Papal Supremacy.

In the church of the Holy Name, Manchester, England, which was thronged to its utmost limits on a recent Sunday, the Rector, Rev. Bernard Vaughan, S. J., replied to Dr. Moore, the Protestant bishop of Manchester, who in his recent charge to his clergy and church wardens made an attack on the Catholic church. For one hour and twenty minutes the eminent preacher held his audience riveted by a masterly discourse, which we regret, owing to extraordinary pressure on our space, we cannot give in full. Taking as his text, "All things have their seasons—a time to keep silence and a time to speak" (3rd chap. Eccles.). He said it took a priest all his time to look after his own, without saying forth aggressively to attack others; but when a high official of the state—a bishop of the state church in the person of the Dean of Arches in the province of Canterbury. And surely if the natural result of the revival of learning was the so-called reformation, how can we explain that this tide of revival did not sweep away the Papal supremacy and bring about the reformation, say, in Italy, Austria, France, or Spain? Or, how comes it that the great Reformer and blessed Thomas Moore, with others too numerous to mention, did not bow to this great tidal wave that set in, and, like their weaker brethren, subscribe to the oath of supremacy? I cannot doubt but that the bishop of Manchester will admit that St. Thomas Moore was a man of intelligence and knowledge, and yet, with nothing to gain in this world and his head to lose, he felt compelled in conscience to say, "I would not deny to the Pope the succession, yet not that oath that binds the Pope to the papal supremacy." This cost him his head.

One of the great questions is so intimately bound up with the revival of letters, how comes it that with the spread of literature, and the increase of education, Protestantism has not been more successful in trying to proselytise a nation which even the bishop must admit is not wanting in "knowledge and intelligence" (the words of the Roman Pontiff, viz., that it is a thing of medieval growth. "Only that and nothing more." So long as this remains a mortal last and separate stone—and it is giving here and there signs of crumbling away—the established church may continue to stand; but even to-day the country begins to calculate how many years it yet has to live. The Protestant bishop of Manchester in determining the relations of Protestantism to Catholicism, declares: "We are not separated from that church by minor quarrels about orders and forms of service. The true grounds of our separation from the Catholic Church, however, are of a deeper and more serious nature. We have rejected the Papal supremacy as a usurpation founded originally upon mistakes and forgeries. We have rejected many Roman doctrines, especially the doctrine of infallibility, and the whole Roman system of sacerdotalism, as unscriptural, superstitious, etc." And he adds, "these are facts, and it can do nothing but harm to conceal them." This wholesale condemnation, like the Pennsylvania flood, seems to sweep away nearly all before it, including one section of his own church, and, in fact, to clear the ground of everything ecclesiastical, but the Bible and the pulpit.

Dr. Moorehouse, as Protestant bishop of Manchester, at his consecration took an oath of homage to the head of his church—the Pope, "the supreme head on earth under Christ of the church of England." It ran thus: "I, doctor of divinity, now elected, confirmed and consecrated bishop of Manchester, do hereby declare that your majesty is the only supreme governor of this your realm, in spiritual and temporal matters, as well as temporal, and that no foreign prelate or potentate has any jurisdiction in this realm." The bishop of the question, by her coronation, pledges herself to uphold to the utmost of her power the Protestant reformed religion as by law established in this realm." The bishop of Manchester's attitude towards Catholics, who regard the Pope as their spiritual head, is not surprising. He says, "I will be faithful and obedient to the Blessed Peter and the holy apostolic Roman Church. I will take care to defend, preserve, increase and promote the rights, honors, privileges and authority of the Roman church of our Lord, the Pope and his successors." Was the Papal supremacy rejected by the reformers in the sixteenth century? The bishop is satisfied that he can trap the positive case of it to the revival of the letter and the new learning that had set in. To such persons as wish to Harbor Grace Cathedral.

The following account of the destruction of the magnificent Cathedral at Harbor Grace, on the 2nd day of the month of September, Standard of the 4th inst. came to hand too late for our last issue. The Bishop, it appears was preparing to go to Salmon Cove by the early train on the 2nd inst. He arrived at a quarter to three, and, having finished his morning devotions, went down to his study, and was all ready to leave, when the Convent bell rang out. His Lordship thought that it was the usual bell which rings at the convent at 5 o'clock and that he had missed the outgoing train. Wondering that his watch and the Convent-bell did not agree, the Bishop ran out of the Palace. At this time there was not a soul on the ground, so the Bishop himself was the first to see the flames. The flames which he saw coming from the eastern wing of the sacristy had not up to this time gained much headway, and had not even reached the altar. The Bishop immediately hurried back, and called Father R. G. and they got the key of the western wing of the Church and unlocked the door. The Bishop made an effort, at the evident risk of his life, to reach the Tabernacle on the altar of the sacristy, but the darkness caused by the smoke was by this time so dense that he mistook the Altar of the Sacristy for the altar of the main altar, and unlocked the door. OUR NEW SENATOR.

OTAWA advices of the 18th inst. inform us that the Honorable Samuel Prowse has been called to the Senate of Canada.

TRADE RELATIONS WITH THE UNITED STATES.

The United States senate committee on commercial relations with Canada, was in session in Boston last week.

The coal dealers want free trade in coal, as they say it would give them a larger Canadian market.

The first witness was Hon. E. A. Morse, member of Congress. He declared himself in favor of Commercial Union.

The first question that presents itself is: Does it pay both countries to retain an army of revenue officers on each side of a line of demarcation?

Jonathan A. Lane, President of the Boston Merchants' Association, gave the following evidence:

These are but a few short extracts from the great mass of evidence taken; but even from this it will be seen that a considerable change of opinion has taken place among some of our neighbors regarding trade relations with us.

Our neighbors are not so anxious to enter into reciprocity with us as they were some years ago.

What has done more than anything else, perhaps, to create false notions among the people of the United States relative to our relations on commercial relations with them has been the dishonesty of our Congressional Union, which certain agitators and politicians have been harping on for the last year or two.

RETURN OF HIS LORDSHIP THE BISHOP.

His Lordship Bishop McIntyre, who had been absent in Europe for upwards of two months and a half, returned home in good health, on Saturday night last.

His Lordship and Rev. D. J. Gillis, of St. Columba, left here on June 25th, and a few days later took passage from New York on board one of the North German Lloyd's steamers.

Nothing definite, says an Ottawa despatch of the 19th, has yet been decided with regard to the date on which Parliament will open.

It is announced that the object of the Dominion Office department in asking postmasters to take the weight of printed matter mailed at their offices is solely for statistical purposes.

A few days ago Judge Falconbridge, before whom the Hamilton election before was tried, declared the election void, on account of bribery and corruption.

The Edinburgh Scotsman, referring to the late Hamilton election, says: "It would be a good thing if colonial travel and experience were made a condition of taking office in the Imperial Government."

His Lordship's visit to Avia was of unusual interest. This was the birthplace of St. Theresa, and there also spent the greater part of his life.

His Holiness, Pope Leo, presented His Lordship with a magnificent vestment of white silk, embroidered in gold, and valued at about one hundred and twenty-five dollars.

Our neighbors are not so anxious to enter into reciprocity with us as they were some years ago.

His Lordship's visit to Avia was of unusual interest. This was the birthplace of St. Theresa, and there also spent the greater part of his life.

His Holiness, Pope Leo, presented His Lordship with a magnificent vestment of white silk, embroidered in gold, and valued at about one hundred and twenty-five dollars.

CHAPTER I.

It was Hallow Eve in the island of Inishbofin, off the coast of Connemara, seven miles out in the Atlantic.

Maureen had a good walk before her, for she was now standing in what is called the West Quarter, and her home was at the North Beach.

She went on with her task in silence for about a minute, and then she said, in a steady voice, loud enough for the others to hear.

At the beginning of this address Maureen had changed color quickly and seizing the tongs, had commenced a fresh attack on the fire.

Maureen had a good walk before her, for she was now standing in what is called the West Quarter, and her home was at the North Beach.

She followed her friends out of the cabin into a calm moonlight night, which had replaced the gloomy twilight.
