AN IMPRESSIVE SCENE

Special to The Planet. London, August 9.-Edward VII, was crowned king of England at 12.39

The news of the crowning was announced by an official outside Westminster Abbey. It was repeated throughout London, and was received with cheers which spread thoughout the stands and crowds far up the streets as the bells pealed joyfully. As the hour appointed for the departure of the royal procession for Westminster Abbey approached the excitement about Buckingham palace was most marked, Punctual to time, the advance guard of the royal cavalcade issued from the archway, the horses of the troopers curvetting nervously as they faced the wall of humanity that cheered their coming. Shortly after-wards came the Prince and Princess of Wales' procession, and finally, within a few minutes their Majesties state coach appeared at the gateway, and the King and Queen smiled and bowed in response to the mighty roar of

On the roof of the palace were perched a number of fashionably dressed ladies, members of the household, and their cheers, with the fluttering of their handkerchiefs as the King and Queen entered the royal coach gave the signal for the deafening plaudits of the populace which greeted their majesties, as they emerged from the gates. The ovation was taken up by the crowds which thronged the Mall, and was repeatedly acknowledged by the occupants of the state coach. KING LOOKED PALE.

The King looked pale and rather fine-drawn, and was by no means as brown and robust as previous reports had led one to expect, and while punc-tiliously bowing from side to side, he did so with a gravity very unusual to him. He seemed to sit rather far back in the carriage, and moved his body very little. His curious crimson robes and cap, the maintenance of which, simply a band of ermine with a crim-son velvet top, doubtless gave him the unusual appearance.

The Queen beside him was radiant. The Queen beside him was radiant. their scarlet and ermine making vivid she never looked better. The cheers contrasts with the deep blue of the which greeted the pair were loud and unmistakably genuine and very dif-ferent from the perfunctory applause which usually greets the appearance of members of the royal family.

The three processions to the Abbey were carried out according to program, and the only striking features of the first two were the gorgeous state carriages and the beautiful trappings and horses.

PRINCE HENRY ON A BACK SEAT, The crowd paid but little attention to the occupants of the vehicles. In the last carriage of the first procession sat Prince Henry of Prussia on the back seat, but he was so occupied with talking to the Duke of Sparta that he seemed not to notice the crowd. The Prince of Wales also seemed very indifferent and stolid, but the Princess of Wales bowed and smiled constantly.

Lord Kitchener, Admiral Seymour and Gen. Gazelee came in for much attention, but they all seemed to look straight ahead and pay little atten-tion to the people. Kitchener in the resplendant full dress uniform of a general also looked unfamiliar, and many persons did not recognize him.

INDIANS PICTURESQUE.

The Indians were undoubtedly the most picturesque pictures of the pro-cession, while the state coach of the King, drawn by the fat Hanoverian horses which figured in all of the late Queen Victoria's processions, seemed much more like fairyland than usual.

The progress of the royal cortege was marked by no special incident, with the exception of a slight accident to Lord Edward Pelham Clinton, one of the grooms in waiting, whose carriage was run into. It was a continued triumph, and reached its climax on the arrival at the Abbey, where there was a scene of unparalleled enthusiasm which did not cease until their majesties appeared in the

GOD SAVE THE KING.

This is a day of gladness and rejoicing throughout the whole Pritish Empire. It marks an epoch in our thistory.

Within the historic walls of West eminister this afternoon His Majesty King Edward VII. and his beloved Queen Consort Alexandra were formally crowned.

It was comparatively a quiet and simple ceremony-far removed from the brilliant and impressive pageandry prepared for June 26. But it was in many respects, more truly and disdinctively an Imperial function. There were neither foreign princes mor special envoys, and the regular embassies were less conspicuous than the Indian Princes and Colonial Pre- his captured convoys. De Wet was eniers. ENGLAND'S WORK IN EGYPT.

The announcement that the last estone has been laid on the great Nile dam at Assouan calls attention again to one of the most gigantic undertakings ever entered upon for the Spenefit of a people, and incidentally to the work which the British have accomplished in Egypt during the past ten or twelve years. Great, indeed, as has been the material improvement of the country under the English occupation, that is the least part of the benefit which the Egyptians have derived from it. Under the sold system the Egyptian peasants were probably the most down-trodden people in the world. Their whole existence was a round of exactions to supply the wants and luxuries of the officials who were placed over them in almost endless gradation. They were infinitely worse off than slaves, for frequently their masters did not leave them enough even to feed themselves and their families. All that the English have changed. The peasant now knows that he will reap what he sows, and under the new conditions there has come a wonderful improvement in the character and spirit of the people. Formerly a handful of the fierce Arab tribesmen of the desert would scatter an army of the timid Egyptians, but under lately shown themselves quite a match in the field for their former dreaded enemies. There is evidently a great future before this country, Arab chieftain and taught him and all turies the prey of conquering hordes who coveted its wealth. NO RECORD BREAKER.

Hamilton Spectator. The lady who is to adjust the noose at that New Orleans hanging probably deludes herself with the belief that she is establishing a record, but there have been millions of men who who have been roped in some time or another by the opposite sex who could convince her that she is mistaken.

DE WET AND SCOTCH WHISKY. St. James Gazette.

De Wet is possessed of humor. One of the leading officials in a refugee camp is a Scotchman who during the dinner took occasion in offering the general a drink to say he must have got a fair amount of whisky among inquiries if they were guarded by Scotsmen. If this were so, he further inquired if it contained any whisky. If the second condition accompanied the first, he always gave the convoy a wide berth, because he knew the beggars would fight to the last man!

KING EDWARD'S TRAINED NURSE

M. A. P. time of the King's recent operation the nurse who had been present to assist, left the room on his ecovering consciousness, but not before the king had caught sight of her face. Directly after, he asked one of the physicians who she was, for he had seen her somewhere, and quite lately. The doctor admitted that this was so, for, but a short while before blood, but self-will and presumption, his majesty had presented this same displeasing and dishonoring to God with a medal for her South Africa. That gift has been rendered doubly precious to its recipient for the king asked for the nurse, shook hands with her, saying at the the same time: "I have proved for myself how well you deserved that

PARENTS TO BLAME. Windsor Record.

The Ridgetown Dominion is shocked over the liberty usurped by young boys and girls of the present day. It censures parents for a certain laxity in family discipline in permitting their children to hang about the streets at an hour when they should be at home and to bed. The Dominion's remarks cover more than merely local conditions. There is no questioning the statement that the idea of personal freedom has been carried too far. Freedom is a good thing only when wisely directed; therwise the chances are that it is likely to be abused. The injunction to "bring up a child in the way it should go" ought not to be lost sight of, even though we are living in the twentieth instead of the first century. The time will never be when a can afford to dispence with a proper home training and hope to be an exemplary character in after life.

He left that place about a year ago, and has since been engaged in literary work at Stratford. He expects to remain here about two weeks, and as will be seen by the announcement elsewhere, he will act as musical director for another concert at Grace Church, Ouvry, on Monday evening Aug. 18th. Another bad accident happened the Dresden beet sugar factory .- A boy named Hass, who was engaged as water carrier, fell off a ladder on the second storey. He alighted on a fly wheel then struck on his hip. An amploye who was on the foot of the ladder tried to catch the boy, but as he could only use one hand he could not hold him, though the force of the fall was broken somewhat. He also sent the boy in another direction which was very fortunate as the fall straight downward meant almost cer-tain death. As it is, the boy has his ankle broken in two places, gash in the other foot, and bruises on hip and head. He will recover

[Copyright, 1902, by W. L. Vail.] onation ceremony can be omitted or and culture, and the coronation is what event at once formal and magnificent has been the aim of the king. In the royal proclamation announcing the celebration of the coronation King Edward enjoined upon all who are to do any service in that ceremony to appear "in all respects furnished and appointed as to so great a solemning appertaineth and answerable to the dignities and places which every one of them respectively holdeth and enjoyeth, and of this they or any of them are not to fail, as they will answer the contrary at their perils."

King Edward having abandoned that part of the ceremonial which for centuries has taken place in Westminster hall, the center of interest for the day of coronation is the service in Westminster Abbey. At the moment the royal pair enter the door the choir greets them with an anthem beginning "I was glad when they said unto me, we will go into the house of the Lord." Proceeding through the body of the church, the king and queen kneel in front of the state or coronation chairs, say their private prayers and then take seats in the chairs. The first important ceremony is the so called "recognition" of Edward VII. as the lawful monarch of England, a seemingly useless performance in view more than a year. But the coronation is a ceremonial, formal, political and religious.

When all have taken their places in the Abbey, the archbishop of Canterbury makes "the recognition" of the king four times, presenting in as many directions King Edward as the "undoubted king of the realm," each demand being greeted with loud acclaims of "God save King Edward VII.!" and at the last recognition trumpets sound and drums are beaten. After the litany has been said the king and queen, each kneeling before the altar, make separately their "first offering"-namely, an altar cloth of gold, and the king also an ingot of gold, one pound in weight, which the archbishop of Canterbury places in the oblation basin, the pall of gold being laid on the altar. His grace meantime says the prayer. "O God, who dwellest in the high and boly place!" The king and queen then return to their state chairs. The communion service is commenced, and the sermon by the bishop of London follows. The coronation oath is then administered to the king by the archbishop of Canterbury, which he receives kneeling before the altar and with his hand upon the holy gospels. He appends to the form of oath his royal sign manual.

The hymn, "Come, Holy Ghost, Our Souls Inspire," follows; also the an-VINCE the last coronation of a them, "Zadok the Priest." Then comes sovereign of England, sixty- the ceremony of anointing. The crown, which has been resting on the altar, is consecrated and blessed by the archbishop and placed on his majesty's head. "God save the king!" will then be shouted by the assembly, trumpets will sound and drums be beaten. The archbishop pronounces the exhortation, "Be strong and of good courage," and "The King Shall Rejoice In Thy Strength, O Lord!" is rendered by the choirs. The crowning of the queen follows. King Edward receives the old St. Edward's crown, enlarged at the rim to fit his head. When the king has been crowned, the princes of the blood royal and the peers put on their coronets, the bishops their caps and the kings of arms their crowns. After the king has been crowned the Bible is placed in his hand. The "Te Deum" is sung, and the king is formally enthroned.

King Edward's throne rests upon a platform covered with the richest cloth of gold and raised above the pavement the height of five steps and is directly beneath the central tower of the Abbey. At the close of the "Te Deum" he ascends the platform and is lifted up of the fact that he has ruled as king | into his throne by the archbishop and bishops and other peers of the realm. The archbishop then exclaims, "Stand firm and hold fast from henceforth the seat and state of royal and imperial dignity which is delivered unto you in the name and by the authority of Almighty God!"

Homage is then paid to his majesty by the archbishops and bishops, who kiss his left cheek, by the princes of the blood royal and by dukes, marquises, earls, viscounts and barons. Amid shouts of the people-"God save King Edward!" "Long live King Edward!" "May the king live forever!"and the sound of trumpets and drums the king leaves his throne and descends to the altar.

The holy sacrament is then administered to the king and queen, and the archbishop reads the rest of the communion service and pronounces the blessing.

The final act of the coronation ceremony is the changing of the imperial mantle for the royal robe of purple velvet in St. Edward's chapel. Finally the king, wearing his crown and bearing the scepter and orb, passes through the choir of the Abbey to the door where be entered attended by the peers, the archbishops and bishops in full regalia. CORONATION CHAIR IN WESTMINSTER ABBEY.

THE CHAIR

[Copyright, 1902, by H. Musk.] COMPLETE transformation of the interior of Westminster Abbey was found necessary for the ceremony of crowning King Edward VII. and Queen Alexandra. In fact, the venerable and historic sanctuary will be barely recognizable. The south side of the sacristy is flanked by the royal box, and from the stage whereon the ceremony is enacted tiers of galleries mount toward the roof for the seating of noble guests.

During the sermon King Edward and Queen Alexandra will sit in two chairs in front of the royal box, with officers of state on either side. The ceremony of anointing and crowning King Edward, however, takes place while he is seated in St. Edward's chair, directly in front of the altar. From the time of St. Edward, or Edward the Confessor, to Queen Victoria the monarchs of England have been crowned in Westminster Abbey, and many of them are buried there. Edward the Confessor is honored by a chapel containing a shrine to his memory. Queen Elizabeth and Mary Stuart have monuments. In the south transept of the Abbey there are monuments to most of the famous poets of England, and elsewhere in the aisles are memorials to Englishmen illustrious in various fields. Officially the Abbey is known as the Collegiate Church of Westminster and is governed by a dean.

The ancient chair used for the crowning of King Edward VII. has stood in the chapel of Edward the Confessor. called also the Chapel of the Kings, for over six centuries. Originally used in Scotland for the coronation of Scottish kings, it was brought as an offering at the shrine of Edward the Confessor in 1297. Since that time it has been designated as St. Edward's chair. In height the coronation chair of England is 6 feet 7 inches. At the seat it is 3 feet 8 inches broad and in depth 2 feet. At the corners four lions support the structure, leaving a space of about nine inches between the seat and the bottom board. Within the space between the bottom board and seat is inclosed the famous Stone of Scone, so called.

No end of legends have grown up around the coronation chair and the stone. The stone was brought from Scotland with the chair. One tradition has it that the stone originally came from Ireland, where it was known as the Liasfail, or Stone of Destiny. It was used at the Irish national coronation seat from the seventh century B. C. It was supposed by the people of Ireland to be the very stone upon which Jacob rested his head during his vigil at Bethel. One legend is to the effect that when the rightful monarch takes his seat upon the stone it emits a loud musical note. Among other names the stone has been called Jacob's Stone and the Fatal Marble

The use of the stone in coronation ceremonies is traced to the primitive practice of raising Gothic and Celtic kings to an elevated seat of natural stone at the time of the crowdles glo-Saxon monarchs were crow Kingston-on-Thames on the King

Stone, and even at Westminster ball from a very early date the king was lifted to a marble seat at the upper end of the hall, then known as the King's Bench.

In a work on "Memorials of Westminster Abbey" the venerable Dean Stanley states that the stone of the coronation chair is very probably the stony pillow on which Columba rested and on which his dying head was laid in the abbey of Iona. "If so, it belongs," says the dean, "to the minister of the first authentic coronation of Christendom, the coronation of Aidan by Columba, A. D. 571."

Edward I. was crowned upon the stone at Scone when he became king of the Scots. He brought it to England, and Dean Stanley declares had the chair made to inclose it, thus "the fragment of the world old Celtic race was imbedded in the new Plantagenet

Only once since the coronation chair and stone were deposited in the chapel of Edward the Confessor have they been removed. That was at the ceremoney of installing Cromwell as lord protector in Westminster hall. At the joint coronation of William of Orange and Queen Mary II. a second coronation chair was made, like the first, with the exception of the supporting lions and the stone. This has since been used for the crowning of the consort of the new sovereign. Queen Alexandra, however, will not receive the crown in the chair, but kneeling upon the steps of the altar.

Westminster Abbey was founded in the eleventh century by Edward I., and the English people count it most fortunate that after a lapse of eight centuries a monarch of the same name and lineage should receive the homage of the nation and be crowned king in that historic pile. No similar succession of events as the crowning of a line of kings of over 800 years at the same altar is recorded of any other building in the world. The Abbey is officially designated in the proclamations of coronation as "Our Palace of Westminster." The houses of parliament are also called the "Palace of Westminster," and the Abbey is, with relation to its connection with the palace, the Church of St. Peter. The terms of the royal proclamation therefore designate the Abbey as the central point of the palace, or the "holy

HUBERT NORTHEN.

At the coronation service the royal procession enters the Abbey by the "I gladly recommend Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription," writes Mrs. J. W. G. Stephens, of Mila, Northumberland County, Va. "Refore my third little boy was born I took six bottles. He is the finest child and has been from birth, and I suffered very much less than I ever did before. I unhesitatingly advise expectant mothers to use the 'Favorite Prescription.'" west doors. Along the center sisle the king's and queen's processions move upon a raised platform to the so called "theater," or stage, where the principal parts of the ceremony are enacted. The platform way is carpeted. Along the sides, on the pavement of the aisle, stand the military. The coronation chairs stand in a large free space in the center of the stage. On one hand is the royal box for the members of the reigning family. Opposite the roy-al box is that of the bishops and above that the gallery, or box, for foreign embassadors and special envoys. When all are in their places, the interior of the Abbey presents a brilliant array of colors-scarlet, purple and gold in vel-first appearance before the public as queen consort of Edward VII., wearing the crown of England. The most gorgeous jewel in that crown, the Kohinoor diamond, will then for the first time grace the diadem of a newly crowned queen. Queen Alexandra's crown is that known as the St. Editha, named in honor of Edith, the wife of Edward the Confessor. It was made for Queen Mary of Modena, the consort of James II., and is much the same in shape as that of Edward VII., a cap of purple velvet, surmounted by two arches and faced with ermine. It is set with diamonds of great value intermixed with pearls and other rare jewels. This crown is always used when the sovereignty exists in the male branch. As is the case with King Edward's crown, Alexandra's has undergone presence of the assembled populace, to Buckingham palace.

Needless to say that the coronation robes of Queen Alexandra, who has a genius for dress and the purse of a monarch, excite far greater curiosity the world over than the dress of King Edward VII. And yet the queen consort has not ransacked the earth for beautiful and costly apparel, but decreed at the outset that her own robes as well as those of the peeresses in attendance should be made throughout of materials manufactured by British subjects. This does not mean that there is a monotony of color or a sameness of fabric in the feminine display, for the sun never sets upon the British dominions. Whatever the British isles themselves cannot produce is supplemented by the skillfal needleworkers

In the matter of her own robes Queen Alexandra had but to please her own sweet self unless she chose to cater to the wishes of her royal spouse, which is not very probable at an age apstate until the king arrives at his proaching threescore, but the peeresses were compelled to follow the dicta of stage manager of the imperial show, the earl marshal. And so, after fortunes had been expended in materials and labor, it transpired that designs selected for the peeresses in December would not be the thing for June, and amid the usual tears and protestations all had to be cast aside and the agony endured over again. But what of it all since the titled ones will be so fortunate as to be in evidence at the most magnificent coronation in the history of

Now and again there is an item in the

FIERY SPEECH

Government Denounced Because of Refusal to Extradict Sergt. Sheridan.

Sheridan, While in Irish Constabulary, Convicted Innocent People by Perjury.

London, Aug. 8 .- On a motion providing for the third reading of the appropriation bill, in the house of commons to-day, T. P. O'Connor, Irish Naionalist, made a brief fighting speech in which he re-aired the grievances of Ireland, vigorously denouncing Sergt. Sheridan. He described Sheridan as a perjured villain, who, while in the Irish constabulary, falsely convicted innocent persons. Mr. O'Connor very strongly attacked the government for its refusal to retradite Sheridan from his retreat at Lowell, Mass.

George Wyndham, chief secretary for Ireland, declined to further dis the Sheridan case, but promised that if Irish landhords combined and resorted to such practices as boycotting and intimidation he would take much pleasure in summoning the offenders before magistrates.

Although official announcement will not be made until to-night, the Earl of Dudley has been appointed Lord Lieutenant of Ireland; Charles Thomson Ritchie, chancellor of the exchequer, and Akers-Douglas home sec-The house of commons adjourned to-

UP TO BLUE RUIN JOHN

Ald. E. A. Mounteer has on exhibtion in his butcher shop a stalk of corn 14 feet in length. This stalk of corn was grown this year on J. Mounteer's farm, in Raleigh, and Mr. Mounteer has a whole field of such corn. This will no doubt silence the tongues of Blue Ruin John and the people who are spreading the report that the corn crop in Raleigh is a complete failure.

CURIOUS COINCIDENCE

"I ran across quite a coincidence this week," was the remark of the genial sergeant-major of the regiment, Geo. Embrey, of Thomas Stone & Sons carpet department, to The Planet last "It happened last Friday, evening. "It happened last Friday, while I was showing a lady some carpets. I picked up a roll of carpet weighing about 115 pounds and threw it to one side. I had done the same thing a hundred times before, but I wrenched the cords of my back badly. I finished work that night and worked the next day, Saturday, but on that evening I couldn't stand it any long-er, so quit and went home. I was laid up until Wednesday. That same Saturday night, John Cartier, down in Austin's carpet department, strained his back in the same way, and we were laid up the same length of time, going to work on the same Wednesday."

YACHTING

TABLES TURNED BY TECUMSEH.

Montreal, Queboc, Aug. 8. Under light weather conditions, the Tecumseh, the American challenger, defeated the Canadian defender, Trident, in the second race for the Seawanhaka Cup, to-day, on Lake St. Louis, being one minute 22 seconds in the lead. There was very little breeze and the weather distinctly favored the American boat. The race was over a triangular course of four miles, sailed three times, making a total distance of 12 miles. The first leg was a beat to windward, the second a reach, and the third a free run. At 1.45 the preparatory signal was blown. The race was something of the see-saw variety, both ton in Detroit and $6.25 here, so the Trident and Tecumseh leading at combined in favor of the scow boat. As they neared the finishing line, the increasing her advantage on the last leg, and she finished 1 minute 22 sec, onds ahead.

First Round-Tecumseh, 2,47.53; Trident 2.47.45. Second round-Tecumseh 3.34.57; Trident, 3.35.13. | Finish -Tecumseh, 4.22.25; Trident, 4.23.47. Elapsed time-Tecumseh, 2.27.25; Trident, 2.28.47.

BASEBALL

The 'Diamonds' defeated the 'Park Street Cleaners" yesterday in a fast game of ball by a score of 23 to 21. The Remnants challenge the Aberdeens to a game of baseball, date to be arranged by the managers of each team. The Remnants are composed of what is left of the old 'Shizocarps' and "Reds."

There will be a masquerade base ball game at 1.30 o'clock on Tecumseh Park Monday afternoon. The parade will come down King street at one o'clock with the German Band at its head. They will be the "Will Bees" and the "Never Weres." Geo. Owens and Ross Bali will be the umpires and a funny time may be expected. Immediately after the masquerade game the Aberdeens and Wallaceburgers will Manager Peter McAuley will pick his team from the following players for Monday's game with the Wal-pole Island Indians: Hamilton, Depew, O'Keeffe, Myers, Sowerby, Philp, Cartier, Smith, Robert, Griffin and Kenny. A good game is promised the fans, as the Indians are much stronger than last year, when they were defeated here by the C. M. C. by a score of 5-3. Mac. says he has the strongest team that can be pulled together in the Maple City and promises the citizens a number one article in the baseball line. The game is called for four o'clock on Tecumseh Park.

The Briscoes turned the tables of the Brooklyns last evening, defeating hem 12-4 in a keenly exciting game. Brady, who was in the box for the Brooklyns, did all the playing that was done for his side, receiving the poorest support. Grandbois, Brisco twirler, was always steady and received pretty good support. The game ended in a row, the Brooklyns refusing to play with a dollar ball and the umpire, Johnston, gave the game to the Briscos. These teams are well matched and a sories of games will altogether likely be ar-ranged between them. The playing of Pete Barry, an old Tiger, for the winners, was very notable.

WARM SUBJECT

Mr. Humphrey has a Few Questions he Wants to put to Local Coal Dealers.

"I would like you to ask why coal is o much cheaper in Detroit this year than it is here," said J. W. Humphrey

o The Planet this morning. "I saw in your paper," continued he that Mr. Campbell, of Scott & Co's said that they would not book any orders at less than $8 per ton. How does Mr Scott account for the fact coal is now selling in Detroit for $6.50 ton? This is the price for their winter coal, which, if you buy it now they will deliver any time during the winter. They are evidently not afraid of the coal strike. I was down there last Thursday and that was the price

The Queen then rose and accompanied by her entourage proceeded o the altar steps where, under pall of cloth-of-gold, she was quickly crowned by the Archbishop of York, supported by the bishops. An Account of an Important Meeting of the Rond Eau Bass Club.

Lone Tree Point, Aug. 9., 1902,-Today at Lone Tree Point, Ericau, there perjure yourself. was held a special meeting of all the bass, pike, pickerel, and others, barring mudcats and seaserpents, to consider the heavy fish question. The meeting was called to order and a chairman appointed.

The chairman announced the object of the meeting :- Whereas it has been rumored that sundry Archies, Macs, Vitals, Geordies and other crack angle worm stringers, have been unlawfully stretching the fish caught by them and otherwise painfully increasing their natural dimensions, and as th aforesaid crack reel twisters have been further accused of mathematical distortion when the number of the eatch in question was made public, we feel it to be our duty to take some action in the matter. It is now in order for our much maligned brethrep to give their evidence in the case. I

THE PEOPLE By Mrs. C. N. Williamson

"Nothing but good day," I returned with a smile that was strained as the Mrs. May Goddard, 332 Adelaide Street West, Toronto, whose portrait appears on the opposite column, speaks in the followsmile on a mask.

"I have been very frank, very outspoken, because I had to be so. But I hope you don't feel hard towards me?" "I don't think that I-feel anything,"

"Well, then, good-bye." I murmured something, and did not em to see the hand which she held out-a great lady condescending to a nisguided girl who had promised to mend her ways, and therefore deserved commendation. She gathered up her belongings and went to the door, then physicians without obtaining more than turned and looked at me anxiously. "You won't change your mind andand stay after all? I may-trust you?"

My eyes flashed to hers. "I am doing this not for you but for Mr. Bourke," I said. "I will not go back from my promise to myself." "Then I do trust you."

results highly gratifying. The pain in my back disappeared in a short time, and my general health improved greatly. I am now feeling fine, and am glad to have this She had the last word and so was Mechanically I began to put away the material on which I had been at work. I had finished typing Mr. Bourke's article, which was to appear in the "Fortnightly Review." Never would I do any more work for him. But he would find plenty of others to step into my place. I had only been with a severe headache which continued to grow worse. I heard of the many cures Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets employed out of charity.

When I had neatly arranged the papers I had no longer an excuse for inaction. I must make up my mind exactly what to do with myself. Somehow I seemed always to be making up my mind what to do with myself; and as soon as the matter was settled Fate interfered to undo it all again. I had run away from Arrish Mell Court; I had run away from Easel street; now I was going to run away from John Bourke, which meant leaving all that had become to me best worth living

Mrs. John Wiseman, Woodham Street, St. Mary's, Ont., says: "During a recent sharp attack of lumbago, due to exposure to cold, I used Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets with complete relief." I did not use the entire bottle, which speaks well for their I had promised him that never again would I be a coward and seek to end my own life. I would not break the romise, and so my troublesome self nad to be provided for; plans made by which my body was to be fed and clothed, just as if it were still of some

There was Roger Cope, of course. I could really do the thing which in my letter to Mr. Bourke I had hinted at. Probably Roger's offer was still open. and if I took it I could rehubilitate myself in the eyes of the world, in case my acquaintance with the great "Labor Member" became known to others peside Lady Feo Ringwood. Yet, no! I could not bring myself to that.

I thought of Mr. Westerley. But he liked Roger, and would advise me to act in a way contrary to my inclinaions, if according to common sense He was a dear old matchmaker, and with the best intentions in the world he would work to throw Roger Cope and me together. Therefore, Mr. Westerley was still out of the question.

My eyes feil upon a newspaper lying on the desk. It had not been there, I knew, before Lady Feo came. She had, doubtless, brought it in and forgotten to take it away. I picked it up and turned to the advertising pages. I could not go back to any of the agencies I had visited while I lived in Easel street, for Mr. Bourke was probably right in his deductions. At all events, they had offered me no hope, after the first visits I paid them; but Roger had certainly lost sight of me now, and he could not prejudice the minds of advertisers in the papers in case I should luckily discover one willing to try my

But I could find nothing in the long lists of persons wanted which offered hope for me, and I was on the point of flinging the paper aside with an impatient sigh when my eyes happened to fall upon the "personal" column on the first page. Then my heart gave a great bound and I snatched up the paper again, CHAPTER XVII.

What I Saw in the Personal Column. Destiny seemed bent on playing strange tricks with me of late; and the last trick was no less curious than those which had gone before. Strangest of all was it that this should come to "Heart-shape" were the two words, in capital letters at the head of the "personal" column, which had caught my startled attention. "If the younger of the two ladies who saw something which surprised her at the theater on a night several weeks ago would like to hear the explanation of a mystery and at the same time receive information greatly to her advantage," the paragraph went on, "she should be at the Marble Arch between the hours of seven and eight to-night or to-morrow Later the offer may no longer be open. The advertisement was meant for me, and no one else on earth! By the wording, "to night or to-mor-row," I judged that this was the first time that the notice had appeared. It would come out once again perhaps and then-unless the writer altered his or her intention-no more. I read the paragraph for the second time, and was struck by the conviction that it had been gleverly planned to be understood by nie alone.

If it had begon with the words, "Heart-shaped scar," others in the secret of that mysterious sign—John Bourke, for instance—might have been prompted by curiosity or an even deeper motive, to keep the appointed ren-dezvous. But "Heart-shape" might mean almost anything, were it not for the special significance of the message which followed. The uninitiated might easily pass it by as the device chosen easily pass it by as the device chosen by lovers who corresponded through the personal column of a newspaper. But I knew differently—I only. For the other eyes which had seen the "something surprising at the theater" would never see anything else in this world. A shiver went through my veins as I remembered the white, white arm on the background of black satin, and the vivid, pansy-colored, heart-shaped stain. For an instant I saw, as clearly as I had seen it before, the gypsy face as I had seen it before, the gypsy face which had looked up to our box from the stalls with its pale cat-eyes. The atmosphere of mystery and dread closed round me again, and I felt it as I had felt it then. Should I keep the tryst, or should I not? The thought frightened, yet at the same time fascinated me. There was still enough of the old self left in me to tingle with a subtle curlosity at the thought of solving the mystery connected with Lady Cope's death-the mystery which wove its web round John Bourke as well. As for the "information greatly to my advantage," my mind did not dwell upon that with such a sense of allurement. It seemed to me that, since I must go out of this one man's life, nothing could be really worth having any more. But I could not long resist the calling of the syren-voice, and after a very few moments of hesitation I determined that I would be at the Marble Arch at the time appointed. It was afternoon still, and there was little to delay me. The things given by John Bourke or lent by Mrs. Jennett I would not, of course, take away. I had only to change the tea-gown which had cost me so much bitterness for the black frock which I had worn when I came; make some excuse to Mrs. Jet nett for my departure—an excuse which would not cause her to send word of my sudden move to Mr. Bourke-and then I could go. I was about to cut the advertisement from the paper, when I reflected that to do so might rouse suspicion; and instead I tore of the entire sheet, which I folded into small compass. Then I threw the remainder into the waste-paper basket, and was on my way to the door when Mrs. Jennett came smiling in with a tray. "Ive brought your tea, my dear," she said, chirply, "It's after the usual time, but I just wouldn't bring it in while her ladyship was here. I had an idea, somehow, that you wouldn't care for her to stop too long. And, my gracious! I was in such a state when she would nsist on bouncing in. 'Twas almost as if she knew there was something in the room I didn't want her to see. But, of course, she couldn't. I do hope you didn't mind. As it turned out you'd met before, it was all right." "Oh, yes, it was all right," I echoed, drearily. "Well, you've seen Mr. Bourke's wife to be, if she can anyways manage it," Mrs. Jennett went briskly on, as she finished clearing a space for the teatray on the table where I had been working. "I suppose she could call herself Lady Feo Bourke, if it should ome off, couldn't she?"

"I suppose so," I repeated. "That would sound well! But then, Mr. Bourke doesn't care about titles and things of that sort, or money either. They say Lady Beaconsfield pro-posed to her husband under the clock at the Crystal Palace or somewhere; and he took her because she was rich, and could help him to reach the place he wanted. And they were happy ever after, just as it says in the story-books for any reason of toat sort, no matter how much it might be to his advan-tage which it certainly would! But then, her ladyship is such a beauty, and has such a way with her, anyone might fall in love with her just for herself. Don't you think so?"

"I do," I answered, truthfully. For I thought that, though I now, as a girl, almost hated Lady Feo, if I were a man she would be exactly the kind of woman I should admire most. And I grudged her the admission, which it hurt my heart to give. "Well, we shall see what we shall see," remarked Mrs. Jennett, oracular-

"Anyhow, Lady Feo Ringwood is the only great lady that Mr. Bourks ever will go to see; though there's a lot of them would give their eyes to get him at their houses. Haven't I made your tea right, my dear? You said yesterday it was so nice." "So it is now," I reassured her. "But my thoughts were somewhere else, to tell the truth. I—I've been reading a thing in the paper that set me thinking of—a very dear friend. I can't bear to not be worried if I should stay late, or even be away all night."

"Dear me," said Mrs. Jennett, "I'm not at all sure, miss, that I ought to let you go. The doctor said you must be so careful not to take cold—" "Ah, that was ten days ago," I reminded her. "But you haven't been out of doors since you came here. Do wait, miss, till Mr. Bourke's been in to-morrow, and see what he says." "I can't wait to see what Mr. Bourke says," I replied, trying to speak lightly, though the thought of his next coming wrung my heart. "He could say no more than you, after all, dear Mrs. Jennett; for, kind as he has been, he's not the master of my actions.'

"Of course not, miss," protested the little old woman. "But if you should spend the night with your friends, and ne should come before you got back, I'm sure he'd be anxious. He's only o young man, but he's much older than you, and he looks upon you as a child —himself as a sort of guardian. He told "He's not likely to call very early," I said, winking away the tears that rushed to my eyes. "Oh, how hot this tea is! It almost made me cry! And I shall leave a note which you can give him, in case-he should be before me.' "Very well, if you must go, you nust," sighed Mrs. Jennett. "But I shall be glad when it's to-morrow at this time, and I see you and Mr. Bourke sitting with your heads together over the typewriter."

I could bear no more, but sprang from my chair. "I must go and get ready," I explained. "Here's the note. wrote it to hand to you." "And her ladyship's? The letter she was to give you for Mr. Bourke?"

"She forgot to write it, after all," I said. "She was so interested in talking to me-about him." "I suppose she left her regards?"

Mrs. Jennett suggested, slyly. "Something of the sort. give them to Mr. Bourke if you like. I talked with my back to her, lest she should see that tears were running down my cheeks; and, reaching the door, I ran away without turning, on pretense of being in a desperate hurry. It had seemed hard to leave beautiful Arrish Mell Court, but it was a hundred times harder to leave this plain little house in Westminster. I had grown to love it dearly. Mrs. Jennett had told me how, when her "poor husband died," she had fallen into financial difficulties, and John Bourkewho knew them both through work her husband had done for him-came to the rescue, as he always did when he possibly could, if people were in trouble. He had offered to pay the rent of the house, and so much besides, as her lodger—a very generous arrangement, Mrs. Jennett had gratefully added. That was years ago, but, though it was a poky little place in a dull neighborhood, and several very grand men had wanted to share their chambers with Mr. Bourke (for she had overheard them say so with her own ears) he would not move away. I loved the house because it was associated with him, and I loved Mrs. Jennett because she loved him, and because he was good to her, even more than for the reason of her kindness to me. But I wished the attle bedroom where I had slept and dreamt of him good-bye, and I came downstairs and bade farewell with my eyes to the study, and from the mantel I stole the worst and oldest of the pipes in the motley collection there. Then I was ready to go; and I kissed Mrs. Jennett, her hand that still held the letter I had written to Mr. Bourke. To be Continued.

LETTER TO YOUNG LADIES

From the Treasurer of the Young People's Christian Temperance Association.

Miss Elizabeth Caine, Fond du Lac, Wis.

The advent of womanhood is fraught with dangers which even careful mothers too often neglect. Some of the dangers are belated and suppressed menstruation. "The lily droops on its stem and dies before its beauty is unfolded." It is well demonstrated in Miss Caine's letter that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is certain to assist nature to perform her regular duties, and young women who are irregular, or have any ailment peculiar to their sex should hasten to commence the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and then sit down and write a letter to Mrs. Pinkham telling her all about their illness; she will give the case careful and motherly consideration, and advise just what to do to get well; she considers such letters strictly confidential; she will charge nothing, and thousands of young women owe their present health and happiness to her advice.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all young women who are ill to write

Mrs. Pinkham invites all young women who are ill to write her for advice. Address Lynn, Mass., giving full particulars.

MISS ELIZABETH CAINE

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: - I want to tell you and all the young ladies of the country, how grateful I am to you for the benefits I have received from using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I suffered for eight months from suppressed menstruation, and it affected my entire system until I becams weak and debilitated, and at times felt that I had a hundred aches in as many places. I only used the Compound for a few weeks, but it wrought a change in me which I felt from the very beginning. I have been very regular since, have no pains, and find that my entire body is as if it was renewed. I gladly recommend Lydia E. When the young girl's thoughts become sluggish, when she experiences headaches, dizziness, faintness, and exhibits an abnormal disposi-tion to sleep, pains in the back and lower limbs, eyes dim, desire for solitude, and a dislike for the society of other girls, when she is a mystery to herself and friends, then the mother should go to her aid promptly At such a time the greatest aid to nature is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It prepares the young system for the coming change, and is the surest reliance for woman's ills of every nature.

When you ask for Mrs. Pinkham's medicine at your druggist, do not be persuaded to take something else said to be "just as good." Nothing in the world is so good for women's ills.

OLD AGE A HAUNTING SPECTRE

futes the Popular Failacy That Old Age for the Christian Is Morely a Time for Tears, for Physical and Mental Pains and Depressing Helplessness.

MESSAGE TO THE OLD

"THEY SHALL BRING FORTH FRUIT

IN OLD AGE."

Entered According to Act of Parliament of Can-ada, in the year 1902, by William Baily, of To-ronto, at the Dep't of Agriculture, Ollawa.

Chicago, Aug. 3.-A message reverence and appreciation for people who have passed life's meridian is contained in this discourse by Rev. Frank De Witt Talmage on the text Psalm xcit, 14, "They shall bring forth fruit in old age."

Old age is a haunting spectre. It has terrorized the generations past more than even the fear of death. The most hated and feared of all the Grecian philosophers was he who used to stand upon the street corners of Athens frightening the passersby with these solemn words: "You will be an old man. You will be an old woman." He frightened the passersby because most people do not want to become old. They are afraid of coming to the time when they will he a burden to their children their friends. They are afraid of the time when their earning capacity shall cease, for then, in the race of life, they will be jostled and left far behind by the speed and the strength of the younger generation. They are afraid of the years when they will have to walk with a cane or crutch or sit in an invalid chair waiting for the time when the coffin maker will finish their casket and the undertaker will order their grave to be dug. To show how depressed some people are over the fact of growing old I would read a letter which I received some time ago from one of my

Dear Mr. Talmage, Last night in your sermon you stated that this is the age for young men. You did not have time to speak one word in favor of the usefulness of the old people. I was sorry. I knew some sitting near to me who would be heavy hearted on account of their old age. This morning an aged member of your church called upon me. He said he was so depressed over your remarks last night that he could not sleep. With tears in his eyes, he said, "I wonder if old people will be wanted in heaven." Now, my dear pastor, I would like you, if possible, to preach a sermon upon the blessings of old age. I would like you to preach a sermon to cheer up those who have passed the zenith of their earthly life and are sliding down the other side and nearing the landing place of eternity. You will, will you not?

It is in answer to the request in this letter that I am going to speak this morning to the old folks. I will gladly try to refute the popular fallacy that old age for the Christian is merely a time for tears, for physiand mental pains, and for depressing helplessness. It was a true thing that an aged minister said to Jacob A. Riis, the New York reform-"My son, I am on the sunshiny side of sixty, because I am near to the glories of heaven." The words of my text do not state that an aged Christian's twilight of life upon earth is a gloomy and a sullen sunset. They do emphatically imply that the last days of an aged Christian's earthly life should be among his happiest and most useful days. Those days should be compared to the time when the orchard's branches are bending under the heavy load of the ripened autumnal fruit.

The aged Christian is able from his own experience to testify of the protecting care of a divine Father's love. The difference between the testimony of an old man and a very young man is the difference between knowledge and supposition, between fact and surmise. It is the difference between the words of a veteran who carries the scars, the sword cuts and the bullet wounds of many battlefields and the words of the ruddy faced youth who has not yet won his shoulder straps or seen anything but the recruiting officer's papers. It is the difference between the experience of an old pilot of the Hugli river, the most dangerous navigable river in the world, who has for many years guided the boats up to the wharfs of Calcutta and the experience of the cabin boy who has not yet learned how to handle the wheel. It is the difference between the diagnosis of the old, gray haired physician who has prescribed for hundreds of fever patients and the diagnosis of the young medical graduate who has just received his diploma.

My aged Christian friend, there may be other brains just as keen as yours. There may be other hearts just as willing to make sacrifice for their Lord and Master as yours, but no Christian can as powerfully testify of the protecting care of a Heavenly Father as you can testify unless he can truly speak out of his own ex-The saint who is nearing perience the end of life has the clearer view of heaven. You can speak about the goodness of God from personal experience, as my father spoke to me a few years before his death by tell-Many are not being benefited by the ing me this remarkable incident: summer vacation as they should be. When he was a young minister, he Now, notwithstanding much outdoor used to keep a diary, in which life, they are little if any stronger made a record of all the requests he than they were. The tan on their made to God concerning matters faces is darker and makes them look which were then weighing upon his heart. By some mishap he lost that are still nervous, easily tired, upset by diary, and he forgot about those trifles, and they do not eat nor sleep prayers he had offered. Some twenty well. What they need is what tones the nerves, perfects digestion, creates appetite, and makes sleep refreshing, nearly a quarter of a century before he found out that God had answered pils and teachers generally will find the chief purpose of the vacation best every one of his prayers. God had answered them with better results subserved by this great medicine which, as we know, "builds up the than even his faith at that time had dared to hope. So the aged Christian epens the book of memory. As he fingers the many soiled leaves of that book he testifies how God cared for him when he was a young He testifies how God cared for him when he was middle aged, and he testifies how the love of God is protecting and caring for him now that he is an old man. He testifies just as the aged psalmist testified of God's goodness when he wrote. "I have been young and now am old, yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken nor his seed begging bread." He can testify, as did Joshua when he assembled the people together at the close of his long life and said, "Behold, this day I am going the way of all the earth; of all the good things which the Lord spake all are come to pass, and not one thing come to pass, and not one thing hath failed thereof." He testified as an honest witness carries conviction in a court-room because he tells of that which he has seen and personally experienced. He testifies as one having authority. Never let any man tell you that the aged Christian's influence is a uscless influence. The Bible distinctly says, "They shall still bear fruit in their old age." No better fruit can it bring than the personal testimony of God's faithfulness, which your children will never forget. When skeptics assail them with doubts, they will be able to say, "My father put God's promises to the proof, and e declared that he had found them aged Christian influences for good those who are near to him because he is able to lavish upon them a wealth of boundless, fervent, ten-der Christian affection. While we are young and even middle aged we spend most of our time in doing for others rather than in showing the sweet manifestation of our affections. We are like Martha, who went into the kitchen to cook Jesus a dinner, rather than like Mary, who sat at the feet of Christ.

While we are young or middle aged we are like the busy merchant, who spends most of his time in the store and the office in order to earn money enough to support his children, ra-ther than like the old grandfather and the grandmother, who spend most of their time in spoiling their grandchildren until at last the married daughter turns and says: "Father and mother, I believe you love my children better than you ever loved me when I was young. Anyway, you pet them far more than you ever petted me." Many a mechanic has but little time to fondle or caress his own children. He has to leave home for work before the children are out of bed. He does not return until late at night, when the babies have been again tucked away in their cribs. Many a time have I heard a grownup woman say: "When I was young, I used to long for mother to take me up into her arms and have her love me and kiss me. But mother never had any time. We were a large family of children. Af-ter mother had bathed us and dressed us and started us off to school and cooked meals and finished the sewing she did not have a moment to spare. She had to work far into the night. Because mother had to work so hard and had such little time for affection I used sometimes to think she did not care for me."

The statement that the aged Christian can exercise a mighty influence for good over the lives of those who are nearest and dearest to him, is especially true if those dear turn have children of their own. do not believe a man ever fully appreciates the love of a parent until he himself is married and has babies about his own family table. It is only after a man who has had the worries and the anxieties of his own home troubling his heart, it is only after he has stood by the side of the cradle and nursed his baby boy through the awful sickness of d h theria, it is only after he has go his own family burial plot and has dug therein a little grave for one of his own babies, that he begins to fully appreciate what his father and mother in their time have done for

So, my aged Christian friend, you have children who have children of their own your work on earth is not yet done. Now that your own children feel so grateful to you on account of your past and present love, you can mould them and influence them and purify them by that same love better than ever before. Perhaps by that love you can influence them even more for Christ and eternity now than when they were young men and young women stand-ing upon the threshold of life. The aged Christian is able to spire the spirit of reverence in the hearts of many with whom he comes in contact. This spirit is a growth not an act. It is a germ seed which often takes years and years to develop, and not an entity which springs into being at a jump or a It generally starts away back in the nursery. If the child learn to respect his mother, then it is very easy for him to learn as a boy to respect his teachers, then it is very easy for him as a young man to learn to respect his Christian employers. If a young man respects his Christian employers, then it is very easy for him as a middle aged man to learn to respect the aged Christian servants who for years have been living at the divine Master's feet. If the middle aged man respect God's aged Christian servants, then it is very easy for him to learn to respect the God whom those Christians serve and to communicate that respect to others. Thus God uses your physcial weaknesses and your mental helplessness for a purpose. When he sees you, an agod Christian parent, being tendery cared for in your old age by a giving son; when he sees that son giving to you the best room in the house and the easiest arm chair and the softest bed; when he sees that son trying to make your last days upon earth happy and peaceful, then we can imagine him saying: "That young man who is caring so tenderly for his aged Christian parent is capable of great love for me and my children. The young man who is true to his old mother, by my grace will always be true to me. I will honor him, because he has honored one of my aged servants." Did not God say in his Ten Commandments, 'Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee?" When the young minister respects the old minister and tries to honor the venerable, white haired missionary of Oesus Christ, man wants to honor him because the young minister has tried to honor God's aged disciple. When the tian physician, then the Lord knows that the young man would like to be as the old physician is. What we admire in others, that we would genorally like to reproduce in ourselves.

The aged Christian is a living evidence that for most of us earthly. life is to be very short. Therefore what we are to do for Christ able to do it at all. Sixty or seven ty or eighty years are a long time to live, but most of us will never live so long. Aye, most of us will never reach even middle life. If you speak to an aged Christian, you will find that he is like a November leaf. hanging almost so'itary and alone after the thousands and the tins of thousands of autumnat leaves have been torn from their bran h s by the equinoctial winds. You will fin that most of his centemporaries der when he was comparatively young. that nearly all the rest died when he was in middle life and that only a very few compan ons of his youth are alive to walk by his side. statisticians delare that a third of the human race die in infancy. At least one-third of the remainder die before twenty-one years of age have been reached, and only 6 or 7 per cent. of the human family live to be sixty years of age or over. So the mere presence in this world of an aged Christian, with 93 or 94 per cent. of his contemporaries gone, is a perpetual warning that we must be about our Father's business or the death summons shall come, and we shall find that we have accomplished nothing. Perhaps this nay be a chimerical fancy, but I believe that some of our aged Christians now living may be lingering upon this side of the river of death in order to carry to heaven to our departed loved on s the latest news about the dear ones earth. You know the Bible declares that the celestial messengers are continually ascending and descending between earth and heaven. Jacob's dream was not at all a fanciful dream. The sleeping son of Isaac saw the angels ascending and descending the ladder which connected earth with heaven. So I believe that the aged Christians are lingering this side of Jordan awhile in order to carry the gospel news about our-selves to our beloved ones. I remember well when a dear old elder of Brooklyn Tabernacle was dying my father tuin a to him and said Well, Mr. Nichols, goodby for a little while. We shall soon meet again, But, as you are going ahead of me to the celestial land, will you bunt up my boy De Witt and give him my love?" And the old dying elder said. "Yes. Dr. Talmage, I will, I will." When the widower Pishop Paven was dying, he turned to his mother and said: "Mother, after I have first seen the Lord I shall want to hunt up my dear wife. shall give to her your love. Then shall want to rest for the thousand years in the green pastures by the side of the still waters, with my head in the lap of my Mary.' And if some of our aged Christian friends are waiting for a little while in order to carry the latest gospel news to the dear ones on the other side of the Jordan, what will they be able to tell our fathers and mothers, our brothers and sisters, our wives and little children, who have gone beyond and are awaiting our our beloved ones that they must keep a place by their side for us in one of their heavenly mansions ? Oh, my brother and sister, I see by the tears in your eyes that you are anxious, in reference to the message our aged thristian friends will have to bear. Shall we plead with God that our dear friends may be allowed to ire just a little while longer so that we all may, here and now, give our hearts to Jesus? Then, ye aged Christian friends, carry the news as cen as you might to that bright, nd happy lard. Carry the news that, by the blood of Christ, have all been cleansed from sin. Tell them that we have all been purged

we have been washed until we are whiter than snow.

And so, my aged Christian friends believe that you are the favored ones. You are the Christians who will carry the message to our dear ones as well as to your own When go, I want you personally to take to my mother and father love, just as my father sent his love to his boy. Tell them for me that by the grace of God we all want to meet them soon.

with hyssop until we are clean, that

Thus, ye aged Christians, I want you to realize that the words of my text were written for you. shall still bring forth fruit in their old age" means that your work and usefulness will not be finished until you draw your last, breath, you take your glorious departure. I want you to realize that your work in life is just the same kind of work as was that aged farmer's who, was planting some young trees one day, when a neighbor came along and What are you planting those trees, for? You will never live long enough to see them grow up. "No," answered the old man: never expect to see them grow up, but my grandfather planted yonder aged trees so that I could play under them and pluck their fruit, and I want to plant these trees so that my ch'ldren and my children's children can eat of their fruit after I am dead." So, aged Christians; as your aged parents sweetened your life when you were young, you, by the blessing of God, are sweetening ours. May your work he to you happy work until at last the angel of the resurrection omes to call you to your eternal reward. May we be as faithful to our trust as you, who are still faithfully bearing fruit in your o'd age.

OLD LONDON LAST NIGHT A CITY OF GREAT UNREST

Seething Turmoil by the Coronation Crowds-Absence of Blatant Horns-The King's Busy Day-Salvation Army to be Represented at the Ceremony.

marked in London by large crowds, which wandered all the evening somewhat aimlessly through the semiilluminated streets, down Whitehall, where the Canadian arch was the centre of attraction, around Westminster Abbey and along the Strand, where the sidewalks were blocked with the populace. The people were deterred from any signs of rowdyism by the acute recollection of the recent postponement of the coronation, and hose who had seen the unrestrained exhibitions which occurred on the slightest pretext during war times could not fail to notice the different temperament shown to-night. With a few exceptions it might well have been said of the metropolis of the Empire that it was living up to the national reputation of taking its pleasures somewhat sadly. The absence of blatant horns and annoying features was pleasantly atoned for by the lighting up of many buildings. The brilliancy of the illumination held the country visitors to the city so spellbound that vehicular traffic beame more and more difficult as the night wore on. Until a very late hour the stand speculators did a thriving business and around those stands occupying good locations there were lines of people anxious to get seats at the last moment. Many of the thousands who walked through the streets ex-hibited unmistakeable signs of intention to sit up all night in the hope of securing a free coign of vantage from which to view to-morrow's probey and its approaches, and every deail of this work was watched eagerly by the spectators.

London, Aug. 8.—The eve of the or or of the or or of time for rest has been quite given up by the people in the streets and underlying this intensity of expectation there is curious nervousness among the majority lest they should awaken from their shortened slumbers to find the great event once more postponed. Among the many incidents of the night, one of the most curious occurred at Scotland Yard, where a Scotch magnate, who had received a sudden telegraphic invitation to be present at Westminster Abbey with the proviso that he appear in court dress, appealed at a late hour to the police to help hire or borrow the clothes necessary for admittance. All signs point to an orderly celebration under doubtful weather conditions, and with public enthusiasm tempered by heartfelt relief over the passage of the shadow which so re-cently overcast the Empire. King Edward passed a busy day at Bucking-ham Palace, and did not appear to the public at all. At a late hour to-night he was reported as feeling quite strong, and as looking forward to to-morrow's ceremonies without the slightest misgivings. Acting upon medical adive, Lord Salisbury has obtained the King's permission to absent himself from the coronation. The ex-Premier will shortly leave for the continent.

One of the most curious incidents of the coronation will be the appearance of the uniform of the Salvation Army in Westminster Abbey. King Edward directed that a representative of the Salvation Army should be invited to the coronation, and Bramwell Booth has been appointed to attend the ceremony. A difficulty arose about the uniform he should cession. Workmen are still busy put-ting the finishing touches to the Ab- of Norfolk, intimated he was not authorized to recognize the uniform of the Salvation Army. Mr. Booth thereupon wrote to King Edward requesting permission to wear the uniform of the Army, and His Majesty readily gave consent. Mr. Booth will appear in the uniform of his rank

Aug. 8;-No intimation that the vessel left here with arms on board was given out until the news was received that Japan had laid claim to the island and had despatched a war vessel there. Colonel Thomas Fitch then made pub lie the instructions given to Captain fullest requirements if the services Rosehill, which, while designed to prevent any conflict, were intended to compel the Japanese to allow the Americans to land or to use force to drive them away. Capt. Rosehill's instructions from the company are to inform the Japanese on Marcus Island that his expedition is a peaceful one for the purpose of making a scientific investigation of the value of the guano deposit on the island, and attempt to make a peaceful landing. In the event that Japanese still refuse to allow him to land, Rosehill is to sail away out of sight of the island, and return under cover of darkness, land an armed force and raise the American flag, and keep it up until it is torn down by a superior force. At the same time the captain was told to avoid a conflict in every possible way. In the event of his encountering a Japanese war vessel, the commander of the expedition is to present his credentials as the discoverer island and the agent of the Marcus Island Guano Company ,and to state that the object of his expedition is to make a scientific examination of the island for the company. Everything for Summer Wear

Most garments sold in the store are made in our own factory. Other lines of garments and furnishings we buy, but our own ideas-and yours-are often worked into them. When you think of it, it takes about as much technical knowledge to buy right as to make the article yourself.
