Ruled by Destiny!

CHAPTER XXIV.
THE UNDELIVERED MESSAGE.

"Judge for yourself!" she retorted, lunging into courage. "Floris Carlisle has flitted you, Bruce, and run off with Bertie Clifford!"

He looked at her with a dull, perplexed gaze. "Is this an elaborate joke, fiancée?" he asked, quietly; then as she scanned her face his grasp on her arm grew tighter, and he drew her to him so that she thought he was going to kill her.

"What did you say? Say it again—say it again! I didn't hear you—I could not have heard you. I must be listening still! Floris—Floris!—well, can't you speak?" he said, harshly.

"Bruce, it is quite true! Would you leave it were not! She has left you, Bruce! She has gone off with Bertie Clifford!"

He dropped her arm and stepped back, then he looked at her calmly, quietly.

"It must be a lie!" he whispered, quickly, just as Floris had whispered. "It is true; I have seen the porter, Josine a fortnight ago!"

She shook her head. "It is the truth, Bruce!"

"How do you know? She has not written; she has—oh, Heaven! am I awake or dreaming? Blanche, for heaven's sake, tell me all! I know there is some hideous mistake—of course there is some mistake, and it must be put right at once. But tell me all—don't waste a moment! Now—now!"

"Bruce, I can only tell you what I know. The day you left she received a telegram; she started for the railway station at once, and there she met Bertie Clifford."

"A lie!—a lie!" he groaned. "Bruce, it is no idle scandal. Josine saw them go off together!"

"Josine, Josine! Who is Josine?" he demanded, hoarsely.

"Lady Betty's maid—a great friend of Floris!"

"Fetch her!—fetch Lady Betty!" he said, pointing to the door.

Lady Betty went out—she was glad to get out, if even for a moment or so, from the sight of his face, the sun of his voice.

In five minutes she returned with two others.

He was still sitting in the chair, looking vaguely, vacantly out of the window.

"Oh, Bruce!" sobbed poor Lady Betty, going to him; but he kept her back with upheld hand.

"Girl," he said, sternly, "tell me what this means! Speak the truth, if you can, or by Heaven—!"

His glance was terrible, and even Josine quaked; but she had gone too far to draw back.

"Milord, I know nothing but this, to say in a low, steady voice—and to repeat her lesson.

For a certainty Miss Carlisle had fled to Ballyfoe with Lord Clifford.

"And you—you believe this?" he demanded.

manded, turning to Lady Betty. "What can I do, Bruce?" she waited. "It is true; I have seen the porter, the guard, and—"

Lady Betty shook her head. "No, Bruce, not a word. I have written to her, begging her to relieve us of this terrible suspense with one word, but she has not sent it."

"Go!" he said, pointing to the door, and the two went out, leaving Lady Blanche standing there with her hand before her eyes.

She stood thus for a moment or two, then she ventured to look at him. He was sitting in the chair still, his face turned from her.

She went up to him and knelt beside him. "Bruce—dear, dear Bruce—be brave. Oh, Bruce! she is not worth it, she is not, indeed!"

He turned his head, and she started and shrank back.

His face was deathly white to the lips his eyes filled with a despair that seemed to have transformed him into an old man.

For a moment he appeared unable to speak then he put his hand on her shoulder.

"Blanche," he said, hoarsely, almost inaudibly, as the voice of a man at death's door, "you can do me no good! Leave me to myself!"

"But—but—" she cast a quick, fearful glance round the room; his pistol case stood on a side table, and there was despair, frenzy on his face.

He smiled an awful smile. "No, Blanche, do not be afraid! I shall not do that. Will you go now?"

She got up slowly. She longed, with a longing past expression, to throw her arms round him, to pour out the passionate love of her heart at his feet, to remind him that there was still one who was faithful, but she dared not, dared not!

—She had gone to the length of her tether for the present; for the future?—well it lay in the hands of the gods!

School Girls' Nerves

When an undue amount of nervous energy is consumed in the brain there is bound to be failure of the other functions of the body.

Digestion is impaired—the head aches—you cannot sleep—you are easily excited and irritated—feel tired and lack energy.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is a creator of rich, red blood and a builder up of the exhausted, nervous system.

That city of lovely faces, and the people had elected to call her, not by the name she had assumed, Lillian Wood, but "the pretty English lady!" and there were many who were pleased at winning a smile from her sweet, sad face as at drawing the copper coins from the grand people who rode lazily through the parks or crawled languidly along the quays.

Among the English at Florence it had been quite an amusement, during the long winter months, to guess at the history of the graceful English girl who was seen so often in her solitary walks about the city; but not one of the chatter boxes ever imagined for a moment that the girl who lived in the little house at the corner of the square, with the eccentric old Mrs. Sinclair, and who was called Lillian Wood, was none other than Floris Carlisle, once so nearly Countess of Norman!

Floris had to come to Florence in the beginning of the winter, with a heart that was too heavy, as Dante says, to ache much, and had found a quiet but not unfriendly welcome from the lady who had engaged her.

Mrs. Sinclair was one of those eccentric people who permit themselves to be absorbed by an idea, and give up everything in life to the pursuit of it. Mrs. Sinclair's great ambition was to write an exhaustive work on botany.

She was passionately fond of flowers, and had made them her study ever since she was a girl; but the book had not got itself written yet, though she was now an old woman with white hair and falling eyesight.

It was in consequence of this failing eyesight that she had advertised for a young girl to assist her, and she soon found that she had secured a treasure in Floris.

Floris' work was not difficult; for two hours in the morning and an hour in the evening she was occupied in making notes and copying extracts for the great work; the rest of the time was at her own disposal, and she disposed of it in learning Italian in the quietude of her own room, or wandering dreamily about the beautiful city.

To all intents and purposes, she was completely at the disposal of the one to whom she had been secured, and Floris Carlisle might indeed have been dead and Lillian Wood have sprung from her ashes.

Mrs. Sinclair had no friends besides the clergyman and the professor; no English newspaper ever entered the house; no tidings of the great world on the other side of the channel ever reached the Violet Villa, as it was called, and Floris knew nothing of Lord Norman's accident and illness, guessed nothing of the plot which Lady Blanche and Oscar Raymond had so skilfully woven and put into execution.

Slowly, dreamily, Floris crossed the bridge on this May evening, and reached the library. She stood talking to the librarian, to whom she was known and then she set off for home.

With her book under her arm she was walking quietly through a narrow street when, suddenly, there came upon the drowsy, shadowy silence the sound of men's voices raised in anger.

There was no one in the street excepting a couple of children at play in the road and a woman loitering at a door, and Floris was wondering whence the sound proceeded when, from the house opposite which she was standing, two men came out.

They came out hurriedly; the foremost one in silence, the other one vociferating in the sharp, excited Italian fashion.

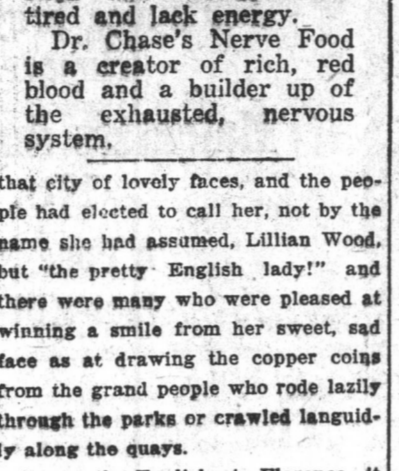

Something in the appearance of the first man attracted Floris' attention, as she stepped back to allow them to pass she saw that he was an Englishman.

It was a very lovely face even in

Germany and Russia

That the disturbance in Moscow following the assassination of the German Ambassador amounted to a "serious counter-revolution," is a statement that rests upon the sole authority of a Berlin news bureau obedient to imperial control. The news transmitted through such a medium must necessarily be accepted with wariness; a wireless message to London says that the disorder has been suppressed. That is probable enough, for Moscow is the seat of what the supporters of the Soviets call their Government, and it would naturally be assumed that they have there a sufficient force of Bolshevik soldiers to put down street disturbances. Moscow is not the place just now where an uprising against the authorities of Russia's misfortune would be likely to take a formidable and effective shape.

There is hardly room for doubt that Germany will take her revenge upon Russia, as she did upon China when she seized the Kiaochow in reparation for a similar affront. Any Government would resent and demand reparation for such an insult as the murder of its Ambassador in a foreign capital, but Germany is sure to make her demand serve her general purpose of seizing upon the whole of Russia and confirming her control of its governmental and commercial affairs. Her revengeful procedures may bring matters to a crisis in Russia, they may rouse the people to a pitch of courage necessary for resistance, but that is by no means certain. Further outrageous acts of this character may be expected, for Russian society has advanced far enough toward actual dissolution to have made a near approach to that condition of anarchy where every man's hand is against every other man from whom he may hope by violence to obtain food, money, clothing, land, or the gratification of the passion of hate. We know that there has been a great deal of promiscuous butchery by the sincere believers in total "liberty" whom the misrule of the Bolsheviks has freed from all restraint. Further works of savagery, even on a large scale, would be the natural sequence of past procedures under the Bolshevik Government; an increasing destitution supplies the motive.

Germany and Russia.

bach is another warning that action by the Allies in Russia has become imperative and cannot be further postponed save at the cost of irreparable disasters to the Russian people and the surrender of the opportunity to prevent the execution of German designs toward the east. When Germany controls Russia, she has won the war, whatever may happen in the west. Russia's friends among her former allies seem to have been perversely blind to this vital truth, though it is of immeasurable importance to their future welfare and to the peace of the world. There are hopeful signs that a beginning is now to be made in action of some kind. Delusions about Russia, half knowledge and false counsel have deferred it thus far, although from Russians themselves, who are our best source of knowledge about conditions in their country, have come abundant testimonies as to the need and the urgency of helpful action.—New York Times.

How Canada Views Titles.

(From the Farmer's Advocate.)
 The announcement which the Prime Minister had intended to make to the Imperial Council concerning titles does not give voice to the opinions held generally in Canada, nor does it express the views of the members of the House of Commons. Ignoring the incident in the House on May 21st, when Unionist members felt obliged to vote for the Government's amendment in order not to embarrass the cabinet after Sir Robert Borden declared that he would consider it a vote of confidence, we can truthfully say that Canada is fed up on titles and desires no more of them. The plain and common names such as Gladstone, Asquith, Lloyd George, and even those of lesser lights, carry with them a refreshing atmosphere which suggests brilliant intellect and noble achievement. Lloyd George's elevation from the environments of a cobbler's shop to the highest position in the nation which can be occupied by any man outside of a certain lineage, and his great world influence can never be made more illustrious by any honor the throne can confer. This is not written in any spirit of disloyalty, but recognition on the part of one's fellowman is what really does lasting honor to the name of those who prove themselves great. If one does not distinguish himself in any work which benefits his country, a title will no longer delude the people, and the camouflage must be altered. For some reason or other a title suggests wealth and influence to the simple and democratic Canadian mind. Perhaps this is unfortunate, but titles are becoming common here, and reports come from across the seas, where knighthood has long been in flower, that distinction does not constitute the only claim to such preferment. Riches in themselves no longer bring glory to him who has accumulated them, and a title added does not increase one's popularity. It is reported that the list of birthday honors, which will be announced before this is read, will not contain the names of any Canadians who are recipients of hereditary titles, and those conferred will probably be in recognition of valiant service on the battlefield. However, the feeling is that all should be abolished, and surely at the next session of Parliament an opportunity will be given for a free expression of opinion without linking the matter up with any vote of confidence or something else as unimportant to the citizens of this country who elected a Government to carry out the wishes of the Canadian people.

"Frightfulness"

There is one curious example of German psychology which is well worthy of note, with one exception played for the first time during the month of May, and which, though it is but one more example of the "frightfulness" at which the world was to have trembled, marks a further step along the path to defeat that Germany is treading. It consists in the deliberate bombing of Allied hospitals, in full knowledge that they were hospitals, by two squadrons of bombing machines, with a flimsy pretext by a member of the crew of one of the machines, who probably feared for his own skin when he was caught, to the effect that if hospitals were placed near railway lines they would have to suffer accordingly. This bad business is to be accounted for by the Allied aerial superiority, which has enabled both French and British to set apart squadrons of bombers for the purpose of bombing German towns in the area devoted to the production of war material along the valleys of the Saar and the Rhine. The German imagined that by adding a new horror to the use of aircraft, by killing men already wounded and the Red Cross nurses who tended them, he could bring the Allies nearer to a decision to abandon the bombing of places beyond the battle line. Air-raiding has become unprofitable to the German, and consequently he wishes it stopped. This, by his reasoning, is one way of persuading the Allies to stop it, presently, and in that the German shows himself utterly savage at heart, in that he appeals, not to reason, but to fear, to accomplish his ends, and cares nothing about the crime he commits in the attempt to inspire fear. That hospital raid was one of the worst signs of weakness that the enemy has shown. It is a confession that his command of the air has so far passed from him that he will use any means in his power to prevent the Allies from making use of their superiority. It is the trick of a savage who, unable to maintain an open fight, tries to scare his enemy by striking from behind in the dark. It is, too, the worst example of "frightfulness" that has come to light since submarine piracy was made a general thing—but in all probability it is not the last. In the last stages of the war, when Germany as a whole realises the coming of defeat, there may be worse crimes of this committed in the German inability to understand the psychology of those whom Germany has made her enemies.—Review of Reviews.

Murderers' Hands and Ears.

How Criminals Can be Detected.
 There is an old adage which tells you to beware of square thumbs.
 If you examine the hands of criminals awaiting the death penalty you will see that 90 per cent. of them have ugly, spatulate finger tips and the pronounced broad, muscular thumbs, with nails that make you shudder. This type of thumb denotes extreme insensibility to the suffering of others.
 In the middle of this particular thumb has an extreme development of soft flesh, it points to an excessively sensual, pleasure-loving disposition. It has a large amount of muscle it points to a grasping, greedy, masterful disposition.
 Both types are characteristic of murderers. The former were found in the hands of the smirking, greasy Dr. Palmer of Rugeley notoriety, and the latter in Johann Schneider, the Hemstead Road murderer, and in dark, saturnine Kate Webster, the inhuman wretch who boiled the remains of her victim in a house in Richmond.
 Another peculiarity often met with in the hands of born homicides are club-shaped finger tips, i.e. finger tips that go in and then out like the top of a rounded club. Homicides with this kind of hand often end by committing suicide.
 The long pointed finger, which denotes refinement and artistic tendency, is rarely met with in the case of murderers, and practically only where there is insanity brought on by an accident or some sudden and severe mental blow.
 None the less indicative of crime are ears. In the Paris gallery of M. Bertillon, the great crime specialist, are a number of ears all with some abnormality peculiar to criminals. The small shapeless ear, set very far back and hewn down on the head, is a sure indication of extreme animalism. The very pointed ear indicates aplish trickery and astuteness. The very much becrinkled ear, the coarse, red, twisted, and contorted ear, the ear with the big, fleshy droopy lobes, the huge protruding ear that stands out in the most aggressive fashion—all these are the appendages of men and women who have a lust for blood—men and women tigers.

Belief in Missions

Men often say that they do not believe in the missionary undertaking. What is it in the undertaking that they do not believe in? Twenty-five thousand men and women have gone out, not for money's sake, not for honor or earthly gain, for they bury themselves out of sight. They have given up everything and have settled in the midst of uncultured, unappreciative millions of people. They have made friends with them. They have made their own lives a part of their life. The missionaries are there for nothing else than to be kind and Christlike to the peoples to whom they have gone. Is there anything in that ministry in which a man cannot believe?
 They have gathered over two million little boys and girls together in schools in those lands to prepare them for the manhood and the womanhood that is remaking the nations of the earth. Is there anything in that with which anyone can disagree?
 They treated in their hospitals this last year more people than the entire population of Greater New York, opening the eyes of the blind, enabling the lame to walk, enabling the deaf to hear, curing sickness and disease and banishing pain. Is there anything in that with which men will disagree?
 They lay down their lives for their brethren as they did in China during the Boxer uprising. Is there a greater love than that that men can have?
 The only life that ever can be wasted is life that is not laid down in ways like that. Life that is laid down, seed fashion in the soil—there is no waste to that. It springs up and bears abundant harvest in changing things, in changing the world, in the enterprises that lasts beyond death and the grave.
 Because we know, having seen it with our own eyes and shared in it with our own hands, what the enterprise of Christ is accomplishing throughout the world, we protest against the common tendency in men's thoughts that would now hold that enterprises in abeyance until some future day.
 There are great needs in Europe. The Red Cross work for our own troops and our allies is an imperative and unmistakable need to which we can and must respond to the full measure of its every need. There are hungry people to be fed in Belgium, Serbia and Poland, and there are thirty millions of human beings in India who never know what it is to have enough to eat, who say if only they could be fed adequately for two days they would be willing to lie down and die. There are millions of little children in Asia every night cry themselves to sleep in their hunger and want of bread. For the sake of the world's need, which only Christ's Gospel can supply, we make our appeal to-day more earnestly and imperatively than in any past day, that Christ's last command should not be postponed now for an interval of a few months or years. It is valid now.—Canadian Churchman.

Dear Sir, or Madam:
 I beg to approach you as one whom I am of the opinion appreciates the good things of life with regard to some new drinks I am about to place on the market.

The wines in question, a list of which you will find at the head of this letter, are manufactured by a Toronto concern who, since that Province went "dry," have made a special study of wines that were popular in the "good old days" and have endeavored to imitate these wines as closely as it is possible to do when same have to be made according to the Prohibition law.

The Wines which I am now offering are the result. Nothing like them has ever been on the market since Prohibition days, and they should in no way be confounded with brands of non-alcoholic wines which have previously been on the market and which in the main are syrupy and nauseating.

Especial care has been taken to imitate the original flavors as far as it is possible, in fact it is practically impossible to distinguish the two Liguers mentioned above from the real thing, while the other wines are very similar in flavor to their namesakes. A not unattractive feature is that the drinks are bottled in quart bottles, absolute counterparts of their real namesakes.

It is my desire to get a sample bottle of each of these wines into your home, for I am of the opinion that once you try them you will become a steady user of one or other of the kinds offered. I am therefore going to ask you to give me an order for One sample bottle each of "Royalo" Port Wine, London Dock Sherry, Creme de Menthe, Sloe Gin, Black Cherry Brandy and Ginger Wine Cordial at One dollar per quart bottle delivered (the same price as in Canada), that is Six Dollars in all.

(These sample orders will be filled through one of the St. John's dealers handling these goods, and delivery will be made as soon as the first shipment is received, probably some time in September.) Orders may be phoned to my office—telephone number 60.

Special prices to the trade upon application.

I am sure you will be pleased with this sample order and I hope to hear from you at your convenience.

The Halifax Conference.

Coming events cast their shadows before, and it is a safe move to anticipate their passage by watching the advancing shadow. The conference of men interested in the preservation and conservation of the Maritime Coast fisheries of Canada, which meets at Halifax, Nova Scotia, on August 6th next, is a coming event in which we in Newfoundland should be interested. And interested to the extent that a capable man be sent to represent this Dominion at this coming conference. Negotiations for such a representative need neither be involved nor lengthy. A request either from the Government or the Board of Trade would, we think, be instantly acquiesced in by the promoters of this meeting, and far from turning down such a proposal, they would gladly accept it, because the business men of the Maritime Provinces realize full well that the future of the fisheries of Newfoundland is of as much importance to Canada as it is to our own people. The interests are identical. Canadian fish of all kinds have ingress to the many markets to which our catches are shipped. Canadian bank fishermen saw Newfoundland waters during the mid-fishing season to obtain their supplies of bait. From Port aux Basques to Bay Bulls the harbors are at times filled with the vessels of the Lunenburg fleet, seeking herring, caplin and squid. The banking grounds which they frequent are also used by our Western bank fishermen. Therefore it does not need to be repeated that our future interests in codfishery are intertwined with those of Canada. It is fitting then that Newfoundland should have some one, qualified to attend the coming conference. Another fishing industry which is closely allied with a similar Canadian cod fishery is that of the lobster. For many years the catch in this country has been falling off, due to many causes but principally to depletion. True one or two spasmodic attempts have been made at propagation, but they lacked the necessary scientific co-operation, and the result is to-day that we are faced with an almost total extinction of this valuable fishery. The complaint has been made that too many licenses, in the past, were issued to small packers. By small packers is meant, the man who merely engages in the business as a side line to his codfishing, or other pursuits, and packs anywhere from five to ten cases during the season. Now it would be extremely harsh to make any invidious distinctions, for the small packer has an equal right with the large canner, and is as much entitled to a license to pack ten cases, as the big packer who puts up a hundred or more, but in small places where the waters are so scarce, the fish are restricted, it appears to be absurd to issue licenses promiscuously, or without the recommendation of the fishery wardens. Packers are unanimous on this point, and are of opinion that there should be some enquiry into local conditions, by the license issuing department, before applications are passed. This may be a remedy but it is of minor importance compared with the future of the lobster packing industry. Year after year sees a shrinkage in the number of cases put up, and fishermen say that if the fishery is ever to rise above what it is at present, there must be some new and effective legislation passed, otherwise within the next decade there will not be a lobster in our waters. The same fear appears to have communicated itself to the lobstermen of the Maritime Provinces, and the conference at Halifax next month has been called for the purpose of drawing up and submitting resolutions to the Government, approving of legislation, and outlining the course it should take, for the preservation of an industry which has been a most valuable asset to the trade of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island. Statistics are dry reading, and there is not a man interested in the lobster fishery, either directly or indirectly, who needs to be assisted in his opinions by the quotations of any. The facts are there for examination, and no one is more cognizant of these than the packer and trader who are fully alive to the situation. The presence of a representative at the Halifax Conference will materially assist the future of the industry under discussion, and it is now the duty of either the Government or the Board of Trade to make arrangements for someone to be sent from this Dominion to attend this all-important Conference.

St. Bon's Ex-Students.

REMEMBER THEIR HEROES. The St. Bon's re-union has become a kind of ritual for the ex-pupils of that venerable institution. The majority of the resident members has not missed one since the inception of that very pleasant form of celebrating memories of "auld lang syne." The autograph, as well as the photograph of all who foregather annually are taken after breakfast, and filed away in the archives of the College for the use of the historian of the Golden Jubilee. It will be interesting for future generations of students to see the signatures and photos of their fathers and grandfathers who were "old boys" in the days when the greatest war of the century raged in the earth. This year's re-union will be historical, as the names of all those who died at the front will occupy the place of honor on the programme, while all returned veterans, as well as those who volunteered within recent months, will be photographed as a permanent record for the College History. The energetic committee of management have completed arrangements so that to-morrow's gathering will be one of the most successful as well as enjoyable of the series.

The Outports and the Victory Loan.

The Victory Loan campaign inaugurated on the 17th of June, has proved a tremendous success thus far. Our people have not been slow to seize the opportunity afforded them in this issue to invest their money in such an attractive proposition as this War Loan undoubtedly is. It is a tribute alike to their patriotism and their hard common sense, and it is likewise a revelation of the determination of all classes of the community to unite in the one common object of bringing this War to a speedy and victorious conclusion for Great Britain and her Allies. A gratifying feature of the campaign is the response which the outports are making to the appeal for subscriptions. Realizing the great value of this investment the people throughout the whole Island who had money available, have taken advantage of this unusual and attractive Loan to safely deposit their savings therein. It is safe to assume that at least Three Million Dollars will be secured in all in the way of subscriptions. It is not improbable that a larger total will be realized, but placing the amount at Three Million Dollars, it will be seen that at the rate of 6 1/2 per cent. our people will be receiving annually $195,000 for the next ten years in the way of interest on their Victory Bonds, or a grand total of $1,950,000 for the full ten years. There are of course some people who have not yet subscribed to this War Loan. To them we would say: Buy your Bonds now. After the 27th July it will be too late, and you will be debarred from sharing in this magnificent investment, which may only come once in a lifetime. Join up to-day with the great army of Newfoundlanders who have a good thing when they see it, and buy Bonds to the full extent of your ability. Be a shareholder in Newfoundland. You will never regret it.

PRESS UNION CONFERENCE. LONDON, July 16 (via Reuter's Ottawa Agency).—All the Canadian newspaper representatives now in England were present and were cordially welcomed at the conference of the Empire Press Union at the Savoy Hotel this morning. There was a large attendance. Robert Donald, Editor of the Daily Chronicle and Chairman of the Union, presided, supported by the President, Lord Burnham. Mr. Donald, referring to the presence of the Canadian newspapermen, alluded to the war and declared that Canada's greatest effort could not have been accomplished but for the patriotism of her press.

GERMAN OFFENSIVE A FAILURE. AMERICAN HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, July 16 (via Reuter's Ottawa Agency).—Reports from the whole battlefield indicate that, except in a few minor localities, the German offensive up to this time has been a complete failure. Prisoners taken to-day are convinced they are beaten. A carrier pigeon was captured east of Chateau Thierry with a message saying that the situation was serious and that there was no chance of further progress in that locality. East of Rheims, early this morning, we were not only holding up the enemy attempts to advance, but we also appear to have broken his spirit. At one place here our counter attacks drove out the enemy from a salient. In the region of Fosseoy we improved our positions during the night and drove the enemy across the river, taking prisoners.

AT HEAVY COST. ON THE FRENCH FRONT IN FRANCE, To-Day (By the A. P.).—The Germans have crossed the Marne at various places, giving them control over twelve miles of the southern bank of the stream between Glend and Mareuil le Port. This operation cost them dearly, five brigades being destroyed as the troops were passing over, while hundreds of their men are believed to have met death from the machine guns and bombs of aviators.

NO PROGRESS BY ENEMY. WASHINGTON, To-day. The War Department to-night received information from the American military attaché at Paris of heavy losses suffered by the German assaulting forces to the West and East of Rheims, and the failure of the enemy to make substantial progress against the Allied resistance. During the past 24 hours. No late cable dispatches had been received from either General Pershing or General Bliss. The War Department issued this statement: At midnight the War Department suffered by the enemy's attack, dispatches from General Pershing or General Bliss but it was in communication with the military attaché at Paris. Information from the last source doesn't deal specifically with the day's point of attack and defense, but brings information of heavy losses suffered by the enemy's attacking forces and of his failure to make substantial progress against the Allies resistance during the past twenty-four hours.

Germany Will Win. Germany will eventually win this War if we slacken our efforts to put her out of business. Peace, if it came now, would be of little value to us. It would only mean a breathing space within which to make preparations for another and even greater struggle than that which is now shaking the world to its foundations. We daily read of German aims and aspirations almost with a tinge of incredulity at the audacity of the terms of peace which the Hunns would be prepared to make. Rest assured that they are entirely in earnest. It is only a taste of what we would have to endure if we were once placed at the mercy of these bloodthirsty brigands. They would demand their pound of flesh at any price. It is up to everyone individually to decide the terms of peace. You can do it by standing behind our soldiers and soldiers until they have driven the Hunns back across the Rhine. That is the only lesson which the enemy will be able to understand. In order to make this world a safe place in which to live Britain and her Allies will have to dictate the final Peace terms. A German peace would make life intolerable. Ask yourself the question: "What am I doing to ensure that this War will end in Victory for our arms?" If you cannot answer straightforwardly that you have subscribed to the Victory Loan, worked for the comfort of our sailors and soldiers, and intend continuing to back up our War effort in every possible manner, you will have to confess yourself a weak link in the chain. No chain is stronger than its weakest link. Your weakness will help to break the Allied line which stands between you and the enemy. If you have not considered the matter in this light before, it is not yet too late to do so. Get into the fight immediately. Buy your Victory Bonds you possibly can in order that our soldiers may be fed, equipped and placed on the firing line in your defence. In their defence lies your security. Ensure your safety. And do it now. Never put off till to-morrow the Bond you can buy to-day.

10.30 A. M. AT IT AGAIN. PARIS, To-day. The long range bombardment of Paris was resumed this morning.

GERMAN GUNS BUSY. LONDON, To-day. The German guns were busy during the night in the region south of Albert and show some activity at various other points on the northern part of the British front.

MUST BE EXAMINED CAREFULLY. LONDON, To-day. Andrew Bonar Law, Chancellor of the Exchequer, in announcing in the House of Commons last night, that a provisional agreement for the exchange of British and German prisoners had been received, said the terms would have to be examined carefully by the British Government before the ratification. For that reason he could not make a more detailed statement at present.

WAR REVIEW. By the A. P.—The German offensive east and west of Rheims has broken vigorously applied to it by the strong resistance of the American, French and Italian armies. Nowhere has the enemy found it possible in the initial stages of this battle, as in days gone by, to press forward, although in the same formidable array, and tear his way through opposing positions to points of vantage chosen as early objectives. True, some gains have been made by the enemy, but they are infinitesimal when compared with these of other attacks. Instead of in miles, they may be reckoned almost in yards, and from some of the positions taken the enemy has been ejected under force counter attacks by the American troops, fighting alone as a unit, and American fighting shoulder to shoulder with their French comrades in arms. Tacit admission that the enemy horde has been retarded in their assaults, if not halted, seemingly is contained in the latest German official statement, which in dealing with the fighting of Tuesday asserts that the Allied troops on the Marne front have delivered "violent counter attacks," and that to the east of Rheims "the situation is unchanged." The only claim made to any success by the Germans is that there were "some local successes to the S. W. of Rheims." The successes of the Americans and the French, give back to them, points of strategic value on the heights dominating the Marne Valley. The Americans, alone, recaptured Fosseoy and Cresandy, east of Chateau Thierry, and at one point near Fosseoy drove back the enemy across the river and took some prisoners. Aided by the French the recapture of Hill 223 and Le Chapelet-Monthodon south of Dormans was accomplished.

Germany Will Win. Germany will eventually win this War if we slacken our efforts to put her out of business. Peace, if it came now, would be of little value to us. It would only mean a breathing space within which to make preparations for another and even greater struggle than that which is now shaking the world to its foundations. some Forest, but apparently the enemy here also is meeting with ill success. Attacks attempted near Prunay and Sulpice came to naught under the French fire, while further east, near Fresnois and Tahure, efforts to break the French lines were realized with heavy losses. The German official statement dealing with the fighting on Monday says the Germans took 13,000 prisoners. The French on their part are reported to have taken thousands of captives, and it is known that the Americans have made prisoners of between 1,000 and 1,500 Germans. In addition the Americans, French and Italians have inflicted terrible losses on the enemy by the accuracy of their cannon, machine gun and rifle fire. Although the Allied troops seemingly have the situation well in hand, it is not improbable that the Germans soon will throw large numbers of reserves into the fray. They are known to have thousands of these behind the line, especially northwest of Rheims. On the other front only minor operations are in progress, but on many sectors held by the British in Northern France and Flanders, the Germans are carrying out spirited bombardments which may be forerunners of early infantry attacks.

AT HEAVY COST. ON THE FRENCH FRONT IN FRANCE, To-Day (By the A. P.).—The Germans have crossed the Marne at various places, giving them control over twelve miles of the southern bank of the stream between Glend and Mareuil le Port. This operation cost them dearly, five brigades being destroyed as the troops were passing over, while hundreds of their men are believed to have met death from the machine guns and bombs of aviators.

NO PROGRESS BY ENEMY. WASHINGTON, To-day. The War Department to-night received information from the American military attaché at Paris of heavy losses suffered by the German assaulting forces to the West and East of Rheims, and the failure of the enemy to make substantial progress against the Allied resistance. During the past 24 hours. No late cable dispatches had been received from either General Pershing or General Bliss. The War Department issued this statement: At midnight the War Department suffered by the enemy's attack, dispatches from General Pershing or General Bliss but it was in communication with the military attaché at Paris. Information from the last source doesn't deal specifically with the day's point of attack and defense, but brings information of heavy losses suffered by the enemy's attacking forces and of his failure to make substantial progress against the Allies resistance during the past twenty-four hours.

And do it now. Never put off till to-morrow the Bond you can buy to-day.

Germany Will Win. Germany will eventually win this War if we slacken our efforts to put her out of business. Peace, if it came now, would be of little value to us. It would only mean a breathing space within which to make preparations for another and even greater struggle than that which is now shaking the world to its foundations. We daily read of German aims and aspirations almost with a tinge of incredulity at the audacity of the terms of peace which the Hunns would be prepared to make. Rest assured that they are entirely in earnest. It is only a taste of what we would have to endure if we were once placed at the mercy of these bloodthirsty brigands. They would demand their pound of flesh at any price. It is up to everyone individually to decide the terms of peace. You can do it by standing behind our soldiers and soldiers until they have driven the Hunns back across the Rhine. That is the only lesson which the enemy will be able to understand. In order to make this world a safe place in which to live Britain and her Allies will have to dictate the final Peace terms. A German peace would make life intolerable. Ask yourself the question: "What am I doing to ensure that this War will end in Victory for our arms?" If you cannot answer straightforwardly that you have subscribed to the Victory Loan, worked for the comfort of our sailors and soldiers, and intend continuing to back up our War effort in every possible manner, you will have to confess yourself a weak link in the chain. No chain is stronger than its weakest link. Your weakness will help to break the Allied line which stands between you and the enemy. If you have not considered the matter in this light before, it is not yet too late to do so. Get into the fight immediately. Buy your Victory Bonds you possibly can in order that our soldiers may be fed, equipped and placed on the firing line in your defence. In their defence lies your security. Ensure your safety. And do it now. Never put off till to-morrow the Bond you can buy to-day.

CABLE NEWS.

THE OFFENSIVE—LITTLE CHANGE IN THE SITUATION.

LONDON, July 16. Advice received in London up to noon today said that little change in the situation has been created by the German offensive. The attacks which continued throughout yesterday were conducted by the forces of General von Buelow and General von Boehm, who were directing the operations of the two armies on the left wing of the German Crown Prince's group.

GERMAN LOSSES.

LONDON, July 16. Great numbers of German corpses are hanging on the tangle of barbed wire in front of the French positions and all the reports state that the losses of the Germans must have been exceedingly heavy. The main attack to the east of Rheims continued up to seven o'clock last night. The fighting was extremely severe in the vicinity of Sonon and at Prunay where the Germans captured a wood south of the village. This, however, was an exception, the German attack elsewhere being repulsed with heavy losses. The French line of resistance remains practically everywhere intact.

FAILED AT THE STRAT.

PARIS, July 16. That the Germans failed at the strat is the common view of all French military circles, and even the most cautious are unable to conceal their satisfaction over the results of Monday's fighting. It would be silly, says Colonel De Thomassin, to prophesy after one day's fighting, but one can certainly say that the beginning was altogether encouraging for us. Nowhere have the Germans made any particular advance. East of Rheims they lost heavily and made practically no progress. West of Dormans they crossed the Marne, but we held the bridgehead and mean to defend it from the left bank. They, however, soon lost the few miles gained south of the river. There, besides our men, were American regiments who bore themselves so that German newspaper can hardly continue the usual twaddle about their new adversary. Writing in the same tone, Henry Bidou, of the Journal Des Debates, says, whatever local advantages the Germans may have gained, one already has the feeling that the first shock, so redoubtable in an affair of this sort, and in which lies the best chance, for the assailant, has been parried and one has the right to look ahead with confidence.

ATTACKS REPULSED.

LONDON, July 16. The Germans this morning continued their attacks against the French line in pursuance of their offensive, according to information that has reached here. The information received indicates that the offensive remains held up, attacks up to this morning having been nearly everywhere repulsed with heavy losses.

GERMAN RESERVES.

PARIS, July 16. The Germans will continue their offensive as they have concentrated strong reserves in the region of Rehel, northeast of Rheims, says Marcel Hutin, in the Echo de Paris. The reserves, he adds, undoubtedly will be put into the fighting line, probably extending the front of attack toward the Argonne.

HOLDING THE GERMANS.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE MARNE, July 16. (By the Associated Press.)—Word received this morning from the battlefield to the east of Rheims, show that the Allied defence is not only still holding the Germans, but appears to have broken the enemy's spirit.

RECAPTURE TOWNS.

LONDON, July 16. American troops have recaptured the towns of Possey and Cresancy, on the south bank, which were taken yesterday by the Germans when they crossed the Marne.

ENEMY ATTACK IN CONSIDERABLE STRENGTH.

LONDON, July 16. West of Rheims the enemy attacked in very considerable strength at two places by way of the Marne railway, and in the country south of Dormans. In this neighborhood they succeeded in throwing six bridges across the Marne between Neully and Dormans, but at no other point on this 25 mile front has the enemy penetrated more than four miles into the French positions.

BATTLE CONTINUES VIOLENT.

PARIS, July 16. (Official.) The battle continues violently especially south of the Marne and in the region of Châtillon. Except for one sector south of the Marne there is no change in the situation. American and French troops are counter attacking magnificently and are taking many prisoners, according to the statement issued by the war office to-day. South of the Marne the Germans have not been able to advance their line beyond Stagnon, La Chappelle, Monthidon, Liesieres and south of the forest of Bouguigny. The French in this region have taken a thousand prisoners on the front east of Rheims. In spite of terrific fighting during the past day and night the enemy has not been able to penetrate the French zone of defence. The German loss in prisoners during the first day of the battle was extremely heavy. The text of the statement reads: The battle continues with redoubled violence. Between Chateau Thierry and Rheims the enemy is launching furious attacks. The combats are particularly violent south of the Marne and in the region of Châtillon. French and American troops are resisting magnificently and with utmost vigour.

THE PLANS FAILED. LONDON, July 16. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—A despatch from a Reuter correspondent at the French Headquarters states that the Germans had planned for the first day of their offensive an advance of twelve miles along the whole front, crossing the Marne the enemy losses were appalling. They finally threw half a dozen pontoon bridges, two of which were 35 feet in width, and flung numerous troops across. The French aimed rained bombs on the concentration points, and the troops crossed the bridges, two of which were destroyed altogether. The gains of the enemy were far less than on the 21st of March or the 27th of May. It is not at all clear that this is the main attack. It may be a diversion intended to draw the Allied Reserves from Flanders to prepare the way for a German attack in that region. The plan set on Paris must be the enemy's final aim, consequently he will probably throw his whole strength in the attack between Chateau Thierry and Rheims with a view to enlarging his base between the Aisne and the Marne for his advance on Paris.

THIRTY DIVISIONS IDENTIFIED.

LONDON, July 16. From a captured map it is intended the German main attack was intended to be down the Marne valley into Eperay. There is every indication the enemy intended the attack should be a really big one. Thirty divisions so far have been identified. Some of them come from the army of Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, for it is believed there is little likelihood of the Germans launching another attack while this is on. The French military authorities are quite satisfied, and they say they have the situation well in hand.

OFFENSIVE EQUAL TO MARCH 21.

PARIS, July 16. The German offensive has taken on great scale equal to that launched on March 21, says a despatch filed from the Marne battlefield to-day at noon by the correspondent of the Temps. Fighting continued this morning, the despatch says in a great storm of thunder and lightning. The weather was clearing at noon. An impression of confidence throughout the armies is indicated by the latest despatch from various parts of the battle front.

PENETRATED TWO MILES.

LONDON, To-day. The French this afternoon were entrenched at Purney, behind the river Vosie, two miles back of the original line, the Evening Standard states. This is said to be the deepest penetration the enemy has effected in the region east of Rheims.

ON THE BRITISH FRONT.

LONDON, July 16. The text of the official statement reads. Yesterday New Zealand troops carried out a successful raid in the neighbourhood of Hobutsen, capturing over 30 prisoners and several machine guns. During the night a further slight improvement was effected in our lines in the Villers Bretonneux sector, after sharp fighting. A few prisoners were taken by us in the

COMPLETE FAILURE SO FAR.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE MARNE, July 16. (By the Associated Press.)—Reports from one end of the battle line to the other say that except for a few minor localities the German offensive so far has been a complete failure.

HIGHLY SATISFACTORY.

LONDON, July 16. A despatch from the French army headquarters Monday night, says the news from the battle front is highly satisfactory. The fighting was hard, the correspondent says, but preparations had been made weeks beforehand and this prevented the Germans making any serious progress on any point of the front. The attack along the whole front east of Rheims was shattered in the French advance zone.

FRESH DIVISIONS CALLED UP.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN FRANCE, July 16. (By the Associated Press.)—The Allied resistance to the Germans in the present offensive has been so great and the German losses are consequently so heavy, that enemy divisions which the German staff had not intended to utilize until to-morrow, had to be thrown in to the line by noon yesterday.

SLIGHT PROGRESS EAST OF RHEIMS.

LONDON, July 16. A statement issued this evening by the Central news says—The only progress the Germans have been able to make since yesterday has been to the east of Rheims in the Prunay sector, where in spite of terrible losses the enemy has compelled the French to retire to the southward behind the river Vesle.

JAPANESE BATTLESHIP BLOWN UP.

TOKIO, July 16. The Japanese battleship Kawachof, 21,320 tons, blew up and sank in Takoyama Bay, 150 miles northeast of Nagasaki on July 12. Five hundred members of the crew lost their lives.

CONVICTED OF MURDER.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 16. An order committing Thomas J. Mooney to San Quentin penitentiary to await execution there on Friday, August 23, was given the Sheriff here today by the Superior Court Judge Griffin, before whom Mooney was convicted of murder in connection with a preparedness day bomb explosion here. Mooney was granted until to-morrow to arrange his affairs.

TAKING OVER TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES.

WASHINGTON, July 16. Preparations for taking over the Trunk Line telegraph and telephone systems already have been made by the post office department and the understanding is that President Wilson will entrust the government control to Postmaster Burleson. Officials there think that action will be ordered very early.

ITALIAN OFFICIAL.

ROME, July 16. There was lively fighting activity yesterday in the northern region of the Grappa says to-day's Italia. Attachments gained ground and captured 94 Austro-Hungarians, took 7 machine guns. Astride the Brenta valley two Austro-Hungarian posts were driven back and a few prisoners were taken. Artillery activity was continuous throughout the day and night. 12 hostile machines were brought down.

GERMAN GUNS BUST.

LONDON, July 16. (Official.) The German guns were busy during the night in the region south of Albert and Soaux. There was some activity at various other points on the northern part of the British front.

GERMAN AVIATORS DROP BOMBS.

PARIS, July 16. German aviators at 11 o'clock last night dropped bombs on the American Red Cross hospital at Jouy. Two enlisted men here were killed, and among the personnel nine nurses were wounded. Miss Jane Jeffery, an American Red Cross nurse, was among those wounded, though her injuries are not serious.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

JAPANESE CABINET MEET.

TOKIO, July 16. A special meeting of the Japanese Cabinet, which was attended by army officers, was held to-day, and the newspapers attach much importance to it. It is believed that some communication was received from the American Government concerning intervention in Russia.

LINES ADVANCED.

PARIS, July 16. The war office announces the recapture of St. Agan La Chapelle-Montseron to-day and the advance of the Franco-American line to the heights dominating the Marne valley at various places. Desperate fighting is reported in several sectors of the new battle front, particularly south of the Marne, where ground was given only foot by foot, when the Allied line had to bend back. The statement follows: To-day the Germans who have not been able to resume their general attack broken by us yesterday, made vain efforts to increase their local successes. Both in the morning and afternoon the battle was desperate. South of the Marne the enemy forces tried to ascend the river. Our troops retarded the advance of the enemy and defending their positions on the line of Otalley-Lehurveign. On our part we counter attacked the enemy on the front of Stagnon-La Chapelle Monthidon. Our troops captured these two places and carried their line on to the heights which dominate the Marne valley in the region of Bourdonnerie and Clostimon. Between the Marne and Rheims the Franco-Italian troops repulsed several enemy attempts. To conserve their positions east of Rheims, the Germans this morning began violent artillery preparations, followed by attacks at many points on the front. A powerful effort in the direction of Beaumont-Sur-Vesle failed to debouch from Prunay. In the sector of Sulpepe two attacks made to the west of the river came to naught under our fire. The struggle was not less spirited in the regions north of Crozes and east of Tanhre, where the enemy also attacked. Everywhere his efforts were vain and his assaulting troops were repulsed with heavy losses.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE MARNE, July 16. (By the Associated Press.)—French and American forces fighting together have recaptured the village of St. Agan and Hill 225, to the northwest of La Chapelle-Monthidon. In co-operation with the French the Americans launched a heavy counter attack this morning between these villages, driving the enemy back. On the American right the French made rapid progress and all through the section the Germans were fiercely attacked by the Allies, with the result that they have withdrawn for some distance. Comparatively large forces of Americans have been engaged, especially in the region of Descriev, where they were brought up to support the attacking French.

To-Night's Players.

Do You Want to Go to Germany.

If you are in a position to buy Victory Bonds and do not intend to do so, go to Germany. You will be welcomed in Germany with open arms if they are assured you are a Slacker in the Victory Bond Battalion. They know it would be an easy matter to win the war if our people were not behind our soldiers and sailors. They realize that if you shirk your duty in the present crisis you are a friend and ally of the Central Powers. The trouble with a lot of people is that they always put it up to the other fellow. Every house in their town or street may burn down, but theirs will escape. Accidents may happen others, but they are immune. Why, there are some people who think they are never going to die. That is the kind of spirit which helps the enemy. If you do nothing and let the other fellow shoulder all, you are simply befriending your foes. And then, suppose everyone else took the same attitude as you. What would be done? Nothing. And that would be the surest method of losing the War. Awake to the reality of the situation which is even now staring you in the face. Realize that this War is YOUR War, and that a great deal depends upon the attitude which you adopt, and the share you take in the conflict. If you cannot fight, make your dollars fight. Invest in the Victory Loan and do your duty for your country, yourself and our brave defenders.

French Red Cross.

The large number of people that attended the Red Cross Band Concert which was held in Bannerman Park last evening was delighted with the splendid music rendered by the C. L. B. and C. C. C. bands. Among the many popular airs played were "La Marseilles," "The Star Spangled Banner," "The Banks of Newfoundland," "Rule Britannia" and the National Anthem. It is calculated that some thousands of citizens attended and a goodly amount for the fund was realized. A popular feature of the evening was the serving of refreshments, cigarettes, etc. which were sold by the ladies, and their sales greatly augmented the proceeds of the evening.

The Twice-Told Tale.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

Is there anything you hate more than to tell a story, and when you have finished telling it, to realize that you have told it to your auditor before. To my mind, it is really unkind to let anyone go on telling a story when you recognize it.

Of course it is more or less uncomfortable for the raconteur to be interrupted just as he is about to launch forth, but not half so uncomfortable as to realize afterwards that he has been boring you.

How One Knows One Has Told It Before.

To be sure, there is the chance that he will not recognize this fact, but it seems to me that any one endowed with any acumen at all will know the minute he reaches his climax. How? By the strained look on his auditor's face, the unnatural appearance of the smile muscles, by the quality of his laughter and the slightly sat tones which creep into our voices whenever we think for an unwelcome gift, or comment on a twice told story, or in any other way try to express emotions we do not feel. Anyone who can appear just the same the second time he tells a funny story as he did the first should not be wasting his talents in private life; he should be on the stage. It seems to me that if I were a stage manager, I'd make that one of the tests for aspirants.

Tell Him Quickly If At All.

There are certain occasions when one has to be cruel in order to be kind. The surgeon who amputates a limb to prevent mortification is cruel to be kind. Also the person who amputates a story to save the teller mortification. But that sort of surgery must be prompt. Don't let the raconteur get halfway through, before you screw up your courage to the sticking point. In that case, you neither give him the pleasure of telling the story nor save him the discomfort of knowing he has bored you.

Various Methods of Breaking The News.

And of course there are various methods of breaking the news. One may say dully, "Oh yes, I remember, you told me that before," thus making the would-be raconteur feel like a bubble that has been effectively pricked. Or one may (if one can) laugh a bit and say, "Oh yes, I remember, you mean that terribly funny man you told me about, once?" (or something to that effect), thus letting him down gently and leaving him with the feeling that you remember because he told the story so well in the first place.

You will notice that all along I have referred chiefly to the amusing story. This was ungenerously done, but, as I think it over, one does seem to feel the worst when one catches oneself at retelling a humorous tale. I wonder why?

REPAIRING SUMMER RAVAGES.

When you come home from the summer outing look out for your complexion and as quickly as possible repair the ravages of the sun and wind. Cold water should never be used on a sunburned complexion. Wash the face in warm water instead. Then sponge with a simple mixture of rain water, one of simple tincture of benzoin and two of lavender water. Cucumber milk is cooling for the sunburned face. Take an ounce of fresh cucumber juice and three ounces of fresh milk. Scald, skim, and use. Massage this well into the face after washing. Then wipe the face with a soft towel.

The woman who freckles easily should protect her skin by rubbing in a little non-greasy cream once or twice a day and giving it a light dusting of powder after the cream has been rubbed into the pores. Buttermilk is invaluable for washing a freckled face, and its regular use will entirely remove freckles and prevent them from reappearing. It is always a mistake to put off the removal of freckles until the end of summer, as the longer they are allowed to remain the more trouble they give when the task of removing them is undertaken.

It is best to start removing them as soon as they are noticed and then to take precaution to prevent them from forming again. The following lotion is excellent for removing light freckles: Four ounces lemon juice, two ounces glycerine, one ounce rose water. Apply to the face several times daily and allow it to dry on the skin.

THE WORRIED SOLDIER.

He was dreaming through the drill; he was half a step behind; he was marching like a soldier who had something on his mind; and the colonel, who was watching as his boys were on review, couldn't understand the trouble; but the sergeant-major knew.

Once he broke the line by missing the command to make a wheel and they thimbered curses at him till his brain began to reel; his captain called him lazy; his lieutenant scolded him, too. And they wondered why he flattered; but the sergeant-major knew.

When at last the drill was over and the line had been dismissed, they put the blundering soldier on their extra-duty list; but the sergeant-major saved him when the colonel heard him say: "He hasn't had a letter from his folks in many a day."

Would you help him in his battle, would you keep his mind in trim? Then send some cheerful message every day or two to him! Every soldier understands it, when they're passing out the mail; the boy who is forgotten is the boy who's sure to fail.

Household Notes.

Raspberries—red ones—when picked fresh, are much more delicious if eaten without sugar.

A given measure of buckwheat flour thickens more than the same measure of wheat flour.

Leftover mashed potatoes may be used as a case for eggs, creamed meat, fish or vegetables.

It is easier and just as effective to run cheese through the food chopper rather than to grate it.

Equal parts of turpentine, kerosene and vinegar, well mixed, makes an excellent furniture polish.

A good "foam" can be made of potatoes and lima beans, the foam to be served with tomato sauce.

To make good mashed potatoes out of old potatoes let them soak in water for an hour before cooking.

Cucumbers for sandwiches should be mixed with a French dressing seasoned with onion juice and parsley.

If candy is permitted at the end of a meal there is little danger of the child's eating more than the body demands.

Tomato plants can be set in between onions. As the onions are pulled for present use room will be made for the tomatoes.

If a cork has been pushed into a bottle loop a piece of string and punch it into the bottle. Roll the cork with the loop and jerk it out quickly.

For coffee and tea make a syrup of your sugar by adding a third as much sugar as sugar and bolt. This is an approved method of economy.

One half-pint of turpentine mixed with one half pound of beeswax makes a good floor wax. The wax is melted, then mixed with the oil and one-half pint of drier.

Really good rubbers for canning will undergo the following test without a crease: Fold rubber, press tightly, then turn it over and fold it in the same place.

Odd bits of cream can be put into a jar and kept in the refrigerator; when you have collected a quart, churn it and you will have one pound of delicious fresh butter.

To bake beans properly they should be kept covered with water until the last hour of baking. Then bring the pork to the top of cups and bake to evaporate the water from the beans.

THE WORRIED SOLDIER.

EXERCISE.

This little stunt each day is fine: I walk three versts, in rain or shine. When my breakfast's safely stowed away, I gird my well known lions and sa y, "Farewell, fond wife and loving aunt! The time has come to gallivant. The sawbones t e l l s me I must walk for six minutes by the clock; so I must leave my dear abode, and push myself along the road, the dell-farewell, old girls, a long farewell!" Oh, then I sweat along the sea, and motor cars come up by me; their drivers say, "Get in and ride! You're wearing out the countryside; I want built for such a weight—get in and ride, you old fat skate!" I take the walking mood; I guess I will not ride to-day," and groan along my stony way. I walk three versts and then return to where the household beacons burn, and sit me down beneath the trees; I've sprained my ankles and my knees, and I have aching around my back, and shooting pains around my neck, my lungs and windpipe are a wreck. The doctor says that exercise is just the stuff for hefty guys; if I don't take my daily walk, I'll soon be planted, says the doc, scarce stiff by all his friends, harangues, I still saw off the parasaags.

The Wine of the Hun

Geneva, July 12.—Another campaign has been undertaken along the Rhine in order to prevent Allied aerial bombardment of Rhine towns.

The Landtag of the Duchy of Baden has been asked to pass a resolution requesting the Government of the Grand Duchy to exercise its influence with the Imperial authorities to come to an arrangement with the belligerents to abandon of towns outside the zone of military operations. In a speech in the Landtag in favor of the proposition, Deputy Narun declared that aerial attacks on localities behind the front serve no military purpose, and that only innocent women and children suffer.

In commenting upon this campaign the Lausanne Gazette declares that the Germans, since the beginning of the war, have bombarded London and Paris with Zeppelins and airplanes for various reasons were unable to reply, but did not whine. Now the Germans, it adds, after only a few months of aerial attacks on their open towns, are crying "Kamerad."

A Shocking Crime.

The sinking of the Llandovery Castle, an 11,000 ton hospital ship under charter to the Canadian Government, is another of those sickening crimes which have made Germany an outlaw among nations. The British Admiralty's report on this latest outrage shows that of the 268 souls on board, including eighty men of the Canadian Army Medical Corps, and 14 nurses, only 24 are known to have been saved. There is strong evidence that the submarine crew shelled the boats as they were trying to get away, and led to believe that the U-boat's commander was disappointed in not finding among the passengers a large number of wounded soldiers.

The sinking of the Llandovery Castle under such conditions is not surprising, for this is by no means the first hospital ship to be sent to the bottom by German commanders. It will surprise no one who has followed closely Germany's nefarious warfare. Again and again hospital ships while on their errands of mercy have been attacked and sunk by the enemy; and always the Hun is ready with some excuse. This time the sinking was due, the Germans say, to the fact that American flying men were on board. That will deceive no one, for it was an easy thing to find out for sure before making the attack. It is all part of Germany's policy of hatred and savagery. It has placed and is keeping her outside the pale. The world has known nothing like it, and the Allies are determined that, after this war, it shall never see anything like it again. It is proof that the German does not understand the meaning of civilization. His orders are taken from bloodthirsty monsters, who care not at all for the principles of civilization. The task before the Allies to-day is to teach them to care—lesson which must be taught with the sword.

There is in nothing Germany has done the slightest sign of contrition for her crimes. This fact is an insurmountable obstacle to serious peace talk while the enemy remains unbeaten on the battlefield. Germany's whole military and naval procedure since 1914 has been notorious and cruel. She does not know what chivalry means; premature peace with a nation holding such views would be intolerable and wicked, and the sinking of still another hospital ship should stimulate every man and woman in the countries of the Entente to greater effort in behalf of world liberty and civilization.—St. John Telegraph.

Germany Must Be Defeated.

The President has assured the world on several occasions that the United States will not sheathe the sword until Russia as well as Belgium, France and Serbia, are freed from the tread of the German hordes. We must do more than merely drive the invader from these countries, Germany's Junker press organs have shown a willingness to concede the Allied demands in the west, providing there is no interference in the east. The loss of all in the west, including Alsace-Lorraine, would be nothing could they keep their east conquests. Japan can help now in Siberia or on the Western front; if she will. It remains for us to defeat Germany not only by driving her armies from France, but crossing the Rhine and invading the land of the Kaiser. Our future demands it, for a Germany including Russia would be intolerable to all democratic peoples.

A Shocking Crime.

The sinking of the Llandovery Castle, an 11,000 ton hospital ship under charter to the Canadian Government, is another of those sickening crimes which have made Germany an outlaw among nations. The British Admiralty's report on this latest outrage shows that of the 258 souls on board, including eighty men of the Canadian Army Medical Corps, and 14 nurses, only 24 are known to have been saved. There is strong evidence that the submarine crew shelled the boat as they were trying to get away, and one is led to believe that the U-boat's commander was disappointed in not finding among the passengers a large number of wounded soldiers.

The Beast Must Be Destroyed.

(From the New York Herald.) Despatches from Washington blandly inform us that the crime of the Llandovery Castle has raised in the composite mind of officialdom a doubt concerning the advisability of trusting the safety of American hospital ships to the assurance of the German Government, and there is talk of asking Germany "point blank" whether our hospital ships, like the happily delayed Comfort, are to be allowed to proceed on their mission of mercy in safety. What possible value can there be to German assurances even if one is given? Germany promised to respect the hospital ships of Great Britain—and the Llandovery Castle is not the first that has been sent to the bottom of the sea because of foolish reliance upon the German promise. This war will be won only when it is fully realized that Germany is a Beast and she is dealt with accordingly—on sea as on land. No hospital ship can be safe from German frightfulness. Every hospital ship sent to sea should go under convoy.

The Bilious Habit

Some people have bilious spells about every so often until they get to be a habit. The liver is at fault. Get the liver right by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and the bile will not collect in the blood until it poisons you. There is no one organ in the human body which has so great a control of health as the liver. Hence the far-reaching effect of this treatment.

Curious Effect of Names

Mistaken Order That Brought Victory. A large steamer was once wrecked because one of the sailors was named West. The vessel was outward bound from Rotterdam, and the sailor was on deck polishing some brasswork. Suddenly the captain called him, and told him to go below. The second officer on the bridge heard the captain call out the man's name, and thought it was an order to change the course of the vessel to west. He did so, and the result was that the vessel ran on to a dangerous shoal. That same cost the owners of the vessel the sum of £100,000. During the Afghan War of 1879 a small British detachment gained a victory over a large body of the enemy by a mistaken order. A private named Vance, who had distinguished himself by several acts of bravery, was a great favourite with one of the officers, and during a skirmish the officer wanted him to carry a despatch to the Colonel in command of another detachment. The man was only a few yards away, and he called out, "Vance!" at the top of his voice. The men thought he had given the order, "Advance!" and immediately rushed forward with such dash and spirit that the enemy broke and fled.

The Fate of Turkey.

(From the Edmonton Bulletin.) A Turkish newspaper has been enumerating the territorial gains Turkey intends to make as a result of the war. Briefly, the programme includes the extension of Turkish dominion over southeastern Europe, Asia Minor, Egypt and Persia. It is not quite clear whether this outline of the Moslem ambitions is intended as a bill of demands upon the Kaiser, or as a suggestion to the Allies of the price for which the Turk would change sides. It amounts to the same thing in either case, nothing. The Turk does well to get what satisfaction he can out of dreams of future greatness, for that is all he will get out of them. When the Allies win he is due his wages at the most pitiless and persistent murderer in history. If Germany should win he certainly won't get what he is promised. In either event he is approaching the jumping-off place.

How Sounds Travel.

In one of his journals Camille Flammarion gives the heights at which sounds from the earth are heard from balloons. The shout of a man was heard distinctly at the height of 1,600 ft., the sharp note of a mole-croak at 2,500 ft., and the croaking of frogs in a morass at 3,000 ft. At 2,355 ft. a man's voice and the rolling of a cart were distinguished; at 4,550 ft. the roll of a drum, and the music of an orchestra; at 5,000 ft. the crowing of a cock, the sound of a church bell, and sometimes the shouting of men and women. Nine hundred feet higher he heard the report of a musket and the barking of a dog. The noise of a railway train passed at a height of 3,300 ft., and the whistle of a locomotive engine to nearly 10,000 ft.

Feeding the Armies.

HOW OUR SOLDIERS' RATIONS REACH THEM FROM "RE-FILLING POINTS."

"Well, take groceries next. Look lively now. Hill You! Pull that bully beet up another yard. And what's that hay doing coming round this way?" This is Brigade refilling point, otherwise the "dump," and the voice is the voice of the convoy sergeant, bringing up his wagons to off-load. It is to refilling point that the A.S.C. wagons or lorries carry the supplies which are drawn from railroad each morning, and with which Tommy will be fed next day.

Refilling point may be anywhere from 5,000 to 3,000 yards behind the front line, and in recent times of stress the distance has often been considerably less. The site may be the roadside, a farmyard, or a muddy field; the fittings may consist merely of a wagon cover spread on the ground, on which the more perishable articles, such as bread and meat, are piled. If the divisional train be a smart one, the supply officer will have a portable outfit of shelters and "bivvies," big enough to cover everything.

Incidentally the food and forage of 5,000 men and 1,000 horses covers a fair amount of floor-space. The varieties, commodities, moreover, have to be arranged with method, so that each battalion wagon, having picked up its meat and solids, can draw along and take on board groceries, bread, and so forth, without impeding for an instant the even flow of trade.

Having delivered the goods in bulk, as received from the daily pack-train the wagons draw off and park, to wait while the issuers get to work.

One issuer is responsible for cheese, butter, bacon; another for tea, sugar, and salt; and so on throughout the ample menu.

The sergeant-butcher, surveying his stack of frozen quarters, or carcasses of "fresh," and boxes of tinned "M. and V.," and "bully," consults his figures.

The 19th Mudshires come first: ration-strength for this day, 1,923 men. The pack-train has yielded only 55 per cent. of fresh meat, and the balance is to be made up of part "meat and vegetable" ration, and part bully-beef. Each, he it noted, has a different value of exchange. It is a sum, therefore, requiring paper and pencil and a quiet corner, one would think. But the sergeant-butcher does it all in the back of his head, to an accompaniment of banging guns, and occasionally to bursting shells.

His supply officer has given him the official average weight of his quarters of sheep. No scales are allowed in the field; in fact, the use of them is severely banned. Percentages and reputed weights, as "way-billed" from the base, are placed on a black-board for all to see. They have to be accepted unquestioned by the troops, as by the A.S.C.

So far, therefore, the sum is simplified. The proportion of preserved meat due to the Mudshires will consist of so many full cases and the odd tins; the fresh meat, of certain whole quarters, and, in this case, a balance of 67 pounds.

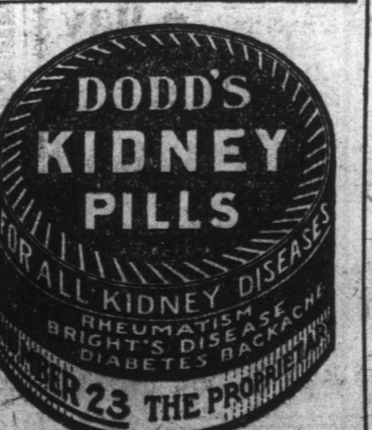

The butcher takes his axe. He throws a frozen quarter on his log of duckboards. He marks off the exact position he requires with his eye. The axe whistles and thuds. The frozen chips fly like wood. And if the joint he dissects is not the exact weight within a pound or two, he is a duffer at his trade.

It is the same with the sugar, tea, and such like. A practised issuer will take an 80 lb. sack of sugar, or a 100 lb. chest of tea, and tip out six, eight or 68 lbs.—any quantity you are entitled to—measuring entirely by feel and the eye.

The various issues having been cut up and apportioned ready, the supply officer in charge of the "dump" orders up the wagons of the units in turn. The stuff is quickly put aboard; mail-bags and parcels are slung on top of the load, then off the wagons go to their quartermasters "billets"; still another stage deeper into the danger zone.

Summer School.

The 200 teachers at the Summer School are delighted with Professor Judd and Miss Bristol, and listen with much interest to their lectures. Prof. Judd gave the first of his series of lectures on Thursday, after he had been introduced to the assembled teachers by Dr. V. P. Burke, and began by defining the real meaning of education and the nationalization-schools. Are not teachers often working along given lines without any end-point, he asked, without any definite objective. Do not many teachers fail to realize where they are going, and only know that they are on the way?

On Friday the Professor spoke on the problem of Rural Education, and as this is the branch of most vital interest to this country, he was listened to with such rapid attention as would be gratifying to any speaker. Prof. Judd pointed out that a child must learn gradually, and by experience, bit by bit. He clearly explained that a child cannot be thrown aside, but that he must be taken as he is, and that in him must be developed the best that God has given him.

On Monday the Professor spoke on "The Function of Knowledge" and its promotion by productional, distributional and consumptional activities. Yesterday he lectured on "Distributional Activities."

Miss Bristol, Dr. Campbell, Prof. Hutton, Miss Kelly and Mr. Murelock regularly deliver interesting and instructive lectures, whilst Misses Worral and Curtis are deeply interested in physical culture.

Accounted for One Hundred.

We are ever pleased to accord our tribute to the gallant men of Ours who so nobly have maintained the traditions of the British Army and done credit to Newfoundland. Herewith another epic is written in the records. Mrs. Lilla Pafford, Blackmarsh Road, Dear Madam:—

The following extract from Honours and Awards is quoted in connection with the deed for which No. 1604, Lt.-Col. C. Pafford won the Military Medal.

"On reaching the objective, he went forward and directed his Lewis gun fire on snipers who were inflicting casualties on our men as they consolidated. When the enemy moved down the valley of the Broembek he directed the fire of his Lewis gun so accurately that he must have accounted for at least 100 of the enemy. When the enemy counter attacked, he not only directed his Lewis gun fire, but used his own rifle with good effect." 9/10/17. I wish to congratulate you on the conduct of your son, which reflects credit, not only on himself, but on his Regiment.

Yours faithfully, W. F. RENDELL, Lieut.-Col. C.S.O.

On Thin Ice.

Holland again is skating on thin ice, if the despatches be true. These state that she has agreed to furnish Germany with 50,000 tons of potatoes in direct violation of her agreement with Great Britain, and of the understanding with the United States under which the latter has shipped her large quantities of grain. Germany's supply of potatoes was fast dwindling when Holland came to her rescue. By her treaty with England, Holland bound herself to supply that country and Germany with 50,000 tons of potatoes yearly. Under that agreement the United States promised Holland large quantities of grain, and since much of it already has been shipped, Holland's willingness to give Germany this great amount of food in view of recent famine in Holland itself, may lead to retaliation by the United States and a shutting off of all food supplies from that country. German pressure, or Dutch cupidity, it matters not, is fast drawing Holland into a net from which it will be difficult for her to withdraw without finding herself in the German paw or in the hands of the Allies. Also there is a "misunderstanding" between the Dutch and Allied Governments concerning the kind of goods transported by the Germans to Belgium over the Limbourg railway, ascribed to "conflicting interpretations" of the recent agreement between the Allied Governments and Holland, which never intended to recognize the transit by the Germans of such things as timber, barbed wire, hay and straw, which are likely to be used for military purposes.—Halifax Chronicle.

The War and Newspapers.

Throughout England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales the newspapers, according to late intelligence, are considering still further increases in the selling price, with further restrictions in size of the sheets, and increased advertising rates. A somewhat similar movement has been started in the United States and some parts of Canada. When the staffs of local newspapers appeared before the Peterborough (England) tribunal, the military representative said, acting on instructions of the superior authorities, it was his duty to suggest to the tribunal the duty of newspaper proprietors to pool their properties for the purpose of releasing operatives, especially members of the linotype departments. The Mayor said instead of two weekly papers for Peterborough they would have to be merged in one and issued from one office. The tribunal gave the proprietors a fortnight to consider the suggestion. The manager of the Peterborough Advertiser said he hoped London papers would be induced to set an example by amalgamating.

England's Oldest Industry.

The manufacture of tinder-box flints is booming just now owing to the match shortage. This is probably the oldest handicraft in Britain—older, in fact, it could hardly be, for it forms an industrial link—the only one—with the prehistoric Stone Age. The centre of the industry is the little village of Brandon, on the borders of Norfolk and Suffolk. The men who pursue it are known locally as flint-knappers, and the work is done in little sheds, often situated at the back of the cottages in which the workers live. In pre-war days the demand for the flints they produced came chiefly from Spain and Italy, in the rural areas of which countries the old-fashioned flint-and-steel tinder-box has never been wholly supplanted by the modern match. But nowadays practically the entire supply is eagerly snapped up by the makers of those ingenious little mechanical devices for lighting pipes and cigarettes with which the war has rendered us familiar.

Real Yankee Language

(From London Opinion.) A French soldier who came proudly up to an American in a certain headquarters town the other day, asked: "You spik French?" "None," answered the American, "not yet." The Frenchman smiled complacently. "Aye spik English," he said. The American grinned and the Frenchman looked about for some means to show his prowess in the foreign tongue. At that moment a French girl, very neat and trim in her peaked hat, long coat, and high laced boots, came along. The French man jerked his head toward her, looked knowingly at the American, and said triumphantly: "Chickien." The American roared. "Shake," he said, extending his hand. "You don't speak English; you speak American."
