, then this bylaw will carry. It is worth working for."

Dr. Williams and the other members agreed with him, and the chairman and secretary will prepare information to be submitted to the people.

A Healthy City.
Dr. Hutchinson's monthly report showed that there were twelve cases of scarlet fever in the city and no diphtheria.

An invitation was received to attend the convention of the Canadian Public Health Association meeting in Montreal, Dec. 13 to 15, but the board decided not to send delegates.

Chairman Clarke reported that some chairs were necessary for the Cove Hospital and other necessities, and it was decided to allow him to purchase what is required.

The board will allow the provincial board to deal with the Carling's Creek matter.

"Let them take the initiative," said Dr. Stevenson. "We cannot get the land to tile the creek, so let the provincial authorities deal with the question as they see fit."

This was agreed to by the board. Those present were: Chairman, Dr. Stevenson; R. A. Carrother, Dr. Hutchinson, M. H. O., Inspector McCallum, Dr. Tamlin, and Secretary Baker.

DERELICT ON ATLANTIC

A Nova Scotian Coconaut Schooner Abandoned by Its Crew.
New York, Dec. 1.—Somewhere on the Atlantic the Nova Scotian brig Marconi with a load of coconuts drifting, a derelict afloat for weeks, and crew of eight men, picked up at sea by the steamship Chalmette from New Orleans, arrived safely in port here today, little the worse for their experience.

The Marconi was bound for New York, when she was struck by a terrific southerly gale, which battered her with tremendous seas and carried away the jibboom and foremast. This so slackened the stays that both masts were soon carried overboard, and the brig, wrecked, was falling into the trough of the sea and being constantly swept fore and aft.

In this condition the little vessel drifted helplessly from early Tuesday Nov. 28, until the following day when she was sighted by the Chalmette, which changed her course, stood by, and took Captain McLeod and his crew off the fast disintegrating wreck. She was abandoned in Lat. 32.35; Long. 76.40.

The Marconi was a comparatively new boat, having been built in 1892. She was of 150 tons burden, and was owned by Carlow & Kempton, of Liverpool, N. S.

45 PEOPLE DIED OF TUBERCULOSIS

An Increase of Three Deaths in London This Year Over Last.

BUT CITY IS HEALTHY
Dr. Hutchinson, M. H. O., Presented His Annual Report to the Board of Health.

The annual report on the health of the city was presented to the board of health Friday night by Dr. Hutchinson, M. H. O. He finds that during 1911 the city was very healthy.

During the year ending Nov. 15, there were 436 deaths, 68 less than the previous year.

Pneumonia had the credit of the largest number—53, one less than in 1910. This year there were 45 deaths from tuberculosis, an increase of three over last year and five over 1909. These numbers alone refer to tuberculosis of the lungs, and do not refer to consumption of the bowels, tubercular meningitis, or other kindred diseases. In all 98 deaths were caused by diseases of the lungs, or about one-seventh the whole number of deaths. Dr. Hutchinson is of the opinion that tuberculosis is decreasing. In spite of the increase of population, the death rate remains about the same, consequently the disease is not spreading.

There were 17 cases of diphtheria, with two deaths, as compared with 99 cases in 1910, and seven deaths.

Scarlet fever was quite prevalent, no less than 166 cases being reported, with one death. "The disease was of the mild type," he declared, and that was one of the reasons of its great spread. In many cases no physician attended the cases, and they mingled freely with other children at school spreading the infection.

Thirty-four cases of typhoid fever in seven weeks, the largest in some years, were reported. Dr. Hutchinson is of the opinion that many cases were not reported, and it was impossible to trace the source from which the disease came. No case was traced to milk.

There was no smallpox during the year. There were 24 deaths from cancer, two less than in 1910. There were 20 deaths by violence.

Many samples of water were sent to Dr. Amyot, provincial analyst, and in two samples colon bacilli were found. The water supply is now pure in fact but bears all the time.

Dr. Hutchinson regretted that the council had not passed a bylaw to prevent the exposure of food in front of stores.

The medical health officer heartily supported the bylaw to be submitted to the people to provide for garbage disposal. For years he has been showing the city the necessity of such a system, and he hopes the ratepayers will pass it.

During the year, Dr. Hutchinson had inspected restaurants, butcher shops, baker shops, laundries, etc. He found many of the restaurants not up to the mark, but there was an improvement over the previous years. Chinese laundries were visited, and found to be clean as they possibly could be considering the shacks the Chinamen did business in.

Eighty-nine samples of milk were examined. The quality was inferior to other years.

Dr. Tamlin made 350 visits to dairy farms. One hundred and twenty-five tubercular cows for tuberculosis, and in thirty-three there was a reaction, showing the presence of the disease. These were condemned, and 156 were condemned for other causes.

The milk sold in the city amounts to 14,000 quarts daily.

DYNAMITE LADEN TAKES DEATH LEAP
Blaster's Body Hurtles From Fast Train and Explosion Blows Him to Bits.

Chicago, Dec. 1.—Train No. 16 of the Lake Shore Railway went through Pine Station, Ind., from Chicago, at the rate of 40 miles an hour at 2:38 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Just as the second passenger coach passed the telegraph operator at the station looked from the station window. He saw the body of a man come hurtling through the air, strike a switch lever, and fall to the ground. The man was taken to Mercy Hospital in Gary, where he died without regaining consciousness.

The report went over the wires that an unknown man had boarded the twentieth century limited with an infernal machine. Telegrams were sent ahead to catch the train in the hope that the crew could explain how the man managed to leave the vestibuled train while it was travelling full speed and who he was.

The train crew had no information. None had so much as seen the passenger.

Then a search of the man's pockets revealed a rent receipt signed by Edward Watkins and made out to P. Schohl, 3010 Houston avenue, South Chicago. Word was sent to the South Chicago police to investigate the address.

Mrs. Schohl said her husband had planned to take the 2:30 train from South Chicago in order to reach Pine Station.

"He left here at twenty minutes of 11:30," she said. "He is a dynamiter for the Illinois Steel Company. He had a job to do at Pine for the company—blasting some slag. I think. He was to be on the job by 3 o'clock."

Word was sent to the South Chicago station.

Mrs. Schohl's explanation sufficed. Schohl took the wrong train at the South Chicago station. He was there twenty minutes early. Train No. 16 came in at 2:47. He boarded it.

As it neared Pine station he learned that it would not stop, that it did not stop even at Gary. He resolved he would not be carried half way across Indiana and be late on the job. And so with his sticks of dynamite under one arm, his electrical blast discharge and his pouch of caps under the other, he jumped.

Schohl was 63 years old. He had been employed as a blaster for fifteen years. He leaves a widow and three children.

CANADA GETTING MORE

Immigration From Europe to the United States Has Fallen Off.

[Canadian Press.]
New York, Dec. 1.—Herbert Francis Sherwood, in discussing the ebb and flow of immigration in the Review of Reviews for December, says that little attention has been given to the fact that in the course of the year which is just closing a marked change occurred in the movement of immigration to this country.

"Between Jan. 1 and Sept. 30, 1911," he said, "450,670 persons landed on our shores from the third-class cabins of the transatlantic liners. While some ardent restrictionists might assert that this total was large enough, yet it was less than two-thirds the number for the corresponding period of last year, but the ebb was in the course of the corresponding period of last year. The exact falling off was 274,424, or 38.13 per cent."

Mr. Sherwood says: "The immigration to the Dominion of Canada, for the first nine months of this year, in contrast to that of the United States, was greater than for the corresponding period of last year, but the ebb was only 18.12 per cent. of the flow. This, it will be recalled, is about 12 per cent below the average for the United States. It, however, was 6 per cent. higher than that for the corresponding period of 1910.

"Only recently has the ebb and flow of immigration been accepted as a register of the condition of the labor market in the United States, or has it been recognized as obedient to the law of supply and demand. We now realize that this country has tapped a supply of labor which is sufficiently automatic in the expansion and contraction of its current to meet the needs of a land subject to such fluctuating requirements as is our own."

CANNOT AGREE TO EXTENSIONS

Special Committee of the City Council Talked Street Railway for Hours.

MR. KING AGAINST BILLS Deputations Ask for More Track in South London and Also in the North End.

For several hours Friday night, the special committee named to deal with street railway extension worried with the problem, and then adjourned for a week. The difficulties in the way loom rather large, but it is expected that some solution will be arrived at soon. The mileage due the city was definitely fixed at 1.73 miles.

The committee endeavored to have Manager King consent to go to the Dominion Railway Commission with the city, and ask for a crossing either at William or Adelaide street, across the C. P. R. to permit a line to run south on either of them. Mr. King would not consent, asking a week to consider the matter. He will give his answer next Friday night.

City Engineer Wright presented a voluminous report on the subject of extension. He pointed out that the first question to be decided was the amount of trackage coming to the city. If no provision is made for portions of 2,000 population, the city was entitled to but 1.73 miles. If parts of 2,000 counted, then there were 2.32 miles coming to the people.

Proposed Extension. Mr. Wright then dealt with the extension proposed at the last meeting of the committee, the loop up Colborne to Victoria and down William, running down Oxford to Adelaide, and thence across the C. P. R. tracks to Dundas street, the removal of the Wellington street track to Richmond, and a loop up Quebec to Lorne avenue, and then down Adelaide street.

As to the first extension, only be operated successfully, if the two blocks on Oxford street were removed between Colborne and William. He considered the objection would be made to that. He did not think should be considered.

Mr. Wright gave it as his opinion that the railway commission would not sanction a level crossing at Adelaide street. According to bylaw 313, the C. P. R. is bound to pay $16,500 towards a bridge across any street crossing the railway.

Additional cars are needed on the present lines. He stated the double tracking of Horton street and York street from Thames to Ridout would be of decided advantage also, and improve the service everywhere. One of the belt lines in South London, preferably the Ridout line, should be operated in the opposite direction to the way the cars are run at now. He also favored a cross-town line. There were many considerations, and before definitely deciding his position he would prefer to make a supplementary report.

Then the argument started. A deputation consisting of Mr. McKelheran, H. J. Gramlich and others asked for a continuation of the Wellington street line south along High street.

Another deputation, consisting of W. Walker, George Geoghegan, H. L. Ashplant and others made a strong plea for service in the north end.

No Plans to Submit. Ald. Stevenson wanted to know whether or not the London Street Railway Company was willing to submit, and Mr. King stated that he had none whatever. He, however,

THE COAL QUESTION

Several other questions relative to extension were taken up. The amount of trackage due the city was finally settled at 1.73 miles, not 2.32 as first announced. The bylaw was carefully read, as was City Solicitor Meredith's opinion, which stated that no provision whatever was made for any extension of tracks for less than 2,000 people. As a result the population above 45,000 would not be reckoned with.

From North to South. Ald. Stevenson made a strong plea for a line straight across the city, from north to south, down William or Maitland streets. It would solve all the problems of railway accommodation.

Ald. Cooper wanted to give the north end all the extension due the city. He favored the loop line suggested by the deputation. Maps, profiles, etc., were consulted without number, but the committee finally talked themselves out, adjourning to meet on Friday night next.

Those present were Ald. Morgan (chairman), Ald. Ashplant, Eckert, Bennett, Stevenson, Cooper, Mayor Beattie, City Engineer Wright, and Miss Nora Toli, secretary.

OLD LONDON IN FIGURES A FASCINATING VOLUME

The Number of Factory Workers Shown—Police Found 11,579 Persons Who Had Been Lost—The Amusement Statistics.

The annual volume of London statistics, issued by the county council, collects once more the amazing array of figures, in no other form than this volume of over 600 pages of tabular data, the impressiveness of which is almost beyond the imagination. One of the first effects of the recent census is presented; the birth, death, marriage and other rates for last year are corrected, and the result is as follows:

Per thousand	Per thousand
Births	25.4
Deaths	13.7
Excess—births over deaths	11.7
Lunatics	17.4
Paupers, outdoor	9.9
Paupers, indoor	31.7

The importance of the birth and death rates are higher, but still lower than in 1910, the falling off in the death rate being very marked. The increase in lunatics amounts to 1 per cent, but an increase of over 4 per cent is shown in paupers.

An old age pension section is added for the first time, and shows that at the end of last year 78,458 pension claims had been determined, of which 22,225 had been disallowed. For the first time statistics are given showing the local distribution of workers in different trades. There were in 1910, 287,061 persons engaged in factories in the county of London, divided as follows:

Male	Female
227,844	59,217

The boroughs with the smallest and largest numbers of factory workers are given as under, and the large number in the city is very noticeable:

How Queen Mary is Spending the $62,500 Given Her by the Marys of the Empire; a Holiday Home for Working Girls.

The London Marys who gave so generously to the coronation gift of her majesty will be pleased to learn that a magnificent home for the working girls of Old London has been purchased with the monetary portion of the gift. At the time when the Queen received the personal part of the gift, which consisted of the Insignia of the Garter, her majesty said that she would devote the money accompanying the gift to a charitable object in which I am greatly interested. The Queen's plan has now been announced to be the establishment of a holiday home for working girls of London, and for this purpose the trustees have acquired Barn House, Whitstable, on the Kentish coast.

The Marys in London were complimented by the newspapers of Toronto and by the National Council on their contribution. It was much larger than that of many places of greater size than London, and it involved an outlay of much energy on the part of the committee, which was made up as follows: Mrs. Puddicombe, Mrs. Graham, Miss Beddome, Mrs. Dr. Niven, Miss Mary Labatt, Mrs. Col. Hodgins, Mrs. E. Scatcherd, Miss Mary Smith and Mrs. E. B. Smith (convener).

GIRL IS TRAINER OF WILD BEASTS

Gwendolyn Murray Tells of Her First Experience in London Arena, Which Included Terrifying Moments.

Miss Gwendolyn Murray has been appointed assistant wild beast trainer to the Bostock menageries in England, and will begin her duties soon in the Jungle at Birmingham. The Bostock recently expressed astonishment that, although willing to pay a weekly salary of $5 to a probationer, and a much larger sum when competent, he was quite unable to find a girl of British birth with the necessary courage and nerve resource to accept the employment. His satisfaction, his announcement brought him a bagful of letters from women and girls, dated from almost every centre of the British Isles.

Spends Much Time at the Jungle. Miss Murray has passed every hour of the day since she was given the run of the place, but at all times carefully guarded by an attendant, who took good care that she made no rash overtures, or in any way unwittingly endangered herself. She succeeded remarkably well with a quartette of forest lions, who now answer to her call and accept food from her. On one occasion she even managed to strike one of them on the head, with only a suspicion of a smart from the animal.

Several prominent men were invited to view Miss Murray's first entrance into the arena in company with the forest lions.

There seemed to be a thrill of expectancy among even the fussy inhabitants of the many cages which encircle the spacious theatre of the Shepherd's Bush Jungle. But for the sake of herd's Bush Jungle. But for the sake of guests the many benches were crowded of spectators, and the unusual extra pleasant conversation of the work-ers.

He told me something about dynamite's awful power. One afternoon, he said a workman was carrying a jar of it when he stumbled and fell. The jar got smashed, the man was blown in pieces, and the explosion was heard miles away.

The dynamite is placed in stone jars in order to minimize the danger, but if a jar is badly jolted there is grave risk of disaster. On no account is anything made of metal allowed to touch it. The workman who ignites these laws would quickly find himself out of a job, but the men are careful to a degree, and they realize that the precautions are absolutely necessary.

"Would you like to taste a little nitro-glycerin?" my companion inquired. "It's all right. Nice and sweet. Too much gives you a headache, that's all. Although there is no smell about it, the workers when they first come here suffer terribly from headaches. It is a species of fear. They know the terrible possibilities of the stuff, and they allow the knowledge to get on their nerves."

Once safely away from the building I looked back. The dynamite works were a stretch of drab, squat huts in the midst of a beautiful country. And in the middle, nitro-glycerin, destruction, the greatest death-dealer the world has ever known.

Capt. Findlater and Lieut. Gray, Long-Service Record-Holders, Have Given All of Their Working Days to Combat the Flames—Still Ready for the Gong.

Forty-three years of service as a fireman is a record to be proud of. This unique distinction belongs to Mr. James D. Findlater, of 647 Queen's Avenue, who is captain of No. 2 fire station in East London.

Mr. Findlater was a member of the old volunteer fire brigade for four years before the organization of the city department in 1873, or some years ago. This makes 43 years of continuous service for Capt. Findlater.

In the old volunteer days auto fire trucks were unheard of. The equipment compared with the today's factored indeed. Hand-reels and a primitive type of steamer were used in

NATION THAT GRABS FOR ASIATIC POSSESSIONS GETS ONLY GREATER BURDEN FOR ITS PEOPLE'S SHOULDERS

Norman Angell Gives Another Illustration of Europe's Great Illusion—Matters Not Who Administers the African Swamps—France Has Made Herself Weaker by Attempts at Colonization—The Strength of Germany—A Striking Article.

Mr. Norman Angell, the author of "The Great Illusion," has a very striking article in the Daily Mail, entitled "The Mirage of the Map," in which he shows by another set of brilliant illustrations what a foolish mirage Europe is pursuing.

In the press of Europe and America, he says, is very busy discussing the lessons of the diplomatic conflict which has just ended, and the military conflict which has just begun, and the outstanding impression which one gets from most of these sayings in high politics—whether French, Italian, or British—is that we have been, and are witnessing part of a world-movement, the setting in motion of titanic forces deep-set in primordial needs and impulses.

What Titanic War Was Done. "For months those in the secrets of the chancelleries have spoken with bated breath, as though in the presence of some, vision of Armageddon. On the strength of this mere talk of war by the three nations, vast commercial fortunes have been lost and won on the Bourses, banks have suspended payment, some thousands have been ruined, the town of East London, the city, on which the East Londoners were dependent for water, had shut off the supply, and it was a couple of hours before anyone could be found who knew where to turn the water on. With a few good streams of water the fire department could have put out the blaze in a few moments, but as it was the shops were entirely destroyed.

Through the Disasters. Fireman Gray has also come through some big disasters, for which London possesses a certain notoriety, among them the Crystal Palace disaster. At the time of the sinking of the Victoria in 1881 Mr. Gray was convalescing with a broken leg received while fighting the big Leonard's foundry fire on May 3, just three weeks previous.

Some Race Suicide Figures. [Baltimore Dispatch to Philadelphia Record.] Race suicide was strongly denounced in a pointed sermon preached by the Rev. Dr. William Rosenau at the Euclid Place Temple. His topic was the blood of children, and his text: "Lo, children are a heritage of the Lord." In his sermon he claimed that the people had drifted away from the biblical standard, and the blessing of children was not generally appreciated. He said: "Between Sept. 1, 1892, when I came here, and Jan. 1, 1911, I have preached 262 marriages. Ninety couples I have lost track of, and of the other 273 couples, 128 remained without issue, and 145 couples have been blessed with progeny. Of these 85 couples have one child each, 51 two children, 5 couples three children, 2 couples four children, and 1 couple six children, making in all 218 children as the result of 84 persons joined in wedlock.

"Let it be remembered that no one has the right to enter wedlock, either as husband or wife, who is not willing to perform either paternal or maternal responsibilities. Race suicide is a three-fold crime. It is a crime against self, it is a crime against the nation which wins in the contest for territory of this sort, and it is a crime against God."

A Visit to a Dynamite Factory

I will not tell you how I managed to get into a dynamite factory, says a writer in Pearson's Weekly, "nor shall I say where it is. The authorities would be vexed. Don't ask any of your friends to call, as official remarked. Some folks are careless, you know, and carelessness here means death, and money and keys. The regulations say that nothing of a metallic nature must be taken in by your boots because they were rather heavy ones with nails in, and I put on a pair of felt slippers. It is just as well, said the official, "to keep metal and dynamite apart. The two can't get on at all. Always quarrelling. See?"

He winked the other eye as he spoke and pointed to a huge tank. "That's nitro-glycerin," he said, "an ounce of it would blow you to atoms."

"Thanks for the information," I said, with a shiver. "Anything else nice?"

"Yes. Come along."

Dripping into the tank was nitric acid and oil of vitriol, and close by in little sheds workmen were mixing the blended explosive with silticous earth, and making dynamite.

"This mixture in the tank," the official went on, "must never rise above a certain height. If it does, it gets hotter than it ought to, and you and I would soon be dead. At present it is six degrees below the danger point, so you see there are just half a dozen degrees between us and the grave."

I pulled him away.

All was quiet and peaceful—just a dip, drip of the deadly liquid and the Promoted From Rank. For many years Capt. Findlater was a member of the down-town company. Subsequently he was placed in charge of the No. 2 station.

In Mr. George Gray, of 428 Queen's Avenue, London possesses another veteran fireman, who has served in the city department for 33 years of continuous service. Mr. Gray is a native of Scotland and came to Canada from his native land at 22 years of age. Eight years later he entered the fire department, which was then organized only a few years. For over 21 years he was a member of the central fire company. Two and a half years ago he was transferred to the No. 4 station in the

DUTTON, ONT., MAN BREEDS SILVER FOXES SELLING FOR $4,000 PAIR

Visions of Millions To Be Made Visit Correspondent After He Comes Upon A. N. Black With a Pair of His Beauties.

Mr. C. J. Fitzgerald, of this city, writing to the New York Sunday Sun, says: "One evening recently on the station platform at Ridgetown, on the Canadian branch of the Michigan Central, a man stood stationed over a wire-bound and slatted box. It was blowing a gale from the northwest, and there was more than a suggestion of winter in the air. An employee of the railroad came along, attached a tag to the box and whispered to the Sun representative, who stood near by in the gathering gloom waiting for an eastbound train: 'Ask him to show you what's in the box.'

The guardian of the box took a short pipe from between his teeth, looked his inquirer over from head to foot before replying: 'Silver foxes.' The man was A. N. Black, of Dutton, a small town about fifty miles from this place. Black has been in a number of businesses, but just now he is a breeder of silver foxes, one of the most highly prized fur-bearing animals in the world. He got the idea that big money could be made by following this pursuit while returning from a trip to the Klondike gold fields a few years ago. On his homeward journey he stopped for a time at the Aleutian Islands, where he found a native successfully propagating this remarkable species of the fox tribe, and when he came back to Ontario he made some inquiries about parent stock.

Pair Sold For $4,000. "I found that they had been breeding silver foxes in Prince Edward Island for some years, about seven years ago, and Black a few minutes later as the train travelled eastward, and it was there I bought my first pair. What did they cost? I wouldn't care to say, but I have sold a pair of my own breeding for $4,000, and expect to do much better than that before I am through. There are not more than 50 men engaged in the business in North America, all in Canada, and the bulk of the enterprises are located in Prince Edward Island. There are eight or ten in Quebec and a few in Ontario. Dutton, of Prince Edward Island is the man who has made the most money out of the game. I am told that this year he will clean up $150,000.

"There is more money in breeding these animals," went on Mr. Black, "than in killing them for their pelts, and if you can beat the other fellow you can practically name your own price, as breeders must have fresh stock at intervals so as to avoid inbreeding, which naturally has a demoralizing tendency not only in the number of pups, but also in the size of the fox as the quality of the fur." The Sun man had noticed, and he asked how large they grew at maturity and whether they approached or surpassed their red congeners in size. "The silvers are larger," answered Black. "I have bred a dog fox that weighed 25 pounds, and the other some. They mate once a year, and are bred as rearing. The female whelps from three to five pups the first litter and from five to eight in subsequent litters, though I have heard of eleven youngsters at a birth. It shows that the breed is a freak by the manner in which the red fox and they first come here suffer terribly from headaches. It is a species of fear. They know the terrible possibilities of the stuff, and they allow the knowledge to get on their nerves."

Once safely away from the building I looked back. The dynamite works were a stretch of drab, squat huts in the midst of a beautiful country. And in the middle, nitro-glycerin, destruction, the greatest death-dealer the world has ever known.

How Long Will Billy Pickereel Live?

[By Stanley Waterloo.]
Author of "The Story of a Frog," "Fang, the Weasel," and "Odeo."

The young pickereel, a fraction of an inch in length, just emerging from a mass of tiny yellowish eggs beneath the sedges and the shore of the creek, was neither happy or unhappy. He was merely comfortable.

now sort and things of the crawfish kind, which fed upon the bottom and were both succulent and filling.

for that, but in the smaller of the two rivers he stayed late, finding rioting waters there among the wind-waved grasshoppers and the frogs among the lilies and the smaller fish, which were abundant. This was three years ago.

The spring of the present year saw Billy approaching the spawning grounds with a new mate, a lady most presentable and of whom he was most fond, so fond, indeed, that he exhibited at times what must surely have been jealousy, else why should he have dejectedly stalked among the pickereels as came too near her?

Great, even among pickereel, he has grown and there are few dare meet him. His mottled green-white body is huge and his scales are as firm as armor to him. He is an Anak among the pickereel and there is none to match him.

He has destroyed much and has done some good, as well for a hated and ill-fated water snake and his only a lesser devil with the imported German carp which pollute our streams and ponds, and often make a nuisance of themselves in default of more convenient food.

As he is living, so he may, escaping men, live lustily for more years than many a human being of his age. Not that he is the least of his family, but he has been taken from European ponds, said to have lived there for a century. The pickereel, like the turtle and elephant and eagle, lives very long.

And Billy is feeling well! There was a silver spring, followed by a golden summer and a mellow autumn when John Bright, upon entering Parliament 38 years ago. At that time the great statesman was 64 years of age, and spoke but little in the House.

"Mr. Bright," the speaker reserved man, "was in some respects a reserved man. He was not a man with whom it was easy to become acquainted, and although I almost worshipped him I never introduced myself, and could not have introduced myself, poverty and pride making in my case a very bad combination. But he came to me (Applause)."

In the House of Commons. "When I went into the room of the House of Commons on one occasion I saw Mr. Bright sitting by himself, and thinking he wished to be alone, I took my place at another table. Immediately Mr. Bright became his own waiter, picked up his teacup and bread and butter, set them down on the table, and began to talk—about something he thought I should understand. Soon I discovered that he was a great lover of Milton, and of poetry generally, and as I was also, we got on very well."

The friendship so pleasantly began was pleasantly continued. When Mr. Bright, upon returning from America, told Mr. Bright how warmly he was welcomed by the people of that country, the statesman replied: "If I went to America it would be to see one man—John Greenleaf Whittier."

On another occasion Mr. Burt was sitting at dinner between Bright and Charles Villiers, the anti-corn law apostle, who the former inquired, half in joke: "Do you ever read your speeches, Villiers?" "Oh, no," said Villiers. "Do you?" "Yes," was the reply, "and I think them very good, too."

The last of Mr. Burt's reminiscences told of how Bright found him one day standing before a portrait of Cobden in the House of Commons. "You can see it better from here," said Bright, drawing him aside, and then added, with tears in his eyes as well as in his heart: "One of my dearest friends."

Today the portraits of the two noble friends hang side by side. A True Puritan. Dr. Clifford, with a passionately eloquent description of Bright's high moral qualities. Bright, he said, was a true Puritan, in the same sense as the prophets of Israel as John Milton.

"His was a noble character, and my contention is that this was due to the characteristic qualities of his religion. That religion was fresh, original, independent, and it made the man—of the strongest men of the last century."

Dr. Clifford went on to recall with pride that one of Bright's first battles was a successful battle against church rates. With him right was right, wrong was wrong, and compromise impossible. Hence he might be described as a man of white. "We feared he went to the Bible for his principles of political statesmanship; therefore he introduced the glory of bringing in a new epoch."

"And Lloyd George," cried Dr. Clifford, "is taking advantage of it. But for the efforts of John Bright in the years gone by the budget of 1909 would have been impossible, and the insurance bill which is now going through would not have been heard of."

War Denounced. Lord Weardeale recalled the fact that Bright, almost alone among English public men, raised his voice in favor of pacification at the time of the Crimean war.

"He was denounced as anti-patriotic. Why? Because," cried Lord Weardeale, "he wanted to save the honor of his country and the lives of his fellow-men; because he opposed the criminal war which not a single man can point to today as having achieved a single national object."

"Had Bright been alive at the time of the South African war, even though it had been his own colleague in the representation of Birmingham, who provoked that war, he would have raised his voice against a bloodshed."

Striking tributes were paid to the memory of John Bright at a crowded centenary meeting at Whitehall, London, Eng. The gathering was especially intended to celebrate Bright's work for the cause of international peace, and was presided over by Lord Weardeale. Among those who sat near the platform were two of Bright's daughters—Mrs. Bright (Clark) and Mrs. Roth.

Mr. Ramsay Macdonald, M. P., who spoke first, described Bright as the typical representative of the Victorian ideal in this country. The great Victorian middle class, he said, had its own conception of the world, did not see it as 'betters,' was Liberal in its politics, Puritan in its morals, sober in its walk, careful in its life, and not deluded by gaudy symbols, material wealth, or success. With all its narrowness, this class, which Bright typified, contained within itself that magnificent human power which produced great sons and worthy daughters.

Here is a New Kind of COFFEE

And We Give You A Pot To Make It In—Free

To get to the heart of the coffee question, you must do as we did—get to the heart of the coffee berry. The coffee berry is protected by Nature from the insect world, by a tough inner shell or coat. This shell contains tannin and other bitter substances. It is this shell, roasted and ground up with ordinary coffee, that causes indigestion, headaches and other ill-effects so common with coffee drinkers. Yet there is no other beverage in the world so thoroughly wholesome, healthful and delicious as good coffee when properly made.

is this good, wholesome, delicious coffee. It contains no chicory and by our special process of grinding, every particle of the bitter tannin-bearing shell is removed. We take out all the injurious parts. We leave the meat—the heart—the flavor—the aromatic essence that mean so much to coffee-lovers.

The Percolator, or French Drip Process, is the only way to make really good coffee. We have secured copyrights in France for a practical, economical, reliable French Drip Coffee Pot. We will give it to you free so that you can try Dalton's French Drip Coffee as it should be made. Read our offer. We have put up Dalton's French Drip Coffee in two Blends.

same advantage, as had the green heron and the crane. Life had become most desperate and even the daring and resourceful Billy Pickereel, who swam in the deepest hole in the pool, one not very deep at that, but protected by tangled roots.

And time passed and the leaves began falling into the water, and the skies changed and the fall rains came. Then the creek rose mightily and the prisoners in the pool were lifted up and whirled away with the wild torrent to where it plunged into the river.

In the great, wide, river Billy was lost for a time and somewhat dazed. The monster sturgeon and others of the big fish did not alarm him, for he was swift enough to avoid them easily should they attack, but he could not elude the sense of gloomy vastness, a sense that changed. There were always he preferred the livelier streams. Food there was and he grew space, though upon a diet somewhat changed. Some new-born instinct told him that he required a mate, and, for such as he, to find one was not hard. Very fair and proving not ungracious was one female among the hundreds swimming creekward and the promptly affilating two were very happy during all their married life, which lasted for some hours—before, with mutual respect and admiration, they separated, it might be for years and it might be forever. Charming practical as a pickereel in their love affairs.

NO ROOM FOR PESSIMISM

IN THE 20TH CENTURY

[From the Nation, London, England.]

Most of us believe that we live in stirring times, and that the century of which we have now taken a little is likely to be the romance of our new century. Even Nature herself might seem to have conspired with Man to confound all records and to set all precedents in the exuberance of our gigantic play, of our Messias and our San Francisco bear testimony. Nothing at any rate has been lacking of the spectacular in human history. The decade has been rich in wars and revolutions. The year through which we are now passing has to most spectators presented a world "seething like a sauceman," as the little "Chinese Emperor" says of China in his penitential psalm. Almost every country of the New and the Old World seems simultaneously rocking beneath the tide of some cosmic energy making for upheaval and for transformation. The quick awakening of the spell-bound East is but the most amazing and magnificent of the great episodes in the romance of our new century. Every nation has its peculiar expression of those forces of unrest and revolution. Never since the beliquity of vision, or an equally unusual perversion of temper, for a modern Englishman dwelling in the very center of this throbbing life to deny its existence. Yet there is one man to whom all these seeming marvels of new thought and achievement are matters, not of mere indifference, but of deep concern. For democracy, which sees in every field of endeavor outside the sciences "signs of exhaustion" and "a dearth of genius," who commiserates his hearers in their lot, who divides into two groups, "one materialistic, strongly ethical, and Protestant, and the other half-skeptical, half-superstitious, that of Modernist Catholicism." Everything is moving rapidly along the road to ruin. The great industrial fabric of the nineteenth century is tottering, our coal supply is being exhausted with criminal carelessness, and "our labor was no longer very good and was becoming exceedingly dear." The Yellow Man was coming to his kingdom, and "would make short work of the pampered trade-unionist," and "if present tendencies continued to prevail, Popular and West Ham would some day have to be turned into grazing farms again."

The root of all the trouble lay in democracy, "perhaps the silliest of all fetishes seriously worshipped among us." For democracy, who throne the foolish working man, who "seemed to have resolved to make himself comfortable by taxing capital—plain words, by looting the accumulations of Queen Victoria's reign, and living on the rates and taxes. He would have a short life and a merry one."

Where shall we look for this Spirit that Denies, this supreme and universal pessimist? What sort of deity resides in the ordering of human events which Dr. Inge, our great city church, recognizes for the universe? We presume that there is somewhere in his theology a place for "God, somewhere, apparently, as remote from human history and the help of man as "the Gods" of Epicurus himself.

"Who haunts the lucid interspace of world and world, Where never creeps a cloud, or moves a wind, Nor ever falls the least white star of

MANY PHEASANTS NEAR ST. KITTS

Fewer Shot This Year, Although the Season Was Open.

St. Catharines hunters who have been keeping tab report that during the month open season for English pheasants which just ended even fewer birds than the previous year were shot. The birds themselves appeared more able to keep out of the way of the hunter's shotgun and many a hunter failed to get as much as a pot shot at a bird. One man reports that he killed twenty-five, but this was on his own farm and nobody else was allowed to shoot there. Last year he got only about half that number. It is all a matter of luck, he says, and birds only, the killing of a hen pheasant making one liable to a very heavy fine.

Judging by the comparatively few English pheasants which were killed this year and last, there is little danger of the species being exterminated by the efforts of bird lovers. "We feared that there would be such a slaughter last year, when the Government decided to open season against our wishes, that all the birds would be killed off, but they have multiplied so rapidly and are so hard to shoot that it looks as if the species would be preserved to us. The birds were exceedingly Jerry this season, which shows they are getting wise to the ways of civilized man. Unfortunately too many of the pheasants die of cold in the winter, and many a lone bird shut off from its mate is killed by famished crows, who chase it till it drops and then make short work of it. In fact, the pheasant, it is very fortunate that the hunters don't shoot many of the birds. If I had my way about it the open season would last for only one or two days. That's enough."

The English pheasants around St. Catharines are probably the only ones in Canada. They were "planted" in 1898 by some lovers of sport who have done much to preserve the birds. Last year was the first open season.

RICHELIEU.

(London Globe)

Richelieu, a pretty little place about twelve miles from Chillon, in the department of Indre-et-Loire, derives its name from the family of Cardinal Richelieu, whose patrimonial lands extend to an area now occupied by part of the town. The people have not shown any undue haste in commemorating their townsman, who after all, stands in little need of a monument. A committee has been formed, and has, appropriately, the high and unanimous patronage of the Academie Française, which owes its existence to the cardinal. Other learned societies are represented. It has been decided whether the monument will be in bronze or stone.

These Two Girls Bu

How'd You Like a Wild Turkey This Christmas? Biggest Wild Bird Is the Smartest of Them All

BY S. D. BARNES, Famous Hunter of Big Game.

In New York State, where the native wild turkey has long been extinct, and consequently there are no troublesome open-season limitations, a few thoughtful sportsmen have stocked their preserves with birds of the pure wild strain, purchased from breeders in Pennsylvania and the south, and for this Thanksgiving will have sport of a sport that is now uncommon north of the Mason and Dixon line.

But in the down south country proper, through the cotton and sugarcane belt, and among the rugged mountain ranges which here and there defy the encroachment of cotton and cane planters, the turkeys you find are not of the incubator sort.

A good turkey hunter can nearly always get his game, for he has made a life's study of its habits; but good turkey hunters are not particularly plentiful in any locality, and presumably that is why the legislators of the various Southern States have extended the open season to such a length that it affords hardly a pretence of protection.

Still the fact that a hunter has failed to kill a wild turkey, no matter where and how much he may have sought the chance, is nothing to his discredit as a woodsman or gunner. It is not difficult to find men who have lived all their lives in first-class turkey-country, and yet have killed neither gobbler nor hen.

There is so little dependent upon chance in turkey hunting. The chances are not one in a hundred that you may approach within a gunshot of a flock without being seen or heard. No other species of game is so constantly alert; so keen of sight and hearing.

Providing he knows how to shoot quickly and straight, the duck hunter for upland birds depends on his own decoys, the hunter of deer and moose upon his guide—but the man who would kill a wild turkey must match his own intelligence and skill against an instinctive wariness that is but little short of marvellous.

In such a contest the balance of advantage is always with the game, except perhaps in the early spring months, when the birds are mating, and the gobbler may be decoyed to his death by artfully imitating the call of the hen.

The imitation, to be successful, must be absolutely correct. Turkey calling is a fine art, which, happily for the turkeys, few succeed in mastering. But true sportsmanship has always discountenanced taking such unfair advantage of an adversary.

A properly trained dog is of service in locating and scattering the flocks, but a turkey will not lie to the dog, like a quail or grouse, unless it is flushed by a dog a turkey may alight in the first tree, or it may fly a mile—and then "hit running." In this sort of hunting the combination gun with rifle and shot barrels finds its chief field of use.

California alone of the Pacific States, and only Ontario among the Canadian provinces, make provision for the protection of their wild turkeys. The Californian turkeys are doubtless of the Mexican species, since the Rocky Mountains and the plains country have always separated them from the habitat of their eastern cousins.

means to direct "business" advantages for well-organized groups of producers. Mr. Balfour would have liked to keep property strong, and to resist Radical and Socialist encroachments on it or interferences with it, and on these lines he might have brought his party back on the wings of a powerful reaction. But he could not have thought it wise to tamper with real wages in a period of high prices; and it was always possible to discern the workings of this prudent thought struggling through the mists of his half-sincere dialectic on "Tariff Retaliation."

Conservative also were the main lines of his constructive policy. To the Church he, like all the Cecils, leaned too heavily; but in Ireland he thought out and largely executed the rather critical and expensive but plausible policy of sending off home rule by doles, a re-education of the more subtle than any of Shannon, and peasant proprietors, and on the whole, he lacked ideas and resources in the field of domestic politics.

BIRTH OF THE PHONOGRAPH

(By Rev. Thos. B. Gregory.)

It was 34 years ago—Nov. 27, 1877—that Edison announced to the world his discovery of the principle of the phonograph.

The first attempt at constructing a "talking machine" was made in 1877 by Kratzstein, in response to an inquiry made and prize offered by the Imperial Academy of Science, St. Petersburg. Kratzstein showed that all the vowel sounds could be distinctly reproduced by blowing through a reed instrument.

While he was engaged in his experiments, a clever mechanic of Vienna named Kempelen succeeded in making the first "talking machine." But, ingenious as these devices were, they were too complicated for general use, and, besides, were incapable of recording or taking down automatically any human sound, song or speech. Hence their usefulness was very limited.

In the year 1877, Thomas A. Edison, while experimenting with regard to reproducing a message sent out by the Morse system into a diaphragm with a stylus attached, noticed that the stylus moved with force sufficient to prick his finger. Right there was the germ idea of the phonograph.

With that prick of the finger the "Wizard" began to think and to investigate, and he found that he could get indentations with a needle attached to the ferrotrope of the diaphragm which were capable of reproduction as sound vibrations by passing them under a stylus connected to a similar diaphragm.

Continuing his experiments, Edison found that if the "record," or indented cylinder, were caused to rotate under a similar diaphragm furnished with a smooth stylus instead of a cutting one, the indentations would, in their turn, cause the diaphragm to vibrate, and thus reproduce the sound of the voice that originally set up the vibrations.

Such was the origin of the first really efficient "talking machine," the wonderful "phonograph," so named from "phone," a sound, and "graphema," to write, meaning sound-writing.

By the 27th of November, of the year 1877, Edison had run his great idea home, and on that ever memorable day he announced his marvellous discovery to the world.—New York American.

Geography Revised

Ellis Parker Butler Adds Some Comment of His Own.

This month when the Puget Sound University carried out its Tacoma, Wash., a new work of geography will be made public. It is called "The Revised Geography," and was written by Ellis Parker Butler on the front sheets of his first success, "Pigs Is Pigs." At the carnival the book will be exhibited in a collection of colored books in a collection of colored books in a collection of colored books.

The dolphin is a deep sea hen And eats an anchor now and then.

Lesson I, following a map drawn by the author, was:

Pigs is mighty useful beast, From China to New York; When alive all pigs is pigs, But when they're dead They're pork.

Another lesson read: Dogs is mighty useful beast; They might seem bad at first; They might seem worse right along, But when they're dead They're wurst.

The geography further stated: The deer's a mighty useful beast From Petersburg to Tennessee, For while he lives he hopes around, And when he's dead he's venison.

The calf's a mighty useful beast, Supporting us just between them. The ankle and the knee.

A LIBERAL APPRECIATION OF MR. ARTHUR BALFOUR

[From The Nation, London, England.]

The following comment upon Mr. Balfour's resignation published by the London Nation before the choice of Mr. Bonar Law as his successor:

We speak with entire sincerity when we say that we deeply regret Mr. Balfour's retirement from the leadership of the Unionist party. Mr. Balfour is the best critical mind in the country, and this is not a time when criticism should be left to second-rate intellects and third-rate characters. He is our first parliamentarian. And he is the only great living Conservative. It has been the evil fortune of his later days that these brilliant gifts of Mr. Balfour have been exercised in chains. When chief is commanded to execute a policy in which he does not believe, it is time for him to go, and this is the fate which latter-day Toryism reserved for its most distinguished, though not its most successful, leader. If Mr. Balfour had had his way, there would have been no revival of protection and no rejection of the budget. From the consequences of these acts flowed the Tory disaster of 1905, and the two defeats of 1910. The Conservative leader was more successful in his last effort to save the House of Lords from itself. But his victory has cost him the leadership. Those who know the almost intolerable strain of modern political life will sympathize with Mr. Balfour's plea of diminishing powers. But we can all realize also that it is one thing to command a loyal crew and another to run a ship in which the captain's cabin is beset by clamorous mutineers, eager to "tip him the black spot." Mr. Balfour has now politely handed the vessel, with its highly inflammatory cargo and its dismal array of petty officers. We do not grieve, and we do not think that he could have led his party to an effective victory. His first task in such an hour would have been the framing of a protectionist tariff, not for passage into law, but for submission to a constituency fated to reject it. His

Never has she published a testimonial or used a letter without the written consent of the writer, and never has the Company allowed these confidential letters to get out of their possession, as the hundreds of thousands of them in their files will attest.

Out of the vast volume of experience which Mrs. Pinkham has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge needed in your case. War Correspondent Writes Eye-Witness

Francis McCullagh, of the war correspondents in Tripoli, left the scene of action against the massacre of Arab soldiers in the London Daily News as follows: As I walked past by a group of Italian, who had milled Arab soldiers in their hands, bright and left. They were led by an officer, but by an Italian, also with a revolver in his hand. He advised us not to go near the scene. It was dangerous. His voice thick, rapid and indistinct, he said: 'A drunken man.'

Other Oilfields.

Dr. Frank, a Socialist member, said that during the speech of Herr von Heydebrand, the 'uncrowned King of Prussia,' there was a demonstration by another uncrowned personage, the crown prince. It was an object lesson such as is not often vouchsafed to the German people. This imposes upon us the duty to work with all our strength, so that by the time when the crown prince hopes to ascend the throne the establishment of democracy shall no longer be placed in the hands of a human being.

THE OIL FIELDS OF THE WHOLE WORLD

The term oilfield is usually applied to one of those regions of the globe where petroleum, which varies in grade from the volatile naphtha to the semi-fluid mineral tar, exudes from the earth.

But although many countries may produce sufficient crude petroleum for local consumption, it is a well-known fact that none of the present-day corporations of the world has yet seen how to transport it in bulk.

It seems hardly possible, but it is nevertheless a fact, that the crude oil is sent along one or other of the trunk pipes, of which there are some 15 main lines, propelled by powerful pumps, from the days when barrels were sent by road, to the light iron tanks on wheels, thence to the iron tanks mounted on railway wagons or canal barges.

should attempt to poison the foxes it wouldn't do any good, for they could not reach the dead bodies in the back of the den without smashing the big mass of concrete.

"I am thinking, however," said the man whose occupation is both novel and profitable, "of getting a couple of good bloodhounds on an added protection. Insure them? No company will write a risk on silver foxes. I guess I'll have to worry about the way I'm going. If this couple live and mate as well as I expect they should bring good returns.
