PROPOSED CAR ROUTE

Electric Street Railway Files a Map

Road Will be a Belt Line Encircling the City From Ogilvie Bridge to George St.

An interesting document filed with the city council last night was a communication from those who are asking that they be granted a franchise for building a street car system in the city and a map showing the proposed route of the various lines.

was pointed out that the result would be the same, as it would solve itself only in the council making a choice between the two whose bids were alike.

Dr. Bourke Falls Down in His Attempt

To Knock Out the Salary Bylaw Passed by the City Council.

The salary bylaw of the city council still remains intact and the mayor is not despoiled of his $4000 a year and the aldermen their $1500 per, notwithstanding the terrific and equally heroic onslaught made by Dr. Isidore McWilliam-Bourke, M.A., M.D., M.C.H., surgeon major retired of the English army, and late physician to St. Raphael's hospital, London, England.

preliminary objection had been raised against the status of Dr. Bourke, who was appearing under section 128 upon the ground that he was not a person interested in the bylaw from the fact that he contributed nothing toward the revenue of the city.

A LETTER DID IT

The following letter which was received in the last mail is self-explanatory.

Joplin, Mo., May 5, 1902. Zeke Smith, 915 below Gold Run, Dawson, Y.T., U.S.A.

Dear Zeke,—Your loving epistle at hand and contents duly absorbed and to be candid I had about decided to throw you over, as I was of the opinion that you had grown to be a coarse, rough, rude man without any of the finer senses of taste which contribute so much to a woman's happiness, but when I saw the fine taste displayed in the selection of your stationery I realized the injustice I had done you. Will be in on one of the first boats.

Your Loving Kitty.

It's the same the world over—appearance is everything. Use good taste in selecting your stationery and your letters will always create a favorable impression. I have the finest line of fancy stationery ever brought to Dawson. See my window. All drugs sold at popular prices.

SCARCITY OF WATER.

The fact that "clean up" operations have been practically suspended on several of the good creeks of this district owing to lack of water, brings again to mind the necessity of establishing some system whereby water is sufficient quantities so meet all demands may be secured.

If there was any virtue whatever concealed within the iniquitous Treadgold concession, it lay in the fact that a tangible scheme was outlined for placing water on all the creeks.

The presence of a continuous supply of water available during the entire summer season would make it possible to work large areas of ground now lying practically idle, and thus add materially to the extent of mining operations.

In such portions of the district as will admit of summer work being performed ground would be worked without cessation from the opening to the close of navigation.

It has been demonstrated that summer work where practicable is more economical by far than winter work, but the uncertainty of water supply has made it necessary that the great volume of operations be carried on in winter.

Under existing conditions a few weeks only of good sluicing water can be relied upon. For the balance of the season it is either a feast or a famine according as the water rises with a freshet or lowers with a drought.

It would appear as was brought forward very forcibly during the past winter when the matter was under discussion, that the aid of the federal government should be enlisted in the solution of the problem.

Clearly, the task presented is of too great magnitude for any individual to assume, and it is also plain that any company which may seek to undertake the work will require an amount of compensation altogether out of proportion to the service rendered.

The water question is a serious matter and will become more so in future years. Sooner or later it must be taken up and handled in a manner such as its importance warrants, but without government assistance it seems unlikely that a satisfactory plan can be devised.

THE ARROGANCE OF WEALTH.

(From The Chicago Tribune.)

Mr. Andrew Carnegie has tried the patience of his friends severely in some of his late bids for notoriety. We cannot refrain from indulging the feeling that Mr. Carnegie is constantly posing. He has scattered libraries broadly throughout the country, all of which are to be named after himself. Every one of them is "a contribution to the conscience fund."

Mr. Carnegie made his money in a magnificent way, but he should never forget that he made it through the undue favoritism of the government of the United States. Owing to the discrimination practiced in his favor by the tariff, he was enabled to amass a fortune of two hundred millions of dollars or more, most of which came out of the pockets of his countrymen through the operation of unequal laws.

Much has been said of the benefit arising to the workmen from the establishment of the Carnegie works. The beneficent tariff system permitted the works to survive and flourish, but there are some people who have not forgotten the Homestead strike, nor the outrageous manner in which the workmen were treated at that time by employers whose brutality has seldom been exceeded in the history of labor agitations.

It is well enough for Mr. Carnegie to pose as a philanthropist, but when he offers in his grandstand manner to pay Spain $20,000,000 for the Philippine Islands, he exhausts public patience. There have been times when he was not exceedingly popular in the United States, and there is an extreme likelihood that those times will recur with violence if he continues his everlasting chatter on public questions.

As a guide, philosopher, and friend Mr. Carnegie is not yet firmly established in the affections of his countrymen. His mixing in the Philippine affair, and especially his offer of $20,000,000 to indemnify Spain for rights guaranteed to her in the treaty of Paris, can be considered nothing but a gross impertinence, if it is not completely ridiculous.

The Philippine Islands were not bought nor sold for twenty millions of dollars. The indemnity was paid to Spain for money supposed to have been actually invested in the islands. The archipelago is worth more than that sum and the treasure and blood that the United States has spent in maintaining its authority there have been worth many times $20,000,000.

Now, for Mr. Carnegie to step in the foreground and engage in the fray as if he were one of the great powers of the earth is too much for human endurance. Mr. Carnegie should remember who he is, what he is, where he came from, and to what he owes his present prominence before the country.

Mr. Silas Wegg, if he were persuaded to "drop into poetry," would say to Mr. Carnegie: Remember what you are, and whom addressing!

It is not for him to set up an independent government in the United States nor to assume as a superior being to lecture his countrymen.

As we have had occasion to say before, Mr. Carnegie is a great authority on steel. He knows the methods of its manufacture and its distribution and sale. He is a shrewd, canny business-man. But if he has any right to speak with authority on questions of statecraft, we do not know whence it has been derived.

He has had no legislative experience. He is not a scholar nor a student. He speaks with the same degree of authority as any other intelligent man—no more and no less. He should not pose. He should turn off the limelight. He should permit others to get occasionally in the center of the stage and allow people to forget that he is important only because he has made $200,000,000 by great good fortune, and distributed part of it for the endowment of institutions all of which bear his own name.

The prejudice against cremation as a means of disposing of the dead seems to be growing less each year. The Mount Royal cemetery at Montreal now possesses a crematorium and parties desiring their remains disposed of in that manner need only to make application to the proper authorities, there being for the present no fee attached to the service. In the United States, particularly in the large centres of population, cremation is rapidly coming into favor, while in Europe it has been practiced for years. High medical authorities agree that cremation is the proper means of solving the problem of what to do with the dead.

In view of the fact that the date for the Dominion election has not yet been fixed, it is in order to suggest that it be brought on prior to the advent of cold weather. The chilliness of a Yukon winter is not conducive to political enthusiasm.

It too frequently happens that liberty is confounded with license.

Guilty of Grand Larceny. Chicago, May 29.—A jury today found George D'Essauer guilty of grand larceny. He was charged with stealing $40,000 belonging to Mrs. Harvey, his mother-in-law. The jury found that he was guilty of taking $15,000. D'Essauer, according to the testimony, got the money from Mrs. Harvey by fraudulently representing that he wanted to invest it and had spent much of it in traveling in Europe, in pursuit of an actress. It was alleged that he planned to "star" the actress, but the plan fell through.

At midnight the party will leave for Newport.

Officers of Uncle Sam. Visiting Yukon U. S. Custom Ports. Collector Jarvis and Deputy Causten See Dawson En Route.

Lieut. D. H. Jarvis, U. S. A., and recently appointed customs collector for Alaska, and James H. Causten, deputy collector at St. Michael, are in the city, the former on a tour of inspection of the various Alaskan ports and the latter to his post at St. Michael after having spent the winter at his former home in Port Townsend, Wash.

Mr. Causten was for many years auditor in the Puget Sound customs house and for the past four years has been in the same service in Alaska, having for a long time been stationed at Wrangle. He enjoys the enviable reputation of being the best posted man in the custom's service of Alaska.

Messrs. Jarvis and Causten are now congratulating themselves that important business at Skagway prevented their reaching Whitehorse in time to take the steamer Whitehorse to this place and on to Dog Island. The new deputy collector for Eagle was not delayed at Skagway and is now in quarantine doing penance for not waiting on his fellow officials.

Messrs. Jarvis and Causten expect to get off down the river tomorrow on the steamer Kerr. They will stop at Eagle and later take either the Susie or Powers for St. Michael.

This is the first time either of the gentlemen has visited Dawson and both are delighted with what they have seen and are seeing. Yesterday Lieut. Jarvis drove to Grand Forks while Mr. Causten drove up Hunker as far as Last Chance.

Both Houses Play to Good Business

Auditorium Opens With Ten Thousand Miles Away—Burlesque at Orpheum.

The re-opening of the Auditorium which occurred last evening was greeted by one of the largest audiences that the building has ever contained.

Scarcely a seat on the first floor was vacant and the balcony was comfortably filled. The boxes were not crowded but undoubtedly will be on Thursday and Friday nights.

Since the house closed a week ago several improvements have been made notably by the addition of a large number of chairs and by a bright patterned carpet on the stairs leading to the balcony. New scenery has also been added which gives the house an additional attractiveness.

The play presented last evening is entitled "Ten Thousand Miles Away." It portrays the adventures of Joe Ferris and his chum Tom Goodwin, who on leaving America for Australia are suspected of a robbery of $10,000.

The real miscreant, Jack Adderly, turns up on the same boat in the capacity of second officer. Both hero and villain are in love with the same girl which leads the latter to contrive Ferris' arrest and imprisonment when they reach Sidney. Johnny O'Dwyer, Ferris' faithful servant, goes to jail with his master.

The action progresses through a series of highly thrilling adventures terminating by the arrival of all parties at the governor's house, where the villainy of Adderly is denounced and the prisoners secure their release.

The villain perishes miserably at the hands of bushwhackers while the hero reaps the reward of virtue and courage, wins his sweetheart and becomes wealthy.

The drama is excellently staged and undoubtedly will continue to draw excellent houses during the week.

The following is the cast: Joe Ferris, known as the Ferret..... Mr. Cummings Tom Goodwin, his chum..... Mr. Layne Johnny O'Dwyer, from the Bowery..... Mr. H. It was good to be back in house, good to receive the greetings of the ebony servants, the halls and the cloakroom about the clink of glasses, about the laughter from the cardroom.

So thought Dick Dean as he sat in the reading room and satisfaction at the rich and mellow lamplight abroad had done him a good. He was ready to take old life with new vigor.

The light died out of his face that was speaking? Whiteleaf that was Whiteleaf, the banker, "Jonas Norden will be mayor of this city, gentlemen was promised it last fall, and the directors of the Daily voted to support him as the date in the coming caucus."

Dean stood motionless, and on the curtained doorway into a small committee room a light flashing from deepest eyes. Whiteleaf was acknowledged party boss.

"That will be merry now, Dean to hear when he lanced marked a second speaker. He just before he sailed that promised him your support the coming campaign."

"Well," drawled Whiteleaf, "I have changed. The welfare party and—that North franchise call for a different Dean for our candidate mayor. But, mark my word, I will take his medicine like man. He'd never desert me. Besides, I did not promise that he was in line lightning to strike—a sort of promise. He'll land his day. He's young."

"Yes, but suppose the buzz demands honey?" The curtains parted, and stood before the astonished Dean.

"He does demand it, gentlemen here to exact of Mr. Whiteleaf the fulfillment of that promise or no pink strings?" Whiteleaf was the first to get to recover his composure was mentally calculating much of the conversation Dean heard.

"Glad to see you, Dick. Look for you before the middle month. What will you have?" "Nothing," replied Dean, "the outstretched hand, 'unexplained the meaning of which I unfortunately overheard. Come, come, my boy, I'm loaded. You have had experience in wirepulling it that all a fair in love, war and peace."

"A promise given and received good faith should stand in for politics. When I withdrew the nomination in favor of two years ago, you gave me the word. Do you intend to redeem Whiteleaf quailed before the young man and glanced uneasily at his colleagues.

"Think of the welfare of you."

"Will you redeem that promise?" "Whiteleaf lost his temper. 'I'll do as I darn please!'"

"That's all I want to know, Dick, with a calmness which had warned the reader of impending catastrophe. Dean was walked back to the room, dunned his raglan and north into the black, drizzling rain. A moment later he met a political writer in his party, and been schoolmates. Now a rich manufacturer, the other was earning mechanic. Daniel was leader of a certain far party, so the manufacturer of the mechanic, and as their rich man said:

"Dan, I'm out for the nominal fall. Are you with me?" "Every minute, on condition that you swing the boys."

"Yes, if you'll do business."

"What do you mean?" "Square yourself on 'em."

"The city laborers want a day raise in pay, the Colonel Handyside for the board, and they want M. J. on the board of commissioners, and, of course, expected to remember your name. It comes to other appointments. That is about all in the combine wants."

"And that is about all there is, isn't it?" asked Dean.

"Oh, there's a few more things to think of later. How do you mention him you?"

One Municipal Election

It was good to be back in the clubhouse, good to receive the smiling greetings of the ebony servants in the halls and the cloakroom, good to hear the clink of glasses and the shouts of laughter from a distant cardroom.

So thought Dick Dean as he paused in the reading room and gazed with satisfaction at the rich furnishings in the mellow lamplight. His trip abroad had done him a world of good. He was ready to take up the old life with new vigor. Suddenly the light died out of his face. Who was that speaking? Whiteleaf? Yes, that was Whiteleaf, the banker.

"Jonas Norden will be the next mayor of this city, gentlemen. He was promised it last fall, and today the directors of the Daily Times voted to support him as the candidate in the coming caucus."

Dean stood motionless, his eyes fixed on the curtained doorway leading into a small committee room, a luminous light flashing from his deepest eyes. Whiteleaf was the acknowledged party boss.

"That will be merry music for Dean to hear when he lands," remarked a second speaker. "He told me just before he sailed that you had promised him your support during the coming campaign."

"Well," drawled Whiteleaf, "things have changed. The welfare of the party and—er—that North Benson franchise call for a different chap than Dean for our candidate for mayor. But, mark my words, Dean will take his medicine like a little man. He'd never desert the gang. Besides, I did not promise; just hinted that he was in line for the lightning to strike—a sort of pink string promise. He'll land an office some day. He's young."

"Yes, but suppose the buzzing bee demands honey?"

The curtains parted, and Dean stood before the astonished politicians.

"He does demand it, gentlemen. I can hear to exact of Mr. Whiteleaf the fulfillment of that promise—pink strings or no pink strings!"

Whiteleaf was the first of the quartet to recover his composure. He was mentally calculating just how much of the conversation Dean had heard.

"Glad to see you, Dick. Didn't look for you before the middle of the month. What will you have?"

"Nothing," replied Dean, ignoring the outstretched hand, "until you have explained the meaning of the speech I unfortunately overheard."

"Come, come, my boy, don't be led. You have had enough experience in wirepulling to know that as fair in love, war and politics."

"A promise given and received in good faith should stand in love, war or politics. When I withdrew from the nomination in favor of Jenkins two years ago, you gave me a promise. Do you intend to redeem it?"

Whiteleaf quailed before the angry young man and glanced uneasily at his colleagues.

"Think of the welfare of your party."

"Will you redeem that promise?" interposed Dean inexorably.

Whiteleaf lost his temper.

"I'll do as I darn please!"

"That's all I want to know," replied Dean, with a calmness that should have warned the red faced banker of impending catastrophe. When he walked back to the cloakroom, donned his raglan and went forth into the black, drizzling night.

A moment later he met a young political worker in his party. They had been schoolmates. Now one was a rich manufacturer, the other a wage earning mechanic. Daniel Porter was leader of a certain faction of the party, so the manufacturer halted the mechanic, and as their hands met the rich man said:

"Dan, I'm out for the nomination this fall. Are you with me?"

"Every minute, on conditions."

"When you swing the boys into it?"

"Yes, if you'll do business."

"What do you mean?"

"Square yourself on certain conditions."

"Name them."

"The city laborers want a fifteen cent a day raise in pay, the boys want Colonel Handyside for city engineer, and they want M. J. King on the board of license commissioners, and, of course, you'll expect to remember your friends when it comes to other appointments. That is about all my end of the combine wants."

"Ask that is about all there is to it, isn't it?" asked Dean, with a smile.

"Oh, there's a few more things we think of later. How do the boys think of it?"

"I am favorable to the city granting its laborers more pay. Colonel Handyside would make an admirable marshal. There can be no doubt as to Mr. King's qualifications for a seat on the license board, and I should most certainly, if elected, favor my friends as far as possible."

"Say, Dick, you're just like all the rest of the silk stocking politicians."

"How so, Dan?"

Porter tossed his cigar stub into the gutter, squared his shoulders, thrust his hands into his trousers pockets and answered:

"Just this way: A fellow like me, with a little bit of a pull with a few hundred voters, runs up against a man like you who wants us to help elect him. We ask him right out plump to promise us certain favors, and it's nine times out of ten a case of yes with a string on it."

"I do not understand how this applies to me."

"Well, then, I've told you that we'll turn out and fight for you if you'll agree to do certain things, but you're unwilling to give us an out and out promise in return for our help for fear some of your rich club friends will trot out the hammer. Old Whiteleaf led us into Jenkins' camp two years ago, and we got it in the neck. Our necks are full of bumps, and this year we won't accept any pink string promises. If you want to land in the mayor's chair, you've got to do business on the level. If you agree to that, we'll deliver the goods, and I tell you frankly, we won't unless you do."

"I understand now, Dan, what you mean exactly, but I do not feel that I should give pledges. It seems too much like—"

"You want to be mayor, don't you?"

"Yes, but I want to win honestly."

"Well, now, if you want to be mayor, let your friends make your platform and go into the fight and win on it or lose. Half the rottenness of municipal politics would be done away with if this rule were followed, for the winning platform would have to be for the best interests of the city, or the people wouldn't have it."

"You are quite a municipal student, Dan."

"Do you agree with my theory?"

"I must."

"Then all you'll have to do is to decide as to who you want for platform builders. Let them submit it to you. If you feel you can honestly carry out as an executive what the platform declares for, sign it. Let it be published in the newspapers, and the majority of the voters will decide on election day whether the platform is of sound or rotten timber. Let members of the city government be elected on the same platform, and there will be a backbone to your administration—men working under orders from the people, and not a lot of puppets wiggled about by a clique of moneyed men, as is the case at present. What is your opinion?"

"My opinion is that your views are quite correct, but your associates and mine differ greatly as to platform planks and—"

"Call together some of your friends—two men from each ward. Pick out men of intelligence, irrespective of wealth or social standing. Tell them what you wish them to do. The platform will be drawn up by majority vote, and the voters will decide whether it is for the city's best interest or not. Doing this, you establish a precedent. The opposition party will be compelled to follow suit, and each side will strive to present in future years the best platform possible for the people's consideration."

"By Jove, Dan, your argument has won me, and I'll do it!"

"You will?"

"Yes, and I want you to serve on this—this platform committee from ward 3. I leave it to your judgment to select for me a man from each of the other wards. I will name a man in each ward myself, and a meeting will be arranged for Thursday evening at the Worth House. We will try this municipal scheme of yours, and win or lose, I will cheerfully abide by the result."

Greenville Whiteleaf sat at his breakfast Friday morning, scanning the columns of his morning paper. The table girl entered the dining room in time to see him tear a page from the paper and, after kicking his chair aside, hastily leave the room. From the moment of leaving his breakfast table until the closing of the ward caucuses, nearly a month later, the old banker worked incessantly for the defeat of Dick Dean and the success of Jonas Norden. Money was used freely, but many of those who accepted it went into the caucuses and, protected by the secret ballot system, cast their vote for the man who had dared to say what he would do if elected. The banker's protegee was buried by a vote of two to one.

Has Trouble Already

Havana, May 28.—The House of Representatives has reconsidered the bill which provides amnesty for Americans who were under sentence or in jail in Cuba, and has added an amendment which provides that amnesty be granted to native-born Americans only. In this form the bill was sent to the senate. The purpose of the amendment is to exclude from the proposed amnesty those naturalized American citizens who might be released under the bill and who might still continue to reside in Cuba.

The house has voted to fix the salary of the president of the republic at $25,000 a year and that of the members of congress at $3,600.

President Palma's message to congress was read today. Much scandal has arisen from the fact that this message was published here last night before it had been delivered to congress. Today the house passed a resolution to the effect that it considered the premature publication of the message a discourtesy on the part of President Palma.

Must Wipe Them Out

Manila, May 29.—Col. Frank D. Baldwin of the Fourth United States Infantry has telegraphed to Brig. Gen. George W. Davis, in command of the United States troops in the islands of Mindanao, that he does not expect to establish satisfactory peace conditions in the Lake Llano district until the default element is wiped out. The natives pretending to be friendly are urging that this be done, as their own lives are in jeopardy, "which," the colonel adds, "we are in the highest sense under obligations to protect."

"The default element," continues Col. Baldwin, "respect nothing but powder and the sword. They will destroy human lives until destroyed themselves."

Capt. Davis replied that to meet the emergency in the way suggested would necessitate the capture of every fort, by admitting the troops as friends, which was forbidden under existing orders.

Falls Heir to a Fortune.

Tacoma, Wash., May 29.—Carl Scherr, recently employed as a train dispatcher in Tacoma, but now at Helena, in a similar capacity, has fallen heir to $200,000 by the death of a relative in Colorado.

All Northern Pacific shop employees in Tacoma, about 800 men in all, will receive an advance in wages of five per cent, beginning June 1. The monthly pay roll now averages $40,000.

Will Continue Its Train

Topka, Kan., May 28.—The Western Passenger Association has filed a protest with the Santa Fe against the service on the Colorado limited, which goes into service on the Santa Fe June 1. The complaint alleges that the same class of service is provided as on the California limited, where only first class tickets are accepted. In answer the Santa Fe announces that it will not restrict the Colorado train to first class fares.

Phoenix & Eastern

Phoenix, Ariz., May 28.—At a largely attended meeting of business men of this city, President F. M. Murphy, of the Phoenix & Eastern Railway Company, announced that immediately upon obtaining the right-of-way from Phoenix to Mesa City, construction of the railroad would be begun. The meeting by resolution unanimously guaranteed the right-of-way and appointed a committee to procure it.

Her Money Was First

Chicago, May 28.—Crazed by burning oil, which had fallen on her dress from a gasoline stove on which she was preparing supper last night, Miss Josephine Pixie ran into her bedroom and seized $200 in bills, which lay scattered between the mattresses. Her screams attracted John Novas, who extinguished the flames only after she had been fatally burned. The bills, which represented the savings of herself and brother for several years, were burned. The girl died two hours later.

H. B. Ferris Resigns

Grand Forks, B. C., May 28.—H. B. Ferris, formerly of Spokane, has resigned his position with the Kettle Valley lines. He leaves next week for Nome, where he will assume the management of a Spokane company, which is operating a number of placer and bench claims.

Mr Ferris spent last season at Nome.

FINES GO TO DOMINION

Was Word to City Council Last Night

Matter of Public Labor Wage Scale Creates Some Discussion.

The council meeting last night was one of the liveliest sessions that has been held for some time. All the members were present, there was quite a fair sized audience and there were petitions and communications galore. One of the first to be read by the clerk was one from the Dawson Water Company deploring the delay of the council in giving the company definite answer in regard to the proposed new water system. It was stated that if the council decided to accept the company's proposition the pumps it was proposed to install would have to be made to order and if ordered immediately there would be time to have them made and get them before the close of navigation next fall. Two weeks more delay and it was feared it would be impossible to do as hoped to.

A letter was read from Territorial Secretary Brown enclosing a communication from Ottawa in reply to the request forwarded by the council that the city be allowed the fines collected for the various infractions of the criminal code. The minister of justice has considered the matter and says the governor general in council has no power to pass an order in council such as desired. The council was also informed that the city of Dawson does not contribute toward the administration of justice and the fines will continue to form a part of the consolidated revenue as before.

A petition was read calling the council's attention to the deplorable condition of the sidewalk on the north side of King street extending from Third avenue to the alley between Third and Fourth avenues. The sidewalk in question abuts the property of Larss & Duclos and is a menace to everyone travelling over it.

The Dawson Labor Union filed a communication protesting against some of the contractors on city work paying less than current wages. It was said some of the contractors have been paying but 60 cents an hour. The petition was as follows:

"To the Mayor and Aldermen of Dawson city council

Gentlemen.—At a meeting of the Dawson Labor Union held on Saturday, the 7th day of June, 1902, a unanimous resolution was passed that the city council should be requested that in awarding contracts for city work they would compel the contractor to pay his help employed in carrying out such contracts the same rate of wages as the city is now paying. We therefore on behalf of the Dawson Labor Union respectfully request and pray that your honorable body will when awarding contracts in future see that this condition is imposed upon the contractors to whom any contract is awarded."

The petition was signed by the president and secretary of the union. The city scavenger and the cost of the same came up in the shape of a tender from J. P. O'Connor who offers to attend to the public latrines on the water front, remove all dead dogs, keep the new garbage road in perfect repair, the pier and dump in good condition, which at present is in the reverse, for $250 a month extending from June 15 to November 15.

A letter from E. T. Pope, under secretary of state, was read acknowledging the receipt of the council's petition in regard to the appointment of an inland revenue officer for Dawson. The matter has been referred to the governor general.

Major Wood wrote the council that their request in regard to the enforcement of the health bylaw would be complied with.

A petition and counter petition in reference to the N. C. tramway on King street were read and tenders were opened for the furnishing of 1,800 cubic yards of top dressing for the city streets.

The following bills were reported:

McDonald Iron Works	$ 250.00
D. A. Shindler	4.00
Dawson Reading Room, May	300.00
" " " " June	300.00
Lewis & Gibson	84.50

The residents of Sixth avenue north of King street would very much like their street attended to and properly graded. At present there is a part of the virgin undergrowth still in existence in the middle of the street.

Upon reports of standing committees being called for Alderman Norquay, chairman of that on fire, water and light, stated that it had been his intention to have a report ready but he had deferred making it out on account of having waited for Mr. Williams of the Electric Light Co. who was to furnish him some data by today bearing upon the water system. His company was desirous of installing in the city. He had failed to do so and it would be impossible for the committee to report as they wished to until such data was at hand, unless, however, the proposition of the Electric Light Co. were ignored. He hoped to be able to report fully at the next meeting.

A letter was read from Chief Lester showing a comparison between the cost of the fire department as it exists at present and under the proposed new system of hydrants and the two companies consolidated under one roof. The cost of maintenance at present is $52,652 a year, whereas if the changes contemplated are made the cost will be but $38,820. Under the latter system apart from the saving of nearly $15,000 a year the city will be afforded better protection, the service will be far better and it is presumed a corresponding lesser rate of insurance will be given the merchants.

Alderman Murphy sprang a mild sensation by calling the attention of the council to the statement that his worship the mayor had recently made during the progress of a certain criminal trial in the city to the effect that the special meeting held some weeks ago for certain purposes had been called by the mayor at the special request of Joe Clarke. Such was not the case and Mr. Murphy desired his worship to retract his statement. He said further that he was one of those who had signed the call for that particular special meeting and that he did not want to be considered under the same or mixed up in any manner with Clarke. Alderman Macdonald said that he was also one who had signed the call. It had occurred just after the N.W.M.F. had ordered the fallen women out of town without consulting the council and one of the things he had desired to ascertain at the time was why the council should be ignored upon matters which came wholly within their jurisdiction. In reply his worship said that he could not recall the exact words that had been implied to him as at the time he had spoken hastily and while under considerable excitement. If he did say those words he regretted it and was ready to apologize to the council as Mr. Clarke certainly had nothing to do with calling the special meeting referred to. It struck him, however, as most peculiar that the happenings at that particular meeting should have gotten to the ears of Mr. Clarke almost immediately afterward. The council meetings were never of a private nature, always public, but in discussing various subjects informally there was often much said that was not of a public nature, and yet Clarke was evidently acquainted with the most minute details of what had happened that evening. Both Murphy and Macdonald assured the council that no information had been given out by them and as far as they were concerned the explanation of his worship was perfectly satisfactory, and so the incident was closed.

A bylaw was introduced for the prevention of unnecessary noisiness that were calculated to disturb the serenity of the city.

Alderman Murphy took up the petition of the Dawson Labor Union and offered a resolution that all contractors on city work should be required to pay their labor not less than 75 cents an hour, which provoked considerable discussion. Wilson and Adair both objected to the council dipping into the wage question, the latter saying it was not business and characterizing the whole thing as a farce. Wilson said the council had no right to dictate to the contractors the wages they should pay. He believes in paying men what they are worth and no more; doesn't care if they are paid a dollar an hour if they can earn it. Murphy replied that he did not want to be considered as playing to the galleries, but he believed in paying good wages and receiving good work in return. As an instance of doing things on a cheap scale he spoke of the garbage road, which had been built by cheap work and they got a cheap road in return. Every merchant in town was benefitted by the payment of good wages and he considered 75 cents an hour little enough. In reference to the bids that had been opened that evening and what effect such a resolution would have upon them, Mr. Hartney, who was one of the lowest bidders, being present was asked what rate of wages he had figured on in making his estimates and he replied 75 cents an hour. His worship stated that in taking such action the council would not be doing anything out of the ordinary; there were plenty of precedents in the way of cities on the outside having done the same. The resolution was put, Murphy, Macdonald and Vachon voting yes, Adair and Wilson voting nay, and Norquay not voting.

The matter of securing a roller for the streets came up again, as the city engineer is very anxious to secure one at once. Alderman Murphy would like very much to have the one that has been offered by the McDonald Iron Works but he considers $300 would be a big price for it. His worship suggested if the streets committee would look around they might find something that would do equally as well at the same figure or possibly less. The suggestion was agreed to.

In accordance with the tender of J. P. O'Connor to do the city scavenging during the summer for $250 a month Alderman Murphy moved that a contract be at once entered into with him at that rate. Alderman Wilson did not believe the city should make any contract without first calling for tenders. The matter was referred to the finance committee which later upon being called on for a report stated through its chairman, Adair, that they were not ready to report. Murphy insisted that the matter should for various reasons be attended to without delay and Wilson suggested that the city engineer be instructed to call for tenders. His worship said that all things being equal he would for many reasons favor the contract being awarded to O'Connor and he hoped the finance committee would report upon the question at the next meeting.

The city solicitor was instructed to write the minister of justice that the city was contributing toward the administration of justice and endeavor to have him reconsider the matter of the city losing the fines imposed for infractions of the criminal code.

A petition signed by J. R. Gandolfo and others was read protesting against the boothlike stands on First Avenue. They encroach upon the highways, mar the appearance of the streets, cause crowds to collect in front of them to the detriment of pedestrians and particularly ladies, and the council is begged to cause their removal forthwith.

Alderman Murphy would like the finance committee to report one way or the other as to the bill of John Black, a fireman, for clothes destroyed by the engine house flooding while he was away on duty.

A special meeting will be held tomorrow evening at which the water works question will be settled.

Why He Bolted

At one of the club one evening Mr. Montagu Williams met Lord—, who had just lost his father. The young lord was naturally melancholy and the lawyer proposed stopping at a theater opposite, which proposition was accepted. There was a slight fire in the theater, whereupon the young lord was among the first to bolt. "Like a rabbit," out of the building. Returning home to the club, Mr. Williams found there his young friend quietly smoking a cigar.

"What on earth made you bolt that way? You seemed frightened out of your wits (not a difficult matter, perhaps). Don't you know that on such an occasion if everybody got up and rushed out a panic would ensue, with very likely fatal consequences? Why on earth couldn't you sit still, as I did? There was nothing serious the matter." Upon this, with the most patronizing air, the young gentleman replied, "Oh, you, that's very well for you, but you've not just succeeded to a peerage and £20,000 a year?"—Es.

Fragrant Wood

Few of our native trees have odiferous wood like the sandalwood of the islands in the Indian ocean, but a few of the conifers on the Pacific slope have sweet scented woods. The fine church at Metlakatla, built by the civilized Indians of Alaska, is as fragrant as if incense were continually floating through the air from the wood of the great arbor vitae (Thuja gigantea) of which it is built. Libocedrus decurrens, found farther south, is known as "incense cedar" from its fragrance. The yellow cypress (Cyperus nutkanensis) and the Monterey cypress (Cyperus macrocarpa) have also scented woods. In the Atlantic states red cedar and arbor vitae have scented wood.—Mahan's Monthly.

America's Wealthy People

New York, May 24. — Eight big transatlantic steamships left their New York docks this week with every berth engaged, and presumably all those who intend seeing King Edward crowned have reached London or are now on their way. This makes quite a hole in society's ranks and the month of June will note many absentees when the roll is called. Still there are quite a few left, and these are hurrying away to their country homes to make ready for the summer.

And the indications are that when the wandering coronation returns in July there will be no dearth in social entertainment.

James R. Keene sailed on Wednesday for an indefinite time in search of health, which has become seriously impaired by long and constant attention to Wall street affairs. A large number of friends saw him off with hearty well wishes for his speedy return restored to health.

Californians were well represented at the last of Edward's drawing room receptions, and many will have front seats at the ceremonies during coronation week. Mrs. John W. Mackay was in attendance at the last function, although presented in Queen Victoria's time. Her white satin gown with its velvet-train covered with a network of diamonds, edged with ostrich tips caught with bows of diamonds, was the envy of all the women present, for Mrs. Mackay knows how to wear such a costume. Among the others en grande tenue were Mrs. Richardson Clover, Mrs. John Hays Hammond, Lady Maude Burke Cunard and Mrs. Foxall Keene.

Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Lawrence, formerly of San Francisco and more recently of Washington, have come to New York for a stay.

Miss Louise Ward-McAllister gave a charming luncheon to a number of her society friends on Monday, and then escorted them to a charity entertainment at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Four coaches are now at work, and each goes out full every day. Young Alfred Vanderbilt has lost none of his coaching ardor, and no fault is found with his handling of the Pioneer. From the Waldorf the Good Times goes to the races every day, being a close rival of the Reliance, which starts from Sherry's for the same destination. The coach squadron leaves the Plaza hotel every morning for Van Courtland's park, where a polo tournament is in progress. And now it is announced that commencing next week, an automobile tally-ho will start from the Fifth Avenue hotel and make daily trips up the Hudson, thirty miles away, tarrying briefly at the Andre Capitan monument, Washington Irving's grave, Sleepy Hollow and other noted spots en route.

Frederick W. Vanderbilt and his wife prefer a quiet country life to the excitement of society, so they have gone to their camp in the Adirondacks, where they will remain the entire summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Vanderbilt will make their summer home at their Oakland cottage farm, a short distance out of Newport, with a hired Pinard cottage in Newport proper for variety.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Sr., and her daughter Gladys will occupy the magnificent Breakers at Newport, where presumably young Reginald will also spend the summer.

William K. Vanderbilt is expected shortly to return from Europe and occupy his new "Idle Hour" country seat, where he will not lack for company, as he is a genial and entertaining host.

Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., will be at Newport for the regular summer campaign.

Advices received from Mr. and Mrs. Birdie Fair-Vanderbilt, who are still making Paris their headquarters, fix their return to Newport for the first week in July, so as to congratulate Mr. and the future Mrs. Peter D. Martin in person. It is quite likely that they will go over to London for coronation week as the guests of the Duchess of Marlborough.

As Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs has no particular fancy for even a coronation crush, she has concluded to remain in New York until the latter part of June.

Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish will return early in June and prepare for her Newport summer.

Miss Blanche Bates did the honors at the monthly reception of the Twelfth Night Club on Tuesday, assisted by Miss Letta Ellis, the California artiste. There was a big crowd of professionals in attendance and a merry time was had.

Miss Sidney Matthews, daughter of the late Edward J. Matthews, formerly a resident and well known in San Francisco, will be married in June at her mother's home, Valley Forge, Pa.

Mrs. J. Hood Wright will have as her guests in June, at her beautiful country place, The Folly, her sons and daughters-in-law, Aileen, Ivers Robinson and Mr. and Mrs. William Moore Robinson of Paris. The latter will, in July, go to the Thousand Islands and August to the White Mountains.

Colonel James H. Withington, well known in San Francisco in earlier days, died at Binghamton on Tuesday of appendicitis. Withington was a member of the Loyal Legion and Harvard club, had hosts of friends and was popular with them all.

John W. Mackay returned from his absence in California on Tuesday and was warmly welcomed. He declares there is no place like San Francisco after all. He was met on his arrival by Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Mackay, the latter coming over specially from Roslyn. Mr. Mackay will spend tomorrow on a visit to his granddaughter.

Mrs. Hattie Crocker-Alexander and yachting party were at Algiers, westward bound, on Tuesday, and all well.

Miss Lillian Wing will be married early in June and in some respects it will be a notable affair. A married sister will be the maid of honor and there will be four bridesmaids, all experienced married ladies, to the exclusion of novices.

Mrs. A. Biershad will sail May 28 for Europe to be gone indefinitely.

Among the departures for London on Wednesday were Mr. and Mrs. Joe S. Hoadley and daughter, Miss Grace Hoadley. They have secured seats for the coronation procession and expect to have a royal good time. They will return to this side of the world in time for the Seabright and Narragansett seasons.

Winnipeg Holds Record

Facts about the weather and temperatures of various parts of the British empire are very interesting. A recent article in Pearson's Weekly set Mr. R. F. Stupart, superintendent of the Dominion Meteorological Service, at work making a few researches. It was found that Winnipeg, Manitoba, was the coldest city of any importance in British territory. There were colder places in Siberia, and even in Canada. White River, on the north shore of Lake Superior, frequently reports temperatures ten degrees below the capital of the Prairie Province. Winnipeggers, when they come east, have a great habit of laughing when the Ontario man declares that the Winnipeg weather is too much for him. He at once tries to make out that the western city is no colder than Montreal or Ottawa, but he can't prove it by the statistics which are so carefully kept at the observatory in Queen's Park, Toronto.

Winnipeg's average mean temperature for the year is 32.6, while the average for the winter months is 1.5 below zero. The highest temperature on record at Winnipeg is 103, and 53 below zero is the coldest ever registered there officially. Prince Albert, Saskatchewan, is colder than Winnipeg, having a yearly average temperature of 30.5, and a winter average temperature of 3 degrees below zero. The lowest on record at Prince Albert is 70 below the zero mark.

Chatham and Windsor run one another a pretty close race for the warmest place of any size in Ontario. At Chatham the annual mean temperature is 48 degrees, while the highest point ever touched was 102, and the lowest 21 below zero. Windsor's high temperature record is 101 degrees, and the coldest period sent the mercury down to 27 below zero.

According to Pearson's Weekly, the temperature in Brisbane has reached 133 degrees in the shade, but no records at the local observatory show anything like that heat. India undoubtedly holds the high temperature record, for the average in the city of Agra is given at 95 degrees. Outside of India the warmest spots in British possessions are in Australia and South Africa. In the great diamond city of Kimberley 112 has been recorded, and it is about as warm a place as there is in that part of the globe, except on some kopje where the Boers and British clash.

One of the hottest places in Australia is Perth, on the west side of the big island. At this place 117 has occurred and been recorded.

Dress in Africa

They tell in West Africa of a fine old fellow, a convert to Islam, who came into one of the settlements of Sierra Leone one day with his son, when both were astonished by the appearance of a civilized native arrayed in a swallow-tail coat, a tall silk hat and a standing collar. Turning to his son the astonished old man said:

"Look here, boy, if you ever forget Islam and become Nasaza (Christian) you may come to look like that."

Every now and then lantern slides are shown in our churches and Sunday schools of the boys and girls at mission stations in tropical Africa, togged out in clothing such as boys and girls wear in a far cooler climate. Somehow the little things in their unaccustomed garb do not look comfortable.

The New Africa, published in Liberia, said recently that among the natives of the interior one of the most effective arguments against Christianity is the European dress. The educated blacks in West Africa are beginning to protest against the practice of introducing European clothing among the natives.

The Weekly News of Sierra Leone recently asserted that the health of many of the young women along the coast was being impaired on account of the notion they had imbibed that it is pretty to have a small waist. The writer adds:

"The forms of our aboriginal women are beautiful. Many of them resemble in shape the classic statues that are seen in European picture galleries. This is the shape of our aboriginal sisters who have no perils of childbirth."

Another article in the same newspaper said a while ago that out of every 1,000 children born in Freetown 400 die within the first year of their existence. The paper attributes this great mortality to the practice of tight lacing among the women who wear European clothing.

Stroller's Column.

Chief Isaac of the Moosehides got away on his long visit to the outside world Sunday evening and the Stroller takes this opportunity to say that the report that Mrs. Isaac was in town yesterday buying a new bonnet and a picnic shirtwaist is wholly without foundation. When the Stroller called on Mrs. Isaac in the evening she was sitting a la-tailor in one corner of her cabin singing in plaintive tones: "Glu klu ick tu miu chug fu tica lah lah gluk ubu ka holo goo goo," which the Stroller recognized at once as meaning: "Come back to me, sweetheart, And love me as before."

Monday afternoon a fellow who had looked frequently on "red licker" met a couple of his acquaintances on the sidewalk on King street along the Bank saloon. He seemed pleased to see them, and in a loud voice said: "Here, you fellers, come an' have'r drink wish me!"

And fourteen men who were sitting on the edge of the sidewalk spontaneously arose and in one voice said: "I'll go you."

A certain business house in Dawson has a telephone which is located between two desks but which is easily

And yet some people object because there is nothing in the newspaper that suits them.

It is a pleasure to the Stroller to note that fewer people lick newspapers now than in years gone by. The time was when if the Stroller went to the postoffice and back without being shot at, he would confer with the foreman about apparent lack of interest in "our last issue."

Many men have walked several blocks to lick an editor and never returned. They intended to get back in a few moments, but instead they went to a land where a change of heart and palm leaf fan is all they need.

To publish a paper six days every week regardless of weather as the reading and carping public demands does not permit of an affidavit with the names of two witnesses accompanying every statement, very few of which are not in accordance with the principles of truth and veracity.

For a man to do his best at supplying a long felt want and then be hauled into court because he displeased one man is like reading proof on the Chinese Official Gazette where for the first offence they cut his head off and for the second they force him to attend an amateur entertainment. No one not connected with the

that he exercises too much zeal in the conduct of his own business when the same person would not venture to suggest to a merchant the conduct of his store or to a steamboat man as to whether he should use ground oil or lard oil in lubricating his machinery.

An official may dictate with impunity to a newspaper, but when the same paper, whose scope is probably ten times wider than that of the same official, presumes to rub fur against the glass, angels weep, devils dance and hell howls at the presumption and brazenness of the quill driver who is so utterly lost to all sense of cringing reverence as to dare have a mind of his own in the management of his own business.

If the Stroller has said anything in the above that he is sorry for he is glad of it.

While Casey and the medical health officer were entertaining the people of Dawson a poor, unfortunate woman established the fact beyond all contradiction that there is a dead line at Dog Island quarantine station.

There may be no well defined dead line on the island, but it can not be denied that there is one running out from the boat.

A chechaco about whom still clings an aroma of spring calves and newly ploughed ground, arrived in Dawson on a late steamer and, having a friend on lower Dominion, was anxious to send him a letter informing him of his safe arrival. Looking up a paper carrier for Dominion he handed him the letter and then, pulling a nickel out of his pocket, asked innocently and in all candor: "Have you any change?"

"Fifty cents," said the carrier, "is the cost of carrying a letter to lower Dominion."

"Fifty cents for carrying a letter fifty miles?" roared the chechaco. "Why, — it, outside a letter goes from Podunk, Iowa, to any place on the continent for two cents. Fifty cents for carrying one letter after me coming to this country on money made by raising corn, feeding it to hogs and then selling the hogs at three cents per pound, on foot? You look like you might be a son of the man who sold my father a gold brick twenty years ago, but you can't skin his son. I'll just walk out to Dominion tomorrow and tell my friend I'm here."

Mrs. — Seattle

The Stroller is sorry that he is unable to comply with your request but it is impossible for him to stay up every night until 3 or 4 o'clock next morning to keep tab on your husband.

There are a number of detectives here and perhaps you could employ one of them.

The woman is a chestnut sorrel.

The picture of yourself which you enclosed with the request that it be flashed on your husband some time when he is posing as a single man, is herewith returned as, after a careful study of it, the Stroller is almost ready to justify your husband's course. Anyone like you who has a large, full-dress, eight-day mouth should have a side view picture. Do not do so unless you desire. The Stroller only offers it as a suggestion and he would not do so were it not that you are so far away. When the Stroller first became a benedict he was great on making suggestions. Now the only ones he ever makes are by mail or long-distance telephone.

Your plan to come in and surprise him had better be reconsidered as you might be more surprised than he. The chances are that you would be.

If you come in, smother all suspicions and telegraph from Whitehorse: "Your sweetness is coming." (Signed) "Pet."

Boers Rejoice at Tidings of Peace

Acknowledge King Edward as Their Sovereign and Sing National Anthem.

Special to the Daily Nugget.

London, June 9. — Nearly two thousand Boers have already surrendered at Cape Colony. Men under Commandant Conroy on hearing the news of peace threw their hats in the air, cheered the King and sang the National Anthem. Such incidents dissipate all fear that the Cape Colony commands will refuse to accede to the terms. Dewet is personally superintending the surrender of Boers at Vrededorf, Orange River Colony. Schalkberger in his address to Boers at concentration camps asked them to forget and forgive the past and pointed out the uselessness of further struggle and desired all to work for the good of Africa. Kruger declined the facilities of the British to return to South Africa, but accepted Queen Wilhelmina's offer of a Dutch vessel to convey him to Cape Town when he desires to return. Boer refugees in the United States are asking the British ambassador to assist them to go home and promise to be law abiding citizens of Britain.

WIT AND HUMOR.

Mrs. Wunder—It seems to me that that music teacher is always asking for money.

Mr. Wunder—That's perfectly natural. His scale, you know, begins and ends with "dough."

"It is hard to lose one's relations," said the seedy individual with a mourning band on his hat.

"Hard?" echoed the man whose check is good for a million. "Why, sir, it's simply impossible."

Vessels of 4,000 tons can ascend the St. Lawrence river to Montreal, a distance of a thousand miles from the sea. Only one other river in the world, the Amazon, is navigable to such a distance for craft as large.

"But I am not worth a million in my own right!" faltered she sadly, for she had read that many men abhor the thought of marrying rich women.

"I love you for all that," he cried generously.

Dress yourself fine where others are fine and plain where others are plain, but take care that your clothes are well made and fit you, for otherwise they will give you a very awkward air.—Lord Chesterfield.

"You know," she said, "I am not much of a conversationalist."

This seemed to him the opportunity for which he had been waiting.

"Well," he returned, "if I do the preliminary talking your conversational ability will be sufficient to enable you to say 'Yes, won't it?'"

After all, in courtship there is nothing like getting your answer before you ask the question.

LIBEL CASE ENLARGED

Stands Over Until the July Assizes

Clarke Must File His Bill of Particulars—Other Matters in Court.

Mr. Justice Craig sat in chambers yesterday hearing a number of motions and arguments in cases pending. The libel case of the King against J. A. Clarke came up on a motion of defendant for an enlargement from Wednesday to the first criminal assizes in July. The affidavit filed in support of the motion set out that the defendant appeared before Mr. Justice Dugas June 3 when he was informed by his lordship and also by the clerk of the court that the case would not be heard until July, in consequence of which he allowed his witnesses, who were then on hand, to depart. It will be impossible for him to again have them here by Wednesday, the day set for the trial and Mr. Hagel, K. C., objected to the delay saying that his witnesses were here and had been kept here at considerable expense and he was ready to proceed without further delay. His lordship replied that it would be unfair to crowd the defendant to trial under the circumstances and he was disposed to grant the enlargement which was finally done. Defendant must file his particulars within a week and the case will be heard the first week in July.

Judgment by consent was taken in the case of Chisholm vs. Crowled et al in the sum of $1862.40.

Creelman vs. Terrell came up on a motion for summary judgment. Enlarged until Monday.

Caitley vs. Wye was settled out of court. The receiver was allowed $375 for 22 days service.

Potaker vs. Guimond was also settled out of court and an order entered discharging the receiver.

A motion was argued in the case of View vs. Clark for leave to amend the statement of defense.

Scribbs vs. Bowhay came up on a motion to strike out the statement of claim. Stands until next chamber day.

A Brutal Assault

La. Poetr., Ind., May 39.—Intense excitement prevails in the locality of Lake of the Woods, a small village in Marshall county, over the brutal assault on Mrs. Peter Vetrock by an unknown man. The woman is dying and her assailant is at large. Mrs. Vetrock was attempting to drive some geese through a gate when a man stepped into the gateway. The woman told him to get out of the way, but instead of doing so he picked up a board and struck her over the head, fracturing her skull.

TELEPHONE, TO BITTNER—AHA! AT LAST YOU ARE IN ME POWER!

reached by any ordinary sized man newspaper business knows anything A day or two ago W. W. Bittner brought into court recently for publishing the news as obtained by him set the Stroller to thinking. It is not often that he thinks, for thinking is one thing that the Stroller prefers to let on a lay.

But the fact that a newspaper man was hauled up for presuming to publish the sentiment of 140 people as against that of one man was sufficient to make even the most easy-going man in our midst pause and ask himself the question: "Whither are we drifting?"

So necessary have newspapers become that schools are established to prepare young men for journalism, but it is after they get out and have some actual experience that they learn the difference between a vile head-a-scoop and a ten-point, double-headed scoop with a four-column

The newspaper of the present day is an encyclopedia, a poem, a biography, a history, a timetable, a romance, a cookbook, an art critic, a steamboat explosion, a house guide, a picnic, a quarantine station, a liar, a sermon, a symphony in solid body type, a multum in parvo.

newspaper business knows anything A day or two ago W. W. Bittner brought into court recently for publishing the news as obtained by him getting the paper out (of the express office) on time.

The Stroller once knew an editor who wrote his editorials in the afternoon, jerked a Washington handpress till midnight, went home and wrestled from three to five hours with a case of juvenile colic and then went out and delivered his own paper in the morning. Is it any wonder there was a tinge of sadness in his funny column and a kink in his spinal column?

And yet that poor man was arrested and hauled into court on the charge of criminal libel. But it was not for anything he had said in his paper. It was because a duck in his barnyard said "quack" as an aspiring young doctor, who had never had a case since recovering from the measles, rode by.

The editor was discharged by the magistrate and in his next issue he said Dr. Pillem had experienced the misfortune of losing his duck suit just as the warm weather was coming on.

Years later the same editor and doctor became great friends and the latter would frequently call at the home of the former and pick shot out of his legs free of charge.

The Stroller views with alarm the fact that the number of "Battinskies" who know just how a man should conduct his own paper much better than he knows himself does not decrease with that rapidity which the general progress of the age would justify. A person will presume to tell a newspaper man

TRAMWAY SQUABBLE

George De Lion After N. C. Co.

Files Petition Protesting Against the Continuance of the King Street Tramway.

George De Lion has got blood in his eye and he is after the scalp of the N. C. Co. A couple of weeks ago he filed a communication with the city council protesting against the alleged blocking up of the foot of King street by the company and at the next meeting the company came right back with a statement that their lines of which complaint had been made were not interfering with traffic, but that a pile of wood and logs, a floating wharf, etc., belonging to complainant did so. An armistice of a week or two then occurred, but last night at the council meeting it broke out afresh in another quarter. Mr. De Lion filed a protest against the N. C. tramway running from the company stores up King street to the warehouses at Fifth avenue and much to his surprise almost immediately following the reading of his own petition there appeared a counter communication from the company concerning the matter complained of. In his petition which was signed by himself and Luella Day McConnell there were six reasons given why the tramway should be abolished. It was in many places above the street level which made crossing with teams next to impossible, it was unsightly, it was a nuisance on account of the noise made, the company had no right to appropriate a portion of the public highway to their own use, they had no charter nor permit which allowed them to build it in the first place, and the council was begged to order it removed at once and in default of the company so doing to cause the same to be done and tax the company with the cost.

The counter petition which came back as a sort of a boomerang was signed by the N. A. T. & T. Co., Mrs. M. A. Hammell, Dawson Warehouse Company, John Gilson, R. A. Kalenborn, Chas. Bosnyk, Larss & Dueslos, Wm. Germer, G. M. Allen, George Hill, J. A. Farr, D. W. Davis, Emil Stauf and about thirty others. The petition recited that they for the most part were tenants and occupants of property by which the tramway passes and that they had no objection whatever to its continuance. It does not interfere with traffic, is used on an average not above an hour a day, and is utilized by the general public as a sidewalk. It stated further that the tramway was a necessity for the company in transporting its goods to and from its warehouses which on account of their large quantity and the danger from fire it was imperative that they be stored in a place of safety. The petition of De Lion, it said, was not made in good faith and was only for the purpose of venting a personal spite. He is not the owner of any property abutting on the tramroad which he holds to be so obnoxious.

Later in the evening his worship seeing both Mr. De Lion and Mr. McGowan, who represents the N. C. Co., present he gave them permission to further elucidate their views upon the matter to the council.

As Mr. De Lion arose to his feet he was observed to be pretty wrathful. He could not understand how the N. C. Co. had learned of his petition in time to prepare their unless the city clerk with whom he had filed his had deliberately made it his business to inform them. He reiterated the statements he had made in writing as to the company possessing no charter and other allegations made and claimed it as his right as a citizen to make the protest, characterizing the signers of the counter petition as a "lot of funkies."

Mr. McGowan had only a few words to say, but reminded the council that nearly all those who had signed his petition had been approached by Mr. De Lion for the same purpose and refused, and as to the gentlemen being a "lot of funkies," he would leave the question of their character and general stability to the members of the council and they could judge for themselves. The petition was signed by nearly every property owner abutting the tramroad and one of the number had circulated it for signers. All agree that it is a convenience rather than otherwise and none object to it. Mr.

MISS MAMIE HIGHTOWER

Tells of Her Experience in the Water

At the Time Her Companion May Connor Lost Her Life.

The story of Mamie Hightower of the drowning of her companion, May Connor, is one of the most pathetic stories ever told. In referring to it Miss Hightower forgets all about her own struggles in the water and her own rescue from certain death. She cannot even give the name of her rescuer, though she says he called her by name and she knows him well by sight.

Miss Hightower was fetched from below Dog Island yesterday afternoon by the steamer Marjorie, and taken to her room in the Savoy building. Since then and up to the present writing she has been more or less delirious, calling out "May, May, keep your head up," "keep your head up," "they will save us from the Whitehorse." May Connor, she says, was on her back across the Peterboro canoe, with her head in the water.

It is not true, according to what can be made out of Miss Hightower's story, that a man leaped from the deck of the Whitehorse to her rescue. He was in his night clothes sure enough, but he was also in a boat. Miss Hightower had hold of the canoe they started out in but she let go one hand in an effort to lift May's head, and the current swept her down the stream. She says that she called to May many times but May never responded. She thought May was dead and that she herself soon would be when the current swept her under. But she came up again and saw the man making after her in a boat—one of the steamer Whitehorse boats. He called to her many times before he came up to her. When he came alongside she caught hold of the boat herself. She was then unconscious, she says. He helped her in to the boat, and landed her below Dog Island. He then carried her to a cabin, but did not himself come into the cabin as he said he was quarantined and if he did Miss Hightower would be quarantined, too. She says the people of the cabin behaved to her very kindly, and did everything possible to make her comfortable.

Miss Hightower is still in an excited condition from her terrible experiences and by the doctor's orders none of her friends are permitted to see her.

Miss Hightower says it was after three o'clock before they got away from the waterfront. When they got opposite the Whitehorse they broke one of the paddles. Then they ran on to the cable from the Whitehorse and the other paddle was broken. They all clung to the cable, the three policemen and the two women, until the boat capsized, and then they all tried to get a hold of the boat. After the breaking of the second paddle they had drifted to the cable, and when they got hold of it and the boat was capsizing Tony, one of the

The next boat expected from up river is the Selkirk which left upper Leberge at 7:30 Sunday night. A couple of hours later she struck a bar at the head of Leberge where she remained until this morning. She passed lower Leberge at 8 a. m. and if no trouble is experienced in Thirtymile river she should arrive tomorrow evening.

The Bonanza King, which left Whitehorse Sunday at 5:30 in the afternoon, also had serious trouble with a bar at the head of Leberge. At the last account she was still stuck and it is not known whether she has yet been able to spar herself free.

Baseball cranks were out in full force last night to witness a practice game at the barracks between the Commercial and Dawsons. The game was enjoyable though full of errors. During the first three innings the Commercial had the Dawsons on the run, piling up eight runs, their entire score in the game, but afterward they were all shot to pieces, getting a goose egg in each of the four successive innings. Layton, Briggs and McPhate were the battery for the Dawsons, and Boyer and Russell for the Commercial. Only seven innings were played, the score being as follows:
