Headquarters: New Westminster, British Columbia

Introductory

BRITISH COLUMBIA'S splendid response to the call of the Empire will forever remain as one of the brightest chapters in the history of the Province, and the Fraser Valley more than did its share for the cause of humanity, giving freely of its bravest and best. When the famous 7th Battalion, C. E. F., was recruited, the 104th Regiment, of New Westminster, Lieut.-Col. J. D. Taylor, M.F., commanding, contributed its quota of 150 officers and men. Later it furnished a definite unit of 250 men, or a full company, to the 29th Battalion and the same to the 47th Battalion, besides sending several men to the 54th and 62nd Battalions.

It was in December, 1915, that Lieut.-Col. J. D. Taylor asked permission to raise an overseas battalion under the auspices of the 104th Regiment. Permission being granted, Lieut.-Col. Taylor began recruiting for the 131st (Westminster) Battalion, C. E. F., which it was designed to have representative of the great Fraser Valley. Every eligible officer of the 104th Regiment was taken into the 131st, though the parent regiment had already given about forty officers to other battalions.

Lieut.-Col. Taylor was fortunate in getting several officers who had seen previous service. The commanding officer of the 131st is a veteran of the North-west Rebellion, and started soldiering in 1879. After twenty years of service he was out for fifteen years and then again joined the colors. He is a well known rifle shot and was captain of the British Columbia rifle teams in 1894 and 1897, which were very successful at Ottawa shoots. He also was the first captain of the New Westminster Civilian Rifle Association when it was organized in 1908. Lieut.-Col. Taylor is not only a soldier of experience, but enjoys the confidence of the community in which he resides, having been twice elected to represent the New Westminster District in the House at Ottawa.

Major G. B. Corbould, commanding No. 1 Company, is a veteran of South Africa, and other officers in the battalion who saw service in that country are Captain W. D. F. Godwin, Lieuts. B. I. Vine, R. N. Brassey and Arthur Mars. Lieut. C. E. Bailey went overseas with the 7th Battalion, C. E. F., but was invalided home. Lieut. J. T. Smeeton served for several years in the Royal Marine Light Infantry and was military instructor in the University of British Columbia at the time of his enlistment. Major T. Cunningham and Lieut. H. C. Chamberlin, the tanskery instructor, are famous throughout the Dominion as rifle shots, and several other officers are good shots and were active in militia circles before the war.

Next to the Colonel and the Adjutant, no one has more to do with the making of a battalion than the Battalion Sergeant-Major, and the commander of the 131st obtained one without a peer in Battalion Sergeant-Major Joseph A. Hynes, who is the son of a soldier, having been born in Woolwich, his father, Riding Master Joseph Michael Hynes, of the Royal Horse Artillery, having seen service in the Indian Mutiny. Battalion Sergeant-Major Hynes joined the Royal Horse Artillery in 1885, and saw service in Burmah, 1887-1889. He transferred to the Royal Munster Fusiliers, which, singularly, is the Imperial Regiment with which the parent regiment of the 131st is affiliated, and he served with that unit for nearly eleven years. He served in South Africa as Sergeant-Major of Mounted Infantry until the arrival of Lord Roberts at Cape Town, when he was selected as Sergeant-Major of the C.-I.-C.'s bodyguard. On retiring from the bodyguard his discharge was marked personally by Lord Roberts, giving him permission to wear the uniform on discharge and to retain the rank of Warrant Officer, and Lord Roberts also presented him with an autographed photo. The Sergeant-Major was appointed first commissioner for the Boy Scout movement in Canada, and he was connected with the Volunteer Reserve, 6th D.C.O.R., C.A.M.C. and Corps of Guides, after arriving at Vancouver some ten years ago. Sergeant-Major Hynes possesses three medals, Burmah, 1887-1889, S. A. Queen's medal and six bars, King's medal and 2 clasps. His two sons, Stanley and Dudley, are serving with the 62nd Battalion. This is the veteran who is training the men from the Fraser Valley to fit them for their crusade against the Huns, and it is significant that the buttons on their tunics form the cross of the old Crusaders.

When H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught visited the troops at the training camp in Vernon on July 18th, 1916, he chatted with Battalion Sergt.-Major Hynes and recalled with pleasure their meeting in far-off Mandalay many years ago, expressing his pride in the fact that the spirit of the old soldier of the Orient had survived to flame up anew in the armies of the Occident.

Among the sergeants and corporals are several men who have seen active service in many lands, and the same may be said of the rank and file of the battalion, who are drawn from the most substantial families in the entire Fraser Valley.

Generous as it was with officers and men to other overseas units, the 104th Regiment went even farther with its sturdy offspring, and presented the 131st with a handsome sum with which to purchase instruments for the band. All the recruiting for the 131st was done by the 104th Regiment, and not a single other regiment contributed a man to the force that will go to death or glory from the valley of the Fraser and is expected to more than uphold the magnificent reputation of the gallant Canadians that preceded them in response to the call of the Empire and His Majesty King George.
