ENGINEERS FIND NO REASON-ABLE EXPLANATION.

Theory Points to an Interior Defect of Some Sort - Engineers in Charge Not Certificated.

Newmarket, Nov. 27. - Little light was thrown on the cause of the boiler explosion resulting in the death of John Agnew and Frank Birch last week in Cane's factory, at the adjourned inquest last night, but several interesting and even startling, theories were advanced about the management of boilers. Harry Trivett, the acting engineer, is still confined to his house from the injuries he received, and his evidence will be heard later, but Alex. Potter, the chief engineer, who hap-pened to be away the day of the wreck, admitted that neither he nor Triyett had certificates. The testimony, so far, points to a defect in construcion, and not to deficiency of water or careless-ness in management.

That boiler was capable of carrying 120 counds safely. The explosion was cerspounds safely. The explosion was cer-tainly not caused by lack of water. It was caused either by too much steam or by a weakness in the plates. The first, or original, break was in the in-ner plate, underneath the lap, where it could not be noticed from the out-side. Pieces of these plates are now under tests of various kinds at the School of Practical Science.

Remarkable Demonstrations Through out Italy-Situation is Becom

Rome, Nov. 27. — Demonstrations against Austria, resulting from the pro-libition by the Austrian Government of the institution of a free Italian univer sity at Tunsbruck, were continued throughout Rome yesterday, but at all points broken up were by the police who gathered in large numbers, especially aroun the Austrian Embassy and Austrian Consulate, against which the chief efferts of the demonstrators were directed. At the university the students to the number of about 10,000 held an indignation meeting and then decided to make a demonstration in the streets to make a demonstration in the streets of the city. The police were prepared for this, however, and as soon as the students emerged the police attacked them, compelling them to re-enter the univrsity. The students showed their indignation by breaking the windows and furniture of the class rooms. The authorities have decided to close the university. The students showed stored. An anti-Austrian demonstration was held at Turin, where the detion was held at Turin, where the de-monstrators rang the bells of the uni-versity, broke the windows and benche-and exploded firecrackers, producing a slight panic. Similar demonstrations were held at Milan, Parma, Padua and Genoa. The Government has determined to suppress these demonstrations at any cost, as it wishes to avoid complaint from the Austrian Govern-

Later the anti-Austrian demonstrations assumed a grave character, and the situation is serious. The Government has stopped the delivery of all telegrams sent in cipher. All over Rome the cry is "Down with Francis Joseph; let us break the triple alliance."

At the university the Austrian flag was burned amid scenes of enthusiasm. At Genoa the demonstrators suc-ceeded in reaching the Austrian Con-sulate, where they shouted the most hostile cries.

Pleasant Incidents in Connection With the Visit of the British Parliamentarians to France.

Paris, Nov. 27. - The members of the British Parliament, who, with their wives and daughters are returning the visit to London of French Senators and Deputies representing the Interna-tional Arbitration Group, had a busy ime. The most prominent of the Parliamentarians were entertained by the time. The nibst prominent of the Parliamentarians were entertained by the leading Deputies, and others by the staff of the Siecle. Visits to the Senate and Chamber of Deputies followed, and at 5 o'clock a reception was given at the Elysee, Baron d'Estournelles de Constant introducing the members and their ladies individually to President and Madame Loubet.

Premier Combes made a great speech in praise of international arbitration. He declared that the treaty between France and Great Britain had been ratified by the public opinion of the two countries, and criticized whoever said that the limitations of the treaty rendered unimportant the essential act. These limitations, he said, were due only to prudent introduction of new principles, but he believed that the seed sown would grow to a mighty tree. M. Combes said it was the duty of the Government to, give the treaty in its existing form the sanction of experience. He had no doubt that its would result in spreading faith in arbitration, and possibly the day was not far distant when both nations would agree to submit all, differences, however animportant, to arbitration.

In conclusion the Premier said:—'I propose the health of the Sovereign to whom we owe it, Edward."

Guertin had strange hallucinations and one night he strange hallucinations and one night he left the camp, presumably to return to his home in Ottawa. He was not seen afterwards, and as he did not arrive at his home a search was made for him. Burns stated in the letter that in company with two Indians he searched the country about the camp for a couple of weeks, but no traces of Guertin could be had. The Indians, who were well acquainted with the country, expressed the belief that Guertin had been run down and devoured by wolves that overrun the district.

ment has at last been explained by George P. Graham, M. L. A., in The Brockville Recorder. Interentially to shows that The Globe's diagnosis is away astray. The trouble is not in the presence of barnacles on the ship of state, the activity of parasites of the prominence of party heelers. For the sad situation of the Ross Govern-ment the hand of death is alone responsible. Here are the solemn facts as Mr. Graham states them:

"Had it not been for the death of two members, to-day the Liberal ma jority would have been eight, or seven without the Speaker. The hand of death and not the electors is responsible for the smallness of its major-

The smallness of the Ross Govern ment's majority is not the only no-ticeable achievement of the hand of death in the Ontario legislature. A great many members of the Ontar'd leg slature have gone over to the si lent majority within the past 36 years, or since Ontario became a province Leaders have come and gone. Graham might as well say that but for the hand of death there would be no such quantity to the Ross Government to-day. . Mr. Graham is a very thorough mar

n his reasoning. He always goes back to elemental principles. But it explaining the perils of the Ross Govrnment he has perhaps done the vork a little too well. It is only ight that Mr. Graham's attention hould be called to one slight inaccurey in his mournful statement. The and of death vacated North Renfrew, ut it is not preventing the issue of rit for a by-election. There are stil few people living in North Renfrew, by not give them representation Ross Government now has a marity of five, and if it wants a sixth ember to the good it might risk an ction in North Renfrew instead of tting up George P. "The Burglar"-Nov. 27. Lyceum Course No. 2-Nov. 30. (Supplied to The Planet by Agents.)

"THE BURGLAR" AT THE GRAND TO-NIGHT.

A famous play by a famous author The Burglar," by Augustus Thomas also author of "Alabama," will be here to-night. This play particularly appeals to the ladies and children, as one of the principal roles is enacted by a child not yet seven years of age, and the costuming of the ladies is very rich and appropriate. A pretty love story is entwined in the plot of "The Burglar" and the sensational developments, though mild, are absorbingly interesting.

The third act of the play is the dramatization of Mrs. Francis Hodge-son Burnett's story of "Editha's Burglar," which was in vogue about the same time with "Little Lord Fauntedroy," and has for its centre of interest a precocious and quaint little girl, as the other has a pre-cocious and quaint little boy. The play is full of dramatic situations, with enough humorous by-play to re-lieve the tension, and it grows in interest from start to finish, al-though it is simple in its plot and in its business.

A charming, instructive, laughable play is "The Burglar," to be seen this (Friday) evening at the Grand,

It is to be seen that the two central European periods, those of Hallstadt and of La Tene, together embrace about a thousand years, an average of 500 for each. The cultured periods of Egypt may be even longer.

The development of Peruvian civilization, accepting on the average five successive periods, would result in a stratification of cultures representing between 2,000 and 3,000 years. About the year 1000 B. ROYAL WEDDING CAKES.

London, Standing some six feet high, it was one of the largest cakes ever made for a royal bride, although that presented to Princes Beatrice by the ladies of Kent was about twenty inches taller. The latter masterpiece in confectionery cost 500 guineas.

It is a rule at royal weddings to have four or five cakes, one of which is made by the bride's own cooks, a single "tier," the price generally paid varying from ten to fifteen guineas. It is seldom, according to an authority, that more than the latter sum is paid for a bride's cake, even at a fashionable wedding.

As Extraordinary Incident.

The closing days of Lord Tennyson's vice-regal career in Australia have been marked by an extraordinary incident. A young man of twenty-five, named Robert Montgomery Parker, said to be the son of a wealthy Liverpool merchant, has been on a tour through America, China and Japan. His stay in the Far East upset his mental balance, for immediately on arriving in Melbourne messages for immediate transmiss ous other official personages. All these messages were signed "Tennyson," and conveyed the alarming intelligence that Russia had declared war against England. The receiving clerk diagnosed the situation accurately stally stall clerk diagnosed the situation accurately, told the poor fellow that the great seal of the Commonwealth was pholics. A few minutes later he was arrested at Government House, overpowered, and deprived of a fully-loaded revolver. His diary showed that he had made a close study of affairs in the Far East.

Fourteen Years.

Could not Sit or Stand with Ease. Consulted Five Different Doctors.

Mr. Jacob Jamieson, Jamieson Bros., the well-known Contractors and Builders, Welland, Ont., tells of how he was cured: "For fourteen years I was afflicted with kidney trouble which increased in severity he last five years. My most serious attack was four years ago, when I was completely incapacitated. I had terrible pains across my back, floating specks before my eyes and was in almost constant torment. I could not sit or stand with ease and was a wreck in health, having no appetite and lost greatly in flesh. I had taken medicine from five different doctors and also numerous other preparations to no purpose. I finally began to take Doan's Kidney Pills and before I had taken five boxes the trouble left me and I now feel better than I have for twenty years. Those who know me know how I was afflicted and say it is almost impossible to believe that I have been cured, yet they know it is so. I have passed the meridian of life but I feel that I have taken on the rosy hue of boyhood."

He had been under the care of six different doctors, but they failed to do him any good. I had read different times of the wonderful cures being made by Burdock Blood Bitters, so advised him to give it a trial. He did so, and after taking five bottles was cured without a doubt. TALES OF WINDSOR.

ighted Napeleon Willow Tree Winds Castle Partially the Work of Pressed Laborers—Its Oldest Part.

Laberers—Its Oldess Fart.

The workmen now engaged upon improvements at Windsor Castle need to tread warily, for the scene of their labors is replete with historic associations. Nor are these confined to the castle buildings. Of no place may it be truly said that while there are sermons in the stones there are tongues in trees to speak a chapter from history. In the garden adjoining St. George's Chapel is a tree with one of the strangest of stories. Blighted and stunted by lightning, it stands to recall one of the tragedies of history. It is a willow, and grew from a cutting taken from the parent tree, which grew above the grave of Napoleon at St. Helena. For long it flourished in its new position. But on the day of the battle of Sédan, in which the power of Napoleon III. was crushed, a flash of lightning carried away its chief branch. Still in its mutilated state it continued to grow lustily enough until, years later, it was smitten by another lighning stroke. Careful comparison showed that the second disaster synchronized exactly with the death of the Prince Imperial at the hands of the Zulus in Africa.

the hands of the Zulus in Africa.

Windsor Castle, in some form or another, has existed as a royal domain from Norman times. Hardly a reign has passed without additions or alterations. Edward III. built the famous round tower or keep for a fraternity of knights who should meet and carry on the traditions of King Arthur's Round Table Knights. From the battlements of the keep twelve counties may be viewed, and even in these smoky days the King may see the dome and lantern of St. Paul's by taking his stand on the summit of the tower. Edward III. found the labor problem as acute in his day as do some less distinguished employers of modern time, and his works proceeded slowly. But the victor of Poitiers took a short cut to what he wanted. Writis were issued to the sheriffs, mayors and bailiffs of the counties, authorizing them to impress laborers for the work, with imprisonment as the alternative. William of Wykeham was the architect, and his duties could have been little else than a labor of love, for his wage was but a shilling a day. Plague carried off the bulk of the three hundred and sixty men engaged on the work in 1360, so more writs were issued. Edward did not live to see his undertaking completed, but Richard II. continued it, and had Geoffrey Chaucer as his clerk of works, and a zealous master of the labor press gang the father of our rested while the negotiations for Magna Charta were in progress. There is a small domain underground. In the older portions of the great wards arched passages thread their way below the basement, through the chalk, and penetrate far beneath the site of the castle ditch at the base of the walls. Their existence may have had something to de with the origin of the eerie stories which attach to the older part of the residence. For, of course, Windsor has its ghosts. Only a couple of years ago an officer seated in the library saw what is described as "the ghost of Queen Elizabeth." Shakespeare adopted his legend of Herne the Hunter from Windsor Forest for his "Merry Wives of Windsor." The ancient renewar was appeared.

The ancient ranger was supposed to promenade around an oak, wearing horns upon his head.

Many a page of history is written on the walls of Windsor. Those that lay captive within the boundaries of the castle left their woeful, histories caved upon their prison. These At times the horses are exercised in bearing their riders across on their backs. The horse wears only the head collar and bridoon, and the rider stripnimself, and throws his legs up along the horse's flanks so as not to impede the animal's movements. As the horse naturally swims very low in the water the rider's weight pushes him down until only his head is above the surface But the animal soon gets over the uneas ness this causes him at first. Their memories were thus better perpetuated than those of some of more illustrious birth. It was only by a chance breaking up of the floor of the St. George's Chapel that the body of Edward IV. was found. In 1818 Sir Henry Halford found, too, and opened, the coffin said to contain the body of Charles I. The remains, he said, were in precisely the condition described by a witness of his immurement. But so many are the stories concerning the remains of this unhappy monarch and of Cromtories carved upon their prison. Their Miss Summergal must be quite seriously ill. conclusion than had been arrived at a century ago.

The gorgeous tomb which Wolsey built for himself was converted it to money after his fall. The exquisite adornments with which artists had bedecked it were sold as defaced brass for £600. George IV. spent a million and a half restoring the castle. As a finishing touch to his work he had a huge bronze equestrian statue of his father erected as the end of the magnificent three-mileslong walk. In time a rather irreverent name became applied to the end of the magnincent three-mileslong walk. In time a rather irreverent name became applied to the statue, so that the monarch whose name it is to perpetuate became disassociated from it. This led to a funny little mishap at Queen Vittoria's dinner table. A distinguished statesman was asked how he had got to the castle. 'Oh, I got a lift as far as the copper horse, and walked the rest of the way, ma'am, he replied. 'To the what?' cried Her Majesty in amused amazement. The guest had never heard of the statue by any other name, and had to explain himself as best he could. Whereupon the Queen good-humoredly rebuked him for his irreverence, and gave him the history of the figure.—

PRETTY CHINTZ BED SCHEME.

Horses are "enlisted" in British cavaly regiments on reaching their third year, but it is generally two years more before they are taken for their first swimming lesson. This branch of their education receives a good deal of attention at the Aldershot training camp, writes W. G. Fitzgerald in the "Royal Magazine." The veterinary officer and riding-master of the regiment supervise the work, and only experienced men are allowed to assist.

The great thing is not to force or alarm the horse during his training, but rather to lead him by easy stages to enter the water quickly, fearlessly and as noiselessly as possible. If terrified at the start, the horse would be likely to light slay of deep water ever after. So on the first day the man who has charge of the horse walks his pupil about on the edge of the water, just permitting him to wet his hoofs and fetlocks. The next day the horse is introduced a little farther into the water, perhaps up to his bedy, and allowed to salash round as helesses. In this way the horse is gradually taken farther and farther in, until at length he loses his footing and starte swimming quite naturally, the man in charge swimming by his side to give him greater confidence.

Then the horse is taught to swim in company with others, beside a boat, by way of training him to cross rivers with his regiment en masse. The horses are divested of all saddlery but head collarand head ropes. The men of each trooj get into a boat, and by means of the head ropes bring their horses into the water alongside. Then the boat is haule, across the river by a rope manned fron the opposite side, and the horses neces sarily follow.

At times the horses are exercised in bearing their riders across on their backs. The horse wears only the head collar and bridoon; and the rider, strip. een. The canopy, which is swung in graceful folds from a gilded hook screwed into the ceiling, is finished off with a narrow knife plaiting or ruffle of the goods. The iron work at the head and foot of the couch is completely hidden from view by doubled widths of the materials shirred along the bars. A deep ruffled valance of the same A deep ruffled valance of the same dropping from the lowest rail of the framework to the floor makes another pretty touch. The boister most fetching upon a bed of this character is of the long, cylindrical shape. It can be built over one of the papier mache frames sold in the shops or over a stuffed cushion prepared at home. The flattened ends terminate in attractive cart wheel designs carried out in the material.—Exchange.

The Cry For Help,
From the cradle to the grave the cry of mankind is for "help." We are all in search of a physician, some one who will help us, some one who will in-spire us—give us s remedy, point us the way. Not the poor and the sick alone, but the rich and the strong, are crying out for help. Sometimes it is the doctor we want; sometimes it is the banker; sometimes it is the clergyman. And yet the doctor, the banker and the clergyman are human, and they are crying for help along with the rest of us. Those whom we think the strongest are weak, and those whom we think the weakest are strong.

We cannot stand alone. We all need help. We must help one another until

The inquest into the death of the late Robert Hutchison, killed in the Lake Erie & Detroit River Railway wreck, on Monday evening last, adjourned from Tuesday evening, remed in the city council chambers last night before Coroner Dr. J. L.

The first witness was Alex. McGarvie was conductor on the local-Wa oming from Blenheim to Chatnam on Monday night; train was late; it was ision occurred with Cake's special, which was on the main line. emaphore was not set against us. the main line unless the semaphore was set. Had it been set we could have seen it half a mile off in plenty of time to stop. It was the conducor's duty or whoever had charge of the train that was working there to set it. The engineer should have refused to go on the main line when the semaphore was not set. Jos. Cake was conductor, H. Bennett brakeman, Dunn fireman and Wanless engineer on the special. I saw the semaphore was not set. There is a sharp curve at this point. It was very dark, and a heavy wind was blowing.

The Railway solicitor, Mr. Coburn, questioned witness who said-Ours is a regular train running on time card rules We were three hours and ten ninutes late, but we don't lose our rights until we are 12 hours late. K. R. Cameton of Ridgetown, rainmaster-The orders are semaphores be used for protection in all cases. That if necessary to use main line during the time of a regu-lar, the semaphore must be set for protection. No. 61 had the right of way according to the rule of the Comway according to the rule of the Company. It was the duty of the special to protect their frain against all regulars. Cake's special had orders to run from Wallaceburg to Blenheim. The men on the special should have seen that the semaphore was set at danger. The engineer, fireman, and two brakemen would be in charge at that particular time. The conductor was in the telegraph office asking for further orders. It was the duty of each and every member of the special crew to see that the danger signal was set. The semaphores are duty of each and every member of the special crew to see that the dearger, signal was set. The semaphores are put there for the trainmen to use whenn working on the main line. The semaphore was in good working order. The accident could not have happened had it not been for the megligence of the trainmen on the special had the usual conditions prevalled. The men on both trains were competent. It was no fault of the faillway's, Thos. Pinfold, brakeman on 61 corroborated McGarvie's evidence.

Our train when the accident occurred. Our train was working on the main line; I saw where coming back the semaphore was not set. I had two copies of the orders; kept one, and gave one to the engineer. The engineer is supposed to show them to the fireman and head end brakeman and I show them to the rear end brakeman. I am pretty sure I showed them to him. I would think that if the semaphore had been set and all hands had done their duty the accident could not have occurred. The crews of both trains are competent men;

The accident could not have occurred. The crews of both trains are competent men.

Jamis Flowers, enigineer on No. 61.—I saw the head light of the special about 100 yards before we struck and applied the air. We were ging 10 or 15 miles per hour when we struck. When I first saw the light I thought it was the switch light I thought it was the switch light but when I knew it was the head light and saw the semaphone was not set I thought the track was clear and let the air off. I attiribute the accident to the samaphore not being set and the neglect to send out a flag. If that had been done and the accident occurred I would have been ito blame. The company has done everything possible to protect their trains. The accident was due to negligence.

Robert K. Wanless, engineer of the special, refused to gave evidence after being warned that any statemints him made might be used against him.

"I think he did a good act," remarked Mr. Darr. "You both have homes to go to and you don't need to hang around the hotel."

"It's a public house," continued the ejected ones in chorus, "and we would just like him to understand that he can't order us out."

"Well, I'll tell you," calmly continued the quiet officer, "it's a mighty good thing for you that he didn't call me to put you out, or you would have made your exit a good deal more forcibly and much quicker than you did. I would have put yon out a great sight harder than Mr. McCoig did. That sitting room is for hotel guests, not for loafers, and they don't went to be annoyed by you."

The two, failing to find the sympathy they had expected, retired in d'sgust. It would be a good idea if Mr. McCoig would ask a few more of the young fellows who loaf around the Hotel Garner to march. It would be good both for the boys themselves and for the hotel.

The Crown Attorney is in a quandry as to what ito do with the two daughters of Ball Western who is in jail charged with incest. Since the father has been locked up, the owner of the house where they have has seized the furniture for rent. Andrew Thomson holds a lien on the furniture also. The house is locked and the girls have no place to stay. An effort has been made to get the girls into the Home of the Friendless or some other place until homes can be secured for them. They are bright girls and should be taken care of. There is a good opportunity here for the Christian people of this city to get busy. The case is an inexpressibly sad one. The Crown Atthorney is in a quan-

THE FRUIT GROWERS

Close of the Convention at Learnington-A Winter Show.

Leamington, Nov. 27. The Fruit growers' Association, before concluding their annual meeting yesterday, decided upon holding their next meet ing in Toronto. A plan was also dis cussed and decided upon for holding winter fruit fair in Toronto at the same time. The intention is to interest all fruit growers in this way and bring them together at a competitive fair thus stimulating them to more earnest effort. If successful the venture will probably be made an annual event, do ng for fruit-growers what the Guelph Fat Stock Show does for live stock ing for truit-growers what the Gueiph Fat Stock Show does for live stock breeders.

The sessions were of a practical nature so far as the fruit-growers were concerned. They spent the morning and afternoon listening to a series of addresses by the experiment station superintendents. The horticultural societies held their meetings in the Sunday school of the Methodist church, and listened to a number of interesting papers. A large number of ladies and gentlemen from outside points arrived in town this morning to attend the horticultural societies' meetings.

Dr. James Mills, President of the O. A. C., Guelph, occupied the chair at the morning meeting, when the work of the fruit experiment stations was reported upon. Prof. H. L. Hutt of the O. A. C. spoke upon new fruits. At Guelph he said they had raised a large number of seedlings during the year. They had given attention to apples, peaches, plums and some small fruit. From Napanee they had received a seedling of a handsome apple, something of the wealthy type, which might be valuable. A Parry Sound seedling, originating on Zoho Island, in Lake Joseph, was also promising. It was of a hardy winter variety, and quite small. The Ireland seedling peach from Owen Sound was a very showy and promising fruit. The emerald plum, originated by E. D. Smith of Winona, a very early plum, ripening about August 1st, was of high quality. Keen's seedling plum, from Orillia, was also showy and promising fruit. The emerald plum, originated by E. D. Smith of Winona, a very early plum, ripening about August 1st, was of high quality. Keen's seedling plum, from Orillia, was also showy and promising. The Crosby gooseberry, grown near Highland Creek, was probably a good one to grow. It was large and free from mildew, being the only one of the English type that is free from mildew. Smith's Giant Black Cap, a very large black raspberry, originated by A. M. Smith of St. Catharines, also promised well.

Prof. W. T. Macoun of Ottawa followed Prof. Hutt. H esaid that the

H esaid that the principal work of the fruit experiment stations was to put the seedlings sent in on record, and after they had been thoroughly tested to send out reports upon them. There were far non many varieties of fruit, and poor ones at that, now being grown, and the experiment stations were working with a view to finding out what were the best varieties to grow in each locality.

Mr. L. Woolverton of Grimsby presented the Secretary's report of the work of the fruit stations, during the year. There were now fourteen such stations, and the establishment of another at New Liskeard was being considered. The stations were also assisting in the addition to being the greates In addition to being the greatest British statesman of the day, Mr. Chamberlain is one of the most interesting and fascinating personalities. To-day, when the name of Chamberlain, the statesman, is on everybody's lips, the following anecdotes of Chamberlain, the man, will be of peculiar interest:

Most statesmen work hard, but few work so hard as the late Colonial

Most statesmen work hard, but few work so hard as the late Colonial Secretary. The staff of the Colonial Office declare that they never had a chief who got through such a quantity of work. They speak feelingly, for when a Government office is presided over hy a chief of unusual activity and energy the staff have to exhibit an activity and energy in keeping.

Mr. Chamberlain is a late riser, but to counterbalance this he begins his work while he is still in bed. He reads newspapers and a quantity of official documents before he rises. In this he differs from another famous statesman, who has put it on record hat he never reads the newspapers when Mr. Chamberlain settles down to work for the day he does it swift-ly and methodically. All his papers are kept in beautiful order, and his secretary can lay his hand in a moment on the most important blue book or the most trivial memorar

As is notorious, Mr. Chamberlain takes little or no exercise. He is a great smoker, however, and does most of his work with the aid of a cigar, The advocates of physical culture and the opponents of tobacco will ooth find matter for reflection in the fact that, despite his abstention from the one and his devotion to the oth-er, Mr. Chamberlain enjoys excellent the one and his devotion to the other, Mr. Chamberlain enjoys excellent health. He is vigorous physically, and a good deal more vigorous mentally than many athletes of a third of his age.

There is one form of exercise in which Mr. Chamberlain does take an interest, however. He is an expert swimmer. A gentleman who happened to stay at the same hotel at Scarborough as Mr. Chamberlain years ago, when the now leading statesman had only just entered the House of Commons, has related that he used to see Mr. Chamberlain, towel in hand, sotting forth for the sea every morning, though it was then late in the year. In impromptu swimming and diving competitors the future Cabinet Minister usually came in first, with Mr. Austen Chamberlain, then a lad, a good second.

In public Mr. Chamberlain, as his opponents know best, is determined, burdended and assentially practically practic opponents know best, is determined, hard-headed, and essentially practical—a typical Englishman. In private he is very human. He is fone of children, for instance. He takes a great interest in the small members of his family, with whom he is as popular as he is with his constituents of West Birmingham. No stronger simile could be used than opponents know best, is determined stronger simile could be used than that, by the way. Those who have not seen the member for West Birm-ingham addressing a meeting of his supporters have yet to learn what popularity is.

To return to the children. Here is a quaint anecdote illustrating Mr. Chamberlain's kindness to the little people. It is told by a lady who was once a scholar in a Birmingham Sunday school. That Sunday school had the privilege of holding its annual treat in the grounds of Highbury. Mr. Chamberlain enjoyed watching the small children disporting about his grounds as much as the small children enjoyed it themselves. One of the games was an old selves. One of the games was an old kissing same, something like kiss-fir-the-ring. One of the children stands in the centre, and the others sing a ditty calling on her to "Choose you one, choose you two, choose you the fairest of the three." Mr. Chamberlain took his place in the ring, and was chosen by the small maid in the centre. He kissed the little maid gallantly, to the delight of the players

An anecdote illustrating Mr. Chamberlain's business side: Once at berlain's business side: Once at a banquet an old goblet was exhibited, and curiosity was expressed as to its age. There was a screw in the gob-let, and looking at the screw, Mr. Chamberlain was able to inform his host that the goblet dated back to the eighteenth century. There was nothing very remarkable in this, perhaps, but it shows that Mr. Cham berlain is no theorist, but a man who knows his business practically.— London Daily Express.

Bank Expense.

The operating expense of a bank with a capital of $100,000 is 2.84 per cent of the loans and discounts, but the operating expenses are only 1.33 per cent. if the bank have a capital of $1,000,000 or more.

greens. 'The girls were becomingly attired in light evening gowns, and many of them were good looking, refined and graceful. All were soft spoken and easy in their manners and either wore or carried flowers. The evening suits of the young men were well in evi-dence and more noticeable to the wearers themselves than they would have en to a spectator used to conventional style of dress. They could be seen in all stages of inadaptability to figares too large or too small, and even after the dance began there were several swaps and a due amount of congratulation on the improvement from the appreciative fair sex. The young lady accompanying each young man had pinned a small bouquet on his lapel, so that it would have been impossible to tell whether a man had a natural taste for flowers or was the willing victim to a taste higher than his own. Rayburn Miller and Alan sat smoking and talking in the room of the latter till half past 9 o'clock, and then they went down. As a general rule, young men were expected to escort ladies to dances when the young men went at all, but Alan was ofter cused from so doing on account of liv-ing in the country, and Miller had broken down every precedent in that respect and never invited a girl to go with him. He atoned for this sho coming by contributing most liberally to every entertainment given by the young people, even when he was out of town. He used to say he liked to graze and nibble at such things and feel free to go to bed or business at

As the two friends entered the big parlor Alan espied the girl about whom he had been thinking all day. She was seated in one of the deep, lace curtained windows behind the piano. Frank Hillhouse was just presenting to her a faultlessly attired traveling salesman. At this juncture one of the floor managers with a white rosette on his lapel called Miller away to ask his advice about some details and Alan turned out of the parlor into the wide corridor which ran through the house. He did this in obedience to another unwritten law governing Darley's social intercourse—that it would be im-polite for a resident gentleman to intrude himself upon a stranger who had just been introduced to a lady. So he went down to the ground floor and strolled into the office. It was full of tobacco smoke and a throng of men, some of whom were from the country and others from the town drawn the hotel by the festivities. From the office a door opened into a bar and billiard room, whence came the clicking of ivory balls and the grounding of cues. Another door led into the large dining room, which had been cleared of its tables that it might be used for dancing. There were a sawing of fiddles, the twanging of guitars, the jingle of tambourines and the groan-ing of a bass viol. The musicians, ing of a bass viol. The musicalis, black and yellow, occupied chairs on one of the tables, which had been placed against the wall, and one of the floor managers was engaged in whittling paraffin candles over the floor and rubbing it in with his feet. Seeing what he was doing, some of the young men, desirous of trying their new patent leather pumps, came in and began to waltz singly and in cou-

FORGERY AND PAINTINGS. Posthumous Tribute to Art-"Dabblers Are the People Who Are Most Frequently Caught.

Things are not always what they seem, especially in the matter of pictures and drawings, says a London exchange. There is a craze for "old" stuff, and there is always a supply forthcoming to meet the demand. Exactly whence it comes nobody seems to know, but as to its destination there is no manner of doubt. It is bought by people who think that they know a good thing when they see it, and who frequently suffer for their conceit. They buy for £1 what in their ignorance they are convinced is worth £50, and they find that they have made a bad bargain. The article Frequently Caught, is worth £50, and they find that they have made a bad bargain. The article may be a mezzo-tint which, if genuine, would be worth £35, but, being a facsimile, it is perhaps dear at a sovereign. The purchaser would not look at it at that price in the shop window, but he will cheerfully pay five times that figure for it at auction, rather than take the advice of a picture dealer, whose modest profit he would disdain to pay. The man who makes rubbish is neturally induced to go on making more when he knows that auction rooms are hauntknows that auction rooms are hauntwhen that auction rooms are haunted by ill-informed bargain-hunters. There is, needless to say no reflection on the auctioneer, who, even if he had the requisite skill, has no time to sit in judgment on every picture or print which is included in his catalogue.

Net Hard to Cepy.

Until an artist is dead his works are not usually the subject of forgery. But let him once get beneath the ground, and then, if he was the fashion, a fine field is thrown open. David Teniers predicted that when he died it would require a gallery a league long to contain all the pictures attributed to him. His prophectures attributed to him. His prophectures tures attributed to him. His prophecy was too modest. Twenty leagues would have been nearer the mark. T. B. Hardy, the marine painter. To another name which has been the subject of a good deal of the subject of the s ject of a good deal of forgery. He was a prolific worker, yet as soon as he was gone there were not enough of his beautiful water-colors to satis of his beautiful water-colors to satisfy mankind, and the imitator set to work energetically. Copies cost little to produce, and involve no originality. All that is needed for success is to work with an unscrupulous dealer, and to receive the co-operation of a public which is ever ready to pick up something which, if genuine, would be dirt cheap at the price is greedily paid. No doubt the gambling spirit has been fostered in the case of pictures by certain little incidents of pictures by certain little incidents which, if strung together, would make an exciting volume. But the man who rakes over a dustbin, and finds an "old master" which he sells for £1,an exciting volume. But the man who rakes over a dustbin, and finds an "old master" which he sells for £1,-000, is a very rare person. He has, at least, never been known to do the trick twice over. Yet a good many picture buyers are looking for fortunes in the same direction.

Craze for Engravings The craze for engravings has, like many other things, its ups and downs. The Landseer craze is nothing like so strong as it was a few years ago, and even the great. However, garth is comparatively at a disco To-day engravings after Sir Joshua Reynolds command much attention, and so do those after Sir Thomas Lawrence and Gainsborough. Forgery is a strong word to use in connection Lawrence and Gainsborough. Forgery is a strong word to use in connection with engravings, but what is often done is to palm off fourth editions as firsts by removing the margins. But this, of course, would not take in the experienced collector, who knows the points. Sometimes, indeed, the second and subsequent editions are unmistakably, and perhaps intentionally, different from the first in metals. ly, different from the first in matters of detail. The man who makes pic-tures or engravings his hobby, may, as a rule, be trusted to know, not as a rule, be trusted to know, not only as much about them as dealers do, but very often a great deal more. It would be surprising, indeed, if the devotion of a lifetime to a particular study did not have this result. It is the collector who is on the friends. study did not have this result. It is the collector who is on the fringe of knowledge who frequently makes mis-takes. He has to make bad bargains in order to learn wisdom, but even he would scarcely be found giving £6 for a bogus Morland, worth about 30s., under the impression that it was a genuine engraving of was a genuine engraving of a value of £25.

Various circumstances have conspired to help the forger and the fabricator of recent years. One is that the great majority of people do not attempt to obtain large pictures. In the first place their purses may not be equal to it. In the second place, the taste is for something pleasing, which shall, if possible, have some approach to "originality." They have got sick of seeing the same engravings everywhere. It is a little trying when middle-class people, paying a series of afternoon the same engravings everywhere. It is a little trying when middle-class people, paying a series of afternoon calls, are compelled to gaze on the same kitten and the same ball of string in four out of every five houses. The number of "pictures" which the stores have worked off in various parts of the country is simply amazing. Now we are getting a reaction, and a desire for something better, which may easily be misguided. The untrained judgment so readily goes astray. The average man, when he learns that a picture attributed to a particular artist has been done up so many times, finds prima facie evidence that he has got hold of something original. The wiser man, on the other hand, attaches value to pedigree, and will not take risks such as the less experienced will run. It is not a bad habit to buy your pictures from a dealer you can trust, for no man of reputation will sell you for £50 a picture that cost him £5, and is worth very little more.

A remarkable story, says The Liverpool Post, comes from Mellor, near Blackburn. A man noticed a horse circling continually round a lamb, urging it towards a fence, and finally thrusting it through a hedge into a flooded dyke beyond, at the exact spot where another lamb was found drowned.

A Thirty Years' War Ended. Thirty years of war with the Achinese, a ferocious lot of Malays, so bloodthirsty that they actually wanted to defend their own island and resist the imposition of a foreign yoke upon them, has cost the Dutch $200,000,000 and has been conducted so privately that hardly anyhody outside has heard anything about it. It is now over, the principal sulfan having laid his turban at the feet of the principal Dutchmen concerned, of the principal lutchmen concerned, and the soft Sumatran airs, spice laden, now breathe of concord. It is high time that the dove of peace should descend there, the hope rather than the expectation being that its roost may correspond in duration with its protracted absence.

There are some women who seem to be perennially youthful. The grown be perennially youthful. The grown daughters are companions as well as children, and the color in the mother's cheeks, the brightness in her eyes, the roundness of her form, all speak of abounding health. What is her secret? She is at the middle age of life when so many women are worn, wasted and faded, and yet time has only ripened her charms. The secret of this matronly health and beauty may be told in the brief phrase, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. The general health of woman is so intimately related to the local health of the deleate womanly organs, that where these are diseased, the whole body must suffer. "Favorite Prebody must suffer. "Favorite Pre-scription" dries the deblitating drains, heals ulceration and inflam-mation, cures female weakness and imparts to the delicate female organs matural vigor and vitality. It was almost certain to happen that way in a regiment going into action for the first time. The officers were raw and the men were raw. After five or six men of Company B had been killed the remainder of the hundred hud-dled together like frightened sheep for a moment and then turned their backs to the foe and bolted from the field. Had the men been veterans there might have been a bit of confusion as the fire got too hot, but there would have been no running away. Had the icers been veterans the company yould not have been stood up there to urnish target practice to the enemy.

A pitiful thing followed. Company B was branded with cowardice in the face of the enemy. There were over ninety men left, stalwart fellows from the pine woods and forest streams, who had worked alongside danger all their lives, and now they were to be snubbed, even by the company teamsters and the sutler's clerks. They muttered and cursed and shed tears, but the stigma had been put upon them, and they had to bear it. A citizen may be dubbed a coward for not resenting an insult, but he can plead a dozen excuses. Not so a soldier, however. He is in the ranks to fight, and fight he must or become an object of contempt.

Company B cursed and muttered and waited. There would be other battles, and their time would come. Three months later they went into action, with the company banner leading the way and every man singing a war song, and for a quarter of an hour they were heroes. What happened all a sudden no man could afterward tell. Perhaps it was the screams of men as they were hit, or a section of a battery galloping through the line, or it might have been some blundering order on the part of the officers. No matter what it was, the results were lamentable. Company B bolted again, and the other men cried. "Yah, yah!" in contempt as the panic stricken lum-bermen fell back. They had fought well for a time, and they had left ten of their number dead behind them, but those things didn't count.

"SIR, I BEG TO REPORT THAT I AM THE LAST OF COMPANY B."

The colonel called the captain up and called his lieutenants cowards; the lieutenants declared there was no fight in the men. The "B" men cursed and muttered and shed tears of humiliation again, but "Yah, yah!" was their greeting from the other 900 men. It was rubbed in on them for a month, and then the colonel detailed them as guard to the wagon train. That filled their cup of disgrace. Company B dropped out of sight for four months. The regiment marched, fought and paraded with nine companies. It was as if a finger had been lopped off a hand in some disgraceful brawl.

Autumn was merging into winter, and both armies were advancing for a last grapple before the snow and ice should drive them into winter quarters. There were roads and passes to be held. Wagon trains were sent to the rear, details called in, and squadrons of cavalry and detachments of inrors of cavalry and detachments of in-fantry rode and marched this way and that. One day Company B returned to us for an hour or two until they could draw rations and ammunition. They were a dusty, ragged, dejected lot. Disgrace and humiliation had done their work on both officers and men. They were received as strangers and in silence. That hurt them more than the old cries of contempt, but they bowed their heads and said nothing. They marched away as they came, their feet dragging and their eyes cast down. They were to form a part of the force sent to hold a gap in the moun-tains, and men laughed and said it would give the "B" men another chance

A thousand men, most of them called in of detail and therefore lax in discipling, had been sent to hold a pass which 5,000 of the enemy might your at any hour. They were all that could be spared. Companies were sandwiched together to make a regiment, and under the orders of a colonel who meant fight they threw up a breast-work and waited for what was to come. There was riffraff there in plenty, but none in such contempt as the eighty men of Company B. Little or nothing was expected of them, and they were given the left flank.

At the end of two days, as divisions and brigades formed in the valleys and artillery galloped here and there to crown the knolls and hills, the enemy came marching down the pass, hoping to find it unguarded. In this they were disappointed; but, being five to one they swept forward with yells and cheers to brush the thousand defenders aside. The fighting colonel watched the onfall with heart in his mouth. thousand steady old veterans would have given him confidence, but he was looking at the backs of a thousand bummers. He cursed and prayed alternately as he heard the confident cheers of the enemy, but after the first grapple he smiled. The bummers had held their own and were cheering in defi-

"The next attack will be farther to the left," mused the colonel as he saw the enemy gathering again, "and if Company B falls me our whole line will be swept away. It was a shame to send me such men." There was another hot fight and another fierce grapple, and when the lull came the colonel threw up his hat and cheered. The "B" men had not only stood firm, but had shifted along without orders to take more of the brunt of the battle. The orders to the 5,000 men were to break through at all costs. The orders to the 1,000 were to hold the mouth of that pass to the last mad. The fight began when the sun had only half an hour more of life, and it raged at intervals for three hours. Then those in the pass and those behind the breastwork slept or made ready for daylight. The birds had hardly taken wing before the musketry began to volley again Re-enforcements had been sent for, but they could not be up for hours. Meanwhile the thousand must hold the pass. It is on record in history how the thousand fought. From sunset to darkness, from daylight to high noon, they crouched behind that wretched little breastwork of logs and stones and gave up their places only when they fell back dead. The pass was held.

When the re-enforcements marched up at last they found scarce 300 men crouching there, but they were fighting yet—fighting and dying. And when the enemy had made a last charge and been driven back to try no more the colonel rode down the line to cheer this and that company and to finally ask:

"Where is B company? Every man of them has covered bimself with glory in this fight. I want to shake hands with each and all of them." "Sir," replied a dying man who was propped up with his back to the breast-work and who sought in vain to raise his hand in salute—"sir, I beg to re-port that—that I am the last of Company B and that I am—am"—

"Dead!" finished the colonel as the man fell back. "And braver men will never die after him!"

Mohammedans of India are very suerstitious. No Mohammedan will take a bath on Sunday or Tuesday. But if one bathes on Wednesday all misfortunes and misery that are in store for him till the next Wednesday will be averted. As a rule, all Mohammedans bathe on Fridays before going to perform the jumma prayers. For don-ning new clothes Saturday, Sunday and Tuesday are regarded as bad days. If any one dons a new dress or puts on a new cloth or allows his tailor to cut piece of new cloth on these days he will live a miserable life till that dress or cloth gets torn or is thrown away. If a shirt is torn and if the wearer wants to stitch it it must be taken off, for if it is stitched while on the body the person will soon die. A Moham-medan will never allow a barber to come near him on Tuesdays, for Tuesdays and also Saturdays and Sundays are bad days for shaving purposes. If absolutely necessary he will get himself shaved on Saturday or Sunday, but never on Tuesday, as his star is supposed to fall in blood if he does so. If one receives money or some valua-ble thing it is taken with the right hand, for if it is taken with the left the person receiving it is said to forget all about it very soon or to mislay it. A devout Mohammedan will not start on a journey on Wednesday, for it is believed he will never return home safely if he does so. And it is said that even a snake never ventures out of its hole on this day.

Mathematics and Launching. The launching of a vessel is prima-rily a matter of mathematics. In a ship of immense size it calls for a vast emount of calculation before the first step is taken in the actual work. In the first place the specific gravity of the vessel must be figured out so as to allow for the various strains to which the hull is subjected on its slanting journey into the water, with its sud-den plunge as the bow drops from the ways. An enormous amount of data must be collected to fix this center of gravity. The weight of all the material that has gone into the vessel up to the time of the launching, the dis-tribution of this weight, the weight of chains and anchors and other material placed on board preparatory to the launch, must all be considered. When the center of gravity is fixed the sucessful shipbuilder knows just how to build his launching ways and just where to strengthen them. He knows then by a little calculation how long each part of the vessel will be subfected to certain strains and how best to prepare for them. He can figure almost to the second how long the ship will be in sliding into the water.

FOREST GLORIES.

orgeous Picture of Autumn-Tinted Carl adian Maples in the Laurentides-Moose Killed Near St. Alexis.

The glow of an autumn sun on Canadian maples in the Laurentides last week made pictures gorgeous beyond anything the painter with either pen or brush might convey to either eye or senses. One could only gaze in worderment and adore the land of such manificent landscapes, with veneration for the creator of it all. Quite a few Montreal gentlemen and ladies who visit Ste. Agathe have talked of the beauties of tree-clad hills, slashed all with the Agathe naw talked of the beauties of tree-clad hills, slashed all with the flame-tinted maple, softened by the yellow-tinted birch and the deep green cones of the spruce and balsam shooting between like spears. Having seen our own glorious Mount Royal and the woods of Montreal Island with journeyings through the land, with journeyings through the Eastern Townships, one might think he had seen all that there could be of autumnal forest beauties. They were fortunate travelers that passed along the Great Northern Railway last Friday and Saturday—perfect days—and saw the fringe of the Laurentides. The railway is splendidly built and the passenger cars very comfortable and clean. After passing New Glasgow, the blaze of glory of land, with journeyings through comfortable and clean. After passing New Glasgow, the blaze of glory of the woods was with us all the way, even to St. Paulin Station, where we stopped for a dive ibto the heart of the great masses of the woods for nineteen miles, says a writer in The Montreal Witaess.

Lac a l'Eau Claire, sine miles drive tron St. Aloris, was the chiertiya.

from St. Alexis, was the objective point—the country seat of the Hon. George W. Stephens. St. Alexis, was a ten-mile drive from St. Paulin. a ten-mile drive from St. Faum.
The way was along the banks of the pretty winding river, and the farmers and their homes, the flocks of cattle and the milk preparations for the creameries were pleasant to see with in two or three places a saw-mill, where the power is good. To see farmers painting their houses means the presence of good times, for paint is a luxury. So, those farm-ers who were doing this were gener-ally fairly well off—the result of the high price for cheese and their ability to produce it economically and good. In St. Paulin there were storekeepers actually laying waver pipes for house service indoors. Generally the farmers were thrifty, and their families well looking. There was no sign of anything but thrift we drove through the sunny air and the glory of landscape, and the sun went slowly down in a sky the blue of which what could picture? Winding hither and beyond ran the river, its banks very heavily clad with foliage and suggesting a canoe course of pleasant smoothness mile after mile until of a sudden an up-rearing of the hillside showed a fall of more or less torment-like pictures-queness that might easily have been the original that Jan Ridd describes the original that Jan Ridd describes in "Lorna Doone" as the back door to the Castle of the Doones. A pause to examine and enjoy the wealth of color all around, and then the pony carried us swiftly on a detour! of more than a mile. We came through the rear of a farmer's yard. Past byre, barn and home house. Then from the rise we saw Lac a l'Eau. Clairs. It was delightful. The sunlight upon the home house boat-Claire. It was delightful. The sun-light upon the home house, boat-house and bathing-house tinged the white paint with mellow light and the yellow sheen of the mirror-like surface of the lake was only dimpled here and there with a fly or trout ripple. The forest fringes of the lake were reflected vividly, and one might easily imagine from the opposite is-land the lady of the lake and the boat coming to meet us at the silver strand—only the strand was rather of the golden hue. It is safe to say that never in all his life did Sir Walter Scott view a more romantic scene than this. Neither did he hear the cry of the loon—nor the swish and scream of Canadian wild duck. But the sunset left no gloaming, bright as was the setting it gave to the picture, when the shadows were cast by its going down.

Flip went the fly-cast at early morning, the deft hand dotting the lake surface with the life-like fly hooks tand feathers. Again and again the cast, and here and there the flies danced and flecked, until enly came a leap and the of life from the water. A lusty trout was at its battle for life with the angler at the other end of the line. Five minutes and a beauty three and a half pounds in weight was in the landing net.

Soon afterwards the same deft hand had captured a three-pounder. That was enough for the hour. That was enough for the hour.

Exploring the lake, inlets or bays, and examining the island wore away much more time than fishing. Then the log fire in the spacious fireplace, the library and the story followed. The farmers had killed a moose three miles on the railway side of St. Alexis, and considered the feat no small one. They had not heard of these painingle house for the control of these painingle house. these animals having leen so far in to the cultivated area before, and it was explained that the incident wa not to be taken as indicating any not to be taken as indicating any increases in the moose family, but merely that one had lost its way and had thus been discovered and shot on sight by the farmer who could get in the first load of buckshot.

DIED ON THE TRAIN.

An Englishman's Journey Towards Home Ends Pathetically.

Montreal, Nov. 27. — A man who from papers found in the clothing was W. L. Clark, recently of Brandon and a native of Streatham, Eng., whence presumably he was returning, was found dead in a C. P. R. coach shortly after the train left Ottawa for Montreal yesterday morning. The body was brought on to Montreal. An entry in a note book gives the year of birth as 1870. It is evident that Clark had expected a sudden death, for in the same note book were a copy of his will, the address of his wile, 19 Pendle road, Streatham, Eng., a full description of the baggage he had with him as well as instructions as to what disposal should be made of it, and instructions as to life insurance policies held by a man to whom he owed money. In another pocket was $20, several letters from his wife, and a steamship ticket to Liverpool via St. John. While the cause of death is not definitely known, the appearance of the body would indicate that it was due to consumption, and was hastened by collapse after the journey from Brandon. Clark was in good circumstances, and, although his body upon arrival in this city was removed to the morgue, his relatives in England will be notified of his death and instructions will be awaited. after the train left Ottawa for Montwill be awaited.

door, but the report which followed aroused the officials, who were sleeping in rooms close by. The men fled without finishing their job. Had they succeeded in opening the door they would have been rewarded to the extent of $25.

The case was reported to High Constable Ramsden, who detailed County Constable Burns on the case. The work does not look like that of amateurs. Telephone communication with the 'ty was cut off. The watchman calls at the office two or three times an hour, and had just left before the explosion occurred.

THREAT AGAINST BRITAIN. The Russian View of the Expedition to Thibet.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 27.-The news papers here regard the British expedition to Thibet as an attempt to stir up a movement in China under cover of which the powers will increase their spheres of influence, and they appeal to China not to permit the empire to be deprived of Russian intervention, which saved it on other occasions. The Novoe Vremya, in a recent article, declared that if the British succeeded in carrying out their plans Thibet will be in their hands, as they will always be in a position to threaten Lhassa, and if they gain control of the Holy Land of Thibet, 500,000,000 of Budhists will regard Great Britain as being the most powerful country in the word. The Novoe Vremya adds;—"While it is impossible for the weak Thibetains to prevent the British crossing the Himalayas; it is quite possible for others to compel the British to stop by creating a slight diversion in some direction disagreeable to the British politicians." to China not to permit the empire to

THEY ACTUALLY DO THE WORK

Food Eaten Is Worthless Unless Digested-Some Stomachs Must Have Help.

Food taken into the stomach which, from the nature of the food or the condition of the stomach, is not di-gested, is worse than no food at allcondition of the stomach, is not digested, is worse than no food at all. This is a true statement as far as it goes and a great many dyspeptics go only this far with their reasoning. They argue with their reasoning. They argue with themselves that because their stomachs do not do the work given them, they must be given less work; in other words they must be starved. It would be just as reasonable for a business man who is unable to do all his own work to cut down his business to his own capacity as it is for a man tile starve himself to relieve his stomach. The sensible business man employs help and goes forward with his business. Likewise the sensible dyspeptic will employ help for his stomach and give his body proper nourishment.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets actually do the work assigned to them. They relieve weak and overburdened stomachs of a great portion of digestive relieve weak and overburdened stomachs of a great portion of digestive action. Their component parts are identical with those of the digestive fluids and secretions of the stomach and they simply take up the grind and carry on the work just the same as a good, strong, healthy stomach would do it.

On this account Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are perfectly natural in their action and effects. They do not cause any unnatural or violent disturbance in the stomach or bowels. They themselves digest the food and supply the system with all the nourishment contained in what is eaten and carry out Nature's plans for the body.

How much more sensible is this method than that employed by many sufferers from weak stomachs. By this means body and braim get all the good nutritious food they need and the man is properly nourished and equipped to carry on his work and perform his duties. He could not possibly be in proper working condition by starving himself or employing some new fangled, insufficient food that does not contain enough nutriment for a year-old baby. A strong man doing strong work must be properly fed and this applies to the brain as well as the body.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, by relieving the stomach of its work, enable it to recuperate and regain its normal health and strength. Nature repairs the worn and wasted tissues repairs the worn and wasted tissues just as she heals and knits the bone of a broken himb, which is of course not used during the process of repair.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale by all druggists at 50 cents a box and they are the one article that the druggist does not try to sell something in the place of that's "just as good." Their unqualified merit and cuccess and the universal demand for them has placed them within the yeach of every one.
