An Indispensable Favorite

Wealth and Beauty at Stake!

CHAPTER XXXII.

"Indeed I knew nothing of the sort!" Lady Nora interrupts, sneeringly. "I did know that you treated him very badly, and burned his letter without even keeping the address, as I had to tell him when he asked me if you received it—that did not look like very devoted love! But there is no use talking about my boy. If neither of you have money, of course you cannot live together as Dallas Glynn and his wife should live. That is the end of it; and I am too wretched and grieved and worried to discuss it any more to-night, Yolande. You have your high-frown ideas of duty, I have my matter-of-fact, woman-of-the-world ideas; they would clash instantly, and I am worn out, and can't stand clashing or tormenting of any kind just now. I must try to sleep if I can, and have my poor head clear to face all the troubles and difficulties that beset me. Good-night, or rather good-morning. Yolande—there's the daylight, I see."

Yolande, dismissed with scant ceremony, gropes her way out of the room with a dazed, pained feeling that the world—her world—is all crumbling away beneath her feet.

Lady Nora, very chilly and sleepy, gets into her luxurious bed without delay, curls herself up under the satin-quilted eiderdown, her head nestling among the lace-trimmed pillows.

She does not wake until nearly ten o'clock, and then her maid brings her dainty breakfast of fragrant coffee and wafers of crisp toast, and boiled ham and poached eggs, all of which her ladyship enjoys immensely.

At two o'clock Lady Nora has her luncheon—a morsel of delicious salmon headeree and a cutlet and some padding, and a couple of glasses of dry sherry—and about three o'clock she has her warm bath and dresses leisurely.

She puts on a soft, brocaded silk tea gown of a delicate heliotrope tint, with a quantity of beautiful old Irish lace—Limerick point—about the sleeves, and ruffled softly down the front from the neck to the feet. She wears her prettiest chapeau, and her soft, smooth cheeks are like a hectarine, and her eyebrows and eyelashes are delicately shaded. Her white hands are sparkling with rings, and she is a picture of elegant patrician well-preserved beauty as she rustles softly down the stairs in her shining purple silks and swooping lace-edged skirts.

Mr. Carter has been waiting these ten minutes to see her, her maid tells her.

"Any one else, Moodie?" she asks, carelessly.

"Yes, my lady—Lady Pentreath; she is with Mrs. Glynn and Miss Dormer upstairs in Mr. Dormer's dressing-room." Moodie replies.

"Oh!" Lady Nora says, shrugging her shoulders, a frown and a flush marrying the serenity of her pretty face for a moment. "Any one else, Moodie?"

"Mademoiselle Gentier, my lady; and she asked if you would please see her for a minute when you came down. She is in the large drawing-room, my lady."

"And where is Mr. Carter?" Lady Nora asks, sharply and hurriedly.

"In the small room—your own sitting-room, my lady."

The delicate bloom on her ladyship's face deepens into a dull red of rage.

"Heavens," Moodie hears her mutter, grinding her teeth savagely, "is that woman in league with Satan? She is everywhere where she is not wanted!"

Severely elegant in appearance in her costume of plain, rich black silk and lace—perfect in fit and style—and her bonnet of crimson tulle, mademoiselle sits reading "Natural Law in the Spiritual World" as if she has not one troublesome thought in connection with the petty cares of everyday life.

"Good-morning," Lady Nora says, brief and not over civilly. "You wished to see me, I believe, mademoiselle?"

Mademoiselle bows gracefully and smiles sweetly.

"Good-morning, Lady Nora. Yes, I did. I am anxious about the poor, dear people here, you see." She speaks as if she were the beneficent patroness and protectress of the whole Dormer family. "It is a smash-up, you know," she adds, descending to broad vernacular—"a regular upset of everything, Lady Nora, as I told you yesterday evening. I am glad to see you are wise in time."

"What do you mean, pray?" Lady Nora asks, with chilling hauteur.

"The fact that you have obtained some knowledge of my private affairs in some extraordinary manner gives you no right or title to advise me or presume to interfere."

"You will persist in taking that tone with me, Lady Nora!" mademoiselle interrupts, arching her eyebrows and shrugging her shoulders. "It is very foolish of you. I am in no need of your friendship, I assure you; and you are giving yourself a lot of useless trouble in pretending to keep me at arms' length."

"I don't know whether you are friend or foe," Lady Nora mutters, half-cowed. "Nobody can tell whether to trust you or not. Mrs. Vavasor says so, too. You are in Lord Pentreath's confidence, and you are in Lady Pentreath's confidence; and now you seem to be in Joyce Murray's confidence, and—"

"I'm in everybody's confidence," mademoiselle finishes gayly. "I'm everybody's useful, humble friend, and help everybody out of their troubles to the utmost of my small ability."

"Everybody's friend!" Lady Nora repeats, in accents of scorn.

"I am!" mademoiselle says, undauntedly. "You can't say I am not yours, I'm sure. I have rescued your faithful adorer from perishing in the outer darkness of your coldness and disdain." She fairly giggles in malicious glee as she sees Lady Nora bite her lip vengefully. "Things were very bad with him, I assure you; he'd have done something desperate if I hadn't thrown myself into the breach. As it was, he was worrying Lord Pentreath's life out with letters about you and your cruelty and ingratitude and breach of faith. There—you know how a furious lover will talk, Lady Nora!"

Lady Nora is biting her lips mercilessly and clenching her jeweled fingers, and seemingly is on the verge of tears of rage.

"I consider there has been a shameful breach of faith on the part of Lord Pentreath," she says, in a half-choked voice. "I thought I could trust my own kinsman to keep the story of my troubles to himself. It was shameful of him! You—have, of course, your own motives for all this, she adds, turning on mademoiselle and shaking with passion—"this prying and ferreting out of people's private affairs!"

"Of course I have," mademoiselle retorts, with modest assurance. "I am devoted to the interests of Lord and Lady Pentreath, who are my most kind and generous friends; and I want to make myself useful to them, and spare them trouble, and take the worries on myself, because they always say, 'We can trust you, Isabelle, to do things discreetly and delicately, and hear and see and say nothing.'"

"And where, pray, Lady Nora asks, her curiosity overcoming her spleen.

"Does your devotion to Miss Murray's interests come in? In piecing together a damaging story of her flirtation with Captain Glynn, and that foolish business of the rings, and all the rest of it?"

State Services Rendered by Chamberlain Family.

A remarkable family record within just over 40 years of politics is set up by Mr. Neville Chamberlain's appointment to the Treasury. Joseph Chamberlain was President of the Board of Trade and of the Local Government Board, and Colonial Secretary.

Mr. Austen has been Chancellor of the Exchequer twice, Indian Secretary Minister without portfolio, and Lord Privy Seal, apart from minor offices. Mr. Neville has had experience at the National Service Ministry, the Post Office, and the Ministry of Health.

It is noteworthy that they have served under Premiers as diverse as Gladstone, Salisbury, Lord Balfour, Mr. Asquith, Mr. Lloyd George, Mr. Bonar Law, and Mr. Baldwin.

Mr. Austen Chamberlain, who is holidaying in the Island of Eigg, is one of those who have suffered, as many public men do, from the attentions of the so-called harmless lunatic.

For many years a lady persisted in corresponding with members of his father's family, claiming close relationship. Then came the announcement of "Austen's" engagement. The lady promptly became convinced that she was the bride.

She wrote to the bride's mother saying she was coming home to prepare for the wedding, and did, in fact, arrive with her luggage, but was persuaded to go peacefully away.

But Mr. Chamberlain confessed to feeling the greatest apprehension until after the ceremony was over, lest a second bride should appear at the altar.

Mr. Winston Churchill, according to his publisher, insists on checking four revised proofs of his new book on the war. Other authors, however, have far outdone that record. Dickens was a perfect terror in regard to proofs, as also was Tennyson, whose revisions were never finished.

Carlisle would cover every vacant space in the margins or between the lines with minute additions and amendments—and this not on one proof, but a dozen "revises." Victor Hugo also generally required at least a dozen proofs before he let a work pass from his hands, the last half-dozen being called for merely to ensure that the punctuation marks were correctly placed.

When the rebuilding of the Bank of England begins interesting relics may be discovered. Last week, during some very small work of excavation, an interesting old brass disc was discovered, which on being cleaned, revealed a coin in very fair condition of preservation going back to the time of the Emperor Trajan.

The coin (a dupondius or 2-1/2 pence) was submitted to the highest authorities on coinage, who at once identified the head on it as that of the Emperor Trajan. The coin is not of gold, but of a kind of brass, which the Romans called orichalcum. For a coin which is estimated to be nearly two thousand years old the state of preservation is very remarkable.

St. Anne's, Limehouse, the famous parish church the tower of which is endangered by the incursions of beetles during the last 200 years, has close association with Dickens.

Capt. Cuttle lived somewhere in the neighbourhood, and St. Anne's is supposed to be the church where he was "punctual in his attendance, and which hoisted the Union Jack every Sunday morning; and where he was good enough—the lawful beetle being induced to keep an eye upon the boys, over whom he exercised great power in virtue of his mysterious hook."

The numerous friends of the Lord Chancellor will be glad to know that he is better and that, notwithstanding the severe operations he has undergone, may be able to resume the duties which he has so admirably performed.

Baby Peggy, a three and a half years old film star, has signed a $100,000 contract. She agrees, by proxy, to make pictures for an American picture company, and the money will be deposited in a bank for her until she grows up. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. John Montgomery, of Los Angeles.

Peggy was chosen from a group of children visiting a Hollywood studio to take a baby part as an extra. Since then she has become known throughout America in subordinate parts, but henceforth she will appear in pictures specially written for her. She thus becomes the world's youngest screen "star."

THE SHINING MAN.

A man may be so truly good he makes a fellow melancholy; they say, "We'd better be wary of that fellow; if he would only beat his wife or come home stowed and berry!" But there's no blessing on his life, and so he makes us weary. Our wives are always pointing out the shining gem and crying, "Oh, emm, that moral scout, of righteousness undying!" He shames his blushing fellowmen, who go their way unblinking; if he would only swipe a bun or be run in "for speeding!" We should admire the spotless jaw which sings all mortal slannings; alas, it's not the human way, nor was since the beginning. And when a man of energy fame for rectitude unspotted, pulled off by chance some sinful game, how sorely he is swatted: The gossip will unite to break this decent man and goody: "We always knew he was a fake," men mutter, smiling broadly. And so we shining lights must tread with ceaseless circumspection, and wear our halos overhead without the least deflection. For if we stumble as we wend, half-bricks will break our noses, and we won't have a single friend to throw a bunch of roses.

'Devil's Grip' Germ is Still Unbroken.

CHANGING DISEASE PREVALENT IN VIRGINIA IS PUZZLING DOCTORS.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 17.—'Devil's Grip' is an infection but the elusive germ that does the work is still a mystery. This sums up the state of the inquiry into the cause of this disease, now prevalent in Virginia, as reported by Dr. George H. Payne, epidemiologist of the Virginia State Board of Health, and Dr. Wm. E. Armstrong, Passed Assistant Surgeon in the United States Public Health Service.

The epidemic appears to be confined to rural communities and to spread within families by contact. Children are more frequently attacked than adults. The important point to the cause of this disease is now prevalent in Virginia as reported by Dr. George H. Payne, epidemiologist of the Virginia State Board of Health, and Dr. Wm. E. Armstrong, Passed Assistant Surgeon in the United States Public Health Service.

The epidemic appears to be confined to rural communities and to spread within families by contact. Children are more frequently attacked than adults. The important point to the cause of this disease is now prevalent in Virginia as reported by Dr. George H. Payne, epidemiologist of the Virginia State Board of Health, and Dr. Wm. E. Armstrong, Passed Assistant Surgeon in the United States Public Health Service.

The condition was first reported by Dr. M. Kelly of the State Board of Health of Virginia last month. He had seen a number of persons in Chester County who had recently suffered from an illness characterized by an acute onset, with abdominal pain, but without the usual history of summer digestive disturbance. On July 21 similar cases were reported in Carolina County and that time they have appeared throughout the northern part of the State. Cases have been reported by thirty-eight physicians from twenty-two counties. A similar disease appeared in Virginia in 1888 and is described by Dr. W. P. Dabney under the name 'Devil's Grip.' This paper was called 'an account of an epidemic resembling dengue which occurred in and around Charlottesville and the University of Virginia in June, 1888.' The attacks came on suddenly with severe abdominal pain which later extends to the chest cavity. Breathing is difficult and rapid. The temperature is practically all cases, and is intermittent. Most of the patients perspire freely. The pulse is increased on movement and in cases by yawning. In general the patients are constipated but condition is followed by diarrhoea. Of the patients complain of headache and pain in the back. After a few to ten hours of severe pain, difficult breathing, the condition tends to subside but there may be relapse. Most of the patients recover without any secondary complications.

American Films

PROVIDE LAUGHTER FOR GERMAN FANS.

MUNICH (A.P.)—Horn-rimmed spectacles are now regarded by Europeans as the infallible label of Americanism. Harold Lloyd has displaced Charlie Chaplin in their favor. They have even for the moment forgotten bouncing Douglas Fairbanks. Tom Mix and other professional wild-westerners, and 'accept the bespectacled Harold at the typical American. And it is difficult to reconcile the tortoiseshell blinkers with cow-camps, and Indians. Europeans are getting somewhat muddled in their conceptions of American life.

For years cowboys and bouncers with egg-toed shoes and padded shoulders represented American mankind to Europe. The British comic papers and the British stage gave Europe its pictures of life in the United States. Then the movies came to the fore, and Europe insisted on having films which would not violate its notions on how Americans look and act. Films of conventional life in the United States apparently do not appeal to European crowds. At any rate they are never shown.

The ordinary European film is so slow in its action that the movie houses rely very largely on American films for their pep and comedy. Europe produces tragedies without end. Italy, Spain, France and Germany stage sorrow and grief. Sweden also supplies many tear-wringers and Russia is beginning to send soulful films into the houses of western Europe. So it remains for the Americans to supply something smaller and livelier.

Europe has starved and fought and suffered so long that it wants a great change. European comedians have tried to make their fellow countrymen laugh, but they have failed so far in their efforts to produce first class comedy films. Even the third-rate American comedies are more successful in Europe than the films in which the leading comedians of Europe have been featured.

Comic nights are frequently advertised in German film theatres, when only the comic films of certain American favorites are shown. German producers, German actors, and many of the German critics denounce American comic films as foolish and inartistic, but the public crowd the theatres when they are shown and pays its hard-earned marks for a chance to laugh.

Foreign Victims of Quake Robbed, Then Murdered.

REFUGEES ON CANADIAN VESSEL CONFIRM KILLING AND LOOTING REPORTS.

London, Sept. 11. (Associated Press).—Refugees from Japan, who were brought to Shanghai by the steamer Empress of Canada, confirm reports that foreign victims of the disaster were robbed and murdered, says a Shanghai despatch to the Morning Post. All the survivors, many of whom were taken to hospitals, told poignant stories of their experiences. Many are penniless and without clothes, while several dementia patients are being cared for.

Some of the foreign business concerns, says the correspondent, have decided against reopening their Yokohama establishments, fearing that conditions in that city will always be uncertain.

Five thousand tons of foodstuffs and medical supplies have been shipped from Shanghai to Kobe together with eighty tons of frozen meats, representing Hong Kong's donation to the Japanese people.

Two relief parties of doctors and nurses have gone to Tokyo and Yokohama. It is reported that Kobe is overcrowded and that there is danger of an epidemic there.

Tokyo, Sept. 11. (Associated Press).—Investigation by the authorities of the Honjo district, that part of Tokyo which is hemmed in by the sea, the Sumida River and by canals, showed that the previous estimates of loss of life there were not exaggerated.

The residents of this, the poorest quarter of the capital, were trapped by the flames which followed the earthquake. The ruins throughout the district were crowded with dead, the majority of whom, it is believed, were suffocated. In many instances it was discovered that the clothing of the victims was not even burned.

In various parts of Tokyo thousands of bodies are being stacked for cremation.

Tokyo, Sept. 11. United Press. (By Wireless from Iawaki).—An entirely modern Tokyo is to rise from the ashes of disaster.

A plan similar to that used in building Washington, D.C., has been tentatively adopted.

Electrical, manufacturing and other industries already are placing orders for machines, equipment and food with firms—even before the last of Tokyo's corpses have been cleared from the ruins laid by the quake of September 1 and the resultant fires.

Reports from various devastated districts indicate the damage to property has been even greater than first reported.

A tremendous tidal wave which swept Kamakura immediately after Oshima, four miles off shore, erupted violently and disappeared beneath the sea, did incalculable damage, especially in the summer resorts to which many foreigners go each year. Most of the foreigners there were saved.

Ruined Tokyo has become a beehive of industry, with an army of workmen erecting temporary barracks to house the homeless thousands.

Another workmen's army is engaged in removing the debris and almost at every turn they bring forth bodies from the wreckage.

Great numbers of these bodies still remain unburied and they probably are many more hidden in the wreckage.

Reports received here are that the conditions in Yokohama are far worse than in Tokyo as concerns care of the dead.

Divorce Easy in U.S.A.

WASHINGTON.—(By Canadian Press)—Senator Capper of Kansas in a recent statement calls attention to the fact that divorces in Canada are much less frequent with relation to total population than in the United States. Senator Capper deplors the frequency of divorce in the United States. He says that in all of Canada there were only 544 divorces granted last year. "Almost any American city can beat that record," observes the Senator sarcastically, meaning that almost any large city of this country has more divorces in a year than all of Canada. Senator Capper also declares that there is no European country where the ties of marriage and of family are held as lightly as in the United States, with the exception of Soviet Russia. "In Russia," says Senator Capper, "it is reported the sanctity of marriage has broken down. If so, there is no country so little warranted in condemning Russia on this account as the United States." Senator Capper holds that the astonishing rate of increase of divorce in this country, which fifty years ago was 28 to the 100,000 but now is 112, emphasizes the need of support for his bill to provide for uniform divorce laws and his constitutional amendment relating to this subject. He proposes to urge it on the attention of Congress in the next session.

OF GERMAN TYPISTS.

LEIPSIIG (A.P.)—Princess Margarete of Hohenzollern-Cehrningen started something when she pleaded in defence of the old she gave the notorious Capt. Ehrhardt that she was so lonely that she "even thought of becoming a typist." Scores of self-respecting women stenographers have risen to protest against the use of "even" by the princess, who is now serving a prison sentence for the shelter she gave Ehrhardt, to the great displeasure of his wife.

One intelligent correspondent wrote the following letter to a German newspaper: "Becoming a typist is surely greatly to be preferred to being in jail for six months. We typewriting girls, who have taken part in all the big conferences from Versailles to Genoa, should have welcomed the princess in our midst. We should have taught her with womanly tact and delicacy that the world has turned round a little, and that work is the honorable task of a German to-day. Further, we should have taught her that one must always speak the truth, and that by having a 'friendship' with a married man, one destroys one's chance in life. The princess will doubtless be lonelier than ever in jail."

$10,000 Will Buy Island and a Brace of Titles.

CAGLIARI, Sardinia, Sept. 18. (A.P.)—Why marry a worthless prince when you can buy an island principally together with the title, and bestow them on a husband of your own choice? Is the argument an enterprising Sardinian realtor has used in trying to sell a Mediterranean island to an American woman?

The woman was not in the market for a title, either with or without a prince, but she promised to mention the alluring prospect to some of her friends, and thus extracted further information about the property from the enterprising real estate man. He withheld the name, but assured her the island is well located and is highly desirable both as a summer and winter residence. It has an old castle which is in need of repair, several hundred acres of vineyard and farmland badly in need of modernization, and two villages, also badly in need of repair, with about 500 inhabitants.

The entire property is offered for $10,000, the princely name included, with a guarantee that the present holder of the title will legally sanction its transfer.

Roaring Planes Encircle London's Busy Airdrome.

LONDON (A.P.)—For the first time since its creation many Londoners who stayed in town on bank holiday, discovered London's great airport at Croydon, and were duly surprised to find it very like a main-line railway station.

There is a level crossing near the entrance where a flagman holds up the traffic road while 'big Handley-Page and other planes soar across the roadway prior to leaving earth for Paris, Rotterdam, Cologne or Hamburg. Once past the flagman, the visitor comes to a compact village in which headquarters of various air services are situated round an up-to-date hotel, adjacent to a postoffice, meteorological office, air administration, headquarters and customs establishment.

Enormous charts are set up on which the progress of various services are flagged by an official who is in constant wireless touch with planes on their way to and from various capitals. Should any particular plane be arriving late, it is ordered to wait, and taxi around until an outgoing liner is clear and to avoid risk of a collision.

On the ground there is a rush of porters and interpreters to meet incoming and outgoing planes. After being in the heavens several hours, conditions, on alighting, are very similar to those at a railway station.

Monkeys Celebrate.

Indianapolis—Fifteen monkeys in a local park went on a chloroform 'jag' when a keeper dropped a bottle of the fluid in their cage here. Two of the animals engaged in a fight and in an attempt to separate them, the keeper saturated a piece of cotton with chloroform and held it near the fighters' noses. In the melee the bottle was knocked from his hand. The other monkeys snuffed insistently at the fluid and soon all became hilariously drunk. It was some time before order was restored among the former jungle residents.

California Could Float a Battleship in Wine.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 18 (A.P.)—There is enough wine in California literally to float a battleship, according to a recent report of Rex B. Goodell, collector of internal revenue for the southern California district, who says that on July 1st last, approximately 38,000,000 gallons were held in wineries throughout the state.

In the most recent report on that day, the southern part of the state produced 2,524,999 gallons, while withdrawals in the same district in the same period totaled 1,079,744 gallons. Of the quantity withdrawn 635,388 gallons were shipped to points outside the state.

Government Analyzes Coal.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (A.P.)—Careful analysis of coal by industrial consumers is recommended by the Bureau of Mines as an important factor in reducing fuel bills.

The bureau is charged with inspection of the coal purchased for most of the Government departments here, as well as the Panama Canal, the Panama Railroad and the Shipping Board, and has developed a method of analysis which has resulted in saving of many thousands of dollars yearly.

Bolsheviks Study American Policies.

BERLIN (A.P.)—Bolshevism has created a laboratory of world politics in Berlin, something new in political science. This institution has little to do with many textbooks and dry lectures. It sends its investigators to the scene of interesting political activities in all parts of the world, and they bring reports to the official staff which keeps abreast of the world press and interprets the information it collects in terms of international consequences.

Captain Jacques Sadoul, former French officer who was sentenced to death in France for the part he played in promoting sedition among the French marines and sailors who were sent against the Bolshevik troops at Odessa in 1919, is among the experts on the Bolshevik staff who are conducting this new laboratory. Jean Arens, who was wounded by the assassin who killed Vorowski, the Russian unofficial delegate at the Lausanne Conference, is another member of the laboratory staff.

At present the laboratory is much interested in dissecting America's foreign policy. President Coolidge is under the microscope. His speeches and official activities are being studied, along with reports of the possibility of Secretary of State Hughes' resignation from the Cabinet. American Senators travelling in Europe are also being investigated, especially those who have Russia on their itinerary.

California Could Float a Battleship in Wine.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 18 (A.P.)—There is enough wine in California literally to float a battleship, according to a recent report of Rex B. Goodell, collector of internal revenue for the southern California district, who says that on July 1st last, approximately 38,000,000 gallons were held in wineries throughout the state.

In the most recent report on that day, the southern part of the state produced 2,524,999 gallons, while withdrawals in the same district in the same period totaled 1,079,744 gallons. Of the quantity withdrawn 635,388 gallons were shipped to points outside the state.

Government Analyzes Coal.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18 (A.P.)—Careful analysis of coal by industrial consumers is recommended by the Bureau of Mines as an important factor in reducing fuel bills.

The bureau is charged with inspection of the coal purchased for most of the Government departments here, as well as the Panama Canal, the Panama Railroad and the Shipping Board, and has developed a method of analysis which has resulted in saving of many thousands of dollars yearly.

Monkeys Celebrate.

Indianapolis—Fifteen monkeys in a local park went on a chloroform 'jag' when a keeper dropped a bottle of the fluid in their cage here. Two of the animals engaged in a fight and in an attempt to separate them, the keeper saturated a piece of cotton with chloroform and held it near the fighters' noses. In the melee the bottle was knocked from his hand. The other monkeys snuffed insistently at the fluid and soon all became hilariously drunk. It was some time before order was restored among the former jungle residents.

An Apt Comparison.

The veteran Labor leader, Mr. Tom Mann, whose name has been mentioned so frequently in connection with the recent dock strike, tells the story of two East End laborers who, travelling on an omnibus, were discussing their local M.P. One of them had nothing to say against the man, but could not support him because the platform of his party did not meet with approval. "Platform!" snorted the other. "Don't you know that a political platform is just like the platform of this 'ere bus? It ain't meant to stand on. It's just meant to get on."

Overlooked.

Why is it that candidates never seem to be able to keep their tempers when they are addressing the meetings of the burgesses at election times? There was great excitement at the recent by-election at Little Puddlem, when the local farmer opposed his hated enemy the butcher. There was a third candidate from London, but he did not count.

Candid Criticism.

Some people are not fond of telling stories against themselves. Some are. Amongst the latter is Mr. Israel Zangwill, who, I hear, is busily engaged just now on a new novel about Jewry.

One that he is fond of relating concerns an occasion when he went into the gallery of a certain theatre where one of his plays was being performed, with the object of collecting frank opinions concerning it. He was, however, disappointed. Nobody offered any opinion, one way or the other. So eventually, at the end of the second act, Mr. Zangwill turned to a man sitting next him, and asked him point-blank what he thought of it.

"Well, gov'nor," was the reply, "the leading man ain't bad, and the leading lady she'll, do. But, gov'nor—wot a play!"

Railroads Will Tell
How to Pack Furniture.

New York, Sept. 2. (A.P.)—A campaign national in scope and in many ways unlike any previous movement undertaken by the railroads of America, was begun yesterday and will be carried on throughout the month of September with these objectives in view:

1. Reduction of loss of and damage to the public's personal belongings when transported by rail.
2. Dissemination of information regarding the proper packing of household goods when prepared for rail shipment.
3. Education of the many thousands of railroad freight agents along the lines of proper marking, packing, boxing and crating of household goods.

Four organizations nationally known are behind this campaign, the American Railway Association, through its freight claim division, representing the operation of 95 per cent. of the railroad mileage of the United States; the American Railway Express Co., which handles a large volume of household goods over the railroads annually; the National Furniture Warehousemen's Association, with a membership of more than 650 household goods storage companies selling service and space to the public in the United States and Canada, and the household goods division of the American Warehousemen's Association, comprising public storage companies.

Analysis of conditions under which the people's personal belongings, including pianos and all sorts of household furniture, move forward from city to city by rail, has given clear indication, according to the carriers, that the public generally and many railroad local freight agents in particular have little conception of the proper methods of preparing and packing for shipment.

This lack of knowledge is costly both to the public and the railroads and express companies. In 1922 more than $700,000 worth of household goods transported by rail were lost or damaged; that is, the railroads paid out more than $700,000 in claims for loss and damage on this commodity. In 1921 the claims which the carriers paid aggregated nearly $1,500,000.

The fault is said by those who have investigated the situation to rest partly with the public and partly with the railroads themselves. The benefits from the campaign inaugurated yesterday will be shared both by the public and the railroads.

By means of the campaign it is hoped to point out to American householders that it is possible for their personal belongings to be marked, packed, boxed, crated and shipped by rail with negligible loss and damage.

Germans Pay Fines in Coal.

Berlin, Sept. 18.—Briquettes, the standard form of domestic fuel, have been adopted by one Berlin court as a unit of value in order to avoid depreciation of mark fines. A gambler who was arraigned before the court was sent to jail and fined 500 pounds of briquettes, or the value of that weight of briquettes, to be paid within a fortnight.

Doctors have used the value of a bushel of rye as a means of fixing their fees so as to avoid the fluctuation of value in order to avoid depreciation of mark fines. Many German factories have fixed wages in terms of butter or lard in an effort to satisfy employees whose wages have been fluctuating violently with the erratic mark.

Honour Scientists Covet.

One of the greatest distinctions a scientist can earn is that which permits him to put the letters F.R.S. after his name. Fellowship of the Royal Society, the world's leading scientific institution, is a coveted honour which falls to few, the number of members being limited to about four hundred and fifty.

Founded two hundred and seventy-eight years ago, the Royal Society consists solely of men who have won fame, or at any rate distinction, as scientists and explorers.

Sir Christopher Wren and John Evelyn, the diarist, were among the earliest members, since then the annals of the Society have been adorned by the names of practically every British scientist of note.

The original object of the founders—a small group of doctors and mathematicians—was to form a debating club for the purpose of discussing physics, anatomy, astronomy, navigation, and kindred subjects.

To-day, the Society occupies an unchallenged position among learned bodies. Many of the most important discoveries of the past two centuries have been made by its members, while it has supplied the funds and equipment for many of the most notable scientific expeditions to little-known parts of the world.

Parliament makes a yearly grant of £2,000 to assist the Society in carrying out this part of its program.

Hard Times in Sweden.

STOCKHOLM—(A.P.)—The influence of hard times on Swedish emigration to the United States is illustrated by recent reports from Swedish iron and steel works, and from L. W. Fagerlund, Governor of the Aland Islands.

The recent labor conflict caused a number of workers to leave their homes for America, attracted by the reports of industrial prosperity in that country. It appears that most of these emigrants were skilled workers.

Governor Fagerlund says that 548 Alanders left for America during the first six months of this year. He has made a study of the causes of this exodus and has arrived at some interesting deductions. One category, he states, consists of young men who wish to perfect themselves in the latest working methods of their trade or profession, intending ultimately to return to their home country.

Another group includes masons and construction workers who hope for steady employment in America. Others go out in the hope of earning enough money to pay off the debt on their family homesteads. Some are younger sons of farming families who are tired of working at home for almost no pay.

Unfortunately, the Governor states, very few return to their native soil, and of those who do come back many cannot adapt themselves to home conditions and finally turn to America. This seems to be the case especially with the women, who find work on the home farms too strenuous after having become used to lighter kinds of work in America.

Miss Ryan's Score.

"When Suzanne's away, lesser lights are gay," and Miss Lengien's rivals at Wimbledon have been having a merry time of it during the past few weeks, winning lawn-tennis prizes at seaside resorts. I saw Miss Ryan win the Ladies' Singles at Sandown—Miss McKane won it last year—and she was playing a very strong game. Yet I have no doubt Suzanne would have beaten her on her head!

I noted, too, one old lady who was enjoying the finals without in the least understanding what it was all about. Apparently, her grandson, who was full of knowledge as she was of ignorance, had done something to initiate her into the laws of cricket; but tennis was still a maze of delightful mystery.

Presently, Miss Ryan sent a hefty one out of the court, and a spectator caught it.

"Splendid!" cried the old lady. "How much did she make?"

Quantities of rich lace drip from the brims of picture-queely large hats.

Fads and Fashions.

Shirred brown satin faces the up-turned brim of a hat of brown hatter's plush.

Bronze buckles are effective on Spanish-heeled slippers of brown suede.

The coat-dress is decidedly holding its place among well-dressed women.

A trimming of braided satin is smartly used on the brim of a black felt hat.

A bright cherry red and bottle green are two favored colors for the fall hat.

Moire and grosgrain ribbons are used in every conceivable form on the fall hats.

The new, pointed armhole gives a delectably slender effect about the shoulders.

Navy and beige plaid silk crepe is used for the upper part of a blue serge dress.

Quite often the draped veil serves as a part of whole of the trimming of the fall hat.

An oblong cocarde of black satin is used on the brim of a large hat of black velvet.

Sand and brown vulture trimming is charming on a large hat of brown hatter's plush.

Latticed rows of gold braid are charming on a close-fitting hat of brown duvetyne.

Two brushes of turkey-marabou are used at one side of a small rosewood velvet.

On some of the new coats one of the wide, full sleeve caught in a cuff of fur.

On the new frocks the draped generally placed in front, leaving back perfectly flat.

Over a slip of coral crepe de chine is posed a silver brocade bodice and skirt of silver net.

WHAT ANY WOMAN KNOWS.

Here is a dialogue run over a little couldn't we? to which I was an unwilling audience. I sat by.

Mrs. Henry: "That wouldn't look well at all. You said so yourself when we bought the rug, but you said you measured it. I know the space wasn't more than ten feet long. We'll have to send the rug back. I told you the smaller one would be better. I am afraid it will be some now. It was such a bargain."

Henry, impatiently: "Oh, quit it. Don't start on that 'I told you so' strain. If that isn't just like a woman! Never mind what I said last night. I'll measure it myself later. You probably made a mistake. And what I want to do now is to read the paper. When women learn not to say 'I told you so' they will have learned a lot about how to make homes pleasanter and themselves more popular with their husbands."

Whereupon, Henry, having flung the eternal masculine taunt, retreated.

Last Word in Lifeboats to Cruise British Waters.

COVES, Eng., Sept. 18.—(A. P.)—A strange motor-boat painted red and blue, bulky in the beam, with a single mast and peculiar contraptions on her deck, came out of Coves Harbor at dawn recently and made her way through Spithead at 11 knots. She was the William and Kate Johnston, described as the largest and most complete lifeboat in the world.

The new craft is fitted with every device man's ingenuity can conceive for fighting storm and saving life. Her length is 60 feet, and she is 15 feet wide. She is driven by twin propellers in protective funnels, and her engines are two six-cylinder 90 horse-power motors.

The engines are spaced in separate water-tight compartments. In their rigorous tests they were run with these compartments full of water for three hours, and kept going full speed all the time. Forward and aft of the engines are cabins, each capable of holding 35 people. One has a stove, and for the first time the rescued will have shelter, warmth and food immediately they get aboard.

The most notable "gadget" on deck is a life-saving net of stout rope erected amidships into which people on ships can jump for their lives with a reasonable chance of success.

There are also on deck a line-throwing gun with a range of 300 yards, a powerful searchlight, and a screen to protect the helmsman and engineer at motor controls.

In addition the boat has nearly 100 buoyant air cases. She cannot capsize, and is practically unsinkable. She will be stationed in the Mersey, but to thoroughly test her she will first be given a tour of 2,700 miles round Great Britain.

World He Have Mentioned It!

I said nothing naturally. But this is what I thought: If things had gone exactly opposite, if Henry had been right about the distance, and Mrs. Henry had bought the rug that wouldn't fit, would Henry have mentioned it or would he not? I'll give you three guesses what my mental answer is to that.

When a man points out that he was right, that is a mere masculine claim for justice. When a woman points out that she was right, it is that hateful feminine habit of saying: "I told you so."

Henry is correct about one thing. When women learn not to call it to masculine attention when they, the masculines, have been wrong, they will know how to make home pleasant and how to make themselves popular.

But they know that already. Any woman knows that she can get along perfectly with almost any man if she will flatter and fawn and try in every way to please him, and never ask justice or fair play from him.

But she also knows that if she does that she will also lose two precious things out of her life. Her respect for herself and her respect for him.

THE FAULTS OF THOSE WE LOVE.

When a woman demands justice from a man it is not always because she cares so much about the justice for herself as because she wants to know that he is capable of it. She is fighting for her ideal of him rather than her own rights.

Faults in people we love hurt us so much more than in people we don't care about. And needless to say that goes for both sexes.

No "filler" to rot fabrics in this purest, new laundry soap

The thing that wears out pretty clothes, delicate fabrics, isn't the actual wear they get—nor yet the washing itself. It's the harmful "filler" in soap, which rots the fabric. That's why you will find this new, pure soap saves clothing for you. There isn't a bit of "filler" in the big bar. Just good, pure soap. It turns out the most beautifully white, snowy washes. Does it quickly, easily, with the least possible work at rubbing.

And it's easy on sensitive skin for the same reason it doesn't hurt fabrics. Saves your hands from unsightly reddening, and roughening. Another important thing: being just solid, pure soap, the big bar lasts for an amazing length of time. That's another economy. The name is MOTHER HUBBARD Pure Laundry Soap. Be sure you have some for the next wash time. Your dealer has it in stock for you, now.

Mother Hubbard PURE SOAP WONT HURT THE HANDS

If Every Woman Could Make This Trip

EVERY woman who enjoys clean things and who has consideration for her delicate hands, would enjoy a trip through the Kirkman Soap Factories.

Here she would see large, clean buildings—so sanitary that you would imagine food was being prepared. And that is the Kirkman policy: to make soap with the same care and consideration with which food is handled.

In order to do this, only the very purest and finest materials are used. Nearly a century of experience makes these materials into Kirkman's Soap. This can result in but one grade: The very best soap for every household purpose.

KIRKMAN'S Soap is absolutely free from lye to harm the hands—and from any adulterating substance such as starch, talcum powder, or water glass—materials which are useless for cleaning purposes but which may injure the delicate skin of the hands.

Therefore, the woman who really cares for her hands, and who desires to protect them should always remember that there can be no better soap than Kirkman's at any price. Your grocer sells it.

Pope Strengthens Edict Against Immodest Dress.

ROME—As a result of the recent sensational incident when 150 women, forming a part of a deputation to the Pope, were turned back from the Vatican because their dresses were low cut at the neck and had short sleeves, the Papal Major-domo has issued a new set of regulations for dress when being received by the Pope.

Women must wear dresses covering the arms to the wrist and the neck to the chin, says the regulations. The dresses must be made of thick material and not transparent and be long enough to reach down to the ankles of the wearer. Dresses giving undue prominence to the figure are discouraged.

Gloves must not be worn and only wedding or engagement rings may adorn the fingers of intending visitors to the Vatican, who are now submitted to three examinations, viz., first at the door, second at St. Damaso Courtyard, and if they pass these posts their invitation card is crossed with a blue mark. The third examination is made in the Papal antechamber where successful candidates receive a red cross on their cards.

Make-up of any description is strictly forbidden. Hair dye is tolerated provided it is not of the conspicuous peroxide tint.

The Printer's Devil.

A printer's devil was the name formerly given to the boy who took the printed sheets from the tympan of the press. They got themselves so bedaubed with black that the workmen jokingly called them devils.

Printing used to be called the Black Art, and the boys who assisted the pressmen were called imps.

According to a legend, Aldus Manutius, a printer of Venice, had a little negro boy, who was left behind by a merchant vessel, to assist him in his business.

It soon got about that Manutius had a black imp to assist him, and to dispel the rumor he showed the boy to the assembled crowd, and said: "Be it known in Venice that I, Aldus Manutius, printer to the Holy Church and the doges, have this day made a public exposure of the 'printer's devil.' All who think he is not flesh and blood may come and pinch him."

The people were satisfied, and no longer molested the negro lad.

Customs of Ancient Egyptians.

Professor Sir W. M. Flinders-Petrie, the world-renowned Egyptologist, in his new book, "Social Work in Ancient Egypt," says that divorce was practiced among the Egyptians as early as five hundred years before Christ.

The following speech, made by an ancient Egyptian at his breakfast table, addressed to his wife, was sufficient to legally cut the nuptial knot: "I have abandoned thee as wife, I am removed from thee. I have no claim on earth upon thee. I have said unto thee, 'Make for thyself a husband in any place to which thou shalt go.'"

An Egyptian, too, could marry his sister—and often did.

"If I have no more than these two children, it is right that they should marry one another," says an Egyptian parent in the tale of Senus. Polygamy was practiced, but was not widespread. They had much womanly wisdom, as witness this: "Be not rude to a woman in her house if thou know her thoroughly. Do not say, 'what is that? Bring it me,' when she hath put it in its right place and thine eye hath seen it. When thou art silent thou knowest her qualities, and it is a joy to be with her."

Egyptian philosophy was, however, apt to be discursive with a crude insistence upon the inevitability of death, which found expression in an "eat, drink and be merry for to-morrow we may die" attitude towards life.

To this end a model mummy in its coffin was carried round the banquetting chamber after a feast and exhibited to each guest, in order, as phtarah naively says, "to exhort them, while filled with wine, to make use of things present in that all will soon be such as it." A little unnecessary, one would have thought.

Professor Petrie gives many interesting details of the building of the building of the Great Pyramid. This colossal structure, whose casings cover thirteen acres, was built in 20 years by 100,000 men, of whom 4,000 were skilled masons.

Ten years were first spent in building the great causeway and preparing the site. The masons worked three German Letters Covered With 1,000 Mark Stamp.

NEW YORK.—In the days before the war Germany, conforming to the standard practice of international mail transmission, could send a letter to New York, for instance, for the customary blue stamp of 20 pfennings, one-fifth of a mark, or approximately 5 cents.

Letters are now coming to New York from Berlin bearing six one-thousand mark postage stamps. At the old rate of exchange these stamps would have cost $1,500, and based on marks, the rate is 30,000 times greater than it was before the war.

HALF CLAD ISLANDER SPOOLS FINE SCENERY.

San Francisco, Sept. 19.—The South Sea Islands have been ridiculously overrated, according to a statement made here recently by Mrs. Whitney Sperry, San Francisco society woman and globe trotter, who has just returned from a 75,000 mile jaunt, including a tour of the Orient, the South Seas and the Antipodes.

Mrs. Sperry said she visited the South Sea Islands expecting to find a land of dreams and romance. "I found beautiful scenery ruined by fat, half-naked men and women," she continued. "There was every sort of mixture of race and drink. Prices were three times higher than they should have been. The place was full of half-dressed artists who have gone brown" and everything I ate gave me indigestion. The food was responsible. The South Sea Islands have been ridiculously overrated."

In Java, Mrs. Sperry said, husbands may be plucked from the trees, bushes and the roadside. There are not human wrecks or doddering derelicts, but fine, handsome and charming men from Holland who go to Java to make their fortunes.

"The heat is so intense that most women refuse to live there," Mrs. Sperry went on to say, "so the only alternative these men have, if they wish to exchange single blessedness for harnessed cussedness, is to marry the native woman. So you see what a golden opportunity there is for single white women."

"In Hongkong I met many American and English women stranded with 50¢ a cent, whose real reason for going to China was to get married. Most of them were more than thirty years old and more or less unattractive. They had heard, incorrectly, that there were so many more English and American men than women in China. Once there they couldn't return. Java should have been their goal."

Mrs. Sperry entertains a bitter and hearty grudge against those writers who have painted glowing word pictures of the South Seas and the maidens thereof. She says: "I received the biggest disappointment of my life when I landed in the South Sea Islands. The scenery is beautiful, yes, but nothing startling. Java is more beautiful. And those beautiful maidens are heavy of, they are fat, nearly all of them, and sloopy. Voluptuous, yes, but oh, so broad! There are derelicts of every race and nation, gone to seed. Of course there is quite a colony of writers and artists, but even a large number of these have gone to seed. What struck me particularly was the number of white men, educated and cultured, many of them successful writers and painters, who have married the native women."

Produce and Provisions.

(Trade Review.)

Codfish—During the week the schr. LaBerge sailed from Bay Bulls to Gloucester with 3,652 qts. salt bulk fish, while the schr. Phyllis L. Westover left Twillingate for Halifax with 1,201 brls. herring and two casks seal oil, shipped by the estate of W. Ashbourne.

The reports brought by the Sagona show that the Labrador fishery turned out far better than the most sanguine anticipated, and most people think it is not very far removed from that of last season. If the foreign markets were up to the normal this would be good news for exporter as well as fishermen, but under present conditions it is hard to say whether the intelligence will redound to our benefit or otherwise. During the week, besides the 20,000 qts. shipped to Italy and Spain by the two steamers, there were also exported 4,200 qts. by the Silvia to New York for the West Indies and Italy.

Cod Liver Oil—Though common oil is coming in fairly good quality, not much refined oil is yet finding its way into the market, as it was late this year before refiners went to work. Most of them began in August, but it is thought by those closely conversant with the business, that as much oil will be produced this year as last, and what oil has been manufactured we hear is of very good quality, a fact which redounds to the credit of the Marine and Fisheries Department, the regulations it has formulated, and the care and assiduity of the Inspectors who are men of ability and experience in the business. The oil is expected to realize well this year, and most people think an active and profitable market will take all the goods we can afford, as a result of the very favorable impression our oil has made on the scientific men and experts who have visited here and published very flattering reports on it. The Government Inspectors, it is understood, will make a special effort this year to see to it that nothing but the best quality will be put on the market, because the prospects were never better for a revival of the trade and a restoration to its former high position amongst the articles of export which Newfoundland produces.

Common Cod Oil—The prevailing tone is steady and prices were generally well sustained, and some reports state that special inducements were offered to get ahead of the other man. Only a few hundred barrels have reached this market as yet, but we are likely to see a larger supply in the near future. Boston and New York are taking all they can get, but we see small shipments being carried to the Furness Line wharf for shipment to Liverpool, which certainly proves that English buyers are ready to pay top prices.

Lobsters—Small parcels of lobsters still come citywards the past week for suppliers mostly, as well as some for sale, but the bottom is out of the market, at least for the present, and the future for the goods is very uncertain. Those who look forward to a smart sale of these goods at reasonably profitable figures, have been sadly disappointed, and it is feared that a considerable proportion of this year's pack will be left on the hands of their owners. The few sales that have occurred were not of a nature to afford much encouragement, prices necessarily depending on the condition of the markets in Europe which are undoubtedly in bad shape. In conversation with one wholesale handler of lobsters, he stated that neither England, France, Germany, Belgium, Sweden or Denmark can handle our lobsters at present. As all know their currency, especially that of the latter five countries, have sadly depreciated, and people who used the goods in pre-war days cannot now touch them, as they must now pay from four to five times more than they paid in normal times for them. As regards the American market they will not touch our lobsters unless we stand behind our goods in the matter of quality and from the way in which some packers handle what they take, this cannot be done by those dealers who have a reputation to lose.

The American people will pay a Number 1 price for AI goods, but ours have been too often found wanting as to value and they refuse to buy except with gilt-edged security as to the condition of what they receive. A negligible quantity of lobsters was shipped by the Canadian Sapper to Montreal.

Salmon—Nothing worth while is transpiring in this market either, and the general impression is that, no business of any volume will occur before the late fall and early winter months. It is not unlikely as we stated last week, that an effort will be made to place our canned salmon in the foreign markets soon and there is no reason why a fairly decent business could not be done in this article. We certainly should be doing better than we are with it.

Flour—The easy condition of the flour market, a feature of last week, still continues, but most dealers say will not likely continue much longer, everything pointing to an early upward swing of the market. Though undoubtedly a great crop of wheat was garnered in Canada, as well as the United States (importers tell us that estimates now place Canada's at from 300 to 375 millions of bushels), the quality of the wheat will be much inferior to that of last year, deterioration having been caused by the bad weather prevalent just before the grain was cut. It is in fact computed by men well versed in wheat growing and marketing that owing to the poor quality generally of this season's crop, the loss in flour equivalent will amount to at or near 10 per cent. of the total crop, while some of the largest milling concerns in the Dominion hazard the assertion that it will take six bushels of wheat to make a barrel of flour instead of five, which under more favorable conditions would be required for the purpose. Good flour, it is alleged, will soon be a very scarce article, as most of our local orders have been placed for October milling. No heavy stocks of flour are now held here and prices for the next few weeks are likely to advance quickly before any great quantity of new shipments come this way about the middle or latter part of October. The imports for the week were 357 brls. by the Rosalind from New York and 250 brls. by the Digby from Boston, a total of 607 brls. Prices in the local market are $8.25 to $8.75, according to quality.

Beef—The beef market still continues good, and there is considerable activity in the trade in this commodity, while a firm tone is promised for the future. This article has also advanced by about $1.00 per barrel the past week or ten days, and considerable consignments are coming by each steamer with others in proportion for the future. The imports of beef during the week were 713 barrels by the Rosalind from New York, and 985 by the Digby from Boston, a total of 1,698 brls. The same prices hold, viz. Bos Flank, $24.50; Bos Packet, $26.50; Family Special, $19.50; Boneless, $19.50; Boneless Light, $18.00.

Sugar—There is at present not much sugar in the local market, in fact some dealers say that as compared with what is normally required, we have hardly enough to go round, so that there is a possibility of a famine in this article of trade. During the week prices advanced by about 25 cents or about $1.00 per 100 lbs. from the lowest point yet quoted. The shipments coming this way are not heavy and granulated fetches $8.00 per barrel wholesale in St. John's. The new season's raw sugars will not be ground before the late fall, and much of it will be processed in December, so that between this writing and the arrival of the new goods we must, perforce, buy much dearer sugar than we have been getting for some time past. Some 1,730 packages of this article were imported last week, 1,480 coming by the Rosalind from New York and 300 by the Digby from Boston.

Oats—Pools of all kinds are at present very high in the Canadian and other markets, and cannot be replaced to-day at the present Newfoundland quotations. Oats are now considerably dearer than they were a few weeks ago, though not much has been gleaned as to the opening prices for Prince Edward's Island new crop. The Rosalind landed this week 1,480 bushels of oats, the prices of which locally vary from $3.50 to $3.80 per sack, according to quality.

Sugar—There is at present not much sugar in the local market, in fact some dealers say that as compared with what is normally required, we have hardly enough to go round, so that there is a possibility of a famine in this article of trade. During the week prices advanced by about 25 cents or about $1.00 per 100 lbs. from the lowest point yet quoted. The shipments coming this way are not heavy and granulated fetches $8.00 per barrel wholesale in St. John's. The new season's raw sugars will not be ground before the late

Friday's Big Amateur Night at Crescent

BIG LIST OF NAMES HAVE BEEN SENT IN.

Friday night marks the first Amateur Contest to be held at the popular Crescent Theatre. A great list of performers will be presented in quite a large list of names have been sent in to Mr. Harrington and at the box-office—they consist of musicians, dancers, vocalists and comedians, and that an enjoyable entertainment will be given goes without saying. There will naturally be a rush to seats a timely warning is to be sent and get there early. This is going to be one of the biggest events of kind ever staged in the city. Mr. Harrington, the popular singer will be in charge of the affair and he intends giving each every contestant a square deal. The cash prizes are being given by management for the best talent. Besides the contest there will be the usual bill of pictures and entertainment with an entire change of program. Keep Friday night open for the show at the Crescent.

Forest Policy Needed

In supplement our report on the possibilities of forests and the maintenance of the supply in the future we publish below a report of the Canadian Forestry Branch and their suggestions in this connection:

1. The estimation of the timber supplies in the Dominion and the United States. There are several important factors which must be considered besides the estimated stand and the amount actually used and destroyed.

It is quite probable that the estimate of mature timber will be revised when a careful inventory is made. There is a very considerable amount of timber for which no account can be seen, there is little chance of operating profitably. Certainly the virgin timber within reach of the established industries is rapidly becoming depleted, as evidenced by the long "drives," sometimes occupying two or three years, and the constantly increased cost of woods operations. This situation has led several of the pulp companies to undertake reforestation measures. To the industry entailing large capital expenditure, such as the pulp and paper industry, the maintenance of a permanent supply of timber is of paramount importance.

There is every indication that the demand for forest products will increase more rapidly in the future than in the past.

Situation in the South. The forestry situation in the United States indicates that there will be constantly increasing demands from the country. Their original forest area of 22,000,000 acres has been reduced to 43,000,000 acres, of which 127,000,000 acres carries virgin timber. This is being cut at the rate of 4,500,000 acres per year, so that, exclusive of growth, there is only 25 years supply in sight. The standing timber is being cut at the rate of 25,000,000,000 cubic feet per year, which is more than four times the estimated annual growth; the timber of saw-material size is being cut at the rate of 55,000,000,000 feet board measure per year, and the growth of such material is estimated at 9,500,000,000 feet board measure per annum.

In a recent report to the United States Senate, the Secretary of Agriculture said: "Three-fifths of the original timber of the United States is gone and we are using timber four times as fast as we are growing it. The forests remaining are so localized as greatly to reduce their national utility. The bulk of the population and manufacturing industries of the United States are dependent upon distant supplies of timber as a result of the depletion of the principal forest areas east of the Great Plains."

Already the United States is dependent upon Canada for two-thirds of its newsprint, and our total exports of wood and wood-products to the United States in 1922 were valued at over $175,000,000. With the growth of population and decreasing supplies of timber in the United States, we must expect increased demand for forest products, and we should be in a position to take advantage of this expanding and profitable market at our doors.

Canada is the principal source of coniferous timber within the British Empire, and our exports to other parts of the Empire and to the Orient and South America are rapidly increasing. With the growth of population in the Dominion, our needs for home consumption are bound to be greater, for, in spite of the use of substitutes, the use of wood continues to increase.

Though there is sufficient timber in Canada to maintain the present cut for many years, if all of it were exploitable, there is every reason to believe that the forest capital is being rapidly depleted, and if the increased demand is to be met, or even the present output maintained, and the forests of Canada placed on a sound basis of management, provision should be made without delay for the securing of sufficient net increment to meet the future requirements. The long time required for the growth of a merchantable stand of timber demands adoption of a forest policy far in advance of the immediate necessities.

There is very urgent need in Canada for the adoption of a national forest policy, which will harmonize, in so far as it is possible, the administration of the forests throughout the Dominion. This can be accomplished only through the concerted action of the Dominion and Provincial forest authorities meeting in conference. No great improvement in the methods of handling the forest can be secured from localized action, since restrictions or regulations which place the operators of one region at a present disadvantage as compared with their competitors in other parts of the country cannot be expected to receive the popular support necessary for their successful operation.

Such a national forestry policy should include:

1. The dedication of absolute forest land to the permanent production of timber. This involves the classification of the land and the exclusion of settlement from lands which are essentially suitable for forest purposes.
2. Legislation and organization sufficient to ensure adequate forest-fire protection. This involves:
 - (a) A campaign of education to secure fire prevention;
 - (b) The proper disposal of slash;
 - (c) Standardized equipment for the detection and suppression of fire.
3. Further Suggestions.
 1. The employment of cutting regulations designed to secure the most favorable conditions for the reproduction and growth of the more valuable species of trees.
 2. The encouragement of the practice of forestry on private lands by the proper adjustment of taxation to meet the special needs of forest property and by furnishing advice and assistance in the establishment and care of the forests.
 3. It is of the utmost importance that a complete inventory of the forest resources be secured as early a date as possible in order that the Governments and the public at large may be fully informed as to the extent to which these resources have been depleted, and what the prospects are for future supplies, and also that the industries dependent on the forest may be guided in their development by a knowledge of the location and extent of both present and future sources of raw material.
 4. In order that the forests may be handled in such a manner as to secure the highest sustained production, there is a great need for a definite knowledge of the silvicultural characteristics and requirements of Canadian forests. This knowledge can be secured only by painstaking research.

The Touch That Tells. FEW MEN ARE BORN WITH THE "CLOTHES SENSE" BUT IT DOESN'T MATTER IF THEY HAVE SISTERS.

"Tony's not a bit smart. Somehow, his clothes always look all wrong," said one girl.

"Tony's got no sister to keep him up to scratch," remarked her friend flippantly.

Men may not dress so much for women as women undoubtedly dress for men; but it is a fact that in homes where there are sisters you find well-dressed brothers.

Of course, men won't own up to it, but you notice it in a hundred little ways. A girl's feminine eye for detail allows her to jog her brother tactfully when his socks and ties are not all they might be. She may never be allowed to purchase the sacred articles; nevertheless, he hears her half-whispered comment on so-and-so's toilet, or such a man's new suit, and ear-marks it for future reference.

Her Eye for a Bargain. One sister I know has good taste in materials, and usually has her way in the choice of her brother's new suit. And because she is his sister and takes an interest in his welfare, her bargain eye is always on the alert for a good cheap line in new soft shirts or a place where one can get gloves at less than five shillings a pair. Yes, sisters can dress brothers, and dress them well.

Another reason for a man's extra smartness where women abound is the fact that he dislikes showing up shabby in their company. Modern woman is smart and well groomed; spurred on by her example, man instinctively follows suit.

But the man on his own lacks this subtle feminine aid. Mother is a dear, probably, but a little old-fashioned as regards men's dress, and inclined still to take her standard of male smartness by what father wore twenty years ago.

So there it is. The sisters of this world, and later on, of course, some other brother's sister, do more than their fair share towards seeing that men are well clothed.

ing rapidly depleted, and if the increased demand is to be met, or even the present output maintained, and the forests of Canada placed on a sound basis of management, provision should be made without delay for the securing of sufficient net increment to meet the future requirements. The long time required for the growth of a merchantable stand of timber demands adoption of a forest policy far in advance of the immediate necessities.

There is very urgent need in Canada for the adoption of a national forest policy, which will harmonize, in so far as it is possible, the administration of the forests throughout the Dominion. This can be accomplished only through the concerted action of the Dominion and Provincial forest authorities meeting in conference. No great improvement in the methods of handling the forest can be secured from localized action, since restrictions or regulations which place the operators of one region at a present disadvantage as compared with their competitors in other parts of the country cannot be expected to receive the popular support necessary for their successful operation.

Such a national forestry policy should include:

1. The dedication of absolute forest land to the permanent production of timber. This involves the classification of the land and the exclusion of settlement from lands which are essentially suitable for forest purposes.
2. Legislation and organization sufficient to ensure adequate forest-fire protection. This involves:
 - (a) A campaign of education to secure fire prevention;
 - (b) The proper disposal of slash;
 - (c) Standardized equipment for the detection and suppression of fire.
3. Further Suggestions.
 1. The employment of cutting regulations designed to secure the most favorable conditions for the reproduction and growth of the more valuable species of trees.
 2. The encouragement of the practice of forestry on private lands by the proper adjustment of taxation to meet the special needs of forest property and by furnishing advice and assistance in the establishment and care of the forests.
 3. It is of the utmost importance that a complete inventory of the forest resources be secured as early a date as possible in order that the Governments and the public at large may be fully informed as to the extent to which these resources have been depleted, and what the prospects are for future supplies, and also that the industries dependent on the forest may be guided in their development by a knowledge of the location and extent of both present and future sources of raw material.
 4. In order that the forests may be handled in such a manner as to secure the highest sustained production, there is a great need for a definite knowledge of the silvicultural characteristics and requirements of Canadian forests. This knowledge can be secured only by painstaking research.

The Cutting Question. SNIP OFF STRAGGLING SHOOTS. LOOK OF BEDS NEED NOT BE SPOILED.

(By the Editor of "The Smallholder.") To cut or not to cut—that is the question which is just now exercising the minds of all who have a garden and take an interest in it. Is it worth while cutting about the geraniums, calceolarias, and other plants now, when they are at their best, and so making sure of a supply of flowers for next year's beds, or would it be better to postpone cutting operations for another month and run the risk of losing most of the cuttings during the winter? Without a doubt the answer is, Do it now. In the ordinary way it is so much wasted labour to take cuttings in October. Unless they can be wintered in a stove-heated greenhouse managed with professional care, ten out of every dozen will almost certainly die. Cuttings taken within the next week or two will have formed roots and be quite able to look after themselves before the cold weather comes. Naturally, therefore, nine out of ten of them will survive even in a severe winter, though housed in the sort of greenhouse or conservatory that is seen in so many gardens, and treated only very occasionally to artificial heat. An ordinary garden frame even would serve for them if it were covered with sacking during very cold spells. And actually the taking of cuttings thus early in the season need not necessarily spoil the look of the beds; on the contrary, it might improve them. The mere snipping off of straggling and unsightly shoots would give most people enough cuttings to be going on with, and if the supply did happen to be insufficient it could be added to by taking more cuttings a month hence. It would be interesting then to see just how easily the early batch survive the winter, and what a large number of casualties there are among the late batch. The first secret of success in taking cuttings, then, is to take them early. And the second is to use plenty of sand, silver sand, if the cut end of a freshly snipped off shoot is embedded in sand it will throw out roots in no time; if embedded in soil it is quite likely to rot before the roots come, and when rot sets in that is the beginning of the end. The professional way is to mix a potful of sand with every six portions of soil when making up the potting mould, and also to sprinkle a layer of sand on the top of each pot or box filled with mould in preparation for the cuttings. Thus, as the holes are made to receive the cuttings, a little of the top layer of sand trickles into each hole and forms a carpet, on which the cuttings can rest. It is necessary to make sure that the cutting does rest on its sand carpet, however. If it is hung up half-day down, leaving an air space beneath.

SPECIAL DEATH WILL BE ITS PORTION. The third secret of success is to keep the cuttings until they have lost their limp appearance in some place where the atmosphere is close but which is shaded from bright sunshine. A frame is the ideal place, of course, but a big, deep box covered over with glass which in turn is covered with newspaper, is a good substitute. The actual preparation of the cuttings is a simple enough matter. When they are snipped from the plant the cut should be made straight and level immediately below a joint, a joint being that part of the stem from which a leaf is growing. If any cutting is found afterwards to have even half an inch of stem beneath the last joint the surplus section should be cut off, for it is at the lowest joint that the roots form and a piece of stem below it will tend to rot. So that the apprentice has an unhappy minute or two. For some reason or other it helps a cutting to root if the end buried in the soil is actually in contact with the pot. This can easily be contrived by planting the cuttings close round the edge of the pot instead of towards the centre. It also helps if the cuttings are given a real good watering just after they are potted and thereafter are kept rather on the dry side, though not actually being allowed to suffer from thirst.

GIVING. I'm truly sorry for the man, though wrapped in luxuries he's living.

Who follows but a selfish plan And has not found the joy of giving.

In all the catalogue of bills Designed to give us satisfaction, There's nothing quite so sweet as this, The knowledge of a kindly action.

To meet a tramp upon the street, A shabby, soiled and sorry figure, And give him coin for bread and meat Will make the biggest man feel big-ger.

To soothe a sigh or dry a tear, To ease a care or break a fetter, To know that he's been useful here, Will make the best of men feel bet-ter.

To earn another's gratitude, To leave a smiling face behind him, Will make him feel, however rude, He's served the Master who desired him.

But little pride in taking lies, But little joy in selfish living; The rich, the poor, the dull, the wise, Must find their happiness in giving.
