

THE PROPOSED ISSUE OF DEBENTURES.

As will be seen by the letter of the Provincial Secretary, in our report of the Council's proceedings, the Government declines to authorize this municipality to issue debentures for the erection of a Central School, and for other purposes. This is just as we expected and hinted some two weeks ago when the deputation waited on the Government to ask its consent to the proposed issue. Finding we are in debt to the Municipal Loan Fund, the Government considers it right to deny this, and other municipalities similarly situated, the right to issue debentures for any purpose until that vexed question in relation to the payment of this debt is settled, unless such authority be granted by special act of Parliament. This was the case with London, which though owing a large amount to the Municipal Loan Fund, got a special act passed last session for the issue of debentures to the extent of $1,000,000 for railway purposes. Well, we suppose we will have to grin and bear, with this consolation that we are not the only disappointed municipality. Stratford after going the length of publishing her By-law for the issue of debentures told she couldn't do it. Other municipalities are in the same fix, and all will we suppose remain so till some scheme is devised for settling this vexed Municipal Loan Fund debt business. The sooner the Government can do that the better for all concerned. It has become the skeleton in the house to many municipalities. It is an incubus around their necks, it fetters their progress in many ways. Will the Government, therefore, please let us know as soon as possible whether we are to be forgiven that debt entirely; whether we have to pay a portion of it; or whether we have to foot the whole bill?

EDITORIAL NEWS.

There is a rumor of an intention on the part of the Government to establish a mail route through the Canadian territory to the Pacific coast. M. Guizer has subscribed to the French Republic, and expressed to M. Thiers his willingness to take office if his services can be useful to his country. The latest report from Mexico states that the Revolutionists are straining every nerve to raise money without which their cause will be lost. They levy contributions indiscriminately upon foreigners and natives. Mr. Hooper Green and some twenty other prominent Republicans of New York, have addressed a letter to the chairman of the Missouri Liberal Republican Convention, announcing their determination to attend the Cincinnati Convention, and inviting the co-operation of the Republicans of New York. COMMUNICATIONS from the Saguenay district reveal the prevalence of a great deal of distress among the settlers there. Farmers are without the means of sowing their crops; flour and provisions are dear, and unless speedy relief is furnished, the settlers will have to throw up their farms and go elsewhere—as three have already done, to the States.

The Earthquake in California. The earthquake in California, of which we gave a short notice, on the 25th of Saturday, appears to have been far more disastrous than the first one, as presented to be. The volcanic district in which it occurred is about four hundred miles southeast from San Francisco. Only a slight shock was felt at the time in Northern California, but the town of Los Angeles, however, to have been immediately over the centre of disturbance. The first shock rattled the rear of artillery, fired immediately under the town. Nearly the whole population were buried beneath the ruins of the houses, and the ground filled with the cries and shrieks of the mangled and wounded, who were unable to extricate themselves, and who were calling for help. The first shock was followed in rapid succession by three others of equal severity. Over three hundred distinct shocks were felt between half-past two o'clock in the morning and sunrise. The fact is, the earth was in an almost constant tremble and vibration for over three hours. A vast chasm was opened for thirty-five miles down the valley, varying from three inches to four feet in width. Great rocks were torn from their places, and rolled down into the valley beneath. The Indians in the vicinity have all left, fearing the recurrence of another general convulsion of nature, which tradition says occurred in the same place some hundreds of years ago, and created what is called the Owens River Valley, which was before that time a range of mountains. Over thirty persons have been killed, and more than one hundred were wounded. Smoke and lava have issued from several of the mountain peaks in the same region of country.

THE SPRINGERS.—Says the St. Catharines Times: Moses Springer, Esq., M. P. P., the popular representative of North Waterloo, is one of the heirs to the Springer estate, on which the city of Wilmington, Del., is situated. It seems that, generations since, one of the ancestral Springers reared an 800 acre farm in Delaware to a German for a term of ninety-nine years. When the lease expired by limitation, no one was on hand to claim the property, and it was disposed of for the public good. Recently, the ancient lease came to light, and a little investigation into the matter has made the Springers a happy family. The old farm being on the site of Wilmington, Del., the property is now worth $80,000,000.

Prof. Morse's Condition.

The Republican Victory in Connecticut.

News from Central America.

New York, April 2.—At 2 a. m., Prof. Morse, was sleeping, his condition showed little change. The election in Connecticut yesterday, resulted in a decided victory for the Republicans. The State Senate will stand 14 Republicans to 7 Democrats, with an increased Republican majority of 10 in lower house. Late news from Central and South America, states that Salvador and Guatemala are still agitated about an active difficulty. Guatemala is raging war against the press. Difficulties between Salvador and Honduras are reported. Messrs Dreyfus & Co., have established a bank at Colima, with a capital of twelve million dollars.

Book Notices.

Music and Morals. By Rev. H. B. Harter, M. A. Harper Bros., New York. The author has produced a book which is full of interest, and may be of use to a large class of readers. He has grasped his subject with much width and clearness of conception. "Music and Morals" is a comprehensive term; and it is made here to convey an elaborate analysis of the connection of music with emotion, as well as some critical comment on its position with reference to individual morality, and to its influence and significance in society at large. We can not commend too highly Mr. Harter's general exposition of the theory of music as the most profound and subtle artistic instrument for expressing emotion. He describes the thanks of the public for his sound exposition of principle, and his wholesome criticism, often conveyed with great force, sometimes with real beauty as well. We are indebted to Mr. W. E. Tunis for a copy of this book, which is for sale at Mr. John Anderson's bookstore.

Book Notices.

Cyril's Trust is the latest issue of Harper Bros.' series of standard novels. It is by the author of Carleton's Year, and will, no doubt, be eagerly bought up by the admirers of this writer. For sale at Anderson's. New Dominion Monthly.—The number for April is before us, and is a very interesting one. It contains a very good libel on M. Thiers. For sale at the bookstore.

We beg to call attention to Mr. Horsman's advertisement about Ploughs. The Plough referred to is having a large demand, so great has it become that three car loads have been forwarded to Mr. Horsman to supply the farmers in this neighborhood this Spring. All pronounce them the best general purpose Plough made; as a guarantee of this we need only say that they are manufactured at the celebrated Agricultural Works of F. W. Glen, Oshawa. The price it will be observed will be kept at $13, the old figure, until the 1st of April, when it will be raised to $15 in consequence of the advance in Iron and Steel. We should therefore recommend our farmer friends to loose no time in procuring one at Mr. John Horsman's, Hardware Merchant of this town.

HELEN MOIR OR LOVE AND HONOUR.

A TALE OF THE CLYDE.

CHAPTER XXIII.

"Oh, murder, murder," yelled the latter. "It's broken every bone in my body you have, and laid me flat as a pancake."

"By Jove," spluttered the Squire as he endeavoured to eject from mouth and nostrils the choking dust their descent had raised, and at the same time to gather himself up from his rolling, writhing, roaring companion. "By Jove, it was that infernal step, Weggate, you know."

"Yes, I feel it with my stick," laughed Weggate, who, with Edwin, had stood back on hearing the heavy fall; and fortunate it was they did so, for had they followed suit, the poor Irishwoman would have been squeezed to death under their united weight. As it was, she was stunned and shaken severely, for the Squire's weight of sixteen stone was no joke to sustain, and by the time they had scrambled to their feet she was heard in the darkness bemoaning her fate in many a wail.

"What the devil do you do with a step there?" asked the Squire angrily.

"Och sure, and it wasn't myself that put it, but it has been the death of me this day."

"Pooh, nonsense, you've got a bit of a fright, that's all. Don't you think a noggin of the best Irish whiskey would set you all to rights?"

"Fais, then, if anything would do it, that wad," responded the woman in a more cheerful tone.

"Well, here's half a crown to go and try it."

"May your honor live for ever, and ever, and never fall down," said the woman, as she let her more gratified exclamation, and he felt the coin slipped into her without a hand.

"I'll run for the medicine, and then I'll be home."

"First of all lead us to the man who gave you a blow," said the lawyer. "We can be having our interview with him while you are absent."

"Time for it, yer honors, and I will be off ere you are saying this way."

"Any more steps?" demanded the Squire dubiously.

"Sorra was thin, and waddled like the man that put that wad down, but I'll open the door and let the doctor in."

The door, which she opened, she spoke, allowed as much light to pour in as enabled them to pilot their way without further mishap into a dirty, smelly apartment, at the opposite end of which was another door, and the same arrangement was in fact of opening as they entered.

"Dicky Mangles, me darlint, here's four gentlemen come to see you," he cried to some one within.

"Four gentlemen?" layled a voice in reply. "I thought it was an earthquake."

"There was 'nupur enough for it, I daresay," said the Squire, as he made his way into the interior, followed by Edwin, Mr Weggate, and Ritchie.

"Now you can be off to try the effect of the medicine," whispered the latter to the woman, a suggestion which she was not slow to act on, for, with a wink, a nod and a chuckle, she vanished, leaving the strangers alone with her lodger.

The light by which the apartment was illuminated was none of the strongest, but it was sufficient to show the room and its solitary inmate seated in one corner on a bundle of dirty rags. Besides that bundle of rags there was little else within the four blackened walls, unless bundles of rags in other two corners indicated that human beings herded there at night.

The atmosphere was stifling, and its odour nearly sickening.

The appearance of the man was in keeping with the wretchedness of the scene. He was nearly naked, his hair was long and matted, his beard did not seem to have been shaven for weeks, his face was blotched and coloured with dissipation, and the hand which lay by his side above the rags shook involuntarily.

Yet his eye was keen, sharp, and steady in his glance, and though it was evident that his limbs had become useless, his mind did not seem to be so shattered as his body.

"Well, Mangles, do you know me?" asked the Squire, after the gambler and his visitor had silently eyed each other for fully a minute.

"N—I—do—not," was the answer, very deliberately given, and that after a keen, steady scrutiny of the whole four, came after another.

"And I'm not a bit surprised at it," quoth the Squire. "Nor would I have known you either, Mangles, had I not been told it was you. We are both much altered since we saw each other last—I altered, and you for the worse. For the better, and you for the worse. Well, I am Frank Oakley."
