SHIPBUILDING

CONTRACT FOR REPAIRING DESTROYER "NIPIGON"—STATEMENT OF NOVA SCOTIA PREMIER

Mr. Gaston Gourde (Lévis): Madam Speaker, yesterday, on behalf of the Ministers of Supply and Services and National Defence (Messrs. Blais and Lamontagne), I announced that a contract had been awarded for refitting the Nipigon, a Canadian Forces destroyer. The contract is for $12.7 million, and work is to commence on or about June 27, 1983.

I am mentioning this announcement by the Canadian Government because recently, according to an article in the Globe and Mail, the Premier of Nova Scotia, Mr. Buchanan, declared that the tender by Halifax Industries was lower than that of Davie Shipbuilding Limited, and that in the circumstances, it would be unfair to award the contract to Davie. Madam Speaker, what the Premier of Nova Scotia said was entirely false. According to the figures published yesterday, the tender by Halifax Industries was for $19.5 million, while the Davie tender was for $12.7 million, a difference of 53.5 per cent. I would therefore ask Mr. Buchanan to retract what he said, if he does not want to lose his credibility, and I would also ask my Conservative colleagues to call one of their fellow Conservatives to order.

VETERANS AFFAIRS

CRITERIA GOVERNING PAYMENT OF WAR VETERANS ALLOWANCE

Mr. Mel Gass (Malpeque): Madam Speaker, I would like to pursue an issue which has been of concern to war veterans in my constituency, with regard to the War Veterans Allowance. The War Veterans Allowance is an income-tested allowance which permits a married veteran to earn up to $3,900, and a single veteran $3,100, before any income from employment is deducted from the allowance. Also deducted from the allowance is any family income such as the Canada Pension, family allowance, old age security, et cetera, which exceeds $887.26 for married veterans and $532.14 for single veterans. Also deducted from the War Veterans Allowance is any income from interest on properties, stocks, deposits, et cetera, which exceeds $100.

I feel that there is an injustice being done to the war veterans who cannot work part time due to poor health or lack of jobs but still have the family income deducted from their War Veterans Allowance. They do not have the $3,900 or $3,100 extra that working veterans can make, and under some circumstances justly cannot find employment. I feel there should be some compensation made for those war veterans who cannot work but are not on disability pension and who have their Canada Pension or old age security deducted from their War Veterans Allowance. I urge the Minister of Veterans Affairs (Mr. Campbell) to take the necessary steps to correct this injustice.

HAZARDOUS SUBSTANCES

UREA FORMALDEHYDE FOAM INSULATION—CALL FOR REMOVAL FROM NEWFOUNDLAND EMPLOYMENT CENTRES

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Madam Speaker, three Canada Employment Centres in Newfoundland—St. John's West, Harbour Grace, and Clarenville—have urea formaldehyde foam insulation producing readings as high as 0.15. About 100 employees work in these offices, suffering from such health problems as eye and nose irritation, headaches, fatigue, throat dryness—problems that are believed to be related to the presence of UFFI. Women who are pregnant have been advised by their doctors that they should not work in these buildings because the long-range effects of UFFI are not yet known. I believe the Liberal federal Government must act immediately to protect the health of these workers by removing UFFI from these work locations or by transferring the employees to other work locations.

I also remind the Government that the Canada Employment and Immigration Union of the Public Service Alliance of Canada is unable to seek protection for these employees under the Canada Labour Code. The Minister of Labour (Mr. Caccia) must stop hesitating, and must introduce legislation in this House which will bring the Public Service under the protection of a strengthened Canada Labour Code.

REGULATORY REFORM

PUBLICATION OF AGENDA

Mr. Jim Peterson (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of State for Economic Development and Minister of State for Science and Technology): Madam Speaker, I rise with what I can only imagine to be the pride of a new mother. Yesterday the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. Gray) brought forth the Regulatory Agenda. The Regulatory Agenda is perhaps the single most important recommendation of the task force on regulatory reform. It provides notice of the regulatory initiatives of ten regulatory Departments and four regulatory agencies. It will be published twice a year, in May and November. It gives notice in a compact, accessible form to the private sector—business, labour, consumers and environmentalists—of pending Government initiatives. It outlines the problem, possible actions the Government might take, and, most important, the name, address and phone number of the responsible contact in Government.

The Agenda is an early warning system, provided through publication in The Canada Gazette of the Agenda. It is the key to better consultation and will lead to more cost effective regulations responding to the real needs of the private sector. It will utilize private sector knowledge and know-how. As one person said, the Regulatory Agenda is the most significant development in Government tracking since Hansard. The gestation period has been long. It has been worth it.

ENERGY

ACCELERATED OIL SANDS DEVELOPMENT ADVOCATED

Mr. Jack Shields (Athabasca): Madam Speaker, it is generally acknowledged that the oil reserves contained in the Athabasca tar sands exceed those of the Middle East. I submit to this House that an accelerated program of oil sands development is essential to Canada's goal of self-sufficiency in oil, certainly by 1990 or by 1995. Canada should try to offset the risk of insecure foreign oil supplies and lessen the drain on its currency that results from foreign oil purchases.

Surely there should be serious consideration of encouragement to develop further the oil sands at Syncrude and Cold Lake, which are known to exist and to be producible. Royalty reductions and tax considerations help, but it is the enormous downside risk, if crude prices plunge, that requires special attention.

Perhaps one answer to foster these job-creating, energy security investments would be a maximum and minimum return on investment, with enough return on the upside to encourage real efficiencies, or there would, instead, be a guaranteed crude price during pay-out of investment.

Syncrude Canada produced about 7 per cent of Canada's domestic oil in 1982, and Syncrude's payments to Governments for PGRT and royalties are estimated to be about $450 million in 1983.

Madam Speaker: Order.

RAILWAYS

CROWSNEST PASS RATE—RATIO OF SUPPORT IN FAVOUR OF RETENTION

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Madam Speaker, I want to think the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) for his prompt attention to my written question and I would also like to draw to his attention the answer which his office has provided. I had asked for the number of signatures the Minister had received supporting a change in the Crow rate. The answer given by his office was 69. I had also asked for the number of signatures the Minister had received supporting retention of the Crow rate. The answer given by his office was 38,713. For every person supporting Crow rate change, Madam Speaker, there are 561 people supporting Crow rate retention.

The Minister should drop the notion that opposition to Crow change is a position held only by the New Democratic Party and the National Farmers' Union. The number of Crow retention signatures he has received is three times the membership of the National Farmers' Union. The Minister should now realize that many of the groups with which he is negotiating do not represent the strongly held views of farmers and prairie communities. He should admit that his strategies of corporate consultation and negotiation have placed him in his present untenable position.

Finally, the Minister must enter into discussions on railway upgrading which include Crow retention as a serious alternative to the present Bill. He should split Bill C-155 so that the upgrading of railways can proceed immediately. For the Minister to continue along his present course is to foster western alienation, western separatism, and probably civil disobedience.

TERRY FOX

TRIBUTE TO FILM OF LIFE STORY

Mr. David Smith (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, last weekend I wanted to take my seven year old son, Alex, to see the movie The Return of the Jedi but the line-ups proved impossible. Somewhat disappointed, we decided to go to see The Terry Fox Story instead, and we had no trouble getting in because the theatre was more or less empty.

Somewhat to my surprise, Madam Speaker, I was really impressed with this movie, and I am pretty severe critic. This movie is Canadian. It was shot on locations from Vancouver to Newfoundland, but it is primarily about a brave young Canadian. Terry Fox stirred the emotions in all of us in an unbelieveable way with his run to raise millions to fight cancer. But the film does not portray him as a perfect hero. He comes across in a very human way. At times he is moody, unreasonable, and self-centred. However, in the end the total picture which emerges is one of a tenacious, proud, and determined young man who knew that he was dying but would not go down without a fight.

I make this statement to urge Canadians to see this film. Why has attendance been low? Is it because it is a Canadian film? Just because it is Canadian does not mean that it is second rate. This is a first class movie which helps to keep alive the message of Terry's Marathon of Hope. I urge all of my colleagues to go and see this film. They will not be disappointed.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

SUPPORT URGED OF BLOOD DONOR CLINICS

Mr. Doug Lewis (Simcoe North): Madam Speaker, blood donations are sometimes referred to as the gift of life. Everyone who donates blood contributes in a very real way toward saving or sustaining the life of a fellow human being.

As the House will know, Father Sean O'Sullivan, a former Member of Parliament, is suffering from leukemia. Blood transfusions are used as part of the treatment of that disease. I take this opportunity, Madam Speaker, to urge Members, staff, visitors and members of the media to make a special effort to attend the House of Commons' blood donor clinics which will be held on Thursday and Friday of this week. I especially appeal to those people who have never given blood before to take this occasion to donate blood for the first time.

FISHERIES

CONFLICT BETWEEN FEDERAL AND QUEBEC GOVERNMENTS—REQUEST FOR RESOLUTION

Mr. André Maltais (Manicouagan): Madam Speaker, I would like to draw the attention of the House to a conflict between the Canadian Government and the Province of Quebec concerning the fishing industry. At the request ot the Mouvement Desjardins and the Pêcheurs-Unis du Québec, the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans (Mr. De Bané) has done a great deal to help Quebec fishermen to continue, and in some cases to start fishing. However, because of an administrative problem, the Quebec Government is opposed to a settlement that would benefit the fishermen, and today, senior officials of the Canadian and Quebec Governments are meeting to find a way to settle the Madelipêche issue and, especially, to provide employment for the fishermen.

However, if it turned out to be impossible to reach a settlement agreeable to both parties, I would agree, Madam Speaker, if the Canadian Minister of Fisheries and Oceans were to implement one of the major recommendations of the Kirby report, namely, that the federal Government should repatriate the entire fisheries administration to the central government, for the benefit of all fishermen in Eastern Quebec and Eastern Canada. I think we should support the federal Minister of Fisheries and Oceans, who is trying to find a settlement that is satisfactory to all parties, and not just to one of the parties, namely the Government of Quebec, which would be doing a disservice to the fishermen of Madelipêche and all fishermen in Eastern Quebec.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

INVESTMENT IN CAST SHIPPING GROUP

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Dartmouth-Halifax East): Madam Speaker, I have a question for what appears to be one of the more beleaguered Ministers in Cabinet, the Minister of Transport. I know he has problems with Maislin, the Challenger, Canadair, Air Canada, and so on, but the urgency of the Government's position with respect to any further investment by Canadian National Railways in the Cast group compels me to put the question. Will the Minister tell the House and the people of Canada why the Government does not believe that debt of upwards of $200 million is inexcusable in terms of Canadian National's involvement, or that the Government will take some action to prevent CN from incurring five cents more debt in the Cast group?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, the decision as to the future of the CN-Cast alliance has not been taken yet by Cabinet so I am not in a position to comment either way. That decision will be taken soon, but it has not been taken yet. I understand that my hon. friend is afraid this might have an unfavourable influence on the Port of Halifax. I wrote to him publicly recently to explain that this was not going to be the case, because of geography, of freight rates, and a number of factors, Halifax and Montreal serving different markets.

I rejoice in the fact that in recent days three companies serving the East Coast have shown interest in moving to Halifax. I understand that one has already done so and another is about to do so. This demonstrates that the two ports serve different markets.

Oral Questions

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Dartmouth-Halifax East): Madam Speaker, our concern not just for the Port of Halifax and East Coast ports but for all Canadians with respect to this investment is that it now appears that the Government is favourably considering allowing Canadian National Railways to pour between $32 million and $200 million additional debt, over and above the $62 million it has already plowed in when, in its own words, it has already acknowledged that this was a bad decision made seven years ago. Why is the Government now giving favourable consideration to allowing an even further indebtedness by Canadian National Railways, and hence the taxpayers of the country, in a company that is owned offshore, returns no profit, no taxes, and no jobs for Canadians? Why is that?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, we will not know before this decision is made if consideration was favourable or unfavourable. It is only when Cabinet says yes that we know the consideration was a favourable one.

With respect to the figures used by my hon. friend, I can only say that they do not correspond to the reality of the proposal before us.

Mr. Forrestall: Madam Speaker, I am not certain of the figures, and that is why I say it is somewhere between $32 million and $200 million. Eleven capital ships cost somewhere around $200 million or $250 million.

INQUIRY RESPECTING CABINET DECISION ON PROPOSED MERGER

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Dartmouth-Halifax East): Madam Speaker, for about three weeks now the Chamber and the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications have been held up in their examination of the annual report of Canadian National Railways at the request of the Government and CN in order to allow time for Canadian National to complete negotiations with Cast. Can the Minister tell us whether those negotiations are complete, whether submissions have been made in the due process to Cabinet for decision, and where that matter stands on the Cabinet and Treasury Board schedule? When will we know what the decision will be?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, my hon. friend will really have to wait to know the terms of the merger before he comments on it, and before I comment. I said that the proposals were before Cabinet, so consequently the negotiations between Cast and CN have been concluded.

INDUSTRY

MAISLIN TRANSPORT LTD.—GOVERNMENT LOAN GUARANTEE

Mr. Doug Lewis (Simcoe North): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce. Last summer the federal Government guaranteed a $34 million loan to Maislin Transport. Is the Government considering an extension of further loan guarantees to Maislin Transport at the present time?

Hon. Ed Lumley (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce and Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): No, Madam Speaker.

COMPANY LOSSES

Mr. Doug Lewis (Simcoe North): Madam Speaker, rather than ask whether or not the decision has already been made, I would like to ask the Minister another question. During the first nine months of 1982, while they were negotiating this loan, the company lost $13.9 million. The final quarter figures have not been filed and the annual financial statements have not been filed. The Ontario Securities Commission has delisted them. They are in default at the present time. My question through you, Madam Speaker, to the Minister is this: did the company lose more than $13.9 million last year, and does the Government have those financial statements yet?

Hon. Ed Lumley (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce and Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): Madam Speaker, as I have indicated several times in the House, I feel it is most inappropriate to take advantage of our immunity as parliamentarians to discuss commercial, confidential information of a Canadian company—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Lumley: —particularly when the shares of a company are publicly traded and where there are hundreds of jobs in the company, as well as its affiliates and suppliers at stake.

DISARMAMENT

UNITED STATES CONTRIBUTION TO GENEVA NEGOTIATIONS

Miss Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. As he will recall, the Summit text on arms policy stated, and I quote:

> In the area of INF, in particular, we call upon the Soviet Union to contribute constructively to the success of the negotiations.

This assumes that the U.S. is already contributing constructively to the success of the Geneva negotiations, since only the Soviet Union is mentioned. Is it the view of the Prime Minister that the U.S. is in fact contributing constructively to the Geneva negotiations when the President says, as he did yesterday after the Summit, and I quote:

> Frankly, my own opinion is that the negotiations won't really get down to brass tacks until they—

The Soviets.

> —see that we are going forward with the scheduled deployment.

"—going forward with the scheduled deployment". Is it the Prime Minister's view that this is a constructive contribution to the success of the Geneva negotiations?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, my view is reflected in the final communique which was accepted by all participants. I believe that the Hon. Member will see that in that communique two messages were contained. One was to the Soviet Union to indicate that it had to take seriously NATO's decision of December, 1979, to deploy Euro missiles unless there was a solution to the problem of the S.S. 20's. The message is in there and I feel it is important that the Soviet Union understands that message. At the same time there is another message which is written throughout—that the NATO countries' decision, as supported by some countries at Williamsburg which are not members of NATO, is to the effect that we also want serious negotiations in the hopes that we will find an alternative answer to the deployment of the S.S. 20's other than full deployment of the Euro missile, which NATO contemplates. That is the message therein.

I should not be asked by the Hon. Member if I support every comment, made by any participant, around that communique. It is certain that the communique was as a result of a compromise, and that is the way it should be interpreted.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

STATEMENT MADE BY UNITED STATES PRESIDENT

Miss Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Madam Speaker, the quote which I just read to the Prime Minister was not in the Summit text. It was the comment of the President afterwards, in fact the next day afterwards. Again, President Reagan has said that, in his opinion, there should be deployment first, serious negotiations after, a one-track policy. Can the Prime Minister tell me, perhaps, whether he agrees with this or whether the other Summit leaders agreed with what is essentially now a one-track policy, as far as President Reagan is concerned? While he is standing, Madam Speaker, could he tell us whether the Summit leaders engaged at all in the discussion of merging the two talks, the INF and the START talks?

• (1425)

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I would venture to say that President Reagan's statement as quoted by the Hon. Member is not an abandonment of the two-track policy. It is perhaps a view of the future that President Reagan and, I must say, some other participants at the Summit have, that the Soviets will not talk seriously until we begin deployment. That is a view held by some members of NATO and no doubt by others. It is not the view that was held by the consensus at NATO, nor by myself representing Canada. But it does not mean that President Reagan has abandoned the two-track policy. It means that he thinks that no matter how hard we try the Soviets will not agree and that we will have to deploy before they take us seriously. That is his view and it is shared by other participants. It is not mine, but I repeat it is not a contradiction of the two-track policy; it is more in the area of speculation.

Miss Jewett: I guess it depends on one's interpretation of the words "contribute constructively" to the success of the negotiations.

MEASUREMENT OF SUCCESS OF NEGOTIATIONS

Miss Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Madam Speaker, since the Prime Minister does not want to address the, I think, very important question of merging the intermediate and strategic talks and negotiations, then I will ask him concerning the success of the negotiations in Geneva. Since the Prime Minister and the Government now tie in the question of testing or not testing the Cruise very closely to the outcome of the Geneva negotiations, can the Prime Minister say what a successful outcome would be? What are the objective criteria for measuring the success of the Geneva negotiations?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I would want to reassure the Hon. Member that I was not attempting to avoid the last part of the previous question relating to merging of the two talks. I would have to say that there was not a great deal of discussion about it. It came up incidentally in the discussion, and I think it is fair to say that some participants think that, sooner or later, both talks will have to be merged and that we will be dealing with the INF and the START talks in the same series of meetings. However, that is once again conjecture about the future. There is an historic difference in that the INF decision was a NATO decision taken in December, 1979. It was taken by the previous Government and it has been supported by our Government. Therefore, we are proceeding with these talks now.

As to what will happen in the future, I personally think we should be giving greater encouragement to a conference on disarmament in Europe, an idea which has been canvassed at Madrid. I think it would be a very good thing if negotiations could take place in Europe, so that those people like the Hon. Member who do not think that the Americans are negotiating to her taste would at least have the reassurance that many of the Europeans do share President Reagan's view on the subject of her previous question.

As to the—

Miss Jewett: Objective criteria.

Mr. Trudeau: As to the latter part, Madam Speaker, I cannot give any objective criteria. I think any negotiation which resulted in complete abandonment of the SS-20s would be ideal, but that is the zero option which does not seem realistic to us. I would hope, and the language of the communique addresses this question, that discussions will permit a level of deployment agreed to in the discussions, or of non-deployment agreed to in the discussions. The communique, I think, would be very unwise, and I would be very unwise, to put forward any figure at this particular time because it would be another step at a bargaining table where I am not present. I do not think it is necessary now even for the United States to put a specific figure on the table. I hope we will be hearing very specific proposals, rejected or accepted, before the end of December.

MAISLIN TRANSPORT LTD.—STATEMENTS BY DEPARTMENTAL OFFICIAL

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Leader of the Opposition): I have a question to ask the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce following that asked by the Opposition House Leader. The Minister cautioned the Opposition House Leader with respect to raising matters which might affect publicly traded shares of Maislin. He should perhaps look to his own Department and give that same caution to an official of his Department who is quoted in this morning's Gazette as saying:

—"unless something very extraordinary happens, they will run out (of money) in the near future"—"probably" in June.

"Receivership is a possibility"—

Is the Minister in possession of that kind of information, or is the official in his Department, who has been quoted in this morning's Gazette, talking through a hole in his hat?

Hon. Ed Lumley (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce and Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): I am sure the Hon. Member, who is a former Minister, is quite conscious of the fact that we would all like to know about these unnamed officials or spokesmen who are always being quoted in the press. I just think it is more responsible for Hon. Members on both sides of the House not to discuss confidential commercial information. Also, to my knowledge, the reported statements have not yet been fully audited and sent to the shareholders. Thus, I think it is irresponsible for Hon. Members on either side of the House to comment on these alleged figures.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER DENY STATEMENTS

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Leader of the Opposition): It is very interesting, in view of the nature of the replies we have been receiving from the Minister in response to questions asked by Hon. Members on this side of the House—he appears to be ducking, weaving, and evading any answers—to find that the article on Maislin today appears beside another referring to a "so-slippery customer", and that is what his answers appear to be.

Will the Minister deign to tell us whether the company will run out of money in the near future? Is that his view? Will he tell us whether it is his view that receivership is a possibility? Will he tell us whether his official was correct in saying that there would be a shortfall soon? Will he either confirm these statements or, for the benefit of the Maislin company which he purports to protect by his answers, will he make here today a public denial that any of these assertions attributed to his officials have any accuracy whatsoever? Surely he owes it to the Maislin Company he seeks to protect to clear the air, either by saying that his official is absolutely wrong or that there is some substance to those assertions.

Hon. Ed Lumley (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce and Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): First of all, Madam Speaker, the last people in the world whom I would be worry in about ducking or evading are those in the Official Opposition. Second, I will revert back to my original answer. It is not only the company but also there are 1,400 Canadian employees involved. There are shareholders involved. There are all kinds of sub-suppliers involved. I am surprised that the Leader of the Opposition, who claims to be a very responsible parliamentarian, would ask a question of such nature.

Mr. Jarvis: Also involved are Canadian taxpayers who have $34 million at stake.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

CONTINGENT LIABILITY OF TAXPAYERS

Hon. Bill Jarvis (Perth): I would like to ask the Minister one question. It has absolutely nothing to do with the trading of shares, or employees, or anything else, but, rather, concerns the taxpayer. A guarantee of $34 million of those loans means that the taxpayer may be called to pay, on the basis of the contingent liability, $34 million. How does the Minister, who is the Minister responsible, rate that contingent liability to the Canadian taxpayer—high risk, medium risk, or low risk?

Hon. Ed Lumley (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce and Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): Madam Speaker, when those financial statements are tabled before the shareholders and the Ontario Securities Commission—

Mr. Jarvis: Just rate it, Ed.

Mr. Lumley: —the Hon. Member will be able to make his own judgment in that regard.

Mr. Nielsen: Slippery customer.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

ISRAEL BONDS PROMOTION CAMPAIGN

Mr. Ian Watson (Châteauguay): Madam Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister.

Mr. Nielsen: Of which you have given him notice.

Mr. Watson: As the Prime Minister is aware, General Sharon is the former Israeli Defence Minister who possessed ultimate responsibility for Israel's obligation under the terms of the Geneva Convention to protect the inhabitants of occupied territories, the man whom an Israeli commission has labelled as having responsibility for the massacre of unarmed, innocent civilians, estimated independently as amounting to more than 2,500 men, women and children. This brave Israeli General will be at the Ritz-Carleton in Montreal tonight to sell Israel bonds.

Leaving aside the disgraceful lack of sensitivity of the organizations which invited Sharon to Canada, I wonder if the Prime Minister might care to offer any advice to those Canadians who may be thinking of purchasing Israel bonds which, in the light of present Israeli settlement policies on the West Bank, are a wonderful investment in world instability and Middle East disorder.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Refer them to Jim Fleming.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member is asking me for advice. I am afraid that, concerning this question of the Middle East, I would not be able to offer advise just at this particular point which would be satisfactory to both sides.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. McKinnon: That has been the answer for 2,000 years.

FINANCE

WILLIAMSBURG SUMMIT COMMUNIQUÉ ON REDUCING GOVERNMENT DEFICITS

Miss Pat Carney (Vancouver Centre): Madam Speaker, my question is addressed to the Minister of Finance. The Minister represented Canada at the Williamsburg Summit where Canada and six other nations issued a joint communique which committed them to reducing budget deficits in order to reduce interest rates, and also to constrain Government spending. We welcome that, of course, because that is the position of the Conservative Party. However, can the Minister explain how he intends to carry out his Summit commitment when his own deficit will increase by 50 per cent this year over the last year's published estimates, and when his own Government expenditures are increasing at twice the rate of inflation?

Mr. Fisher: Same question as yesterday, word for word.

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, I thank God the leaders of other countries have more foresight than the Conservative Party in Canada. None of the countries concerned is talking in terms of immediate reduction of their deficits. They have all agreed that, whether it is in the United States, or Canada, or other countries, this action would take time and would have to be done on a gradual basis in the medium term. Therefore there was unanimous agreement that we should take steps to reduce the Government deficits and, as the communique states, particularly through control of Government expenditures.

I indicated in my budget of April 19, a copy of which I will be very happy to send to the hon. lady, that the Government of Canada has indeed forecasted that the growth of Government expenditures would not exceed the trend growth of the GNP over the next few years. Therefore the Government deficit would gradually and steadily decline in proportion to GNP over the next four years. We will continue to address this issue seriously, but responsibly, and not in a savage way at the expense of the people in this country who need help and support at the present time.

GOVERNMENT POLICY

Miss Pat Carney (Vancouver Centre): My supplementary question is also directed to the Minister of Finance. I find his words to be inconsistent with the track record of the Government, which has managed to double the accumulated net debt in the last three years, and plans to double it again in the next three.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Miss Carney: Speaking for Canada, the Minister of Finance told the U.S. that it must reduce its budgetary deficit of about $200 billion in order to reduce interest rates. He warned that continuing high rates of interest could choke off economic recovery. Of course this is what we have been saying about his own budget deficit. Why is the Minister urging the U.S. to reduce its deficit while he is expanding his own deficit here in Canada? Why is he not willing to practise what he preaches?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member will be happy to learn that between 1975 and 1981 the Canadian Government, this Government, did reduce the share of the GNP taken by a budget deficit. We achieved a very good record of dealing with this issue on a gradual basis. With the recession which has developed in the last three years, contrary to many other countries, contrary to the advice from a number of Conservative spokesmen on the other side, we have not cut into the social security safety net in this country. We have maintained our help for those in need.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Lalonde: This is what we have done. The deficit is high. We have indicated that it is high and it will come down only gradually over the next few years as recovery takes place.

Concerning the deficit, I have already indicated that we would cut the financial requirements of the Government, in terms of proportion to the Gross National Product, by half over the next four years. As I said, we will continue to address this issue responsibly.

As far as the United States is concerned, it is indeed facing a very serious problem because, not only is its deficit large, but the total amount of money required from the financial markets is huge, over $200 billion, in an economy which has a savings rate which is about half of our savings rate in Canada. I have had discussions this very morning with representatives of private bankers in the United States who are also stressing the importance of the sheer size and magnitude of the U.S. deficit.

We have not told the American authorities or the six other countries that the deficit was not important in Canada. We said we should act together in parallel. I am very happy that we will have the full support and co-operation of all the participants in the Summit in that regard. It has been a very remarkable Summit indeed.

LABOUR CONDITIONS

LEVEL OF UNEMPLOYMENT

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Right Hon. Prime Minister. After reading and listening to his comments just prior to the Summit, during, and following the Summit, I am sure many Canadians were disappointed when the Prime Minister really failed to mention those people who were suffering the most as a result of the recession, namely, the two million unemployed in Canada. Does the Prime Minister believe that two million unemployed in Canada constitute the cost of the recovery process that we simply must accept as a fact?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): No, Madam Speaker. If the Hon. Member were to look at the budget and co-operate in its adoption, he would be very happy to see that the $2.4 billion in particular that the Minister of Finance has set aside for immediate job creation through the building of infrastructure in Canada is a very sizable sum which will create jobs in the immediate future. I am informed that the spending of the $2.4 billion has already been allotted and announced. That is creating jobs now.

In the medium term there is another $2.4 billion as an incentive to the private sector to create more lasting jobs—

Mr. Lalonde: And the Crow.

Mr. Trudeau: The Minister of Finance also reminds me that there is some $3.4 billion we have allocated if we can get the Crow legislation adopted by the House, which would create jobs throughout the whole country and, in particular, modernize the infrastructure of transportation in the West.

EFFECT ON ECONOMY

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Madam Speaker, I want to say to the Prime Minister that, in spite of the sums of money that he has mentioned, there are many of us in the House who feel that those sums are inadequate to deal effectively with the problem. Many of us feel that the problem is much more severe than is being admitted today.

Does the Prime Minister believe that economic recovery in Canada can take place with the albatross of two million jobless around the neck of the economy? Is it possible with two million unemployed?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the question seems to be somewhat tautological to me. If we had an improvement of the economic situation, and the signs are there, we will obviously be reducing the number unemployed. The Minister of Finance has made it quite clear that this will take time. Therefore the question does not seem very meaningful to me. Of course we can have recovery with a million and a half unemployed. It is happening now. But the answer to whether we will be happy with that measure of recovery is no. We would now want a recovery which would also eventually create jobs for this million and a half unemployed.

FISHERIES

INQUIRY WHETHER PROVINCE OF QUEBEC WILL RETURN BOATS TO MAGDALEN ISLANDS FISHERMEN

Mrs. Eva Côté (Rimouski-Témiscouata): Madam Speaker, I am not so sure whether I should ask this question because it is directed to the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans who . . . has now arrived in the House! We all know that the Quebec

Minister of Agriculture and Fisheries has seized six fishing vessels and sold them to a Quebec Crown Corporation for a nominal price, and that he has also placed under trusteeship the Madelipêche fish processing plant, which is owned by Magdalen Islands fishermen. Could the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans inform the House whether the provincial Government has now agreed to make available to Magdalen Islands fishermen the six boats they need now if they are to use the fishing permits granted by his Department?

Hon. Pierre De Bané (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Madam Speaker, first of all, I would like to thank the Hon. Member for her question, and second, perhaps I may be allowed to recapitulate the facts. It was the end of April, and the fishing season was already well underway, when the Quebec Government first took action against the Pêcheurs-Unis by seizing one of their assets. Needless to say, as soon as one creditor demands his due, the others will follow suit the next day, and it is because of this negative and, I should perhaps say, uncharitable action that the Government of Canada intervened the very next day by asking creditors for an extension. The only action the Government of Quebec took against the Pêcheurs-Unis was to seize assets, although as a creditor it was carrying not more than 5 per cent of the unpaid debts of Madelipêche. I am very pleased to be able to inform the House that all other plants that could be reopened, were reopened with the help of the Canadian Government alone. We still have the case of Madelipêche, and as soon as I have made sure that once action is taken, none of the other plants will close down, the problem will be settled. I have to consider all the problems of the Pêcheurs-Unis and not just a single creditor who wants to seize assets. I am therefore pleased to inform the Hon. Member that negotiations are proceeding, and I hope that very shortly, we shall find a solution to the Madelipêche problem that will not be a threat to all the other plants that are still open. Many people tend to forget that all—

Madam Speaker: Order, please.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

WILLIAMSBURG SUMMIT—REFERENCE TO REDUCING THREAT OF WAR—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Douglas Roche (Edmonton South): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. It again concerns the Williamsburg Summit.

Given that a new Gallup Poll shows that 53 per cent of Canadians believe that present Soviet-American tensions may lead to world war, can the Prime Minister state what the Canadian Government will do to fulfil a key sentence in the Williamsburg communiqué:

> We commit ourselves to devote our full political resources to reducing the threat of war.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I think the role that the Canadian delegation played at Williamsburg, in trying to convey to the Soviet Union and the industrial democracies the notion that we wanted serious negotiations, was the beginning of playing that role. If there are any other ways in which we can play that role, I would be happy to entertain suggestions from the Hon. Member.

Mr. Roche: I will take up the Prime Minister's offer.

PALME COMMISSION REPORT

Mr. Douglas Roche (Edmonton South): Madam Speaker, in its arms discussions did the Williamsburg Summit consider the very important Palme Commission Report as a basis for nuclear arms compromise? As the Prime Minister knows, the Palme Commission's Report was signed by representatives of the Soviet Union, the United States, and Third World countries. Did the Summit consider in particular that section which urged Soviet-American agreement on rough parity in medium range nuclear forces at a level which means that NATO will forgo the introduction of new medium range missiles in Europe?

Finally, will the Prime Minister accept the invitation conveyed to him recently by Secretary Andropov to visit Moscow, and use that opportunity to convey to the USSR administration the united front adopted by the Economic Summit at Williamsburg?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, as far as getting that message to Secretary Andropov is concerned, I think it is a fair assumption to make that he must have been informed of the message written at Williamsburg. However, if more assurances were needed, I think it is known that Chancellor Kohl of the Federal Republic of Germany will be visiting Secretary Andropov on July 5. I am sure if any emphasis were needed of the seriousness of our intent, Chancellor Kohl would be able to speak for the events which took place at Williamsburg.

Returning to the earlier part of the suggestion as to political determination, no doubt the Hon. Member heard me, in answer to an earlier question, saying for one thing I express the hope that the conference on disarmament in Europe, which is being promoted at the Madrid conference, is something we may see taking place even before December, and perhaps as early as November, but of course that will depend upon the participants at Madrid.

EDUCATION

AMENDMENT OF CANADA STUDENT LOANS ACT

Mr. Walter McLean (Waterloo): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State. On Friday, March 18, the Minister announced that the Government was going to make changes to the Canada Student Loans Act. These changes would finally provide guaranteed loans to needy part-time students, implement an interest relief plan for unemployed graduates, and increase weekly student loan limits from $56.25 to $100. At that time the Minister said he hoped to introduce legislation shortly for quick passage. When will this legislation be presented to the House?

[Translation]

Hon. Serge Joyal (Secretary of State): Madam Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for his question. The legislation is now ready. We have already discussed it with the ten provincial Ministers of Education, who indicated their agreement in a telegram sent to me in April, a copy of which was sent to all Hon. Members. I have told the Government House Leader and my colleagues opposite that we are now ready to proceed, and I understand that the Government House Leader is now discussing the matter with the other leaders to determine when this legislation should be introduced so that we may dispose of it before the House adjourns at the end of June.

[English]

NECESSITY TO DEAL EXPEDITIOUSLY WITH AMENDING LEGISLATION

Mr. Walter McLean (Waterloo): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Government House Leader. The Secretary of State indicated that the groundwork has been completed for the legislation to amend the Canada Student Loans Act, and the Minister also indicated the urgency the Provinces give to this legislation in terms of planning for the Fall. Also, a number of student bodies across the country are concerned because students wish to make plans, and need the increased capacity for funding for the Fall.

When will we have this legislation before the House, in light of the commitment of the Secretary of State that the amendments will be tabled at the first opportunity and the House seems prepared to receive the amendments and to deal with them speedily?

Hon. Yvon Pinard (President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, I had a House Leaders' meeting earlier today. On the one hand the House Leader of the NDP told me that he was very receptive to that kind of Bill and that it would receive very quick passage if it were introduced. In so far as the House Leader of the Conservative Party was concerned, he also had a very positive reaction but needed to consult. That is normal. I suppose that is what he will be doing very shortly. If I have two answers that would make it possible for that kind of legislation to be dealt with in the maximum of one day, I will very seriously consider dealing with the Bill before the end of June.

STATUS OF WOMEN

WAGE PARITY IN PUBLIC SERVICE

Mrs. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister responsible for the Status of Women. The federal Government should be sure that its own house is in order before the Minister claims to be leading on equal pay for work of equal value. Last year the wage gap in the federal Public Service increased by 12 per cent and federal employees had to launch their own personal complaints with the Canadian Human Rights Commission. Obviously the system itself must be changed.

What federal Government resources have been assigned to review job and pay classifications so that equal pay for work of equal value is a reality for all women public servants, and not just a paper promise?

Hon. Judy Erola (Minister of State (Mines)): Madam Speaker, indeed it is not a paper promise. If the Hon. Member were to review some of the most recent settlements, she would know that the federal Government has put its money where its mouth is. In fact the last settlement was something like $17 million. I would suggest to the Hon. Member that that is not a paper promise; it is big money.

Also I would suggest to her that this sort of legislation to which I refer must take place in all Provinces, if we are to see that wage gap reduced. At the federal level, I would point out that that wage gap is far less than what it is for average wages of women across the country. That is where we must make the change.

Mrs. Mitchell: I think the Minister has missed the point. It is a systemic change that is needed.

DELAY IN HUMAN RIGHTS COMMISSION DECISIONS

Mrs. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question on the same issue is directed to the Minister of Justice. When equal pay complaints are lodged with the Canadian Human Rights Commission, months, and sometimes years, pass before women are compensated. A complaint on behalf of 7,400 Bell Canada telephone operators was filed in June, 1981, and is still in progress. Will the Minister of Justice agree that the understaffing and underbudgeting of the Canadian Human Rights Commission are responsible for this hold-up and that justice delayed is justice denied? What will he do to change this?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, I will take notice of the question. The Minister of Justice was talking to a colleague in the House just behind the Hon. Member, so he will give an answer later.

THE ECONOMY

REBUTTAL OF TELEVISION NEWS REPORT

Mr. Leonard Hopkins (Renfrew-Nipissing-Pembroke): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Right Hon. Prime Minister. Several comments about the economic recovery of the seven leading industrialized countries have been emerging from the Williamsburg Summit meeting. I understand there is an internal American report which indicates that Canada's economic recovery is second only to that of the United States. In light of this, would the Prime Minister comment on one television news report which indicated that, with the exception of Canada and France, the economies of the industrialized nations represented at Williamsburg appeared to be on the road to recovery? Would the Prime Minister also comment on the downward trend of inflation and the comparative financial stability of the seven most industrialized countries?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member asks me to comment. I could only say that, if indeed there was a report of that nature, it is very seriously misrepresenting the truth and the facts. As everyone at Williamsburg and, I would say, anywhere else, realizes, the recovery in the United States is taking hold and it is taking hold in Canada, but there are some countries in Europe where that is not as certain. I think it is fair to say that most of the participants would be rather envious of Canada's economic performance in the recent half-year.

CROWN CORPORATIONS

CANADAIR—PRESIDENT'S COMMITTEE STATEMENT

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister responsible for social development who replies for Canadair and other companies of that nature. The Minister will know that in the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs on November 16 the Hon. Member for La Prairie received an answer from the chief executive officer of Canadair Limited with respect to the Lycoming matter. He said:

> We are very happy with the Lycoming engine and the performance of the company on deliveries.

If that statement is the truth, why is the Government of Canada financing a law suit for over $100 million against Avco Corporation of Greenwich, Connecticut?

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, I find the question superfluous. First, I cannot answer for the person who made that statement before the Standing Committee; second, I have not seen any such statement, and third, after due consideration, Canadair autorities have decided to take legal proceedings against the manufacturer of these engines, and I imagine that if they made that decision, they had very good reasons to do so.

[English]

PRESIDENT'S PENSION BENEFITS

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Madam Speaker, I take it from the Minister's answer that Mr. Frederick Kearns, President and chief executive office of Canadair Limited, lied to the parliamentary committee. May I point out to the Minister that he not only repeated that statement to myself but to the Hon. Member for York-Peel. He repeated that misinformation or lie three times. He did what St. Peter did. Would he tell us how Frederick Kearns is allowed to retire early and receive pension benefits of over $100,000 per year, with that performance and that representation to the House of Commons?

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, if the Hon. Member wants to make charges against certain people, he may do so, but he will then have to live with it. On the other hand, the Hon. Member is well aware that the Standing Committees of the House will have the oportunity next week to consider estimates, at which time Hon. Members will be able to summon certain witnesses to appear. The Hon. Member may then summon this particular individual to appear in order to question him and ask him to explain his statements.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Lewis: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order having to do with House business. I would advise the Government House Leader that I have had an opportunity to consult with the Hon. Member for Waterloo (Mr. McLean). The Government House Leader may have inadvertently disclosed something that came up in the House Leaders' meeting; I do not suggest he did it deliberately. However, if the Government will introduce the Act to handle student loans, and extension of it, we will be able to compare it with the draft Act. Once that is done, I am sure we can have a speedy decision on the actual Act.

Mr. Pinard: Madam Speaker, we will consider tabling that Bill very soon in light of the first reaction, which seems to be positive. It was not by inadvertence that I referred to this discussion since the question was asked of me by a Member of the Hon. Member's caucus. I took it for granted that they had talked together and that I was free to refer to the discussion. Otherwise, I would not have expected a question to be asked by one of his colleagues on this matter.

PETITIONS

MR. SKELLY—ABSENTEE BALLOTING SYSTEM

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Madam Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition from a large number of women in Delta who form an auxiliary to the fishermens' association that the Government of Canada and the Chief Electoral Officer place within the Canada Elections Act an absentee balloting procedure so that people are not disenfranchised during the federal election voting period.

MR. ANGUISH—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Doug Anguish (The Battlefords-Meadow Lake): Madam Speaker, I have the duty and honour to present a petition this afternoon from people mostly in the Province of Alberta who have asked me to present it to the Honourable the House of Commons in Ottawa in Parliament assembled.

The petition of the undersigned residents of the Province of Alberta who now exercise the right to present a grievance humbly sheweth that the removal of the Crow rate will see its replacement by rates that will impose higher freight costs of five times the present Crow rate and higher by 1990. Such increases are being imposed at a time when prices for producers' grain are now at 1974 levels and detailed calculations show that a rate of 5.1 times the Crow rate would cost the community of St. Paul, Alberta some $1,197,200 per year by 1990 in payments for grain freight that would otherwise have stayed in that community based on the actual deliveries in the 1980-81 crop year.

Wherefore, the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to maintain the Crow rate in perpetuity as presently guaranteed by statute, and as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. HEAP—REQUEST FOR LANDED IMMIGRANT STATUS FOR MRS. ROSELINE VINCENT

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Madam Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition from residents of Hull who humbly declare that 28-year-old Haitian Roseline Vincent entered Canada in 1977, that shortly after she filed a request for permanent resident status with the Department of Employment and Immigration, which has yet to reply, that this women is now being threatened with deportation, that her return to Haiti would be to her prejudice.

Wherefore your petitioners humbly pray and call upon the Parliament of Canada to grant her the status of landed immigrant.

In duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. RIIS—PORNOGRAPHIC FILMS ON PAY TV

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Madam Speaker, it is my privilege to present a petition on behalf of a number of individuals in the Kamloops-Shuswap constituency concerned about the First Choice Pay Television pornography showing. They encourage the House of Commons to consider a Bill that would add the word "sex" to Section 3 of the Broadcasting Act in an effort to remove pornographic and sexually violent films from television programming.

MR. ANGUISH—TESTING OF CRUISE MISSILE ON CANADIAN SOIL

Mr. Doug Anguish (The Battlefords-Meadow Lake): Madam Speaker, I have a petition which I would like to present to the House this afternoon from residents of the community of St. Walburg in my constituency to the Honourable House of Commons of Ottawa in Parliament assembled.

The petition of the undersigned residents of the Province of Saskatchewan, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that Your Honourable House will therefore provide a remedy, humbly sheweth that the Cruise missile is designed to carry a nuclear warhead, that the Cruise is a first-strike weapon rather than a defensive one, that there can be no winners in a nuclear war. Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to press for compliance with the Prime Minister's strategy of suffocation as set out in the United Nations special session on disarmament—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I must remind the Hon. Member that he should read solely the title of the petition. He is not allowed to expand on the petition, nor to argue it. This is the second petition he has presented today. Both presentations were much, much too long, more than the Speaker can accept.

Mr. Anguish: Madam Speaker, in the past I believe that your ruling on presentation of petitions was that they must be within a period of one minute. I certainly have not taken anywhere near a minute.

Madam Speaker: I will then have to rule on the number of words that can be included, because some Members are really taking advantage of the time that should be allotted to petitions. I think I will consider that for next week.

Mr. Anguish: —thus retaining and fortifying Canada's role in the world as a peacemaker rather than an aggressor. We, your petitioners, are indignant over the Prime Minister's agreement to allow American testing a weapons at Canadian locations, believing that, rather than being a stabilizing factor, this will tend to further destabilize an already precarious balance of nuclear terror between the superpowers.

Madam Speaker: Order. I would invite the Hon. Member to file the rest with the Clerk. Is the Hon. Member rising on a new petition?

Mr. Anguish: Yes, Madam Speaker.

MR. ANGUISH—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Doug Anguish (The Battlefords-Meadow Lake): Madam Speaker, I have a petition I would like to present this afternoon. Incidentally, all members of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool have signed this petition. They ask that western farmers not pay anywhere beyond the statutory Crow rate. I would like to present this petition on behalf of the petitioners. Wherefore, the undersigned your petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to maintain the statutory Crow rate.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. David Smith (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: Nos. 4,770, 4,819 and 4,875.

[Text]

DEPRECIABLE ASSETS OF RAILWAY COMPANIES

Question No. 4,770—Mr. Malone:

1. Are railway companies allowed to depreciate grain hopper cars for tax purposes?

2. Are the companies allowed to depreciate grain hopper cars for tax purposes that were purchased by (a) the federal Government (b) provincial Governments?

3. Are the companies allowed to depreciate costs incurred in the rehabilitation of railways?

4. Are the companies allowed to depreciate costs incurred of rehabilitating railways that were paid by the Government?

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): 1. Yes.

2. Not if the grain hopper cars are owned by the federal or provincial Governments. However, if the railway companies received a grant for the purchase of grain hopper cars the amount of the grant would reduce the capital cost of the property that may be depreciated by the railway companies.

3. Yes, to the extent that the costs incurred by the railway companies relating to the acquisition of depreciable assets are not reduced by government grants.

4. No.

DSS—CENTRAL TRAVEL SERVICE

Question No. 4,819—Mr. MacKay:

1. With reference to the recent increases in travel allowances for the Public Service, what was the amount paid for flights to the Central Travel Service for the period ending June 1982, minus the 1 per cent commission which has been agreed upon, for Air Canada and CP Air?

2. How is the 1 per cent commission allocated after it is deducted by the Department of Supply and Services and does it go back to general revenue?

3. Is there any difference in the arrangements made with CP Air as opposed to the arrangements made with Air Canada?

Hon. J.-J. Blais (Minister of Supply and Services): 1. For our first accounting period (April 9 to June 29, 1982) the amount paid for flights after deduction of the 1 per cent collection fee was $24,752,634. Of this amount Air Canada received $21,308,073 and CP Air received $3,444,561.

2. The 1 per cent service fee covers the collection and payment services rendered by the Central Payment Services of DSS. As such, it remains in the Supply Revolving Fund which is an account in the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

3. No.

CANADIAN BUSINESS AND INDUSTRY INTERNATIONAL ADVISORY COMMITTEE

Question No. 4,875—Mr. Mazankowski:

1. Is there a Canadian Business and Industry International Advisory Committee and, if so (a) who are the members (b) what is the (i) background or expertise (ii) term of appointment of each member (c) what remuneration, such as salary or travel expenses, do the members receive and, for the length of each appointment to date, what amount did each member receive (d) what other funding, if any, is provided by the Government?

2. (a) What are the terms of reference of the Committee (b) what matters did it consider in the fiscal year 1982-83 (c) how often did it meet and how often is it required to meet (d) what reports and/or recommendations did the Committee publish in the fiscal year 1982-83?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): The Canadian Business and Industry International Advisory Council (CBIIAC) is a voluntary private sector organization which does not receive direct or indirect funding from the federal Government. Questions pertaining to the terms of reference, composition and activities of the Advisory Council would, therefore, be most appropriately directed to the organization itself for reply.

NARCOTIC CONTROL ACT

AMENDMENT RESPECTING THERAPEUTIC USE OF HEROIN

Hon. Walter Baker (Nepean-Carleton) moved that Bill C-684, an Act to amend the Narcotic Control Act (therapeutic use of heroin), be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Health, Welfare and Social Affairs.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I would first like to express my thanks to the authorities of the House who arrange Private Members' Business for allowing my Bill to come forward today. This Bill received first reading in the House on April 29, 1983 and its purpose is as set forth in its title. It is to amend the Narcotic Control Act to allow for the therapeutic use of heroin by designated physicians, particularly those in cancer clinics, to alleviate pain for those who are terminally ill and suffering from cancer.

I do not think there has been another Bill like this introduced in the House of Commons. There has been legislation introduced in other jurisdictions, but it is this jurisdiction which has the right to deal with the matter.

For historical purposes, because of a treaty, undertaking or agreement through the World Health Organization in 1954, heroin, which had been previously used as a prescriptive drug by physicians, was denied to those physicians for any purpose. Recently, there has been a strong feeling growing within the public of Canada and within some segments of the medical profession that those who fight against cancer should have every possible armament and every possible arrow in their quiver to relieve the anguish and the pain of the terminally ill.

If I may, I want to pay tribute to Dr. Kenneth Walker of Niagara Falls who, in a column under the pen name of Gifford-Jones, has raised the issue of the therapeutic use of heroin. Indeed, he has a petition which, at last count, was signed by 15,000 Canadians that he knows of who have indicated their support. I want to pay tribute to him for keeping this issue in the forefront of our minds.

I also want to pay tribute to another group of people. I became interested in the subject of the therapeutic use of heroin for a very personal reason. My wife has beaten cancer twice. During her fight with cancer, I came to know and to meet and to talk to many people who were suffering from cancer in the real sense of the word. Fortunately, we are thankful that my wife was not in that position. I talked to these people and their families, to members of the medical profession, members of the nursing profession, and to many other Canadians. I believe that confession is a good thing from time to time, and I confess to the House that this is what raised my interest in this subject.

In 1982 I sent out a questionnaire to some 40,000 homes in my riding, the constituency of Nepean-Carleton, which is the same as any other constituency. The return on that questionnaire was unprecedented. Of the 40,000 questionnaires sent, there were 10,000 responses. That means that 25 per cent of the families in my constituency responded. Of those 10,000 responses, 92 per cent—I repeat, 92 per cent—of the people agreed with the proposition that physicians should be armed with every possible weapon in the fight against cancer.

I want to tell you, Mr. Speaker, that letters I received from people who were then suffering the anguish of cancer, people who were watching loved ones suffer the anguish of cancer, hardened my resolve to bring this matter before the House of Commons at some time because I believe that when these questions are asked and responses given, one has a duty to the people who responded. I had frankly hoped that this session of Parliament would be over and we would be into a new session, and perhaps that will be the case, I do not know; but I could not wait any longer to bring this Bill forward.

Opinions in the country are divided on the subject of the therapeutic use of heroin. There are divisions of opinion in the medical profession, but the very fact that there are divisions of opinion indicates that in the medical profession and the nursing profession there are those who professionally feel that heroin is a help to the terminally ill, and there are certainly members of the public who share those feelings. In a few moments I will tell the House about some of the things that people have written to me about that indicate the depth of feeling there is in at least one constituency, and I now believe that that depth of feeling would be the same across the country.

I want to pay tribute to the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Miss Bégin) who I believe has within her a broad streak of humanity. A year or so ago, the Minister of National Health and Welfare commissioned an in-house inquiry into the whole serious question of the methods available for the alleviation of pain. She consulted with Dr. Kenneth Walker who came to Ottawa, and she has no doubt consulted privately with the Department. Just recently she made an announcement in the House that, at long last, there is sufficient doubt about the position of the law in Canada at the moment and there is indeed sufficient evidence to permit a period of experimentation with respect to testing the appropriateness of the use of heroin, not with all patients but at least with some patients, to alleviate the horrible anguish that has been described to me and seen by other Members of the House of Commons, and indeed by almost every family in Canada who has had a friend or relative affected by this disease. That experimentation will now be carried out and will be worth while. It is because of the people who have responded to me, because of the work of Dr. Kenneth Walker and because of the interest and concern shown by many people inside and outside of the House of Commons that the Minister has exhibited her broad streak of humanity.

Medical opinions on either side of the question could be quoted until they come out of our ears. I do not intend to do that, although I have those opinions in my files. I want to read to you, Mr. Speaker, in capsule if I may, a letter that I received from a physician in my constituency which I think is exemplary of the situation that exists. It is a letter from Dr. Colin D. B. Cunningham on the letterhead of the Queensway-Carleton Hospital in the City of Nepean. He wrote:

> I am a physician and trained in Edinburgh, Scotland qualifying in 1966. Since then I have done various residencies and practiced in medicine, surgery, obstetrics and general practice. More recently I trained in diagnostic radiology and since coming to Canada in 1973, this has been my specialty.
> However, prior to training in radiology in the other branches of medicine in which I have practiced I had many occasions in which I could and did use heroin. As you know this is available as a prescription drug in the United Kingdom—

● (1520)

By the way, it is available in about 37 other countries in the world.

> —and we used it not infrequently for patients in severe pain either by itself or in conjunction with other drugs in a wonderful concoction known as the Brompton Cocktail, the patients most being in need of course being the late or terminal cancer patients. As I am sure you are aware the extreme pain that some cancer patients have to endure has to be seen to be believed.
> Quite frankly it was with some horror when I immigrated to Canada that I discovered that this drug was not available here. I do find it totally incomprehensible that such a valuable drug should be unavailable for those who need it so badly in so many cases of painful illness and my opinion is that its availability or not as a prescription drug does not make the slightest difference to its availability on the streets in the case of drug rings and pushers. I would suggest that its availability as a prescription drug would not in any significant way increase the number of heroin addicts due to misuse of the drug and even if so I would question the morality of not having the drug available for those that need it in order to attempt to reduce the number of drug addicts on the street or elsewhere.
> There is no other drug quite like heroin or is as effective as heroin in suppressing pain and discomfort and I feel most strongly that it should be available as a prescription drug to alleviate the terrible pain and suffering of some late or terminal cancer patients and others.
> I would be prepared to support privately and publicly any move or legislation to permit the use of this drug in this country on a prescription basis.

I have had letters from professors, universities and physicians who have said that this is a medical problem. I have written back to say yes, it is a medical problem, but it is also a social problem. Whether we are talking about the medical profession or the legal profession, the public has the right to look into the operation of those professions and to have something to say about the way they are practised and what government policy is. That is an opinion that I advance to the House in the few minutes I have with respect to the positive use of this drug.

I want to read another letter from a man in my constituency who died painfully from cancer. He wrote:

> I wish that every person negatively involved would feel the excruciating pain a terminal cancer patient has to go through until he or she dies.

He goes on to say:

> Where are all our MPs and MLAs who send out monthly form letters telling us all the good things they are doing for us? When asked to take a stand on this issue, all they give are evasive statements.
> Are the politicians and the CMA afraid that a terminal cancer patient will become addicted to heroin? And if so, what's the difference: 99.9 per cent are going to die shortly anyway.

That man died shortly after the letter appeared in the newspaper. Mr. Speaker, I cannot quote all the letters but I am prepared to show them to any Member of the House. The replies are typical of the responses that accompanied the questionnaire. I have letters from nurses and nursing assistants. The night after the Bill was introduced in the House a nurse came to me at a community association dance in Barrhaven, grabbed me by the arm and said; "Mr. Baker, that is a good Bill. It is necessary and I hope that Parliament will deal with it. I see them day after day. I stay with them night after night. Regardless of what people say I have seen that the existing therapy is not always effective. More should be done." If there were one, two or three people who could have their pain alleviated where it could not be alleviated in other ways, then I think this is worth while.

In answer to the question whether this should happen, a registered nurse wrote as follows:

> Most definitely!! Hurry up about it! The agony suffered by many is inhumane—If morphine, cocaine, demerol are considered narcotics do give the physicians the opportunity to offer relief in pain control if the others are ineffective. Cancer is the disease of the 80s. We have to fight it on all sides.

To the question "Do you agree with the use of heroin?", another nurse replied:

> Quite aggressively so. I am a nurse and see many patients in pain—our health care dollar doesn't go very far and we should get the best we can for it.

Another nurse replied:

> As I work in the health care field, any medication that will alleviate the suffering of cancer patients must be allowed.

The word "must" is underlined, Mr. Speaker. And here is a letter from a person who, when she wrote it on June 1, 1982, was facing death from cancer. She wrote:

I unfortunately am a cancer patient—bone cancer. I'm 54 years of age. At the present time the chemotherapy is doing its job but one thought that continually is in the back of my mind and that is the fear of any agony at the end. I'm not afraid to die—it's how that frightens me.

I know that life today would be much less stressful if this thought was erased.

If you can do anything to change the law to permit the use of any drug which would help terminally ill cancer patients I and many others would be grateful.

There is a host of letters. Here is another one from a nurse:

As an R.N. who has cared for many patients with cancer, and seen the indescribable anguish the patient and his family go through, I must strongly agree with authorizing physicians to prescribe heroin for cancer patients, as needed. I hope this matter will swiftly get the attention it deserves from the public and our lawmakers.

This is the opportunity for the House of Commons, Mr. Speaker. If there are some in the House who would argue that there is a problem with respect to control of the drug, that it might be diverted into wrong hands, I agree. But that does not speak to the principle of whether physicians should be armed with every weapon to look after every case to the extent that is possible. That is the principle of this Bill. What the problem of diversion speaks to is care and control.

If Hon. Members will examine the Bill they will see that this is not a drug that can be prescribed and delivered out of a drug store. It may not even be available in the ordinary pharmacy of the hospital, I do not know. It is within the control of the Government to prescribe the regulations. With this Bill, which is the first word on the subject here, there is scope for any motion by committee as to its adequacy with respec to control.

Physicians in 36 countries have that arrow in their quiver. Is there any reason why we ought not to have it here? Is there any reason why this whole issue ought not to be examined publicly? Is there any reason why we ought to fear the right of a committee of this House of Commons, which would have the right if the Bill were approved or if we sent the subject matter of the Bill to committee, to begin the public examination pending the outcome of that experiment that has been initiated, thank God, by a humanitarian as a Minister of National Health and Welfare?

I think that is the issue for the House of Commons, Mr. Speaker. I think it is time that the House faced it. I think it is time the medical profession faced it. I think it is time the cancer societies in the country faced it. I think it is time the public faced it. I ask the House of Commons to support this Bill today so that the public examination can begin.

I want to thank my friend, the Hon. Member for Oxford (Mr. Halliday), a very distinguished family physician, for supporting and seconding this Bill on its introduction for debate.

[Translation]

Mr. Marcel Roy (Laval): Mr. Speaker, first I would like to thank my colleagues who made it possible for me to take part in the debate at this time, since I should be on my way to another meeting. However, I preferred to remain in the House, because I saw it as my duty to speak very briefly not as a medical expert but as the former Chairman of the Committee on Health, Welfare and Social Affairs, which I led for three years, and above all—and I think that is the main reason—anyone who has ever seen one of his dear ones in the terminal stages of cancer, in almost indescribable pain, will realize that it was very difficult for me to ignore this afternoon's topic and leave the House to attend another meeting.

I want to congratulate the Member for Nepean-Carleton (Mr. Baker) for his patience when he spoke in the House and also for the representations he made to the Minister and to his colleagues in order to make them more aware of a situation existing in hundreds of hospitals across Canada, and unfortunately involving thousands of patients who are waiting for a positive answer from our colleagues.

We all know it is a very delicate situation, and when I questioned the Minister on May 18 of this year, her answer was very hopeful for the patients concerned. She mentioned to us the importance of control and said that she was willing to authorize a number of experiments across Canada next fall, that she was going to organize clinical trials in palliative care units for terminal patients in various locations throughout the country, which would last for between twelve and eighteen months and would be carried out according to a standard scientific protocol that was now being prepared. I think this was a very hopeful response from the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mrs. Bégin) and I want to thank her.

Following the question I raised in the House, the Member for Nepean-Carleton spoke once again. I think we are making progress. For instance, Friday, May 20, when I was talking to a group of senior citizens in Laval West, two of them came to tell me how important the amendment was, one referring to her mother who was a terminal patient in St. Jude Hospital and the other to someone who was not a relation but was in exactly the same situation. I realized how serious—

Of course I am not a physician, but when I raised the subject on May 18 of this year, the Member for Hull (Mr. Isabelle) who is a doctor, told me how urgent it was to help these patients in order to improve care and relieve their pain.

Consequently, I could not ignore this request, and when I discussed the matter with a doctor on the weekend, he asked me why I took an interest in this problem, and he said: "I suppose one of your close relatives has cancer, and that is probably the reason or one of the reasons you are working on this particular problem."

Well, I am interested in this for two reasons. Firstly as Chairman of our Committee on Health, Welfare and Social Affairs, I have received a great many representations and requests for an amendment to the Narcotic Control Act; secondly, as I said earlier, some of my loved ones are suffering from this condition.

Mr. Speaker, I should like to conclude my remarks by congratulating the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton for showing us once again just how patient he can be with the Hon. other Members of the House, as well as the Hon. Minister of National Health and Welfare, for this first step and that ray of hope that some day might lead to a lessening of the excruciating pain these patients are enduring. And in doing so we are not unique in the world. In fact there are already 36 countries, including England, where heroin is being used as a pain-killer. Which does not mean that we have never used it ourselves, but since 1955, we had discontinued using it at the request of the World Health Organization. I suggest it is about time we put an end to the suffering of the patients of today and those of tommorrow. I fully support the request of the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton and I urge other Hon. Members to do likewise.

[English]

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, in beginning my remarks this afternoon on Bill C-684, a Bill to legalize the therapeutic use of heroin, I would first like to congratulate the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton (Mr. Baker) for having the political courage to put before us this kind of Private Member's Bill, and also for having the personal courage to put before all of us an issue which involves a great deal of personal anxiety on the part of anyone who has ever had to deal with a terminal illness, and which has to do with the whole process and reality of human death.

I believe that this is one of the reasons these kinds of questions tend to be put off, not just because of the difficult political questions which attend them, but also because of a natural tendency on the part of everyone not to want to have to deal with these questions. I congratulate the Hon. Member, therefore, for having forced the House, really, to contend with this issue, and I believe Hon. Members are showing good qualities in being able to debate this subject reasonably and being able to dwell on their own personal experiences. I doubt that there is anyone in this House who has not had some personal experience with cancer in the family and who has not had to consider this question.

I do hope that this Bill will go to committee. I certainly intend to support its being passed and going to committee so that further discussion can take place. However, I feel that the fact that this Bill is before us is part of a general trend, and a welcome one I might say, in society today where we are asking ourselves how we can better address the problem of terminal illness, how we can make life more comfortable and more human for people who are faced with a terminal illness.

The question of the therapeutic use of heroin is a part of that larger movement, in which we might also introduce things like hospices for the dying, where attempts are made to create a less institutionalized and less alienated environment for people who are suffering from terminal illness. I see this as all part of what I would call a very welcome trend in trying to humanize the health care system, particularly as it pertains to the treatment of those with terminal illnesses.

As I said before and as everyone knows, the purpose of this Bill is to amend the Narcotic Control Act, thus permitting designated physicians, particularly in cancer clinics, to prescribe heroin as a pain killer for terminally ill cancer patients. The Hon. Member's Bill, which received first reading on April 29, has been, as Members have pointed out, subsequently upstaged to a degree by the announcement of the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Miss Bégin) two weeks after first reading of this Bill that the health department had authorized use of the narcotic heroin as a pain killer in clinical trials to begin this Fall. But we all know that the approval came after a long and controversial media campaign by Dr. Kenneth Walker under the pseudonym of Dr. Gifford-Jones to legalize heroin for this purpose after a formal advisory committee was struck, and which however remained largely inactive. Nevertheless, the Committe on the Medical Management of Severe Pain was struck early this year and directed by the Minister to draw up a guide for Canadian doctors on treating severe pain and to discuss within this document the optimal clinical use of various analgesic drugs, including the medical need for heroin for the treatment of pain associated with pre-terminal malignant disease. Yet as I understand it, Dr. Walker has contended the choice of members of this committee has "loaded the dice" against heroin, and this led him to establish his Gifford-Jones Foundation and to present petitions signed by some 15,000 people last summer in support of his stand.

Perhaps a little historical background would be helpful on this issue, Mr. Speaker. Despite its apparently effective use in other countries, most notably the United Kingdom, legitimate medical use of heroin has not been allowed in Canada since 1955, and since 1924 in the U.S. The UN World Health Organization recommended in 1947 that member countries ban medical use of heroin as a measure to fight increasing illicit use of and addiction to the drug. The WHO's rationale was that such a move would limit the availability to junkies. There was a widespread belief that a synthetic drug of equivalent potency was just around the corner. Neither prediction has come true some 30 years later. The illicit import and use of heroin in Canada is a multimillion dollars business on an annual basis, in spite of the fact that many terminally ill cancer patients have not had the use of this drug available to them over the years. And there is nothing found in nature, with the arguable exception of morphine, or in test tubes that comes close to heroin as an analgesic.

The arguments for and against the therapeutic use of heroin are many and they have been hotly debated. I do not pretend to be an expert on all the matters pertaining to the various arguments, but I would just like to go over a few of them. The arguments in favour are those such as have been presented by a Mr. William T. Beaver, Prefessor of Pharmacology at the Georgetown University Vince Lombardi Cancer Research Institute in Washington, D.C. He reported in 1981 that heroin is two and a half times more potent than morphine. Heroin is also known to be more soluble than morphine and that, coupled with its greater potency, means that smaller amounts are needed for injection. Therefore the injection itself is less painful for emaciated patients who often have little tissue left for a hypodermic needle.

It has also been argued that no two pain killers are entirely identical, and that a cancer patient who may have an adverse reaction to one drug may yet be able to tolerate another. So the doctors, as the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton has said, should have every possible arrow in their quiver available to them when treating particular patients on an individual basis.

It has also been argued that heroin has been used effectively by English doctors for over 80 years, and if the use of the drug is so questionable, why do over 30 other countries use it?

Now, one of the arguments against the use of heroin over the years, Mr. Speaker, is that there is no supportive evidence that heroin provides unique properties in the relief of cancer pain and that other drugs currently available are sufficient if administered properly. But there is no evidence to support that contention either. At least, you can find a scientist to advocate either side of the argument.

It has also been argued that more people may be harmed than helped if it were made more readily available because of its street value as an illicit drug. Supporters of legalization, however, respond to this, as others have already done, by saying that it is a law enforcement problem, not a medical problem, and I agree that this is not a good reason for prohibiting the use of heroin for therapeutic purposes.

It has also been argued that the publicity surrounding legalization may raise public expectations and that it is not a panacea for cancer pain.

The final argument, of course, is that dying patients could become addicted. I think this is the most ridiculous argument of all. That argument first stimulated my interest in this issue when I was a student chaplain at Sunnybrook Medical Centre in Toronto. I was on a ward which contained a great many patients who were dying of cancer. I always remember bringing this matter up with my supervising chaplain and asking why could this not be made available to the patients. He said: "Well, you will not believe this but some of those people that you visited today will not be alive in two weeks and yet the hospital is worried that they will become addicted to heroin". Ever since then this issue has been in the back of my mind and I am glad the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton has put it before the House.

I think the House should pass this Bill into committee so that there can be more open public and parliamentary discussion about this issue. I think there is absolutely no reason why the Government should not allow this to happen.

Mr. Stanley Hudecki (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I must first of all congratulate the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton (Mr. Baker) for proposing this amendment to the Narcotic Control Act. The fact that he was able to get 9,000 responses out of 40,000 questionnaires is indeed a remarkable achievement. I also was moved by the personal involvement he had and the sensitivity he expressed to his constituent and her family in the course of her suffering from cancer and his desire to be of some considerable help to her. However, in the few minutes I have, I have to bring before the Hon. Member and this House some of the facts dealing with the use of heroin as a therapeutic agent in the treatment of people with incurable illnesses.

The proposed amendment poses the right question but, unfortunately, it suggests the wrong answer. To think that the problems of people with terminal illness could be completely dealt with through drugs is an entirely wrong concept, one which has to be eradicated. Time and again the complaints which have been put forward are really those of improper attention by medical attendants. As far as the junior chaplain is concerned, it was probably the lack of attention he gave to that person's spiritual needs rather than the dependence on a single drug.

People who have incurable illnesses have considerably more problems than pain. Currently in the medical profession there are numerous drugs and procedures by which to control pain. I do not like to use the term "terminal cancer" or "terminal illness" because it is such an inhuman and depressing assessment of a person. These people are persons. The impression that is left with the public, and very frequently we see it through the television media, is one of people surrounded by various life-supporting gadgets, by pain and by complete isolation. That is not so. These people are individuals, Mr. Speaker, the same as you and I. They know of the problems facing them and they are looking forward, through those last few days, to enjoying the company of their relatives and friends. They want to be back home. They want to be doing the things that they enjoy. That is the concept or approach which is not currently present, and that is the need that they express.

Therefore, rather than focusing attention and spending the time of the House and the money on a variety of researches, it is more important that the money be spent on education of medical students and in assisting doctors to upgrade their knowledge and techniques of controlling pain.

There is a need for the public, for the family, to gather around the person who is incurably ill and to give him the suport that he particularly needs.

Mr. Halliday: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I apologize to my hon. friend and professional colleague for interrupting him, but the nature and purpose of the Bill which we are discussing today, as stated on page 1(a), is as follows:

> The purpose of this Bill is to permit designated physicians, particularly in cancer clinics, to prescribe heroin to alleviate pain.

We are discussing the issue of whether or not we want to alleviate pain. I am sure that the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton (Mr. Baker) would not dispute the fact that it is necessary to provide many other ancillary types of care to someone with cancer. However, there is no question but that one of the pre-eminent problems is pain. The purpose of the bill is purely to address the question of pain.

Mr. Benjamin: He's reading stuff that the Department of Health sent over. Quit reading what the Department sent you.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): All Hon. Members are aware that the most difficult problem of the Chair is always the question of relevance. I have had some concern with the Parliamentary Secretary's remarks because I cannot quite follow the thread of the argument which he presents in terms of the Bill. However, I always have, and every occupant of the Chair always has, the difficulty that we must wait a long time to ensure that the Hon. Member in question is being relevant. Second, if we begin to apply very rigid rules of relevance, then we must apply them equally across the House.

I think I have done what I should have done, that is to say that there is some question in my mind as to whether or not the Parliamentary Secretary is being as closely relevant to the Bill as he might. Therefore, perhaps with that thought in mind he may wish to address himself accordingly.

Mr. Hudecki: Mr. Speaker, actually the point that I was reaching was to address myself directly to the subject of heroin. The first question that I raise is with regard to the authority on which so many of the current statements are based. The various people who have signed these letters have made a decision on the basis of information submitted to them from a variety of sources. Actually, heroin in Canada has not been used since 1955.

Mr. Benjamin: At least legally, that is.

Mr. Blaikie: I just said that.

Mr. Hudecki: Neither has it been used in the United States. It is not in the pharmacopoeia. Doctors have had really no experience with the use of it, except those who practised before the year 1955.

Mr. Blaikie: How could they, if it has been illegal?

Mr. Hudecki: The information comes from book learning, from reading, or it comes from people who have had experience with heroin for non-medical purposes, or from what must be a tremendous number of physicians and people who have come from the United Kingdom. Therefore, the first point is that people are speaking on this subject with apparent authority but they have had no exposure to heroin whatsoever.

I graduated from the University of Toronto in 1940 and practised from 1940 until 1955, at a time when heroin was available to the pharmacopoeia. I feel that I am in a position to speak on this subject with authority.

Mr. Benjamin: Did you prescribe it?

Mr. Hudecki: It was possible to use it as a junior intern and as a resident in surgery. I have had an opportunity to use it while practising general surgery. My impressions are not taken from text books or from opinions handed down from people who are writing on the subject. Indeed, in the Medical Post it was indicated that one of the principal promoters of the drug, namely Dr. Walker himself, had never used it professionally.

My impression of the drug is that it is a potent analgesic but that it is a very dangerous drug. During my time in the hospitals it was used quite widely for obstetrical patients in labour. At that time labour was very often prolonged. I might point out that many of the babies were born completely blue and required a considerable amount of resuscitation.

Again, the drug was used for surgical patients and there were numerous post-operative complications. These were related to the side effects of the drug which cause a depression of respiration and of the cough reflex. As a result, many patients developed bronchial pneumonia and died needlessly. Again, I bring this point forward because that is exactly the type of patient with which we are dealing.

Mr. Pinard: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I want to apologize to my colleague, the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Hudecki), for interrupting him in the midst of his speech, but we have been negotiating between House Leaders and it seems that we have reached an agreement. I must attend an important meeting which is being held now. I would appreciate receiving the unanimous consent of the House to read our agreement at this time. If there is unanimous consent to permit me the time, I will speak for perhaps five minutes or less, so that the Parliamentary Secretary is not penalized.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): It is my Private Member's Bill which is being discussed. I appreciate the offer of the extra time. I certainly think that that is a reasonable condition and I am agreeable to it.

Mr. Pinard: I thank the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton for his usual courtesy and I will try not to abuse the privilege.

DISPOSITION OF BILL C-151

Mr. Pinard: We have been carrying on consultations in relation to Bill C-151. In my view, whereas the Progressive Conservative and New Democratic Members desire that an amount of borrowing authority not exceeding $10.7 billion be granted by Bill C-151, while the Government desires that if any further request be made for not more than an additional $4 billion borrowing authority within the present fiscal year, such request shall not require more than three days of debate, the following order, concerning which I seek unanimous consent, shall take effect immediately:

Business of the House

That with regard to Bill C-151, an Act to provide supplementary borrowing authority, when the said Bill has been read a second time, it shall be referred to a Committee of the Whole;

That at the appropriate time in Committee of the Whole stage of the said Bill, a Minister of the Crown shall propose an amendment to delete, in line 14 at page one of the said Bill, the word "fourteen", and to substitute therefor the word "ten";

That at 3 p.m. on Thursday, June 2, the said Bill shall be called and, without further debate, all questions necessary to dispose of all remaining stages of the said Bill shall be put forthwith and successively without further debate or amendment, except as provided in this order;

That, if necessary for the execution of this order, the House may sit beyond the ordinary time of adjournment;

That the Standing Orders be amended by adding immediately after Standing Order 79 the following:

"(a) If, at any time before March 31, 1984, a Minister of the Crown introduces a Bill to provide additional supplementary borrowing authority of not more than $4 billion, the said Bill shall, after receiving second reading, be considered in a Committee of the Whole and not later than 15 minutes before the expiry of the time appointed for the consideration of Government business on the third day that the said Bill is debated, any proceedings before the House shall be interrupted and all questions necessary for the disposal of all remaining stages of the said Bill shall be put forthwith and successively without further debate or amendment, and provided that the said Standing Order 79(a) shall expire when any Bill mentioned therein has been finally disposed of".

Mr. Speaker, I seek unanimous consent for this House order. It seems that, after consultation, Your Honour will obtain it.

● (1600)

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, indeed there were meetings to discuss this matter. I want to point out that our speeches during the debate consistently insisted that all the Government required was $10 billion. We have consistently suggested in all of our speeches on this side that $4 billion was not required by the Government and we insisted upon an amendment coming forward to reduce the amount to what the Government actually required in accordance with its own financial statements.

Yesterday afternoon, our Mewmbers debated at length. From lunch hour to the time of adjournment there was only one NDP Member who came forward to assist us in this debate. We are, however, prepared to give unanimous consent in our Party because this agreement complies with an agreement we made earlier this session. For those reasons we are in agreement. As I have indicated to the Government House Leader, we do not agree with the preamble but we agree with the wording of the House order.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I do not want to enter into a nit-picking discussion with the Opposition House leader, but if he could count he would have been able to see that there were four NDP speakers yesterday. We took our turn and we told the Government that we were very much opposed to what it was doing. We continue to be opposed to it. We worked on an arrangement that seemed to satisfy the needs of everyone.

Mr. Pinard: Mr. Speaker, it seems there is agreement on the House order. Everyone has stated their views. The Government is satisfied with a three-day debate to get the full amount of $14.7 billion if needed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The House has heard the proposal made by the President of the Privy Council. Is there unanimous agreement that the proposal be made an Order of the House?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Agreed and so ordered.

The Chair will recognize the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of National Defence in pursuit of his intervention. As proposed earlier by the President of the Privy Council, the amount of time given by the President of the Privy Council will not be deducted from the time allowed to the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary.

AMENDMENT RESPECTING THERAPEUTIC USE OF HEROIN

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton) that Bill C-684, an Act to amend the Narcotic Control Act (therapeutic use of heroin), be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Health, Welfare and Social Affairs.

Mr. Hudecki: Mr. Speaker, before the intervention by the Government House Leader (Mr. Pinard), I was discussing the side effects of the use of heroin in the treatment of people with incurable illnesses. These side effects include very severe respiratory depression and some difficulty in controlling the cough reflex which would result in a greater susceptibility to pneumonia. These side effects which these people experience in the hospital will also show themselves at a time when they want cerebral lucidity and to enjoy the company of their friends. It is at that time that many of their normal bodily functions are impaired.

There was a time when a so-called cocktail was prepared using heroin. These were given to the patients so they could take them at will. While this would frequently control the pain, the patient would be extremely constipated, have very poor insight as to what was happening and a sense of euphoria inconsistent with the situation. This would be at the very time these people would want to communicate and understand what has happening while in the company of their immediate friends and relatives.

Currently there are a great number of alternative methods of controlling pain. These methods include morphine which, if properly used, is most active. There are a variety of anti-depressants which are useful since most of these people do not only complain of pain but are emotionally distressed and upset. Many of them benefit much more from appropriate anti-depressants.

There are also a number of physical means by which pain can be controlled, such as stimulation through the skin. Neurosurgeons can use a variety of injections. It is not necessary to rely on heroin in order to control pain.

There is the view that a considerable amount of experience in this field in the United Kingdom suggests that heroin has great merit. I would like to quote a statement by a world authority on palliative medicine. That is medicine dealing with people who have incurable diseases. It is a statement by Dr. Robert Twycross who, until recently, was in practice at St. Christopher's Hospital in England. He is an acclaimed authority on the subject. In the last few years a majority of palliative care centres in the United Kingdom have substituted morphine for heroine because clinical trials conducted by one of the most experienced palliative care physicians in the United Kingdom, Dr. Twycross, indicated that there was no difference between the pain-relieving properties and mood-modifying effects of heroin and morphine.

Heroin is a drug which comes from the opium family. Its synthetic relatives are methadone and demerol. It has a quicker action than morphine. The euphoria assoociated with it is so short lived that it is not useful from a psychological point of view. In addition it has the profound constipating effect and respiratory depression.

Once heroin passes through the liver, which is very soon after its absorption, about 85 per cent of the heroin is converted into morphine. As heroin is introduced it is quickly broken down and actually becomes a product of morphine. It is the morphine compound which continues to have an effect.

I want to reiterate the concept of the so-called terminal patient. A preferable term to use is a person with an incurable disease. Many of these patients are classified as terminal on the basis of the assessment of the doctor. There are verying degrees of terminally ill patients. No two patients have exactly the same response to illness.

Therefore it is very difficult to accept a norm and to act on the basis of this norm. Each one has to be considered as an individual and each one has to be studied. The individual needs have to be considered and each of the particular needs has to be dealt with as required. For that reason adequate treatment can only be given if adequate assessments have been made and adequate studies of the needs have been conducted. Rather than legalizing drugs such as heroin, we need special skills and training for our medical students and physicians to provide emotional and environmental support so that people can enjoy their remaining days in comfort and with the security of their loved ones.

What is the feeling of other prefessionals in the health care field? In a meeting with Mr. A. C. Scales, past president of the Canadian Pharmaceutical Association, its policy was expressed by the Drug Advisory Committee of the College of Pharmacy of British Columbia as follows:

> Effective pain management is best achieved with a regimen which provides an adequate dosage of currently available analgesics administered at regular intervals rather than as a required basis. The relief of pain achieved with morphine appears to be significantly more sustained than that obtained with heroin.

I believe my time is up.

Mr. Gilles Marceau (Jonquière): Mr. Speaker, I am grateful for this opportunity to express my views on such an important subject. Anyone who examines the Bill introduced by my colleague is inclined to react favourably, because he made it clear in his very short remarks that he was motivated by something which happened in his riding. From a human standpoint, I should think that any solution likely to help a sick person must be carefully and seriously considered. Aware as we are of the parliamentary experience of our colleague, and keeping in mind the example he gave us, we can only feel compassion when we are faced with such tragic, incomprehensible and, for some of us, unacceptable incidents as we are given to witness in our society.

Having read the text of the Bill introduced by my colleague, I must conclude that the wording is not unduly restrictive. He is suggesting, and I quote:

> Notwithstanding subsection (1)—

—which is an interdiction against the use of narcotics. Here is how the whole section reads:

> Notwithstanding subsection (1), any person may, under the supervision of a designated physician, have diacetylmorphine (heroin) in his possession for therapeutic purposes.

Again, there is no need to say that I understand the aims of my colleague the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton (Mr. Baker) because, in principle, I agree with those aims and motives.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. As I have just indicated when I signalled the Hon. Member, I apologize for interrupting him, but the time allotted for this debate has ended.

Pursuant to the provisions of Standing Order 24(2), it is my duty to interrupt the proceedings.

[English]

Before I proceed to the next order of business, I understand the Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Smith) has a point of order.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Smith: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a matter to which the Government House Leader omitted to make reference when he intervened a few moments ago with the business for tomorrow. It flows from discussions which have been held this afternoon between the Parties. Accordingly, I would like to designate tomorrow as an Opposition day.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask a question on behalf of the Opposition House Leader. Is this a matter which was discussed and agreed among House Leaders?

Mr. Smith: Designation of Opposition days is not the subject of agreement, but they are advised in advance and depend upon the outcome of the House order which was just agreed to. This was one possibility of which they were advised yesterday and it was confirmed earlier this afternoon.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I want only to be certain. It may be my memory, but I thought the President of the Privy Council referred to other matters for tomorrow. For the sake of the record, the Parliamentary Secretary has indicated that tomorrow is an Opposition day.

Mr. Smith: I am sorry, Mr. Speaker. I am referring to Friday.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The Parliamentary Secretary is fortunate that both my ears are working at the moment. In any event, the matter is settled. The Opposition day to which the Parliamentary Secretary referred is Friday, not tomorrow.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. My friend cleared up the confusion and then added to it. We now understand that Friday is an allotted day. Certain announcements have been made; we have been informed of the business for tomorrow, Thursday. Have there been any changes in the Government's mind with respect to the business for tomorrow?

Mr. Smith: No, other than the fact that the House order which was approved a few moments ago calls for a vote at three o'clock. Apart from the vote, the business will be as stated earlier by the Government House Leader.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Shall all items listed under Private Members' Public Bills preceding No. 424 be allowed to stand by unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

CRIMINAL CODE

AMENDMENT RESPECTING GREYHOUND RACES

Mr. Raymond Dupont (Chambly) moved that Bill C-624, an Act to amend the Criminal Code (Greyhound Races) be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt this motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

[English]

Mr. Sargeant: Mr. Speaker, I did not quite understand the procedure which you were carrying on. I assumed that the mover of the Bill would be getting up to speak. I would welcome an opportunity to speak on this piece of legislation.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): That unfortunately I am not able to do. I realize what has happened and that it has come as a surprise to some Hon. Members—and I might add to the Chair—that the motion put forward by the Hon. Member for Chambly (Mr. Dupont) has now been referred to committee. That is what the House has decided. I suppose it was with and by unanimous consent. If the House wants to undo what it has done, it may be able to do that. Otherwise, unanimous consent was granted to refer the Bill to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

• (1620)

Shall I hear further points of order on this matter? The House has already declared itself. That matter is decided.

Shall all orders listed under Private Members' Public Bills preceding Order No. 442 be allowed to stand by unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): You really have Parliament working well. It is an absolute disgrace.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): At this point I am obviously in the hands of the House. Short of that I will either look to any further item on the Order Paper or we will have an early Wednesday. I think I should first recognize the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor)

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I wonder if you should put the question that we do agree to undo what we did by unanimous consent and go back to discussing Bill C-624. It was done very rapidly. Everybody was expecting the mover of the Bill to get up and speak. I would suggest that you put the motion and see if there is unanimous consent to go back. Surely the Bill is worth discussing.

Mr. Smith: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. I notice the Hon. Member for Esquimalt-Saanich (Mr. Munro) left the Chamber in righteous wrath, suspecting some conspiracy or plot.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Of course there was.

Mr. Smith: That is absolute rubbish.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): You have done it once before.

Mr. Smith: That is absolute rubbish. What in fact happened was that Members were caught off guard. I was not aware of discussions that may or may not have been held between these two Hon. Members.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): What kind of Members are they?

Mr. Smith: Hon. Members, and they are polite, which is more than I can say for you.

I think what happened was there was some confusion. I think the House would best be served if we did undo this and allowed this Bill to be addressed. The Hon. Member for Wetaskiwin (Mr. Schellenberger) is not here simply because he would have been advised that his Bill would have been called at five o'clock. We would like to accommodate him. Any suggestion which any Member may have made that there was some sort of trickery going on here is absolutely outrageous and contemptuous.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Mr. Speaker, trickery has occurred in this House before, on July 12, 1982, and it could happen again. It was done on that side. I think the manner in which this debate has been conducted is absolutely disgraceful. I do hope that somehow or other arrangements will be made for the Hon. Member for Wetaskiwin to speak to his Bill, and also if there are other Members of the House who wish to discuss the Bill that is now before us before we reach the Bill of the Hon. Member for Wetaskiwin, that they have an opportunity to do so.

Mr. Sargeant: Mr. Speaker, I think where some of the confusion may have arisen, at least on my part, was when you read the number of the Bill. I believe if you check the record you will see that you said C-684. I was under the impression that it was C-624. I think if you check—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order. Before I listen to further points of order, the House has its own capacity to handle matters as it sees fit. I do not think we need to go on with points of order which are really related to motivation rather than to actual procedure. To clear up on matter, I read the motion, and I read it in French. I will repeat it.

[Translation]

That Bill C-624, that is what I said, not 684—

[English]

That is not an argument I would accept to intervene or interfere with the proceeding. I have explained to the House that there is a very simple proceeding at this point. I have indicated that it apparently has surprised some Hon. Members that this motion has been referred to a committee for second reading. It certainly surprised the Chair as well. However, the House can undo what it has done very simply. It will, however, require unanimous consent. If some Hon. Member chooses to withhold unanimous consent, then the Chair has no choice in this matter. This Bill will be referred to the committee.

I will recognize further points of order if it is necessary, but I would point out to Hon. Members that the easiest and most successful way to resolve the problem is to permit me to put the question to the House as to whether or not there is unanimous consent to this order.

[Translation]

—I am first going to put the question.

[English]

Mr. Smith: Mr. Speaker, to accommodate everyone, I am prepared to move that we undo what in fact occurred and we do now discuss this Bill standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Chambly (Mr. Dupont).

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Now, I would like to be perfectly clear—

[English]

It is now moved by the Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Smith):

That Bill C-624 be by unanimous consent not yet sent to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

In brackets, I may say subject to debate for the remainder of the period of one hour. I will now put the motion of the Parliamentary Secretary to the House. If I hear a lack of unanimous consent, once again I repeat that the Bill will go to committee.

Is there unanimous consent, as I explained?

[English]

Is there unanimous consent to continue the debate on this Bill before sending it or not sending it to committee?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): There is not unanimous consent. The Bill is therefore sent to committee.

Mr. Taylor: Who said no?

Mr. Dupont: I said no.

Some Hon. Members: Shame.

[Translation]

Mr. Dupont: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The Hon. Member for Chambly (Mr. Dupont), on a point of order.

Mr. Dupont: Mr. Speaker, if I understand correctly, my colleagues opposite may be unhappy about this, but they were probably asleep in their seats and were not paying attention to the procedure. Nevertheless, like myself, they have been sitting in the House for many years, and they know perfectly well they will have another opportunity in Committee, since the Bill has been referred to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs. As far as you are concerned, it is not my fault, my dear colleague, but personally, I am very pleased.

[English]

Mr. Taylor: If anybody was asleep it was the Hon. Member. He should have been up on his feet discussing his own Bill. What are you afraid of? Are you ashamed of it?

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Of course he is.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The Chair is obligated to recognize Hon. Members on points of orders, but I did take very considerable pain and time to explain the procedure that we were using. I do not think it would be proper for Hon. Members to comment on the decision that the House has just made or upon the decision that the Chair has just made.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, may I first say to the Parliamentary Secretary to the Government House Leader that we appreciate the effort he made. Arrangements are made in consultation with the Clerks re Private Members' Day every Wednesday as to which Members' Bills will be called for debate.

What happened today was that the Hon. Member for Chambly (Mr. Dupont) seemed to obtain a reference of the content of his Bill to the standing committee. All Members on all sides of the House want that to happen to their Bills. I suspect we will have a problem on succeeding Wednesdays. If an Hon. Member is prepared to have his Bill presented for second reading debate, other Members who wish to participate in it should be provided with that alternative, unless there is previous agreement that there will be no debate and there is agreement on all sides to refer the subject matter thereof to the appropriate standing committee. That has occurred a number of times. I was fortunate to have it happen a couple of times with my Bills. But unless there is some agreement beforehand to refer by unanimous consent or to refer without debate—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The direction—

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, this has to do with the order of the House, not with the Bill—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Exactly. It has to do with the order of the House, as the Hon. Member says. The direction his argument takes is that somehow there must be, in addition to the existing Standing Orders, a further Standing Order which refers to an agreement among Parties. The Chair has no knowledge of any such invisible and imaginary Standing Order. The function of the Chair is to apply the Standing Orders as they are, not to suggest that there are other Orders that the Chair ought to apply without those Orders being in force.

The Chair suggests that the House move on to the next order of business. I will recognize points of order but I do not think it is advisable to continue this debate now.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, on a further point of order, it now becomes a case of all of us serving notice on one another. On the one day that is available for Private Members' Business and for which there is agreement, the Member sponsoring the Bill himself says to the Clerk who calls his office: "Oh, yes, I am ready to speak to my Bill today," and then other Members on all sides are notified of that when it comes out on a sheet of paper. It that does not happen, then we will have to be much more formal. There will have to be a formal motion moved for every Private Members' Bill every Wednesday. If that is the way they want to play the game, that is the way we will play it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. Order. The difficulty I have is that the Hon. Member is not really arguing a point of order. If he wants to argue a point of privilege as to the manner in which the House operates, that may be a question he can raise, although I would like to indicate in advance that I have some doubts about that. We have gone through a very careful process to assure all Hon. Members of the possibility that they might overturn a decision by unanimous consent. There was not unanimous consent to do that. In all fairness, I do not think that I can entertain further points of order on a decision the House has already made.

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of privilege. There is a great deal of substance in what the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) has said. The only one that I know of who refused to—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order. Order, please. The Hon. Member is well aware that the Standing Orders phohibit questioning the motivations of Hon. Members for the manner in which they carry out their votes. I could not begin to accept that as the subject matter of a point of order.

Shall all orders listed under Private Members'—

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of privilege and I believe that the Chair should at least hear it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I will hear the Hon. Member who claims he rises on a point of privilege but I will not permit him to question the motivations of Hon. Members.

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, before one of these Bills is put on the Order Paper, a Member must agree that he wants it debated when it is called. Obviously debate does not continue until that Member stands up and makes his speech. This all happened so quickly. When the Member himself is the only one in the House who refuses unanimous consent, that is a point of privilege affecting the rest of us. We have rights too.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please.

Mr. Taylor: The Member ran away from the House before we had time to say boo. He was afraid to debate his Bill. Whether the Chair agrees with me or not, it is a point of privilege to my mind.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The Hon. Member for Bow River knows that I respect his views. Unfortunately, it is my responsibility to make a decision in that regard and I hope that he will respect my views since I must find some way to apply them.

Mr. Smith: Mr. Speaker, simply to state our position on the record, as have the other Parties, I agree that the Chair has simply enforced the rules. What has happened has been unfortunate. I as one Member tried to undo a misunderstanding, but I think it is important for the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) to realize that we on this side of the House do not attempt to enforce Party discipline during Private Members' Hour. We will familiarize Members with what the Government position is, but we cannot interfere with the rights of any private Member. One Member has chosen to exercise his rights in a way which I regret, but he has that right and the Chair has enforced that right. That is all there is to it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I think that we should terminate this discussion. Leaving aside any references to Parties whatsoever, it is certainly the responsibility of the Chair to recognize and to enforce individual Member's rights in the House. That is one of the primary functions of the Chair. One Hon. Member refused unanimous consent. I ask the House to understand that there is nothing that can be done if unanimous consent is refused by an Hon. Member. That terminates the issue, and I ask Hon. Members to move on to the next item of business.

Mr. Sargeant: Mr. Speaker, I would like to make one further point. When you called the question, you correctly pointed out that you said it in French. The translator, at least over the ear plug that I have, said Bill C-684. I did not know that she was talking about the same Bill.

An Hon. Member: That is not true.

Mr. Sargeant: It is true if you listen to the corrections.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): That issue is very readily resolvable. It is not an issue of essence. Certainly the recordings of the House of Commons will bear out the Hon. Member or will bear out the Chair. Perhaps I made a mistake, but even if I did, I would not regard that as an essential matter. I would say that the will of the House must proceed despite a mispronunciation, and I am satisfied to say that as far as I know, I did not misread it either in English or in French.

Shall all orders listed under Private Members' Public Bills preceding order No. 424 be allowed to stand by unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

PUBLIC PETITIONS TO PARLIAMENT

MEASURE RESPECTING PROCEDURE ON PRESENTATION OF PETITIONS

Mr. Stan Schellenberger (Wetaskiwin) moved that Bill C-642, an Act respecting the presentation of petitions to Parliament, be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I take pleasure in presenting this Bill to the House for debate today. The presentation of petitions has gained some notoriety in the last week or so, but petitions are a very significant method by which ordinary citizens of the country who do not have the opportunity that I have to speak in the House of Commons can bring to the attention of this institution through their signature a grievance that they may have or a suggestion as to how something may be changed so that their lives may be bettered.

The practice of putting petitions to a legislative body is not new. It has been happening for hundreds of years. We have brought from the mother Parliament in Great Britain to this institution the practice of presenting petitions to Parliament. From the beginning, the presentation of petitions was allowed by Parliament as a means for ordinary citizens to bring their grievance to the attention of the House of Commons. The practice have been used over, and it is only in recent years that nothing has happened to petitions. Petitions are brought to the House by the Member of Parliament, are read to the Speaker and the Clerk who then deal with those petitions, and the next day they are either found to be in order or not. They then disappear in a room somewhere in the House of Commons. That is not entirely the case, but it is pretty close.

I would like to indicate to the Chair and the Members of the House of Commons that in Great Britain, the procedure followed is slightly different and, I think, better than the procedure we have adopted in Canada. Public petitions were first adopted as an innovation of Edward I and were presented as a method of seeking redress from the king by virtue of his power of prerogative where none could be sought through the ordinary course of the law. That is still the case now.

For example, on the issue of capital punishment, many citizens of the nation, believe that this institution is not representing the wishes of the majority of the nation, and their only means of bringing that to the attention of the House is through the presentation of petitions or Private Members' Bills. Neither of those two methods has been very successful in bringing about a change in the past, but at least the opportunity is there to bring the grievance forward.

In Great Britain when petitions were first introduced, it was permitted that they be debated in the House. This went on into 1842 when the practice of using petitions became so widespread that very little time was left for Members of Parliament to debate Government Bills, so it was decided that the change should be made to the rules. Until 1843 when the rules were changed in the House of Commons in Great Britain this method was used. At that time, 33,000 petitions per year were presented, so there was difficulty in having them all debated. After the rules were changed the petitions could be read, as they are now. If the petition conformed to the rules of the House it could then be put before a committee. Debate was not permitted, but at least the Bill could be moved to a committee of petitions and dealt with by Members of Parliament.

If petitions related to personal grievances they could then be deemed to be of urgent necessity.In this case they could be debated immediately in the House. That has not occurred very often in Great Britain since the rule change in 1843; in fact, it has happened only once. All Bills did not have to go to committee, and there was still the opportunity to debate a Bill in the House of Commons if it was considered urgent.

The report of the Committee on Public Petitions was printed. It stated the subject of the petition, the number of signatures, and was headed by the prayer of the petition. The Committee had the power to send for persons, papers, records and was entitled to make special reports on any matter it thought the House should know about. On the other hand, the Committee had no power to investigate or report on the merits of any petition or interrogate representatives of Government Departments or person as to possible remedial action.

The Committee dealt with every public petition presented to the House until 1974 when the practice was discontinued. They now follow a practice which I think this Parliament should seriously consider and which is the subject of my Bill—that all petitions shall be printed by the Clerk of the House after the normal procedure transmits those petitions to the Minister of the Crown. The Minister of the Crown must then make a recommendation or an observation on the Bill before the House of Commons, and that is tabled and printed.

That is some of the history of the procedure now used in Great Britain and which we have copied to a great extent in Canada.

There was an occasion on which debate on a petition took place after the rule change. That was in June, 1944. The urgent part of the petition concerned the fact that letters had been opened secretly by the Post Office. That was considered to be an invasion of privacy, so the petition was debated immediately. That opportunity still exists in this Parliament.

We are all very familiar with the practice of presenting petitions to this House, Mr. Speaker. A petition can be presented by any Member, who may not make a speech but has the opportunity to make a brief statement about the author of the petition, the number of signatures and the allegation it contains. The Member may also read what is called the "prayer".

The petition is then automatically referred to the Clerk of Petitions, and next day he reports back to the House on whether it meets the requirements of the Standing Order. The Speaker reports on the petition, which is tabled. It is then read to the House by the Clerk, and if it is in proper form it may, with unanimous consent, be read by the Clerk and, again with unanimous consent, it may be sent to committee; otherwise, no debate is permitted and the petition does not go to any committee.

The only exception to this is when a petition complains of some present personal grievance requiring an immediate remedy, in which case the matter may be discussed immediately. There has never been an occasion when the subject matter of a petition has been ruled to be of such urgency as to require discussion in the House.

The rules also say that the petitions must meet certain requirements. They must relate to a matter over which Parliament has control. Petitions may not ask for the expenditure of money and may not pray for exemptions from any import or export duties.

In Canada we have used the urgency provision twice, which is more often than it has been used in Great Britain. On one occasion it was used by a colleague, Donald MacInnis, whose petition requested an improved early retirement benefit for former coal miners of the Cape Breton Development Corporation. With the unanimous consent of the House, that petition was allowed to move to committee.

In 1962 the petition of Mr. McNally, then a Member of Parliament, requested Parliament to allow admission to Parliament of the Press Gallery Association. This petition was also allowed to go to committee. So we have some examples of that usage, but we have very few examples of petitions being debated in the House or in committee and remedial action being taken.

I think many citizens of Canada want to see something happen as a result of their petition. When they ask a Member of Parliament what they can do about certain issues, what procedures they can take, we can answer that they can lobby Members of Parliament with a grievance and ask that it be discussed. If there is no possibility of doing that through Question Period of Private Members' Hour or Government legislation, one of the few options is the petition. We can tell our constituents that they may present a grievance to Parliament through a petition, but then the obvious question is, what happens to that petition? That is when I have some difficulty, Mr. Speaker, because nothing really happens to the petition. Through the procedures I have just outlined, it is read but then disappears. The only response a constituent may see is a few lines in Hansard to show that his Member of Parliament did present the petition.

That is why I am asking the House to look at the Bill which asks that after presentation of a petition to the Senate or the House of Commons in accordance with the rules, a Minister or a Member of Parliament should respond in the House within two weeks. The petition could then be referred to a committee of the House without debate.

Under the new rules the committee would have the option of taking up the subject matter or not, but at least the petitioners would have the opportunity to see that the petition was dealth with by a Minister of the Crown who would then be compelled to respond in the House within two weeks of the tabling of the petition.

I looked at this to see whether our neighbour, the United States, had anything similar to this request that I am making to the House today, and they do. In the House of Representatives in the United States, after a petition is presented to the House by a Member, he can request that that petition be referred to a committee. If he does request that that petition be referred, then the subject matter may be taken up by that committee. That is under Clause 6, Rule 22. In the Senate, a petition may be introduced. No debate is allowed except by unanimous consent. If there is unanimous consent, then debate is allowed on a petition. A Senator cannot be interrupted during his debate to introduce a petition. However, it is only in the House of Representatives that in fact a petition can proceed to a committee of the House. So they have a similar opportunity in the United States to the one which I am encouraging this House to deal with.

• (1650)

In Great Britain there is the opportunity for a Minister to respond. He must respond to a petition. We have neither of those requirements as compulsory actions for the presentation of our petitions. It is left to the will of the Minister to respond, and most often he does not do so. As I said, only twice in our history have petitions been allowed to go to a standing committee for discussion.

Therefore I feel that if we are going to give adequate redress to complaints of the citizens of this nation, we ought to develop a procedure which will allow the petitions to have some meaning. This is the only way which I can see that we can in fact do that.

I would like to sum up my address to the House by reading a brief passage from a writer on parliamentary procedure. He was writing on public petitions. I am sorry, I do not have his name. He said the following:

> These rulings have accumulated in the House over the years and are now as firmly entrenched as the standing orders. These rulings and the procedure surrounding the reception of petitions have acted, in recent years in particular, to discourage petitioning. At many times the House has shown itself willing to waive its rules, however strict, to allow the introduction or the passage of a measure it desires, but it has consistently refused to do the same with petitions. Not only is the possible subject-matter limited today, but the forms are strictly observed. The examination by the Clerk of Petitions ensures that many petitions will never be received by the House. Even if they are drafted properly and deal with a proper subject, the petitions cause little stir in the House; the Speaker informs the House that they may be received and they disappear from sight without comment. At best a member may present a petition in person and read the prayer; his fellow members nod agreeably and the petition disappears; there is no debate. The result of these restrictions and this procedure is that petitions are of little use today.

That has been confirmed. I have not seen the numbers for Canada as to what has happened with petitions, but I do have the figures for Great Britain. I know from my ten years in the House that it is only recently when the economy is in trouble and people are disturbed that we find, all of a sudden, a number of petitions coming to us as Members of Parliament, and then to the House of Commons. They have started to increase in numbers. Therefore, the people of this nation are in fact using that procedure, particularly now, much more so than two or three years ago when I noticed that very few petitions were ever presented to the House. This year almost every day petitions are presented to the House of Commons.

It is obvious that citizens of this nation are asking for redress of their grievances through that practice and they are getting nothing in return. I urge, therefore, Hon. Members of the House seriously to consider the subject matter of this Bill. We could certainly, in committee, call witnesses from the two countries I mentioned to tell us how their procedures have in fact allowed citizens of their nations to present their grievances to the House. I feel that we as Members of the House of Commons would be doing our country and our constituents a great service in allowing them some response to the petitions which they ask us to deliver to this institution.

Mr. Paul E. McRae (Thunder Bay-Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, I rise to give some support to the Hon. Member for Wetaskiwin (Mr. Schellenberger) in his desire to have petitions recognized more seriously by this House. I have& a problem with some of the details of the Bill, but I particularly like the idea that we might have a committee which would be designated to deal with petitions. I feel the subject, though, is a broader one and I would like to set aside the petition idea and speak about how we extend democracy, which is what the Hon. Member is attempting to do.

We have lived for a long time, and probably quite successfully until the last perhaps ten or 12 or 15 years, with representative democracy, as when you elect a Member of Parliament and one way or another he belongs to a political Party and he then functions through that Party, either as part of the Government or as part of the Opposition. One assumes that every four or five years, when he comes up for re-election, people will say, "Well, you have done a good job, you listened to me, and you got something done", or they reject him; one or the other. It seems to me, however, that in a society where the average person today has 11 or 12 years of successful schooling, and a large portion of our population have university degrees, when things become very complex it is not good enough to pass judgment on a Member of Parliament every four or five years and say, "Well, you have done a good job", and so on. I feel that there must be other ways in which people can make their views known to the country and to this Parliament so that action can be taken.

Very often people will say, "Well, I felt very strongly about that issue. Government did the wrong thing. On the other hand, generally speaking, I am fairly satisfied", but the issue is still there and it is a burning one. Capital punishment was mentioned as one of those issues which bothers a lot of people. I do not share, perhaps, the same view as a lot of Hon. Members on this subject, but I can understand the fact that it does bother people and that for some reason or other they do not feel they are being heard. It seems to me that democracy does not work at all, basically, if more and more people get the feeling that they are not being heard, that for some reason or other the Government of the day is doing the opposite to what they think should be done. It is very difficult for people to understand that there are other people who feel the very opposite to them, that they want something very opposite, and that the Government must compromise somewhere along the line. I feel that one of the answers has to be that people must get a better chance to be heard. But we must also hear the other side.

The other day in Thunder Bay a discussion occurred between two groups of people on two different sides of the abortion issue. There were some demonstrations, and so on. The suggestion was made that maybe it is time that these two groups of people sat down and tried to understand each other. With a committee on petitions we can, perhaps, bring some of those opposing forces together on this subject or on other subjects.

I agree with this particular step, but I feel there should be more steps and broader steps to allow for that kind of thing to happen. I feel that one of the problems which creates petitions, and this kind of strife, is within the nature of large Government bureaucracies. I am not talking about this Government or any other Government particularly. It is just in the nature of the whole business of Government Departments. We have been talking about the Crow rate, for instance, and a lot of people are concerned about Government Departments. They tend to say that what is good for transportation or what is good for the railroads is good for the country, because that is what they are busy doing. That is the outlook they have. They may well be wrong about the railroads, as well as about the rest of the country, but the point is that there is a tendency to build up a whole series of things which are good for a small sector of society but may not be good for Canadians generally or any particular region of this country. Then you get people, such as a very large number of grain farmers in the West, who say, "This does not suit me at all. This is something which is part of the history of the West, I believe in it, and this group is taking it away". One can understand that, but the point is that there is not a good outlet at the present time for people who feel very strongly that the traditions they have grown up with are being trampled upon by this particular bureaucracy.

I happen to have a lot of contact with the peace movement in this country. It consists of a network right across the country from coast to coast. There is a real concern about where we are going with nuclear armaments and a very real concern about a war that could destroy us all. But there is no way for that large group of people to make their views heard in this Parliament. I have thousands of names on petitions because a lot of the letters that go to the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) or other Members come to me because of my concern about this issue. And some way or other that issue, and the Crow issue and others, have to be addressed. These people are getting more and more frustrated. This is not a situation where an issue comes up, everyone gets upset, and a week later it is all over. That is not what is happening. Petitions may be the route to go, but it is not now. We all agree, I think, that it is not effective at this stage of the game. As the Hon. Member for Wetaskiwin has said, petitions come in, they are read out, accepted as being correct by the Speaker, and then they are dead. It is not an exercise in total futility because at least it gets to the floor, but it is nothing more than a show. There is no debate afterwards.

I want to find some way, Mr Speaker, where the feelings of people on the Crow and those who are very concerned about testing the Cruise and who put their names on petitions and write letters can at least be strongly expressed. Perhaps it should be in a committee where people who have opposite views can come forward, and then they will begin to understand what Governments and we in Parliament have to face. I am sure all of us have received petitions with opposite positions on the same issue. We have to deal with that. I have in my office a lot of letters and several petitions from people in the City of Thunder Bay and the surrounding area who are very concerned about the National Film Board closing down its offices in my community. It is supposed to happen in September. I checked this and I find there are seven or eight other communities and the Members who represent those communities also have a bunch of petitions on the same subject. The Cities of Saskatoon, Thunder Bay, Hamilton, Chicoutimi, Sydney, and Kingston are all going to lose their NFB offices this fall if something is not done. The Film Board will save something like $200,000. The offices will be replaced by a Zenith telephone number, which is costly, ineffective, impersonal and so on.

I have discussed this with the Minister concerned and I think we are going to prevent that particular situation from happening. Those communities are not going to lose those offices. But the point is that it would be very effective if all the petitions dealing with that particular subject could be brought together at one particular point. In that way we could focus on the problem facing these communities. It may make sense from the point of view of the NFB to do this, but it may not make sense at all from the point of view of those communities or the country, certainly the Government, to have this happen. I know it does not.

It just happens that I have the names of those eight cities and I talked to about five of the members concerned, and I will get to the rest of them in the next few days. If those petitions went to one place, it would have a very significant effect in the sense that when they came to the particular committee, we could all go there and say we all feel strongly about this and we would be able to put the pressure on.

I would like to say in conclusion that I find this to be a very interesting Bill and I tend to support it because I can see a lot of good things happening. It seems to me that as our society becomes more complex—and nobody denies that is what is happening—and as the people in our society become more knowledgeable, given better education and so on, they begin to be much more cynical and they say "I want and demand" so and so. We in a representative democracy have to learn how we can bring those viewpoints together at some particular point. This is not the only way; there must be all kinds of things that we can think about. I hope the committee which is looking at changes of House rules will look very carefully at this kind of approach and others which would make the people in our country feel their Government is something that belongs to them and works for them. I welcome this kind of approach.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I rise to support the Hon. Member's Bill C-642. I want to deal with it in the context of the history of a parliamentary democracy and the operation of Parliament itself and the rights of citizens. The thrust of the Bill of the hon. gentleman is to see to it that something happens with a petition and a response is made to a petition of any one or more citizens of this country.

I suppose this is a matter which distresses all Hon. Members. It has been a rare occasion when Parliament has in fact dealt with or responded to a petition. I believe the Hon. Member cited a couple of occasions. I can recall one that had a massive impact on Members on all sides and which resulted in Government action. The Government chose to cite the petition as one of the reasons for its action. Many years ago, Hon. Members from the CCF Party presented a petition with respect to old age pensions, comprising approximately 150,000 to 200,000 signatures. The Government of the day, in subsequent months and years, in bringing about legislation concerning old age pensions, albeit inadequate, chose to cite the petition as being one of the reasons for doing it. That would be one of the rare examples where something resulted from the presentation of a petition.

Therefore, the question is: What is done with those petitions? I have been finding some interesting reading on the subject since I noticed the Hon. Member's Bill. I refer to "The People and the Constitution" by C.F. Emden, the second edition, at page 75, which states: "In December, 1679, Shaftesbury was astute enough to realize that petitions could be effectively used as a weapon in party warfare; and his Green Ribbon Club organized a vast campaign for the collection of signatures to petitions in favour of"—would Hon. Members believe it?—"the assembly of Parliament." This relates to some remarks made by the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay-Atikokan (Mr. McRae). Of course, when there is an extra-large or a controversial issue before the nation, there will, of course, be an upsurge in petitions—I also say this for the benefit of the Chair, and of the Table Officers—there will be such an upsurge that it may well annoy the Chair or the Table Officers. It may well annoy the Government. It may well annoy the whole House of Commons. It may well annoy most of the country. However, in line with the hon. gentleman's Bill, I submit that the right to have some response to that petition is inviolable and is in place under Routine Proceedings in this Parliament and under our rules.

When Shaftesbury twigged on to this use of petitions as a weapon of warfare between Parties, on a political issue, it was in 1679. The next year, however, in spite of the annoyance and the massive upsurge in petitions about an assembly of Parliament, that same Parliament resolved the following:

—it is and ever hath been the undoubted right of the subjects of England to petition the King for the calling and sitting of Parliaments and the redressing of grievances.

C. F. Emden went on to state:

The Bill of Rights of 1688 maintained that "it is the right of subjects to petition the King, and all commitments and prosecutions for such petitioning are illegal". But it was still necessary to provide against disorder in the manner of presentation of petitions;—

The House of Commons, as far back as 1689 and 1699, presented a method of order in the presentation of petitions.

We have a method of order for the presentation of petitions under the Routine Proceedings of this Parliament. In fact, there is a method of order which is not included in our routine orders. Chambers Encyclopedia states this at pages 628 and 629:

Petition is a supplication preferred to one capable of granting it. The right of the British subject to petition the sovereign or either house of parliament for the redress of grievances is a fundamental principle of the British constitution and has been exercised from very early times.

By the way, a Canadian citizen is included in the term "British subject". It continues to read:

The practice of petitioning the house of commons first became frequent in the reign of Henry IV.

The following is what should perhaps be included in our Routine Proceedings:

A member of the House of Commons, having orally presented a petition, deposits it by placing it in a bag kept for the purpose at the back of the Speaker's chair. Petitions may be informally presented by members by placing them in this bag.

If you look behind your Chair, Mr. Speaker, you will notice that there is no place for a bag in which to deposit petitions. In the present practice, we only go through the motions of petitioning, the right to petition, with the rare exceptions cited by the Hon. Member for Wetaskiwin (Mr. Schellenberger) and the one which I have cited. Even on those rare occasions when something has resulted from the presentation of a petition, the Government then cites those petitions because it suits its case, because it happens to suit the policy of the Government of the day. That is fair ball. I am not objecting to that.

That being the case and the practice, then I ask: What about answering petitions which do not agree with either the Government policy or the opinion of the House? What happens to them after they are presented? Concerning the automatic referral of a petition to an appropriate standing committee, first, as the Hon. Member proposes in his Bill, there would be a response of some kind from the Government within two weeks. The Government has the perfect right to accept or reject a petition of grievance or a request for redress, whether it conforms with or is opposed to Government policy. Actually, any Government of any Party would hasten to cite a petition in support of its case if it agreed with its policy. The question is, what is done with a petition if it does not agree with the policy of the Government or the views of the House? The petitioners are entitled to have something done with their petitions and to receive or reply to it. Even if they do not like the reply, they are entitled to it.

I would like to speak of the occurrence of several days ago and those others which have occurred from time to time when dealing with the Criminal Code amendments and other matters. From 1968 through to 1970, I remember our colleagues from le Ralliement des Créditistes rising in their places day after day with petitions on Criminal Code amendment respecting abortions. The House patiently heard them out. There were also such occasions during the time of the War

Measures Act, before and after, and there have been other occasions. They do not happen all that often. We have another one at the moment with regard to the statutory grain rates. No doubt there will be others with regard to the Cruise missile and other issues, such as capital punishment, gun control—you name it. On those occasions, even if there was a surplus of petitions, hundreds and thousands of pages, tens and hundreds of thousands of names, I have never seen or heard the accusation that citizens of our country or of Great Britain are abusing their right to petition. When they do it in massive volume, it is because of an issue of such extreme urgency and importance that thousands of individuals will collect the signatures of hundreds of thousands of others to petition Parliament. There is no room for the Chair, the Table Officers, the Government of the day or the House of Commons to interfere with the presentation of petitions under Routine Proceedings, however voluminous or numerous. We owe it to those who exercise their right to petition, even if it is only one citizen, that their petitions go to Parliament and are considered worthy of a response. They are worthy of a response even if it is only in the form of a letter to the petitioner from the appropriate Cabinet Minister, from the Government, or from the House of Commons. More particularly, it should be a response from a committee of the House of Commons. If nothing else, surely that is a matter of common courtesy.

Citizens do not lightly petition Parliament. We are all aware of how difficult it is to have citizens take a more continued interest in their own affairs and in their own Parliament. It is not likely that petitions will flood into Parliament, but they will on certain occasions.

It seems to me that this legislation not only enhances that historic right to petition Parliament but enlarges the responsibility of the Government of the day to respond to the petitioners with either an acceptance or a rejection in part or in whole. At least a response shows that those petitions were acted upon and did not lie on the shelves in the basement of this building or in a bag behind the Speaker's chair. Surely that would embellish that sacred right to petition the Crown through Parliament.

There will be those of shallow mind and intellect who will write editorials about obstructing Parliament. If the day ever comes that Parliament would construe the presentation of petitions by one or one million and one citizens, rightly or wrongly, as an obstruction of Parliament, the parliamentary democracy is in even greater jeopardy. I invite the House, the Chair and the Table Officers not only to reconsider the process of the presentation of petitions but to act upon referring the subject matter of the Hon. Member's Bill in the last minute of this Private Members' Hour to the appropriate standing committee. That committee can report back to the House with recommendations for changes to our Routine Proceedings, our rules and treatment of petitions. I assure you, Mr. Speaker, that this will enhance this ancient and honourable right as well as enhance this Parliament.

Mr. Maurice Harquail (Restigouche): Mr. Speaker, I want to join other Members in congratulating the Hon. Member for Wetaskiwin (Mr. Schellenberger) for introducing Private Members Bill C-642 in the House. I can also understand and share in the raison d'être for bringing this Bill forward this afternoon. It is linked to the word frustration. From time to time Hon. Members will raise matters in the House and appear not to receive the information that is deemed to be duly required. There is no question that the matter of petitions is very much at the heart of the operation of this institution. Indeed, petitions are referred to in the Orders of the Day and the Business of the House. When one reads the agenda, it includes Routine Business, Reports from Special or Standing Committees, Tabling of Documents, Statements by Ministers, and Petitions, followed by the balance of the agenda dealing with Government business.

There are other avenues open to Members, such as the daily Question Period, in order to make inquiries about matters relating to petitions in an attempt to elicit direct and specific responses from Ministers who are responsible for an issue relating to their Department. As well, there is the tabling of questions on the Order Paper, which is available to all Members. Members who are concerned about a specific matter may also use the proceedings on adjournment when they feel they may have not been successful in obtaining a full answer to a question dealing with a petition. They can raise that subject matter in the House at that time as provided for within our rules and procedures.

The purpose of the Hon. Member's Bill is to have this matter referred to the committee so that some teeth can be put into the procedures of bringing forward petitions. This is why I congratulated the Hon. Member for introducing the Bill. As other Members have mentioned, this legislation could provide a mechanism through which a direct response could be given to a petition in the House of Commons. I support that and applaud it. However, I feel there are other existing avenues which have been available to all Members with respect to the current special committee which is studying all aspects of the operations of the House of Commons. It is the Special Committee on Parliamentary Reform which is reviewing the operation, rules and procedures of the House of Commons.

Based on the effort that has gone into the preparation of Private Members' Bill C-642, it has been suggested that the Hon. Member should be encouraged to present his proposition to this Committee at the earliest opportunity so that it could be made aware of his concerns and his recommendations. He could attempt to convince the Committee to include the very items in his Bill in their recommendations to the House. Perhaps the Committee will agree with some of the provisions of the Bill, an Act respecting the presentation of petitions, such as Clause 4 which states:

> When answer to a petition is made, the Member presenting the petition may, forthwith and without further debate, move that the subject matter of the petition stand refered to any committee of the Senate, House of Commons or both Houses of Parliament that may be established to study and report upon petitions.

Clause 5 states:

Every petition and answer shall be printed as an appendix or supplement to the Votes and Proceedings of the day on which it is presented or made.

Clause 3 states:

Within two weeks of the presentation of the petition to either House of Parliament, a statement in answer to it shall be made in the House by a Member of Her Majesty's Privy Council or by a Member of Parliament acting for him.

Part of this is already in place and can be done. As I said, the opportunity is provided in Question Period when a Minister responsible for a particular area can be questioned very closely for a response to what has been done about a specific request contained in a petition.

As previous speakers have stated this afternoon, I agree that there is no question we have all experienced frustrations and have directly suffered from the system. While Parliament is a great institution and our system is the best in the free world, they can always be improved. We are dedicated to working toward adopting acceptable improvements which will bring us into the 1980s so that we will be truly representative of the people and carry out the work they have entrusted us to do. There is no doubt that we must be ever conscious and aware of our responsibilities in this regard and take every opportunity to improve the process so that we have a more efficient and smoother system in terms of our parliamentary duties and activities.

I have enumerated some of the opportunities which are already in place. They can be used by each and every Member of Parliament. Certainly these avenues can be utilized with respect to petitions. Of course there is always a need to give a word of caution. Whenever we are discussing topics such as the one relating to petitions, we know that there will always be abuse in our system. We have witnessed to date abuses in the House with respect to the motivations of petitions, the manner in which they have been obtained and the manner in which they have been presented to the House.

Mr. Benjamin: Be careful, or I will have a question of privilege.

Mr. Harquail: I hear the Hon. Member commenting on what I have said. I did not interrupt him when he expressed his views. The Hon. Member will recall that he made reference to grain rates in his speech. Not long ago the New Democratic Party attempted to trample over the proceedings of the House, showing complete disrespect for the Speaker and for the rules of the House, by bringing in Crow petitions and acting totally contrary to the rules.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) is rising on a point of order.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, I am rising on a question of privilege, let alone a point of order. The Chair ruled several days ago that Hon. Members in this corner of the House were perfectly entitled to present whatever number of petitions they had. I take exception to the Hon. Member calling that trampling on the rules or abusing the House of Commons. We did nothing more than exercise our rights, and this was confirmed by the Speaker. I would like the Hon. Member to recognize that and say so.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Did the Hon. Member rise on a question of privilege or a point of order?

Mr. Benjamin: I said both, just to be on the safe side.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The matter he raised would be more aptly described as a point of order. Hon. Members, in referring to their other colleagues in the House, should be very careful not to impute motive or to suggest the same. Of course it would be against honourable parliamentary practice to proceed in that fashion. Therefore I caution all Hon. Members to be very careful in their choice of words in that respect.

Mr. Harquail: Mr. Speaker, I certainly agree with your remarks. I was not imputing anything and I never would. I was expressing an opinion. When the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) used his time in this democratic institution, I did not interrupt him. There is a possibility from time to time that interest groups will sign petitions, for whatever reason. We are free to judge their motives for bringing in petitions and drafting them. Who signs them and whether they are properly signed is left for us to judge.

Returning to my argument with regard to abuse, I must say that I invite the Hon. Member to participate in the debate. That is what this place is all about. If I give my view and the Hon. Member does not like it, he can debate it with me. I welcome that. It is exactly what we are supposed to do here. Let me remind the Hon. Member that the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom) brought in a large obstacle; I do not know how to describe it. It was a painted crow.

Mr. Benjamin: A piece of plywood.

Mr. Harquail: He is an experienced Member of the House. He knew the rules. These were not his first days in the House of Commons, but I suggest with respect to petitions regarding grain rates, that he was, in whatever terminology one wants to use, trampling on, interfering with and abusing the rules of the House of Commons.

Mr. Benjamin: The Speaker dealt with that.

Mr. Harquail: We cannot condone that; we cannot agree to it and allow it to happen. With all due respect to the New Democratic Party and with all due regard for its rights, we cannot go that far and allow its Members to do that. In our daily duties we have to be steadfast and be on watch to defend and support the Chair so that this type of thing does not go on. This is what I meant when I said that we must be careful of the latitude we allow in the name of petitions.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. Pursuant to Standing Order 24(2), it is my duty to interrupt the proceedings. There being no other item on the order of business for today, the House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 11 a.m., pursuant to Standing Order 2(1).

At 5.38 p.m. the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

POINT OF ORDER

MR. DEANS—NOTICE OF POSSIBLE POINT TO BE RAISED

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a minor point of order that I would like to reserve at the moment. During the proceedings of Private Members' Hour yesterday, there arose a rather unusual situation. We are attempting at the moment to hear the actual tape recording of the proceedings in order to determine whether or not the situation occurred in the way that we believe it occurred; and if it did, we reserve the right to raise a point of order at a later time.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The Hon. Member's point is well taken.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE ACT, 1971 (NO. 3)

MEASURE TO AMEND

On the Order: Government Bills (Commons):

Second reading and reference to the Standing Committee on Labour, Manpower and Immigration of Bill C-156, An Act to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971 (No. 3).

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Before proceeding with the second reading of the Bill, I would like to point out that, after discussions held among all Parties representing the House, I should like to ask consent of the House for the following changes.

First of all, after second reading this Bill will be referred to a Committee of the Whole rather than a Standing Committee. Second, we have obtained royal recommendations permitting several amendments in Committee; these are now at the Table and I ask leave to have them printed in the Votes and Proceedings. After Committee and the pro forma report stage, we would proceed immediately to third reading of the Bill.

Mr. Keeper: Mr. Speaker, we are prepared to co-operate fully on this side of the House. However, we have some small but what we feel are important amendments. One concerns fishermen and the other maternity benefits as they affect natural parents. We would like to be able to introduce those amendments today at the same time as the Government introduces its amendments.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The House has heard the proposal put forward by the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mr. Axworthy). Is the proposal agreeable to the House?

Mr. McGrath: Mr. Speaker, I have to point out to the House that what the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-St. James (Mr. Keeper) is seeking now is at variance with the understanding and accord entered into with the Government. The Government extracted from us an undertaking that we would proceed with all stages of the Bill and deal with it in Committee of the Whole and that there would be no amendments except those put forward by the Government. We agreed to that but now the hon. gentleman seeks consent for his own amendments. That is completely contrary to the understanding and perhaps the Minister could confirm that.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I would want to confirm what the Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) indicated. We proposed to Members of the Opposition Parties that there were some critical amendments to be introduced and that we would have some additional amendments relating to maternity benefits and adoptive parents. At no time did I receive an indication that other amendments would be introduced at Committee stage. I am a little surprised to hear the Member from the NDP make that recommendation because it was not drawn to my attention when we had the discussion.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I was party to the negotiations that took place with regard to the agreement to pass the Bill today. At no time did I give any undertaking that there would be no amendments moved from this side of the House, neither was I asked for such an undertaking. I agreed on behalf of this Party that we would proceed with this Bill starting at eleven o'clock or as close thereto as we could, and complete it in all stages today. There was never any suggestion made to me at any of the meetings I attended that we were not to be allowed to move amendments.

I want to put it to you quite bluntly, Mr. Speaker, that we intend to move the amendments. If that understanding is not acceptable, then I suppose the whole agreement is in jeopardy.

Mr. McGrath: Mr. Speaker, I suggest that we get on with the Bill. In the interim, the House Leader for the NDP could confer with my House Leader and a representative of the Government and perhaps resolve the matter that way. In the meantime we are losing valuable time; we only have one day.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The House has heard the proposal put forward by the Minister of Manpower and Immigration. Is it agreed?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Agreed and so ordered.

Mr. Axworthy moved that Bill C-156, an Act to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971 (No. 3), be read the second time and, by unanimous consent, referred to a Committee of the Whole.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I am rising in the House to introduce Bill C-156, an Act to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971, for second reading. Before considering the proposed changes, I would like to deal briefly with the role of unemployment insurance as a system for providing income support and as a labour market adjustment mechanism.

[English]

I think it has been well understood by most Canadians during this very difficult period that the unemployment insurance system has made a remarkable contribution in maintaining a sense of security for many Canadians who were faced with the serious difficulty and tragedy of unemployment. It has also been able to maintain a very great degree of stability in our total social and economic system as a result. It has demonstrated its value as an important and significant framework of economic and social legislation during this very critical period of time.

I would like to point out to Hon. Members of the House that the unemployment insurance system has been one which has been constantly updated in order to be relevant and contemporary with changing economic conditions. I simply hearken back, in particular, to the major amendments which were made to the Bill in 1971 by one of my predecessors, the Hon. Member for Lincoln (Mr. Mackasey), who has unquestionably provided one of the most important contributions to expanding the application of universality to the unemployment insurance system, as well as introducing very many critical and important social clauses to that Bill, which allows Canadians during the 1980s who are faced with recession to be able to absorb the kinds of shocks and difficulties they have had to face.

We also recognize, Mr. Speaker, that it is very important to undertake a constant review and adaptation of the unemployment insurance system so that we can constantly have it evolve as a proper and effective governmental, legislative tool as the economic and industrial environment of Canada goes through change.

In that respect I would like to report to Hon. Members of the House that we are continuing to review many of the essential ingredients of the Unemployment Insurance Act. We have submitted some of the critical questions, such as the nature of payments and contributions, the phases of benefits and other means of trying to develop a more efficient and effective system as well as a more equitable system, during this period of time. I certainly am one of those in this House who share the view that changes and reform to the system must be a matter of constant undertaking by Parliament.

I would like to suggest at this particular second reading of the Bill, that we limit our modifications and refinement to a couple of very critical areas, partly because of the demands of time and partly because this is not the time in which we should undertake a major restructuring of unemployment insurance. I feel we are certainly looking forward to a period of recovery in Canada, but at the same time there are many Canadians who are still unemployed and who still require the services of the unemployment insurance system. Now is not the time to start major reformulation and restructuring. It is under continual pressure. As a result we must ensure that any changes we make do not destabilize the system and make it unworkable during a time when it is providing such a major source of support and security for so many Canadians.

Therefore, the proposals we will be making today on second reading deal with essential and necessary changes to the Unemployment Insurance Act, as well as some major areas relating to an inequitous clause under the Act with respect to women and the family position in Canada. I hope that Hon. Members will limit themselves to those kinds of changes.

That does not mean to say, however, that we will stand still and not continue with modifications. We still have the opportunity to undertake a number of imaginative uses of unemployment insurance. I would like to point out to Hon. Members how in the past year and a half we have slowly, but very deliberately, started to reshape the direction of unemployment insurance towards an employment insurance program. This would be a program which would not only provide income security during a period of a loss of job, but it can also be used to help people keep their jobs as a system of providing a way of using those funds to provide job protection and security.

It is that area where, I believe, we have made some of our most important changes and progress during this past year. Let me point out, for example, Mr. Speaker, that we have successfully employed Section 38 of the Unemployment Insurance Act to help keep people working during a time of instability and have, therefore, provided employment for over 31,000 Canadians. They have been able to undertake very useful and effective work in fisheries, forestry and mining; moreover, it allows people to stay on the job and keep themselves at work rather than staying at home and going through the frustration and the anxiety of being idle. Therefore, I feel Section 38 has demonstrated its value as a way of helping the evolution of unemployment insurance towards that concept of employment insurance.

Equally, Mr. Speaker, I think Members also recognize the important contribution the work-sharing program has made over the past year and a half. Under Section 37 we have now signed over 13,000 work-sharing agreements with Canadian firms and their workers. Those agreements have provided income and job security for over 250,000 Canadian workers. The work-sharing program is still being used by a large number of Canadian workers and their firms on a voluntary basis. That is unquestionably a clear demonstration of the willingness of Canadian workers, unions, employers and the federal Government to co-operate in a partnership to help keep people on the job. Recent evaluations we undertook have demonstrated that 90 per cent of Canadian workers in the program support it and were prepared to pay higher unemployment insurance premiums to see it continue. I think that is clear proof of its value during these difficult times.

As Members know, I recently announced the Government's approval of taking work sharing one step further to use it as a tool for preventing lay-offs and to provide an orderly transition for workers faced with technological change and industrial dislocation. Thus rather than have workers laid off and going through a kind of cold turkey on the street when a firm has to change to new equipment or new technology, we can now use this program over a 50-week period to enable management and workers to design a system for retraining, proper counselling and guidance so that workers are not sent onto the street and have in fact the opportunity to adapt to industrial change. I hope Members of Parliament will help us in the development of these pilot projects so that we can use this to face what is unquestionably one of the most serious concerns among Canadians—how to protect their job. Using this program under the UI system provides one of those basic and essential ingredients to provide that job security.

I can see a clear demonstration of this in my own Province, Mr. Speaker. In Thompson, Manitoba we had a major lay-off of over 2,000 workers at Inco. At the inception of the lay-off a Section 38 program was brought into play where something like 500 to 700 of those workers were employed for over two or three months doing major work in helping to expand the hospital system, provide major revisions in the physical structures of the schools, helping to rebuild the union centre and do a number of major light construction jobs around the town of Thompson. We were then able to introduce a work-sharing program into the Inco mine which has now enabled 2,000 workers to go back to work. So with that one firm in that one town in my Province, the new applications of unemployment insurance regulations have demonstrated their value. I would ask any Member who has any doubt whatsoever to go to Thompson and ask those workers and their United Steel Workers Local whether they think this particular direction we are moving in is valuable? I know what kind of answer they will get because they have told me personally how much they support this kind of movement.

At the same time, Mr. Speaker, we recognize there have been many examples over the past several months where regulations under the Unemployment Insurance Act sometimes appear to be unbending and too rigid. I want to tell Members of the House this morning that the CEIC has implemented a system of quality control to ensure that claimants are treated with fairness under an appeal procedure within the system. In addition, we have undertaken to refer a number of the regulatory requirements under the Act to a legal expert from Laval University to do a major review for us on some of the regulations themselves and how they can be applied with greater fairness and equity. I hope to be able to report back to Parliament in the fall, particularly to the Standing Committee on Labour, Manpower and Immigration, on the findings in this area and the kind of regulatory changes we will make after the review is completed.

Those are the kind of changes we are making without having to go through statutory amendments. At the same time, we do face some very essential and necessary changes to the Act due to circumstances somewhat beyond our control but nonetheless necessary. Action is required to put in place something that we have talked about for too long but have not taken acted on, that is, to introduce more equity into the payment of maternity benefits and to extend those benefits to the parents of adopted children.

• (1125)

Mr. Speaker, we need your support to get these changes through the House. Otherwise, the provisions will expire on June 4. One hundred thousand Canadians might lose their benefits next year. These workers, who live in areas with high unemployment, may have accumulated less than fourteen weeks of employment and will no longer be entitled to unemployment insurance benefits.

[English]

Obviously, the question of entrance requirements is central to the whole operation of the unemployment insurance system. As we all know, on June 4 of this year we face a sunset clause which would require the entrance requirements under the Unemployment Insurance Act to be a standard 14 weeks right across Canada. That would mean that many Canadians who are in areas of particularly high unemployment would not have the eligibility for a ten-week requirement.

Therefore, one of the major amendments that we are introducing today under second reading is to restore, for a two-year period, the ten-week to 14-week variable entrance requirement to ensure that Canadians in regions of high unemployment will still be able to have the kind of special requirements under the Bill which would be allowed to them under the ten-week rule. I think this would recommend itself to all Members of the House without much debate. It affects close to 100,000 Canadians. While it would have a saving of perhaps some $500 million to the fund, the kind of ensuing hardship which would be extracted by those who would be faced with a 14-week requirement I do not think any Member of the House would want to impose upon that particular segment of Canadian workers.

Therefore, I would ask for support in that particular amendment to extend the ten-week to 14-week variable entrance requirement for another two years at which time, perhaps, the House of Commons and Senate would be in a position to re-examine the whole structure of the unemployment insurance system and be prepared to make longer term amendments and reformulations of the Act.

The second major amendment contained in the Bill clarifies the Commission's authority to establish special regulations for Canada's fishermen. This particular requirement on the Act was first initiated in 1957. Fishermen, particularly self-employed fishermen, have a very special place in the unemployment insurance system. While self-employed people are not normally eligible for benefits, we have had to develop unique rules for fishermen, taking into account the seasonal nature of their work. They comprise a category of workers that is quite unique in our country.

These special regulations have been called into doubt as a result of the March 24 decision by the Supreme Court in the Vicky Silk case. While the Supreme Court upheld the appeal of the Federal Court decision, it ruled that regulations restricting the qualifying period for fishermen are in conflict with provisions of Section 146 of the Unemployment Insurance Act and therefore ultra vires. Essentially, it said that we have no right to treat fishermen differently from any other group, despite the seasonal nature of their work. It would affect some 35,000 fishermen, with particular impact in areas of the Atlantic Provinces, Quebec and the West Coast. What the amendment does is simply to reaffirm and strengthen the power of the Commission to make special regulations and in effect, restores our power to undertake the kind of requirements we place under the Act for fishermen to receive benefits.

The proposed amendment would promote stability of the fishing industry by enabling us to put into effect many of the key recommendations contained in the Kirby Task Force Report relating to the fisheries industry across Canada. The changes would also directly affect the ability of inland fishermen and other winter fishermen by allowing them to become eligible for benefits as well, consistent with their fishing season, which will come as great news for fishermen on the Great Lakes system and in my own area of the Prairies.

I want to make it clear that the Task Force recommendations could not be implemented under the provision of the order of the Supreme Court. The amendments that we are now introducing into the House will allow us to continue the power to implement the special requirements outlined by the Kirby Task Force.

We will also be introducing the rights of claimants to deal with some other special problems identified in the Kirby Report, such as the right of claimants to build boats while drawing benefits and new benefit levels based on the best ten weeks of earnings in fishing. That is a key requirement of the Kirby Task Force. I know it is a recommendation that will be largely supported by the fishing community across Canada. The amendments in this area, therefore, will encourage increased stability of the fishing industry by improving income protection and permitting the recommendations of the Kirby Task Force which were meant to rationalize the industry.

The third set of amendments propose to strengthen the regulatory power granted to the Commission in dealing with workers on annual contracts but with recurring time off. Categories of workers to fall under this definition are most obviously school teachers but they also include marine captains, navigational pilots and some professional athletes.

Once again, we were faced with a Federal Court decision which indicated that its interpretation of the present Act would require us to pay benefits to teachers on their off season, for example, even though they are being paid a full annual contract by their school boards. I think Members would recognize that this would essentially create a double system of benefits and would cost the unemployment insurance system somewhere between $300 million and $400 million alone. Therefore, we are asking for clarification of the right of the Commission to make regulations to ensure that that Federal Court interpretation would not provide the requirement for teachers to have that particular permission of payment even though they are under a particular contract of service. I would welcome Members of the House giving their support to this particular amendment so that we can clarify the Act and the law in this particular judicial decision.

That essentially sums up the contents of the Bill as it is presently presented to the House. As you know, Mr. Speaker, I also hope to introduce several amendments related to maternity and adoptive parents benefits. We would hope to be in a position to introduce these amendments at the Committee stage, and with the introduction of this Bill I think we are in a good position to do that.

I chose this approach because it was obviously essential the Act be passed by the June 4 date so the relevant sunset clauses that apply to the other amendments would not come into play. At the same time I want to express my own appreciation to Members of the opposition Parties who have indicated they are prepared to give quick passage to this Bill so that we may introduce the changes to the maternity benefits provision. I think this speaks to the consensus on the importance of both these issues as well as to a level of co-operation that Members have personally given me. I appreciate their gesture in this matter and I know many Canadian women will applaud this particular act by both sides of the House in bringing these amendments forward.

The particular amendments that we are introducing are to those sections which have been recognized as being inequitable in terms of the present Act. The Canadian Human Rights Commission has commented upon them and many women's organizations across Canada have indicated very clearly that the present system of maternity benefits is unfair.

I think we should also underline that these amendments which we propose to introduce at Committee will also speak to a very critical change in the work force. Women are no longer simply secondary workers in the work force but full-time workers and, therefore must be recognized as such under the Unempoyment Insurance Act. As well, we must recognize that in major social and economic change we must still try to provide full protection for the concept and values of the family status. As a result of particular provisions of the Act, people were forced to make choices and so were employers. We hope these amendments will clarify that very quickly and take into account changes taking place in our society.

The first amendment which we propose goes back to the 12-year-old maternity benefit. Under the proposed amendment, the outdated Section 46 would be deleted. This restrictive clause now prevents pregnant women not qualified for maternity benefits from drawing regular or sickness benefits in the weeks surrounding the birth. Such women will now only have to show that they are unemployed, capable of and available for work like other Canadians. We estimate that this legislative change will cost the fund $50 million, but would benefit close to 20,000 Canadian women in the work force.

We also propose to provide more equity to women by eliminating the so-called "magic ten" rule. Under this rule, a woman now has to prove that she worked for ten weeks around the time of conception. The intent of this requirement was to prevent women who found they were pregnant from seeking work to qualify later for unemployment insurance. Now, when women are such an integral part of our labour force, such a barrier is obviously not in tune with the times. It is also unfair to those women who have a long work history but do not happen to meet that rule at the particular time they become pregnant. According to the proposed amendments, any claimant who has worked 20 weeks in a qualifying period will be eligible for maternity benefits, the same as for all other special benefits.

Finally, I propose to alter the time in which maternity benefits can be claimed by providing additional flexibility. This flexibility will permit many mothers of premature and sick babies more time in which to receive maternity benefits. A maternity claimant who has been on regular unemployment insurance for 15 weeks or more has not been able to switch to maternity benefits under the present Act. That is because maternity benefits could only be paid in the first 15 weeks of a benefit period. Under our amendments, benefits would also be paid at any time during a 25-week period rather than being restricted to the first 15 weeks of the initial benefit period.

The new flexibility in the system will add an extra $80 million to costs in 1984-85 but the changes are expected to benefit some 65,000 women in the work force who would otherwise find the Act too restrictive.

We also propose to extend the same rights under the Unemployment Insurance Act to adoptive parents as natural parents have. The federal Government must enable parents to offer their new children the best of care. The amendment, if approved, would authorize benefits of up to 15 weeks to either of the prospective parents. Claimants will simply have to show that they have at least 20 weeks of insurable employment in the last 52, much the same as if they were claiming sickness or maternity benefits. Approximately 7,500 adoptive parents could benefit from the new legislation at a cost of some $22 million in 1984-85.

Unemployment insurance benefits for adoptive parents have been discussed for a number of years. In the past couple of years, I have received some 120 letters from Members of Parliament endorsing this change. I expect this is one clause in particular that will have full support from both sides of the House. The Task Force Report on unemployment insurance also adopts these recommendations. With the support of Hon. Members, we can have these provisions for adoptive parents and changes to maternity benefits in place by January 1, 1984.

That summarizes both the amendments in the Bill itself as well as the amendments we propose to introduce at second reading and Committee. Once again, I appreciate the support of the House for allowing us to undertake the debate of this Bill in one day. I believe that Bill C-156 reaffirms the Government's commitment to maintain income protection for those people without work as well as to try to redevelop the Unemployment Insurance Act as a vital act. It will enable Canadians to use the unemployment insurance system not just for income security but also as a way of protecting jobs. I call on Members of the House to support these amendments and give them swift passage.

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Mr. Speaker, first I want to say to the Minister that he is right when speaking to the consensus in the House to give this Bill passage at all stages in one day. It speaks to the consensus which exists in this place on the urgency of the matter and the serious unemployment situation which exists in the country today.

I also have to say to the Minister that while I do not hold him personally accountable, since he does not have much to do with the management of the business of the House, I believe this is a sleazy way to treat Parliament. Let me explain why. This Bill did not receive first reading until May 18. The Bill that received first reading on May 18 contained only the sunset clauses that will expire on June 4 and the clauses dealing with the Supreme Court decision on the Vicky Silk case.

Approximately at the first reading of the Bill on May 18 I was handed a letter from the Minister. I had a discussion with the Minister's Parliamentary Secretary. I was handed further additional amendments with which the Government intended to proceed if we in the Opposition agreed to a one-day debate. But here is the position in which we are placed. Obviously, we had to agree to a one-day debate on the sunset clauses because today is June 2 and the provisions regarding variable entry expire on June 4. Therefore we had to agree with that. If we did not agree to including the changes in the maternity provisions, the repeal of the iniquitous, unjust and unfair Section 46 and the new adoptive parent provisions in the one-day debate, the Government was not prepared to proceed with the Bill. That is what I call pretty sleazy. That is what I call holding this House up to ransom. We were left in the position if we did not agree to a one-day debate that we would have to carry the burden of responsibility for a continuation of these unjust and unfair provisions in the Act which have been there for the past 12 years.

We, Sir, would have looked upon this as an opportunity to reopen the Unemployment Insurance Act to give it the kind of exhaustive study it requires, to call witnesses as well as to see what improvements we could make to adjust the Act to the reality of the situation that we find today. It would have been an opportunity not only to close the loopholes in terms of the Vicky Silk case and in terms of extending the variable entry requirements, but to see what other ways we could improve the Unemployment Insurance Act so as to adapt itself to the realities of the day.

I believe this Bill would have given us that very opportunity, and in that regard I have to say I disagree with the Minister that this is not the time to start restructuring the Unemployment Insurance Act. I think this is the time. I intend to make the case for that during the course of my remarks. Obviously the unemployment situation is so bad, and it is going to be with us for so long, that the entire provisions of the Act are no longer really relevant to cope with the situation. We now have the problem of the exhaustees. These exhaustees are coming on to the statistical catalogue at the rate of 50,000 or 60,000 a month.

I have to say that we agreed to a one-day debate; we agreed to a one-day debate on the Government's amendments reluctantly. We did so not because we did not support the repeal of Section 12 and the closing of the gap with respect to treating women equally in terms of maternity benefits and to treating adoptive and natural parents equally. However, we resent being presented with this measure at the eleventh hour and told that if we cannot deal with it in a day then we have to take the responsibility for not having maternity benefits changed, not having adoptive parents benefits put into the Act or getting on with extending the sunset provisions.

With regard to the sunset provisions, en passant, and the variable entrance requirements, for which I can claim some parentage, it was our Party through myself as spokesman who suggested these variable entry requirements when the Bill was last being amended to deal with what was then a problem of regional disparity. Subsequently, of course, it has become a national problem. I intend as well to point out to the House the absolute need for extending the variable entrance requirements and giving the Government the power, arising out of the Vicky Silk Supreme Court decision, to make decisions with respect to fishermen, and with respect to fishermen on the Great Lakes and in the northern areas of Canada.

In reopening the Unemployment Insurance Act we have to ask ourselves how we propose to pay for these provisions. During the course of a brief discussion on this Bill in committee during the estimates of the Minister, I sought to obtain from the Minister an undertaking that there would be no increase in the premiums. I made the point then, and I make it again now, that to increase the premiums at this particular time would represent a disincentive to the private sector to create jobs because to do so would impose an additional burden, particularly on small business. I did not get the undertaking I asked for from the Minister during the course of the committee hearings.

Miss MacDonald: Neither did I.

Mr. McGrath: I noted the Minister made no reference to that during the course of his speech except to indicate what it would cost in additional charges to the fund to make these changes in the Act. I am looking forward to Committee of the Whole when we will have a chance to question the Minister.

We are now in the era of the billion dollar a month unemployment insurance benefits. We passed the billion dollar mark at the end of last year. Let us take a look at where we are today in terms of the state of the UI fund. In January, 1983 $1.05 billion was paid out in benefits to 1.5 million Canadians. In February the figure went down slightly to $997 million. The change was negligible. In March the benefits jumped to $1.47 billion paid out to 1.5 million Canadians. Benefits paid out in March were up 46 per cent from benefits paid out in March of the previous year. In 1982 a record $8.4 billion was paid out to Canadians in UI benefits. Of course, the all-time record will be this year.

I believe very strongly that if we are to address ourselves to financing these necessary changes, these humane changes, these changes which we as the Official Opposition support, then it will be necessary, notwithstanding the Minister's view, to think in terms of restructuring the Unemployment Insurance Act because the unemployment situation facing the country today will be with us into the 1980s. We have that forecasts on the authority of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lalonde) during the course of his budget presentation to this House.

The Government has had lots of time. Why is it we are only dealing with these changes at this time, the genesis of the changes with respect to maternity benefits in Section 46, and the adoptive parent benefits? These are from the study commissioned by the Minister on unemployment insurance in the 1980s and undertaken by a task force. The Minister has had the report since July, 1981. The Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mr. Axworthy) has had the recommendations of the task force for over two years and yet he comes to the House and says: "We have one day to deal with it". If that is not a sleazy, irresponsible way to deal with Parliament, I do not know what is. I do not hold the Minister totally responsible, because he is not responsible for the management of the House, but I certainly hold his colleague, the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Pinard), responsible for his sleazy treatment of Parliament.

Let us go back to the genesis of the changes. Let us go back to what the task force had to say. Let me read from page 70:

> The Task Force also favours the extension of maternity benefits to adoptive parents. These changes will result in much more equitable maternity provisions. The earnings interruptions of adoptive and natural parents will receive similar recognition, while elimination of the special maternity conditions will remove the potential inequities contained in such rules.

Then the report goes on with regard to maternity benefits, which comments I think are worth putting on the record because they sum up the view of the Official Opposition with respect to Section 46. We read:

> Return to a strict physical incapacity basis for maternity benefits would re-establish a clear philosophical foundation for their payment and achieve significant cost savings. However, in the judgment of the Task Force, it would constitute a significant step backwards in social policy.

That is the judgment of my colleagues and myself as well. This paragraph continues:

> In a period in which women's labour force participation is increasing steadily, such a change would greatly reduce the income protection capacity of UI as it applies to working women. Since it would contradict the intent of the 1975 Statute Law, referred to above, it would be difficult to justify.

Indeed, it would be difficult to justify. That is what the task force had to say two years ago.

Why has it taken the Minister of Employment and Immigration two years to come to the House with these long overdue amendments? Why does he come to the House and say we only have one day to deal with them in all stages? That is the question which the Minister has to address to the House and to the women of this nation who have had to suffer the inequities of Section 46 for two years during which changes could have been and should have been made if the recommendations of the task force had been implemented. The state of the Unemployment Insurance Fund is relevant. We will have more to say about this. I hope the Minister will address himself to it when we get to Committee of the Whole.

Why did the task force feel so strongly about Section 46 back in July, 1981? Obviously it was recognizing changes in the patterns of the work force, the emergence of the role of women as a major and permanent factor in the work force. I suspect it was also looking into the future because, based on our experience in the last recession when we lost have a half million jobs, the disadvantaged are the first to go and the last to be rehired.

In terms of the work force, who are the disadvantaged? The disadvantaged are women, young people and native people. That is why we look at the unemployment statistics today with a great deal of concern. For example, we find that in April, 1983 609,000 women were unemployed as opposed to 490,000 last year. We are told that this is going to get worse as we get into the new microchip society, the new industrial revolution in high-tech.

The task force was obviously able to anticipate what would happen in terms of the experience of the last recession. That, of course, is precisely what has happened. That is why there are so many women and young people unemployed in this country today. That is why the prospects of women being rehired are diminishing. It is because of the implementation of the new technology.

I want to talk for a minute about where we are in terms of women in the work force. My colleague from Kingston and the Islands (Miss MacDonald) will have to say more about that. It does speak to the position in which we find ourselves today with respect to women in the work force. Not only are they behind, but they continue to fall behind in terms of being discriminated against with respect to the work force.

Very simply, to relate the impact of high-tech on women is merely to look at the service jobs of the country, the majority of which are filled by women, and to see what word processors are doing to clerical occupations in the country. We see that in our own offices today. Women let go as a result of the recession in many services unfortunately will not be rehired. That is why I believe it will be necessary before too long to start thinking in terms of restructuring and changing the Unemployment Insurance Act to make it more relevant to the reality of the situation, a situation in which the Government, as part of its policy, bases its fiscal and monetary policy on projections which will see unemployment in double-digit dimensions go through the eighties and into the early nineties. We had that on the authority of the Minister of Finance in the course of his budget presentation to this House.

We now come to fishermen's benefits. This, of course, is not only a result of the decision handed down by the Supreme Court in the Vicky Silk case which was, as the Minister indicated, a decision by the Supreme Court stating that the Canada Employment Commission had no authority under the Act to make special benefits or regulations for fishermen. The consequence of that is the changes before us in the amendments which the Minister has brought to the House.

As well, there are the recommendations of the Kirby Task Force dealing with other provisions with respect to Unemployment Insurance benefits for fishermen. For example, there is the right of fishermen to draw Unemployment Insurance benefits in the fresh water regions of the country.

We welcome the changes that are being brought forward today. Some of my colleagues are concerned about the impact this will have on the Unemployment Insurance Fund. Hopefully, some of them will express that concern during the course of the debate.

We are concerned that the Government has seen fit to bring in this Bill at the eleventh hour, holding the gun to our head as Parliamentarians and forcing us to deal with all phases of the Bill in one day. That, of course, does not, nor is it intended to in any way, diminish our support for what the Bill seeks to achieve, which is to close the inequities in the Unemployment Insurance Act so that women who have to seek recourse under the maternity provisions of the Act will have the same benefits and be treated the same as anybody else under the Unemployment Insurance Act who receives sickness benefits.

Finally, I want to say this about the Act. It has been reopened now to deal with these long overdue amendments and to deal with the sunset provisions which expire in a couple of days. We have to think about changing the Act to deal with the reality of the present situation. I have no hesitation in putting this on the record. My colleague, the Hon. Member for Etobicoke Centre (Mr. Wilson), put forward a proposal which I personally endorse. In this regard I cannot pretend to speak for my colleagues because it has not been discussed in my caucus.

In terms of the present recession and the scope and extent of the unemployment situation, we should think of extending the benefit period to deal with the long-term unemployed. We have the phenomenon now of a large number of Canadians who are classified as long-term unemployed. If my memory serves me correctly, there are just under a million Canadians who are now officially long-term unemployed. Many of these are accounted for in the 50,000 to 60,000 unemployment insurance exhaustees who come on to the statistical record every month.

My colleague put forward the proposal that we extend the benefit period to cope with long-term unemployment because it would be better to extend Unemployment Insurance benefits than to have the exhaustees humiliated by undergoing a means test when applying for welfare, half of which will be paid by the federal Government in any event under the Canada Assistance Plan. I support that provision. I believe it is one that under the present circumstances would find favour with my colleagues in the Official Opposition, although it is a proposal that has not been considered at this time by the Official Opposition.

In conclusion, I look forward to the comments of my colleague, the Hon. Member for Kingston and the Islands. She has provided leadership in many areas of the—I am trying to pay a compliment to the hon. lady and she persists in interrupting me. I am merely trying to say that she deserves recognition for the leadership she has provided.

For example, I remember that the very first act of the Conservative Government of 1979 was to bring in a Bill extending the spouse's allowance which had previously treated women unjustly and unfairly. That was the first act of the Conservative Government in which my hon. colleague from Kingston and the Islands was a distinguished Minister. Of course, as spokesperson on women's issues for the Official Opposition, she on many occasions has put forward her concerns with regard to the unjust provisions of the Bills as they deal with maternity benefits.

I would also like to point out that my colleague, the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor), the distinguished Assistant Whip of this Party, brought before the House a Private Member's Bill that dealt with the unjust provision of the Act which failed to address the issue of eligibility for unemployment insurance benefits under the maternity provisions of the Act for parents who adopt children.

As well, my colleague the Hon. Member for Simcoe North (Mr. Lewis) put forward a motion under Standing Order 43 a year or so ago calling for the Government to agree to change the Act and repeal Section 46 to provide the same treatment under the terms of the Act for adoptive parents as for parents who were entitled to maternity benefits. That motion, of course, did not achieve the required unanimous consent.

We agree, Mr. Speaker, to honour the commitment we made to the Government to deal with all provisions of this Bill today. I point out to my colleague, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-St. James (Mr. Keeper), that we intend to hold him to the commitment that we made on the floor of the House to deal only with the Government's amendments. That is our understanding of the undertaking we made. It is also our understanding of the undertaking that was made by Members of the NDP. We intend to hold them to that undertaking and we hope that a satisfactory solution can be reached before we come to an impasse. God knows that we have little enough time left as it is to deal with these very important provisions in the Bill as we go into Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg-St. James): Mr. Speaker, I welcome this opportunity to speak on the Unemployment Insurance Act. I would like to begin with an overview of what the amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act cover. We, of course, are supportive of the over-all thrust of this legislation, but in spite of the positive things that are contained in it, much more remains to be done.

This legislation, Mr. Speaker, deals with variable entrance requirements which would allow people to collect unemployment insurance with fewer qualifying weeks in regions of higher unemployment. It has become necessary for us to deal with this legislation because there is a sunset clause attached to this provision of the legislation. So that we do not jeopardize the unemployment insurance claims of these people, we of course support this provision.

The Bill also attempts to deal with something called the Silk case which has to do with unemployment insurance benefits for fishermen. While we in this Party see the need for unemployment insurance benefits for fishermen, we have heard very urgently and strongly felt concerns expressed by fishermen about the adequacy of the present unemployment insurance system as it affects fishermen. My colleague, the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River (Mr. Skelly), will go into this matter in more detail later on today, Mr. Speaker, because the rights of fishermen to unemployment insurance benefits have not yet received adequate attention.

It is obviously necessary to have an unemployment insurance system for fishermen and this Bill does provide for that to continue, but a more equitable system is needed, a system that ensures that all fishermen will get the unemployment insurance benefits that they are entitled to. It is with this in mind, Mr. Speaker, that we prepared an amendment to the Bill before us regarding fishermen.

We on this side of the House did agree to a one-day debate with regard to this legislation. That can be seen as a measure of our desire to have the positive items in this legislation receive approval. But clearly there are matters of great concern to people in the country that are not yet addressed in the legislation, and that is why we drafted amendments, one of which is in regard to fishermen. Since the Government introduced amendments to its own legislation today, we feel that it is only reasonable that we should be able to bring forward amendments at the same time, particularly in light of the fact that we are co-operating with the Government to see that this legislation is dealt with in an expeditious fashion.

It surprises me, Mr. Speaker, that the Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) is co-operating with the Liberals in order to deny us this opportunity to introduce amendments which would address the concerns of fishermen in a more adequate way than in the present legislation. This leaves me with the impression that the Liberals and the Conservatives have formed a coalition to block the NDP from presenting the real concerns of fishermen in any adequate fashion. I do not want to dwell on that for too long, Mr. Speaker, because my colleague, the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River, will go into that issue in some detail.

Mr. McGrath: Mr. Speaker, I must rise on a point of order to seek your assistance. The Hon. Member has no right to impute motives. I indicated to the Hon. Member very clearly why I felt that the procedure he was suggesting was unacceptable, and that was because we had agreed to a one-day debate. That does not mean that I support everything the Government does and that I believe this is as far as the Government can go. I had already indicated in my speech that we should be reopening the Act. I know that you are about to intervene, Mr. Speaker, and say that this is debate, but the Hon. Member has no right to impute these kinds of motives to me. He made an undertaking, he has abdicated that undertaking and we intend to hold him to it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. The Hon. Member for St. John's East is quite correct in presuming that the Chair will refer to his point as debate. Nevertheless, it is always dangerous for the House to be put in a position where an Hon. Member would impute motives to another Hon. Member. Therefore I would caution all Hon. Members to be very careful in that respect.

Mr. Keeper: Mr. Speaker, I do intend to respect the rules, but I must point out as well as a matter of courtesy that I certainly did not interrupt the speech of the Hon. Member for St. John's East, and I find it incredible that he would interrupt my speech. We have made a commitment to co-operate and allow passage of this legislation in one day and we intend to stand by that commitment.

However, as stated quite clearly by the NDP House Leader, we certainly made no commitment that we would not seek leave of the House to introduce amendments. I would be glad to indicate that the purpose of those amendments is to give some voice to the current concerns of fishermen. I do not intend to impute motives, Mr. Speaker, but I would say that the fishermen who have contacted us have certainly asked us to bring their concerns to the attention of the House.

They would appreciate it if the Hon. Member for St. John's East and the whole Tory caucus would assist us by getting these amendments on the floor of the House. They would appreciate it if the Government would do the same thing, Mr. Speaker. We would appreciate their co-operation in introducing the amendment with regard to fishermen so that the rights of fishermen to unemployment insurance without discrimination could be more adequately dealt with by the legislation before us today. We have co-operated with the Government in allowing the legislation to go through in one day and we have no intention of backing away from that. We do not need the Conservative Party to hold us to our commitments; we make our commitments and we live by them.

This legislation not only deals with the variable entrance requirement and with the Silk case but also the Anderson case. This concerns the capacity of teachers to collect unemployment insurance in the summer months when they are paid on a 12-month basis. The Government is introducing amendments to deal with that situation and that is good.

The other matter that is dealt with by the legislation is maternity leave. We are dealing with the legislation and putting it through in one day because there are positive things in it that remove discrimination that affects women and maternity leave. I will come back to that point more fully later.

That is roughly what the Bill covers, but one of the things it fails to address in an adequate way is employment and income security for people.

At an earlier time unemployment insurance benefits were paid out of general revenues to a greater extent than they are today because the Government had a commitment to provide a job for every Canadian. When the rate of unemployment went above a certain level, rather than benefits coming out of the premiums paid by businesses and workers, instead they came out of general revenues. The Government recognized it had a responsibility to provide an economic climate and a job for everyone. When unemployment increased, the general revenues of the Government would kick money into the Unemployment Insurance Fund to pay for the increased benefits.

It is important that we return to that manner of financing unemployment insurance for a couple of reasons. The first is that when the cost of unemployment insurance comes out of general revenues it is a reminder to the Government that it has to create jobs for people. Second, when the cost of unemployment insurance comes out of general revenues, then it is shared on a more equitable and broad tax base. Premiums for unemployment insurance are regressive and inequitable because the poor pay more in premiums than the general taxation system pays.

I raise the question of premiums because there was an increase in premiums of some 54 per cent last October and there is the prospect of a further increase this Fall. In Committee we asked the Minister for a commitment that premiums would not increase in the Fall but we did not get it.

It is important that the Government be committed to two things, Mr. Speaker. The very first is full employment, which would mean less of a drain on the Unemployment Insurance Fund and, therefore, less likelihood of an increase in premiums. The next thing is that the financing of unemployment insurance be done in the most equitable way possible. That means that the greater share of the revenues for unemployment insurance should come out of general revenues rather than strictly from premiums. This is an urgent and important matter because there has just been a massive increase in premiums and there is the possibility of a further increase in the Fall.

The other major matter that the legislation fails to address is that as so many people have been unemployed for a long period, more and more of them are exhausting their unemployment insurance benefits and are being forced on to welfare. On a number of occasions this Party has called for the extension of unemployment insurance benefits so that people may enjoy a decent income without being forced on to welfare and suffering the stigma involved. Specifically, we have called for the extension of unemployment insurance benefits by 26 weeks. The response from the Government is that this would be massively expensive and thus impossible. The Government does not seem to recognize that whether people receive their income support from unemployment insurance or from welfare, the money still comes from the public purse. Denying people unemployment insurance benefits does not really save the Government a great deal of money.

The principle involved with the extension of unemployment insurance benefits is one of dignity, Mr. Speaker. Why not simply recognize that it is the responsibility of Government to see that people have work and, second, if the Government is not willing to provide work for people, that it is willing to provide income support by way of unemployment insurance. People have already paid into the fund and therefore have earned their right. If the Government does not keep people on unemployment insurance, then obviously they are going to be forced on to welfare and the Government has to pay in any case.

It was with interest that I noted an article in The Globe and Mail today saying that the Hon. Member for Etobicoke Centre (Mr. Wilson), a major candidate for leadership of the Conservative Party, has joined the New Democratic Party's call for an extension of unemployment insurance benefits. If the Liberal Party would follow the lead of the Conservative Party, perhaps we could get these benefits for people and increase their level of dignity. I should like to quote from the article as follows:

> Unemployment insurance benefits should continue indefinitely for the sole wage earner of a family living in areas where unemployment is higher than 10 per cent.

Unemployment is higher than 10 per cent in all of Canada today, according to the statistics that I am familiar with, Mr. Speaker. This is quite clearly an endorsation of the efforts of this Party to achieve an extension of unemployment insurance benefits so that people may have income support in dignity rather than being forced on to welfare. We all know that there is a stigma attached to welfare. The article goes on:

> Continuing benefits . . . would not add greatly to the cost of social assistance because the recipients otherwise would shift to welfare payments if jobs are not available—

So a major leadership candidate for the Conservative Party has endorsed our position regarding unemployment insurance benefits and I welcome it. I hope the Government listens to the reason set forth by the Hon. Member for Etobicoke Centre, which is that the Government is going to have to pay through welfare anyway and so it is time to extend unemployment insurance benefits. He notes that unemployment is higher than 10 per cent. I welcome this call for the extension of unemployment insurance benefits. I think the humanity of the country and the Government would be better served by extending unemployment insurance benefits than by forcing people on to welfare when the Government has failed to live up to a real commitment to provide employment.

The essence of the legislation concerns maternity benefits. We welcome the attempt to remove discrimination as it affects women. For example, there is the "magic ten" rule which provided that women had to be working within certain very specific dates in order to qualify for unemployment insurance in the event of pregnancy. The implication of the "magic ten" rule, without going into detail, was that if a woman became pregnant she would immediately run out and get a job in order to qualify for unemployment insurance benefits and so rip off the system. Clearly the Government has recognized that such is not the case. In today's economic climate it is very difficult to imagine anyone being able to find a job. We welcome this change.

The Government is withdrawing Section 46 so that there will be more flexibility around the administration of maternity benefits, and we welcome that, Mr. Speaker.

The most important part of these changes has to do with the extension of unemployment insurance benefits to adoptive parents. This is something our Party has been calling for. I note, for example, that my colleague, the Hon. Member for New Westminster-Coquitlam (Miss Jewett), had a Private Member's Bill with regard to maternity benefits and adoptive parents, along with my colleague, the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin). Therefore we welcome this extension of maternity benefits, Mr. Speaker, to adoptive parents just as these benefits presently go to natural parents.

It is interesting the way the Government has extended these benefits to adoptive parents. In making unemployment insurance benefits available in the way of maternity benefits to adoptive parents, it has made those benefits available to both the father and the mother, both the male and female members of the family. This, Mr. Speaker, is a recognition of the principle of parental leave. It shows there is a moving away from the notion of simply maternity leave, that is, the right of the woman to benefits so that she may take time off in the event of the birth of a child, and a moving towards the principle that both parents have a responsibility to parent children and both have a right to have time off around the birth of a child in order to care adequately for that child.

The Government, in extending unemployment insurance benefits to adoptive parents, is doing more for adoptive parents now than they do for natural parents. It was our intention, Mr. Speaker, to introduce an amendment today which would call upon the Government to make those unemployment insurance benefits which are available to natural parents, not only available to the mother, but to either the mother or the father, within the limits of the benefits which are presently there in the legislation. This is to make the legislation more flexible.

This kind of a change would not cost the Government significantly more than it is costing them presently to administer unemployment insurance. However, it would be an incremental step towards recognizing the principle of parental a moving away from strictly maternity leave to parental leave. That, Mr. Speaker, is an important principle. However, the Government should treat natural parents at least as well as it now proposes to treat adoptive parents.

This was the amendment which we wanted to introduce with regard to maternity benefits, and I would hope that the Government would co-operate to see that that amendment could be introduced and that the Official Opposition would extend the same co-operation. We are now saying, with respect to adoptive parents, that either the male or the female member of the family could receive unemployment insurance benefits. Therefore I say, why not do that for natural parents as well? It will not cost a great deal of extra money. It is just a matter of allowing for some more flexibility.

We welcome these changes with regard to maternity benefits. We welcome the fact that these benefits are being extended to adoptive parents. This is long overdue. We are happy to co-operate in the effort to have that done, Mr. Speaker.

I would like, however, to put this matter into a broader context. How does Canada compare with respect to the provision of maternity benefits with other countries? I will give some examples. In Sweden, maternity and paternity leave extends for nine months with 90 per cent of salary. This can be divided between either parent. In France they have the right to 16 weeks' paid maternity leave at 90 per cent of regular earnings. In West Germany, workers are entitled to 100 per cent of regular earnings for 14 weeks. In Italy, women workers have the right to 20 weeks' maternity leave at 8 per cent of regular earnings. In Canada, Mr. Speaker, we have 15 weeks at 60 per cent of earnings.

Therefore, there are other western industrialized countries which provide a greater measure of support to the family in the event of the birth of a child. There are other countries which have provided a more adequate system of maternity and paternity leave.

What I am doing today, Mr. Speaker, is first of all calling upon the Government to recognize the principle of parental leave, that is, that a family has both a mother and a father, and the Government should recognize that principle. It has alrady recognized it with respect to adoptive parents in the legislation before us. It must also recognize it in terms of natural parents. That would at least be a recognition of the principle.

In the long term we should make a commitment to work towards an adequate system of parental leave. In terms of working towards an adequate system of parental leave, which some other countries have already achieved, I would like to say that I know there would be objections about the cost. Some people who would oppose that would draw pictures of this costing an enormous amount of money. However we treat families, however we treat the birth of a child, there is a cost involved. It is a question of whether we should have measures which allow for nurturing in order to create healthy and full families. If we choose not to provide adequate support for families, Mr. Speaker, we may pay for it further down the road in terms of family break-up, alcoholism, and crime. Everyone knows that it costs an enormous amount of money to keep in prison people who come from troubled families and who lead troubled lives.

So it really comes down to a choice, Mr. Speaker, of whether we want to take preventive measures or rehabilitative measures, or whether we just want to have people suffer. The long-term costs of developing an adequate system of parental leave is going to be paid for one way or the other. Other countries seem to have done a better job in terms of parental leave. We should choose preventive measures rather than rehabilitative measures.

I would call upon the Government to make a commitment to work towards an adequate system of parental leave in this country, and I would call upon it today to accept our amendment which would allow for the equal treatment of natural parents along with adoptive parents as it affects maternity benefits in the existing legislation.

There is some progress in this legislation. We welcome it and that is why we are co-operating. However, I would like to point out, Mr. Speaker, that while we are moving forward, there are also some fears afoot that, in terms of unemployment insurance, we might again be moving backwards. I am thinking now, Mr. Speaker, of farm workers. Farm workers have fought for a system which would allow them to collect unemployment insurance the way other people can collect unemployment insurance. The Government has moved toward changes in regulations which would actually make it possible for farm workers to collect their unemployment insurance. There were administrative changes. There are groups in the country, Mr. Speaker, financial groups and some farm organizations, which are objecting to the changes which the Government brought in and who are lobbying the Government to backtrack on this move towards a greater equality for farm workers, to make it impossible for them to collect unemployment insurance. Today I call upon the Government to stick to its guns with regard to having an administrative system which allows farm workers to collect unemployment insurance just like any other worker in this country. I would call upon the Government in this day, when it is making some progress, not to backtrack, whether it is a few months from now, whatever the pressures which come to bear on it.

We welcome this legislation, Mr. Speaker, because of the fact that it removes certain discriminatory clauses which were long overdue for removal. We also want to indicate there is need for more, which is why we wanted to introduce amendments as they affect fishermen and maternity leave. That is why we have called for the extension of unemployment insurance benefits by some 26 weeks and why we welcome the fact that a major Tory leadership candidate has also called for the extension of benefits. We call upon the Government to recognize the fact that it is important to provide income support for people if it is not going to provide them with work, support which allows for the dignity of the individual.

At the same time we once again call upon the Government to make a serious commitment to full employment and, in the process, dedicate a greater share of the cost of unemployment insurance out of general revenue so that it can be borne more equitably and the Government can be reminded of its responsibility to provide work for all Canadians.

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Kingston and the Islands): Mr. Speaker, I am indeed pleased to rise and take part in this very important debate today, and I want to thank the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mr. Bujold) for having yielded to me his place in the speaking order.

As my colleague the Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) has said, the Government's proposed amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act as they affect maternity benefits are indeed long overdue. I am sure the Minister will recognize that I, among others in this House, have been pressing for these changes not just for weeks or months but for years. I am pleased to see that they are being brought forward. They will have the effect of making maternity benefits more accessible to women in the work force.

But while that is important, equally significant is that these amendments signal a change in attitude. They signal an acceptance of what is already a fact for so many Canadian women, the fact of the permanent presence of women in the paid labour force. More and more Canadian women are in the paid labour foece and they will continue to be for most of their adult lives. The 1981 census statistics indicate that 65 per cent of women under the age of 45 now work outside the home. Even more important and noteworthy is the fact that 45 per cent of women, almost one in two, who have children under the age of three years, were in the paid labour force in 1981. Although the majority of part-time workers are women, three quarters of all women in the paid labour force are working at full-time jobs.

In other words, women are in the work force to stay, yet they will face considerable obstacles, not the least of which is access to the so-called non-traditional jobs. That is, Mr. Speaker, the better paying jobs, the ones that offer more career opportunities than the clerical, sales and service occupations in which women in the labour force continually find themselves heavily concentrated. As was mentioned by my colleague, it is those very categories which are most threatened with obsolescence by the massive high-tech revolution which is sweeping over us.

Women are indeed under-represented in the higher paid jobs, Mr. Speaker. As well, they will continue to be paid less for the so-called women's jobs even though such work may be of equivalent value. That is, in terms of skill, effort, responsibility and working conditions they will still be of lesser value, given the way in which the market operates, when compared with jobs usually performed by men.

Until this situation is changed, women will continue to earn on average about half the salaries earned by men. That has been documented over and over again. Of women working in this country today, 75 per cent receive salaries of less than $12,000, yet women's earnings are essential to the well-being of the Canadian family. The Canadian Council on Welfare estimated in 1981 that if all the women in two-income earning families ceased working if they were to be out of the paid labour force, then the number of Canadian families living below the poverty line would rise by 60 per cent. That shows how critical the income of women is to the maintenance of family support.

That is why income support is so vital during the period when a pregnant woman or a new mother cannot work. Yet our Unemployment Insurance Act as it is presently constituted, before these amendments take effect, contains several barriers which stand between pregnant women in paid jobs and the income support they need for the time they must be off work due to pregnancy.

In addition to meeting the qualifications necessary to obtain regular or sick benefits, that is in addition to a labour force attachment of some 20 weeks, women claiming maternity benefits must also satisfy that "magic ten" rule in Section 30(1) of the Unemployment Insurance Act. This Section seeks to ensure that the women who was in the paid labour force has to be in the labour force at the time she became pregnant. At least ten of her 20 weeks of employment must fall between the thirtieth and fiftieth weeks prior to confinement.

That requirement, Mr. Speaker, has caused untold hardship, confusion and frustration for women who attempt to obtain maternity benefits. Not only does it create inequities which have been mentioned by the Minister and by my colleague from St. John's East, because the date of birth is not always accurately predicted, but it also means, and this is critically important, that a woman who has been in the labour force for any number of years but who happens to be ill or laid off temporarily at the time she becomes pregnant would not qualify for maternity benefits.

If this were not bad enough, Sir, Section 46 of the Act prohibits a pregnant women who is not qualified for maternity benefits from getting any other benefits in the weeks surrounding the birth even though she would otherwise qualify for regular or sick benefits but for her pregnancy. This is the infamous Section 46 which has been referred to as the catch-22 section of the Act as far as pregnant women are concerned. But it will be repealed by the amendments we are considering today.

There are many people who are opposed to changes when it comes to any reference to maternity benefits because they somehow feel that there is going to be a huge extension of payments or a huge addition to the moneys paid out through unemployment insurance benefits. I do not think that such people, when considering the changes to the Unemployment Insurance Act as regards—maternity benefits, fully understand the ludicrous position in which some women find themselves as the result of the Act as it presently stands.

I want to refer to a couple of concrete cases which will perhaps give a better idea of the injustices and absurdities caused by these sections to which I referred, Section 46 and Section 30(1). One such case was that of Stella Bliss. She was unemployed at the time of her confinement. She had worked the necessary 20 weeks to qualify for regular benefits, but she did not satisfy the "magic ten" rule. She was therefore denied maternity benefits.

Shortly after her child was born, however, she was in need of income and therefore sought work again. She was unsuccessful in finding a job. Being unemployed, capable and available for work, and having worked the required 20 weeks, she applied for regular unemployment insurance benefits. She was denied them because she was still within the 15-week period when maternity benefits may be payable, even though she was not receiving them.

Bliss argued that Section 46 was discriminatory since it had the effect of denying her benefits to which she would otherwise be entitled but for her pregnancy. She sought redress under the Canadian Bill of Rights. The Federal Court of Appeal ruled that the Canadian Bill of Rights was not contravened in her case because Bliss was being discriminated against, not because she was a woman, but, rather, because she was a pregnant person.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Miss MacDonald: It is really absurd, ridiculous, to think that such a ruling could have been made. The Supreme Court of Canada ruled that the Canadian Bill of Rights did not cover this kind of situation since it prohibited discrimination in the administration of the law only, and not in its content.

Of course, Section 15 of our new Charter of Rights and Freedoms would clearly apply to the discrimination faced by Stella Bliss and others like her. However, the women of Canada cannot yet rely on the Charter, since Section 15, unlike any other provision in the Charter, does not come into effect until April of 1985.

I want to cite another concrete case which will be addressed by these amendments today, the case of Bernadette Stuart. She was a pregnant woman who left employment as a result of acute appendicitis. She was denied any sick benefits because of Section 46 of the Unemployment Insurance Act, which, as I mentioned earlier, denies payment of any benefits other than maternity benefits in the period starting eight weeks before the week of the birth and six weeks after. She was also not entitled to maternity benefits since she did not meet the "magic ten" rule. As a result, she was denied both maternity and sick benefits even though she met all the qualifications for sick benefits. The Federal Court of Appeal ruled that Stuart could not rely on the Charter of Rights and Freedoms since Section 15, which guarantees equality before and under the law, does not come into effect until 1985.

These are two very concrete cases which are both reflected in what will happen today, but which could have been addressed previously had Section 15 of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms been in effect. That is why my colleagues and I have argued time and again in the House of Commons and elsewhere that the Government should act in accordance with the spirit of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms and amend laws which blatantly discriminate against women, rather than waiting for the three-year period to expire and for such cases to be forced to go to the courts. I am glad to see that this is being done in the case of the discriminatory aspects of the Unemployment Insurance Act. However, as the Minister and others know, there are a number of other inequities in our laws which have not been addressed during this period when amendments could very well have been brought in and changes made in the laws.

The Canadian Human Rights Commission has been asking the Government to amend these provisions under the Unemployment Insurance Act since it brought down its annual report in 1979. Women's organizations such as the National Action Committee on the Status of Women, the National Association of Women and the Law, and the Canadian Advisory Council on the Status of Women have repeatedly sought the amendments with which we are dealing today.

In fact, as the Minister will probably remember, on March 7 of this year, an Opposition day, the Progressive Conservative Party directed its attention to women's issues during the International Women's Week. Our motion at that time criticized the Government for its failure to move to grant legal equality in accordance with the Charter. In my speech I specifically referred to the Bliss case and the discriminatory aspects of the Unemployment Insurance Act.

I also want to refer briefly to the important amendment to the Act which my colleagues and I have been seeking through Private Members' Bills, through Question Period and other means, for the last number of years. I am now referring to the amendment which would allow adoptive parents access to maternity benefits on the same basis as natural parents. This, too, is a long overdue amendment; it was mentioned by my colleague, the Hon. Member for St. John's East, when he spoke earlier today. It has been put forward and argued strenuously by the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor), not only in the House of Commons but also in many other forums where I have heard him present the case for the extension of UI benefits to adoptive parents, and by the Hon. Member for Simcoe North (Mr. Lewis) and a number of others in this Party.

Again, this amendment recognizes the fact that women in the paid labour force need income support for periods when their work is necessarily interrupted, just as working men do. In addition, the amendment recognizes that there is no reason to assume that adoptive parents have any less need for such income replacement than natural parents.

I mentioned at the outset that these amendments are long overdue. I am sure the Minister recognizes that I say, with real sincerity, that I am pleased that he has brought forward these amendments today. We have pressed for these amendments time and time again. I know that the commitment has already been made and that our Party is firmly behind them. The recognition of this commitment is very clear from the fact that our Party has given its agreement to pass the legislation through all stages after only one day of debate.

In terminating my remarks, I would say that these amendments are one step forward, maybe a small step but still an important step, to full acceptance by society of women in all aspects of our paid labour force. This is a move toward the acceptance of women as a permanent factor in the labour force of Canada today. I am glad to see the Minister has finally brought them in.

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Speaker, I would like to address a question to the Conservative speaker, and it follows on the subject of the Bill before us today and the failure, I think, of the Conservative Party to address critically the issue of fishermen's unemployment insurance. It did not appear in the previous Conservative Member's speech.

More importantly, the original attempt this afternoon by the NDP to place an amendment before the House to improve and make more equitable the right of fair access of fishermen to the unemployment insurance legislation was blocked by the Conservative Party, who are prepared to accept the Liberal amendments without question. At the same time the NDP attempt to improve the lot of fishermen was blocked today—

Mr. McGrath: That is a cheap intervention.

Mr. Skelly: —by failing to accept an amendment that would protect fishermen on this important issue. I would be more than pleased to hear any representative of the Conservative Party stand up and justify that.

Miss MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, one thing I have learned over the years is that Members of the New Democratic Party do not understand the code of honour or ethics that exists in this House of Commons. When an agreement is made to debate certain amendments and to put those amendments through in the course of one day, I would anticipate that all Members of the House would honour that agreement. But what I see from the intervention by that Member of the New Democratic Party, who is also the spokesman for his Party, is an attempt to undermine and skewer the passage of these very vital amendments which women in this country have been calling for for many years. What the NDP really want to do now is introduce some amendments and upset the agreement that was arrived at after negotiations between the Parties. If they do nothing else, surely these amendments will have the respect of the women in their Party whom I would at least hope would want to see these amendments go though.

I would also ask the Hon. Member to read the words of the Hon. Member for St. John's East and those of us who have taken part in the committee. We do not consider these amendments to be the only ones ever made to this Act. We have said that there will be ongoing amendments which we will be presenting. We are aware that today is devoted to passing certain critical amendments for which a number of us have been fighting for a long period of time.

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Speaker, I did not want to engender the wrath of the previous speaker. I simply wanted an explanation as to why, given an opportunity not only to do justice for the women of this country in terms of unemployment insurance and adoptive parents, they were prepared to skewer fishermen. All that was required of the Conservative Party was simply to agree with the New Democratic Party that there were appropriate amendments that could be put at this time which would in fact improve the lot of fishermen. They failed to do that. If anyone is being skewered, it is the fishermen as a result of the combined efforts of the Conservative and Liberal Parties. That is what should go on the permanent record of this House.

Mr. McGrath: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The hon. gentleman does not seem to understand or want to understand English. The agreement was that we would deal with the Government's amendments at all stages in a one-day debate. The hon. gentleman's Party gave that undertaking. They are now breaking that undertaking for some cheap, shoddy, political act of one-upmanship.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. Of course, that was not a point of order; that is contribution to the debate.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I want to deal with the matter raised illegitimately through a point of order. In consideration of the day, would the Conservatives not recognize that the agreement that was put forward and ultimately accepted by all Parties was that we would pass the amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act put forward by the Government during the course of the day? At no time was there any discussion of whether it was possible to put other amendments.

The rules of the House quite clearly allow that if Members of the House wish to put forward amendments, they may do so. It is not a breach of the rules and neither is it a breach of any agreement.

Mr. McGrath: It certainly is.

Mr. Deans: There was no agreement not to place any other amendments. I did the negotiating. There was no agreement. It was not even mentioned.

Mr. McGrath: The agreement concerned the Government side. It is not yours.

Mr. Deans: The Member can sit and babble on all he wishes. I was at the meeting and there was no such agreement.

Mr. McGrath: That is not true.

Mr. Deans: I beg your pardon? I demand that that be withdrawn.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. It seems to me that the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) was given the floor to put a question or make a comment on the basis of the previous Member's speech. In the opinion of the Chair, however, the Hon. Member departed from the content of the speech made by the Hon. Member for Kingston and the Islands (Miss MacDonald) in order to introduce a totally new matter.

In the Chair's opinion, that is a departure from the understanding of how this question and comment period should be used. If the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain wishes to introduce a new element of debate under the guise of a point of order, in the opinion of the Chair that is hardly acceptable under the general agreement as to how the period should be used.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I now rise on a point of order. I ask that you require the Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) to withdraw his statement that what I said was untrue.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): After consultation with the Table, the Chair should inform the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain that the statement made by the Hon. Member for St. John's East is found both in the list of unparliamentary language and in parliamentary language that has been accepted since a certain date.

However, in the Chair's opinion, which of course is the Chair's opinion and nothing else, the statement made by the Hon. Member for St. John's East is not emphatic in the sense that he has made an accusation that the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain is—

Mr. Deans: You are getting yourself into a mess. Ask him to withdraw it.

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): Stop challenging the Chair.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): If the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain would let me complete my remarks, for an Hon. Member to say that an Hon. Member is not saying the truth is not necessarily the equivalent of saying he is liar. That is the Chair's understanding of previous decisions by other occupants of the chair.

If it pleases the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain, I shall give an opportunity to the Hon. Member for St. John's East to clarify his statement if that may be helpful.

Mr. McGrath: In order to get on with it, I am surprised the Hon. Member is so hypersensitive. What I said was not unparliamentary but I will withdraw it and I will tell the Hon. Member that he is guilty of a gross terminological inexactitude.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, I will not accept the substitution of other words to achieve the same end. Surely that is unacceptable by the Chair. Surely the Chair either requires that the statement be withdrawn or he names the Member.

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Obviously what the Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) said as an interjection is not unparliamentary. You have expressed your view in that regard. Therefore the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) has no right to get up and demand that you order the Member to withdraw his remarks.

Mr. Deans: That is a lie.

Mr. McGrath: That is unparliamentary.

Mr. Deans: That is unparliamentary too, I will tell you. But that is a lie. Page 110 of Beauchesne clearly states that you may not use the term "untrue". Read your book. Now you have yourself in a mess.

• (1300)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. It is the Chair's duty to try to reconcile different points of view arising in the House, taking into account the circumstances in which they occur. The Chair earlier based a decision on precedents that certain words—

Mr. Deans: Pages 110, 112 and 113. Take a look.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): —are to be found in both lists of parliamentary or unparliamentary language in Beauchesne. I can refer Hon. Members to page 113 and the use of the word "untrue". It is to be found as well on page 110.

Mr. Deans: Meaning what? Those are unparliamentary words.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): It is in both lists and previous occupants of the Chair have ruled on a number of occasions that words found in both lists are not deemed to be unparliamentary language. That was the Chair's earlier ruling. The Chair does not intend to go back on that ruling.

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): I am in the hands of the House. I will recognize the Hon. Member for Northumberland-Miramichi (Mr. Dionne).

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): Mr. Speaker, it is patently obvious that to accuse one Member of deliberately having lied, as the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain just did in my case, having said that what I said was a lie—

Mr. Deans: It was.

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): —is unparliamentary and I want the remark withdrawn.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain has heard the comments of the Hon. Member for Northumberland-Miramichi. The language used by the Hon. Member is obviously unparliamentary and I would plead with him to reword or rephrase his thoughts. He possibly went beyond what he really meant.

Mr. Deans: No, Mr. Speaker. I considered it a lie but I will say it was untrue.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): It being one o'clock, I do now leave the Chair until two o'clock this afternoon.

At 1:03 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

FISHERIES

REOPENING OF PLANTS IN GASPÉ REGION OF QUEBEC DUE TO FEDERAL GOVERNMENT INTERVENTION

Mr. Alexandre Cyr (Gaspé): Madam Speaker, I would like to comment on the fisheries industry in Quebec and on the resumption of operations in four Pêcheurs-Unis du Québec plants in the Gaspé.

In March 1982, the directors of Pêcheurs-Unis du Québec submitted a preliminary plan to the Government of Quebec for restructuring the Fédération coopérative des pêcheurs.

Minister Jean Garon and the PQ Government failed to take any action. In December 1982, fishermen from the Gaspé, the Lower North Shore and the Magdalen Islands established solidarity committees in order to seek the support of Quebecers for government intervention.

Since the Quebec Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food indulged in petty politics instead of letting fishermen and plant employees go back to work at the beginning of the fishing season, the Government of Canada intervened, in the person of the Hon. Pierre De Bané.

I am very pleased to be able to inform the House today that as of June 1, 1983, plants in Newport, Rivière-au-Renard, Saint-Maurice de l'Échouerie and Cloridorme, all in the Gaspé, have resumed operations. In all, 350 fishermen have gone back to sea and, with the fish they catch, are providing employment for 800 workers in the processing plants. Without the intervention of the Government of Canada, the Gaspé plants would still be closed as they are in the Magdalen Islands today.

AGRICULTURE

SUPPORT EXPRESSED FOR FARM MARKETING BOARDS

Mr. Gus Mitges (Grey-Simcoe): Madam Speaker, there is no question that farm marketing boards have proved their importance to consumers because they provide a stable supply of food at reasonable prices. Marketing boards were created because the free marketing of farm products proved unworkable in reality. Because farmers had very little bargaining power, they were always at the mercy of buyers and food corporations, which invariably resulted in unrealistic low prices for their produce. This in turn resulted in financial instability which drove many farmers, if not out of business, close to the poverty line.

In spite of what some special interest groups would like us to believe, marketing boards do not create scarcities or inefficiencies and do not provide excess profits. What they do is stabilize production and income on the farm, the vital factor needed to give consumers a regular supply of food at reasonable prices. This has resulted in Canadian consumers spending only 17 per cent of disposable income on food, the lowest of any country except the United States.

If farmers lose the protection of marketing boards, the result will be a widely fluctuating supply of food with prices that will have no relation to actual costs of production, and where the middle man will guard his profits by passing the pressure on to the producer or farmer. It would be a regressive step if this were ever allowed to happen.

POLITICAL PARTIES

POLICIES OF PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVE PARTY LEADERSHIP CANDIDATE

Mr. D. M. Collenette (York East): Madam Speaker, in today's Globe and Mail the Hon. Member for St. John's West (Mr. Crosbie) gives us some interesting insights into his policies should he become Leader of the PC Party. While trying to co-opt the forces of the right, he tempers this by advocating governance from the centre. After titillating the right with Reaganomics-Crosbie style, he now talks of accepting a federal deficit which he admits is largely attributable to the very generous, humane, and compassionate policies of the Liberal Party. In accepting the deficit, he sounds vaguely like another well-known Progressive Conservative who, a few years ago, reversed his previously hardened attitude on Government spending and talked in terms of a stimulative deficit. In fact, I quote the story:

> As a finance Minister whose 1979 budget promised to halve the deficit in four years, he argues that the only way to reduce the deficit is to hold Government spending down to the rate of inflation, resist the temptation to launch costly new programs, cut where possible and shoot for economic growth. "If you could do what I'm saying, it will be a very great victory".

Well, Madam Speaker, this just happens to be the very enlightened policy being followed by the Liberal Government over the last few years. Furthermore, after going down the dead end of advocating a policy of free trade with the United States, he now apparently embraces the Foreign Investment Review Agency because, as he admits in the article, Canadians basically support the concept of FIRA, which ensures that, to be accepted, proposed foreign takeovers must show a significant benefit to Canada.

One is left perplexed by the Hon. Member for St. John' West. Is he really supporting sound Liberal policies which have steered Canada well through the tough economic recession? If so, why is he running for the leadership of a Party whose policies he obviously rejects? Or, is one to believe that the Hon. Member for St. John's West realizes that victory is not within his grasp and he is laying the ground work for his return to the Liberal fold?

Madam Speaker: Order.

NATIONAL PARKS

BANFF LAND EXCHANGE DEVELOPMENT PROJECT—OFFICIAL'S STATEMENT

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Madam Speaker, a well known maxim is that if you tell a lie often enough, people will believe it. Once again a high official in Parks Canada was quoted in The Globe and Mail of May 27 as saying, "There are no admissions that anyone was doing anything wrong" in allowing Mr. Buchanan and his partners to begin work on the project.

Nothing wrong in destroying a beautiful park and replacing it with an apartment building? Nothing wrong with rushing the project through? Nothing wrong with ignoring and waiving the normal requirements for offstreet parking that all other applicants had to follow? Nothing wrong with swapping public lands worth $1,300,000 for land worth $600,000?

Now hear this: Parks Canada officials have agreed not to bend the rules again like they did to allow the Buchanan apartment building to desecrate a beautiful park, and that in all future developments the park officials must follow the proper procedures. If the park officials think this late confession will wash away all of the guilt of the Judd Buchanan deal, they should realize that every time anyone looks at the apartment buildings now located where the park once graced the town of Banff, they will be reminded of the bending of the rules to accommodate an ex-Liberal Cabinet Minister.

This under the table deal will forever remain a blight on Parks Canada and on the Minister of the Environment (Mr. Roberts) who permitted it, if indeed he did not order it.

BANKS AND BANKING

INFORMATION SOUGHT ON FOREIGN OPERATIONS OF CHARTERED BANKS

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Madam Speaker, recently the Ontario Securities Commission ordered that several Canadian chartered banks disclose information on their extensive foreign operations. It is one of the first times in Canada that the big banks have been forced to divulge such information. Usually we obtain this information through the United States Securities and Exchange Commission.

In the United States all companies that trade shares are required to report details of financial operations, executive salaries and compensation, and affiliations, to the Commission. If many of our largest corporations did not trade shares in the United States, we might never find out this information. This is a disgraceful situation.

The five big Canadian chartered banks control over $348 billion in assets and enjoy a federal charter which allows them a virtual monopoly of banking in Canada. They are extremely powerful and are controlled by a relatively small group of individuals who also sit on the boards of many major corporations. Thus, linked by interlocking directorships, the banks make decisions which affect our economic life.

It is disgraceful that we should be required to wait for information from the United States to find out what our banks are up to. Canadians have a right to know what bank executives are paid, what investments the banks are involved in overseas, and the extent of the non-productive loans the banks carry. Canadian legislation should require that the banks make such information available.

SOCIAL AFFAIRS

PLIGHT OF "BAG LADIES"

Mr. Stanley Hudecki (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): Madam Speaker, a new expression has been coined by the media, "bag ladies". This is not to be confused with the image implied by the political term "bag men". The so-called bag ladies are single, transient women whose total worldly possessions are contained in a bag they carry, hence the name. They rely on drop-in centres for sustenance, and depend upon hostels for a night's shelter. They are more numerous in large communities but are present in small cities as well.

Over 60 per cent of these bag ladies are ex-psychiatric patients suffering from chronic mental illness. This calls into question the effectiveness of provincial psychiatric release and follow-up programs.

The remainder are women who become homeless because of a variety of destabilizing social reasons. These ladies are street-wise, unemployed, and very often depressed. Most of them have experienced some form of violence, either in childhood or in early adulthood.

Hostel centres, such as the Brothers of the Good Shepherd Women's Centre in Hamilton, fulfil short-term needs for these women. What is required for long-term help for these unfortunate women is the provision of more supervised boarding homes, more halfway houses and community support systems, as well as greater participation on a voluntary basis by established women's organizations. I hope that all levels of Government as well as non-profit organizations will explore what avenues are open to help these ladies.

INCOME TAX

BOARD RULING IN FAVOUR OF HANDICAPPED

Mr. Scott Fennell (Ontario): Madam Speaker, a landmark decision has been made by the Income Tax Appeal that will assist the handicapped of the country in spite of Government inaction. Yesterday, Mr. D. E. Taylor, Chairman of the Tax Appeal Board, ruled that disabled people do not have to be confined to a conventional wheelchair to qualify for the $2,100 disability deduction. This decision overturns a ruling which openly discriminates against handicapped people who contribute to society through their taxes rather than being dependent on society to keep them.

The person who has been successful in challenging the Tax Appeal Board is Mr. Michael Overdyk of Pickering, Ontario. I congratulate both Mr. Overdyk, for his courageous and relentless efforts and appeals, and Mr. D. E. Taylor for making a fair and enlightened decision which, though long overdue, will go far in correcting the obstacles faced by disabled persons, particularly those who are able to help themselves.

CROWSNEST PASS RATE—STATEMENTS BY P.C. LEADERSHIP CANDIDATES

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Madam Speaker, the Progressive Conservative leadership candidates agree that the Crow rate should be changed and that grain farmers should pay more. The Hon. Member for St. John's West (Mr. Crosbie) says that the farmers' share of the cost has to increase. The Hon. Member for Etobicoke Centre (Mr. Wilson) says that the revised Bill is "a move in the right direction". Montreal businessman Brian Mulroney agrees that the Government is "going in the right direction". The Hon. Member for Yellowhead (Mr. Clark), who has only been here 11 or 12 years, says that he has not had time for a detailed study of the issue. Edmonton millionaire and barefoot boy, Peter Pocklington, says that the Crow rate is obsolete and should be abolished, and the Hon. Member for Rosedale (Mr. Crombie) wants changes in the Bill but agrees that grain producers should pay more.

If the leadership candidates for the Progressive Conservative Party agree that the Crow rate should be changed and the farmers should pay more, and that the Government is going in the right direction, will those leadership candidates tell all of us in which direction they would steer the Conservative Party on the issue of the Crow rate?

FISHERIES

NECESSITY FOR MAGDALEN ISLANDS FISHERMEN TO RETURN TO WORK

Mr. Rémi Bujold (Bonaventure-Îles-de-la-Madeleine): Madam Speaker, I wish to express to the House my indignation concerning the situation now prevailing in the Magdalen Islands. For more than a month, the PQ Government of Quebec has been holding people hostage in this part of my riding. A month ago, the federal Minister of Fisheries and Oceans made a proposal to the Quebec Government for reopening the fish processing plant which is a vital part of the economy of the Islands. The Quebec Government never gave any indication of any desire to help reopen the plant. Two weeks later, the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans made two major concessions to the Quebec Government that were in the interests of the fishermen and the people of the Islands, and once again, the PQ Government refused the federal offer. As recently as last Saturday, the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans tried again and submitted another proposal to the Quebec Government, saying that he was prepared to issue fishing permits to the Association des pêcheurs hauturiers, thus authorizing them to go to sea and harvest the fish, and once again, the PQ Government refused to co-operate in settling this case.

Consequently, Madam Speaker, I believe the Government should consider the interests of the people and the fishermen, set aside its political ideology and enable workers and fishermen on the Islands to go back to work so that plant workers as well will be able to do the work they normally do at this time of the year.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

THE ADMINISTRATION

USE OF GOVERNMENT PLANES BY MINISTER OF STATE (INTERNATIONAL TRADE)

Mr. Doug Lewis (Simcoe North): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. As the Minister will know, last evening on the CBC national news it was revealed that the Minister for International Trade made extensive use of the Government JetStars during 1981. On 60 per cent of those trips, the Minister, his family, and relatives, rode for free. I would ask the Minister of Transport what the Liberal policy is with respect to free rides for family members on Government JetStars.

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, Department of Transport planes are made available to members of the Cabinet who travel on Government business. The Minister's department is charged on the basis of the plane operational cost. In other words, the number of people on board the plane does not affect the cost.

I was also on TV yesterday trying to explain that, because of the heavy load on members of Cabinet, which everybody will recognize, travelling affords Cabinet Ministers one of the few opportunities they have to be with their wives and children. I argued this case, and I was promptly chastised by my own wife for not practising what I was preaching.

I have said all of this to indicate that Members of Cabinet use these planes on the honour system. They use them when travelling on Government business, and I tried to explain that having one passenger, or two or three, on board the plane does not make a real difference to what is being charged to the country.

AVAILABILITY OF COMMERCIAL FLIGHTS

Mr. Doug Lewis (Simcoe North): Madam Speaker, I direct my supplementary question to the Minister of Transport. What effort is made by Transport Canada to check the availability of regular commercial flights, such as those from Ottawa to Calgary? If the Minister were to take a regular commercial flight, it would save the Government some $1,150 per hour. What effort is made by the Government to check the availability of commercial flights before the free rides take over?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I repeat that the Ministers operate on an honour system, and I do not ask every Minister on each occasion if they could have used some other facility of a commercial nature. The guidelines are available for everybody to read. By way of illustration, the guidelines say:

—in the following circumstances:

(a) when a flight is being made to a point where there is no commercial air service; where no space is available ... where ... substantial savings of essential time can be made by using departmental aircraft—

Time is a very important consideration. Using myself as an example, very often in the last year and a half I have travelled west on Crow business and, because of the Government airplane, I have had the opportunity to do in one day or half a day what I would not have been able to do in three days using commercial airplanes. This illustrates the phrase "savings of essential time".

I believe that the population as a whole does recognize this. They generally request Cabinet Ministers to be present for many kinds of occasions, for personal negotiations as well as social events, and consequently using the Government airplane is the only way that we can fulfil those requests.

Mr. Lewis: Madam Speaker, we are not very impressed with the Minister's use of the phrase "honour system", because the Government abandoned the honour system a long time ago.

COST OF FLIGHT FROM OTTAWA TO CALGARY

Mr. Doug Lewis (Simcoe North): Madam Speaker, I would like to ask the Minister specifically about what transpired on April 16, 1981, when the Minister of International Trade flew from Ottawa to Calgary with his wife and three children, even though regular commercial service was available. That trip cost the taxpayers of Canada $10,000. How much advance notice was Transport Canada given of the Minister's requirement for a JetStar for his family on that occasion?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, to be able to answer that question fairly, I would have to know about all of the circumstances, and I do not. But I do know that I went to Calgary at about the same time, but I also went to Edmonton and to Regina at the same time. It all depends on the circumstances, and I referred to savings of essential time as one of the criteria that would be helpful to consider when making a judgment on any decision to use a JetStar. Be that as it may, I do not answer for each of the Ministers singly. Each one of them has to justify the flight of a Minister to the public, in general, and follow the guidelines. Each one of them has to send me a letter in which he says, and I quote:

I (or my Minister)—

If it is the Executive Assistant.

—request the use of this aircraft fully cognizant of the guidelines established by the Department of Transport, consistent with the Government's commitment to restraint and the Prime Minister's code of conduct as applied to Ministers of the Crown.

He must sign that, and then it is his responsibility to justify and answer questions of the type which has just been posed.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

INVESTMENT IN CAST SHIPPING GROUP

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Dartmouth-Halifax East): Madam Speaker, the Minister, and other Hon. Members on the Government side, seem to miss the objective we are seeking over here, and that is to restore some honour and integrity to the actions of the Government.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Forrestall: And in this regard, to avoid the boondoggling as much as possible with respect to Canadian National Railways' further investment of Canadian taxpayers' dollars in Cast, and to avoid what we are learning more and more about every day the fiasco with the Challenger, with Canadair, the $1.5 billion—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. Order, please. Does the Hon. Member have a question?

Mr. Forrestall: Yes, my dear, I sure and definitely do—

Madam Speaker: Do not call me "my dear". Call me "Madam Speaker".

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Forrestall: Madam Speaker, I sure as hell do.

The Minister of Transport will be aware that the Standing Committee has deferred, until such time as negotiations between CN and the Cast group are completed, any further hearings with respect to their annual report. Might I ask the Minister very specifically, with respect to the decision now in front of Cabinet to be taken with respect to further investment, whether the Minister would not give an undertaking to consult and advise his Cabinet colleagues on the special committee not to take a decision until such time as, first, the Standing Committee has completed its examination of CN's annual report, and, second, until the hearing under the Combines Investigation Act with respect to rebates west of Montreal is completed. That is the only way whereby affected interests can participate, that no decision be taken until the Canadian Transport Commission winds up its full hearings on Cast-CN sometime in September or the early Fall.

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, a decision has not been made, so, consequently, my colleagues in the Cabinet, having listened to the question, can decide to take the factors mentioned into consideration. At least some of them have already been taken into consideration. However, I can only say that the merger of Cast and CN is a commercial deal. If one waits until one goes to the CTC to get an authorization of some kind, one may wait a long time, first of all because it takes time to make the decision and, second, it can be appealed, and so on. This is a commercial deal and, really, one cannot stop the world to get on or off depending on approval of regulatory bodies. The practice in the past has been that the CTC approval is a post facto event. Therefore, I do not see really why we should stop the world in order to accommodate the question which was raised.

TIMING OF CABINET DECISION

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Dartmouth-Halifax East): Madam Speaker, would the Minister not concede that there at least has to be something strange about Cabinet giving approval to one of its principal Crown Corporations to proceed into a questionable private adventure at the very exact point in time when that principal Crown Corporation is under investigation, under the Combines Investigation Act?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I did get some advice from the Minister of Consumer Affairs on the subject and I was informed by him that the inquiry under the Combines Investigation Act now taking place has nothing to do with the circumstances, with the factors, conditions, et cetera, of a possible merger between CN and Cast. I took that precaution before giving the okay to the finalization of the negotiations between the two parties.

NUCLEAR ENERGY

TRANSPORTATION AND STORAGE OF ONTARIO HYDRO NUCLEAR WASTES

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. As the Minister knows, Ontario Hydro has stored millions of gallons of radioactive water at Pickering as part of the waste from its atomic energy reactor, part of the disastrous nuclear power program which has placed Ontario Hydro and the people of Ontario into $16 billion of debt.

As the Minister also knows, Ontario Hydro has recently announced that, in order to cut out the cost of a treatment plant, which it promised after some of this radioactive water leaked into Lake Ontario four years ago, it will transport this dangerous radioactive poison, in the equivalent of a truckload every second day, through Ajax, Whitby, and Oshawa, to Port Darlington. Will the Minister, the toothless watchdog of the Atomic Energy Control Board, today give this House a commitment to stop Ontario Hydro from endangering present and future generations of Canadians, and to provide the money necessary to treat nuclear waste safely?

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, government directives have been issued regarding safety procedures for these materials, and Hydro Ontario is obliged to follow them. We intend to ensure that the regulations concerning the disposal of nuclear waste are observed, in this case as in any other.

[English]

REQUEST FOR INVESTIGATION OF NUCLEAR ENERGY COSTS

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Madam Speaker, since the Minister has not seriously answered the question, I would like to ask him a further question. Since he seems willing to risk the safety of millions of Canadians, not only with radioactive water but with radioactive spent nuclear fuel and radioactive mine tailings, will he now tell us the true total cost of the Government's nuclear power program, including the cost of waste treatment? If he does not know the answer to that, will he at last heed the call of church leaders, union officers, and community spokespersons, by establishing a public inquiry into the risks and costs of the whole nuclear production cycle from mining to waste disposal?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, to answer the question in terms of the cost, I cannot give the Hon. Member that answer because he did not give me any notice. I will certainly look into it. If he would ask his question in a proper fashion, it would be put on the Order Paper and we would reply to it.

In terms of the inquiry, there were many inquiries on that subject, and I do feel that the performance of the Canadian nuclear atomic energy industry has been probably the safest in the world. We have never encountered any serious accident in Canada. We have developed a very good safe system, the Candu reactor. We have some mines which operate in the uranium fields, and so on. There is in Canada a nuclear energy policy which is one of the best in the world, and I am not ashamed of it.

TRANSPORTATION REGULATIONS

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Madam Speaker, my further supplementary question is directed to the Minister of Transport. Three years ago in July, Parliament passed the Minister's Bill on the transportation of dangerous goods, but the Minister has not yet put any of the regulations under the Bill into force. Will he therefore tell this House today when he will put these regulations into force, and whether these regulations will control the transportation by Ontario Hydro of dangerous nuclear wastes, so as to protect the people of Canada from danger to life and health through irresponsible cost cutting by provincial and federal Governments?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, the value and beauty of the Transportation of Dangerous Goods Act which the House passed two years ago is that it is all-encompassing. It covers federal and provincial jurisdictions alike, which is an innovation in the federal system in Canada—a very good one, I feel. Indeed, we have had difficulties in producing the regulations. We are still working at it. The difficulties are many, one of which is that we are trying to reconcile in this set of regulations the development of this matter in the world today, in Canada-U.S. trade relationships, and so on. It is very, very complex. Drafting is done in full consultation with industry. Progress is being made. Already Unit 1 of these regulations has been gazetted. Units 2 and 3 are coming. I recognize that my Department is late on this subject and I beg indulgence in view of the size, the magnitude, and complexity of the task.

WINNIPEG OVERPASS PROJECT—NECESSITY FOR FUNDING

Mr. Robert Bockstael (St. Boniface): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. The City of Winnipeg has deferred the reconstruction of the Salter Street bridge over the CPR yards in Winnipeg to the point that delay can no longer be tolerated. The Canadian Transport Commission will not issue a board order for the reconstruction of this overpass until it receives proof that the funds required are secured.

Since the UTAP funds are now exhausted, can the Minister tell us if the Government will soon be in a position to guarantee federal assistance for major grade separations of this nature under a successor program to the Urban Transit Assistance Program?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I remember reading that this is a good project that normally would have been approved. As everybody knows, however, UTAP is coming to an end in March, 1984, and at the moment all funds have been assigned. There is the question of whether there will be what friends of mine refer to as "Son of UTAP". The answer is that a paper is before Cabinet at this time. Consequently, if there is a son of UTAP, and if priority decisions are left to the Provinces, and if the Province of Manitoba decides that this is still a good project, then it will be done, but there may be some change in the legislation that the Government may approve.

LABOUR RELATIONS

GRAIN HANDLERS DISPUTE

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Madam Speaker, I would like to direct my question to the Acting Minister of Labour. Having regard to the fact that negotiations have broken down between elevator terminal operators and the grain handlers, is the Government going to continue its hands-off policy, or is it going to show leadership, exercise its responsibility, and bring the parties together? Will it appoint a conciliation commissioner or a conciliation board? I ask this in view of the fact that the core of the problem is found in the policies of the Government. What action is the Government going to take?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, we regret very much that both parties to this particular dispute have not shown any sign of compromise or of trying to reach agreement. It is particularly regrettable that they have now broken off all discussion.

I want to point out to the Hon. Member that the right of collective bargaining is an essential right in the whole area of labour-market development. With that right there comes a responsibility to the parties to the collective bargaining. It is very clear in this case that labour and management must exercise their responsibility, not only to themselves but to the public interest. They should get back to the table and bargain for an agreement between themselves as collective bargaining requires them to do.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is for the same Minister. Since this imminent strike or lockout comes at a very critical time, the crop year end, and having regard to the fact that there was a disruption of a shipment of one million tonnes caused by a strike last Fall, is the Minister saying that he is going to allow a strike or lockout to occur before any action is taken? Why will the Government not take its responsibility and ensure that grain moves in an orderly manner and without disruption?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, I am not sure that the policy of the Hon. Member's Party is because it is difficult to determine its policy on anything these days. Our policy is very clear. For years we have believed in collective bargaining as the basic means by which we arrive at solutions to labour disputes. We also believe that in order to ensure the trust of collective bargaining we must put the onus on the parties to the dispute to arrive at settlements and to take into account that the full right of the public interest must be served. Of course we want a settlement, and of course we do not want disruption. We believe that the parties to the conflict must get back to the table and bargain in good faith.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

NUCLEAR TECHNOLOGY—POSSIBLE EXCHANGES BETWEEN ARGENTINA AND LIBYA

Mr. G. M. Gurbin (Bruce-Grey): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. The Minister will know that Argentina is negotiating with Libya for the sale of nuclear technology. He will also know that Canada has recently completed co-operating with Argentina in the establishment of a Candu reactor system and that the system was just inaugurated. Is the Minister aware of the negotiations between Argentina and Libya, and is aware that Libya has attempted to procure nuclear weapons technology from China?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Secretary of State for External Affairs): Madam Speaker, I have been made aware of comments allegedly made by a representative of the Argentinian authorities about possible discussions with Libya but I have not received any authoritative information from the Argentinian Government that would lead me to invoke the provisions of the agreement we have with Argentina with respect to the nuclear facilities in that country which are of Canadian origin.

RELATIONS WITH ARGENTINA

Mr. G. M. Gurbin (Bruce-Grey): Madam Speaker, I have a supplementary question. The head of the Argentinian Atomic Agency was quoted at the opening of the Candu reactor as saying that this negotiation was under way and was being undertaken. I think that report is something that should concern the Minister and that he should follow it up.

In view of the current test of the reliability of Argentina, and in view of the fact that as a country we have not been able to secure that additional safeguard treaty that we feel is important, will Canada continue to carry on business as usual with Argentina? Will the Minister take any specific action to ensure that Canada will not contribute to the proliferation of nuclear weapons?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Secretary of State for External Affairs): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member refers to statements that have been made by the authorities in Argentina. My information is that a reference was made to the possibility of supplying medical isotopes to Libya and that they may consider the possibility of entering into a nuclear agreement with Libya. I do not think that constitutes a basis for invoking the agreement we have with Argentina with respect to the retransfer of nuclear technology.

INDUSTRY

LAKE ONTARIO STEEL COMPANY CAPACITY

Mr. Scott Fennell (Ontario): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce. As he knows, the steel industry in Canada is in a pretty chaotic state compared even to some segments of the United States. In my riding, Lake Ontario Steel Company Limited has been operating at 30 per cent capacity and recently increased that to 40 per cent capacity because the inventory depletion.

In view of the fact that the two associated plants of Lake Ontario Steel in New Jersey and in Dallas are working at 100 per cent capacity, and the plant in Whitby is working at 40 per cent capacity, with 400 people unemployed, what action is the Government taking in order to give some security to the steel industry and getting employees back to work?

Hon. Ed Lumley (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce and Minister of Regional Economic Expansion):

Madam Speaker, first of all the cyclical problem that the Canadian industry is experiencing is no different from that of other industrialized countries. As a matter of fact our steel industry happens to be in better shape than nearly all the industrialized nations of the world. That is mainly because of the capital cost allowances which the federal Government has offered over the past 15 years.

As a matter of fact, Madam Speaker, when the Reagan administration came into power, one of the areas they wanted to look at was the capital cost allowance that the Canadian Liberal Government had introduced, because they wanted to adopt similar measures to ensure that their steel companies were operating at maximum capacity utilization.

MINES AND MINING

IMPACT OF STEEL IMPORTS

Mr. John A. MacDougall (Timiskaming): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. My first question in the House on October 27 last was addressed to the Minister of State for mines when I urged her to look into the iron and steel industries in this country, particularly the Adams Mine in Kirkland Lake which was facing a three-month shutdown. The same problem is occurring today. Imported steel is being dumped in Canada. What is the Prime Minister going to do to help thousands of Canadians get back to work in order to get our steel industry going?

Hon. Judy Erola (Minister of State (Mines)): Madam Speaker, the problem is over-production of iron ore. I am sure the Hon. Member is very much aware of that situation. I must add that I believe that people in his area are being called back to work. It has one of the better mines in Canada.

FORESTRY

FOREST FIRES IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

Mr. Lyle S. Kristiansen (Kootenay West): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of the Environment who is responsible for the Canadian Forestry Service. He will be aware that British Columbia is experiencing the most disastrous forest fire season in decades. The Province this year has already lost some 45,000 hectares of forest land, which is a record loss of about 80 per cent above average. Has the Minister received any request for assistance from the Province of British Columbia? On the other hand, has he, or have his officials, made any offers of assistance to the Province to help meet this threat?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of the Environment): Madam Speaker, the situation is being monitored through the Winnipeg Inter-Agency Fire Centre. I am told that British Columbia has not, at least as yet, requested any aid from the Fire Centre. However, the Centre has identified possible sources of aid in Canada and the U.S. in case such a request is forthcoming.

INVESTIGATION OF POSSIBLE ARSON

Mr. Lyle S. Kristiansen (Kootenay West): Madam Speaker, in the Hudson Hope area, one of the three major areas in British Columbia currently being consumed by fire, we understand the RCMP are conducting a number of investigations into what they view as possible arson being responsible for a number of fires in that area. Is the Minister aware of how those investigations are proceeding? And, while he is at it, on a related matter can he tell me what the response from British Columbia has been to the offer in the federal budget of two new Canadair water bombers for the price of one?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of the Environment): Madam Speaker, on the first part of the question, no, I do not have at hand knowledge of any investigation being undertaken by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. As to the second question, I will be meeting with the British Columbia Minister to discuss that matter, among others, I think in the next week or so. I do not have the date immediately at hand, but we have had a request for a meeting and it will be taking place very shortly.

EFFECT ON TERM EMPLOYEES AT CANADIAN FORCES BASE BORDEN

Mr. Ron Stewart (Simcoe South): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment. In light of the recent conversation between his office and my office concerning the term employees who have not been called back to work at Canadian Forces Base Borden, the fact that their jobs have been filled by people on welfare, and that these welfare recipients in many cases would not report to work for these jobs, would the Minister now admit to the House that his so called job creation program as far as National Defence bases are concerned is really a job replacement program?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, I am very pleased that the Hon. Member is in conversation with our Department. I am glad he is in conversation with somebody about the program. It is unfortunate that he has not learned more about the program and the fact that we have now approved some 50,000 jobs across Canada. This is not for people who are simply on welfare, but in fact for those who have exhausted unemployment insurance benefits and therefore have not only lost their jobs but also their incomes. That is one reason why they were given some priority. Not only do they face by far the most serious and drastic circumstances, but they have also lost the protection and security of the Unemployment Insurance Act.

As far as a specific case on a DND base is concerned, we have stated in this House many times that it is not a job replacement program. In the circumstances where it was, the Minister of National Defence has indicated that those were term contracts coming to an end in any event. If there were any attempt to overlay those, we would bring them forward for review. We are presently doing that with the Minister of National Defence but we have not been able to determine whether there are actual cases of that kind.

SMALL BUSINESS

REQUEST FOR TAX INCENTIVE TO CREATE EMPLOYMENT

Mr. Otto Jelinek (Halton): Madam Speaker, a broad rule of thumb used by Government officials to estimate the number of full-time jobs provided by capital intensive projects is one job for every $100,000 spent. Other non-capital intensive but temporary make work projects of course are less costly but are mostly non-productive.

My question is directed to the Minister of State for Small Business. Since small business is by far the largest and most productive potential employer in Canada and is not able to benefit from all the phony and costly temporary make work projects, would the Minister consider initiating or supporting employment tax incentives against unemployment insurance premiums for easier and more extensive hiring by the small business sector, thereby providing more jobs and, more important, more productive jobs?

Hon. William Rompkey (Minister of State (Small Businesses and Tourism)): Madam Speaker, we are always prepared to consider other initiatives which would help small business, but I have to point out to the Hon. Member that the recent budget of the Minister of Finance is clearly a budget for small business. It is quite clear that the Minister listened to the small business community and responded extremely well. I want to congratulate him on the way he has done that.

When I look at the carry-over and carry-back provisions for capital losses and look at the R and D incentives, when I look at the capital projects going ahead all across the country which will provide a lot of work for small business contractors, and when I look at the housing initiatives that will do the same thing, there are a lot of initiatives there for small-businessmen. Of course if the Member does not believe me, he should listen to the spokesmen for the small business community who, I think, are saying the same thing.

IMMIGRATION

POSITION OF ILLEGAL IMMIGRANTS

Hon. Bud Cullen (Sarnia-Lambton): Madam Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Employment and Immigration. The press has reported the Minister as indicating to the annual meeting of the Calgary Immigrant Aid Society that "there would definitely be no amnesty declared for illegal aliens". Is that in fact the case? Has the Minister made his decision?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, as the Hon. Member knows, we have a special review going on concerning the whole question of illegal immigration. I indicated at that meeting in Calgary that a general amnesty is not a solution to that problem. In fact it would simply provide a perpetuation of the problem by bringing in another wave of illegals. But I want to report to the House, Madam Speaker, and I intend to table the report of that special review in front of the Committee of Labour Manpower and Immigration at the end of June, at which time we will outline the recommendations to deal with the serious problem of illegal immigration.

INCENTIVES FOR OIL SANDS PROJECTS

Mr. Jack Shields (Athabasca): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources who will know that the development of the oil sands creates thousands of jobs in virtually every sector of the Canadian economy, particularly in central Canada. He will also know that had the same deal been given to Alsands or Shell as was given to BP at Wolf Lake, we would now have an Alsands project going. In the spirit of creating jobs and putting Canadians back to work, is the Minister presently dealing with Shell Oil or Syncrude to see if they can be given the same deal so that they will develop the oil sands in the same way as at Wolf Lake?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, we are discussing some projects with some sectors of the petroleum industry. I am not at liberty to name the companies. There are some projects being debated at this time. Of course one of the problems is that many of the projects in the past were based on an ever-increasing international price for oil. We see now that the price has gone down so the economics of these projects are not the same as they were two years ago.

Most of the difficulties are not because of the tax propositions we have put forward. The Wolf Lake project was accepted not long ago. Many of the difficulties are not because of a lack of tax incentives from the federal Government or royalty incentives from the Alberta Government; they are based on the international price of oil which is not going up but is going down at this time.

GOVERNMENT OFFER

Mr. Jack Shields (Athabasca): Madam Speaker, is the Minister saying that he is offering the same deal to other oil companies for the development of the oil sands in exactly the same way it was offered to BP and Petro-Canada?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, when it was mentioned in the budget and in my communications with the press, we said we were offering a generous incentive to all the companies, so any which want to have the same deal as BP and Petro-Canada in the case of Wolf Lake can apply for the same deal.

By the way, I would like the Hon. Member to apologize to Petro-Canada because the day that Petro-Canada joined BP in the Wolf Lake project he was rather nasty vis-à-vis Petro-Canada. In fact the partners of BP, other companies in the private sector, did not want to join BP, so Petro-Canada did.

CANADIAN RADIO-TELEVISION AND TELECOMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION

RESPONSIBILITY TO DEAL WITH TELEVISED PORNOGRAPHY

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Madam Speaker, on January 18 the Minister of Communications, in reply to a question of mine on pornography in pay-television, told the House that Parliament had given authority over content to the CRTC and that the CRTC had the necessary powers to monitor the situation and take corrective action. He also said that he had full confidence in the Chairman of the CRTC and in the CRTC itself. Since then, the Chairman of the CRTC has said that he—

● (1450)

Madam Speaker: Order, please. The long preamble, with all the quotations, which the Hon. Member has given, is not necessary for the question. I would urge her to go straight to her question.

Ms. McDonald: My question, Madam Speaker, is: does the minister of Communications agree with the Chairman of the CRTC that it is not its responsibility to deal with pornography? Has he changed his mind from the position he gave to the House on January 18?

Hon. Francis Fox (Minister of Communications): Madam Speaker, when one speaks of the powers of the CRTC and the powers delegated by Parliament to the CRTC, one must obviously consider the Broadcasting Act which was passed unanimously by all Parties in the House in 1968. What the Broadcasting Act states is that the CRTC has responsibility for supervising and regulating the broadcasting system in Canada.

INQUIRY RESPECTING PENALTIES

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Madam Speaker, the Minister has not answered the question, and I think we must know where he stands. Does he consider that Canadian women deserve some protection against pornography, which is becoming worse? If so, how? Can he be very specific? If a pay TV station, or a network, or a television broadcasting station, is convicted of obscenity, for example, under the Criminal Code, does he believe that there should be revocation of licence?

Hon. Francis Fox (Minister of Communications): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member had the opportunity, if she so desired, to direct all of her questions to the Chairman of the CRTC, who appeared in front of the Standing Committee on Communications and Culture of the House. During the course of his presentation there, the Chairman of the CRTC, himself, indicated that he thought the proper place for dealing with obscenity in Canada was through the Criminal Code.

Very recently the Minister of Justice of Canada indicated his intentions of bringing forward amendments to the obscenity provisions of the Criminal Code of Canada. The basic position of the Government of Canada is that problems of obscenity on TV or in other areas should be dealt with, as is also stated in the Broadcasting Act, by a statute of general application. The statute of general application which should apply in such a situation is, indeed, the Criminal Code of Canada.

It ought not to be up to the Crown, the Government, or the executive, to decide what type of programming ought to be allowed in the broadcasting system in Canada. To make that type of suggestion is to indicate that we should have the type of system which does indeed exist in many socialist countries, but which does not exist in countries such as Canada.

FISHERIES

INQUIRY WHETHER MAGDALEN ISLAND FISHERMEN MAY RESUME OPERATIONS

Mr. Alexandre Cyr (Gaspé): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Hon. Minister of Fisheries and Oceans. The Gaspé fishermen accepted the federal Government's offer for reopening the fishing season in March 1983, pending implementation of the Kirby report. Although most co-operative fishermen in the Gaspé want to get rid of the Pêcheurs-Unis, they agreed with the De Bané plan so that the processing plants could be reopened. Considering the fact that as of June 1, 56 per cent of the ground fish quota has been caught in the Gulf, could the Hon. Minister inform the House whether he expects fishermen from the Magdalen Islands to be able to go back to sea within the next few days so that they can also have a share of the ground fish quota in the Gulf?

Hon. Pierre De Bané (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member was present with other Members from Eastern Quebec when we made our offer to all Pêcheurs-Unis plants, including the Madelipêche plant, and all plant workers agreed that the federal plan, namely, to reopen the plants, provided creditors exercised restraint, was supported by all plant workers, including Madelipêche. What I am trying to do now is to reopen Madelipêche, provided I can get the assurance of the Government of Quebec that it will do everything in its power to avoid a situation where reopening the plant would be a threat to other plants that have been reopened, in the riding of the Hon. Member for Gaspé, for instance.

RACISM

ESTABLISHMENT OF PARLIAMENTARY COMMITTEE—CONSULTATION WITH PROVINCES

Hon. Steven E. Paproski (Edmonton North): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Multiculturalism. Before a parliamentary committee is set up on racism and bigotry, I would like to know whether the Minister has consulted with the Commissioner of Human Rights and with his ministerial counterparts in the different Provinces.

Hon. Jim Fleming (Minister of State (Multiculturalism)): Yes, Madam Speaker, the proposed parliamentary committee, although new reports have had it otherwise, comes as a result of a symposium held in Vancouver in April of 1982, on race relations and the law. The Commissioner of the Canadian Human Rights Commission was a member of the symposium. There were representatives of a number of the provincial human rights commissions. The major recommendation out of the symposium was that we should have a national inquiry into racism in Canada.

REQUEST FOR MINISTERIAL ACTION

Hon. Steven E. Paproski (Edmonton North): Madam Speaker, is the Minister planning to spend another three-quarters of a million dollars out of his $13.7 million budget? I hope he will not take it out of the multicultural advertising budget and go ahead and travel across the country to study something which he has now done 11 times, spending $1.5 million. I wonder what the Minister will do now about bigotry. I think it is very important that something be done right now.

Hon. Jim Fleming (Minister of State (Multiculturalism)): I am afraid the Hon. Member, my critic, has not been reading my press releases. I will forgive him, except to say that the 11 situational studies to which he made reference, although, again, the press was wrong, did not cost $1.5 million. They cost $94,000. They were done in preparation for the symposium on race relations and the law.

My budget for grants and contributions to multiculturalism was doubled about six weeks ago. Therefore, next year it will be approximately $17 million or $18 million, double the previous amount.

One of our major priorities is race relations. Therefore, we indeed have focused very much on the situation. I hope we will have the support of the Hon. Member for the proposed committee because, indeed, the ones who called for it were human rights commissioners, civil libertarians, and a cross-section of visible minority leaders. I hope we will have his support and that of his caucus. Indeed, that is our parallel, our initiative in doubling funding and proposing the Parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. Oberle: I am inclined to say that an election has just been announced.

BANKS AND BANKING

REFUSAL TO CASH INCOME TAX REFUND CHEQUES

Mr. F. Oberle (Prince George-Peace River): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Revenue. I am sure that he, like myself and many of our colleagues, has been inundated with reports that Canada's banks are not accepting Government cheques, usually income tax return cheques. They are not cashing them unless a person has an account. If there is an account, it is frozen by the amount of the cheque for up to six months.

I would like to ask the Minister whether that is a reflection of the Government's precarious financial situation and the excessive deficit which it carries.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): The Minister of National Revenue's lot is never a happy one.

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, I have been accustomed to far more serious questions, and especially comments, from the Hon. Member.

I think the Hon. Member realizes full well that financial institutions are acting in the interests of Canadian taxpayers when they take certain precautions before cashing a cheque, and ask for ID and whether the individual has an account, to make sure that the person cashing the cheque is in fact the rightful recipient. I believe it is most certainly in the interests of the thousands of taxpayers who are now receiving income tax return cheques from the Canadian Government, to make sure their cheques do not go to the wrong person as a result of theft or because someone tried to cash the cheque by fraudulent means.

It is therefore a practice followed by financial institutions, to protect taxpayers by making sure that the cheque is being cashed by the right person.

[English]

Mr. Oberle: Madam Speaker, I had not intended at all to be devious or funny in my question. It is serious.

DELAY IN HONOURING CHEQUES

Mr. F. Oberle (Prince George-Peace River): There are many people who are unemployed, whose benefits have run out, who have earned some tax credits in previous years, and who do not maintain bank accounts. Why does it take six weeks or six months for a cheque to clear through the Government bureaucracy? Why do the banks need that unusual protection in terms of Government cheques? Where is the fraud? Is it in the Government bureaucracy? Is it in the Post Office? Has the Minister undertaken any initiatives to clean up this fraud and this mess?

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, I think the Hon. Member has a problem but is reluctant to take a careful look at the facts.

The precautions taken by financial institutions when cashing cheques, whether it is a cheque issued by the Government or by a private citizen or any other kind of cheque, are taken in order to protect their customers and the people in whose name the cheques have been issued. I think it is in the interests of all Canadians that such precautions should be taken, to ensure that when large numbers of cheques are issued, there is no opportunity for fraud which would deprive the rightful recipients of the money to which they are entitled.

MEASURE TO ESTABLISH

The House resumed from Tuesday, May 31, 1983, consideration of the motion of Mr. Cosgrove that Bill C-151, an Act to provide supplementary borrowing authority, be read the second time and referred to a Committee of the Whole.

Madam Speaker: It being three o'clock, pursuant to Order made Wednesday, June 1, 1983, it is my duty to put every question necessary to dispose of Bill C-151, an Act to provide supplementary borrowing authority.

Accordingly, the question is as follows: Mr. Cosgrove, seconded by Mr. Chrétien, moved that Bill C-151, an Act to provide supplementary borrowing authority, be now read a second time and referred to a Committee of the Whole. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Madam Speaker: All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Madam Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Madam Speaker: In my opinion the yeas have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Madam Speaker: Call in the Members.

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Cosgrove) which was agreed to on the following division:

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

WEEKLY STATEMENT

Mr. Lewis: Madam Speaker, this being Thursday, I should like to take this opportunity to ask the Government House Leader to clarify the business of the House for next week. At the same time I would ask if he could clarify the disposition of the motion debated last Friday with respect to the Alberta Electoral Boundaries Commission report.

Mr. Pinard: Madam Speaker, the business for the remainder of the week is that we have agreed to go through all stages of the Unemployment Insurance Act today and it should be dealt with before six o'clock. Tomorrow will be an allotted day.

[Translation]

As far as the business of the House for next week is concerned, I would like to designate two days as Opposition days, namely Monday and Thursday. Next Tuesday we shall be considering the report stage of Bill C-85, the Canagrex Bill, and next Wednesday will be set aside for Private Members' Business. Regarding the point raised by the Hon. Member—

[English]

In relation to the debate we had earlier last week on the electoral boundaries of the Province of Alberta, it was made clear during the debate that we intended that this debate be completed later. If I may, I should like to refer the House to Hansard of May 27, at page 25791, where I said:

The debate is not terminated today. It will go on at a later date and I will inform the House accordingly.

I think that was the agreement, Madam Speaker. What has been reproduced in Votes and Proceedings does not reflect what I said on the floor of the House. It should be made clear that the consideration of the objections to the boundaries of Alberta were not merely adjourned but that the debate has to be completed before the report is sent to the Chief Electoral Officer. If it is absolutely necessary, we might have a House order stating that the debate has to be completed first, but I do not think it is necessary. I think it was very clear, but to satisfy some minds we would agree that the debate has to be completed and that there be a House order to that effect.

Madam Speaker: I think it has to be made clear to the House—I understand that the debate itself was not completed, as was made clear by the hon. Minister and as he repeated today. Members must understand that even if the debate is not completed, unless an order of the House is given to the contrary, the Speaker is obligated to make a report even if that report includes the warning that some future debate will take place. However, according to the law, once a report has been made by the Speaker, the procedure goes on and is open. As Hon. Members know, once a report is made, then the boundaries can be proclaimed. If it is a House order that the Speaker do not report, in the dalays provided by the law, then of course the House interprets the law, and if that House order is given the Speaker will comply with it.

Mr. Lewis: Under those circumstances, Madam Speaker, I will get together with the Government House Leader and we will draft an order, which I am given to understand the New Democratic Party will agree with.

Mr. Pinard: Madam Speaker, I think there is agreement that the debate not be adjourned but that it be completed before you report to the Chief Electoral Officer. I will seek unanimous consent to that effect.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent that the Speaker will not report before the debate on the electoral boundaries of Alberta is completed?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Agreed and so ordered.

PETITIONS

MR. SKELLY—ABSENTEE BALLOTING

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Madam Speaker, again I have the honour to present to the House of Commons a petition from a large number of residents of the community of Sointula, British Columbia, many of whom are fishermen, and in past elections have been disenfranchised by the provisions of the Canada Elections Act. They humbly petition today the Government of Canada, and the Chief Electoral Officer to place in the Canada Elections Act an absentee balloting system so that these people within their own riding will have an opportunity to cast ballots in forthcoming elections.

MR. SKELLY—NECESSITY FOR SHIPBUILDING POLICY

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Madam Speaker, I have a second petition from residents of Ste. Catherine, St. Jean and St. David in the Province of Quebec, who petition the House of Commons to implement a rational and effective shipbuilding policy in Canada and place this request before the Government of Canada. Subsidiary to that, they would ask the Minister of State for Finance Development (Mr. Cosgrove) to bring forward a law related to the implementation of a Canada shipbuilding policy as soon as possible.

UPGRADING OF FREDERICTON AIRPORT

Question No. 4,786—Mr. Howie:

1. With reference to the answer to question No. 1,574, did the Department of Transport follow through on its plan to upgrade the Fredericton Airport by enlarging the reservoir, upgrading pumps and upgrading the field electrical facility in the fiscal year 1981-82, and by upgrading the waste water treatment plant, constructing perimeter fencing and extending the firehall in the fiscal year 1982-83 and, if not, for what reason?

2. What improvements and maintenance projects were accomplished at the airport during the fiscal year (a) 1981-82 (b) 1982-83?

Mr. Jesse P. Flis (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): 1. With the exception of the firehall extension which is 93 per cent complete and the construction of perimeter fencing deferred to 1983-84, the other projects have all been completed as scheduled.

2. Improvements and maintenance projects accomplished during 1981-82 and 1982-83, in addition to the above projects, are the following: (a) 1981-82; illuminate guidance signs, resolve VOR problems, enclosure and encapsulation of asbestos material in Air Terminal Building, energy conservation studies, replace mobile equipment, prepare airport land for leasing, modify intersection/access road, replace instrument landing system, roof repairs to transmitter site. (b) 1982-83; repair airport mobile equipment, energy retrofit, replace ceiling tile in Air Terminal Building, VHF/DF display control.

FOREIGN INVESTMENT REVIEW AGENCY

Question No. 4,910—Mr. Deans:

1. For each year since 1980, what number of person years has the Foreign Investment Review Agency assigned to its Compliance Division?

2. In each of the past four years, what was the annual number of cases that were reviewed by the Compliance Division?

Hon. Ed Lumley (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce and Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): The Foreign Investment Review Agency advises as follows:

1. Compliance Branch

FY 1980/81	44 person years
FY 1982/83	47 person years

of which:

Enforcement Division

FY 1980/81	13 person years
FY 1982/83	15 person years

2. Compliance Branch

FY 1979/80	2,142 cases reviewed
FY 1980/81	2,141 cases reviewed
FY 1981/82	1,997 cases reviewed
FY 1982/83	2,213 cases reviewed

of which:

Enforcement Division

FY 1979/80	1,293 cases reviewed
FY 1980/81	1,258 cases reviewed
FY 1981/82	1,198 cases reviewed
FY 1982/83	1,275 cases reviewed

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE ACT, 1971 (NO. 3)

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of the Motion of Mr. Axworthy: that Bill C-156, An Act to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971 (No. 3), be read the second time and referred to a Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Rémi Bujold (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, it is a pleasure for me to take part in the debate on second reading of this important Bill to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act. It is clear that in the circumstances, the Bill must be passed today, and I am sure that all Canadians will be glad to hear that we have been able to obtain the co-operation of the Opposition parties and will therefore be able to pass all three stages of the Bill this afternoon.

Mr. Speaker, in 1977, when the Government introduced variable criteria for eligibility for unemployment insurance and decided that these criteria could vary according to region, it realized that the unemployment problem was not the same everywhere in Canada, and that is why periods varying from ten to fourteen weeks were introduced, depending on the unemployment rate in the region concerned. Mr. Speaker, this Bill is intended to confirm the use of these variable criteria during the next two years, and I would like to emphasize that it is absolutely vital in regions like ours. I am particularly pleased, in this connection, to be able to draw the attention of the House to a group of senior citizens from the Municipality of Carleton, who can appreciate the advantages of this legislation.

Most of these people have experienced very difficult periods in their lives at a time when there was no legislation to protect them when unemployment was high and it was impossible for them to get a job. That is why the Government has decided to extend the period from sixty-six months to ninety, a measure that was urgently needed in our region and all other regions in Canada.

Of course, if we had agreed to proposals urging the Government to apply the same standard of fourteen weeks across the country, the Government would have saved about $500 million, but in view of the present situation across Canada and the unemployment rate, the Government has decided to maintain the variable criteria and to let some 100,000 workers continue to benefit from the provisions of the Unemployment Insurance Act.

Mr. Speaker, we have also made other changes which are extremely important to many, many workers across the country and which have a direct impact on the region I represent in the House of Commons.

We want to make it possible for the Government to establish regulations that will help fishermen. I have already had an opportunity to draw the attention of the House to a very unfortunate situation existing today in the Magdalen Islands, in my riding, and I think it is very sad that the Quebec Government cannot set aside its political ideology so that we can settle this problem. The fishermen will understand and realize that the changes we want to make in the Unemployment Insurance Act will make it possible for many of them to extend their fishing season for up to two or three weeks and sometimes up to a month, because these changes will not affect their insurable earnings. They will be able to receive unemployment insurance benefits during the winter months and sometimes during the summer as well, which will guarantee them a decent income.

In recent years, and especially in recent months, I have been meeting a number of fishermen's associations in the Gaspé, in the Magdalen Islands, on the North Shore, on the Lower North Shore and even in wellknown fishing areas in New Brunswick and other parts of the Maritime Provinces, and most of these fishermen, if not all, were in favour of the changes that we are proposing today. That is why we are proceeding with this legislation and why we want to give fishermen—Mr. Speaker, I am referring to people who work as fishermen on a boat—better opportunities for working at their own occupation.

The changes we want to introduce will, as I said earlier, enable the Commission to prepare regulations that will give the fishermen far greater flexibility.

In recent years, and especially last summer, I noticed in my riding that people have had to give up fishing because it was not worthwhile for them to continue fishing during the last weeks of August, September or October, because of weather conditions. When a fisherman wants to go out to sea on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday and there is a storm, he will certainly not go out on Thursday or Friday, because his catch for those two days will be so limited as to have a direct impact on his insurable earnings.

The changes in the Unemployment Insurance Act will enable the Minister to implement the recommendation in the Kirby report that the fisherman's ten best weeks during the fishing season should be used to establish his eligibility for unemployment insurance benefits and the amount of such benefits.

In my view, these changes are very important, and I am sure that the Opposition Parties have also realized that they were urgently needed in order to help people make a decent living during the fishing season, which has already started.

Mr. Speaker, I shall not make further demands on the time of the House, and these are the two points I wanted to make with respect to the Bill being considered today. I am sure that all Canadians, and especially people living in Eastern Quebec and the Maritime Provinces, will realize that in proposing these amendments, the Government has firmly resolved to remove regional disparities in our country and to enable all Canadians, wherever they may live, to have a share of the wealth in this country, and to be able to make a decent living and have the same standard of living wherever they may be.

[English]

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, first of all I would like to congratulate the Minister and thank him for bringing in the adoptive parents amendment. Some weeks ago when this Bill was before us in Committee of the Whole, the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton (Mr. Baker) and I brought this matter to the attention of the Minister and he appeared sympathetic at that time. I am very pleased indeed that he has now brought in this amendment. I do not think that we recognize enough the service that parents give to the country in adopting children. Many of these children have no name and no prospects except that of living in foster homes or institutions. Adoptive parents give the child a name and he or she becomes part of the family with all its advantages. Most important, the child is given training by the parents and starts out on an equal basis with other boys and girls.

Until this time this legislation has been very discriminatory. Some time ago the lawmakers saw fit to give consideration to the natural mother of a child in collecting unemployment insurance benefits if she qualified. That was an excellent piece of legislation also. When difficulties and complications during birth arise, sometimes the six month period is not enough. I understand the amendments which are going to be proposed this afternoon will look after that situation, and that where there are complications a mother who qualifies will then be able to have that time extended a reasonable amount. I am looking forward to seeing that amendment.

When Parliament adopted that Section to provide unemployment insurance for natural mothers, Mr. Speaker, it did not provide the same benefit for adoptive parents. Many Provinces, certainly Alberta, require that one of the adoptive parents must remain home with the child for a period of six months. In many cases this is tantamount to giving birth to the child because the child is adopted two or three days, sometimes seven days, after its birth. I think the agencies across this country concerned with child welfare who have followed that practice were acting wisely and in the interests of the child. I think it was one of the Holy Fathers who said if he had the care of the child for the first seven years, then he did not worry too much about that child after that. I think generally that is true and that is the basis, I believe, of the thinking of our welfare departments when they say parents who adopt a child should remain at home with that child for a period of six months. I hope there will be some provision made for that too.

What has happened until now, Mr. Speaker, is that there has been no unemployment insurance for adoptive parents. Consequently, they had to leave their jobs, and sometimes it was not there when they wanted to go back. With today's cost of living, many of these parents ran into financial difficulties because they were used to the two pay cheques coming into the home. When that is cut back to one, then they have financial difficulties. I understand that some provincial Ministers concerned, certainly in Alberta, have looked with a good deal of compassion on cases like that and have ensured that the parents could go back to work. However, there were other times when the job would be lost if the parents could not go back to work. Now that is no longer going to be a problem because if the mother qualifies for unemployment insurance, then she will be able to draw unemployment insurance just as if she was a natural mother. I think that is excellent, and again, as I said at the beginning, I want to commend the minister for bringing in this amendment. He could have said, "We are too busy now. We have many other Bills". Instead, he put this one on the line, he said it was important, and I agree with him. This will have a great impact on scores of babies who are adopted from this time onward because the parent will be able to stay home and give the child the training it requires.

Now when a parent adopts a child of school age the same problem does not exist. Many of our child welfare agencies recognize that. Someone should be at home with the child when he is not at school, but certainly parents can work during school hours without detriment to the child. That is provided for in the rules and regulations of the Province of Alberta, and I suppose in every other Province. Consequently, when a child is adopted at the age of 12 or 14, again the parent should be at home when the child is there. But it is not the same situation as when a family adopts a three-day old baby. So this is excellent legislation. It will eliminate the discrimination in the Act.

Some of my own constituents have faced that discrimination and they felt it was the officers of the Commission who were preventing them from obtaining unemployment insurance. They could not believe that the law said that only natural parents would secure this benefit. Some even appealed the decisions because they wanted to bring attention to the discrimination which was evident. I am glad that the Bill, with thanks to the Minister who has brought it in at this time, will eliminate discrimination against adoptive parents.

I say again that we owe a tremendous amount to men and women who adopt a baby or child of any age, take the child into their home, make it their own, and provide it with not only worldly goods, clothes and education, but also with love and care. That is one of the important things in a young child's life.

This is important legislation and I am certainly happy that the Minister is presenting it this afternoon. Some people have said to me that there is too much of a chance for abuse in this legislation. I cannot see that. It has been mentioned that some people will pay $5,000 for a baby. Will the mother then be able to collect unemployment insurance? Anyone who pays $5,000, $1,000 or any sum of money to buy a baby is surely in such a good financial position that the mother may not even be working. Such people want a child so badly that they are prepared to buy one. They have the worldly goods. If it is done above board, and I do not like that type of thing myself, but if it is done above the table, through proper authorities, the child does receive a home. However, such a parent would not qualify for unemployment insurance.

The only mothers or fathers who qualify will be those who have the necessary weeks of employment with a particular firm. No one will work just for the sake of being able to draw unemployment insurance after adopting a child. It is part of their lives. They try to build up a home. They try to have a home, a nest, so to speak. Then, when they are in a sufficiently good financial position to give a child a worth-while life, they adopt. The everyday expenses are heavy. This is where the unemployment insurance will come in. It will be a tremendous boost to those who qualify for it. For those who do not qualify, it will be exactly the way it is today. There will not be any change. There will not be scores of people who will suddenly adopt babies just for the sake of receiving unemployment insurance benefits. I do not believe that at all. As a matter of fact, there are not that many babies available. They are scarce when one wants to adopt a child. Maybe that is good. However, these people do have to qualify under the Act.

When they qualify, they are entitled to benefits, just the same as a workman who becomes ill on the job. If he has the necessary weeks, he receives the unemployment insurance to which he is entitled. He must have it to continue to live. Today many of our workers do not have nest eggs. They live week by week or month by month, on their paycheques. Therefore, I do not think this will be a tremendous burden on the Unemployment Insurance Fund. I am doubtful if, after a year, we will even notice the amount which is drawn out of the fund by adoptive parents. However, even if we do, this is worthwhile legislation.

It is also necessary for everyone in the country who is contributing to be able to work. Work is necessary. Productivity is necessary. Without productivity in this country, we cannot have legislation such as this. Without productivity, we cannot have old age pensions or care for those who need it the most. Consequently, a central part of this whole program is to ensure more and more industries, investment and employment of people so that employers and workers continue to contribute to the Unemployment Insurance Fund. The productivity in the country enables the Government to give out social legislation such as this which will be of benefit and help to us in the future.

I do not think that a dollar spent on care for a child, whether an adopted child or otherwise, is money lost. I do not think it is an expense. Rather, it is an investment. Every child in whom we invest will make a contribution in the future. More and more, we must start thinking about investing in our boys and girls instead of paying thousands of dollars after they make mistakes. Let us prevent the mistakes from happening. We surely know enough psychology and sociology today to be able to work out plans which will enable scores of boys and girls who today land up in our prisons and institutional homes to have the proper channels to make a go in life so that they do not end up in jail.

I remember going to an institution in Edmonton just a few years ago. I saw many boys and girls, 14 years to 16 years of age, who had been sent there by the courts. When I spoke to many of them, I found that the reason they were there could be summed like this: they did not make their way in high school. They did not learn how to read when they were in grades one through five. They were slow learners. They were pushed ahead until they reached the senior grades of elementary school or the early years of high school. They could not read and could not keep up. They became discouraged and frustrated and dropped out. Then they lost their friends who were still in school. They got in with a bad crowd, and that is why they ended up in the institution.

I saw them trying to learn how to read. One boy was reading a book with the name of a detective story on the cover. I asked the instructor why he was reading detective stories. He said, "That is not a detective story. Go around and look". I did so and found that the boy was reading a grade three primer. He was learning how to read but did not want anyone to know that he did not know how to read, and that was natural. A child should not be embarrassed because he is a slow learner.

Our schools must recognize the fact that our boys and girls who are slow learners are not retarded. They just need extra attention. If they learn how to read, that is one of the best things in the world to ensure that they will make their way in life a little later on. This will prevent us from having to spend money on jails and institutions. Thousands of dollars are being spent today, but this expense could be avoided if we take the necessary sociological and psychological steps to try to prevent these children from taking the wrong path. We should help them to go on the right path, which will make them better citizens and the country a better country.

Greater productivity will enable us to give good social legislation to the people who need it, including what we are doing today. However, if we do not have productivity, then we will not be able to provide those things we want to provide to those who are unable to provide for themselves, those who are unable to care for themselves, those who need the help the most.

Therefore, I would like to emphasize two points. The Unemployment Insurance Fund is there. If there are abuses, let us try to wipe them out. We should find them and cure them. There are abuses in this type of legislation, but let us not penalize those who only want to do what is right with the fund because there are others who abuse the fund. Second, let us ensure that we give the people of this country a chance to invest, encouraging them to invest their money so that we can have jobs. There are no jobs without investment. Invest the money, and then money will come into funds such as the Unemployment Insurance Fund, enabling us to provide legislation of this kind without its being a burden on the country.

I am happy to see this legislation coming in. It is long overdue. It is doing away with discrimination which should never have been there but has been there. It will now make many people across the country happy because they can see that they may well be able to adopt a child, whereas before they just could not afford to do it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Questions and comments. Debate.

Mr. Maurice A. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): Mr. Speaker, I was going to say a few words about the provision in the Bill to allow adoptive parents to receive unemployment benefits the same as natural parents. However, I believe the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor) has said most of it. I was happy to hear him make a Liberal speech today and hear him come out in favour of Government intervention on behalf of individuals. I am also pleased that this Bill has come before the House. I appreciate the co-operation that was apparent from all Parties to have the amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act passed in a very short period of time.

However, we did hear many complaints this morning from the Hon. Member for St. John's (Mr. McGrath) about the fact that there would be only one day of debate. He disagreed with that. I must remind Members that second reading of a Bill is supposed to be a debate of its principles. It would seem to me that if second reading would take less time in the House there would be much more time for committee study and detailed analysis of Bills. Since Members would be better informed, we could pass better legislation.

The second suggestion I would make to the Hon. Member for St. John's East, who I know has a social conscience, is that we could have more time available for debating Bills such as this if there were more expeditious votes instead of the Opposition Members leaving the House and letting the bells ring anywhere from several hours to 15 days. We would have a good deal more time to debate in the House if that did not happen. If I remember correctly, the Hon. Member said in his remarks this morning that the provision of the variable entrance requirements under the present Act was done by the Minister of the day following his suggestion.

Mr. Breau: Did he say that?

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): I believe he did. As a matter of fact, he did say that. He just confirmed that he said it.

Mr. Breau: That is not true.

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): The Hon. Member for Gloucester (Mr. Breau) just said that that is not true. After the argument that occurred this morning, I would advise the Hon. Member not to say that. It leads to all kinds of procedural harangues.

With respect to the previous amendments to the Bill, I do not mind admitting that there was a fair amount of debate not only between the two sides of the House but in the caucuses. If the other caucuses reacted in any way similar to the Liberal caucus at the time, there must have been a lot of debate within the caucuses. I remember very well a number of meetings which we had with the then Minister in which we from the Atlantic Liberal caucus not only proposed but demanded that there be variable entrance requirements. The Hon. Member for St. John's East says that that was after he put it forward. If it was after he put it forward, that is fine with me. We won the day and we have variable entrance requirements.

The principle being argued at that time, which was not really a principle but an expediency, was that certain people from certain parts of the country, without naming them specifically, which were heavily industrialized and well developed, wanted to cut the guts out of the unemployment insurance system at the time and make it much more difficult for people to get on the unemployment insurance rolls. They were very enthusiastic about making it much tougher for people to draw unemployment insurance. Some of us who represent areas that are not quite as well developed and do not have all the facilities and industry that other areas have, stood our ground and said that they cannot legislate for the industrialized parts of the country alone. As a result of that objection we now have the variable entrance provisions in the Bill.

I wish to say something about the Minister. I believe most Members of the House would agree that the Minister is a very responsible and responsive Minister. He has taken his duties seriously and has worked very hard to mitigate the effects of the recession which we have experienced in this country. He has designed programs to put people back to work. He has listened carefully, reacted quickly and has used every means at his disposal to consult not only with his colleagues in the front benches but with all of his colleagues in the House to make life better for the people whom we represent. I want to take this opportunity to thank him publicly.

There are three very important areas in the Bill and most of them have been spoken to. I want to add my support for the provision of equal treatment for women whether they are natural or adoptive parents. I believe that to be an extremely important measure. Another extremely important provision is the variable entrance requirements which are extended by this Bill. That is particularly important to areas of high unemployment in this country.

This morning we heard a lot of rhetoric about fishermen from the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-St. James (Mr. Keeper). He talked about the fact that there were no amendments in this Bill dealing with fishermen. While there is no doubt that amendments are needed, everyone knows that this is what might be termed emergency legislation to prevent a sunset clause on the variable entrance requirements coming into effect. I am not convinced that amendments to the fisheries provision in the Unemployment Insurance Act at this time would receive the proper scrutiny in order to ensure that the best possible provisions are made for that vital industry in Atlantic Canada, the Pacific Coast and also the inland waters of Canada.

While the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-St. James was doing a great job this morning of straddling both the issues of motherhood and apple pie, and wept eloquently, I must point out that he failed to mention that fishermen are in fact the only self employed people in the country who have access to the unemployment insurance scheme. He also talked about the need to lower the premiums, the Government's obligation to provide a job for everyone, and the need to pay for unemployment insurance out of general revenue. That is great socialist pap, but that is the best that can be said for it.

He talked about the degradation of welfare. I cannot see the degradation of welfare, and such a term should not be attached to it. If there is a degradation of welfare it is a result of how the Provinces have administered it. What the Hon. Member proposes to do with the unemployment insurance scheme would make it nothing more than an extension of the welfare system. In my opinion, to follow that kind of facile proposal would result in the destruction of the unemployment insurance scheme. It would no longer be an employment insurance scheme, as it should be called, but simply an extension of welfare. It would be another welfare system operated by the Government of Canada rather than by the Governments of the Provinces.

Before I sit down, there is one plea I want to make to the Minister. I think the greatest problem with unemployment insurance in the country is the determination of eligibility. We have literally hundreds of cases, probably thousands across the country, where eligibility or ineligibility is determined after the fact rather than before the fact. Claimants are sometimes told that they must pay back thousands of dollars to the federal Treasury after they have received the payments in good faith, because it is not the Unemployment Commission that is determining eligibility, it is the Department of National Revenue, a Department that is known to have all the subtlety of the wreckers' ball. It is absolutely imperative in my opinion that that determination of eligibility be done by the Commission within the Department of Employment and Immigration where there is some sensitivity to the unemployed and knowledge of whether or not a person is eligible for unemployment insurance.

There are other regulations surrounding unemployment insurance that are counter productive as well, and I think we have to take a look at those. For example, there is the provision that prevents the person receiving unemployment insurance from going to school, trade school or some other institution of learning to take courses to advance his or her ability to find a job.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): The present regulations prevent people from doing that unless they go to school at night. That is another anachronism, because there are almost as many people who work at night now as those who work in the daytime. If you go to school in the daytime then you are judged available for work and you are denied unemployment insurance. However, if you go to night school, that is all right; you are not judged unavailable for work. That is a discriminatory regulation. In fact, I would say it is a stupid regulation and it should be removed. I hope the Minister will remove that regulation when we bring in the next batch of amendments before the end of this session or early in the next one.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Are there any questions or comments?

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Speaker, I wish to raise as a question or a comment a matter with the previous speaker. Section 146(11) provides some very broad and sweeping recommendations to make regulations under this legislation. I want to outline very briefly an incident that occurred in my riding, and I wonder whether the Hon. Member for Northumberland-Miramichi (Mr. Dionne) will speak to it.

The Unemployment Insurance Commission has hired former members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police to act as officers of the UIC. In a particular case in the community of Powell River, British Columbia, it appears a claimant's claim was cancelled in order to assist the RCMP in a police investigation. I wonder whether, to the knowledge of the Hon. Member, there are linkages between the RCMP who have retired and are working for the Unemployment Insurance Commission and those who are active in the force conducting investigations. To the Hon. Member's knowledge, has any such action, where the UIC has acted on office or in an attempt to render assistance with the RCMP, resulted in the cancellation of people's claims? In the particular case I am concerned about in the very powerful regulations, individuals are not entitled to examine their claims. They have been told by officers involved that if they want to examine their files they must seek remedy under the Freedom of Information Act.

By way of notice to the Minister, and he will be in the House when we go into Committee of the Whole—I wonder whether it is possible to give him notice—I want to ask whether this is an official policy of the Department that he administers. Do you, as a Member, have any knowledge of this type of thing? Is it possible for us to have some comments on that kind of activity?

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): Mr. Speaker, I do not know if that question was directed to me or not. Having never been in Comox-Powell River I could hardly be aware of what a former member of the RCMP might be doing while employed now for the Unemployment Insurance Commission. That seems to be stretching my knowledge a little far. Neither do I have knowledge of any former RCMP officers in my own area working for the Unemployment Insurance Commission. We have a CEIC branch in Northumberland-Miramichi staffed by some very capable people who do an outstanding job in applying the law and in dealing very reasonably, I think, in the vast majority of cases with people who come to them for assistance. I have not heard of any such situation as alleged by the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River. I think he should be more aware of what is happening in his constituency than I am.

Mr. Miller: Mr. Speaker, I would like to address a question to the Hon. Member for Portneuf (Mr. Dion). The Hon. Member indicated that he felt there was some reasonable—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. Questions and comments are directed to the Hon. Member who has just spoken, and that is the Hon. Member for Northumberland-Miramichi (Mr. Dionne).

Mr. Miller: Mr. Speaker, I had the wrong riding. My question is for the Hon. Member for Northumberland-Miramichi. My question is with regard to his comment that some of the fisheries regulations concerning UIC do need further scrutiny. Is the Hon. Member aware that this Bill and the purpose of part of this Bill, namely, Section 146, is to restore some of the regulatory power to the Government, of the UIC provisions, that were lost under the Silk decision? Would the Member be prepared to say that if, as the Minister indicated, this Bill is passed, some of the Kirby recommendations would be implemented, in particular, the recommendation declaring the best 10 weeks of 15 weeks' fishing? Is the Hon. Member aware of the Commission's decision, is the Government going to go ahead with that immediately, and will that stipulation of 10 out of the 15 weeks apply right across Canada, not only to Atlantic Canada but to inland waters and to the West Coast?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. The Chair is having some difficulty. Since the provisional Standing Orders were brought into effect, for my own part, and I believe other occupants of the Chair have done the same thing, I have extended to all Hon. Members the widest possible latitude under the term "questions, comments and answers." This is the first time that I have seen the development where Hon. Members have risen, now two in a row, indicating that an Hon. Member should respond to a question which sounds to me as though it ought to be put to a Minister, or to any other Member in the House. The Hon. Member can certainly defend himself in terms of his comments. However, I wonder whether or not the concept of the ten-minute question and answer period is such that a Member rising during that period can attempt to put a question to a Minister who in that event may not be the person whose comments he is concerned with. I am concerned that that may not be within the rules that are now in force wherein there is a reference to the fact that the ten-minute question and answer period must be relevant to the remarks made by the Hon. Member who had to floor. Given that simple warning, I will recognize the Hon. Member for Northumberland-Miramichi (Mr. Dionne).

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): In my opinion, Mr. Speaker, you are absolutely right. I did accept the question from the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River (Mr. Skelly). I should not have because what Members of the NDP are involved in now is a mug's game, and I am not going to play it with them.

Mr. Miller: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The question I asked was a sincere question based on the comments which the speaker had made regarding some of our speeches in which we spoke of the need for some amendment which would specify changes in unemployment insurance that we think are important. I was simply asking if the Member feels confident—

● (1640)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Is the Hon. Member rising on a point of order? The point of order is properly addressed to the Chair. It is I, not the Hon. Member for Northumberland-Miramichi (Mr. Dionne), who has expressed some concern about questions or comments which are not relevant to the Hon. Member's speech but which are more indirectly, apparently, refering to ministerial policy. I have some question as to whether that is an appropriate interpretation of the provisional Standing Orders that we have.

I do not want to make a ruling on that because I have stated time and again to the House that my interpretation of these provisional orders is that they ought to be as open and as free as possible. However, I have a concern that questions can be disguised by putting them to the Hon. Member who spoke but, rather, intending them to be a reflection upon some other Hon. Member or Minister, regardless of which is the case.

The Hon. Member raised a point of order. I accept his point of order. It is a matter that may need further consideration as to the interpretation of our Standing Orders. For the moment I am going to leave it in the hands of the Hon. Member for Northumberland-Miramichi as to whether or not he wishes to continue. We are still in the ten-minute question and answer period.

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Speaker, a fair comment to the Hon. Member for Northumberland-Miramichi is a response to his opinion that we cannot deal with this particular need to redress the grievances of fishermen at this time. My comment would be that that speaker and the speakers of this morning from the Conservative Party are absolutely wrong. As experienced Members of this House, they know full well that we will not have unemployment insurance legislation for eons before this House and thus an opportunity to provide some equity and fairness to fishermen. The key point, and the Hon. Member for Northumberland-Miramichi knows this full well, is that the Liberals and Conservatives—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order. That is debate with the Hon. Member for Northumberland-Miramichi. The Chair is most disposed to hear questions, comments and answers. There is no difficulty in that regard. I am trying to deal with the point of order. If I may, I prefer to recognize the Hon. Member on questions, comments and answers.

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Speaker, I am sorry. I thought you had disposed of the point of order. I was following with a supplementary comment to the Hon. Member's remarks.

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): Mr. Speaker, apparently the Hon. Member cannot read Section 146 as proposed in the Bill. It states that the Governor in Council may, and I quote:

> —make such regulations as it deems necessary respecting the establishment and operation of a scheme of unemployment insurance for self-employed persons engaged in fishing, including regulations
> (a) including as a self-employed person engaged in fishing any person engaged in any activity or occupation related or incidental to fishing;

It broadens the scope for those who may receive unemployment insurance because it includes those who are engaged in activities related to fishing. Therefore, it does broaden the scope. The NDP seems to prefer to ignore that.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 45, to inform the House that the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment are as follows: the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood (Ms. McDonald)—Criminal Code—Pornography—Inquiry respecting ministerial action—introduction of legislation—definition of obscenity; the Hon. Member for Western Arctic (Mr. Nickerson)—Northern Affairs—Northern Canada Power Commission—committee recommendations—price of electricity supplied to Pine Point mines; the Hon. Member for Portage-Marquette (Mr. Mayer)—Western Grain Stabilization Act—Request for earlier payout provision.

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Axworthy that Bill C-156, An Act to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971 (No. 3) be read the second time and referred to a Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Doug Lewis (Simcoe North): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have this opportunity to speak briefly to this Bill. Before speaking to the Bill specifically, I want to associate myself with the remarks of the Hon. Member for Northumberland-Miramichi (Mr. Dionne) with respect to the current practice under the regulations of the unemployment insurance office in Orillia and Midland, clamping down with vengeance unseen anywhere else upon poor, unsuspecting constituents of mine who are laid off. Of their own volition they took a course and then found that the bureaucratic weight of the unemployment Insurance Commission came crashing down on them. Because the Commission cannot find them a job, because they had the gumption and the initiative to take a course to improve themselves, the bureaucrats in the Commission can find them unavailable for work and they are cut off unemployment insurance payments.

I share with the Hon. Member for Northumberland-Miramichi the abhorrence for this system and regulation. I urge the Minister to take a hard look at Canadians in every constituency who are trying to improve themselves and cannot find work. They find that the bureaucrats have an answer when they go to take a course, but no answer when it comes to finding a job.

I am pleased to speak to this Bill because for some time it has bothered me that discrimination exists in the present legislation whereby parents of adopted children do not have the same rights as natural parents. This Bill will change that. It will eliminate discrimination against an adoptive parent. Also, and I am in favour of this, it will repeal the rule which states that a woman must have worked ten weeks around the time of conception to be eligible for benefits. It will repeal the section which prevents a pregnant woman from getting regular benefits or sickness benefits in the weeks surrounding the birth of a child.

I support that concept entirely. In 1982 I moved a motion under Standing Order 43 on the floor of the House. I urged the Government to adopt the recommendations of the Task Force on Unemployment Insurance which came down in July, 1981. I said that in the interest of equity and fairness, maternity benefits under the Unemployment Insurance Act should be extended to newly adoptive parents. Parents who adopt children face the same physical, mental, social and economic adjustments as natural parents. They often do not have advance notice of the date of adoption. I am pleased the Government has finally brought in this legislation to correct that discrimination.

I have received letters on this. The interest comes from my riding. In 1980 I received a letter from a person in Orillia who felt that it was unfair and discriminatory that adoptive parents do not have the same privileges as natural parents. The St. Columbkille's Catholic Women's League has urged me to push this. They state that as far as that organization is concerned, adoptive parents should receive maternity benefits under unemployment insurance in the same way as natural parents. I put this on the record knowing that in Ontario, the Children's Aid Society requires that adoptive parents have six months to get used to parenthood, taking care of an adopted child and helping to bring about the natural family. I have talked with several friends who have adopted children. I know there is an adjustment period much the same as any natural parent goes through.

I spoke only to those parts of the Bill which are of concern to me. They are the ones I have mentioned. My Party is in favour of this legislation. I am pleased that the Government has finally seen fit to eliminate this discrimination which should never have occurred.

Mrs. Eva Côté (Rimouski-Témiscouata): First of all, Mr. Speaker, I should like to commend and thank the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mr. Axworthy) for introducing these amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act. Some of those amendments relate directly to the situation of women in the labour force, and more particularly to maternity benefits. Since 1971, as you know, women in the labour force have been eligible for maternity benefits under the Unemployment Insurance Act, and special eligibility requirements were established at that time to facilitate the administration of this new program. I dare say that those requirements have been particularly hard for certain women, especially in ridings such as mine where there is precious little permanent employment. When the ten-week requirement had to be met, some women in the labour force did find themselves in a predicament, and that is why I commend the Minister for doing away with the ten-week provision. It is true that that provision had been unfair to some women, particularly those who had been working for some time and were unfortunately forced to change jobs. They were left in a difficult situation.

The repeal of the provisions of Section 46 is the second good news. Under that section, women were not eligible for unemployment insurance benefits, including standard benefits or sickness benefits for a given period of time. On the basis of a fancy formula, it had been decided that pregnant women would not be eligible for unemployment insurance benefits between the eighth and sixth weeks before the expected delivery date. That provision has now been repealed. As any other unemployment insurance applicant, a woman will now have the right to apply for standard benefits or for sickness benefits during a certain period of time.

The other news concerns parents, natural mothers. With respect to adoptions, my colleagues and I are pleased with the new provision under which either parent would be eligible for standard unemployment insurance benefits, or for sickness benefits during 15 weeks, to make it easier indeed to welcome the arrival of a new family member under the best conditions.

Mr. Speaker, we all know how important the family situation is. In times of economic hardships—and I hope better times are coming—parents find it difficult to accept a new dependent, either through birth or adoption. Families will henceforth have a fighting chance thanks to the new unemployment insurance legislation. Once again, I thank the Minister for introducing amendments which, in my opinion, will greatly benefit the whole population.

Mr. Ted Miller (Nanaimo-Alberni): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate being afforded the opportunity to put some concerns about the Bill which deals with the Unemployment Insurance Act before the House. We have been attempting to do that to some extent today and we were wondering if we would have the opportunity to do so. I would particularly like to point out some concerns that we have regarding fishermen.

It is difficult to vote against a Bill which includes some very positive aspects in terms of maternity leave, adoptive parent provisions and variable entrance requirements, but nonetheless, it is important to deal in this debate with concerns about the provisions for fishermen. We all know that these concerns were brought about because of a court decision regarding Vicky Silk. That decision brought into question all the provisions of the Unemployment Insurance Act as it pertains to fishermen and their special benefits under the Act.

While we appreciate the very positive aspects of this Bill, we are not that happy with it. I want to express why we are not happy with some of the provisions that are outlined in Section 146 of the amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act.

In handing down its decision in March, the Supreme Court created much confusion within the fishing community. Fishermen are obviously very concerned about how the decision would affect their unemployment insurance claims. Because of the nature of their industry, unemployment insurance is a very large factor in the incomes of many fishermen. Their livelihoods could be very seriously affected by that decision. While we appreciate the concern on the part of the Government to restore some of the powers under the Unemployment Insurance Act through this amendment, we are concerned that there was not a great deal of input from the concerned fishermen into the drafting of this report, nor very much input from fishermen regarding what kind of regulations might come under this provision. I see that the Hon. Minister is raising his eyebrows. Maybe we will be able to clarify some of these issues in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Axworthy: Has the Hon. Member not heard of the Kirby Task Force?

Mr. Miller: Yes, we have certainly heard of the Kirby Task Force and we have heard of many other kinds of representations made to the Minister by fishermen's organizations that have yet to be brought in under regulation and which could have been brought in under regulation in the past two years if the Minister and the Unemployment Insurance Commission had been sincere about addressing the concerns of fishermen. That is what concerns us, Mr. Speaker.

The concern that we have is that the provision in the regulations is only as good as the faith and the willingness on behalf of the Unemployment Insurance Commission and the Government. The changes are not minor. Changes provided under this Act could substantially change unemployment insurance benefits in the fishing industry and there is nothing to indicate what concerns the Minister is addressing other than a simple press report.

The United Fishermen's Allied Workers' Union in British Columbia, the largest union representing fishermen, is very concerned about this legislation. I think that its concern stems from its understanding of the Bill's implications in the short time in which it had access to this Bill. Only two weeks ago, on May 18, the Government indicated what some of the amendments under the Unemployment Insurance Act would be. Fishermen have not had the opportunity to meet with their organizations and look at the implications of these amendments, nor have they had the opportunity to make representations to the Unemployment Insurance Commission or any parliamentary committee about the concerns that they have been expressing for a number of years. I believe that those concerns must be expressed, but because of the shortened length of debate time for this Bill and because it is very important that some of the provisions in it are passed before June 4, fishermen will not be afforded the opportunity to have the input that they require in order to meet some of their concerns.

One concern that I think I share with the fishermen is that in the fishing industry at this time, an industry which is under a certain amount of pressure in terms of fishing, particularly on the West Coast, the length of the fishing season is being shortened all the time. That is in regard to conserving stocks and the amount of time in which people are allowed to fish. The amount of time that shore workers have to work in plants is being shortened all the time. Yet we see no indication that the entrance requirements for fishermen will be reduced.

Fishermen in British Columbia have made representations to the Government in the past to reduce the required number of weeks to eight weeks if possible, and there has been no indication that the regulations will deal with this concern. It is a sincere concern that fishermen have. Not only do they have a restricted season, but as we on both coasts know, they are also limited by the kind of weather that they can work in, by breakdowns in equipment, and by scarcity of fish. These limitations do not allow fishermen the time necessary to qualify for benefits. Both on the East Coast and the West Coast the obvious concern will be for the number of weeks that will be required to qualify for unemployment insurance.

The Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mr. Axworthy) represents the inland waters area and has indicated that there is going to be some change in the regulations which will affect the incomes of fishermen in Manitoba and Saskatchewan who are winter fishermen and therefore do not come under the normal fishing season from March to November. These fishermen are penalized because they need 20 weeks for a new claim and it is very difficult to get that in those Provinces because of ice conditions or lack of ice depth in those lakes in Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

The changes in the Act seem to provide the opportunity to address that problem, but we have no commitment from the Government that it will happen. Fishermen made representations for changes as far back as August, 1981, and the Minister said that his officials were studying the program and were aware of the problem. Now, in June, 1983, we have a promise that fishermen's concerns will be met. This Party is not satisfied that promises through regulations are something that we can put faith in. Despite what the Conservative Party may feel, we think some things should be changed in the Bill to guarantee fishermen access to unemployment insurance at any time of the year, whether in the winter season or what is the normal season for most Canadian fishermen, and those weeks should be considered as insurable weeks for UIC benefits. If our amendments are accepted in Committee of the Whole this is what they will attempt to do.

We have other recommendations to move which will allow fishermen to collect unemployment insurance benefits for any period of the year during which they have an insurable claim. At the moment, the seasonal fishermen in Manitoba whose season is in the winter months are not eligible from May 15 until the end of November under the Act. They find that they are able to collect only six weeks, and then when they get into the normal fishing season they are disqualified despite having paid into the fund over the winter months.

We are not pleased that this portion of the Bill was introduced in this way. There are some very serious and sincere concerns in the fishing industry. One day for debate at all stages of the Bill is not sufficient for us to express the concerns of fishermen and allow them to have additional input. They have only had two weeks to react to this proposal and in many cases have had no opportinunity to meet with their membership because they are out fishing.

Because there is so little time for debate, we would like to see these provisions proceed expeditiously. I suggest that the Government and the Official Opposition look seriously at the changes in the Act so that fishermen are satisfied that they would be protected in insurable weeks and benefit weeks.

I also urge the Minister of Employment and Immigration and the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans (Mr. De Bané) to have further consultations with fishermen before regulations that may adversely affect fishermen are implemented.

We can see the benefit of legislation that will allow the Unemployment Insurance Commission to react quickly to the needs of fishermen, but we are not too sure that the Government is willing to meet those needs. The secret of developing a good unemployment insurance scheme for fishermen is greater consultation with them and a willingness to understand their specific problems and the problems created by the Department of Fisheries and Oceans as it imposes greater regulation. The Fisheries Act is arbitrary and results in a lot of controversy in the industry.

I urge the Minister to look at the proposals the fishermen will make to him. I think this Act will provide him an opportunity to put those proposals into place very quickly. We would prefer more provision for protection for unemployment insurance, and I am sure that when fishermen have a chance to respond to the Bill, they will have some comments to make along that line.

[Translation]

Mr. Herb Breau (Gloucester): Mr. Speaker, Bill C-156 has given us an opportunity to discuss a number of important questions in connection with the Unemployment Insurance Program. I am supporting this Bill because I believe it will improve conditions for many unemployment insurance recipients, and I am pleased to see that we have the consent of the House today for passing all stages of the Bill.

Regarding the changes proposed by the Kirby Task Force with respect to unemployment insurance premiums paid by fishermen, the Bill will enable the Government to make regulations authorizing fishermen to select the 10 best weeks among the 15 weeks in which they earn income from fishing in order to calculate their average earnings for the purposes of unemployment insurance benefits. I agree with this recommendation, but I believe that the recommendation by the Kirby Task Force is not entirely satisfactory because it does not mention the effect it will have on workers in fish processing factories. I realize it is impossible in the latter case to change the Act as quickly as in the case of fishermen, because there, the statutory basis of the Unemployment Insurance Program is entirely different, and changes can be made by Order in Council or by a single Cabinet decision. If we want to change anything that concerns ordinary unemployment, we must change the Act according to the same procedure followed in other cases. However, I suppose the Minister is aware of this point, because workers in fish processing plants have been complaining for a long time, and I know that Members on all sides of the House who have fish processing plants in their ridings, as well as related industries, are aware that usually in the fall, especially in the case of herring and groundfish when the catch situation is either feast or famine, workers in fish processing plants—even before these changes—were losing a lot on their unemployment insurance benefits because they were sometimes on and then off again for two or three days, and this was on a very irregular basis. At the end of the season, when the weather was bad, and especially in the case of herring and groundfish caught along the coast, not by big trawlers, in the case of groundfish, but along the coast, especially with gill nets or lines, processing plant workers could expect a drop in their average earnings which would then be reflected in their unemployment insurance benefits throughout the winter.

Although the proposed changes will improve the situation for fishermen by letting them select their 10 best weeks out of 15, there will be no benefit to processing plant workers and fishermen on the contrary. I say this because fishermen will now have an incentive to go out, and that is all right, even if they can only do so one or two days a week if the weather has been bad, while the worker in the processing plant will be called back to work to process the fish, and as a result, he is going to be worse off. I raised this matter with the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mr. Axworthy), and I hope he will soon proceed with a study of the impact this will have on fish processing plants and that it will not be long before changes will be introduced which, I feel, should not necessarily apply only to the fishing industry. I know that the same problem exists in other industries that are affected by weather, such as peat harvesting and sometimes the lumber industry, especially when there have been extensive forest fires. I would like to see the Act changed to allow the Minister some flexibility in designating, in certain cases, specific industries or regions where there has been a particular weather problem or when there has been a forest fire or a dry spell in the forest that has prevented lumberjacks from working for extended periods of time. Mr. Speaker, there is another problem which I will have to mention, although it is not the subject-matter of this Bill. I share the concern which the Hon. Member for Northumberland-Miramichi (Mr. Dionne) and other Hon. Members have expressed about the problem of "assurability" of the job under the existing legislation. On several occasions, I have discussed this problem with the Minister which I feel is both very serious and complex especially because there are some 27 or 28 applicants in my riding who have appealed the negative decisions rendered in their case, construction workers doing minor housing repairs; their "assurability" has been questioned after the fact by the Department of National Revenue, in some cases up to three years after the employment had been terminated. The result is that after many appeals at various stages, they are still faced with "overpayments".

I should like to remind the House of a decision which was rendered on February 6, 1980 by Hon. Justice Dubinsky, a current judge of the Federal Court of Canada, at a time when he was sitting as an umpire to deal with the appeal of a Mr. Childs, from Western Bay, Conception Bay, in Newfoundland. Mr. Speaker, I should like to quote part of Justice Dubinsky's decision, for it implies that we have a moral responsibility in connection with this matter and I quote:

• (1710)

[English]

The Appellant has been overpaid to a large amount. He is married and has four children, three of whom are in school. He owns his home at Western Bay, Conception Bay, Newfoundland, but he has no bonds, securities of any sort and his bank account does not exceed $200.00. I am satisfied beyond any doubt that to have him repay the overpayment would cause undue hardship for him and his family. I, therefore, feel that consideration should be given to him under the provisions of Section 175(1)(e)(ii) of the Regulations, particularly since he was allowed to receive benefits for a long time—

This is where the moral obligation comes in, Mr. Speaker.

—without there being question and, moreover, because his actions herein were not deliberately done to defraud the Commission.

The judge goes on to indicate that the Commission has the authority to write off these payments but that it has been impossible because of the present law. I am told that if it did this, it would mean that many overpayments by the Government would also go uncollected. I am not sure that the other overpayments by the Government have the same effect on people. Any Hon. Member from a rural area of the country has lived with this problem, I am told by a lot of them, and the Minister has looked at different options as to how we could solve this problem.

The Hon. Member for Northumberland-Miramichi (Mr. Dionne) has suggested that the whole question of insurability should come back under the law to the Unemployment Insurance Commission. I could live with that. However, I am told that that creates incredible problems. The Minister has agreed in a personal conversation with me—and I would ask all Hon. Members to support this initiative—to refer this whole question of insurability of employment to the committee, either the Standing Committee on Labour, Manpower and Immigration, or a special committee of the House, with a short term of reference, in order that Hon. Members can deal with this problem and come up with an option which would be acceptable.

The effect of this, Mr. Speaker, is that people have had their eligibility or insurability of employment questioned after the fact. They were working for an employer in an activity which they thought was legitimate and which they thought was insurable. They then found out that it was not. The employer is home free. He has no responsibility under the law. But the claimant then is classified as not having been in an insurable employment, and all of the benefits he has received become due and payable to the Government as an overpayment. In order to have them written off, according to the present law, one has to show "undue hardship", and that is practically impossible. To prove undue hardship under the present law one would have to lose everything he or she has. This is not acceptable.

It is incredible that we would have a system which would let this kind of thing go on. In my view, when a person is working bona fide, and when it is shown that there was no attempt to defraud the Commission—because in some cases there are, inevitably—in no way should these people be asked, threatened or told that they owe money to the Crown, as in the case of the decision of Judge Dubinsky who said there was no attempt to defraud the Commission. If the person was well intentioned, the employer was well intentioned, and they both thought the employment was insurable, then the system should accept the responsibility of that and the onus should not be on the worker, post factum, two or three years after the fact to prove that he or she was eligible. We should say, "Okay, that kind of employment will no longer be insurable, but because of what happened in the past, a poor defenseless claimant should not have to repay that money".

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I hope that the Minister will refer this to a committee of the House, which will come forward with an acceptable compromise which will do away with this incredible injustice, in many cases to defenseless people who are seen as having to repay the Crown thousands of dollars because they were put in a situation where the employment they had two or three years previously was judged to be not insurable.

Mr. McGrath: Mr. Speaker, I listened to the hon. gentleman with great interest. I would just like to make sure I understand him. Is he telling the House he has received an assurance from the Minister that he will in fact bring in a suitable reference to the Standing Committee, or a standing committee, so that this matter, which I agree with him is a grave injustice, can be properly addressed and we can hear witnesses and make a recommendation?

Mr. Breau: Mr. Speaker, I do not like to interpret for the Minister what his position is, and the Hon. Member knows that I should not do that. What the Minister has indicated to me is that he found that the reference to a committee, where Hon. Members from all Parties could come to an acceptable option, seemed to him to be a good means to deal with this. Whether he is ready to make a commitment to do it or when he would do it, I do not know. I can just express the hope that this will be done. The Minister has agreed personally with me that this would be a good means to deal with this very complex problem.

As the Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) is the one who asked this question, I am sure he will understand also the impact of the other problem I raised, the impact of the Kirby recommendations on fish plant workers. It may be also that some industries which are susceptible to weather, like the wood industry, peat moss and fishing, may be a good subject to be sent to a committee for special study because it is very complex, and Hon. Members could come to an agreement before a Bill is presented to the House.

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to be able to take part in this debate on improvements to the unemployment insurance system. I recall having lobbied the current Minister, and indeed other Ministers, on the particular aspects of maternity benefits, which is what I want to address today. I remember lobbying even a Conservative Minister on this subject, and it is pleasant to see that resistance eventually declined until we finally moved to the stage of receiving acceptance in principle. Then the issue stalled while the committee examined the question, but now we actually have the legislation.

First of all, let me deal with the subject of adoptive parents. We are all very pleased to see these new measures. Our Party has urged them for years, and my colleague, the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), recently had his Private Members' Bill on this issue debated. The measures are long overdue and we are very pleased to see them.

One of the good provisions is that either parent can take leave to look after the new child. Most of the time the leave will probably be taken by the mother, but the option is there for the father. However, what is not yet in the legislation is the possibility of the leave being shared by both parents. There are of course many couples where the child care tasks could be shared by both and the parents would prefer to do it that way. Our system is still unduly rigid in this respect and it is something which should be amended. It is a concern of the women's movement that life be better organized to allow for the combination of paid work and child care. In the long term we want to see a shorter work week so that both parents can do this. In the question immediately before us of adoptive leave, surely it would be very reasonable to see that both parents could share in that work. We should be facilitating the sharing of child care between parents when they want it.

This Bill, Mr. Speaker, eliminates a number of discriminatory sections which should never have been law in the first place and which have been an embarrassment to women. A large number of women were actually denied claims because of the additional requirements they had to meet to get maternity benefits. The magic ten rule is one that we are all very pleased to see go. It has taken a long time. It was based on a very insulting view of women in the first place, that an unemployed woman was sitting around idle until she became pregnant, and then went out to get a job so she would be able to take maternity leave. That is probably something which never happened in the first place and certainly should not have been the basis for legislation. It is very good to see that section go.

There will be more flexibility in the claim period. This is certainly a very welcome reform. The prediction of delivery dates is of course always difficult. Babies sometimes have their own timetables which do not coincide with those of their doctors or, indeed, of the Unemployment Insurance Commission. So we are pleased to see this new flexibility in the legislation.

The discriminatory provisions in Section 46, which did not allow women to claim regular unemployment insurance or sickness benefits during the period of pregnancy or after birth is of course something that should never have been in the legislation. We are very pleased to see it go. This is the Section that Stella Bliss claimed was discriminatory under the Canadian Bill of Rights. She lost her claim. I do not think we can discuss Bill C-156 without remembering and indeed saluting Stella Bliss. The Hon. Member for Kingston and The Islands (Miss MacDonald) has recounted some of the judicial horrors of this case. It is certainly a model of erroneous judicial reasoning and should be required reading for future judges in our courts. It will go down with Murdoch, the Person's case, Lavalle and Bedard as horrors that Canadians ought to be embarrassed about.

Let me just recall a few points in this case, Mr. Speaker, Bliss first lost her case to a board of referees, but she won on appeal on a ruling by a federal court judge who was sitting as an umpire under the Unemployment Insurance Act. The Attorney General then appealed to the Federal Court of Appeal. So here we see our own Government's Department of Justice appealing a case of unequal rights of women. We have had far too many cases of this before, and we are hoping that with the new Charter of Rights the Government will defend women in equality cases and not work against them. The case then went up to the Federal Court of Appeal and finally up to the Supreme Court of Canada. It was only decided in 1978, so it is not a long time ago. I think it is important for us to keep these cases in mind. We still have to watch both our courts and the Ministry of Justice.

[Translation]

Mrs. Stella Bliss should be congratulated and thanked for suing the Government for the discriminatory measures against women with unemployment insurance and maternity leave. Unfortunately, Mrs. Bliss lost her claim. The Supreme Court of Canada ruled that it was not the law that discriminated against women, but nature, itself, as though pregnancy were a sickness and even a chronic illness that prevented women from working. After that ruling, the women's movement in Canada fought against this discriminatory legislation and feminist groups called for the elimination of those discriminatory measures. As can be seen today, their lobbying was successful. It took us years, but we have won!

[English]

However, what remains? We need a comprehensive parental leave scheme. Indeed, a recent poll showed that 61 per cent of Canadians are in favour of fully paid maternity leave. That is certainly something we have not reached as yet. We need a comprehensive scheme with both a longer number of paid weeks, with options for unpaid leave as well, and a higher rate of pay. In the meantime, further modest improvements could certainly be advanced. We could eliminate the two weeks waiting period, for example. This is an anomaly in the case of maternity leave. It is there to encourage an unemployed worker to go out immediately and look for a job. It is wholly inappropriate in the case of someone expecting to have a child or who has just recently given birth. This would cost money, and therefore it is not possible for the Opposition to move an amendment, but it is something which should be addressed.

Another loophole in the law which affects women is that a woman cannot claim maternity benefits if she is on strike. Her union could go on strike the day before she gives birth, for example, and she would be disentitled to maternity benefits. That is very inappropriate in her circumstances.

However, there is another reform which would not add to the costs and on which we should act today. That would be to permit either parent to take leave after the birth of the child. Clearly only women can give birth, but after the birth the father could be looking after the child, or both parents could be looking after the child. A growing number of couples do want to these responsibilities, and we should be introducing this flexibility into the legislation.

[Translation]

Some parents want to share the responsibility of caring for their children. This is allowed in several European countries, such as Sweden and Finland. After the birth of the child, either the father or the mother can take parental leave or both parents can share it. Why not in Canada? We are not suggesting an extension of such leave, but rather a reform, and what we are suggesting will cost nothing. The matter of further improvements to the system is something else that will require the co-operation of the federal and provincial Governments as well as unions and employers. We do not intend to deal with this issue today, but we hope that the Government will address it. For the moment, why not support the useful and reasonable reforms we are suggesting, such as allowing both parents to share the parental leave?

[English]

My Party will be presenting amendments in Committee of the Whole on this point. We support the amendments the Government has introduced today. They are welcome and we are very pleased to see them. We hope the Government and the Conservatives as well will support the amendments we will be introducing.

Mrs. Jennifer Cossitt (Leeds-Grenville): Mr. Speaker, I am more than pleased today to have the opportunity to add my comments to the debate on Bill C-156 and to discuss some of the necessary amendments that will bring about a greater equity with respect to claimants qualifying for unemployment insurance benefits.

The basic concept of unemployment insurance, the original program, was established in 1940 and was designed to do two things, first, to provide income protection for workers suffering temporary income interruptions and, second, to facilitate the best possible match between unemployed workers and available jobs. In other words, it was designed to promote the economic and social security of workers. It was recognized that the employed needed to have a greater sense of security, a safety net to safeguard against the dehumanizing effects of the Great Depression. I was indeed very fortunate, because of my age, not to have experienced the frustration, hunger and helplessness faced by millions of people all around the world during the Depression. No one should ever have to be faced with those hardships again but, unfortunately, millions of people are faced with them. In the very grave economic times at present, one sees how this legislation has been most effective in helping these people.

Since the Great Depression, Canada's economic capacity grew and became more stable. The increase in the labour force was meeting the expanding needs of industry. As our population grew, the demand for goods and services also grew. It seemed that this enphoria of economic growth would be never-ending. Unfortunately, this was not the case. Canada's economy has been on a steady decline, to the point at which we are in the midst of the worse recession since those dark days of the Depression. Over this past decade, as a direct result of Canada's economic demise brought on by a Government which felt it could spend with abandon, without any sense of control, there has been the need to meet the ever-increasing demands on the safety nets which were put in place to support Canadians during economic hard times. Amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act comprise just one area where revision has become necessary to meet those demands.

There has been much criticism with respect to the Unemployment Insurance Fund indicating that it has provided a disincentive to workers to seek employment. This criticism might have had some merit in past years, at a time when employment opportunities were plentiful in our economy; but today, at a time when employment has never before been more difficult to find, with unemployment at a rate of over 12 per cent, this criticism does not hold true.

As the economic times change, so has legislation changed to protect the needs of Canada's citizens, be it through the need to encompass a greater degree of flexibility or to provide positive incentives for economic security. Over the past few years, as the country has attempted to weather the economic recession, Canadians have witnessed the effects of a declining labour force. Added to this, we are also confronted with the headlines of the ill effects of high technology, of how this new information society will displace millions of workers in the years ahead no matter how much the economy improves.

We know all too well the burden upon our society of unemployment rates of 12 per cent and 13 per cent, the despair of the unemployed, the rising hopelessness among our youth for whom the rate is already over 20 per cent. We know of the increasing incidence of family violence, alcoholism, delinquency and crime. We dare not contemplate the effects of another 5 per cent unemployed, yet unless we face up to the challenges posed by the new technology, that is precisely what we must expect and be prepared to accept.

There are both threats and opportunities associated with the evolution of the new technology. We have heard warnings of the dangers and the challenges which lie ahead. We must heed those warnings and meet those challenges. This has become more evident with respect to producing the skilled labour and personnel to meet the needs of the new technology.

Statistics have shown that women will be bearing the brunt of the new technology as, more and more, computers replace the jobs currently held by women. We must be prepared to address the problem by meeting the needs for retraining and education.

The proportion of women in the growth of the labour force increased dramatically from 1940 to 1980, as it became necessary to have two incomes per family and as more women became single parents. We have seen an increase in the number of women in the labour force from under one million in 1940 to almost five million in 1980. Fifty per cent of working age women, those between the ages of 25 to 54, are working, and 66 per cent of those women are married. By 1990, it is expected that 75 per cent of working age women will be in the labour force.

If we consider the historical perspective of women in the labour force, we will see where women have traditionally occupied the lower paying jobs. The service industry, which employs a greater percentage of women than other industries, will be directly affected by the age of technology, and an even greater burden will be placed on the shoulders of women, necessitating the need for economic protection.

We are witnessing change in the roles of the husband and wife as more and more women are being recognized for their valid contributions to society outside the home. Indeed, it is becoming more common to find that the wife is bringing home the larger income and, in some cases, the only income.

We have just come through a decade in which it became increasingly necessary for both partners in the labour force to support the family. With the high cost of mortgages, rents, clothing and food continuing to rise, the burden of providing the necessities of life is falling on the shoulders of women as well as their husbands. Women have also had to enter the labour force out of necessity because many men no longer have the security of permanent, long-term employment. In many areas, such as the mining industry, where hundreds of men were laid off, it has become the responsibility of the wife to bring home the family income.

With these changes in the family structure and the labour force, the need for revisions to existing legislation must be considered in order to keep pace with the demands of a changing society. An area where I feel existing legislation has been most discriminatory and is in need of change involves unemployment insurance benefits with respect to natural and adoptive mothers. The Act does not discriminate with respect to persons in the labour force making contributions to the Unemployment Insurance Fund, requiring that both men and women contribute to the fund in line with their earning capacity. However, the inequity occurs when it becomes necessary to collect benefits from the fund.

Claimants for sick benefits must only prove that they have worked for 20 weeks in the last year, but women applying for maternity benefits are required to meet a set of complex criteria which almost takes a legal mind to understand. At long last, the Government has finally come to terms with the necessity of making the eligibility requirements for natural mothers and adoptive parents more equitable.

We on this side of the House have seen this need for many years and I myself have dealt with many cases where this inequity has arisen. Having a family is a shared responsibility of both mother and father. If we are to encourage planned parenthood, then the Government must also share in the responsibility, assuring women that they will be treated equally and be equally protected by our safety nets.

The changes which are proposed to the Unemployment Insurance Act would simplify what has fast become an administrative nightmare with respect to collecting maternity benefits. I ask Your Honour if you have ever tried to explain to an expectant mother why she cannot collect maternity benefits when she meets the requirements for a major attachment to the work-force, having the necessary 20 insured weeks, but does not have the "magic ten" to qualify. It is almost impossible to make sense out of this particular section of the legislation.

What is meant by the "magic ten" is that a woman must have conceived between the thirtieth and fiftieth week prior to the expected date of her confinement. In other words, she is required to have worked for at least ten weeks around the time of conception. This requirement, I feel, is absolutely ludicrous. A woman may have had a long working history and been a major and consistent member of the labour force. Because of circumstances beyond her control, she may have been out of the labour force for more than the ten weeks during this unique period between the thirtieth and fiftieth week prior to her confinement. Consequently, she would not qualify for maternity benefits. There are hundreds of women who have had well over the required 20 weeks which would give qualification for sick benefits but who are missing the "magic ten" and therefore do not qualify for maternity benefits.

An even more blatant example of discrimination against women is that of the present denial of benefits to adoptive mothers. In all cases where an adoption is planned, the parents must provide proof to the adoption agency that they are financially secure and can provide an adequate, secure home for the new child. Women in this category, who have had a longstanding and major attachment to the work-force and who suffer an interruption of earnings in order to be home with the new baby, as is required by adoptive authorities, especially here in Ontario where it is a requirement that one must be at home for a period of six months, cannot collect unemployment insurance benefits during this interruption.

In the majority of cases of adopting parents, the mother has been working for a number of years while trying to conceive a child. When the decision to adopt is made, she will have been well established in the work force. However, under present regulations, she will have to give up the seniority of all those years of work. In effect, she is being punished because she cannot have children naturally and therefore cannot collect maternity benefits. She is not only denied the experience of bearing a child for various reasons but is also being denied the income protection that is afforded to natural mothers.

As I said at the outset, the program was initially set up to provide income protection for workers suffering temporary income interruptions. I have outlined examples of blatant discrimination in its application toward women with respect to their contributions to the labour force, to the family unit and to society. As legislation was introduced and passed to pay benefits to those members of the labour force who have suffered temporary interruptions of earnings, those benefits must be made available to both men and women in a fair and equitable manner without discrimination.

Today we are debating the adoption of legislation and amendments to the Act that will provide a more fair and equitable payment to all concerned. I thank you for the opportunity to debate today, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. McGrath: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Before the House goes into Committee of the Whole, there has been consultation and agreement that in order to make up for some of the time lost today in the taking of a division, we would sit until 6.30 p.m. so that we could complete all stages of the Bill. I think you will find that there is agreement to that.

Mr. Pinard: Mr. Speaker, we had discussed among House Leaders yesterday that such time could have been recuperated during the lunch hour if it was asked for. It is now 5.40 p.m. I understand there have been discussions among various Members. I will not object to our sitting until 6.30, but it would not be to recuperate the time that has been lost. It was very useful to vote ona $14.7 billion Bill a few minutes ago.

Mr. McGrath: Mr. Speaker, that is a sneaky shot across my bow which I cannot resist. I was merely trying to make the point that for one reason or another—I will not go into that—it took a little longer than usual for the division today. That cut into our time. I think there is agreement on that.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous agreement that the House shall sit until 6.30?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time and, by unanimous consent, the House went into committee thereon, Mr. Francis in the chair.

The Chairman: Order. House in Committee of the Whole on Bill C-156, an Act to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act, 19871, (No. 3.).

On Clause 1—Qualifying weeks

Mrs. Erola moved:

That Bill C-156, An Act to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971 (No. 3), be amended in Clause 1 by striking out lines 4 and 5 on page 1 and substituting the following:

"1. (1) Paragraph 16(1)(a) of the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971 is repealed and the following substituted therefor:

"(a) "disentitled" means to be not entitled under section 23, 25, 29, 36, 44, 45, 54 or 55 or under a regulation:"

(2) Section 16 of the said Act is further amended by adding thereto the following subsection:

"(3) For the purposes of subsection 22(3) and section 32, the placement with a major attachment claimant, at the same or substantially the same time, of two or more children for the purpose of adoption is a single placement of a child or children for the purpose of adoption."

2. (1) All that portion of subsection 17(6) of the said Act"

The Chairman: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the amendment?

Mr. McGrath: Mr. Chairman, I have a question for the Minister with regard to the adoptive parents provisions contained in the amendment now before the committee. Has the Government given any consideration for the future, after we have had some experience with this, to varying the maximum benefits for adoptive parents according to the age of the child? In other words, it would not require the same amount of time to be off work for a child six years or seven years old as opposed to an infant. The argument could be made that the benefits could vary in accordance with the age of the child to a maximum age. Perhaps the Minister could enlighten us?

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Chairman, that is clearly not the intention at the present time, as it is in the amendment. It certainly could be a matter brought up in committee once we have had some experience with the Bill and how it applies.

I think I indicated in my opening remarks that a number of issues raised by Hon. Members relate to other portions of the Unemployment Insurance Act. It is good material for examination at committee, particularly at the time when we deposit the annual report. Members will then have a chance to get into a good exchange on this issue at that time. That would certainly be a matter that we would take under advisement. If the Hon. Member wishes to raise it at that opportunity, I would be happy to have the Department do some background work on that question.

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Chairman, I believe this would be the best opportunity to ask the Minister this question. A number of parents have been waiting a long time for this particular amendment. Would he consider having it become law before January 1, 1984?

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Chairman, I want to take this opportunity to compliment the Hon. Member on his previous initiatives. He is one of the Members of the House who has provided much strong support for this move and has been very helpful in bringing these amendments through.

The reason for the starting date is mainly administrative and technical. This is a fairly major change which requires many changes in manuals and instructions to ensure that our staff and other people are properly prepared when the order comes in. That is why we chose the January 1, 1984 date. That is the only reason.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Chairman, could the Minister explain why the Government did not extend the option to one or the other of natural parents to have benefits extended to them that are extended to parents who adopt children? Why was this given to adoptive parents and not to natural parents?

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Chairman, it strikes me that the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain is about to engage in some of the points raised in his motions. I would point out that there are a number of serious concerns which we have about that. Perhaps the starting point is that individual claim is still attached to an individual. It is not attached to a family unit. In fact, I would caution Members of the New Democratic Party that they are beginning to tread on some very dangerous ground when they begin to establish the notion that unemployment insurance should be attached to a family unit. That would begin to work very seriously against the individual rights for which so many people have fought for both men and women, that they be treated as individuals. In this case the maternity claim is very clearly assigned to those women who are pregnant. Therefore the maternity claim is assigned to that particular disposition.

If those Hon. Members begin to say that they want to move into areas of parental leave, that is a very different topic, issue and piece of legislation.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Chairman, I am not actually trying to get into anything. I am trying to understand the reasons.

My understanding of the Bill is that the changes will afford to either the male or female in the case of adoption the option of taking the so-called maternity leave. You can call it whatever you like. Why would the Government see fit to allow that choice to be made in the case of adoption and not see fit to allow a similar choice to be made in the case of natural parents? That is all I am asking.

• (1750)

An Hon. Member: That should be obvious even to you.

Mr. Deans: Let me put to you that the mother may decide not to take the benefit. She may decide, for example, that she earns the higher of the salaries of the two and she may decide to forego taking the benefit and return to work shortly after the birth, and the husband, or the male partner, may decide, because his income is less and because they cannot afford to live off the lesser income, that he will stay home and look after the child in its infancy. Now that you have all had your little laugh, why is that option not available to them? That is all I am asking.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Chairman, the simplest answer to the question is that it is biological.

Mr. Deans: Forget it. Sit down.

Mr. Axworthy: Only one of the sexes is capable of having children. On the question of what happened subsequent to that, they have already established a claim at that particular point in time.

Mr. Deans: They do not have to establish a claim.

Mr. Axworthy: And a claim has already been established in terms of a pregnancy. As I said to the Hon. Member for St. John's East, there are many other very important questions and I do not in any way downgrade the importance of examining the larger concept of parental need. The Government has established a group under the chairmanship of the Minister responsible for the Status of Women to look into that issue. But under the Unemployment Insurance Act it is a maternity benefit that is being established and, therefore, is being held accountable in that case.

Mr. Nickerson: Mr. Chairman, I am told that the most common circumstance under which adoptions take place within the Province of Ontario, and perhaps other Provinces too, is that when a marriage takes place between two people one or both of whom have children from a previous marriage, these people live together for a while and then decide they would like to formalize the status of children of previous marriages, and adoption proceedings then take place. Am I to understand that if this happens when they eventually get around to formally adopting the children they will then be eligible to collect unemployment insurance? Is that what the Bill is all about?

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Chairman, I do not believe that is a circumstance under which the provisions of this Bill would apply. I think if the Hon. Member had listened to the very learned remarks of his colleague, the Hon. Member for Bow River, he would have understood very well that when an adopted child comes into the home for the first time, obviously a period of settlement must take place. It is up to that particular couple to determine which parent would be the one to stay home. That is, of course, dependent upon leave being taken and being approved by the employer, at which point all we are doing is paying the benefit. We cannot require the employer to give the leave. That is a contract between themselves and their employer, the one most amenable. If a child is adopted after having lived for several months or years in a home of a couple who have been remarried, the settlement has obviously taken place during that period of time and it would not be required. But that would be the choice of the parents. It is a voluntary choice because they would have to justify the leave taking to their employer in the circumstance.

Mr. Nickerson: Mr. Chairman, if they did take leave, and there are lots of employers who probably would be quite willing to let one of these people go for a few weeks, especially if there was not any work available at that time, would they be entitled to unemployment insurance under this Act? Can we have a yes or no answer to that question, Mr. Chairman?

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Chairman, under the Act we are providing the right of adoptive parents to claim benefits. We will obviously be establishing certain regulations to establish that provision. We would want to ensure that there would be no abuse of it. I think we will take the Hon. Member's representations under advisement. I would not in any way want to injure the basic principle, which I think is a very important step forward.

Ms. McDonald: Mr. Chairman, would the Minister not agree that while we have in name a scheme for providing maternity benefits, in fact part of the time for maternity benefits is for the physical work in labour, which obviously only the mother of the child can do. It is also a system of parental leave for the care of the child in the first weeks after the child is born. There is certainly no biological reason why the father could not undertake that care as well as the mother. In fact, many countries do permit a sharing between the two parents. This might be a very reasonable proposal to have.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Chairman, I tried to indicate that at the present time the Unemployment Insurance Act has very clear provisions for maternity benefits that were established some 12 years ago.

The concept being raised by the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood in relation to parental leave is a notion that is very worth-while. It should be examined and discussed. But really it is a matter for either a collective bargaining agreement, amendments to labour codes, or some other special piece of legislation. It may not inherently be established under the Unemployment Insurance Act. That is why I believe the intent is worth-while, but this is not the right place in which that debate should be entered into because it is a much broader, more far reaching concept than we are talking about in terms of the application of maternity benefits.

[Translation]

Mr. Cyr: Mr. Speaker, I have only one question for the Hon. Minister. In the documents annexed to his bill, it is mentioned that a claimant who is a fisherman will be able to repair or build a boat. Does this mean that he may also build and repair or build a boat. Does this mean that he may also build and repair lobster traps, nets and all the other fishing gear he uses?

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, in reply to the question asked by the Hon. Member, I would say that this means particularly equipment used by fishermen in their work, that is boats and other means of production.

[English]

Mr. McGrath: Mr. Chairman, I fail to relate that intervention to the amendment that is before the committee.

The Chairman: Clause 1 is a fairly general Clause. The Hon. Member's point is well taken with regard to the amendment. The Chair has exercised a certain tolerance but the Hon. Member's point is well taken.

Shall the amendment carry?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Amendment agreed to.

Clause 1 as amended agreed to.

Clause 2 agreed to.

Shall Clause 3 carry?

Mrs. Erola: I move:

That Bill C-156, be amended

(a) by adding, immediately after line 23 on page 1, the following:

"3. Subsection 22(3) of the said Act is repealed and the following substituted therefor:

"(3) Notwithstanding subsection (2), the maximum number of weeks for which initial benefit may be paid to a claimant

(a) in any benefit period for reasons of pregnancy, placement of a child or children for the purpose of adoption, prescribed illness, injury or quarantine or any combination thereof, or

(b) in respect of a single pregnancy or a single placement of a child or children for the purpose of adoption, is fifteen."

4. Subsections 30(1) and (2) of the said Act are repealed and the following substituted therefor:

"30. (1) Notwithstanding section 25 but subject to this section, initial benefit is payable to a major attachment claimant who proves her pregnancy.

(2) Subject to subsection 22(3), initial benefit is payable to a major attachment claimant under this section for each week of unemployment in the period

(a) that begins

(i) eight weeks before the week in which her confinement is expected, or

(ii) with the week in which her confinement occurs, whichever is the earlier; and

(b) that ends

(i) with the week immediately preceding the first week for which benefit is claimed and payable pursuant to another section of this Part, or

(ii) seventeen weeks after the later of

(A) the week in which her confinement is expected, and

(B) the week in which her confinement occurs, whichever is the earlier."

● (1800)

5. (1) The said Act is further amended by adding thereto, immediately after section 31 thereof, the following section:

"32. (1) Notwithstanding section 25 but subject to this section, initial benefit is payable to a major attachment claimant who proves that it is reasonable for that claimant to remain at home by reason of the placement with that claimant of one or more children for the purpose of adoption pursuant to the laws governing adoption in the province in which that claimant resides.

(2) Subject to subsection 22(3), initial benefit is payable under this section for each week of unemployment in the period

(a) that begins with the week in which the child or children are actually placed with the major attachment claimant, and

(b) that ends

(i) seventeen weeks after the week in which the child or children are so placed,

(ii) with the week in which it is no longer reasonable for that claimant to remain at home for the reason referred to in subsection (1), or

(iii) with the week immediately preceding the week for which benefit is claimed and payable pursuant to another section of this Part, whichever is the earliest.

(3) Where benefits are payable to a major attachment claimant under this section and earnings are received by that claimant for any period that falls in a week in the period described in subsection (2), the provisions of subsection 26(2) do not apply and all such earnings shall be deducted from the benefit payable for that week.

(4) Benefits shall not be paid pursuant to this section to more than one major attachment claimant in respect of a single placement of a child or children for the purpose of adoption.

(5) Where, before any benefit has been paid to a major attachment claimant in respect of a single placement of a child or children for the purpose of adoption, two insured persons with whom the child or children are placed for the purpose of adoption claim benefit under this section, no benefit shall be paid under this section until one of such claims is withdrawn."

(2) Section 32 of the said Act, as enacted by subsection (1), applies only in respect of a claimant whose benefit period begins on or after the day subsection (1) comes into force.

6. Section 36 of the said Act is repealed and the following substituted therefor:

"36. Nothwithstanding paragraph 25(b) and sections 30 and 32, a claimant is not entitled to be paid extended benefit for any working day for which he fails to prove that he was capable of and available for work and unable to obtain suitable employment."

7. Section 46 of the said Act is repealed."

(b) by renumbering clauses 2 and 3 as clauses 8 and 9.

The Chairman: The Chair has just a little problem at this point. These appear to be further amendments to Clause 1 of the Bill before us. I think they should be proposed as further amendments to Clause 1.

Mrs. Erola: I so propose it.

The Chairman: Clause 1 now becomes extended to additional subclauses as indicated.

Ms. McDonald: Mr. Chairman, I wish to move in the case of subclause 4 of the amendment:

That the amendment be amended

by adding immediately after subsection 30(2) contained therein the following subsection:

(3) After the birth of the child, either parent may take parental leave for the remaining time of the claim period, or both parents may share the parental leave, so long as the total time claimed by the two together does not exceed the total leave period provided.

I move the following amendment to subclause 5 of the amendment

That the amendment be amended

by adding immediately after subsection 32(5) contained therein the following subsection:

(6) Either adoptive parent may take parental leave for the claim period, or both parents may share parental leave for the claim period, so long as the total time claimed by the two together does not exceed the total claim period available.

I have spoken about the reasons for this already. Given the shortness of time, I will not repeat them at this point.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a point of order to suggest that these amendments really run counter to the basic concept as contained in the legislation put forward by the Government. As I indicated earlier, it is really introducing a concept of parental leave which is not in relation to the notion of maternity benefits. While I have little argument with the notion of parental leave, I do not believe that it really fits the tenor or objective of the legislation. Furthermore, I would suggest the amendment would require or engage an additional expense to the Government which is really beyond the purview of the individual Member to offer by way of amendment to this legislation. Therefore, I suggest that the particular motions cannot be entertained by the committee at this time.

The Chairman: The Chair will invite further argument on the point of order raised by the Minister.

Mr. McGrath: Mr. Chairman, I want to make it very clear that we do not necessarily oppose the intent of the amendment put forward by my friend from the NDP, but I have to make this point and make it very strongly to the Committee.

I have some doubts about the admissibility of this amendment. If the Chair rules that it is admissible, we will not vote on the amendment for two reasons.

First, it is in violation of the understanding we have with the Government. We agreed that we would pass all of the amendments presented to us by the Government in one day. It was our clear understanding that no other amendments would be entertained. That may not have been explicit, but in my view it was implicit and that was the understanding I took back to my caucus.

Second, in any event we are engaged in a one-day debate by special order of the House. I could not commit my Party to an amendment it has not had time to consider in caucus. For that reason alone I would have to abstain from voting on the amendment. In any event, I believe the case can be made, without arguing the substance of the amendment, that the amendment is in fact inadmissible in that it requires a charge against the exchequer and hence would require the usual Royal resolution or whatever.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Chairman, I would argue on two grounds that it is in fact admissible. First, contained within the amendments put forward by the Minister, there is quite clearly the option in the case of adoptive parents for either of the two to opt to collect benefits. That is quite clearly within the legislation. This is not a deviation from that principle. That principle is part of the principle of this legislation. What we are doing is saying in essence that the same principle be extended whether adopted or natural parents are involved. I would argue that there is no deviation from what we now have before us.

I admit it is a broadening of one section, but it is a broadening consistent with what is already contained within the legislation that applies to other citizens of Canada. I suggest it is wrong to give to one what you are not prepared to give to others.

On the second point, the matter of whether it entails additional expenditure, it quite clearly does not. The expenditure that we are speaking about is the exact same expenditure, but to be shared with either of the parents. We are saying that the amount of money talked about is no more and no less than the amount of money currently put forward under the Royal Proclamation, and that either of the parents should have access to the allowance.

The amount that we are talking about, both in terms of the amount of time that is to be made available and the amount of money, is quite clearly the same, involving the same expenditure. Therefore there has been no attempt made by us to increase the expenditures. In fact, Mr. Chairman, I might point out to you that it is entirely possible that we are speaking about a smaller amount of money. In fact, we could be speaking about less money than the Minister is currently putting forward.

I put to you, Sir, that in the case of a family where the wife earns $20,000 a year and the husband earns less, if the husband were to decide to be the parent in receipt of benefit, then he would receive benefit at a lesser amount since his entitlement would be a lesser entitlement.

I would therefore argue that we are not in any way trying to increase the expenditure of the Government. We are simply trying to make it possible for the family unit, something that all of us in the House support and that all of us think is so important for the future of the country, to make the decision for itself as to which of the two parents should stay home during that period immediately after the birth of the child. When that choice has been made by that family, the Unemployment Insurance Act should then recognize that right of choice, and having made that recognition the payment should be made to either of the parents, which ever one is designated to be the recipient.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Chairman, I want to thank the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain because I think he just made the case for suggesting that this is an inadmissible amendment. The fact of the matter is that there is no sharing principle encountered under the Adoption Act. We must talk about individual claims, and under the Adoption Act, one individual or the other can make the claim. They cannot share that claim. The Unemployment Insurance Act is totally related to individual claims for maternity benefits, sickness or regular benefits.

Hon. Members are introducing amendments which totally change the whole concept of unemployment insurance. That may be a good idea, but it is an idea that should be discussed in a different forum. Therefore, it is very clear why this amendment cannot be accepted under the Unemployment Insurance Act.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Chairman, if I may say so, the Minister is twisting my words in an attempt to gain credence. Let me put it to him that we are not suggesting any deviation at all. In fact, we want to suggest that if the Government believes that those kinds of determinations should be made by families and not by the Government, if it believes that there should be some integrity left in a family household for the husband or wife or two partners in a relationship to determine which of the two are best suited to care for a child, then this amendment surely could never be ruled inadmissable.

Mr. Cullen: Mr. Chairman, I believe that the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain defeated himself at the beginning of his presentation by indicating that, in a biological situation, if the mother opted not to draw the maternity benefits then there would be no charge against the Crown. In this instance, he is offering an option which is not available in the original legislation. This would clearly create a situation that could cost more money.

The Chairman: Two arguments have been made relating to inadmissability of the sub-amendments. The first argument relates to whether or not an additional charge must fall on the Crown. The Chair has difficulty determining from the argument the net results from the point of view of an expenditure. The Chair, however, is concerned about the principle in the sub-amendment which indicates that both parents may share the parental leave. It appears to the Chair that this introduces a new principle which is not found elsewhere in the Act and does go beyond the general intent as expressed in the legislation. On that ground the Chair rules the sub-amendments not acceptable.

The question is on the further amendments to Clause 1 proposed by the Minister of State Responsible for the Status of Women.

Mr. McGrath: Before you put the question on the amendment that is now before the Committee, I would like to say what I am sure the Minister Responsible for the Status of Women would love to have said, and I am surprised she did not say it. I would like to pay tribute to Stella Bliss and all the Stella Blisses of the world—this one woman and all the other women—who had the courage to challenge the inequities and the injustices in the system, because this is really their day. I think it would be unfortunate if we were to pass this moment in Committee without paying that tribute to Stella Bliss and all the Stella Blisses of the world.

Having said that, Mr. Chairman, I now want to put a question to the Minister, without diminishing in any way our support for this amendment. My question is prompted by our concern for the state of the Unemployment Insurance Fund. Based on the experience of the past five months, the expenditure will exceed $12 billion this year. Last year it reached a record high of $8 billion. I put the question to the Hon. Minister now that I put to him in committee the other day when we were dealing with his Estimates. Can the Minister give the Committee an assurance that there will not be an increase in Unemployment Insurance premiums? In my view and in the view of my colleagues, an increase in Unemployment Insurance premiums would impose a disincentive on the private sector, expecially small business firms, to hire people because it would impose an additional tax upon them. It would also impose an additional hardship upon women who are the lower paid members of our society and who would have to pay additional Unemployment Insurance premiums.

Can the Minister first give us some idea of how much the amendments will cost in terms of additional benefits, and can he then tell us how he intends to finance them? If at the same time, he can give us an assurance that he does not anticipate an increase in the premiums, we would be very satisfied.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Chairman, what I can offer to the Hon. Member is the very clear commitment that we intend to maintain insurance premiums at the lowest possible level. I cannot assure him that premiums will not increase because it is not wholly my assurance to give.

I would like to explain to Members of the Committee that before we arrive at decisions about premium increases, we first undertake an examination of what the various rates both of employment and unemployment are projected to be for the third quarter of the fiscal year, what the draw on the fund has been, and what we might see as the projected deficit in 1984. On the basis of those soundings and, as was done last year, on the basis of the kind of consultations I would undertake through the Commission with business and labour, we would then make recommendations to the Minister of Finance and to Cabinet who would then have to make the final decision.

I can, however, make it very clear that it is my belief that we will not have to raise premiums substantially in the forthcoming year unless the Hon. Member for St. John's East falls into the trap that is being laid by the recommendations of some of his colleagues. In particular, I read in the paper this morning that the Hon. Member from Etobicoke is recommending a totally uncapped extension of Unemployment Insurance benefits, a move that would probably add $4 billion or $5 billion to the cost of unemployment insurance. Substantially higher premiums would be required to begin to pay for that. If the Hon. Member for St. John's East will guarantee me that he will not endorse the position taken by his colleague, the Hon. Member from Etobicoke, I will assure him that I will do my best to make sure premiums stay at a very low level.

Mr. McGrath: Mr. Chairman, that was un unfortunate misrepresentation of what I believe the Hon. Member from Etobicoke said and how it was construed in the House. Under the same principle that supported the variable entrance requirement, I think the same case can be made for extending the benefit period because we are into a deep recession and because the Government anticipates that we will be into double-digit unemployment throughout this decade and into the early part of the next. The Minister knows full well, but deliberately omitted to say, that when a person no longer receives Unemployment Insurance benefits, when he becomes an exhaustee, he still has to live, and in order to live he must subject himself to a means test to qualify for welfare.

The Minister also knows that the Government of Canada pays 50 per cent of the welfare bill under the Canada Assistance Plan. This proposal would certainly save money under the Canada Assistance Plan, it would save the money of the hard-pressed Provinces. A case could be made, albeit in another forum because this is not the day for it, to think in terms of changing the whole approach to unemployment insurance to fit into the reality of the period that we are going through at the present time.

This proposal speaks to displacement as a result of high tech, the impact that it will have on women, the impact it is having on young people and how the Unemployment Insurance Act can relate to this new situation. I cannot give any assurance to the Minister, but I have every right to ask the Minister if he intends to raise premiums. I have every right to ask the Minister what in his opinion are the estimated additional charges on the Unemployment Insurance Fund that will flow from the passage of these amendments. I believe that to be a reasonable and responsible intervention, and I believe the Minister has a responsibility to deal with it in other than a facetious manner.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Chairman, far from being facetious, I was being very serious, pointing out that we take quite seriously the state of the Unemployment Insurance Fund. That is why we have given very serious consideration in the past to finding the best way of coping with those who have exhausted their benefits.

I want to point out to the Committee that while we recognize that hardships are faced by those who exhaust their benefits, a study conducted last Fall showed that on average about 6 or 8 per cent of those end up on welfare. The figures could be substantially higher—perhaps as high as 12 per cent or 13 per cent. Not everyone who exhausts benefits immediately goes on welfare. About 40 per cent go back to work within five or six weeks and some others go back to school or find some other means of support. Only a small proportion make application for welfare.

We feel that we have made a substantial offer to alleviate that problem under the NEED program which was started with $500 million. Because of the leverage we have established with the private sector and the Provinces, it will be closer to $900 million by the time we are finished. We have been able to provide well over 60,000 jobs which should be properly chanelled for those who otherwise have to make a choice. That is a way of cushioning it.

The alternative, and this is very important to the Hon. Member for St. John's East and others who have made the case, is having an open-ended commitment, and even if we had a limited 26-week extension that would place an additional cost on the Unemployment Insurance Fund of anywhere from $3 billion to $4 billion. That would have to be raised either through premiums or further Government deficit financing. We have heard many comments from the other side of the House to the effect that we should not go into further deficit financing. That is the dilemma we face and that is why it is important that we not fall into the trap of saying we should automatically extend benefits. That would be a very costly charge against the fund and the money would have to be raised either by Government borrowing or higher premiums.

I agree with the Hon. Member that the Unemployment Insurance Act must change if it is to be relevant. That is why I have suggested that we use the Standing Committee on Labour, Manpower and Immigration as a forum in which Members can make representations and where people can examine the Unemployment Insurance Act. Then when we come back to the House next time for amendments to the Act we will have had the full benefit of their representations.

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Speaker, I would like to have taken advantage of the debate on the amendment to discuss a question that might just as well have been placed under clause 3 if we were going to move ahead, but I see the clock is running out and we are about to go down the chute, as far as any further discussion is concerned. I think this is an important place to put the question of improvements to the legislation, especially if there is no objection to them in the House, which I think is illustrated by the consent that was given on the amendment.

I should like to make two comments in relation to administration of the legislation. The provisions of this Bill are obviously going to cause some further work load for the Unemployment Insurance Commission staff. The administrative burden of the Unemployment Insurance Commission offices in the regions which I represent and in others, has reached the point that they often cannot deliver service. Because of the complexity of the task, the lack of staff and training, some claimants are as much as 12 weeks behind in receiving their benefits. They are left without income for that time. Last winter the welfare system, acting on an emergency basis, was unable to provide support for them.

When the Minister says there are no additional costs that will go into the system, I wonder if he is fulfilling his responsibility to provide sufficient staff and sufficient resources and sufficient training to ensure that the additional burden and the more complicated approach to providing unemployment insurance is being dealt with in an appropriate way.

An example is the case of a great many claims of loggers and fishermen coming in at a certain time of the year as shut-downs occur. The Minister's training staff does not train unemployment insurance officers on a regular basis to evaluate those claims, which are very complex so there is a tremendous shortage of personnel who can handle these claims. This causes enormous delays.

Could the Minister give us an indication of what his Department is doing to ensure that people will not have to wait up to 12 weeks for benefits because of the more complicated provisions of the Act. What is he doing about special agents with the responsibility of dealing with large numbers of groups so that they can be moved through quickly?

The second matter I want to raise also relates to administration, and that is the access that individuals—women, adoptive parents or any other group—have to their files. Individuals in the community are being systematically denied access to their unemployment insurance files when they have questions about their entitlement or the decisions made by unemployment insurance officials. They are being told that if they want access to their files they must apply under the Freedom of Information Act. A number of offices in the riding I represent are giving this advice to people, and it is not acceptable.

The Chairman: The Hon. Member seems to be straying a little bit from the amendments currently under discussion. I wonder if the Hon. Member could shorten his remarks a little bit.

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Chairman, the last item I want to deal with under administration is the RCMP involvement with the Unemployment Insurance Commission officials in police work and investigation.

The Chairman: The Hon. Member is going substantially beyond the scope of the amendment under discussion. I suggest that he will have to avail himself of another forum for this.

Does the Minister of Employment and Immigration care to comment?

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Chairman, I would invite the Hon. Member to attend the next meeting of the Standing Committee on Labour, Manpower and Immigration where I will be glad to go into any discussion he wants about the Unemployment Insurance Fund.

Having regard to his concern about benefits and the duration of payout, I can tell him that we have added some 1,200 staff to the unemployment insurance offices, beginning in 1982. They have been trained and are in place. The waiting time has been reduced by several weeks. I do not expect any office in his or in other region will have the problems we had last winter.

Mr. Nickerson: Mr. Chairman, I find it almost unbelievable that the Minister cannot tell us how much this is going to cost. I am sure there must be people up in the gallery who have undertaken studies on behalf of the Department to find out how much the additional charge to the Unemployment Insurance Fund will be.

Am I correct in understanding from the amendment now before us that in one Province benefits will be payable for a period of eight weeks, and in another Province which has different regulations governing adoption the maximum period of benefits under the Act will be four weeks? How is it proposed that the matter be dealt with in those jurisdictions where no period is specified?

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Chairman, I would point out to the Hon. Member for Western Arctic that in my opening remarks I gave the actual cost of these amendments. He can read Hansard tomorrow and he will get all the information he needs.

Mr. McGrath: Mr. Speaker, I have a question about the amendments dealing with fishermen, having regard to the Supreme Court decision, and I salute Vicky Silk, a Newfoundland women, who had the courage to challenge the system when it was treating her and other women unjustly. Will the Minister tell the House if the provisions of the Bill which now permit the Commission to make regulations will allow the implementation of the recommendations of the Kirby Task Force?

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Chairman, it would be my intention to follow through the commitment given this morning in my opening remarks to bring forward the changes as recommended by Kirby sometime within the next week.

Mr. Miller: Mr. Chairman, I take it we are now on Clause 9?

Mr. Chairman: Clause 1 of the Bill is before us. The amendments have the effect of renumbering the clauses of the Bill, but technically we are still dealing with amendments to Clause 1.

Is the House in favour of the amendments?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Chairman: Shall Clause 1 as further amended carry?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Clause 1 (as amended) agreed to.

Mr. Chairman: Clause 2 has already been agreed to.

Mr. Chairman: Shall Clause 3 carry?

On Clause 3—Fishermen

Mr. Miller: Mr. Chairman, if we are dealing with Clause 3 now, I would like to move an amendment regarding fishermen, as follows:

That Bill C-156, An Act to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971 (No. 3), be amended in subclause 9(1) by adding immediately after the words "to that matter" where they appear in line 10 of subsection 146(1.1) thereof the following words:

"except subsections (1.2), (1.3) and (1.4)"

Those subsections are as follows:

(1.2) Notwithstanding anything in this Act, self-employed fishermen and persons engaged in any activity related to or incidental to fishing shall qualify for unemployment insurance, including, as an employer of a self-employed person engaged in fishing, any person with whom the self-employed person enters into a contractual or other commercial relationship in respect of his occupation as a self-employed person engaged in fishing.

(1.3) All weeks of employment in any activity related to or incidental to fishing by a self-employed person in the fishing industry shall qualify as weeks of insurable employment toward a claim

(1.4) All persons who establish a claim under this section shall be entitled to the full regular benefits under that claim without discrimination based on distinction between year-round fishermen and fishermen other than year-round fishermen.

The effect of these amendments would be to permit self-employed fishermen, and those actively involved in fishing activities, to claim any work weeks as insurable work weeks. They would also enable fishermen to claim benefits in any week in the year based on their claim, which would in effect resolve many of the problems of discrimination found in the fishing industry right now. I said during my comments on these amendments that they will do what we hope the Minister might have had in mind with respect to the regulations, but we have no commitment that the regulations will deal with a discrimination in the Unemployment Insurance Act as it pertains to fishermen at this time.

The Chairman: Is the Hon. Member contending that the proposed amendment would entail no additional charge to the Treasury, because this is a requirement in order for the amendment to be acceptable?

Mr. Miller: That would be our intention, Mr. Chairman, that it would not incur any additional costs on the basis of the commitments from the Minister to deal with discrimination in the Unemployment Insurance Act as pertaining to fishermen. If he is going to deal with those discriminatory practices, he would have to include changes in the regulations to deal with the very situations we have raised here.

The Chairman: The question of non-discrimination stands on its own. However, the question I put to the Hon. Member is, would the effect of the adoption of his proposed amendments entail an additional charge to the Treasury?

Mr. Miller: Not as far as we in this Party are concerned.

The Chairman: The Chair has great difficulty accepting that argument. The Hon. Member will have to do better than that to persuade the Chair as to the admissibility of the amendments.

Mr. Miller: Mr. Chairman, in all due respect, it is simply the argument I used a moment ago. If, as the Minister explained in his speech this morning, and as others in his Party have indicated, this is going to deal with the difficulties fishermen have with unemployment insurance by regulation, then it is my contention that the changes in regulations are to cost some money, and this amendment, placing it in the Act rather than in the regulations, will not cost any more than what the Government is already proposing.

The Chairman: It seems to the Chair that the Hon. Member by his own argument is admitting that his amendment would involve an additional charge on the Treasury. Therefore it has to be ruled out of order. Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Chairman: Shall Clause 3 carry?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Clause 3 agreed to.

The Chairman: Shall Clause 4 carry?

On Clause 4—Coming into force

Mrs. Erola: With your permission, Mr. Chairman, I should just like to reply to some of the comments of the Hon. Member for St. John's East. I also intended to speak to this Bill generally. However, I feel that the Royal Commission on the Status of Women, the parliamentary task force and the "Stella Bliss" have been talking for far too long. It is time for action. Therefore, I propose:

That Clause 4 of Bill C-156 be amended by striking out lines 26 and 27 on page 3 and substituting the following.

"TRANSITIONAL

10. Where a benefit period established for a claimant begins before the day sections 4 and 7 come into force, any claim for benefit for a week of unemployment that falls in that benefit period shall, whether or not the benefit period was established before that day, be dealt with in all respects as if sections 4 and 7 had not come into force.

COMMENCEMENT

11. Section 1, 3 to 7 and 10 shall come into force on a day or days to be fixed by proclamation.

12. Sections 2, 8 and 9 shall come into force on June 4, 1983.

The Chairman: The House has heard the amendment. Shall the amendment carry?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chairman: Shall Clause 4 as amended carry?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Clause 4 as amended agreed to.

The Chairman: Shall the title carry?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Chairman, given the fact that we were discussing the administration and now we are on the title, I would like still to appeal to the Chair and to the Minister to respond to the question concerning the involvement of his Department in ongoing police work. I believe it is vital to the question of administration. I would like the Minister to respond to that. Has he sanctioned that particular relationship in the administration of the Unemployment Insurance Act, and by implication would this continue?

The Chairman: The Chair has difficulty from the point of view of procedure. A general debate, which the Hon. Member is seeking, appears to be out of order at this stage of the Bill. It is with reluctance that the Chair so rules, but my understanding of the procedure is such that I have to make that ruling.

Shall the title carry?

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Chairman, in order to respect your ruling, I wonder whether the Minister could take this as notice and be prepared to comment on it at another time?

Mr. McGrath: Mr. Chairman, I can solve the Hon. Member's problem by inviting him to attend a meeting of the Standing Committee on labour, Manpower and Immigration where he will have an opportunity to place his question and receive an answer to it. And if he cannot do it, he could do it through his colleague.

The Chairman: Shall the title carry?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Title agreed to.

The Chairman: Shall the Bill carry?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Bill reported as amended, read the third time and passed.

Unemployment Insurance Act

Mr. Deputy Speaker: At this time I wonder if there would be unanimous agreement to dispense with the Adjournment Debate?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being 6.40 p.m., I do now leave the chair until 11 a.m. tomorrow.

At 6.40 p.m. the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO S.O. 21

[English]

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

CYPRUS—CANADIAN PEACEKEEPING TROOPS—COMMITTEE STUDY SUGGESTED

Mrs. Ursula Appolloni (York South-Weston): Madam Speaker, it is reported that on June 1 the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. MacEachen) warned the UN Secretary-General, Javier Perez de Cuella, that Canada might withdraw its troops from the UN Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus. In so doing, the Secretary of State for External Affairs obviously reflected growing Canadian frustration at the apparent inability of the Turkish and the Greek Governments to reach a peaceful and equitable solution to the Cypriot problem.

Therefore, in the interest of the two disputing parties, of the Canadian public, and of the Canadian Armed Forces themselves, I propose that the question be brought to the attention of the Standing Committee on External Affairs and National Defence for further investigation and discussion, and that the same Committee be empowered to study Canada's more general role as peacekeeper.

MEDICAL CARE

CALL FOR EXAMINATION OF HOSPITAL SYSTEM

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Madam Speaker, there is, in Canada, something basically sick about our medical and hospital system. There are, at one and the same time, medical facilities boarded up, medical personnel unemployed or underemployed, and people who need medical attention, particularly surgery, who are unable to obtain services or who are forced to wait for excessively long periods of time. It is not uncommon for Canadians to go to the U.S.A. for medical treatment because they are unable to obtain it here.

The Minister of National Health and Welfare (Miss Bégin) reduces, or threatens to reduce, payments to the Provinces and then, for crass political purposes, condemns her provincial counterparts when they take the only steps available to them to help defray costs.

It is time we made a serious examination of our medical and hospital system with a view to removing the distortions, inconveniences, and dangers which have become endemic within it.

THE LATE STAN ROGERS

TRIBUTE TO VICTIM OF AIR CANADA ACCIDENT

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Madam Speaker, last evening 23 people died while coming home on Flight 797 from Dallas to Toronto. Among them was Stan Rogers, who lived in and sang about all the different parts of this country of ours, who sang about the hopes and dreams, all the promise of our land. He always sang about his Canada, and the people who make it great, the farmers and fishermen, those in the industrial plants and on the northern frontier. Some of his words:

For the good times come and go, but at least there's rain

So this won't be barren ground when September rolls around.

So watch the fields behind the plow turn to straight dark rows,

Put another season's promise in the ground.

That was from "The Field Behind the Plow", for Saskatchewan grain farmers.

Some more is for workers, from "Working Joe"—for Dad:

Time was when a fella could just let time slip away,

No worries, car or telephone, just rent and food to pay . . .

But now there's just too much to do in any given day;

The car, the phone, the kiddies' shoes, too many bills to pay . . .

Oh it's sure sweet to sit at home and let time slip away,

Through tomorrow I'll be scratching through another day.

I am sure all Hon. Members of the House extend their sincere condolences to the friends and relatives, the bereaved, of those who died so tragically yesterday.

Madam Speaker: I am sure the House would want to respect those feelings but I must remind the Hon. Member, although I did let him go on, that statements under Standing Order 21 are not to be used for this particular purpose but to allow Hon. Members to make statements on issues with which they are concerned. Of course we are concerned about terrible accidents of this nature, but perhaps Hon. Members would want to refer to them at another time.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

PROVISION OF BENEFITS FOR ADOPTIVE PARENTS

Mr. Jack Burghardt (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Communications): Madam Speaker, on March 30 I rose in the House of Commons to protest the inequity of Section 30(1) of the Unemployment Insurance Act. That Section required that an applicant for maternity benefits prove her pregnancy. As a consequence, adoptive parents were effectively denied the receipt of maternity benefits.

Section 30(1) was profoundly inequitable. Clearly, the general need for maternal care of the adopted newborn is as great as that required for the biological newborn to whose parents we have provided maternity benefits for many years.

As we all know, the inequity of Section 30(1) was eliminated yesterday by the passage of Bill C-156, which will provide either of the adopting parents up to 15 weeks of maternity benefits provided that he or she had met usual criteria of 20 weeks' employment in the previous 12 months.

I was particularly pleased to see the introduction, and passage by unanimous consent, of Bill C-156. I was also pleased to note an editorial, in the Edmonton Journal, entitled "No Less a Parent". The editorial, which was supportive of the extension of maternity benefits to adoptive parents, stated:

> Employment Minister Lloyd Axworthy should be commended for his proposal to extend maternity benefits to adoptive parents.

I agree with the Edmonton Journal, Madam Speaker.

FORESTRY

SPRUCE BUDWORM INFESTATION OF NEW BRUNSWICK FORESTS

Mr. Fred McCain (Carleton-Charlotte): Madam Speaker, in Canada the ravages of insect disease and fire consume almost as much forest growth as the forest industry itself.

• (1110)

Forests in New Brunswick cover 88.4 per cent of the land area. Most of this forest land, 15 million acres, is productive and represents an area equal to the combined areas of Vermont, New Hampshire and Massachussetts. The forest industry is the largest in New Brunswick, representing one-third of the employment in the manufacturing sector and 40 per cent of its output.

Direct employment in the primary and secondary sectors of the forest products industry involves some 16,000 persons, with indirect employment accounting for between 15,000 to 20,000 persons. More important is the fact that, of all sectors of the provincial economy, the forest products sector is unique in that it plays an important economic role in virtually all regions of the Province, in both rural and urban economies.

Because of the spruce budworm infestation, in southern New Brunswick in the 70s there was a loss of between six million and ten million cords of softwood. This approaches an eight-years' supply of wood for the principal consumer and employer in that area.

The House of Commons forestry committee has begun an investigation into budworm depredations in New Brunswick. I thank the Minister for this move to maintain the forest industry which is nearly 30 per cent of New Brunswick's GNP. We must recognize the fact that this must be addressed as a farm type operation, and we must reconcile the conflict of environment and forest interests. The federal Government should lead in such an effort.

GRAIN HANDLERS' DISPUTE—APPOINTMENT OF MEDIATOR URGED

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Madam Speaker, I am sure you are aware that there is a possibility of a grain port shutdown on the West Coast. In particular, there is a possibility of a lockout. Nine days ago, on May 25, I asked the Minister of Labour (Mr. Caccia) a question about the possibility of appointing a conciliation commissioner or a board to try to make sure there was no shutdown, because this is a very vital time for the shipment of grain for western Canadian farmers. We are coming to the end of a crop year. It is a very important time and we cannot afford to have any kind of a shutdown which will jeopardize the economy of western Canada. The grain trade last year, for example, gave Canada a $5 billion export crop, and this is very important for the economy as a whole.

It is very important that the Government across the way should not once again sacrifice western Canada, as it is trying to do with the Crow Bill which is before the House. If it is going to reject the suggestion of a conciliation commissioner or a conciliation board, it should look at some other ideas.

I would like to suggest to the Government that it look at the possibility to talking to both the grain handlers and the elevator companies about the feasibility of Mr. Justice Emmett Hall mediating a settlement in this particular dispute. I remind you, Madam Speaker, that Mr. Justice Emmett Hall has a good reputation. In the past he has frequently been a mediator and conciliator. He has been very successful, and I am sure he will be accepted by both Parties. I ask this because we cannot afford to have a shutdown of the grain export industry—

Madam Speaker: Order, please.

INCOME TAX

AUDIT OF PHYSICALLY HANDICAPPED PROFESSOR'S EARNINGS

Mr. Stanley Hudecki (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): Madam Speaker, an Associate Professor of Sociology living in my riding, but who teaches at the University of Waterloo, is concerned over a current audit of his income tax returns for the past ten years. This young man, a PhD, has cerebral palsy, which incapacitates him as far as writing is concerned. It is impossible to complete any of his work without extra secretarial and research assistance. He is concerned with that portion of the Income Tax Act which states that an employee cannot use another employee to do his or her work.

In pursuing this audit, I would ask Revenue Canada to study Recommendation 46 of the "Obstacles" Report in which the federal Government is advised to amend the Income Tax Act which states that goods and services currently included in medical expenses deductions and which are clearly attributable to a severe, prolonged disability, be transferred to a proposed disability deduction. It further recommended that the current flat rate deduction be replaced by a disability deduction whereby a person may claim for himself the full costs of goods and services directly attributable to severe and prolonged disability. These changes would amend the Income Tax Act to offset the cost of disability, such as in the case of the Associate Professor at the University of Waterloo.

FATALITIES SUFFERED ON DALLAS-TORONTO FLIGHT—REQUEST FOR DETAILS

Mr. Pat Nowlan (Annapolis Valley-Hants): Madam Speaker, I would ask the Minister, to whom I have obviously given notice, to bring us up to date on the tragedy in the sky which happened to Air Canada last night. In posing my question, may I, on behalf of my Party, extend our condolences to the families of those who lost their lives, and commend the professionalism of the crew who were able to bring the plane down, thus averting an even greater loss of life.

• (1115)

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, would you allow me to join with my two colleagues who have previously expressed the regrets and sympathies of Members of this House and, I might add, of the Government of Canada, to the families affected by this very sad accident.

I do not have very many details because the investigation is obviously still in progress. As my hon. friend knows, the National Transportation Safety Board in the United States in proceeding to inquire, for example by questioning the survivors. Twenty-three passengers died, 16 are still in hospital but are expected to be released within 24 hours. So the investigation is on. A Canadian observer, as in the tradition between Canada and the U.S., has joined the inquiry team.

I might add, with great sadness, that this accident is very unfortunate because, among other bad effects, it breaks the three-year safety record of the seven major Canadian airlines. Three years without an accident was a wonderful record and we deplore the fact that it came to an end in such a dramatic way yesterday.

ATTENDANCE OF CANADIAN OBSERVER AT INVESTIGATION IN UNITED STATES

Mr. Pat Nowlan (Annapolis Valley-Hants): Madam Speaker, I appreciate the Minister's answer. I also understand why he cannot give too many details at this time. However, concerning the observer he mentioned, may I have some assurance from him, even at this early stage, that the responsible Canadian authorities, be it an observer or otherwise, will be involved in the investigation so that in time we here will know through our own responsible officials just exactly what happened, so that this type of thing will not take place again?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): This is the case, Madam Speaker, but the law and the tradition dictate that the place where the accident takes place commands jurisdiction over the inquiry. So if an accident takes place in the United States involving a Canadian plane, it is the American investigatory organization that does the work. If an accident happened in Canada involving an American carrier, the situation would be reversed. This is the practice between the two countries.

Obviously our observer is there and will do his job and he will know as much as the Americans will on the subject of the causes of the accident. But the causes are unknown now. Reference was made to a fire in the washroom, but I am advised by experts not to jump to conclusions before the investigation takes place.

INDUSTRY

MAISLIN TRANSPORT LTD.—REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT APPOINT DIRECTOR

Mr. Doug Lewis (Simcoe North): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the President of the Treasury Board as the watchdog of the public purse. When it was suggested by the media that Maislin Transport had lost $20 million in 1982 the President stated that somebody was lying. He then put that lie to rest when he filed financial statements showing a loss of $19.9 million in 1982. In view of that lack of accountability, when will the Government take action to appoint its own director to the board of Maislin Transport?

Hon. Herb Gray (President of the Treasury Board): Madam Speaker, this matter is one which is under the carriage of the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce. I will have to check with him and inform myself about it and get back to my hon. friend.

Oral Questions

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT TAKE ACTION

Mr. Doug Lewis (Simcoe North): Madam Speaker, despite the continuing losses Maislin is currently waging a price war on the rest of the Canadian trucking industry. Their ads brag that they are number one in pricing, still number one in North America, and number one in the hearts of the Liberal Party—no, I am sorry, that is not in the ad. But since the Canadian taxpayer is financing this price war on the rest of the Canadian trucking industry, does the Minister not agree that the Government should take steps immediately to appoint a director to the Maislin board of directors?

Hon. Herb Gray (President of the Treasury Board): Madam Speaker, I will have to bring this aspect of the Hon. Member's inquiry to the attention of the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce, but it is my understanding that his officials are keeping in touch with the company.

NUCLEAR ARMAMENTS

NATO—DEPLOYMENT OF WEAPONS IN EUROPE—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Terry Sargeant (Selkirk-Interlake): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. For the last year and more the Government has argued that as a member of NATO it is incumbent upon us to participate in the development of NATO weaponry, namely, the Cruise missile. Yet this week at the NATO Defence Ministers' meeting in Brussels three European members, Greece, Spain, and Denmark, refused to endorse plans to deploy Cruise and Pershing II missiles in Europe later this year. They are not being viewed as second class members. Will the Government follow the lead of these countries and withdraw its support from this escalation of the arms race?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Secretary of State for External Affairs): Madam Speaker, we have not supported the escallation of the arms race. This past week at Williamsburg the Canadian Government did everything possible to take a stand that would reduce the arms race and bring about results in the negotiations in Geneva.

I assure my hon. friend that one of the principal objectives that we pursued at Williamsburg, I think with some success, was to stress the importance of making progress at Geneva in order to reduce or possibly eliminate the necessity of deployment of missiles in Europe.

Mr. Sargeant: At the same time as the Minister tell us this, the Minister of National Defence is in Europe endorsing the deployment of Cruise and Pershing-Two missiles in Europe later this year.

PROPOSED TESTING OF CRUISE MISSILE

Mr. Terry Sargeant (Selkirk-Interlake): Madam Speaker, on another front on the Cruise issue, yesterday the U.S. Air Force cancelled further tests of the air launched Cruise missile because both tests of the integrated system have resulted in crashes. Last night on The Journal, an American observer said that it was entirely possible that a Cruise missile flying over Alberta could take a sharp turn and crash into a populated area. Have these developments changed the Government's thinking about the proposed testing in Canada?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Secretary of State for External Affairs): Madam Speaker, the developments have not changed the course of events in any way that I can see. Of course, the first point is that the United States still has to make a request to the Government of Canada to test the Cruise missile. When that request comes forward we can examine whether these events to which the Hon. Member refers has any bearing upon our decision. It seems to me that they do not have very much bearing.

RAILWAYS

RAIL PASSENGER SERVICE

Mr. David Kilgour (Edmonton-Strathcona): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. The Minister will know that many Canadians are concerned about whether there will be further reductions in rail passenger service across the country. Will the Minister assure the House that there will be no further cut-backs in rail passenger service anywhere in Canada during the next five years?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, that is the type of promise that I always refuse to make because one must not promise more than one can deliver.

As a general proposition, I have repeatedly said that there was no massive or substantial cuts being planned now. There might be an occasional cut or addition, but nothing like what the Minister of Transport did two years ago.

ORDERS FOR ROLLING STOCK—SERVICE BETWEEN CALGARY AND EDMONTON

Mr. David Kilgour (Edmonton-Strathcona): Madam Speaker, will the Minister tell us whether or not any new rolling stock equipment is being ordered for the existing rail passenger service outside of the Windsor-Quebec City corridor?

Will he also tell us why the VIA train between Calgary and Edmonton is now out of action, as I understand it because CP has decided to take up the rails on the northern part of that route just as we are approaching the University Games when we hope some people will be arriving at Edmonton from Calgary by train?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, there is an order for ten new sets of LRCs in addition to the ten that have already been delivered. This is a substantial increase and progress in the modernization of the equipment. As to where it will be used, the basic problem is maintaining facilities. VIA does not have the money to establish maintenance facilities in all parts of Canada. That will be a limiting factor in diversifying the location of the LRCs.

TRADE

WILLIAMSBURG SUMMIT—GOVERNMENT POSITION ON PROTECTIONISM

Mr. Scott Fennell (Ontario): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. He will recall that I asked him a question last week in regard to his statements on free trade and protectionism. Subsequent to his visit to Williamsburg there seems to be very little news of what transpired and whether he was able to make any inroads in trying to accomplish fair trade while avoiding so-called free trade. What protections have come in to protect this country against protectionist policies in other parts of the world?

• (1125)

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Madam Speaker, I think I told the Hon. Member the last time we had an exchange of questions and answers that at no time have I used the expression free trade. I have not used it at Williamsburg. But if the Hon. Member looks at the Williamsburg declaration he will find there is a particular paragraph in that declaration dealing with protectionism. There the Summit leaders undertook to resist further protectionist measures. That is of benefit to Canada.

The Hon. Member has asked me what actions were taken to help Canada. If other countries decide to avoid protectionism, that is of benefit to Canada. Further they agreed that, as the recovery proceeds, they would attempt to reduce the existing protectionism. I think the key point in that particular paragraph is the undertaking by the Summit leaders to monitor the implementation of their commitments. That is a new element that has not been evident in previous commitments at the Summit.

AUTOMOTIVE TRADE

Mr. Scott Fennell (Ontario): Madam Speaker, did the Secretary of State for External Affairs have an opportunity to discuss with the Americans and/or the Japanese the present status of the auto pact between the U.S. and Canada, and did he have an opportunity to discuss any protectionist policies that the Japanese have with regard to their automobile industry? Did the Secretary of State for External Affairs have an opportunity to discuss with either of those two countries the status that Canada would be left in when GATT runs out and when we get into a period of free trade?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member uses the expression fair play. It is one of those elusive expressions that seldom is defined—

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Like participatory democracy.

Mr. MacEachen: —and that is used to suit whatever is in the user's mind. Sometimes it is a cover for the word protectionism. I hope that is not what is in the Hon. Member's mind.

Specifically, in reply to the Hon. Member's question, we did not discuss the auto pact as a specific subject in any discussions that I attended. It is a very relevant matter, of course, but it was not specifically discussed. The discussions were general with respect to trade and what we would do to avoid protectionism at this particular time.

HOUSING

FUNDING OF SUBSIDIZED PROGRAM IN ONTARIO

Hon. Walter Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Public Works who answers in this House for housing. There was a story in this morning's The Globe and Mail, which reads in part:

> The federal Government is considering pulling out of a joint federal-provincial subsidized housing program in Ontario—

That program, as the hon. gentleman knows, is for the purpose of non-profit housing, senior citizens, housing and private co-operatives, a very important part of the housing mix in Canada. The story is attributed to officials. Is the Government contemplating such a move?

Hon. Roméo LeBlanc (Minister of Public Works): Madam Speaker, there is no active discussion of a move to pull out of the program. Certainly I would not do it without having proper discussions.

There are a couple of realities. I find very often that provinces and municipalities tend to forget that the federal Government pays a very large percentage, if not the totality, of some of the social housing programs. I have had to remind a certain number of people over the past months that surely taxpayers were entitled to know where the money came from when projects were being either announced or opened.

On the other question as to whether or not I find that Provinces are doing enough in social housing, I have to say, Madam Speaker, that, in the light of the numbers waiting in the line for social housing, I hope other people will do more. That includes the Provinces, the municipalities, and whomever else wants to join in. We can take all the help we can get.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Madam Speaker, I never quarrel with the thought that the federal Government should get credit for its contribution in the social housing field, but I think it is quite important that it maintain itself in the programs of housing, and I am very pleased to hear that the Minister has indicated that there is no intention of withdrawing.

REQUEST THAT FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL CONFERENCE BE CONVENED

Hon. Walter Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is also for the Minister of Public Works. Does he recall that I asked him, prior to the last budget, whether or not it was his intention to convene a federal-provincial conference on housing? There are things that should be worked out between the two levels of Government in terms of credit, in terms of contribution, in terms of the mode of housing or the type of housing that would be provided and that which may be needed. The Minister said that he would wait until after the budget. It is now after the budget. Is that within the contemplation of the Minister? If it is, when would he think such a conference might be held?

• (1130)

Hon. Roméo LeBlanc (Minister of Public Works): Madam Speaker, if I felt that solutions to some of the problems which are now on the table could be seriously advanced by a conference, obviously I would not hesitate. However, as I look at the issues in relation to housing between the Provinces and the federal Government, they are mainly bilateral issues, either on the way this or that government operates its housing program.

I have also looked at the record of past conferences, and I did not find them particularly encouraging. However, I keep an open mind. I expect to meet a number of my counterparts in Moncton next week. Perhaps out of those conversations with the Federation of Municipalities will come a proposal, but I am not pushing for it at the moment.

FISHERIES

REQUEST FOR INFORMATION ON AGREEMENT WITH MADELIPÊCHE FISHERMEN

Mr. Maurice Dupras (Labelle): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Hon. Minister of Fisheries and Oceans and concerns the very serious situation in which Madelipêche fishermen find themselves as a result of action taken by the Government of the Province of Quebec. I am aware of the many representations the Minister has made, in an attempt to prevent these fishermen and many subcontractors and suppliers from going bankrupt, and of the lack of cooperation shown by the provincial Government and the many obstacles that Government has laid in the way of a settlement. I wonder whether the Minister could inform the House about an agreement which has been concluded in the interests of Madelipêche fishermen, in spite of everything and despite the actions of the provincial Government?

Hon. Pierre De Bané (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Madam Speaker, I wish to thank the Hon. Member for his question. The agreement is basically one that the Canadian Government had suggested a month ago. First, the fishermen and Madelipêche may resume their activities, and we would have preferred this to happen at the same time the rest of Pêcheurs-Unis members will be resuming operations; second, the trusteeship is no longer exclusively under provincial authority—a suggestion that was made by the Member for Bonaventure-Îles-de-la-Madeleine—and a third administrator has been appointed, the only one who lives on the Islands, namely, Mr. Laurie Delaney; third, the Government of Quebec has promised not to take Pêcheurs-Unis to court as it was threatening to do, which was in the trusteeship legislation, and because it would not make sense to reopen a plant that might lead to others being closed down. Most important of all, the manoeuvre to get the authority for issuing permits from the Government of Canada did not succeed. We have found a temporary solution, but the Government of Canada is reserving the right to review its position after the current fishing season.

PRICE OF CRUDE OIL SOLD TO JAPAN

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Leader of the Opposition): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. Could the Minister confirm that Canadian light crude oil is being sold to Japan at firesale prices by Dome Petroleum? I believe it is at $2 per barrel below current world prices. If that is indeed happening, could he say whether the sales are being made with the approval of the National Energy Board and/or the approval of the Canadian Government, and how extensive are these sales?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, these sales have been approved by the National Energy Board. They have controlled the price. Of course the type of crude offered for sale is not of the type requested or favoured by Canadian refineries because of its sulphur content and so on. The price has been very competitive in the world market today. There is a world price set, the normal price, but there is always a variation in the price according to the quality of the crude.

INQUIRY RESPECTING EFFECT ON FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL AGREEMENT

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Leader of the Opposition): Madam Speaker, could the Minister explain the effect of such under the counter sales, as it were, on the oil pricing agreement between Alberta and the federal Government? Does this kind of transaction not have the result of making Canadian light crude available to Japanese refineries at a price a good deal lower than that at which it is available to refineries in Ontario and Quebec?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, with his usual style the Hon. Member said, "under the counter". It was approved by the NEB and it was made public by the NEB. It was made at the request of the Alberta Government, which was complaining for months and months that there were big shut-in problems in Alberta. His own Party's energy critic made representations to me in committee and in the House that we should sell more oil from Alberta to the markets of the world. I am very surprised that there is not better co-ordination in the Opposition than that on an oil policy, after listening to the leadership candidates. Even after appearing in front of the court in Alberta, they are still wavering about their oil policies in the Tory Party.

PRICES CHARGED TO DOMESTIC AND FOREIGN REFINERIES

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Leader of the Opposition): Madam Speaker, my final supplementary question is directed to the same Minister. I appeal to him to answer my last question. The answer he gave had nothing to do with the question. My question was: will these sales result in lower prices to Japanese refineries than to refineries in Ontario and Quebec?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, I said earlier that the refineries in Quebec and Ontario did not want this type of crude. They prefer better quality than this. The NEB looked into the problem. In response to the producers and the Alberta Government, the NEB decided to permit the export of crude. If some refineries in Quebec and Ontario want that type of crude, they will not be surplus to Canadian needs. If the Tory Party wants us to make sure that there are many shut-ins in the oil industry in Alberta, it will be very easy for us to arrange.

QUALITY OF CRUDE OIL EXPORTED TO JAPAN

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Madam Speaker, continuing on the subject of the export of light crude, I would like to direct a question to the Minister concerning Japanese evaluation of that crude. Confidential correspondence indicates that Japanese buyers of Dome crude said that it is good or better than Saudi Arabian or Oman light crude.

We are exporting light crude oil in tanker lots. We have increased them, and we are increasing our exports of light crude into the United States. We are increasing the export of distillates as well into the United States and other markets. It appears that we are prepared to sell ourselves out of some of the best low priced energy resource which we have, and to give Canadians in the future an opportunity to depend upon very high priced crude.

Could the Minister explain the contradiction in his remarks to the Leader of the Opposition as opposed to the Japanese correspondence? Will he tell us why he is prepared literally to cut the throats of Canadians in terms of their future dependence on very high priced offshore and frontier oil?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, in terms of the quality of that crude, my information is that the NEB looked into it and indicated that it was the type of crude in which Canadian refineries were not interested. They probably do not have the same type of equipment as the Japanese to use it. It might be good for the Japanese but it is not the type of crude Canadian refineries want. If the Hon. Member does not know about it, some oil is not recouperable. This is why it is desirable to maintain a high level of production in the oil fields. Otherwise we lose some of the resource. At the same time the money received from that is some cash flow which can be used in Canada to develop more oil.

Mr. Nielsen: Cash flow to Dome.

Mr. Chrétien: People are asking us to maintain a very good, lively oil and gas industry in Canada. This is exactly what I am trying to do at this time. If Hon. Members do not want us to sell oil or gas outside Canada, we might shut down the industry and there will be more unemployed in Canada.

Mr. Skelly: The Minister of Energy, in that bag full of hot air and words, is trying to avoid the question of the total failure of the national energy policy. We are selling out a scarce and valuable resource because the Government has placed itself in such a desperate position.

PROJECT TO CONSTRUCT OIL UPGRADER IN WESTERN CANADA—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Madam Speaker, I ask the Minister, if he is interested in helping out the oil industry, when he will go ahead with an upgrader in western Canada. An upgrader would provide the kind of economic stimulation, energy security, and job creation that the country needs. When will he develop an appropriate energy policy instead of the desperation sell-out bids that he is promoting now?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member talks as if he were full of hot air, but if he knew the facts he would recognize that this year is the first year in a long time that we in Canada have produced more oil than we are consuming. It is false for a person to say that the energy policies of the Government are not working. They are evidently working because we are producing more oil than we can consume, for the first time in many years.

In terms of the development of upgraders, we are at this time in negotiation with officials of the Government of Saskatchewan about the possibility of having an upgrader built in Saskatchewan, but we have not resolved the problem with those who want to invest in it. If there is to be development of upgraders and so on, the industry must have enough cash to put into the project. If the industry is closed down, there will not be enough cash to develop upgraders.

FISHERIES

NEW BRUNSWICK COMMERCIAL SALMON FISHERY—APPLICATION OF GLOBAL QUOTA

Mr. Maurice A. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans and concerns the commercial salmon fishery of New Brunswick which will open in about ten days and which will be of six weeks' duration, with an imposed quota. As the Minister knows, this year's quota is a global one rather than one which is directed to individual fishermen. It is conceivable that two or three of the better equipped and bigger fishermen will be able to fill the entire quota in a very short period of time. Would the Minister give consideration to having a quota directed to each fisherman rather than a global quota for the entire fishery?

Hon. Pierre De Bané (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Madam Speaker, my hon. friend is tackling one of the thorniest issues in the management of salmon fisheries in the Atlantic. I can assure the Hon. Member that his suggestion for a way to ensure a stable income for fishermen while not depleting the stock will be studied very carefully. As he knows, the report I have received from the biologists indicates that the salmon stock is extremely low at this moment and that all participants in the fishery industry in the Atlantic must share in the reduction of their quota. I will certainly look at the Hon. Member's suggestion.

HOUSING

PROPOSED MORTGAGE RATE INSURANCE PROGRAM—GOVERNMENT POLICY

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Public Works who is the Minister responsible for housing. According to estimates forecast by the Conference Board of Canada, Government borrowing this year will be equal to about 85 per cent of personal savings in Canada. As private sector loan demands increase, upward pressure will be placed on interest rates, particularly mortgage interest rates. That leads me to ask what has become of what was once a pet project of the Minister, the Mortgage Rate Insurance Program. Before the budget, the Minister told us that he could see the Program being implemented even without a budget provision. What has become of that? Is it the policy of the Government, now that interest rates are down, that we should not even think about a program designed to ensure against another increase in mortgage rates?

Hon. Roméo LeBlanc (Minister of Public Works): Madam Speaker, without accepting the premise that the Hon. Member's question is based upon, I would say to him that we are working on the plan. We had hoped to have it ready. However, we ran into some difficulties which are now being ironed out by testing the plan from an actuarial point of view. If those technical difficulties can be sorted out, we may be able to go ahead with the plan. I think that now is certainly the time to encourage people to feel secure about mortgages if they do become involved in them, and that is why, as soon as we are ready to proceed, and if I get the approval of my colleagues, we will certainly proceed.

PLIGHT OF HOME OWNERS WITH HIGH INTEREST RATE MORTGAGES

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Madam Speaker, that leads me to my next question which concerns the plight of those unfortunate Canadians who were forced to renew their mortgages at a time when mortgage interest rates were about twice what they are now. Will there be any possible relief for these people? Has the Minister discussed this situation with his colleague, the Minister of Finance? Can he offer us any hope, through putting pressure on the banks and the mortgage companies, that these people will be given an opportunity to renew their mortgages without penalty so that they can take advantage of present mortgage interest rates?

Hon. Roméo LeBlanc (Minister of Public Works): Madam Speaker, I certainly do recognize the problem and I have discussed it with my colleague, the Minister of Finance. In fact the Minister has indicated in the House that such cases of a clearly unfair nature should be brought to his attention. I can think of no better way to bring an issue to the attention of banks and mortgage companies than to bring it to the attention of the Minister of Finance. I encourage him in his efforts.

ENERGY

CRUDE OIL PRICING POLICIES

Mr. Harvie Andre (Calgary Centre): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. The Minister seems to be worried about the energy policies of the Progressive Conservative Party. I think he should concern himself with getting his act together on behalf of the Government of Canada. In particular, in the last few days there have been conflicting press reports referring to the Government's plans in terms of crude oil pricing. The first report indicated that the Cabinet had decided there would be no change in the energy pricing agreement, even though it is hopelessly obsolete. This report was followed by a denial and an indication that the Government is still discussing it.

The Minister says that he is worried about industry cash flows and industry investment. He knows that the greatest curtailment to investment is uncertainty over the Minister's continuous foot-dragging and inability to have himself and the rest of his Cabinet colleagues address the problem of Canada's crude oil pricing policies. When can we expect an answer from the Government?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, I have said all along that the deadline for fixing the price is July 1. The decision is not a decision to be made by the federal Government alone. At this time I am negotiating with officials of the Government of Alberta. On Tuesday I met with the Energy Minister for Alberta, and I requested another meeting next week. There will be a meeting of sorts as he is coming to town for another purpose, but he wanted to postpone the meeting to the week after that. I think that the Hon. Member cannot reproach me simply because I am negotiating with the Government of Alberta. The Government of Alberta has something to say in that regard as well, and it is a very complex problem.

It is very interesting to see that, despite the leadership candidates' appearance before a court in Alberta, the Tories are not of one mind about what should be done about the price of oil. After hearing the Leader of the Opposition asking me not to sell oil abroad, and after hearing the Hon. Member continually asking me to sell more than we are selling today, I am not impressed at all with the position that is being taken at this time. We are self-sufficient in oil, and the industry is now in a better mood than it has been in for years.

Mr. Andre: Madam Speaker, the Minister's last statement is almost beyond belief. Only 26 per cent of the drilling rigs in the country are in operation at this time. Unemployment in the oil industry is in the tens of thousands. If he calls that a good mood, he is dreaming. If the Minister wants this Party to take over the energy policy in the country, we are prepared to do so and we will have Canadians satisfied, both consumers and producers.

As the Minister knows, the natural gas industry is in a state of crisis. There are literally scores of Bills before the American Congress to penalize Canadian gas producers. The situation is critical. He knows that the negotiations with Alberta are complete—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I do not see when the Hon. Member will ask his question. I think he should do so right now.

GAS EXPORT PRICES

Mr. Harvie Andre (Calgary Centre): Madam Speaker, when will the Minister make the annoucement about natural gas export prices which would have been made several months ago if it were made by a competent Government?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, I am amazed and amused when I hear the Hon. Member speaking about our energy policy. The Tories were in power for seven months. At that time two Tory Governments were negotiating and could not come to an agreement in seven months. Because they had a lousy energy policy, they eventually lost the confidence of the House and the confidence of the people of Canada. I believe that the Tories' record on this policy is so shameful that I would rather not talk about it.

• (1150)

In terms of making a decision about the question, I said that I am in negotiation with Alberta and I hope we will have a comprehensive agreement on all these items with the Tory Government of Alberta.

CANADIAN SECURITY INTELLIGENCE SERVICE

CONFIDENTIALITY OF CENSUS RECORDS

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Madam Speaker, in the absence of the Solicitor General, whose whereabouts are secret even from his own office, and in the absence of the Prime Minister, I will direct my question to the Deputy Prime Minister.

Yesterday the Solicitor General discussed the supposed need for his proposed new Security Service to invade the confidentiality of census records. Is it the Government's intention to invade the confidentiality of records already collected which were given with the understanding that they would be kept confidential? All Canadians, I would remind him, are required to answer these questions. Or is it the Government's intention only to invade the confidentiality of future records?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Secretary of State for External Affairs): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member knows that the Bill has been given first reading. The intentions of the Government are declared in the Bill as can be found by an examination of the Bill. It will go to a committee and all the concerns and requests for information can be dealt with at that time.

GOVERNMENT POLICY

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Madam Speaker, the Bill refers to records. Let us assume that that means confidential records in the census will be violated according to the Government's intention, if the legislation is passed.

Would the Minister specify what other records the Government has the intention of invading—records of clients in lawyers' offices for example; files of discussions between a lawyer and client? What about medical records in doctors' offices? What about mail to Members of Parliament from constituents? And what about the confessional box?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Secretary of State for External Affairs): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member is taking a rather extreme flight of fancy in reciting all these possible dire actions by the Government. I am sure the Hon. Member knows that access to records containing personal information, whether held by the federal Government, the provincial Governments or the private sector, can only be had either by consent or by judicial warrant. It is not about to happen in the way the Hon. Member describes, as if the Government had ready access or the Security Service had ready access. That is not the case. It cannot happen unless there is a judicial warrant issued under very specific circumstances.

I make that reply in order to clarify the misinformation that has been put forward by the Hon. Member. As I said earlier, the place to debate this is not on the Orders of the Day but when the Bill comes up on second reading and when it goes to the Committee.

NEWFOUNDLAND'S REMOVAL OF COLLECTIVE BARGAINING RIGHTS

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Employment and Immigration. On Tuesday, May 31, the Newfoundland Government amended its Public Service Collective Bargaining Act specifically to remove collective bargaining rights from anyone working on an Employment Opportunity Program funded by the federal or provincial Governments.

Did the Minister have prior knowledge of the intention of the Newfoundland Government to take this action and, if so, does the Minister approve of the removal of collective bargaining rights from those persons who are employed under federally funded programs? If so, does the Minister not believe that this action by the Newfoundland Government is a denial of basic rights that Canadians have fought for, and is an inappropriate action? Does he not think that he and his Government should make representations to ensure that such action cannot be taken with regard to projects funded by the federal Government?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, in all cases in federal job programs we have been particularly careful to ensure that there would be no intrusion into the normal workings of labour and management or collective bargaining arrangements. We have gone out of our way to meet with a number of unions, particularly Public Service unions, to ensure that job-creation programs would not overlap. As the Hon. Member knows, we do not have control over decisions made by a provincial Government.

I will certainly undertake to look into the problem and raise it with the Labour Minister in Newfoundland to see if it intrudes in any way upon the agreements that we have with them for joint funding of job-creation programs. I will report back to the Hon. Member.

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION

DECISION NOT TO TELEVISE FILM ON UNEMPLOYED

Mr. John Bosley (Don Valley West): Madam Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Communications. He will know that a conference was held in January under the auspices of the Department of Employment and Immigration and was filmed by the CBC. The consequence of all that was that an injunction was taken against the showing of the film. Would the Minister confirm that the CBC had decided not to air the film ultimately made, with effectively $200,000 of public money? Will he tell the House what action he has taken with regard to those who authorized that expenditure for a film that cannot be aired?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, perhaps I can answer the Hon. Member's question in part. I do not think it is worth while engaging in speculation on management choices in the CBC. As far as the film is concerned, an arrangement was entered into with Mr. Allan King and the Mengen Institution. Mr. King is a well known documentary film maker who has conducted some of the most important and prize-winning documentaries made in this country over the past several years. The contract arrangement we have with him was not in any way to have any editorial control. As we have discussed in the House many times, there is a very serious and tragic plight that people who are unemployed go through. It was important for other Canadians who had the advantage of having a job to understand that.

The point of the film was to try to undertake both the research and the analysis so that other Canadians would understand that kind of condition. I hope that the kind of filming that was done—and I have not seen it so I do not know what it contains—but I know the objective was a worthwhile one—I hope it has some public distribution.

PUBLIC FUNDING OF FILM

Mr. John Bosley (Don Valley West): Madam Speaker, given that answer, my next question is addressed to the Minister of Communications. If the film was that valuable why will the public not be able to see it? They can only have it one way, Madam Speaker. Either it is a worth-while film commissioned by the Government of Canada with the people's money and should be seen, or some officials of the Government of Canada made a serious error of judgement in the way the film was commissioned and made. Which of those propositions does the Government admit to be true?

Hon. Francis Fox (Minister of Communications): Madam Speaker, as the Hon. Member knows, when we are talking about programming, the decision about what type of program is going to be aired over the CBC is made by CBC management and no one else. It is up to CBC management to decide whether it wants to air the film and whether that film is appropriate for airing at a specific time. The bottom line is that the CBC and not the Government is responsible for programming.

NUCLEAR ARMAMENTS

WILLIAMSBURG SUMMIT—BRITISH AND FRENCH NUCLEAR FORCES—CANADIAN POSITION

Hon. Allan B. McKinnon (Victoria): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Deputy Prime Minister, in the absence of the Prime Minister. One of the Prime Minister's interventions early at the Summit conference was that France and Britain should be prepared to negotiate concerning their independently controlled strategic nuclear forces as if those forces were part of NATO's intermediate range nuclear force. This representation had been made quite frequently in international circles before, but usually by Russia.

Could the Deputy Prime Minister indicate what purpose the Prime Minister had and what results were obtained by the Prime Minister, acting as Russia's advocate in this particular area where he seemed to be suggesting that Britain and France should throw away the only bargaining chip they have in this matter?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Secretary of State for External Affairs): Madam Speaker, I am pleased to answer that question. I can certainly remove from the Hon. Member's mind, I trust, the mistaken impressions he has about the discussions at Williamsburg.

At no point did Canada press that the British and French nuclear forces should be put into the INF negotiations. That was not pressed by Canada, nor did we ask that these particular nuclear national strategic forces go into the INF negotiations. What we did suggest with respect to that particular aspect, or at least what we questioned, was whether the type of document we were attempting to put together ought to include specific references to various negotiating positions that had been adopted. This is one particular negotiating position that has been adopted and which Canada accepts. The question is whether this document was an appropriate place for the inclusion.

I think the Hon. Member is also mistaken when he states that this is a view on substance which is taken only by Russia. I could cite some rather important persons in the West who say, at a certain point, the British and French strategic deterrents ought to be included in some way in the negotiation, not in the INF, but, rather, in some future negotiation.

Mr. McKinnon: Of course that is the attitude of the Prime Minister that they should be included, and it is well known that he said so himself.

RESULTS OF SUMMIT CONFERENCE

Hon. Allan B. McKinnon (Victoria): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister in his own role. The Minister told reporters after the conference that he was very pleased with the results of the arms control talks among the seven Summit leaders. The leaders rejected the Prime Minister's suggestion about the weapons of Britain and France. Instead, in their communique, which particularly singled that out, the seven leaders stated:

> Attempts to divide the West by proposing inclusion of the deterrent forces of the third countries, such as those of France and the United Kingdom, will fail—

Could the Deputy Prime Minister tell us why he was so pleased that the Prime Minister failed in his effort to have them included?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Deputy Prime Minister and Secretary of State for External Affairs): Madam Speaker, I think the Hon. Member ought to be told that the Canadian delegation did have quite an influence on the drafting of the communique and the declaration. He might be pleased to know that the declaration on arms and security originated with a Canadian idea.

POINT OF ORDER

MR. BLENKARN—VOTES IN MAIN ESTIMATES ALLEGED IRREGULAR—DELAY IN RULING BY MADAM SPEAKER

Madam Speaker: The Chair is prepared to rule on the point of order which was raised on April 27 by the Hon. Member for Mississauga South (Mr. Blenkarn) concerning the procedur and the acceptability of two votes on one statutory item. The Hon. Member is not in the House today. The ruling could be delayed. I believe. Would Hon. Members prefer that I delay it?

Mr. Lewis: Please.

Madam Speaker: Then I will.

PETITIONS

MR. BURGHARDT—TESTING OF CRUISE MISSILE IN CANADA

Mr. Jack Burghardt (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Communications): Madam Speaker, it is my duty and pleasure to present this petition on behalf of 546 students of Sir Frederick Banting Secondary School in London, Ontario.

These students are opposed to the testing of the Cruise Missile in Canada. They encourage the Canadian Government to exert whatever means and influence is necessary to effect multilateral nuclear disarmament.

MR. KRISTIANSEN—PORNOGRAPHY AND DENIGRATION OF WOMEN IN TV BROADCASTS AND OTHER MEDIA

Mr. Lyle S. Kristiansen (Kootenay West): Madam Speaker, it is my duty and honour to present a petition of the undersigned constituents of Kaslo in the riding of Kootenay West, my own constituency in the Province of British Columbia, and other concerned citizens.

The petition humbly sheweth that the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission television broadcasting regulations do not extend to women the same protection against abusive comments or abusive pictorial representation as now exists for racial and religious groups; further, that the concerns of citizens have been recently heightened, not only by the so-called adult programming on pay television, but also by the proliferation of pornography in various media.

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to demonstrate its opposition to the denigration of women by enacting an Act to Amend the Broadcasting Act as introduced by Lynn McDonald, Member for Broadview-Greenwood, on March 8, 1983. As in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray.

MR. SKELLY—MARINE INDUSTRIAL STRATEGY

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Madam Speaker, I also have the honour of presenting two petitions, one from the Province of British Columbia, and a second from the Province of Quebec, in which the petitioners request that the House and the Government consider the implementation of an effective marine industrial strategy for Canada in order to ensure its economic expansion and employment. The petitioners would request that the Government begin immediate action.

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. David Smith (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: Nos. 4,820 and 4,870.

[Text]

ESKIMO DOG RESEARCH FOUNDATION

Question No. 4,820—Mr. Nickerson:

1. Was the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development advised by way of a letter dated April 12, 1983 that, because of financial constraints, the Eskimo Dog Foundation was unable to continue its work of preservation and breeding the Canadian Eskimo dog which has attracted so much international interest over the past few years and that the Foundation plans to donate its stock of some 60 registered dogs to the government on May 31, 1983?

2. What plans does the Government have for the dogs it will receive and will it continue the work initiated by the Foundation of preservation of this unique and endangered breed?

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): 1. Yes.

2. The Eskimo Dog Research Foundation was privately sponsored and organized. Its objectives were to re-establish the Eskimo dog as a breed and to have it accepted for registration by the Canadian Kennel Club. A secondary objective was to return breeding stock to Inuit outpost camps. The Foundation has been successful in achieving these objectives. Although the Department funded a film produced by Inuk Films of Yellowknife to publicize the work of the Foundation, and to assist it in raising funds, it has not been successful in this nor in selling dogs in the South and there is no commercial market for them in the North.

While the Department has neither the funds nor the mandate to underwrite the Foundation's operations, the Government of the Northwest Territories has indicated that they are prepared to assist the Foundation to distribute the dogs to individual Inuit hunters who can be expected to make good use of them.

CONFERENCE ON CLOSED-CAPTIONING

Question No. 4,870—Mr. Beatty:

1. Is a conference on closed-captioning planned for Ottawa in 1983 and, if so, what will be the participation, if any, of the Government?

2. What is the status of the Telidon closed-captioning decoder?

3. On what date will the decoder be available for sale and what will be its cost?

4. Is the decoder available as the Government had anticipated and, if not, for what reason?

Hon. Francis Fox (Minister of Communications): In so far as the Department of Communications is concerned, the reply to the above question is as follows:

1. On May 10, 1983 Communications Minister Francis Fox announced that the federal Government will contribute $30,000 in funding to the Canadian Captioning Development Agency (CCDA) to help sponsor the first World Conference on Closed Captioning.

The CCDA will host the conference as a special World Communications Year project in Ottawa this November. Existing captioning agencies in the United States, Australia, Britain, France and Sweden and other potential captioners will be invited to attend the conference. A special effort will be made to involve organizations in developing countries that are interested in captioning.

2. The Telidon closed-captioning decoder (with dual mode (videotex/teletext) capability) is currently operational and available.

3. Due to the need to incorporate the final North American Presentation Level Protocol Syntax (NAPLPS) standard changes, the cost of the decoder is $3,950. It is expected that when the item becomes a consumer item there will be significant price reductions. Recent sales have largely been to people and institutions at the forefront of investigation and experimentation of its use.

Later this year significant price reductions are expected with a further significant drop in prices in the summer of 1984.

4. As noted above, the decoder is available as had been expected.

[English]

Mr. Smith: I would ask, Madam Speaker, that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

[Translation]

Madam Speaker: The questions enumerated by the Parliamentary Secretary have been answered. Shall the remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 62—TRANSPORT POLICY

Mr. Pat Nowlan (Annapolis Valley-Hants) moved:

That this House rejects the Government's policies with respect to transportation, which have caused concern, chaos and confusion, as demonstrated by its loss of control over Crown corporations such as Air Canada, CN and Canadair and that the political preference, secrecy and negligence that it has shown in its dealings with such private concerns as Maislin, and condemns the Government for its failure to demonstrate fairness, accountability and leadership in its activity.

He said: Madam Speaker, I am glad to see the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) has returned to the House. As he well knows, this is an Opposition day on which we are expressing very justified concern, as far as the Opposition is concerned, about transportation policies and the fact that no matter how well intentioned this very pleasant and plausible Minister is, he is trying to adopt certain policies, in too much haste, perhaps biting off more than the legislative system can digest, let alone the public accept. Through this indigestion in the legislative process and the public's concern, there is confusion, chaos and concern of the public with regard to the transportation industry across this country.

I am leading off for my Party in this debate. My colleagues will be detailing aspects of this concern, primarily involving the loss of control which the Government should be exercising over its agencies, particularly its Crown corporations. We will be discussing its loss of control over Crown transport companies. It insults every Canadian when it appoints its political friends, such as Bryce Mackasey and Jack Horner, to top jobs. Then it heaps some more insults upon Canadians when it refuses to say what these men are paid, and fudges around in effect in regard to how much they work during the week for which they are paid.

Then there is the trucking industry. The Government's discriminatory support for a mismanaged company has dislocated the whole industry in central Canada. One of my colleagues will be elaborating on this issue which is of concern in transport across the country. It looks as though the people of Canada will lose $34 million when the company goes down the drain.

There are other signs of the Government's rot and lack of direction concerning transport matters. Canadian National is under investigation for illegal trade practices, and Parliament's supervision of the company must be suspended while Cabinet dithers about preventing CN from taking over a debt-ridden shipping group. Another colleague will be discussing that in more detail.

Then, of course, there is Canadair. It is, speaking most conservatively, in deep financial trouble. The trouble at the root is lack of control of the Government over one of its primary Crown corporations.

Then, of course, we have Air Canada, Mr. Speaker, and particularly the Chairman of the Board, a part-time chairman, whatever that means, and no one in this Government seems to know what it means. He is apparently under some type of RCMP investigation. Also, a consultant at Air Canada makes a secret multimillion dollar kickback deal, which I will refer to later.

These are just some of the matters, Mr. Speaker, which cause the confusion, the chaos and the legitimate concern of Canadians from coast to coast. We can consider too the very human element in the Government itself, and the Minister who is primarily responsible for the use of Government planes, and the rules as to the use or abuse of those Government planes. It appears that when it is brought to public notice through the press or in this House that Government planes are used to fly Ministers across the country—which we understand, but which is in effect mixing business with pleasure—there is a convenient bending of the rules. I would like to ask the Minister how he can justify bending the rules for Ministers when they file their expense accounts, and not distinguishing between expense accounts for personal pleasure involving family and expense accounts involving Government business. Canadians have just completed the most complicated income tax return ever designed to confound man. That Canadian, be it a working person or a business person must distinguish between the business and the pleasure aspects in asking for some redress of expenses. Surely, Mr. Speaker, that is part of the dry rot and alienation of the public from the politician, when there is a special rule which governs us and Ministers and it is not the same rule which governs taxpayers. That is something that, while it may seem small in terms of the dollars involved, in terms of principle is not at all small. It has to be addressed and redressed. There have to be firm guidelines set down as to the use of Government planes for business or pleasure.

I say this kindly to the Minister, because I believe he is trying to do a good job, that, frankly, I feel he is trying to do too much in too short an interval. That I believe is best shown when we look at the changes to the Crow after 80 years or 90 years in a Bill which was supposed to be, perhaps not rubber-stamped but forced through this House by way of closure after a couple of days' debate.

Then in the East we have the Maritime Freight Rates Act under which the Government unilaterally, without consultation with the four Atlantic Governments, in effect contracted for a consultant group to review the impact and the continued efficacy of the Maritime freight rates, how they help or hurt the Atlantic industry. That again was done without consultation. There has been some clarification of that and, hopefully, when the report comes in from the consultant group there will be some chance for public input. However, Mr. Speaker, that is the point I make about concern, chaos and confusion. When you have those two fundamental Bills, the large one of the Crow in the West which affects all of Canada, and the Maritime Freight Rates Act in the East, and unilaterally the Government tries to force change through the House without proper debate or proper public input, obviously, you are going to get a negative reaction. I could speak at length on the effect of the changes to the Crow in the West and the Maritime freight rates in the East. One could almost say those Bills are like the wings of the economy. Those Acts are there for a purpose, to help build the economy in those respective areas. Those two Acts were the wings which gave the lift-off to the economy, to help the economy grow, to help the regions grow. Then, for whatever reason, we are told it is time to change. We all know there is change necessary in both areas. I agree with the Minister that change is needed. However, change should not be forced through the House with the club of closure.

There are many other areas I could mention, Mr. Speaker, for instance, what is in the paper today about Quebecair and where it sits. Evidently, Quebec has turned down the latest proposal from negotiations between Air Canada—the Government of Canada—and Quebecair. There may be legitimate reasons why it has been turned down. However, this is another area which affects a very vital part of the country. It is a very vital airline of the country and it is literally up in the air because the negotiations have not produced any results.

I do not have to mention Nordair and the flip-flops in Government policy on Nordair when it was taken over and when it was to be sold off. There is a total absence of any public statement from this Minister on the total area of domestic air policy, which again creates chaos and confusion, and it certainly creates concern among all those affected. In fact, Mr. Speaker, one could say in a most poetic way that this litany of concern, chaos and confusion becomes a lament for a responsible leadership and for accountability of the Crown and its agencies to this Parliament, which is the representative of the people.

Others of my colleagues, Mr. Speaker, will be developing some of these themes, involving Canadair, Maislin, CN and CP. I would like to turn to the specifics of Air Canada about which, as many Hon. Members know, I have asked questions. It is called an Air Canada matter, but perhaps it should be called "the Chairman of Air Canada affair". We have a situation of indefinite allegations against unknown people for an unknown length of time. It may be called "the affair about people who are trying to set up the Chairman of Air Canada". However, all of this has little relevance to what I want to say about the Air Canada matter.

In my opinion, there are two fundamental issues at stake here which we have bandied about in the House through pleasant words with the Minister and even more pleasant diversions from the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau). One is the matter of the fair administration of justice and the due process of law. There is not an Hon. Member who does not appreciate the significance of that. The second matter, which definitely comes within the prerogative of this House and of the Transport Committee, in my opinion, Mr. Speaker, is the conduct of the office of the chairman of a Crown Corporation, and specifically with regard to Air Canada, the problem of a part-time chairman wheeling and dealing for his own personal gain. This matter first arose in the House, Mr. Speaker, on December 9, 1982. On December 20, after reports in the press, the Minister of Transport, in replying to a question in the House, said that he telephoned the Chairman of the Board of Air Canada to tell him about an RCMP inquiry. The Minister said that he had RCMP approval to make the call. He further said that he had someone telephone the President of Air Canada. Not surprisingly, a further question was asked immediately, and it was, "What had the Minister told the Chairman of Air Canada?" At this point, the Minister of Justice (Mr. MacGuigan) intervened and answered that he had talked with the Minister of Transport and that he, the Minister of Justice, had taken appropriate steps, and that he, the Minister of Justice, did not think it appropriate to give further details.

For many reasons, Mr. Speaker, this answer is not satisfactory. The history of Parliament has long been a struggle to ensure that the executive is responsible to Parliament and, therefore, ultimately, accountable to the people. The simple belief of a Minister that his course of action is appropriate has rarely been accepted by the courts as adequate justification. The courts have inquired usually to see whether there were in fact reasonable grounds for the conclusion to which the Minister of the Crown arrived. In the court of Parliament, of course, the elected Government carries the day. If it does not wish to require the Minister to give reasons for his belief and to justify it publicly, then of course the Minister does not have to do so. However, this does not mean that the fundamental principle of responsibility on this issue has been discharged. The people of Canada, to whom we are all responsible, sooner or later will merely say that on this issue the Government does not want the reasons for its decision made public. Perhaps we could say, charitably, that the Government will reveal some day why the Minister of Justice thought it appropriate not to explain what the Minister of Transport said to the Chairman of Air Canada. Very probably, the Minister of Transport acted perfectly properly. Very probably he told the Chairman of Air Canada nothing which would compromise an RCMP investigation. On the other hand, Mr. Speaker, perhaps without even realizing it, the Minister of Transport said something to the Chairman of Air Canada, or something was said in the phone call to the President of Air Canada, that compromises the investigation.

This leads to a more fundamental point. Should a Minister of the Crown ever knowingly communicate with a person who, there is good reason to believe, may be under criminal investigation? On May 26 the Minister of Transport appeared before the committee and he was much more forthcoming about the telephone call. He said that he had made the call to the Chairman and he asked the RCMP for approval. He also said he was alone when he made the call and that there was no recording and it lasted approximately five, six or seven minutes. He said that he possibly told the Chairman that other people, presumably besides the Chairman, were involved in the police inquiry. I suggest that this is a most serious matter, Madam Speaker even if it was inadvertence on the part of the Minister. I am not suggesting in the least that the Minister acted intentionally wrongly when he phoned the Chairman of Air Canada. But I think this House should seriously consider guidelines which would ensure that the possibility of the criminal justice system being compromised or short-circuited cannot occur with phone calls to people who may be under criminal investigation.

We do not know, of course, whether the Chairman of Air Canada was himself being investigated. We can certainly draw some inferences in view of things that have happened since, but here we have a Minister privy to details about the investigation talking to a man who may be under investigation. Even if the Chairman is not under investigation, might it not be that a friend of his is? We have the Minister admitting that he told the Chairman that other people were being investigated. The possibility that a criminal investigation may be short-circuited or appear to be short-circuited and the suspects warned is very serious, particularly so in a case like this where the Chairman is a political appointee.

The Montreal Gazette has reported that the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) attended a party given in honour of the Chairman's appointment. It would be a political embarrassment for the Government if such a person were to be convicted of a criminal offence, or even charged. I ask, should there not then be clear guidelines about the way in which Ministers and other political appointees can communicate with a person in this situation so that justice will not only be done but will appear to be done?

The Minister of Transport has said that the RCMP—and by this he seems to mean one or both of the officers with whom he discussed the case—said that he could telephone Mr. Amyot. But should decisions about the due administration of justice really be left to be decided by RCMP officers in these circumstances? The answer must clearly be no. This House needs to establish clear guidelines on how political figures privy to confidential information about police investigations may contact persons who may be under investigation. I suggest, Madam Speaker, at the very least, an impartial witness should be required to be present and a recording of some type made of the call. But I am not convinced that any oral contact should be made at all. As I said, there may be, by chance or inadvertence, a compromise of due process. This is a serious issue of the possibility of political interference with the fair administration of justice, and I think we definitely have to set some guidelines. I would think that in time this issue should be clarified and defined before either the Standing Committee on Transport or a larger committee of this House.

Turning to the matter of conduct in office, regardless of what the criminal investigation is about, there is the issue of the Government's responsibility to ensure that the Board of Directors of Air Canada can operate properly, I have repeatedly asked the Government to consider giving the Chairman a leave of absence or suspending him pending the outcome of the investigation. I want to emphasize again that I do not make the suggestion because I believe or have any knowledge at all that the Chairman is guilty of any criminal offence. I do not know. I suggest perhaps that no one in this House knows what the Chairman has done or not done that may involve criminal responsibility.

Mr. Pepin: Why are you charging him, then?

Mr. Nowlan: It is a fundamental aspect of our system of justice that a man is presumed innocent until he is proven guilty. However, there is the question of whether the Chairman of Crown corporation with a public board can continue to operate properly and indefinitely when he, rightly or wrongly, is at the centre, apparently, of a criminal investigation. I have had reports that the Board of Directors of Air Canada finds this to be an intolerable situation. In questions in the House, Madam Speaker, I have used the analogy of what happens when a policeman is under investigation. It is routine that the policeman is suspended pending the outcome of the investigation. There is some similarity with this situation because both have elements of public trust and it has to be clear that the public trust is not abused. There is no presumption that the policeman had acted improperly, but when the investigation is completed and the policeman is cleared, then he is reinstated. The suspension is not made or a leave of absence given because there is a presumption of guilt. The policeman is suspended because he occupies a position of public trust and responsibility.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): But their pay continues.

Mr. Nowlan: Their pay continues, as my friend, the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton (Mr. Baker), says. It is imperative that the public perceive that there is no possibility that the public trust is being abused. I suggest, Madam Speaker, that the Chairman of Air Canada is in a position of high trust and responsibility in one of the leading Crown corporations in the public domain.

This Government may say that to remove the Chairman now would be to imply guilt. If that is in fact true, the situation has arisen only because this Government failed to give the Chairman leave of absence when it should have done so. When the Minister had this confidential information about a pending criminal investigation before anyone else even heard about it, that was the time for ministerial responsibility to be exercised so that Air Canada did not become contaminated through the criminal investigation. It was then the time to do so, at the very beginning of the investigation, before it ever got on the floor of the House and into the newspapers of the land. Sadly, Madam Speaker, I suggest that in effect the Minister is now reaping the penalty for his failure to discharge the responsibility that was clearly his. If it was not clearly his duty, it was clearly the duty of the Prime Minister who has the ultimate responsibility for Government policy. In this case I think he is very directly involved in the appointment of his friend, the Chairman of Air Canada.

There is another way, Madam Speaker, of looking at the matter of the Chairman continuing in his position pending the outcome of the investigation. Essentially he is appointed by the Government acting on behalf of all the people of Canada. The people of Canada own this airline, even more so than PetroCan where we have had advertisements saying: "It is ours". Well, Air Canada is ours. It belongs to the people of Canada. The Chairman is ultimately accountable to the whole country. Each Canadian is a shareholder, so the Chairman has a duty to explain his actions. If he does not do so, it is not that we say he is guilty of a crime; we just say he should not continue in the absence of explanations as Chairman of a Crown corporation.

There are many questions I could pose today, if I had the time, not about criminality but about conduct in office. The questions are very vital. I do not think it has ever occurred in the history of Crown corporations that one could even pose these questions, none of which have been denied.

Mr. Pepin: We have an inquiry, for heaven's sake.

Mr. Nowlan: What has the Chairman of Air Canada failed to explain? There is the matter of his alleged request to TAP, the Portugese airline, for three free tickets to Portugal for his friends. The Montreal Gazette reported on April 27 that an internal TAP memo said that Mr. Amyot said he would be "very instrumental" in getting landing rights for TAP in Toronto. Now, TAP has very carefully denied that Mr. Amyot was actually involved in its efforts to get landing rights in Toronto, but they have never denied they were approached by Mr. Amyot.

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I am sorry to say that the Hon. Member's time has expired and I have to interrupt him.

Mr. Benjamin: Madam Speaker, this corner of the House would be only too happy to agree to the Hon. Member being allowed to continue his remarks.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent that the Hon. Member be allowed to continue with his remarks?

Mr. Flis: They are despicable remarks but we agree to allow the Hon. Member to continue.

Mr. Nowlan: Madam Speaker, I will not trespass on the patience of the House by referring to my hon. friend's diversion. The public will in time find whether these are despicable remarks. Questions have been asked in the House and they are properly in the public domain.

I thank the House for giving me the time to continue. I have a text, so I will not be as long as I usually am when I sometimes ramble without a text. I appreciate the courtesy of the House as I lead off this debate for my Party.

I have referred to this TAP memo before and it has not been denied. I think we ought to have a clear explanation from Mr. Amyot. If he cannot or will not give an explanation, then he should be removed from his position as Chairman. Again, I am not talking about any criminal offence. If we cannot get answers from the Chairman of the Board, he should no longer stay as Chairman pending completion of this matter. In the case of the alleged request to TAP Airlines, it is particularly important to receive answers from Mr. Amyot because, as has been reported in the Gazette, if TAP Airlines obtain landing rights in Toronto, then Air Canada's business between Montreal and Toronto will suffer. Therefore, there is a possibility that the Chairman was in fact acting against the interests of Air Canada. Surely that is a legitimate question in the public domain.

Again, the Chairman of Air Canada has also failed to explain what connection, if any, he has had with Mr. Bertrand Dufour, the man who was trying to arrange a loan of $500 million or $1 billion to Air Canada. The Gazette has reported that Mr. Dufour is an associate of Mr. Amyot and is now in Europe looking for funds to invest in a resort project in Portugal in which the Gazette states Mr. Amyot is involved. Did the Chairman of Air Canada have personal dealings with Mr. Dufour at the time the loan negotiations were taking place? Again, there is the possibility of a conflict of interest, and Mr. Amyot should discount it or be replaced in Air Canada. He has the capacity to make any public statement he wants.

There is also a matter which Mr. Amyot should explain. I should point out that, like all the other matters which I mentioned so far, it is an issue which has been raised in the press and not first by me in the House. Therefore, it is not as though I, alone, have been asking these questions. The matter concerns a meeting which took place in Paris. The Montreal Gazette of May 14, reports that Mr. Amyot attended a meeting in Paris in March of 1982 with a French financier at which "they discussed possible financing for a development project for Air Canada's head office called Place Mont Royal". Again, there is a possibility that the Chairman was acting in conflict with the interest of Air Canada.

Mr. Pepin: Protecting yourself all the time, aren't you?

Mr. Nowlan: Again, the Chairman should be called upon to explain. Let me point out again that the Chairman certainly has the prerogative of not explaining. However, if he does not explain, how can he continue to be the Chairman of the airlines if there could be possible conflicts of interest?

There are other matters which I think the Chairman should explain. For instance, why did he meet with Joseph Zappia, a fugitive from Canadian justice, in Rome?

He should also explain whether he has any interest in the company called Fidusco International Limited, a company which was incorporated in Nassau, the Bahamas, on December 2, 1981, a company which has been linked with a kickback deal, as reported by the Montreal Gazette in a large story on Thursday, May 28, I believe. I will not take the time of the House to read the particulars of the story, because it was not raised by me and there are no questions in the House. However, the story, which has not been denied, sets out the details of a contract and a kickback between one person and A.E. LePage. I should make it absolutely clear again that there is no evidence before the House that Mr. Amyot had an interest in Fidusco International. However, as Mr. Amyot does own a sizeable part of a Quebec incorporated company called Fidusco Limitée, he should perhaps be called upon to explain that it is merely a coincidence that a similarly named company incorporated by a friend had an interest in the Air Canada site selection.

There are many other matters that I can mention. I do not want to trespass on the patience of the House. I have a whole series of questions concerning which I have asked Air Canada itself to reply. They could definitely go accountability, separate and apart from any questions I have asked about Mr. Amyot. Other Hon. Members will be speaking of accountability and the lack of control of Crown corporations. I do not want to trespass too far. However, there are questions which Air Canada has a necessity to answer in terms of the public interest. There must be some further evidence from Air Canada at some time before the Transport Committee stating the proposals that it was considering for Air Canada headquarters. I have a list of the questions which I had sent to the Chairman of the Transport Committee, comprising two pages, which Air Canada should answer. Therefore, I am not only trying to focus attention only on the Chairman of Air Canada, but also, obviously, on Air Canada's responsibility.

I will not trespass any further, but let me say only that, regardless of the pejorative comments of my friend, the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Flis), about my questions, the fact of the matter is that we know we have privilege in the House so that matters in the public domain can be discussed without fear or apprehension of having to run into men-of-straw lawsuits.

Certainly, when there is a political appointment to one of the top Crown corporations of the land, and when there are questions about the cross-over of personal dealings with his part-time activity as Chairman, in effect, involving Air Canada property, tickets, let alone stationery, then I think these are public questions which must be asked, separate and apart from any criminal investigation.

I will conclude as I began, by saying that I have a great deal of respect for the Minister of Transport and for many of his officials. However, I really do believe that, for whatever reasons, he is biting off more than he can chew. We know that he was under tremendous pressure involving the Crow when he did a flip-flop, which he certainly thought would help but which actually aggravated the situation. He is trying to bite off more than he can digest. The legislative process, let alone the people of Canada, cannot accept it all in a short duration of time to really make up for a great deal of inactivity over a long period of time. After all, the present Government has been the Government in power for the majority of time, sad as that may be for the Canadian public.

Therefore, I hope that the debate will focus on other areas where there is chaos, confusion and concern so that the Minister will appreciate that from coast to coast, in many areas, there must be a tenderness, a moving ahead and respect for the concern of people so that there are not closures on Crow and there is not silence on questions about chairmen of Crown corporations. Others will speak of other Crown corporations. These are questions which must be answered. The longer they are left unanswered, the longer suspicions will be created. The smoke is there. We all know that when one tries to smother a flame, it bursts out in other places, and it is not a very healthy situation.

I think that at least the Minister or someone in the House on the Government side must make a statement very soon to clear the cloud which is around Air Canada, rather than the cloud around individuals which is infecting and affecting Air Canada.

Mr. Pepin: I would like to ask a question. Speaking of clearing a cloud, would my hon. friend leave us with a message before he finishes his remarks? Will he tell us if his Party is generally favourable to more control by the executive of Crown corporations or more control by Parliament on Crown corporations?

Mr. Benjamin: No, by Parliament.

Mr. Pepin: Would he tell us whether his Party is in favour of more autonomy for Crown corporations? Would he also tell us whether his Party is in favour of more privatization for Crown corporations, or is it in favour of all four?

Mr. Nowlan: The answer to that could be another whole speech, which I will hopefully make some day.

Mr. Pepin: Well, your general view.

Mr. Nowlan: My very brief answer is that we can philosophize about Crown corporations and, certainly, there are many areas where my Party believes in privatization. However, the big thing which is fundamental to the process is accountability. That is the big thing. That is the reason we are all here. The Minister knows, as a former professor, how we originated in terms of the battle of the purse and how this Chamber is the Green Chamber, the medal behind the shadows of the castle. Therefore, it could compromise the King's purse and did not have to send women, soldiers, cattle and horses off to the wars. The people resented it and fought the battle of the purse. We know it is difficult, with the complexities of Government, the complexities of Crown corporations and the amount of control involved, but that does not lessen the desire and the need to try even harder to exercise some control.

I do say very specifically that when Crown corporations are treated as political, personal fiefdoms, it does not help accountability.

THE ROYAL ASSENT

A message was delivered by the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod as follows:

Madam Speaker, the Honourable Deputy to the Governor General desires the immediate attendance of this honourable House in the Chamber of the honourable the Senate.

Accordingly, the Speaker with the House went up to the Senate Chamber.

And being returned:

Madam Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that when the House did attend His Honour the Deputy to His Excellency the Governor General in the Senate Chamber, His Honour was pleased to give in Her Majesty's name the Royal Assent to the following Bills:

Bill C-160, an Act to amend the Salaries Act—Chapter 149.

Bill C-156, an Act to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971 (No. 3)—Chapter 150.

Bill S-35, an Act to incorporate the Eparch of the Eparchy of Saints Cyril and Methodius of Slovaks of the Byzantine Rite in Canada.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 62—TRANSPORT POLICY

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Nowlan:

That this House rejects the Government's policies with respect to transportation, which have caused concern, chaos and confusion, as demonstrated by its loss of control over Crown corporations such as Air Canada, C.N., and Canadair and the political preference, secrecy and negligence that it has shown in its dealings with such private concerns as Maislin, and condemns the Government for its failure to demonstrate fairness, accountability and leadership in its activities.

He said: Madam Speaker, there are many other matters which could be mentioned but I know that my friends in the NDP have points to make. In view of the time, I wonder if we could not facilitate the orderly business of the House if I were to call it one o'clock so that any other speaker would not be interrupted just as he began. I have basically finished my contribution to the debate involving the very specific problems of Air Canada. What would the mood of the House be, after giving me an extension of time, to perhaps calling it one o'clock now so that the NDP spokesman could have a fresh start?

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Speaker, I am quite prepared to agree to that. I just wonder if the previous speaker might entertain a short question, and then we could call it one o'clock.

The motion is very timely. I think it is important to place this issue on the record. We support the concept that the transportation system in this country is in chaos. I noticed that the Hon. Member did not include, as one of the serious effects of that chaos, the chaos that has been caused in native communities because of inadequate transportation. Many native communities are well outside of the mainstream of transportation. I am concerned that we are talking about issues which do not primarily deal with people's problems. Of late, the Conservative Party has concentrated on that.

As an example of these problems I would point to a band at Bella Bella of a thousand people whose needs include hospitals, RCMP and a desperate need for transportation. The cost of living is astronomical. It can all be brought down to the transportation system. That community needs a wharf, a roll-on, roll-off ferry system and an airport. They are being denied that by the federal Government. I would say it is an example of dozens of communities and tens of thousands of natives in that same situation. They cannot operate that community effectively.

One other interesting point is that the Government has failed to deliver on its responsibilities to the native people on the transportation system. Ultimately other Government funds that are being spent are squandered. The transportation system is vital. I know the subject of the native people was probably inadvertently left out as a priority, but I would really like to hear the Hon. Member's comments on the transportation system and what the federal Government should be doing to bring native communities into the mainstream of the economy of Canada by boosting transportation.

Mr. Nowlan: Mr. Speaker, there is no doubt the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River (Mr. Skelly) has mentioned a very valid point. He himself agrees it is in a very important area that is not specifically covered in this general resolution on transportation. Quite frankly, it was deliberately drafted in terms that are general enough so that different Members could perhaps focus on different areas of concern. In this motion we are primarily focusing on the concern of transportation in general and its relation with the Crown Corporations that are also related to transportation, and the problem of accountability and ministerial responsibility. We could have used many words in drafting the general terms of the motion. They were really the words of a former Minister of Transport in the present Government, namely, the Hon. Len Marchand when he was Minister of Transport, who said that Transportation was in a mess.

Unfortunately, even though the Government is still holding the reins of power, I would think, as I have tried to illustrate today, that there are still areas of mess causing chaos, confusion and concern. One of them is very definitely the matter which my hon. friend from Comox-Powell River mentioned, as well as the matter referred to by an Hon. Member from the Official Opposition, the Hon. Member for Carleton-Charlotte (Mr. McCain), who wanted to get involved in something in his area concerning ferries and the Grand Manan problems.

There are many different problems affecting transportation. I really do believe, without discounting the concern of the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River, that the question he raised is one that will certainly be canvassed more on an Opposition day devoted to the subject of Indian Affairs or before the committee responsible. The Hon. Member is quite right that I did not get into all the particular problems affecting different regions and different groups within regions.

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Speaker, it is an area of concern of mine and it is not regional. I used one example, but that example stands for hundreds of communities across Canada. In this House Members ignore native people. There is a tendency to focus on what is in the headlines and where it is at today. But the frustration that I and other Members have experienced in the House with this Government is that the topic is not debated enough. We do not make it a part of our priority system. The other day we had a debate on forestry. It was an excellent debate. But the Conservative Party did not mention native people. I think many Members afterwards began to mention the native people. They realize it is important to mention them and remind the Government of its total failure with regard to a large group of people in this country who span the entire country. With that in mind I think the motion would be supported generally.

Mr. Nowlan: Mr. Speaker, if that is the last question, although I am ready to take other questions, to facilitate the orderliness of debate I think it would be appropriate to call it one o'clock, if the House so approves.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I now call it one o'clock, and I do now leave the Chair until two o'clock this afternoon.

At 12.56 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

ELECTORAL BOUNDARIES READJUSTMENT ACT

TABLING OF REPORT OF COMMISSION FOR THE NORTHWEST TERRITORIES

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): It is my duty pursuant to Section 19 of the Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act, Chapter E-2, the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1970, to lay upon the table a certified copy of the Report of the Electoral Boundaries Commission for the Northwest Territories.

ALLOTTED DAY S.O. 62—TRANSPORT POLICY

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Nowlan:

That this House rejects the Government's policies with respect to transportation, which have caused concern, chaos and confusion, as demonstrated by its loss of control over Crown corporations such as Air Canada, CN and Canadair and that the political preference, secrecy and negligence that it has shown in its dealings with such private concerns as Maislin, and condemns the Government for its failure to demonstrate fairness, accountability and leadership in its activity.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I understand that when the House rose for lunch the floor was clear. Therefore I will recognize the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) at this point.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Annapolis Valley-Hants (Mr. Nowlan) still has the floor. If he wants to rush in at the last second, he could still have it, as far as I am concerned.

At the outset I want to say that we support the motion of the Hon. Member for perhaps somewhat different reasons. There is no question that the entire matter of accountability of Crown corporations has always been and will continue to be of prime importance and deserving the attention of Parliament, legislatures or municipal Governments.

Mr. Fennell: Get rid of them all.

Mr. Benjamin: Those who say, "Get rid of them all" are the Neanderthals of the eighteenth century. Perhaps I should explain why Crown corporations were set up in the first place. It was because they were in areas in which the private sector could not or would not take part or, if it took part, required public subsidy.

I want to move an amendment to the Opposition motion because I think the accountability principle must be extended also to the shareholders and customers of private corporations in transportation as well as the public ones. I will not take a back seat to anyone, being in support of having a publicly owned national airline, a publicly owned national railway and several other publicly owned transportation utilities. I am not under any illusion that they will be perfect. Any organization run by people will be imperfect.

I will not hesitate to criticize any details of their operations or how they conduct their affairs if I feel it is necessary. We are fortunate that Air Canada is a Crown corporation. It is something which all nations have, all except one country to the south of the 49th parallel. All nations have a national airline for a variety of reasons, not just ideological ones. We agree that there are problems with the expensive golden handshake for management people compared with employees when they are being laid off or are trying to obtain early retirements and voluntary separations.

I question whether or not this is the time to get into a $30 million new head office. I question the misuse of the resources of Air Canada, whether it is by a member of its executive or anyone else. It is not surprising that, because of government policy, within the commercial marketplace in which Air Canada and CN operate, they cannot and do not operate any differently from private corporations which are in the same marketplace. Canadian National has been jacking up rates on containers shipped by rail out of Halifax while at the same time investing in competing shipping lines. I find that strange. Canadian National has abandoned branch lines in dozens of communities. One would expect that of Canadian Pacific, but one has to question that action when it is taken by a publicly owned corporation.

If the accountability of corporations in the private sector is improved, I submit there would then be less commercial pressure on Crown corporations to behave in the same way as do private corporations. In other words, there would be less pressure on Crown corporations to behave irresponsibly. Most corporations in the private sector which are involved in transportation are substantially financed and subsidized by taxpayers. They always have been. If the private enterprise system is so great in the transportation sector—and one could mention other sectors but we are dealing with the transportation sector—why has the private sector been incapable of doing the job by itself? It has always had to have public subsidy and public financing, and therefore it seems to me that the private transportation sector loses the right to claim that its work is private property and that it is confidential, that it is not as accountable as a public corporation is in the same endeavour and that it can do whatever it pleases. That has been the history of the Canadian Pacific Limited since 1881.

It seems strange to me that a private railway company can sit at the public trough and get subsidies and financing and not be accountable. How much do the shareholders of Canadian Pacific Limited really find out at their annual meetings from its officers about the company's internal operations and the use of the company's resources. Mr. Speaker, if you were to buy one share in Canadian Pacific Limited or CP Enterprises Limited and were to go to the annual meeting, you would see how far you would get when you asked what was happening to your investment. You would get voted out of order so fast that it would make your head spin.

I submit, Mr. Speaker, that not only Canadian National, Air Canada and other Crown corproations must be accountable to a public body such as an appropriate standing committee of the House of Commons, but, in the field of transportation, so should the private corporations be accountable. Because most of these corporations exist only because of public financing and public subsidy, they are answerable to the public and the public is entitled not only to answers but, if possible, to some kind of social and economic return on their investment.

Let us take Canadian railways as an example. Taxpayers paid 60 per cent of the total original cost to build the CPR. Do taxpayers have any share in it? Do taxpayers have any say in it? Since 1881, Ministers of Transport under the law should, in theory, have been able to control the railways. We all know that they could not and they did not. Eighty one per cent of the investment for Canadian Northern, a private enterprise operation, was put up by the taxpayers, and 65 per cent of the investment for the Grand Trunk Pacific was put up by the taxpayers. When those companies went belly-up and Canadian National was formed, the taxpayers paid a second time. All of the bond holders got their money back. The banks and the financiers got their money back. We have been paying them off. We have been paying them back their original investment with interest. Over $2 billion worth of those debts have been transferred to the books of the Government of Canada. Canadian National is no longer victimized by operating losses because of the interest charges on those old debts. Who has ever asked those private sector railway companies to account for their practices and to account for what was done with public funds that were obtained?

We believe, Mr. Speaker, that every Crown corporation and every private corporation that is involved in a joint enterprise with the federal Government and with taxpayers or who receive, request and accept public funds by way of either capital investment or operating subsidies should be equally accountable before an appropriate committee of the House of Commons. May I say something about those committees, Mr. Speaker? The appropriate committees do not have sufficient authority to require Air Canada, Canadian National or any private company to be really forthright in opening up their books and providing complete access to them for Members of Parliament.

I suspect that there are things that even the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) and the Canadian Transport Commission do not know and cannot find out about Canadian National, Canadian Pacific, Air Canada, CP Air, and a whole host of other companies. I would not want to see the ability to find out about these things reside only in the hands of the Minister of Transport of the day. That ability should also reside in the hands of Parliament, the Ministry and the appropriate committee of the House of Commons. That should apply to all Crown corporations and to all private sector corporations that accept, receive or enjoy an enterprise thanks to the taxpayers of Canada.

Surely the taxpayers of Canada are entitled to a return on any investment they make. Like motherhood, everybody agrees with the Minister's proposal on the upgrading of railway lines. The only difference of opinion is about how that is to be done.

I do not understand how my friends in the Liberal Party and the Conservative Party who support free enterprise and private enterprise could object to my proposal. I have yet to hear one of them object to my proposal, and I have been proposing it for the last 15 years. I do not see how they could object to taking equity ownership. I do not see how they could object to being eligible for or having the opportunity to get a return on the taxpayers' investment by way of interest or dividends. I do not see how they could object to taxpayers being eligible for representation on a board of directors and to have those representatives protect the investment of the taxpayers and look into the well-being of that investment. When I propose a good, sound principle, a good fundamental private enterprise exercise on behalf of taxpayers, my friends are silent.

If the investment of a private investor was treated the same as the investment of the taxpayers has been by the railroads, both public and private, we would hear a hue and cry from the Members of the Liberal and Tory Parties such as we have never heard before. But if it is the taxpayers' investment that is at stake, they are silent or they do not believe it or they will not agree that the taxpayers, through the Government, are entitled to a return on that investment just like any private investor. They are entitled to equity ownership.

The Minister of Transport wants to put up hundreds of millions of dollars in capital to upgrade railways, and we agree with that but it will continue what has been going on for 100 years—just give them the money and away they go. Is there any prospect of a return on that investment? There is a slight prospect of the return of any money that CN gets. I think they paid a $5 million dividend last year to the Government for the taxpayers of Canada. That is not very much when you consider the total investment, but it is a beginning. Why should the same not apply to Canadian Pacific? If they are going to get $200 million or $300 million each year for the next nine years, should the taxpayers not be entitled to a return on that capital investment?

I am not talking about subsidies for proven out-of-pocket losses incurred in hauling grain or any other commodity, Mr. Speaker. That is a subsidy. No Crown corporation or private corporation should be allowed to make a profit on the subsidy itself. When funds are put forward for investment in the capital infrastructure of corporations, public or private, surely it is given to get a return, using the good private enterprise theories about investment and profitability of my hon. friends in the Liberal and Tory Parties. I presumed that the Minister and his colleagues and my friends in the Conservative Party would leap to their feet in support of our alternative proposal to spend exactly the same amount of money as the Minister proposes under Bill C-155 and allow taxpayers the opportunity of a return on the investment by taking equity shares, both increasing our equity ownership in Canadian National and taking the common voting equity shares in Canadian Pacific. What is wrong with that? I thought I would be a hero among private enterprisers for suggesting that, but they are silent. I do not understand it. I make a proposal which is totally in accordance with the private enterprise and profitability principles of the Liberals and Tories and they will not support it. I do not understand that. Surely it makes good common business sense.

I sent the Minister a copy of our alternative proposal and he has read about it in the press but I have not received a reply from him. I cannot get a word out of the Tories about it. I do not understand this, Mr. Speaker. It looks as if the Liberals and the Tories want to keep their private enterprise friends feeding at the public trough with subsidies and capital investment which is a straight handout. They want to continue a practice that has been going on since 1881 and even before. Where is this accountability of the public investment, the taxpayers' investment that the motion speaks of?

I should like to move, seconded by the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River (Mr. Skelly):

That the motion be amended by inserting the following immediately after the word Canadair: and private corporations such as Eastern Provincial Airways, Canadian Pacific Limited, and Power Corporation of Canada.

My amendment does not abuse the thrust of the motion of the spokesman on transport for the Official Opposition. It seems to me to enlarge the whole principle of accountability for and what is done with public contributions to the private sector as well as to the public sector. It also allows for scrutiny of what is done with those funds as and when they are contributed by the taxpayers of Canada through the Government of the day.

Surely before this Parliament dies an unnatural death it could come up with a method of referring annual reports of all Crown corporations and any private corporation which receives public funds to the appropriate standing committee of Parliament. Those committees should have power to investigate, and that should be a power conjoint with the Minister. The Minister and the Canadian Transport Commission should have an enlarged ability to find out what is going on in the books and in the practices of Crown corporations and private corporations which come down here on bended knee to ask for taxpayers' money to help them make a profit for themselves—and to hell with the taxpayers. Surely that makes eminent good sense, Mr. Speaker. It certainly enhances what is a responsibility of Parliament and of the Minister to peruse and call to account all the Crown and private corporations that receive grants, subsidies, tax rebates and tax deferrals. Canadian Pacific owes the people of Canada in excess of $1.2 billion in deferred corporation taxes, which we will never see.

I hope that this debate will cause the Government to meet with the other Parties of the House, and that when the standing committees meet in the fall they will be able to hear from the Crown corporations, question them and make them accountable.

Mr. Forrestall: Mr. Speaker, I have a point of order. I have some quarrel with the amendment, not necessarily its intent, although I might wish that my socialist friends would attack the private sector on their own time and in their own way. I do not have a copy of the amendment in front of me. That is the usual courtesy extended to other Members by that Party.

Mr. Benjamin: Sorry.

Mr. Forrestall: I submit that, to the degree the Hon. Member adds, immediately following the word "Canadair", those other corporations which are very clearly in the private sector, thus joining them with the intent of our motion and that is, to deal with Crown corporations—to that degree I find some grounds for concern with respect to the admissibility of the amendment.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I want to advise the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) that I am concerned about the admissibility of the amendments. When I look at the motion that is before the House in the name of the Hon. Member for Annapolis Valley-Hants (Mr. Nowlan), which refers to a loss of control over Crown corporations such as Air Canada, CN, etc., the amendment proposes to apply the same words—a loss of control over private corporations such as Eastern Provincial Airways, Canadian Pacific Limited and Power Corporation of Canada. Obviously, within the terms of the language of both the amendment and the motion, the motion itself indicates a loss of control over public corporations. The amendment, by the nature of its placement within the motion, refers to a loss of control over private corporations. I believe that may give some problem. Obviously, the Chair is going to suggest that debate continue while consideration is being given to the amendment. However, I believe, if I may assist the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), a more appropriate place for his amendment would be after the word "Maislin" within the main motion, ". . . with such private concerns as Maislin, . . .", then "and private corporations . . ." follows. I am not sure that it is an essential matter and I wonder whether the Hon. Member for Regina West, after reflection, might consider accepting a suggestion to put his amendment in that particular position rather than the one he has proposed?

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, I wish I had thought of that first. I am perfectly willing to have it inserted there, as long as it is inserted for the record. I would appreciate it. You are quite correct, it says, " . . . such private concerns as Mais-lin . . .", and, ". . . and private corporations such as . . ." as mentioned in my amendment fit in there perfectly, and that is the proper place for it to be.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I thank the Hon. Member for Regina West for his co-operation. In that case, the Chair has no difficulty. Accordingly, the motion as amended by the Hon. Member for Regina West, seconded by the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River (Mr. Skelly) reads:

That following the words, " . . . with such private concerns as Maislin . . .", the motion is amended by inserting the following immediately after the word "Maislin":

. . . and private corporations such as Eastern Provincial Airways, Canadian Pacific Limited and Power Corporation of Canada.

Accordingly, the motion is found to be in order and debate will continue. Comments, answers?

Mr. Bosley: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the previous speaker this simple question: would he please enlighten the House as to what political preference and secrecy the Government has shown in its dealings with the private railway? That is the motion he has just moved.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, the political preference goes back to 1881, for Canadian Pacific Limited, the failure by the Government to enforce Canadian Labour Relations Board decisions in the case of Eastern Provincial Airways and, I submit, favouritism given to Voyageur Bus Lines owned by Power Corporation of Canada, headed by, I believe, Paul Martin, son of the Paul Martin.

The point is, Mr. Speaker, that all of these corporations directly and indirectly have received public taxpayers' funds, either by way of subsidy or by way of capital investment, for which they should be accountable, the same as a Crown Corporation. Surely, that is only reasonable. Surely, it is only proper that Members of Parliament have a responsibility to make those who receive subsidies and funds for capital investment accountable. Private corporations are just as accountable to Parliament as the Crown Corporations.

That is the point which I have been trying to make. I could make a list as long as your arm, Mr. Speaker, in answer to my hon. friend, of private corporations who tell us, "Leave us alone. We want deregulation. We want the marketplace to function and operate. Leave it to the free and open market", ad nauseam. I have listened to Liberals and Tories, the Chambers of Commerce, the manufacturers' associations, the exporters associations, for 15 years, who lecture us to leave them to the free and open market, to leave them alone, to deregulate. And every time, Mr. Speaker, the economy goes to hell in a handbasket, who are the first ones in line with their hands out, begging for a piece out of the public trough? They tell us they are prepared to take their chances of making a profit or going broke. They are the ones who tell us, these Grits and these Tories, that private enterprise is the way to go, and they are the ones who say, that if they go broke, they will not cry about it. However, they do cry about it and they come to Ottawa and ask for subsidies. They ask to get bailed out, that is, the Chrysler's, the Massey-Ferguson's and the Maislin's of this world.

Whatever happened to private enterprise? If the Liberals and the Tories are correct, they should have let them go belly-up. They should have let them take their chances in the marketplace, Mr. Speaker. But, no, Sir, Mr. Speaker, they ask for loan guarantees, subsidies, money for capital investment. They should then be damned well accountable to Parliament for the funds which are provided to them both directly and indirectly, the same as would apply and should apply to a Crown corporation.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Questions and answers? Comments? Debate.

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a few words first about the motion, and the mover of the motion, particularly. The Hon. Member was quite kind to me and paid me a very interesting compliment, at least, that is the way I took it. He told me that I was too active. I have been reflecting on that subject for a while. He was kind enough to indicate a number of the programs and projects in which I have been, in his view, too active. He mentioned the Crow, the Maritime freight rates, Quebecair, and a number of others. I take this as a compliment because it is my view that the role of politicians is to be active. If they are to sin, as they must, because everyone does, they should sin on the side of over-activity as opposed to the opposite.

I am always reflective on Friday afternoons because the quality and the size of the audience leads to that. As I say, I have been reflecting on this subject. I believe that people go into this political process for much more than simply to administer current affairs. They do so because they believe in movement, because they believe in objectives which must materialize in their own lifetime. The Hon. Member for Annapolis Valley-Hants (Mr. Nowlan) put me in that mood. I recalled a book, which he should read, even if it is in French. I presume he is the future leader of his Party so he must be studying languages these days. The book is called Essai sur l'accélération de l'histoire.

The idea is simply to demonstrate that events today are happening faster and faster. In other words, changes which in the past would take a century or so to materialize, are now materializing in 50 years, 25 years, 10 years, 5 years. Consequently, the comment which the Hon. Member made on my super-activity is taken as a compliment because politicians and Governments in general will have to learn to tackle change in a much more rapid way because history is accelerating. We cannot afford any more to wait 86 years for the Crow to change. We must adjust more rapidly. That was my first reflection, and so I took his comment as a compliment and, hopefully, a few others will.

My second remark will be very brief. It has to do with what the Hon. Member said about what he called "the Air Canada affair", or the "Amyot affair", I do not remember exactly. I believe he used both expressions. I had a short discussion with a friend of mine yesterday—he is a mutual friend, as a matter of fact—and I said to him, "Do not tell me that the Hon. Member for Annapolis Valley-Hants is going to regurgitate all that again?" He thought so, but I said, "No, no. The Hon. Member for Annapolis Valley-Hants is not going to do that this afternoon. He is going to talk about great principles, accountability, respectability, and that sort of thing. He is not going to repeat what he has said in the House and in committee so often now that I presume he is getting bored with the sound of his own voice". But he did, Mr. Speaker. The Hon. Member did. I was a bit embarrassed for him because I respect him. He is a great chap, a lawyer and a respectable person. I am quite sure that people in the audience must have been embarrassed for him as well, having to do what he did. In a sentence, for exmaple, he would say, "If Amyot . . . " that is, the Chairman of Air Canada, " . . . is at the centre of the investigation", then a few sentences after he would say, "and we do not know". Then a few sentences after that, he would say, "The man has been wheeling and dealing for his own personal gain". There are implications there that really are not worthy of a lawyer and a man who has respect for the law. I say that in all sincerity.

I was embarrassed so I will not continue with respect to the phone call I made at the time. I said what I had to say in the committee. My friend must admit that I extended myself as far as I could in the committee. When I did not know, I said I did not know. With respect to the phone call I made, there is no doubt that if the RCMP inquiry finds that I was negligent—what is the word, guilty of—

Mr. Nowlan: Indiscrete.

Mr. Pepin: —indiscrete in making the phone call, even if it had been approved by the RCMP, as everyone knows by now, I will be the first to apologize. But I doubt very, very much that it will have any effect on the inquiry whatsoever. Suppose it does? Again I would be the first one to apologize for having done that. But again I did it with some approval because I knew it was a bit unconventional to do that. But then I thought the relationship between the Minister and the Chairman was of such a nature that it demanded that sort of a call. But this is all debatable; no one has a monopoly on truth and good intentions in this world, particularly the person who is speaking and the person who spoke.

Be that as it may, as you say so beautifully in English—

Mr. Speaker, as I said a few minutes ago, on Fridays I always feel a little reflective and philosophical, so I have been reflecting, ever since I saw a motion would be moved concerning Crown corporations which, as we all know, are a phenomenon that is particularly popular in Canada. I do not think Canada invented the Crown corporation, but I do think Canada must have more of them than any other country in the world. Perhaps we should ask ourselves why this system is so popular in our country and what are the basic concepts of the system of Crown corporations in Canada. It seems to me that the weakness in the speech of the Hon. Member for Annapolis Valley-Hants (Mr. Nowlan) was that he failed to discuss the philosophy and the concepts on which the Crown corporation is based. I do not wish to seem arrogant, but if he had fleshed out his speech a little by saying exactly what a Crown corporation is supposed to be and that the Minister of Transport was not acting in accordance with the principles of this system, I would have been impressed, but unfortunately I am not, because he failed to base his views on a more or less thorough analysis of the concept of a Crown corporation. In fact, that is why I asked him whether my hon. friend would like more control by the Executive over Crown corporations or more control by Parliament, and whether he wanted more autonomy for Crown corporations or whether he was in favour of privatization. I think all this is important. I have thought about it, and I know what I want. I am a Crown corporation enthusiast. It is one of Canada's great achievements. I think Crown corporations are respectable and I think we should appreciate the originality and the intrinsic value of this kind of system. I shall get back to this later on.

So what is a Crown corporation? Well, they are public enterprises whose shares are held by the Government. They have an economic purpose, at least the ones we are discussing today. Crown corporations in the transportation field have an economic function and purpose. They are created and governed by an Act of Parliament, by either specific or general legislation—in any case, I do not have to go into all that, since all this is generally known and they are accountable to Parliament through a Minister of the Crown, and it is a very essential characteristic of Crown corporations that they are accountable to Parliament through a Minister.

So here we have the whole problem of instruments, the entire range, if you prefer, of customary controls, which include the control exercised by the Minister himself, by the Executive, by Cabinet, by the Minister of Finance, by the President of the Treasury Board, and also by Parliament, which does so through the usual mechanisms of questions, debate, tabling of annual reports, and so forth, and last but not least, budgetary controls. So you see we are not particularly lacking in controls over Crown corporations. There may be a feeling that these controls should be improved, but the fact remains that there is a full-grown system in place with audits and what not. It is a complete system, created by Canadians, and it stands by itself.

In a few minutes, my Parliamentary Secretary, the Member for Parkdale-High Park (Mr. Flis), is going to speak, and he will show how these controls have been improved in recent years and how they will be further improved in the future. The Hon. Member will talk about the progress that has been made in this area. I think we shall learn some interesting facts, such as the creation of a Crown corporation unit in the Department of Transport, whose task is to co-ordinate information. I do think we shall be hearing some very important and very interesting facts. Mr. Speaker, this is not to say that we have no problems. We do have problems every single day, and they are brought up in the House in the questions I am asked. We do have problems, but I do not think we have a problem, that is, I do not think we have a really serious problem that threatens the very existence of Crown corporations. I do not think that is the case.

So what is a Crown corporation? I have tried to define this concept, but what is essential to a Crown corporation? It is a public enterprise existing within the framework of a mixed economy. In other words, we have Crown corporations or enterprises that are active in areas where the private sector operates as well. There is a measure of competition between the two. What is important as well about the Crown corporation concept is the fact that a Crown corporation is a public enterprise but nevertheless closely modelled after the methods, concepts, habits and techniques of the private sector. I want to emphasize this, because I think it is very important, and I am not being particularly original in saying that, because it is a commonplace in Canada. The Air Canada Act, for instance, clearly provides in Section 7 that:

"(2) In discharging its responsibilities under this Act, the Board—

—the Board of Directors—

—shall have due regard to sound business principles, and in particular the contemplation of profit."

This is very important! Crown corporations are, in fact, hybrid institutions in which the private enterprise or rather the private enterprise philosophy has a role to play. Once again, all this can be found in any number of documents I could name, and I have an example here, a quote from Van Loon & Wittington:

[English]

—combining the need for some degree of public accountability with the freedom of initiative usually associated with private enterprise.

That is the conventional approach to Crown corporations, as I have been saying all along.

[Translation]

And that is what constitutes the value of this kind of enterprise and also its originality. Unfortunately, it is also the reason why Crown corporations are so often attacked. But why? Some people will say that it is because they are modelled too closely on private enterprise, and others that the resemblance is not close enough. And so the debate goes on, because some people, including the Member for Annapolis Valley-Hants, are not quite sure about what they want. I do know what I want. I want the Crown corporation to have the goals of the public sector and the methods, techniques and psychology of the private sector.

I know what I want, and I think that as a rule, I do not contradict myself very often, because every time Hon. Members rise in the House to ask: "Does the Minister intend to tell the board of directors of Air Canada or CN or Northern Transportation what to do?"—my answer is no! My answer is that I rely on the boards of directors of these corporations for handling routine business. In other words, I try to be consistent. I am not in favour of out-and-out interventionism on one day, and non-interventionism in the extreme the next.

One may ask why the Crown corporation is such a popular and widespread institution in Canada. If we look at the literature, it will give you five or six reasons to explain the popularity of this phenomenon in Canada. Geography and the demands of Canadian unity have contributed enormously to the creation of Air Canada and CN, for instance. There is no doubt at all that if this country were not as big and as sparsely populated as it is in certain areas, there would have been no need for the public sector to create these enterprises. The fact that we do have them is due to geography and politics. History, the Depression and the Second World War ... During the Second World War, C. D. Howe, who was a private sector man if there ever was one, created 30 or so of these public enterprises. Another factor has been the increasing role of the State. The need to take up the slack of the public and private sectors has also been a factor. And in some cases, it was simply a matter of economic circumstances. I do not think we should make the mistake of assuming that the Government of Canada took over Canadair and de Havilland because of its socialist philosophy or just for fun or to be different. It did so because it had to. We had no choice. If we wanted to maintain this advanced technology industry in Canada, we had to act, and the Government's action was to create Crown corporations.

I am saying all this so that those who are listening will realize that the Government of Canada had a very practical purpose and very specific objectives in mind when it started creating these institutions. We must also remember that the popularity of Crown corporations is not restricted to the federal level but has filtered down to the provincial and municipal levels as well. Another important point I would like to make is that not one party in Canada has had a monopoly on creating Crown corporations. Many were created by the Progressive Conservatives, while the Liberals and Socialists have established a number as well.

My point is that although we may have reason to criticize the administration, operations and behaviour of Crown corporations, the fact remains that they respond to a basic given and need and to working methods that exist in Canada. Although criticism may be justified, I feel that as a general rule, we have every reason to be proud of what we have accomplished in this area in Canada. Once again, it is not something that is typically federal or municipal, Progressive Conservative or Liberal. In fact, what we have here is something that is truly a fundamental part of our political and economic life in Canada.

What does worry me a little, since this is an area where balance is of the essence, is that quite often I have noticed that some of my colleagues, and I am sure they are very well-intentioned, would like to impose a kind of executive or parliamentary control over these corporations which I feel would be excessive. I know I am going to shock some people by saying this, but if we believe that the spirit of private enterprise is an essential characteristic of Crown corporations, we will not be doing Crown corporations a favour by trying to destroy that spirit.

It seems to me that we should ask ourselves one thing in this regard. I am not trying to force my views on my colleagues, but it seems to me we should ask ourselves whether the degree of Government control by the executive or Parliament itself over these corporations is not exaggerated occasionally. This is a serious question because I believe it is essential to strike a balance. I am not the only one to think so. What I am now saying is nothing new. If we look at certain writings, we find the following, for instance:

• (1450)

[English]

—that the Minister has nothing to do in the day to day operation of the corporation, but at the same time, he has the power to intervene if circumstances warrant it.

An Hon. Member: I doubt it.

Mr. Pepin: I am trying to put some reflection in the Hon. Member's mind. Hopefully, I will have success. The idea is simply that it is not easy to know when the Minister should intervene. The Minister should not intervene, certainly, each time the socialists ask him to because he will destroy the institution itself. That is for sure. It is not easy to decide each time there is a strike or each time the pensioners of one of these enterprises appears not to be fully rewarded for the wonderful work that they have done for the company, each time there is a layoff, each time the companies buy the wrong piece of equipment, according to the Members of the House, each time they do not locate at the right place, each time they do not defend the interests of the port of Montreal and the port of Halifax equally, each time they acquire a company which some Hon. Member thinks should or should not have been acquired, each time they do anything, really, each time nominations are made which do not meet with general support, each time some people here want to shake the institution itself. I am now reflecting, just saying to Members of the House that there is a delicate balance to maintain. It would be good if they reminded themselves of that fact.

[Translation]

Having said that, I want to take a few minutes to point out that Air Canada and the CN which my Hon. friend is criticizing are nevertheless very sound companies with an excellent international reputation. I do not condemn his criticisms, but I simply want to remind the Canadian people that these companies have a remarkable credibility both nationally and internationally. Air Canada, since—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please!

[English]

I am sorry to interrupt the Hon. Minister. I have been trying to signal him for some time now that his allotted time has expired. Perhaps he might seek unanimous consent of the House to continue. Is there unanimous consent that the Hon. Minister may continue his remarks?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Forrestall: What he is saying is ridiculous, but carry on, anyhow.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): There is unanimous consent.

Mr. Pepin: I was desperately trying not to see you, Mr. Speaker.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Pepin: I was speaking of the general quality of these Crown corporations. Air Canada, for example, is the tenth largest airline in the world. It is considered by everyone, even today, notwithstanding the accident that happened yesterday, to be a very efficient airline.

Mr. Lapointe (Charlevoix): The best.

Mr. Pepin: Yes. Since recapitalization in 1970, its profits have totalled more than $200 million. It paid $53 million in dividends to the Government of Canada.

The Act states that Crown corporations should behave in contemplation of profit. They do maintain a high degree of efficiency. I was speaking of the awards they have received in recent days. In 1982, Air Canada received the Air Transportation World Award for technical management and excellence. Just a few days ago, it received the Design Management Award. In 1982, it received the Excellence in Communication Leadership Award. That is not bad, internationally. It has a very high reputation.

Mr. Huntington: Advertising.

Mr. Pepin: Yes. More recently, Air Canada was rated ahead of all trans-Atlantic airlines in passenger service by a prominent British travel magazine. Similarly, it has been avant-garde in service to handicapped people, for example. Similarly, it has one of the most sophisticated computer communication systems. This is a company of which I think all Canadians should be proud.

I respectfully submit that this applies to CN, too. CN has a great reputation for efficiency. I was in India some months ago and saw CN and CP jointly looking for a contract for the computerization of the Indian railway system.

• (1500)

Mr. Benjamin: But they will not fix their own tracks here.

Mr. Pepin: Nevertheless, they have a fine reputation. Perhaps it is not up to the standard of the Hon. Member who would probably like to see the rails table flat from coast to coast.

Since recapitalization, CN has shown a profit each year, except in 1982 due to the economic situation. CN also pays a dividend of 20 per cent of its earnings to the Government of Canada. Since 1977, these dividends have amounted to $145 million. My hon. friend does not believe in profit and that kind of incentive.

Mr. Benjamin: I did not say that.

Mr. Pepin: Well, we suspected that from what he said a moment ago when he appeared to be saying that he would like not only to establish a greater domination by Government and Parliament on Crown corporations but also to take over a number of other companies like Eastern Provincial Airways. He also mentioned Power Corporation and presumably he had Voyageur in mind.

Mr. Benjamin: Accountability with what they do with public funds.

Mr. Pepin: Be that as it may, CN is consistently ranked among the top five railways in North America for its safety record. CN does 88 per cent of its purchasing from Canadian sources, which is a very high percentage. I could go on.

My hon. friend is correct in seeing some aspects of the operation of these Crown corporations and their relationship with the Government as worthy of his chastisement and occasional angry chastisement. I want to balance the facts by saying that this is an institution to which Canadians have contributed tremendously in its development. We see here a balancing act between the spirit of free entreprise and public objectives and necessity. We have companies that have operated in a mixed economy and I think this has been a balancing act that we can be proud of.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I have one comment to make to the Minister. I listened very carefully to his position with respect to what Parliamentarians are about when they question the House of Commons, in the committee or when they assert, as I now assert, that Canadair is in violation of the Financial Administration Act. His position was that we are in some way attempting to control Crown corporations. That is not the purpose of those questions in the House and is not the purpose of questions in committee. It is not the purpose of our estimates process through which we can question Ministers and others.

What the Minister sometimes forgets and ought never to forget is that Parliament has no business as managers of Crown corporations. I know of no responsible Parliamentarian who would ever advocate that. Whether the Minister, the bureaucrats or the Government like it or not, our job is to hold Crown corporations or agencies accountable to the extent that we can with the machinery we have.

I want to make that clear because, in his George Bernard Shaw fashion, I believe the Minister was overstating the position that Parliament takes when it questions, doubts or raises alarm about occurrences in Crown agencies. I want the Minister to understand, and more importantly I want the public to understand, that as the Minister has the right to assert the place of a Crown corporation in the mixed economy or elsewhere, Parliament has a right to assert that those Crown agencies are under our control for the purposes of accountability. In many ways it is in our estimates that we grant a part of their funds and they cannot be separated. We do not want to run them; we want to make sure they are run properly.

Mr. Pepin: Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased and honoured that the Hon. Member paid so much attention to what I said. If he wants to recall what I said, I talked about strikes, acquisition, lay-offs and about change in facilities. I was attempting to attract attention to the fact that there are more important matters to control. My view is a provocative reflection since this is Friday afternoon.

My hon. friend gave a speech of the same nature a couple of weeks ago. It is a thought that I have as a recipient of these questions and inquiries from Members who are looking for jobs for their electors and while it is all very nice, I must wonder nevertheless if we are not detailing our attempt to control these Crown corporations too much and should rather preserve our energy and time for the larger issues.

Mr. Huntington: Mr. Speaker, the Minister very proudly announced the fact that Canadian National has paid $145 million in dividends since 1977. I believe that was the figure and I presume it is the collective amount of dividends since 1977. He announced as well that Air Canada had paid $53 million in dividends. I believe this is a trend in the right direction.

Does the Minister have any figures on total dividends returned to the Consolidated Revenue Fund by our Crown corporations? Are they paying a fair part of the corporate tax load in Canada toward the provision of all the social services that we are so proud of in this country? Does he see any improvement to this? He has mentioned two Crown corporations, but are there others paying dividends and are they likely to pick up their fair share of the tax load?

Mr. Pepin: Mr. Speaker, I regret that I am not an expert on the subject. I only have these two examples simply because I had them researched. My first reaction is that I do not think these cases of profit making can be generalized. I think that these are special instances.

I am enough of a socially oriented person not to be too greatly impressed by the size of the profit. I would have been more impressive had I been giving the size of the investments of these Crown corporations at the same time. The profit is nice but the extent of the investments that they make on an annual basis is a fact that I should have related as well.

It is my impression that CN and Air Canada are doing very well. They justify the pride we have in them.

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Speaker, I would like to deal with the Minister's responsibility for transportation as it relates to the resolution, which states that it has caused concern, chaos and confusion. I would like briefly to outline a situation of which the Minister is very well aware and which I think can generally be applied to many other areas in this country. It concerns the community of Bella Bella which is suffering from very high costs, problems with the delivery of mail and problems with economic development. It seems that other federal departments are expending large amounts of money in sustaining a community through band administration, income support and economic development, yet the Department of Transport has failed to make appropriate investments to support those other Government investments. Therefore it is not only jeopardizing the community but the money that the taxpayers have put into there as well.

The Minister is well aware that the community needs a roll-on, roll-off ferry terminal and requires assistance to complete their airport and extend the runway. Could he explain why the federal Department of Transport is not prepared to act in such a way that it will support the investments made by other federal Government departments? Why is the Department of Transport not ready to go forward and support a constitutional requirement? The Canadian Government has a constitutional responsibility to the native people of this country.

Mr. Pepin: Mr. Speaker, one thing is clear: the question has nothing to do with the motion and nothing to do with what I said.

Mr. Skelly: Chaos.

Mr. Pepin: Yes. You can put almost anything under chaos. The answer to the question—I have not looked at it in recent hours or days, but I was aware of the speech my hon. friend made some days ago—is simply that there are two candidates for further airport development in the area. Nobody has been able to make a decision as to where the development should be. One thing is sure: the distance between the two sites does not justify the expenditure of millions of dollars on both. Possibly cowardly, we have left the decision to the Government of the Province to make, it being a more local question, and provincial Governments being more locally oriented. Apparently the provincial Government is not making the decision. My hon. friend is giving me good advice and I have been thinking about it. The time may come one day when somebody will have to stick his neck out.

Mr. Evans: Mr. Speaker, I have one quick question for the Minister. I notice that my good friend and colleague from Laprairie has been talking about the airline industry in the past and especially the position of the Crown Corporation, Air Canada, in that airline industry. Has the Minister given any additional thought to the possibility that there could be some further deregulation of the airline industry and a reduction of Air Canada's monopoly position within it?

Mr. Pepin: Mr. Speaker, I have expressed my views on the subject during the hearings of the Standing Committee on Transport following a draft paper that I presented and following also an excellent report on the part of the committee. I could not agree with the committee on the role given particularly to regional carriers. I thought it was too fluid, too flexible. I was looking for something more categorized and I told them so very simply.

Since then my hon. friend, who is an ardent student of Canadian air matters, must have noticed some changes taking place. One of them, and I think this is very healthy, is the greater co-operation between airlines. Air Canada, for example, at the moment is working toward the restructuring of Quebecair. The Hon. Member has noticed also some kind of integration taking place between Eastern Provincial Airways and CPA. Again, these seem to me to be very healthy developments. A constant debate in Canada is: Do we have too many airlines? I would tend to believe that, although I will not be looking for a Russian approach to Canadian aviation—an Aeroflot approach. When I see these integration efforts I am very, very pleased.

Mr. Forrestall: Mr. Speaker, I listened very thoughtfully to the earlier remarks made by the Hon. Member for Annapolis Valley-Hants (Mr. Nowlan) and the response this afternoon of the Minister in a philosophical way about Crown corporations and what they are. The Minister in his treatment quite rightly said that we must be careful about choosing the points of entry with respect to influence or control over those Crown corporations.

Would the Minister not feel that one of those very obvious points of entry with respect to accountability must come about when there are two or three serious conditions precedent or apparent? One of those, for example, is an abuse of corporate office. The second is the apparent inability to operate within simple guidelines, Canadair being one of those in that particular case. Would the Minister not agree that those areas that are publicly discernible as meriting intervention with respect to accountability of Crown corporations should, in fact, be used by the Minister and be seen by Government as a responsibility to intervene? Would the Minister comment for a moment on the means of entry? He has told us that we cannot intervene on all subjects. Would he now talk for just a moment about how we identify the justifiable intervention processes?

Mr. Pepin: Mr. Speaker, I would gladly allow the Hon. Member to keep on for another minute or two to illustrate in a more concrete fashion what he has in mind.

Mr. Forrestall: Mr. Speaker, I might very briefly. The difficulty with Canadian National Railways' investment in Cast has aroused the concern of the Province, of the principal marine community involved. Canadian National has without an objection from Government. If Government in this case chose not to intervene because there was no objection from the Canadian Transport Commission, I assume that is a reason not to intervene. But when that Crown Corporation—in fact, CN has had to write down $62 million—is contemplating a massive further expenditure to acquire all of the assets, or the remaining assets in this case of the Cast shipping group, would the Minister not feel that in terms of accountability there should be produced for review by the standing committee or this Chamber, at the very least, the audited statements of the company to be acquired? I am throwing out these suggestions to see whether or not these are tangible, acceptable levels of entry with respect to accountability.

Mr. Pepin: Mr. Speaker, first of all, there was hardly anything philosophical in what I said this afternoon.

Mr. Fennell: That is right.

Mr. Pepin: I somehow react negatively when I am told that what I say is of a philosophical nature. What I talked about this afternoon was a very practical, down to earth, everyday decision-making process, the pains and the flagellations of every day. Therefore, there is nothing philosophical.

Mr. Huntington: Professorial.

Mr. Pepin: The approach might have been philosophical but the subject matter was very concrete.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Very real.

Mr. Pepin: Very real indeed. I am paid to know it.

On the subject brought forward by the Hon. Member for Dartmouth-Halifax East (Mr. Forrestall), I agree with him 110 per cent that the subject he has raised in recent months in committees and in the House is a very important one. I respect him and I admire him for the intensity with which he has raised it. There is no doubt in his mind and in the minds of many people in his area of Halifax that the takeover of Cast by CN, on which the Government has not yet decided, is perceived as having a negative effect.

I think he will agree with me that I have tried, possibly in an adequate way, to address this issue with him. I have talked with him. He has questioned me, he was nice enough to do so, on the importance of vertical integration. I have described the situation in the Montreal area to him with CP having a set of alliances with Manchester, with Dart, with terminals in Montreal, in Europe and in England, with all kinds of shipping facilities.

Having taken the position in the Montreal area that CN must react, CN cannot simply for the sake of being accused by the population of Halifax of doing something perceived as negative ignore that situation and let pass the opportunity of an merger with Cast.

I then tried to give the Hon. Member some information. This is all on top of what the CTC said in 1975. I tried to give the Member information on rates charged by CN. I tried to remind him also that CN has ownership in the area of Halifax. I tried to reason with him on the subject of cost recovery. I have tried to give him some information on the extent of the investment of the Government of Canada in the Port of Halifax. This is a very important issue. If one wants an idea of what I had in mind a few moments ago when I talked about being selective in our debates on Crown corporations, I think this is a good example. It is a very important one.

Every day Hon. Members ask me why CN has laid off two people in X, Y or Z, or why CN has not bought a Canadian product in this particular instance. They ask me how come, et cetera. I think we should reserve our debates for important subjects such as this one.

Mr. Scott Fennell (Ontario): Mr. Speaker, the Minister was very clever. He used up about 40 per cent of our total speaking time by eroding our objections. The old saying "He protesteth too much" is very apt.

The Minister was very selective of Crown corporations for which he is responsible. He picked out CN and Air Canada. He did not mention the losses of VIA Rail. He did not mention the loss occasioned by Mirabel airport. He did not mention the cost of carrying the Pickering airport land. He was very selective.

The Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) gave a much better description of Crown corporations. They were established in the first place because they were in areas in which the private sector could not or would not take part and, if it took part, required public subsidy. It has gone beyond that. Also he mentioned the great C. D. Howe. Mr. Howe created a number of corporations in a wartime era. It was a necessity to survive World War II.

I am sorry the Minister has left the Chamber because I want to talk about his Department. When we ask him questions in the House of Commons, he always says that we should have given him notice. This indicates that his Department is so big he cannot control it. I would like to indicate for the record that the Minister does not know what is going on in his Department. He appointed Mr. McLeish as a consultant. He was the former deputy minister in charge of air transport. He was given the job of implementing the recommendations contained in the Dubin Report. The author of that report would not believe that the one man who was totally critical of him and working against him was the person who implemented the report because he did not believe in it. This proves that the Minister does not have control.

He talked about Crown corporations being in competition with the private sector. I could give a perfect example of competition between Crown corporations and the private sector. Petro-Canada receives money for every litre of gasoline sold across Canada. The money is used to acquire foreign companies which compete with Canadian companies. Canadian companies have to go into the equity and debt markets to raise money at high prices, so there is no competition. With the assistance that Petro-Canada has had, it still will not survive because it is in the marketing side as opposed to the exploratory side. I have to be brief in my comments this afternoon because I have to catch an airplane.

Mr. Cullen: The Minister has left.

Mr. Fennell: They are in Hansard anyway. My remarks will be recorded there and I can send them to my constituents.

It was interesting that the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Evans) was here, waiting for what the Minister had to say. He has a problem of his own. He and a group of people sitting in that corner are on the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs. They are having a hard time over the Canadair situation. In November, 1982, the officials of Canadair appeared before the parliamentary committee and did not tell the truth. They have been feather-bedding the situation in Canadair for the last four years.

The entire story was told by "The Fifth Estate". I am surprised the Minister of Communications (Mr. Fox) did not kill that program before it hit the air. The present Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Chrétien) and former Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce came out with a very interesting statement. He said:

> I was very lucky that I had just left the Treasury Board at that time, and I was just coming in Industry, Trade and Commerce, so the new President of the Treasury Board was not too much aware of what I was doing.

That is how it was funded. He did it on his own. It was probably one of the worst decisions the Government has taken in the last 15 years. It is just another example. It bought a company for $38 million some seven years ago. Last year the Government had to pump in $1,350,000,000, and this year another $260 million or $240 million has been requested. I get confused with all these amounts of money. The amount of money we have put into Canadair is more than the United States Government and the Canadian Government contributed to support Chrysler Corporation when it was in financial trouble. There are 4,800 jobs in Canadair. There are 150,000 jobs related to the Chrysler situation. That was money ill spent.

Now the company is blaming the engines. Officials say that what caused the trouble was that the engines were not big enough. That was stated by Mr. Bill Lear who designed the aircraft. He disowned it after it was redesigned by the people at Canadair. It was made big and fat and could not follow its original specifications. I am sure he would take back his original statement that there was no one in the United States intelligent enough to take this plane on. Unfortunately Mr. Lear is no longer with us. I am sure he would be disillusioned and would figure that if it were taken on as Canadair took it on, it would be a failure.

An example of what Canadair did can be found in the deal with Federal Express. Federal Express placed contracts for 25 airplanes. By the time the whole thing was over—and it only put down a deposit on one aircraft—Canadair paid $4 million to get out of the contracts and gave a plane for free. How can a corporation make money by doing that? It was ludicrous. It is typical of all Crown corporations in which the Government has become involved.

A Senator in Alaska was convicted for being bribed by Canadair officials to buy an airplane for the State of Alaska. Its employment record is deplorable. The Hon. Member for Laprairie (Mr. Deniger) is somewhat disconcerted about the situation. He is more aware than anyone but no one will listen to him. Canadair is not something unto itself. It is an example of the disrespect of the Government for the House of Commons.

The Auditor General should be able to review the operations of every Crown corporation. He should be able to check where the money went. If he finds that these companies cannot last on their own, they should be disbanded. We had a marvellous idea in 1979. We wanted to sell Crown corporations. Now they have gone so far down the tube that no one in the private sector would take them on. The only solution is to disband them. de Havilland is a prime example of Government corruption in the private sector. A friend of mine who was a very senior executive of De Havilland left that company when the Government took over. After six months, they had so much trouble that they asked him to come back. He only stayed eight months. In a conversation with him last fall, he told me that de Havilland was so badly run under the Government that it would never survive. The Government had destroyed all of the good that de Havilland had done. It destroyed any bit of credibility that de Havilland had built up. It ruined the company. It poured money into it, it had expenditures, it had people on the payroll. That is just another example of a very fine corporation that was destroyed by the Government. If we would have been able to stay in power in 1979, we would have put de Havilland back into the hands of the private sector and we would have saved a very fine Canadian organization.

There has been some talk that the cost of interest charges to Canadair equals 50 per cent of their sales. The truth of the matter is that that is not a representative statement because interest is not being charged. The Government knows that if interest is charged, it will just have to loan the money back to Canadair. There is really no interest being charged to Canadair at the present time on the Challenger mess.

Two years ago I asked the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. Gray), who was then the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce, if he would explain to me why all of the undercarriages that had been shipped down to Teterboro Airport, New Jersey, had to be returned. He said that he did not know anything about it. The truth of the matter was that they were replacement undercarriages that were too light for the redesigned plane. That is just one example that I brought to the attention of the Government two years ago, and if the Government had listened then, it would have known about the trouble it was getting itself into.

The Government has given us information about the tremendous sales that are expected for Canadair. Those sales have not materialized. As recently as last November, the Government stated that it would sell 142 planes in the next year. Mr. Speaker, only 76 planes have been sold since Canadair started in 1981. I do not see a very positive outlook for the future because Falcon and another company are far outstripping Canadair right now. Canadair's product is not the product it was originally advertised to be. It is a failure. It costs Canadair twice as much to build an airplane as the purchaser pays for it. This is ludicrous.

We have requested that the Canadair officials who were here in November come back to the parliamentary committee. We hope that they will be back next week because those people did not tell the committee the truth. If I could use the appropriate word in the House of Commons I would, but I cannot. They told an untruth.

We now hear, Mr. Speaker, that this whole situation will be handled by Maurice Strong. We hear that Maurice Strong and Senator Austin will sort all this out. Well, I believe that it is now too late. Next week when Mr. Strong is before the committee, I think our recommendation to him will be to suggest that he winds up the company. There is no future for it. It will not sell products. Canada cannot afford to get involved in luxury airplanes. Canada can afford the work that de Havilland did for many years. Canada can afford planes like the Beaver and the Dash-7 for short take-off and landing, but even these have been destroyed by the new Government management.

I will reserve my comments on that, Mr. Speaker, but I personally believe that the Government should not interfere in business. I believe that encouragement and tax incentives should be given to the private sector, and that if the private sector cannot succeed, it should be allowed to fail. I believe the private sector should be allowed to succeed in freedom and fail in freedom. I do not believe in putting a crutch under these companies as we did for Petro-Canada, VIA, CN for many years, and all the other corporations across the country.

Mr. Cullen: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member mentioned a friend who had worked at the de Havilland, had left and had then gone back again. He did not mention his name. I wonder if he would be prepared to tell us who it was who had all this talent and skill and could make these conclusions.

Mr. Fennell: Mr. Speaker, as this gentleman is a very close friend of mine and held a very senior management position, I would not divulge his name in the House of Commons. If the Hon. Member wanted to check, I am sure he could figure out who I am speaking of.

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Speaker, I would choose to make a comment on the position put forward by the Conservative Party. After listening to debate today and after listening to the Hon. Member's speech, it is interesting to note that we are talking about specifics of the transportation system that affect the lives of Canadians in small communities, and we have talked about native peole. We are very concerned that the position put forward by the Conservative Party today is absolutely devoid of constructive alternatives to the present policy. The Canadian people know that the Liberal Government is incompetent, and I think that in many cases they know that it has been devoid of principled operating decisions.

On the other side of the coin, Mr. Speaker, one of the most dishonest things that I have seen in my time in Parliament is the current role that the Conservative Party plays by chastising and ripping apart the Liberal Government without putting forward a constructive alternative. There are many people in the country who need alternatives in order to make proper choices. I suspect that what we have before us is illustrated by what was said by the Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) in Maclean's magazine in May of 1981. He said: "Of course the Liberals are incompetent, but if I told you what our Party would do, the people would never elect it". I think that is the comment that must be made about the kinds of speeches that are being made today.

Mr. Sargeant: Just like its leadership candidates.

Mr. Fennell: Mr. Speaker, I did say in my speech that I do not believe in Crown corporations. I do believe in encouraging the private sector through tax incentives. There are certain kinds of Crown corporations that were established by this Party and which had to be put in place because of the vastness of the country, but to put a Crown corporation in competition with the private sector is inequitable and unfair to the taxpayer because the taxpayer ends up subsidizing the Crown corporation rather than getting a deemed tax benefit from corporate taxes.

Mr. Evans: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member's last comment interested me. He said that he does not believe in Crown corporations. I think there are grounds for arguing in favour of more openness and fewer Crown corporations, but I would like to suggest to the Hon. Member that if the criteria that he suggested for determining the existence of Crown corporations were applied, that would mean that he and presumably his Party would privatize Air Canada, CN, Petro-Canada, and a great many other Crown corporations. Virtually every Crown corporation that I know of except perhaps AECL competes directly with the private sector in one way or another. If competition with the private sector is the criterion, is the Hon. Member saying that virtually all Crown corporations should therefore be privatized?

Mr. Fennell: Mr. Speaker, I did say that there are certain Crown corporations that are required because of the vastness of the country, but I believe that any Crown corporation that can compete in the private sector should be sold to the private sector and that the Government should stay out of it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Debate. The Chair has been advised that the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River (Mr. Skelly) may have other obligations. It is not in the ordinary course of events that I should recognize him, but in the ordinary course of events I would look to the Hon. Member on my right. The Chair will need instructions.

Mr. Cullen: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member has a long way to go. I would be quite happy to let him go ahead.

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, today's debate is an important debate. I think it affords a good opportunity for Members of the House to comment on what could be considered the chaos, concern and dislocation that exists in the transportation system of Canada. In concert with my previous remarks about the failure of the Conservative Party to express straightforward concerns that affect the lives of citizens of small Canadian communities, and because of its failure to express its policy positions on these vital issues, I would like to become very specific by choosing examples to illustrate where problems exist in our transportation system. The Minister and his Department must begin to act to bring transportation back to giving meaningul support to the economic and social life of Canada.

I should like to outline some problems that have been brought to me by people in the community of Port Hardy, British Columbia, regarding general aviation. People have questions about the dramatically escalating costs of the operations of General Aviation. They point out that the Minister and his Department have substantially increased landing fees at the airports, have increased parking fees and have created a situation where fuel costs for general aviation are exorbitant. The airport monopoly and, I would suggest, the price-fixing situation at many airports means that one litre of aviation gasoline in the area of 80 or 100 octane costs more than 60 cents per litre. That is absolutely absurd, Mr. Speaker. Basically it is unleaded pump gas. The cost is putting general aviation out of business.

The cost of radio licences went from $20 to $40, an unjustified 100 per cent increase which is passed on to the operators in general aviation.

The increase in regulations is a serious problem. We have no objections to safety and, indeed, commend the Minister on many of the things that have been brought forward to improve safety in aviation. We are getting to the point where we have regulation for the sake of regulation rather than for safety. This places more and more cost on the pilot and on the operator in general aviation. This point has been brought up by every operator I have come in contact with in my riding, every flying club, be it Sechelt at the Elphinstone Flying Club, the Powell River Flying Club, Comox Flying Club or at Port Hardy.

The other day the Minister bragged in the House that since he had imposed some of these cost increases he had increased the revenue from this source. I should like to tell him that from my examination of the situation at Port Hardy, it is my belief that he drove every private aircraft out of that airport. People flew into Port McNeill or somewhere else where they could store the aircraft and operate it at a reasonable cost. Some people just sold out because they could not afford to fly any more.

I should like to move on to other specific concerns of many Canadians. Within the air transportation system there is a group of dedicated, hard-working individuals—the flight service station air radio operators. Following the recommendations of Mr. Justice Dubin, the Minister recommended that these light service radio operators must control on and off runways, even though they operate remote stations. This was enforced. For example, a radio operator at one airport is responsible, by a remote radio hook-up, for vehicle transportation at an airport at which he is not present. In airports such as Port Hardy, the radio operator cannot see all the runways on which he is required to control vehicles. I believe this creates a dangerous situation. We know it came about as a result of the Cranbrook air crash when a snowblower was on the runway at the time an aircraft attempted to land. I suggest that was not the fault of the radio operator but was a problem with airmanship, a problem with the plane, a problem with the communications system. But it was not a flight service problem. I suggest that Mr. Justice Dubin erred because sufficient information was not given to him.

The Department of Transport compounded the error by adding responsibilities for the radio operator which he could not reasonably fulfil. When radio operators reported that an error had been made, that they had inadvertently not given advice to the vehicle on the runway, the Department of Transport suspended some of them. The Department has been using tapes of communications in order to gather evidence against those people. I think the Department must remove the requirement that the flight service radio operator has to control traffic that he cannot see. That responsibility must be put back on the pilot and the vehicle operator who are the two people responsible, with assistance from the radio operator.

If the Department of Transport continues to suspend people who report operational problems and uses the tapes to reinforce that by gathering evidence, it is going to create a double-edged problem. People will not report operational deficiencies and that will jeopardize the safety of the system. This will also jeopardize the communications system because the radio operator will begin to be careful about what he puts on the tape.

I suggest the Department must eliminate the mandatory requirement for controlling vehicles by flight service radio operators. It must guarantee, through the collective agreement and through Department of Transport policy, that the tapes will never be used for disciplinary action but will simply be used, in co-operation with employees, to remove operational deficiencies. That is imperative in order to ensure the integrity of the air safety system.

I want to mention briefly the air accident which occurred in Cincinnati yesterday and to seek the co-operation of the Department of Transport to provide the information that I as a Member of Parliament want and which I am sure every other Member wants. I want the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) to lay before the House information on the flammability of fuselage interiors in major commercial aircraft.

I want the Minister to provide information about the production of poisonous gases from the combustion of material in the aircraft fuselage.

I should like the Minister of Transport to also lay before the House an explanation of firefighting equipment, fire-detection equipment, training programs and safety procedures in major commercial aircraft terminals.

I should also like to know what is available in terms of personal fire protection equipment for passengers on major commercial airlines, and the adequacy of such equipment.

The tragedy in Cincinnati has created a situation that I know has concerned many people for a considerable period of time. It does not relate to the present accident. It reminds me and others of situations which have occurred in the past but have been left fallow. I believe the Department and the Minister made commitments to produce such material and it is time it was laid before the House.

I should like to move to another area of chaos in the system, Mr. Speaker. The Dubin Commission talked about the Air Accident Investigation Tribunal. That legislation was ready before Christmas; it has been delayed long enough. That Bill must be brought before the House before we adjourn in June so that we can look at it over the summer and be prepared to move on it in the fall.

I want to talk briefly about the community of Bella Bella and the Indian Heltsuk Band. The Indian name of that community is Waglisla. Millions of dollars are spent in that community by the federal Government on the 1,000 people who live there. It is provided through Band administration funds, unemployment insurance, economic development—it all hinges on a reasonable transportation system. The transportation system is not being used to support federal Government investment in that community. The transportation system and the Department of Transport, by their failure to act, are jeopardizing a great amount of taxpayers' money.

I should like the Minister to explain to the House how he can fail to fulfill the Government's constitutional responsibility to the Indian people. There are 1,000 people in that community whereas in the community he mentioned on the other island, which is half a mile away, where the Government is allowing the airport to be built, there are only 60 people. The hospital, the doctors and the places where medical evacuations will occur are all in the community on the Indian side. The basic thrust of economic development is on the Indian side. The taxpayers' investment is on the Indian side. There is a constitutional requirement to support Indian people and there is also a logic for doing so.

It just defies description that the Minister can avoid putting in that facility. That community has needed for years and years a roll-on, roll-off ferry. The ferry pulls in and out but there is no roll-on, roll-off facility. That simple fact has driven the cost of living up in that community beyond what any of us would ever tolerate, and it has also meant, because of the failure to develop an adequate transportation system, that the mail system is chaotic and that their economic development is bound for failure. It debilitates any attempt at constructive planning and development in that community. The Minister said it is a bit of cowardice that we have not made a decision on it. It is one of the most cowardly acts which I have seen in this House. It is an absolutely wrong-headed, counterproductive process which the Government is taking today. I would urge the Government, if it does one thing before the people of Canada, in justifiable outrage, throws the Government out of this House, to please put in that facility. Do something which is morally and appropriately correct.

My constant theme when speaking about the transportation system has been Bella Bella, because it illustrates problems in coastel communities. However, that problem extends from Alaska to the 49th parallel in small communities up and down the coast of British Columbia. The Minister mentioned the provincial Government. The provincial Government has failed to fulfil its responsibilities to communities which are not native communities. So be it. That is a provincial responsibility and it has jurisdiction there. However, this Government has a responsibility to Indian people which they are failing to deliver.

For the edification of the Minister and the officials of the Department of Transport, I would like to point out that there is a community at Klemtu, the Kitasoo Band. Several hundred people live there and are struggling with air transportation, which is irregular and very expensive, and a mail system which is disrupted. They cannot function properly with Band administration and with economic development because of the failures in the transportation system. They could not get their kids home from boarding school one Christmas because the ferry does not go in and out of there on a regular basis. They need an appropriate facility and they need the federal Government to tell the Province of British Columbia: "If you accept federal assistance you must provide decent service to Indian communities"; or the federal Government must ensure that its responsibility is fulfilled. Klemtu is a perfect example.

Owikeno is another perfect example. Alert Bay is another. I would urge the Minister of Transport and this Government to take a very hard look at native communities from Alaska to the 49th parallel border with the United States, at how it is fulfilling its responsibility, and that its failure to fulfill its responsibility properly is jeopardizing millions of dollars which are being invested in economic development, income support systems, and Band administration in those communities. It is vitally important to remember, Mr. Speaker, that regardless of where we are today, and of where the provincial Government is today, the Canadian Government has a constitutional responsibility to support Indian people. The Government also has a rational responsibility to protect the investment of the taxpayers of Canada who want the programs to go ahead in that community.

I believe that the points I have raised on the air transportation side are extremely important. The Minister should be presenting that material to the House so that we know where we are going with it. The second issue is that responsibility to Indian communities is paramount. I hope that before we leave this Parliament there will be some action in an attempt to rectify long-standing wrongs in that particular area.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Questions, comments, answers? Debate.

Hon. Bud Cullen (Sarnia-Lambton): Mr. Speaker, I welcome the opportunity to participate in this debate this afternoon. I read with some interest and, I must say, some confusion, the motion of the Official Opposition. It is a typical Opposition motion in that it covers the whole waterfront; it covers the ball park, has everything in it that you could want, but yet has no particular focus.

I thought that possibly by listening to the address of the Hon. Member for Annapolis Valley-Hants (Mr. Nowlan) we might get some idea of just where the focus would come. I listened but I listened in vain. Something I did agree with in what the Hon. Member for Annapolis Valley-Hants said was his compliment to our Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin).

In looking at the candidates for the Leader of the Official Opposition Party, I was thinking that one is bilingual, one has business experience and another has other attributes, having lived in Quebec. How fortunate they would be if they had our Minister of Transport as a candidate. He is fluently bilingual, a businessman, has had experience in the House of Commons and has the talent and ability to the extent that he receives compliments from Members of the Opposition Party. If they had one like him as a candidate for the leadership, it would be a shoe-in. We are proud of our Minister of Transport. We recognize that he also had the intelligence to pick the right Party of which to be a Member.

If one reads the motion, one sees the Official Opposition saying something like "losing control of Air Canada", and yet I wonder what is the position of the Official Opposition. We have leadership candidates telling us they would sell Air Canada which, of course, would mean no control of Air Canada. Are we to believe the leadership candidates, one day one of whom will be leading this particular caucus, or are we to accept what the caucus says, that we should have more control over Air Canada? I would be an interesting debate to take place, I am sure.

Everyone has their own particular gripe with Canadian National, Mr. Speaker, whether it is the fact that the freight is not picked up on time; but I believe the Minister hit the nail on the head when he said: "That is not the sort of thing we should be debating in the House of Commons. It should be the more important issues as they affect policy, the over-all position of Canadian National as to whether it should or should not be participating in a particular project."

One of the concerns I have is the recent move to some rationalizing, which is spreading fear among employees of Canadian National. These are people with 15 years and 20 years' experience, that kind of seniority, and they have some apprehension about their jobs because of the centralizing which is taking place, in the interests, of course, of saving money, perhaps, in the long run. I think it is those people we should be putting the emphasis on at Canadian National. People who have given CN 15 years and 20 years of their lives should not have apprehension about possibly losing their jobs because someone else has 25 years' experience, and seniority will out. I believe there is a social obligation which CN has and we should be focusing on that if we are looking in this particular area.

We have heard comments today about Canadair. I believe here again we have the destructive force of the Conservative Party at work. We are reminded of the Avro Arrow which was put out of service, in effect closed down by the Conservatives because they could not stand the heat of some problems which the Avro Arrow was facing at that time. In the long run, however, what a terrible cost to Canada! The technology which we had in place and which would have put Canada in the forefront of the air industry we lost because our technologists went to Houston and created great names for themselves in NASA. By its very nature the aircraft industry is the kind of industry which requires trial and error, requires the use of various components, in order to put the best mixture together and come out with the best aircraft. The same is true with the Challenger aircraft. To have it pilloried by the Opposition Party I believe does a disservice to the Canadian people who are endeavouring to make this work.

I was surprised to hear today the Hon. Member for Ontario (Mr. Fennell) blithely say "Close it down, shut it down", because Canadair is having problems at the present time. That surely is not the approach, Mr. Speaker. Surely the approach is to do what we can to preserve this particular enterprise and make it a success. It was interesting to hear the Hon. Member for Ontario comparing figures about what the Government of the Province of Ontario and the federal Government have done with respect to loan guarantees for Chrysler, and how Chrysler is proving to be a marvellous success. All of a sudden that is a good idea. But it was not a good idea at the time as far as the Official Opposition was concerned. Fortunately, we did not panic and took the moves which were necessary in order to preserve the company, yes, but, more importantly, to preserve jobs, something which is important to Liberal Members of Parliament. I would hope they would also be important to Opposition Members. Now they seem to be applauding the actions we took at that particular time.

When I talk about Tory tactics of destruction, I think of questions asked by the Hon. Member for Vancouver Centre (Miss Carney) where she selectively pulled something out of a particular report and said: "Well, the planes are useless during many weeks of forest fire season; the planes are supposed to get water but the water is covered with ice". She went on to say that because she was from British Columbia she had spent a good deal of time in the Yukon and Northwest Territories and knew this. What she neglected to mention is that that is not the height of the forest fire season in the Yukon and Northwest Territories.

Like her, I have spent time not only visiting, as she apparently did, but I actually lived in that particular area for more than a year and know something about freeze-ups and break-ups and times when fire hazards are at their peak. We know the peak is in July and August when the lakes are free of ice and when these particular water bombers can do the job they were designed to do. Neither did she make reference to the fact that they can be filled up with water on land or that chemical retardants can be used in the event it should be necessary during the freeze-up period. The plane does not require open water for operation. Fully loaded, it can take off from hard-packed strips as short as 3,500 feet. So there are actually a greater number of airfields available to the water bomber than to the aircraft presently in use, which requires a 5,000-foot runway for its operation.

We are looking for international markets, Mr. Speaker, and to Canadair's credit they have found international markets. But bad mouthing and criticism of the sort we have had recently does not do a great deal to help us move into international markets.

On May 29, for example, Canadair signed a multimillion dollar contract with Lockheed-Georgia Company of Marietta, Georgia. This contract calls for the Canadian aerospace firm to provide components for the new Lockheed C-5B military air transport. The U.S. Air Force plans to buy 50 of these aircraft. Canadair will build the aft cargo doors, the ailerons, the leading wing edges and other components of the new plane. This is the kind of initiative we want to encourage because it means a $200 million contract and 700 Canadian jobs between now and 1986. If we close down Canadair, Mr. Speaker, not only would we not be participating in this kind of contract, but that money would not have been available to the Canadian economy.

As I indicated, Canadair manufactures the water bomber. It is a twin-engine amphibian used mainly to fight forest fires. Seventy-four have been sold to customers in eight countries, including France and Spain where it is widely used. The federal Government and six provincial Governments recently announced plans to assemble a fleet of firefighting planes using the CL-215. Here again is an excellent illustration of co-operation between the provincial and federal Governments. There is direction from the top, not a lack of direction as the Opposition motion seems to indicate.

Canadair has built more than 3,900 aircraft since 1944, 580 of which are supersonic. Canadair's project to develop the Challenger as a wide-body transcontinental business jet should be encouraged. Admittedly we have to look at any problems which may arise, but there are ways of being critical without putting it in the public eye to the point where people in the international markets look at this and say: "Well, we are not going to buy that; it looks like a turkey". That makes the task of Canadair all that much more difficult. So far 76 of these planes have been delivered.

The motion seems to suggest a lack of control, Mr. Speaker. But recognizing the problems in companies such as de Havilland, Canadair and others, and recognizing there has to be some measure of business expertise brought to bear to help out these particular corporations, the Government announced the Canada Development Investment Corporation as a means by which this kind of business expertise can be brought to bear so that companies having difficulties will have access to this kind of assistance.

We know that Canadair and de Havilland are incurring significant losses. Of course, this is partly due to the international recession. A great deal of CDIC's time has been spent on financial and marketing analysis, particularly in the case of Canadair. A short time ago the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. Gray) tabled his supplementary estimates which include provision of $300 million for the aircraft companies. This amount will ensure that these two companies continue to operate in the normal course of business while the process of analysis continues. The goal of CDIC is to put both of these companies on a basis which will allow them to continue to operate without substantial requirements for equity investment for their current products. The CDIC legislation stipulates that new programs and products would require new investment.

There have been some suggestions that this is being done on the quiet or that there is not enough information available. Well, the Minister responsible for the CDIC has advised the chairman of the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs that he would appear, along with officers of CDIC, before the Committee on June 7 to provide a report on financial and other business matters concerning Canadair and de Havilland. At the same time CDIC officers will appear before the Public Accounts Committee to discuss Canadair.

Members will agree that a start has been made in the right direction by CDIC to strengthen these aviation companies to ensure that Canada is an international competitor in this very important high-technology industry for many years to come. Surely that objective is more appropriate than simply throwing up your hands, as the Hon. Member for Ontario would do, and saying: "Just close Canadair down, it's a loser". Well, thank heaven that is not the Liberal Government's approach. I am sure the employees of Canadair will be interested in hearing the Hon. Member's comments. I hope he is not speaking for his Party, if anyone can in fact do that at the present time.

There are occasions, Mr. Speaker, when a key industrial enterprise requires Government help to help it overcome difficult times. If such companies have the capacity to recover, with some help, then it makes little sense to see them fail. Not only would the Hon. Member for Ontario see them fail; he would push them into failure.

No, Mr. Speaker, that is not the way we should be operating in this country, particularly when we are talking about difficult industrial enterprises such as the air transportation field. What the Government needs is a professional, experienced and commercially-oriented source of advice on how to handle specific situations in the future. Of course, not every company seeking help should get it. CDIC will operate in close contact with the business and financial community. It will, naturally, be a useful source of advice on business conditions. It will provide advice on where Government assistance might be beneficial or what financial alternatives are available in each situation.

Some two years ago, in an address I gave to the Sarnia Rotary Club, I indicated that we had to stop this ad hoc approach to helping industry, be it Dome, Chrysler, Maislin, Canadair, de Havilland or whatever. People come with best intentions and an obvious need for assistance and decisions have to be made by provincial and federal Governments almost on an ad hoc basis. As a matter of fact, that is pretty well the way it has been done. Here we have the CDIC which will bring about a more professional business-oriented approach so that companies, if they seek help, will know what the ground rules are. The Government will also have some guidelines established so that it will know which companies it should help and those it cannot.

I welcome the pragmatic response by Government which I think CDIC provides to the needs of this particular day. It will help manage better what the Government already owns. It will provide important advice. It will be an extra means for Government to help rebuild our industrial sector at a time when Governments throughout the western world are taking strategic steps in key areas, such as aviation/aerospace, microelectronics and computers, and telecommunciations, to ensure they can participate in these vital industries of the future.

If I have a fault to find with this motion of the Opposition, and there are many faults to find, it is the fact that there is a lack of focus. I think that was borne out by the Hon. Member for Ontario because, when the Minister of Transport responded in a positive and, I thought, effective way to the questions which were being asked, the Hon. Member for Ontario immediately retreated to another ground and said; "Oh, yes, but you did not mention this and you did not mention so and so". It is not the motion of the Minister of transport that we are debating today; it is the motion of the Official Opposition. The Minister was confining himself to the subject matters raised in that particular motion. I think it was appropriate that he should do so, trying, at least, as best he could, to give some focus to the debate, which we have tried to do.

I think the Hon. Member for the New Democratic Party who last spoke discussed many of the local situations and issues. However, in the final analysis, he was saying to the federal Government; "Direct the Province. You people have done something. You are making money available in British Columbia in these particular areas to do these particular things. Now tell the British Columbia Government that it must take some initiative and do the sorts of things that the federal Government is doing. It is putting money, expertise and help into these areas; but it does need some help from the provincial Government". So his chastising, if you will, was primarily directed at the provincial Government rather than at that which the federal Government has been doing.

Rather than losing control, I think the federal Government, through the creation of the CDIC, through the help which it has given to various industries rather than closing them down, through a whole series of actions, has shown that it is taking control in the areas where it should be moving and leaving to the private sector that which the private sector can do so well.

Hon. Ron Huntington (Capilano): Mr. Speaker, it is Friday afternoon and here we are again—

Mr. Flis: The House is full.

Mr. Huntington: —with a full House and the Minister present, and I appreciate that very much, Mr. Minister. I have been quite interested in the nature of the Minister's remarks. He gave us a little lecture. He said that a Crown corporation, with shares held by Government, must have an economic purpose governed by legislation and be accountable to Parliament through a Minister. As we have moved to a corporatist society, we have gone way beyond those definitions. If we are limiting ourselves strictly to some 57 Crown corporations under the legal definition, then that is one thing. If we are discussing the creation of non-governmental bodies with unbelievable powers outside the realm of surveillance, questioning and inquiry on the part of the House of Commons, then that is quite another.

What is happening is that a subgovernment outside of the purview and examination of parliamentary committees is running quite out of control. If it has an economic purpose, that is one thing. I am standing on this side of the House with a Party which has been responsible for the incorporation of many of our Crown corporations. Back in the history of that evolution there was such a need on the part of Government because infrastructure had to be built and the scales of economy and the marketplace just were not sufficient to cover the investment needed on the part of the private sector.

We seem to have gone through a series of phases in history in terms of Crown corporations. We have gone beyond the phase when we needed the CNR and when the Government had to help the CPR. Unlike the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) and the NDP, I am glad that we have a private sector railroad and a government sector railroad. They keep each other in balance and they should keep each other from causing a monopoly to develop, because nothing in the way of infrastructure affects our lives more than transportation. One must only consider how the villages of the United Kingdom opened up when canals were dug to connect one group of tradesmen to another group of craftsmen. This competition led to the industrial revolution. That is the way it has been. We have gone through rail, through ships, slow ships and now high-speed ships, from bulk handling into container handling and unitized handling. It has been necessary for the CNR to go into fields where it has had to become involved with Cast.

I guess what is troubling so many of us in the House of Commons and people in the country at large concerns the question of accountability. Where is the accountability and the answerability? Who is impressing upon these non-departmental bodies, these Crown corporations and these Ministers to whom they are supposed to be answerable, how well the investment is being used?

We hear of the great need for a mix between the private sector and the Crown sector or Government sector. That is fine. What is so different is that the private sector is held accountable by the tax collector. The Income Tax Act states that one can do this and one cannot do that, and that one will pay taxes. If one has losses in the private sector, there is no way out. The bank and the debtors call one to account and one is out. However, those rules do not apply to the Government sector, the Crown corporation sector and the Crown agency sector.

What we are doing here is giving these Government entities a special set of rules. We are giving them Her Majesty's agency status. We are incorporating them under Acts of Parliament and under the Canada Business Corporations Act, which is an entirely different ball game. They are exempt from the rules and laws of the Provinces. They can borrow money at the cost of the Government. They have Government guarantees and are exempt from the rules and laws of the land which apply in terms of competition, because in Government agencies, with agency status cartels are completely legal. One cannot touch a Crown corporation, or a Government body which has agency of Her Majesty status, that performs acts that would put any of the rest of us in jail or bring us before the courts.

What has been done? The Government has overbalanced, overloaded and tipped the whole pile of wood over in favour of non-accountability. Human nature being what it is, whether it is in the private sector or in the Government sector, bureaucracies being what they are, all that is involved is power. To me, there is very little difference between bureaucracy in the private sector vis-à-vis bureaucracy in the Government sector or bureaucracy in a large corporation. It is all power. The great untaxable thing that we are facing today is the privilege and enjoyment of power over people, over money, over decisions and over assets. The rule books are different.

Therefore I can tell Your Honour, and I hope the Minister is listening, that there is no way the private sector will survive unless we hold this subgovernment sector to account to the House of Commons through House of Commons committees. It is accountability, answerability and value for money concepts that are so important today. I cannot understand why the Government keeps resisting the need for stronger parliamentary committees which can deliver a high standard of accountability.

I will say to the Minister through Your Honour that in no way, shape or form does the Opposition or do the backbench Members of Parliament want to interfere with the Government's right to govern. In no way, shape or form is that the objective. In no way, shape or form is the objective for control to be in the House of Commons. However, if the system is to survive, and if there is to be competition which forces better ways of doing things to turn the nation into a more productive one, and to give us the drive and the environment to do things better and to achieve our place in world markets rather than through cartels and monopolies, then there will have to be some answerability and accountability through the House of Commons system.

I would plead with the Minister to support some of the action and very hard work being done by Members on all sides of the House in this direction. For instance, the Special Committee on Standing Orders and Procedure has been working in this area for some nine months. If we do not bring about that condition of answerability and accountability and we let the rule books and accountability standards remain so uneven, I can envisage the private sector disappearing altogether.

For example, we heard the Minister compliment Air Canada. If I was the Minister of Transport I would be very proud of Air Canada as a Crown Corporation. But may I say that some years ago, back in the Thirtieth Parliament, I was lobbied by Air Canada pilots who told me of the terrible conditions and bleak future of Air Canada if the top personnel was not changed. We were fortunate as a country to have Mr. Taylor come in as Chief Executive Officer. He knows how to run an airline and every other airline in the world knows it. He does a first-class job and, in my opinion, he is a first-class executive. But how can a competing private sector airline survive with the advantages that Air Canada has? The Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) just told us this afternoon that Air Canada has had to pay approximately $56 million in dividends. Last year, Air Canada was involved in a $38 million loss in its last quarter yet it was able to cut its tariffs and selling prices by a very substantial amount in the peak season.

Mr. Pepin: To fill the planes.

Mr. Huntington: To fill the planes. It was losing $38 million but was in a position to cut its tariffs in the peak season in order to fill the planes when the private sector airline could not do it. In that same period the private sector airline lost its working capital. If it were not the subsidiary of a corporation as large as Canadian Pacific investments, it would not exist.

I have been suggesting in the House for some time now that if we were not able to cancel the debts of Canadian Pacific Airlines in the same way we cancel Air Canada's debt—if the equations were not in balance—there would be no way for the private sector airline to compete with a Government subsidized airline.

I speak of CPA because their head offices are in my region. I want to see that payroll survive as, I am sure, the Minister does as well. The factors must be balanced. It is easy for us in the House to cancel the debt of Air Canada. It is the only airline in North America that need not worry about having so much equipment backed up against the fence. It is the only airline that can survive while having so much equipment unused.

On the other hand, CP has one of the best records in the world in terms of air time on their equipment. They must make full use of their equipment because they cannot survive unless they implement every single productivity trick in the book in terms of productivity. This involves the management of capital, capital equipment and personnel. The personnel at Canadian Pacific have a different spirit because they realize the delicacy of their jobs.

I will say again to a very reasonable Minister of Transport—as long as he does not bring in the Crow—that if this equation is not addressed I must come to the conclusion that it is a deliberate Government policy to peel the orange of Canadian Pacific Airlines with all that will do.

I can suggest what the Chief Executive Officer of Air Canada will do if the orange of Canadian Pacific Airlines is peeled. He will turn that very efficient national airline into an airline of box lunches. I remember from a conversation with him some years ago that the cost of proper service and the better treatment of passengers according to the standard that was being set by a competing airline was causing him to scratch his head in terms of the P&L. He questioned if he could get into this box lunch approach instead of the fancy service which is provided on the airlines. I agree with that in some respects but it is competition that causes good standard of service to be delivered.

My plea to the Minister is that he recognize this serious situation. While I have his attention let me say that I do not know how a company like Canadair with the problems it has can advertise in this manner. I do not know how they can do it or what purpose it serves.

While I am on the subject of Canadair, I remember back in 1979-1980 when the problem of the quality of the order book to justify the original investment was brought to my attention. This comes back to the problem of behaviour in that subgovernment and the need for accountability. At that time an order for 25 Challengers was laid on my desk. The person who gave that order in Europe did not have the wherewithal, the means or the intention to buy 25 aircraft. Yet those bookings were the justification for the Government's investment in the first place.

I would like to see Members of Parliament become far more knowledgeable and supported by sound research abilities in our accountability committees. I believe Members should have some expertise to enable them to examine the parameters of and justification for some of these investments. No matter which Government is in power it will be presented with Cabinet documents providing options on which decisions will have to be made. However, I believe that it is ultimately up to us as the elected directors of the shareholders of Canada to do a better job in that respect than is being done presently.

The issue surrounding the water bomber question troubles me. The thing I love about Canada and what I suppose has attracted so many people to this country is that one could come here with nothing. One could be born in poverty, and I believe that it is actually an advantage to be raised in this country with very little in the way of material possessions. People with little gain a burning hunger to want more. Therefore people learned to work, educate themselves, save money and take risks. They may get burnt but would come back again. That is what built this country. If there is no balance in the rule book or a measure of accountability and answerability by this Government's subsector, and it is allowed to run wild, I believe that that dream which energizes so many people will be lost.

With respect to the water bombers, is it fair that because there is a threat of a plant closing down in one city of Canada to subsidize a great fleet of equipment? What does that do to all the independent helicopter operators across the country who sit idle all winter with their equipment waiting to service the provincial needs for forest fires, the mining needs, the exploration needs and other requirements? Each time a factor such as the water bomber proposal is put into the country's economy, what happens to the private sector that is waiting with its investment in a service? I am thinking in particular of a good operation at Pat Bay which has been carrying on business for years re-engining World War II equipment as water bombers. Is it now in or out of that field of endeavour? I would remind the Minister that even Bill Davis is flying a water bomber these days.

With respect to the accountability equation, for the Minister's benefit I am holding a series of reports from 1978 on. A colleague of his, a former President of the Treasury Board and Minister of State of Economic Development, was deeply involved in this package, as were other Members on his side and on this side. They were calling for an improvement in the accountability equation on this subgovernment.

I would appeal through you, Sir, to Members on the Government side to pay a lot of attention to this because I think it threatens our whole system and society. We are delivering power and privilege to a few people who move through this world. There will be examples coming down very soon of privileges being abused. We are incapable in this House of holding that whole subgovernment sector to account. There has been report after report from the Standing Committee on Public Accounts on this issue, which issue is not being heard by the Liberal Government. It is my plea through this very reasonable Minister of Transport, who has had many bouquets lavished on him today, to carry this concern through because it is very serious. I would like to see us strengthen our function and the delivery of our duties and responsibilities by picking up the challenge that we are dealing with in this motion today.

In closing, if my mother were treated by my late father's employer in the way the Member from Regina's mother was treated when his father died, I would be fighting louder and harder in the socialist camp than I do on this. There is a message for the private sector and for the government sector.

I disagree very much with the Hon. Member for Sarnia-Lambton (Mr. Cullen) when he cries out for special privilege for employees employed in Crown corporations and government structures. What about the majority of people employed in the marketplace where the filters of competition, use of capital and accountability apply? I do not think people working for the Government, for CNR, or for Air Canada should enjoy a special privilege. If we are going to talk about equality and equity, let us make available the same privileges in pensions and benefits and everything else more widely across the land. Let us remove this special privilege from those who work our corporate schemes.

Could you let me know how much time I have left, Sir? I see you are indicating that my time has expired. I thank you for your tolerance, Mr. Speaker.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I am, of course, willing to extend an extra few seconds if the Hon. Member wishes to complete his remarks. He may be satisfied with the opportunity for questions and answers.

Are there any questions and comments?

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): Mr. Speaker, I listened with great attention to the Hon. Member for Capilano (Mr. Huntington). I know he has many valuable ideas regarding accountability. Some of his ideas I would personally like to see implemented in this institution of Parliament.

The Hon. Member for Capilano talks a lot about subgovernment. There is no doubt there is a subgovernment that is becoming more and more powerful while the elected representatives of the people become less and less powerful. There is also in our system what I would now call the fetish of ministerial responsibiity where Ministers are held accountable for everything within a vast array of departmental networks and Crown corporations. We all know there is no human being who can follow all of those activities and really be accountable for them.

Would the Hon. Member care to comment on the possibility of exchanging the theory and practice of ministerial responsibility for the greater accountability of this subgovernment, as he calls it quite rightly, to committees of Parliament?

Mr. Huntington: Mr. Speaker, that is a very astute question raised by the chairman of the Standing Committee on Transport. It is humanly impossible for a Minister to be responsible for the activities within Crown corporations and agencies over and above the activities within his own department. How are you going to judge and evaluate the service of the activities to the objectives as stated? Who will help us with that evaluation?

I think the concept of mininsterial responsibility has to remain, but we also have to move to the concept of deputy minister responsibility in terms of management and in terms of holding the management of departments and corporations accountable for the manner and the efficiency with which they serve, the mandate and the objectives for which they were incorporated to serve. That is where we, as Members of Parliament, fall down in my opinion. That is why I think the accountability equation or system that we in the House have to use has to be separated into two concepts—policy and ministerial responsibility, and management and deputy minister responsibility. I hope there is some move toward a comprehension and an agreement in that area.

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): Mr. Speaker, I think the Hon. Member's idea coincides pretty closely with my own with respect to ministerial responsibility. The Minister should be responsible for policy decisions but the administrative responsibility should be assumed and charged to the administrators.

In recent days and for some time we have heard many arguments that the Auditor General should have more access to the books of Crown corporations. I would like the Hon. Member's reaction to that. I have a great concern. If all of these Crown corporations are audited by the Auditor General, it seems to me we are creating another of these bureaucratic empires and I wonder in the final analysis who will audit the Auditor General.

I wonder whether the accountability about which the Hon. Member talked in his speech of these Crown corporations to well staffed committees of Parliament would not be a much better route to go. I ask that question because every time we create a stronger central agency it seems to me we slow down the decision-making process.

Mr. Huntington: Mr. Speaker, I would think the Auditor General of Canada by mandate and by Act passed in this House should be the auditor of any Crown corporation or agency requiring a draw on the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada. If it is a Crown corporation that is earning its own way, behaving properly and paying a dividend to its shareholders—the people of Canada—that Crown corporation could go to the private sector. I certainly think the Auditor General of Canada who is an officer of the House—he is the one Officer we have—should have access to the working papers of all audits on Crown corporations and non-departmental agencies. I think we, as Members in this House, should have access to that kind of information. The Auditor General has to be judicious in how this information is fed to the committees.

The other point made by the Hon. Member was that the standing committees of the House and the four new key accountability committees should be well staffed with research people in order to give us the ability to match that of the bureaucracy around us. I think we are lacking in that area and if we are going to improve the accountability and the answerability equation, we need a higher standard of talent serving us and our needs.

Mr. Evans: Mr. Speaker, I was interested in listening to the Hon. Member for Capilano (Mr. Huntington), as I always am. I am intrigued by his feeling of outrage that many of us feel and which I think most Members of Parliament feel when we think the taxpayers' interests are not being well represented by agencies of the Crown, such as Crown corporations. I would like to say at this point that I think it is terribly outrageous. I know the Hon. Member's committee, the committee we share, the Public Accounts Committee, on which I cannot participate as much as I would like, but the committee of which I am chairman, the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs, is looking very carefully and will be over the next couple of weeks at the question of Canadair. It is outrageous that every taxpayer in the country is being asked to invest up to $200 in a corporation which has not yet been able to show that it is a commercially viable operation. I think it is outrageous and I think we should look very carefully at it. I am sure over the next three weeks that we will.

It seems to me that there is another anomaly with regard to Crown corporations which we have to consider carefully. I am referring to the fact that the management of Crown corporations does not suffer the same financial loss when the corporations are not profitable as the management of private corporations. Crown corporations can run a perpetual loss. For example, take the case of Canadair. Management salaries not only remained at high levels but continued to increase at a time when the corporation was losing literally hundreds of millions of taxpayers' dollars. I find that offensive and unacceptable. I would like to ask the Hon. Member whether he agrees with that position.

Mr. Huntington: Mr. Speaker, I agree totally with the Hon. Member. The only way as Members of Parliament we can do something about the outrage many of us feel is through improved accountability committees and by arming those committees with good research staff to allow us to dig in and open up, through a good process of disclosure, the many inequities and abuses which are partly human nature but also have no checks and balances. I plead with everyone in the House to start delivering some responsibility back to those people who elected us.

Mr. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): Mr. Speaker, I have a very brief question for the Hon. Member. What would he think about the suggestion that the Auditor General be the chief adviser to the Standing Committee on Public Accounts, or whatever audit committee the House might have, if that committee gained the authority and the staff necessary to go into the details of the audits of various Crown corporations and departments?

Mr. Huntington: I would not be in favour of the Auditor General being the chief adviser to a parliamentary committee. He is a parliamentary officer with a huge mandate to perform. I think the committee would need a strengthened research centre with a very able research director who could call on the office of the Auditor General to provide areas of expertise needed for the wide variety of subject matter with which it would deal.

I think the office and staff of the Auditor General should be available to other committees for specialized problems, in addition to those committees being able to hire specialized expertise for special problems. I would not be in favour of the Auditor General being the chief adviser. He has to be held to account as well.

Mr. Burghardt: Mr. Speaker, I wonder whether the Hon. Member would care to indicate how far he feels Parliament should have authority over Crown corporations. I know he has been talking about the Auditor General's role and his accountability, but I am concerned, for example, about CN and its operations. If it intends to consolidate services, which could mean the consolidation of personnel and perhaps even the laying off of personnel, how much authority in the Hon. Member's mind should be exerted by Parliament in such a case? Or should we have any authority at all in that area?

Mr. Huntington: Mr. Speaker, that being a policy matter, it would be dealt with strictly by the standing committee dealing with that subject matter. That committee is presently the Standing Committee on Transport. It is a policy matter.

The accountability equation has to be dealt with in a non-political or an apolitical environment, and then we marry the two. In that way we could then get at the political matter of policy and the accountability equation could be brought into it in subcommittee meetings. I am personally against interfering with the productivity of Crown corporations by political pressure. That debate needs to be enlarged in inter-committee work and in inter-House debate.

ELECTORAL BOUNDARIES READJUSTMENT ACT

FILING OF OBJECTION TO REPORT OF COMMISSION FOR PROVINCE OF NOVA SCOTIA

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Before recognizing the Parliamentary Secretary, it is my duty to inform the House that the objection signed by the Hon. Members for Prince Edward-Hastings (Mr. Ellis), Kindersley-Lloydminster (Mr. McKnight), Dartmouth-Halifax East (Mr. Forrestall), Western Arctic (Mr. Nickerson), Don Valley West (Mr. Bosley), Ontario (Mr. Fennell), Hastings-Frontenac-Lennox and Addington (Mr. Vankoughnet), Annapolis Valley-Hants (Mr. Nowlan), Capilano (Mr. Huntington) and Leeds-Grenville (Mrs. Cossitt), has been filed with me pursuant to Section 20 of the Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act, Chapter E-2, Revised Statutes of Canada, 1970, to the report of the Electoral Boundaries Commission for the Province of Nova Scotia.

If the House agrees, I suggest we follow past practice and print the text of the objection as an appendix to this day's Votes and Proceedings. Is that agreed?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 62—TRANSPORT POLICY

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Nowlan:

That this House rejects the Government's policies with respect to transportation, which have caused concern, chaos and confusion, as demonstrated by its loss of control over Crown corporations such as Air Canada, CN and Canadair and that the political preference, secrecy and negligence that it has shown in its dealings with such private concerns as Maislin, and condemns the Government for its failure to demonstrate fairness, accountability and leadership in its activity.

Mr. Jesse P. Flis (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, we have had Hon. Members from both the Conservative Party and the New Democratic Party excusing themselves this afternoon because they had planes to catch. They stood up in the House to criticize Crown corporations, but I wonder which mode of transportation they are using to return home today. Yes, they will be using Air Canada and will probably praise its efficiency.

First I would like to thank the Hon. Member for Annapolis Valley-Hants (Mr. Nowlan) for using Standing Order 62(11) to bring this topic before the House of Commons. It has allowed all three Parties to put forward their views. I always considered the Hon. Member to be a very fair Member of the House. I found him very fair in committee and in the Chamber, but I am sorry I cannot say that with respect to his motion.

Looking at the motion one would think the whole country is falling apart. He has lost points with me there. To save time I want to point out that there is a lot of control over Crown corporations; if anything, perhaps too much control. There is accountability and there is leadership. The Transport portfolio encompasses some 22 Crown corporations. They fall broadly into the two categories about which we talked this afternoon. The first category is commercial Crown corporations, such as CN, Air Canada, NTCL and Pilotage Authorities. The second category is comprised of commercially oriented Crown corporations which are dependent upon appropriations, such as VIA, Ports Canada and the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority.

Despite a great deal of publicity surrounding Crown corporations in general and criticisms thereof by the Auditor General and others, by and large Transport Crown corporations work very well. I believe it is very fair to say that all Crown corporations serve the country well and that steps are constantly being taken by both the corporations and the Government to improve the operation of corporations, their structure and levels of service, to the over-all benefit of Canadians and at reasonable cost to taxpayers where appropriations are required.

The Government for its part has undertaken to improve the situation for both major Canadian railways, and in so doing for the shippers of a wide range of commodities, by proposing revisions to the Crow rate, which I will not get into now.

The Government has recently undertaken to streamline the operations of major ports by introducing a restructured ports organization under the Canada Post Corporation. One of my tasks when I was appointed Parliamentary Secretary was to monitor the Canada Ports Corporation Bill through committee and through the House. The Government introduced Bill C-153, formerly Bill C-123, to further enhance the efficiency of its approval powers for Crown corporation ventures and to enhance the accountability mechanisms available under the many constituent Acts of the corporations.

The corporations themselves are continually updating their managements and organizations to meet the demands of the time. Both CN and Air Canada experienced losses in 1982, as did many private corporations, and both CN and Air Canada have been undertaking adjustments which are intended to reflect today's realities and place them back in a profitable position. These adjustments have often had to be made despite severe opposition in the communities affected, and in some instances losses continue to be absorbed by the corporations as a social responsibility.

CN, for example, is rationalizing its money-losing express operations and consolidating its complimentary trucking operations. At the same time it continues to operate services for which it loses money, such as Terra Transport, as a social obligation. Air Canada is trimming its over-all capacity and has recently streamlined and pared its management organization. It continues to look for sources of cash such as sales or leases of aircraft currently surplus to its needs. It has recently received approval to reduce its shareholding in a subsidiary corporation at considerable profit.

At the same time Air Canada is also looking at ways in which its long-term cash flow can be improved. This sometimes requires upfront capital expenditures such as investment in a new headquarters building in Montreal which, though some claim to the contrary, represents the best deal for the company in both the short and long-term, and advancing of other expenditures such as the refurbishing of cargo aircraft to meet 1985 Canadian and American noise standards in 1984 instead of 1985.

Northern Transportation Company Limited continues to provide an excellent, reliable, safe and efficient service along the Mackenzie River system, in the Beaufort Sea and on the west coast of Hudson Bay and continues to make a profit. In 1983 it is also absorbing substantial losses at the request of the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) to continue to provide service at the Athabasca system.

The other Transport corporations continue to function well and largely without controversy, including the Ports Corporation and its 15 ports, the nine Harbour Commissions, the Seaway Authority, the Pilotage Authorities and the bridges.

The motion deals with the Government's loss of control over Crown corporations. Let me demonstrate, Mr. Speaker, that there is already a wide range of control mechanisms in place through general and specific statutes in force. Of overriding importance to all transportation companies, including Crown corporations, are general Acts such as the National Transportation Act, the Aeronautics Act, the Railway Act and the Canada Business Corporations Act. Still of the general nature but with application to Crown corporations alone rather than to all enterprises is the Financial Administration Act.

Finally, many Crown corporations are the creators of their own constituent Acts; examples within Transport Canada are the Air Canada Act, the Canadian National Railways Act, the Canada Ports Corporation Act, the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority Act. The Financial Administration Act and, where applicable, the constituent Acts and the Canada Business Corporations Act contain many checks on the freedom of Crown corporations to act without prior Government knowledge and approval and many methods through which the activities of Crown corporations can be influenced or controlled by the federal Government.

It would be worth while to examine some of these control mechanisms in more detail in order to illustrate how they do in fact give the federal Government effective control over its Crown corporations. Perhaps the most basic form of control is through the appointment of the chairman of the board, members of the board of directors and the president and chief executive officer. I was very pleased to hear the compliment paid by the Official Opposition to the Chief Executive Officer of Air Canada. The Air Canada Act and the Canadian National Railways Act specifically reserve these appointments to the Governor in Council. Even in the case of Canada Business Corporations Act Crown corporations, it is the practice of the federal Government to reserve appointments of chairmen and presidents for the Governor in Council. In all cases, Governor in Council appointments of the above nature are for a fixed term with provision made for extension at the Government's discretion. In addition, all such appointees can be removed for cause by the Governor in Council during their term of office. It works both ways.

As a means of exercising practical day to day monitoring of Crown corporation activities, there are frequent unofficial contacts between the Minister of Transport or his senior staff and the President of Air Canada, Canadian National, and other Crown corporations reporting through the Minister of Transport. This serves the Government both as a tool to sense changes in Crown corporation behaviour and financial performance and as an informal means to pass on the wishes of the responsible Minister to the chief executive officer.

The capital budget process is one of the most visible and effective means for the federal Government to control the activities of its Crown corporations. Through the Financial Administration Act, each self-sufficient Crown corporation is obliged to submit a full capital budget for Treasury Board review and Governor in Council approval. Financially dependent Crown corporations are obliged to submit not only a capital budget but also an operating budget. Both Air Canada and Canadian National submit capital budgets for approval through the Minister of Transport.

In submitting capital budgets, Crown corporations must satisfy the federal Government in terms of adequate detail regarding plans and proposed expenditures. The Government can insist on information for subsidiaries as well as for the parent corporation. For example, when Canadian National submitted its 1983 capital budget for approval late in 1982 the company provided, at the Government's request, financial information and planned expenditures broken out for subsidiaries as well as for the parent corporation.

The approval given by the Government to a capital budget is very specific; that is, the Crown corporation has very little latitude in terms of reallocating expenditures and has no authority to exceed the approved expenditure level. If the Crown corporation wishes to do either of these, it must approach the Government with a request for approval of a revised budget. Air Canada has recently done this.

A major control mechanism for the federal Government is the requirement that Crown corporations obtain Government approval before borrowing. Of course, this would include borrowing by the corporation from the Government, but the Government also has full authority over Crown corporation borrowing from the private sector. The over-all borrowing plans for Crown corporations must be included in the annual capital budget, and are therefore subject to general Government approval. Specific borrowing within the ceilings established in the capital budget is also subject to subsequent approval.

All Crown corporations are required by the Financial Administration Act to submit an annual report which is tabled in Parliament as a public document. Air Canada and Canadian National have consistently met the strict deadlines for submission of annual reports outlined in the Act.

Under their respective Acts, both corporations' annual reports are automatically referred to committee where company officials frequently testify before the estimates as to how the companies have done recently. I would like to compliment all of the members of the Transport Committee for the effective way that they question these officials when they appear before the Transport Committee. I think this is a true sign of parliamentary control and parliamentary accountability.

While the federal Government believes that annual reports provide a good snapshot of corporate performance on an annual basis, it is felt that interim information is also needed to monitor performance adequately. For this reason the Financial Administration Act, Section 75(4), now states that:

> A corporation shall make to the appropriate Minister such reports of its financial affairs as he requires.

This very broad authorization gives the Government full power to inquire into the financial affairs of Crown corporations and to take remedial action if required.

In order to ensure the protection of Parliament and the public as the ultimate shareholder of Crown corporations, the federal Government pays close and careful attention to the appointment of auditors. Accounting firms of unimpeachable reputation have been engaged for Air Canada and Canadian National to verify the books of account and records maintained in their support for both companies. The federal Government believes that the reports of these qualified professional auditors are an indispensable tool in monitoring the financial performance of its Crown corporations.

Ministers, their officials and the corporations themselves have been engaged for a year now in intensive study and discussions about the appropriate balance of policies and procedures needed to enable the Government to exercise its responsibilities while ensuring that these corporations are as free as possible to operate in a corporate milieu. Over this period a variety of structures and processes by which the federal Government can give direction to Crown corporations has been developed and modified in response to changing circumstances. In the Air Canada Act, there is a specific and clear provision for direction to the company. Section 8 states that the corporation shall in the exercise of its capacities and the carrying out of its activities, comply with direction of a general nature given to it by order of the Governor in Council.

I see, Mr. Speaker, that you are giving me the signal that my time is now up.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): It being five o'clock, I do now leave the Chair. The House stands adjourned until eleven o'clock Monday morning. May I wish Hon. Members a good weekend.

At 5 p.m. the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 62—PARLIAMENT

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Leader of the Opposition) moved:

That this House condemns the Government for its deliberate and persistent undermining of the Parliamentary process, for its flouting of Parliamentary traditions and for its continuing attempts to reduce Parliament and Parliamentary government to an irrelevant appendix in the formulation and application of major national policy decisions and the expenditure of public funds, and demands that the Government immediately reverse its attitude of regarding Parliament as the private preserve of the Liberal Party thus hastening the restoration of respect for and the dignity of this institution.

He said: For a long time, Sir, we have been hearing about the erosion of Parliament. We have been hearing it from the Auditor General, hearing it from the media, from committees of this House, from the Opposition, and occasionally from a courageous backbencher on the Government side. It does not appear as though any of the warnings, admonitions or demands have had any effect whatsoever.

In spite of sweeping rules changes in 1968, it is clear that Parliament has never suffered so much by the neglect and abuse of Government as this Parliament at the present time. The rules changes have had the effect of weakening Parliament's control of the expenditure of public funds by removing the study of the estimates by the Committee of the Whole of this House. Certainly when the amount of business Parliament must contend with is considered, some measure was needed to relieve the pressures of those burdens on this House. But unfortunately, the net effect of all of the measures taken has been to weaken Parliament's control over the fiscal operations of this country.

One of the major problems is that Government has been operated by people who in their hearts really do not believe that Parliament is necessary. The Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) has made it clear in numerous statements that Parliament is an extraneous irrelevancy to the business of Government. The Prime Minister considers Parliament a nuisance. Indeed, in his some 15 years in office I dare say that he has not participated in debates in this House more than half a dozen times. Even more clearly has this appeared in the contempt with which he and his Government consistently address this House.

Let us just look at a few events in recent months. The Prime Minister unveils the Government's policy on the Cruise missile in a letter to the press, with an accompanying note to suggest that in the interests of public information this had better be published. So we are now at a point where, from the august precincts of the Prime Minister's office, diktats are handed down for publication in the media for the enlightenment of a docile public. No tin pot dictator of a banana republic could have handled it more in accordance with the traditions of such institutions. Parliament has never been made aware in detail of the Government's policy position on the Cruise. We have not been given an opportunity to have the facts in this House. We have not been granted permission, even though we requested it on more than one occasion, to have before us the weapons testing agreement signed with the United States. This has never been ratified or debated by the elected representatives of the people in this House, yet this is a matter about which hundreds of thousands of Canadians have shown a well founded concern.

Canadians are concerned about the tergiversations, for want of a better term, of the Prime Minister in international policy, a policy which the House has not had the opportunity to debate. Instead of coming into the House and explaining the role and posture of Canada as an evenhanded broker between the United States and the Soviet Union, he elucidates his position in a long and detailed interview with a friendly Toronto newspaper. When he is pinned down on his criticisms, implied and direct, of the President of the United States, he attempts, unsuccessfully as it turns out, to backwater.

The point is that the debate is not carried in the House, where procedure, tradition and the highest demands of parliamentary freedom would suggest that it be carried on, but, rather, in the press, where the Prime Minister cannot be questioned, cannot be replied to, and his views cannot be tested.

What is the position of Parliament when the Prime Minister, acting strictly on his own, for purely political reasons, casts the nation in the dubious role of umpire or arbitrator between superpowers locked in nuclear confrontation? The concept of an evenhanded approach to the United States and the Soviet Union has never been debated or approved in the House. What does it mean? Are we to equate the actions of the aggressor with those of our friend and neighbour, our ally in NATO? Are we to erase all distinctions between the super slave power, whose aggressivity has cast a pall over Europe, Asia and Africa for 35 years, and the actions of the United States, whose foreign policy is aimed at preserving world peace and stability? The Prime Minister obviously finds such distinctions to be oversimplistic, yet they are the distinctions which reside in the hearts and minds of Canadians who will resent being placed in a position of putting the United States and the U.S.S.R. on the same footing in Canadian foreign policy. None of this has ever come before the House for debate and resolution. Time and again, Parliament has been bypassed by the Government, frustrated by the continuing absence of Ministers and the continuing evasions on the Government benches.

There was a time when there were a few Ministers opposite who were honest and forthright in their answers to questions, but they are now all part of the same slippery bunch. We have had legislation dumped on us, literally dumped on us, poorly conceived and badly put together and, at the very best, ill-timed.

A year ago, for the first time in the House, the bells rang out for two weeks, an explosion of frustration and bitterness at the cavalier treatment of Parliament. At that time we were faced by a demand from the Government to rubberstamp an energy Bill containing elements of no less than 12 pieces of legislation, a demonstration of contempt for Parliament unequalled in many, many years.

We have had budgets tossed casually into the House and revised before the ink was dry. We have had budgets brought into the House, the only purpose of which was to revise the egregious errors of previous budgets. We had a proposal for the Crow rate thrown together in obvious haste and then altered before we had a chance to come to grips with it, and now altered again.

These Bills are writ on water. Parliament is not the same kind of quick lunch joint where the menu is changed every half hour. This is the public business. We have had Opposition days altered on a moment's notice by a Government which does not give a damn. Never has the public business been so poorly organized, so inadequately presented, so incompetently put together as under this Government.

• (1120)

Mr. Nielsen: What do they want Parliament to do? Lie down and roll over? That is what they would like.

Regardless of the Prime Minister's opinion of Parliamentarians, Parliament will not do that unless, of course, the Government adopts the attitude which was adopted in Ghana when that new democracy modelled after Westminster was formed. The Government did not like the opposition there so it abolished it and threw half of them in jail. That is not going to happen here.

The sheer length and complexity of the Government business is another element in this Government's continuing contempt for the institution, its traditions and clear and central position in preserving the freedom of Canadians. No Government has ever before in our history been so interventionist. This Government's centralizing policies have imposed upon Parliament a nearly insupportable burden of legislative quackery and parliamentary fiddle-faddle that no Parliament should have to put up with.

Because of this Government's inertia and incurable propensity to cover its tracks, we have had to take time out to extract the painful and distressing story of the clandestine arrangement between a former Minister and his colleagues in the Gillespie affair. We have been seized with the regrettable and sorry affair of another former Liberal Minister now before the courts. We have had the issue of a chairman of a major Crown corporation under investigation. In each of these areas the Government has thrown a smokescreen around Parliament's right to know. The official cover-up has gone into play.

In spite of the whiff of corruption emanating from that side, we are put off with the excuse that the matter is under investigation. These exercises in insider corruption within the Liberal Party do not serve to enhance the image of the Liberal Party.

There are Members on that side who are just as scandalized and just as disillusioned as we are in these matters. There are honest Members on the Government side. They are decent, hardworking Parliamentarians with an abiding respect for the institution and its traditions who are shocked and put off most strongly at the way in which Parliament is being degraded under this Government. They are concerned, as we are, at the parallel Government which is the personal creation of the Prime Minister, a caricature of Government, run by his flunkies which the Prime Minister has instituted to carry out his personal ideology. It is referred to by the Auditor General as a Government within a Government. The spidery network of Crown corporations and agencies, holding companies and quasi private corporations operated from the Prime Minister's office constitute a threat to the freedom of this country. What he cannot do by the front door, he is trying to do by the back door.

Parliament stands in the way of the socialization of this nation against the popular will. Therefore he is attempting to bring it about extra-legally and extra-curricularly by using public funds and the efforts of men who are sworn to carry out the wishes of the Prime Minister. This man has more court favourites than Louis XIV and each one has his own private little kingdom to operate at the taxpayers' expense.

It is true that they go through the motions of bringing these matters to Parliament, but well after the fact. What will the House of Commons do with 1,400 gas stations? Perhaps they will serve as a place of employment for Grit flunkies after the next election.

Continuing contempt, disregard, neglect and abuse of Parliament has been the hallmark of this Government. From the buffoonery of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lalonde) in front of the TV cameras with his budget papers to the backing and filling of the Prime Minister in delicate international matters of primary concern to Canadians, Parliament has been told to take a back seat.

It has been made clear to this House, elected to serve and to represent Canadians in the same way as the Prime Minister was elected, that we have all been red circled. This House has been kept sitting here longer than any Parliament in the history of this country, including the "long Parliament,' of Charles I. We have not had a Throne Speech in nearly four years. What does that mean? It means there has been no blueprint of Government plans, no blueprint of Government intentions, so that Parliament has been kept deliberately in the dark. I would venture to suggest, Sir, that if Parliament is in the dark it is not more so than the Cabinet itself, whose members are usually the last to know about the Prime Minister's intentions.

Parliament has been inhibited in carrying out its functions. This House has been prevented from acting on major national issues, such as unemployment, high interest rates, bankruptcies and the sliding of the economy down the slippery slope of recession simply because this Government has removed its expenditures from the control of Parliament. As a result, Canadians everywhere have suffered. They have been subject to policies of economic attrition. They have been made to pay in lost jobs, lost income, higher taxes for the inefficiencies of an arrogant Government wrapped in a cloak of its own isolation. We are now in the clearly unconstitutional position of going into the fourth year of this Parliament without a new session, another indication of the Government's contempt for those traditions and laws which have made parliamentary democracy the envy of the world.

Only Parliament stands in the way of the Prime Minister's attempt to create a kind of corporatist state in this country. In order to do this, it is necessary for him to break or to bypass the power of the House of Commons, weakened though it may be. He has been working very hard at doing so—

Mr. Gauthier: Who wrote that nonsense?

Mr. Nielsen: —and the time has come to call a halt and bring this Government back to the realization that it is not going to be able to govern without the consent of Parliament.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nielsen: This is the purpose of the motion before the House now, perhaps the most serious ever to come before the House of Commons since I have been here. This country cannot operate in freedom with Parliament shunted to the sidelines, as it has been under this Government.

I described the motion before the House as extremely serious, and the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Pinard) laughs. That is one further indication of the mental attitude that exists over there with regard to the Government's contempt of this institution.

Mr. Pinard: Ring the bells again, Erik.

Mr. Nielsen: My friends, if the Government abuses the parliamentary process again as it did on the occasion when it tried to smuggle 12 pieces of legislation under the covers of one Bill, we shall adopt any means available to us to prevent that kind of abuse.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Gauthier: That is arrogance.

Mr. Nielsen: Another Member, the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) shows the same degree of contempt for this institution about which I am speaking. Liberal Members do not understand this place. That is very sad, Sir.

Some Hon. Members: Come on. Erik.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for Yukon has the floor.

Mr. Nielsen: On the grounds of competence alone, Parliament cannot be a dumping ground of badly conceived legislation, half-baked budgetary attempts that must be constantly revised, and disorganized House business. Parliament is entitled to be treated with respect. This is a lesson which the Government and those who support it seem unable to learn. The Prime Minister must cease and desist his attempts to create a parallel Government to wrest control of the purse strings from the House of Commons and to relegate Parliament to a back seat in the decision-making process.

One of Parliament's primary functions is to prevent the excesses of Government. This Government has done everything possible to inhibit Parliament's role. The purpose of this motion is to attempt to bring home to the Government and to the Prime Minister that he must cease his performance as some kind of sun king, that he cannot expect to create important foreign policy in the media, particularly when it involves a role of which Parliament has never approved and threatens our relations with our allies. This Government and those who support it must be brought to realize that Parliament's role is not to be diminished or curtailed but rather the opposite.

Canada is not ready for a one-man government, even if the Liberal Party is. God help us if the country ever reaches the stage which the Prime Minister is attempting to bring about. Parliament is now at a crisis in its long history in the country. If the Government, which has attempted to control the media, the private sector and to downgrade the role of the Provinces, continues in its determination to govern without Parliament, then the Government has voted in favour of its own terminal decay.

I hope Hon. Members on the Government side will rise to participate in this debate and, in so doing, justify if they can—and I challenge them to do so—the number of occasions since they came back in 1980 where they have bypassed and thwarted the parliamentary process deliberately by reason of the fact that they regarded it as some kind of private, personal perserve of the Liberal Party.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Pinard: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen). He complained at the beginning of his speech that Parliament did not have an opportunity to discuss international affairs. He knows very well that under the rules this matter can be raised on an Opposition day, as is the case today. This subject could have been chosen and would have been much more appropriate and serious. Could the Hon. Member explain why this subject was not chosen for today, and where is his critic for international affairs?

Mr. Nielsen: I suppose the President of the Privy Council can be forgiven—and I say this with generosity and without offence—simply because he has not been here long enough to appreciate the standard annual practice which existed in this place prior to the election of the present Prime Minister, where external and foreign affairs were debated on an annual basis on days that were put up by the Government. Earlier when I first came here two days of Government time were allotted back to back for the purpose of debating external affairs. I must say that as a result of that kind of practice there was a far closer harmony, which there should be, between Opposition and Government benches on external and foreign affairs, because that is the manner in which we should appear on the international stage when it comes to that exceptional policy area.

When the Prime Minister was elected that changed. The President of the Privy Council indicated the practice when he first came into the House. He will also admit that it changed with the changes of rules. Now, because the Government—and I say "Government" because its majority passed these changes—allotted us a specific number of days, it expects us to use our days as it sees fit. They are our choice, not the Government's choice. It would like to determine the subject matter of those days, but that is one of the freedoms that still rests with us. I hope that adequately answers the question of the President of the Privy Council.

Mr. Pinard: Not at all, Mr. Speaker. Once again the Hon. Member for Yukon has led us to believe that the change in the rules which gave the Opposition 25 Opposition days per year was passed because of the Liberal majority. That is simply not true. That is not the case.

Mr. Nielsen: It was passed by closure.

Mr. Pinard: It was not even passed by closure. No, that is not the truth. What we are talking about here is what happened in December 1967 or 1969.

Mr. McGrath: It was 1969.

Mr. Pinard: It was before I was here, 1969. It was by unanimous consent of the House of Commons that those rules were adopted. I invite my hon. colleagues to check the record.

Mr. Nielsen: You had better do that.

Mr. Pinard: The 25 Opposition days were supported by the entire House of Commons in 1969. When they talk about closure, they are talking about Standing Order 75A, 75B and 75C. That was not part of the package. He should know more about the business of supply which was supported unanimously by the House of Commons in 1969.

The Opposition now have 25 days a year in which to select a subject of their choice. They have dealt with other matters but it seems they were not interested in choosing international affairs. The Hon. Member said that it was up to the Government to use its time. Perhaps we could have afforded more time if the bells had not rung for 17 days during the last two years. Despite that, this morning could have been a very good day to be used by the Opposition to deal with international matters. That subject was there to be taken by the external affairs critic of the Tory Party.

The Hon. Member did not answer my questions. Why did they not choose that important subject this morning, and where is their critic on the subject?

Mr. Nielsen: To answer the question very, very quickly, I dealt with this subject in the light of the motion. I have dealt with the very subject which the President of the Privy Council is criticizing me for not dealing with. Let him not speak to us about 25 days. Let him not charge us with holding up the business of Parliament when that business was so abused by the process they attempted that our only recourse was to ring those bells. Let those opposite not talk to me about holding up the parliamentary process when they themselves in 1963 kept the government of the day of then Prime Minister Diefenbaker for 49 days—a record in the House of Commons—by filibustering tactics, forcing the government of the day to go to Governor General's warrants to get enough to pay the civil service. Let not the accusers over there talk to me about holding up the parliamentary process.

Mr. Kristiansen: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Nielsen). While my colleagues in the New Democratic Party and I join with him in much of his criticism of the arrogance of the Government and what we also regard as its contempt for Parliament and for public opinion, I must say that I found it passing strange to hear the Leader of the Opposition and the Leader of the Conservative Party in the House of Commons condemning the Government for its failure—a criticism which is justified—to bring before the House in a Government-sponsored debate or motion, for instance, the question of the agreement to test the Cruise missile in Canada. I found it particularly strange in view of the comments of the Conservative defence critic, the Hon. Member for Victoria (Mr. McKinnon), on April 29, 1982, when my Party gave up its allotted time to enable a defence and foreign policy debate. At that point the Hon. Member for Victoria said:

> The second recommendation is that there be no Cruise missile testing in Canada. I have many reasons as to why we cannot and should not support such a recommendation. However, I will limit myself in this short and gratis time to saying that we—

He was referring to the Conservative Government of 1979-80.

—agreed to the modernization of nuclear weapons in 1979. The present government has concurred in the decision which was taken. We should fail in our commitment in the worst possible fashion if we were now to decide that we would not allow this vehicle to be tested in our skies.

If it was in fact, as his defence spokesman said, the policy of the P.C. Government to reach these agreements to test the Cruise missile and other weapons systems in Canada, how can the Leader of the Opposition now play the role of the pot calling the kettle black and simply accuse the Government, which is also guilty, of refusing to recognize its proper role and showing contempt for Parliament?

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker, how much time do I have left? There is no way that I could adequately answer the Hon. Member as he deserves to be answered in the short time remaining. The fact is that as short as it was when we were in office for that seven months, it was our Secretary of State for External Affairs who was part of a government which brought accord to the two-track policy that is now being followed by the Government. Our policy on Cruise testing is known. It is succinct and it is public, and the Hon. Member knows that.

Since his coming into this House, I have noticed that he is prone to twisting, distorting and changing colour in order to suit the public opinion of the day. That Hon. Member's opinion cannot be accepted on any matter. All he does is twist, ride and distort for the purpose of pushing the so-called socialist position on anything; always grandstanding, like the Member in front of him. He is always attempting to grab an issue and then be very annoyed when he cannot do so.

That is understandable because (a) they are Members of the New Democratic Party; therefore, that explains a lot; and (b), they are in deep trouble in this country so they grab at anything they think will lift them up by their bootstraps, if they can see a way of doing it. They will grab on to anyone's coat tail. It does not matter whose coat tail it is, as long as they think it will give them a lift in the public opinion polls.

Mr. Smith: Mr. Speaker, I would just point out to the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Nielsen) that he has a short and selective memory. During this session of Parliament, in the Summer of 1980, the Government did in fact allocate two days of Government time to a debate on international affairs. That, of course, was before we got into the constitutional filibustering and the bell ringing. If there has been any breach of parliamentary tradition, it has not been on this side of the House.

Mr. Nielsen: I realize my time is short, Mr. Speaker, so I will keep my answer short. That intervention amounted to a crock of rhubarb.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The period for questions and answers has expired.

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I must confess that I found the answer of the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Nielsen) to my colleague's question almost tantamount to temporary insanity. I cannot believe that he would attempt to worm his way out of the clear and unequivocal statement that is contained in the answer with regard to the Conservative position as it applies to the testing of nuclear weapons. It brings the debate down to a level I had hoped it would not reach.

I had intended, as you will appreciate, Mr. Speaker, to stay directly within the confines of the motion. I will, of course, do that, but I must draw to your attention in response to the comments by the Leader of the Opposition that any normal, reasonable individual reading page 16745 of the Commons Debates for April 29, 1982 would find the following words:

The second recommendation is that there be no Cruise missile testing in Canada. I have many reasons as to why we cannot and should not support such a recommendation.

Those words are attributed directly to the Member speaking on behalf of the Conservative Party, a former Minister. He was speaking to a motion put down by this Party in opposition to the testing of the Cruise missile. He went on to say:

However, I will limit myself in this short and gratis time to saying that we agreed to the modernization of nuclear weapons in 1979.

He was speaking about the Conservatives. I want this to be listened to. Again I quote:

The present Government has concurred in the decision which was taken.

Any person with any degree of intelligence reading that could come to no other conclusion but that the Conservative Party was in agreement with the attitude and policy direction of the Government of the day, the Liberal Party. It bears out exactly what we have been saying for the better part of the last three years, that there is no difference. On major issues, there is no difference between the attitude and policy direction that would be taken by the Conservatives over and against the attitude and policy direction that has been taken by the Liberals.

For the Leader of the Opposition to rise with such indignation and attempt to leave the impression that the Conservative Party was opposed to Cruise testing and that my colleague's very well taken statements were somehow or other not an appropriate reflection of what was said by the spokesman of the Conservative Party in 1980 is very difficult for those of us in the House of Commons to absorb. I held him in higher esteem than that. I find it very difficult to imagine what possessed him to rise and make such an obviously inaccurate statement.

Passing on from that, there is an element of concern that must be expresed about the general attitude that prevails within the House of Commons. There is a misunderstanding on the part of many people of the role of the House of Commons. Because the misunderstanding has been held for a long time, the role of the House has deteriorated. People believe that because one Party gains a majority, it therefore has carte blanche to do whatever it believes, to bring forward at any time whatever measures it believes are appropriate, and that the balance of the House of Commons, the Opposition in particular, are being obstructionist if they in one way or another try to stop the Government from passing what the Opposition may consider to be illegitimate. I know that you, Mr. Speaker, do not adhere to that view of Parliament. I suspect there are others who do not adhere to it.

The Government has the right to bring forward whatever legislative proposals it deems advisable in its so-called wisdom. However, the Opposition also have certain rights and obligations. It is the right of the Opposition, in as constructive a way as possible within the rules, to attempt to stop the Government from passing that which it believes is inadvisable. It has the obligation to do all in its power to keep the Government from putting in place laws that it believes will be of long or short-term harm to the country as a whole.

Much of the aggravation that has developed in the House of Commons of late has centred around the role of the Opposition and the way the Opposition approaches its tasks and obligations. The most recent example is the ongoing debate over the Government proposal to change the Crowsnest Pass freight rates. I do not intend to deal with the substance of that because that would not be in order. However, I want to make reference to the way in which that and on other occasions other legislation has been brought forward.

The Government will take one of two principles that may find favour as a question of principle with the House of Commons and do as it did in this instance by including two matters of genuine concern across the country. For example, there is the revitalization of the railroads and the disposition of the dominion coal lands, both of which as a matter of principle the majority in the House of Commons would agree ought to be dealt with. How they should be disposed of would become clear as the question was put before the House.

The Government in this instance, however, as it has in other instances, has taken an absolutely unacceptable measure and lumped it in with the other two, making it extremely difficult for Members who are attempting to do their job diligently and well to vote with a clear conscience on the principle of the Government's measure. The Government's measure in fact contains three principles, two of which may well be acceptable and one of which is totally unacceptable.

That is an abuse of Parliament and it is the kind of abuse that worries me. That is the kind of abuse which causes legislation that is unacceptable and which may have a long-lasting, detrimental effect, to go through the House of Commons and become law. It happens because the Government wants to sneak through something which is very contentious and potentially harmful along with measures that are somewhat less contentious and, if properly handled, would be beneficial.

There is no one in this House who disagrees with any proposal to upgrade the transportation system in this country. No one would disagree that as a matter of principle that ought to be pursued. No one in the House of Commons is prepared to deny that it is time we dealt with the dominion coal lands to determine how they should be utilized and who should have jurisdiction over them. To bring forward each of these measures in separate pieces of legislation—they are not tied together and are not dependent one upon the other—would make good sense, and that is what the Government ought to do.

No one denies the Government's right to propose changes to the Crowsnest Pass freight rate, but that action is not a matter that need be dealt with in conjunction with the upgrading of the transportation system or the disposition of the dominion coal lands. It can and ought to stand on its own, as a matter of principle.

While the position of this Party would be diametrically opposed to the position likely to be taken by the Government and the Official Opposition on the question of the Crow rate, it recognizes that it is the right of the Government to make whatever proposal it deems necessary for its own purpose. It is the obligation of Opposition to do what it can to make sure the things it does not agree with or believes will have a long-term, detrimental effect, are stopped.

I say to you, Mr. Speaker, dealing with that one aspect of the way the House of Commons operates, that there is an abuse of Parliament. It is not the kind of abuse about which the Leader of the Opposition was speaking, but in my opinion it is a serious abuse. It is an abuse which stems from the Government wanting to get certain things done and attempting to push them through with other matters that, if at all related, are only marginally related. The Government must look seriously at its tendency to put into what is now commonly called an omnibus Bill—although it may not adequately apply to this—a number of things that are at odds or are not related. Members of Parliament have the right to have matters of principle put before Parliament in a clear, concise way, a way that is not obscured or fogged, a way that enables them to deal with questions singly and vote upon them as their conscience and knowledge dictate.

You know, Mr. Speaker, as I do, that the whole subject of complicated questions has been before Parliament since the beginning of Parliament. The Government of the day—and I suspect this is not an attribute solely applicable to this Government but to many other Governments that have done likewise—may choose to ignore the important principle that questions can be resolved by the House of Commons singly, as a matter of conscience and as a matter of principle. The Government ought to rethink its position on this principle.

There is another abuse which flows from the way the business of the House is being conducted of late. That is the question of asking the Opposition to pass legislation that it has not seen in a single day. I wish that we did not have to do that. It is difficult to accept that Members of the Opposition, without actually having seen the legislation, should be asked in advance of its even being brought forward to give a commitment to deal with it with one day's debate. I do not see that as a useful addition to the way in which Parliament operates and I urge the Government to recognize that it creates problems rather than solves them.

I appreciate that there is a need, on matters of a somewhat less controversial nature, to look at ways in which the Government may proceed with its business in an orderly manner. I do not think the Government should draw the conclusion from that that every single matter it brings forward can be finalized within a time period that it sets down and which is acceptable to it alone.

There are other questions that begin to draw from the value of the House of Commons. A practice has grown up of late that Ministers of the Crown do not make statements in the House. How often have we read in Saturday's newspaper or watched on Friday night television or listened to a radio newscast and realized that a Minister has sneaked across to the Press Gallery at 4.30 on Friday evening to issue a statement of importance without the Opposition being given an opportunity to respond to it and without its being put on record for public consumption at a time when it would be possible to put our positions on the subject forward simultaneously. There are certain Ministers who do this on a regular basis. They tiptoe across, without a word to anybody, and fill the ears of the press full of rhetoric. By seven o'clock on Friday night when the journalists have a chance to see what the Minister has to say, they have to try to track down a Member of the Opposition to get a response to a statement that the Opposition had not heard or has had no opportunity to study. What is the point of making statements by Ministers available to Cabinet, which of course gives the Opposition an opportunity to rebut or enter into some small debate, if that practice is to be misused by not being used at all? That is an area where there has been serious abuse of Parliament.

That is not the practice in Westminster, Mr. Speaker. I recall being at Westminster representing this House of Commons at the time of the Falklands crisis. A statement was never made outside the House with regard to that very crucial issue of the time. There was always an announcement that the Minister would be going to the House of Commons to make a statement within moments, and that the Opposition would be able to question the Minister. That is the way public business should be conducted. That is the way debate should be conducted. It must take place inside the House of Commons where the public can view it through television, can hear about it through other media, and can see the responses from the Official Opposition and the New Democratic Party to a clear and concise statement made publicly by Ministers in the proper forum. It is an abuse when the Government does not follow that practice.

Then there is the question of Government expenditures. The Government decides it is going to go ahead with a change to the Crow rate but instead of coming to Parliament and proposing it there first, it advertises the program all across the country at public expense, without having had approval and with no indication that it might become law. It spent tens of thousands of dollars of public money on a program that, when it finally came before Parliament, was substantially different from the program it proposed in the first instance and which it attempted to sell to the people of western Canada. That is an abuse of Parliament. There should be no advertising by Government of its programs until after those programs have been brought into the House of Commons and dealt with.

That, in my judgment, is the sort of thing we should be dealing with. The questions put are questions of fundamental rights. No one denies that the Cabinet, being the Government, has the right to bring forward whatever proposals it deems necessary for the future of this country. However, equally no one can deny that it is not only the right but the obligation of Parliament to deal with those questions in the House of Commons and to dispose of those questions in the way in which Parliament as a whole feels is appropriate and necessary. The adage that it is Government's right to propose and Parliament's right to dispose must be held to be of vital importance.

It is time that this Government, like all Governments, began to understand that to gain a majority at the polls does not give any Party the right to do whatever it pleases, notwithstanding the parliamentary process which is in place. Just to have a majority at the polls does not give a select few individuals, chosen by the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau), any proprietary rights over the democratic system established to safeguard the people of Canada from a dictatorship which could be set up. I say to you, Mr. Speaker, in looking at this motion, that I feel there is a place for this kind of debate. It is an important motion and it is important for the reasons I suggest. I believe it is a vitally important motion because I believe that in fact Parliament has become somewhat less important, and I regret that that has been allowed to occur.

Mr. Cullen: Mr. Speaker, I agree with part of what the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) says, that this is a debating forum. What concerns me, however, is that we have a Bill dealing with the Crow rate and we cannot get it on to hear both sides of the issue. The New Democratic Party has already made up its mind that the Crow shall go or that the Crow shall stay. Having made up their minds to do this, Hon. Members of that Party have read into the record a series of petitions and things of that nature. We have heard their side. We have heard their opposition. However, I hardly think that that is debate. I would agree with the Hon. Member; let us bring the legislation on, let us debate it, and let the people of Canada see if the Government also has a position to make, rather than hearing just total opposition to it. Is there a case to be made for the Crow Bill or even some amendments to be made to it as it stands at the present time? Your Party would not even let it be introduced, which is not the traditional way to do things around here. Under normal circumstances—and I have been here 15 years—I can think of about two or three occasions when people have refused to allow a Bill even to be introduced. I believe that is an inappropriate use of a parliamentary situation. We are hearing your side, but I do not feel we have had an opportunity to hear what the majority's side has to say about the subject.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member does not need to be reminded that his remarks should be addressed to the Chair.

Mr. Deans: I am happy, Mr. Speaker, that you brought that to the Hon. Member's attention. He tends to abuse the rules regularly. What the Hon. Member is saying, Mr. Speaker, is not factual, although it is true that, having had prior knowledge of the content of the Bill, this Party said that it did not believe that the Bill should come before Parliament. I contend that that is an appropriate use of the rules. Given that the Minister spent tens of thousands of dollars advertising his proposals, telling everyone in the land what was contained in them, I feel that once we knew what was in them, and once we recognized the immeasurable harm it would do, we had an obligation to begin by saying that we did not think the Bill should be introduced. Beyond that, however, there has been considerable time for debate.

I put to the Hon. Member honestly that there are three distinctly different principles in the Bill. No one can convince me that we cannot deal with the disposition of the dominion coal lands separate and apart from the upgrading of the railroads or the disposition of the Crowsnest Pass freight rate agreement. No one can convince me that we cannot deal with the upgrading of the railroads separate and apart from the disposition of the dominion coal lands or from the disposition of the Crowsnest Pass freight rate agreement. Nor can anyone tell me that to deal with the Crowsnest Pass agreement requires us to deal simultaneously with the upgrading of the transportation system or the disposition of the dominion coal lands.

What we are saying is that those are three distinctly differently principles. If the Government would like to go ahead with two of them right now, before the end of June, then we would be quite prepared to facilitate that. However, the Crowsnest Pass freight rate is a question of serious contention across this country, a question of great complication, which cannot be dealt with in a short period of time. We feel, given the number of speakers, given the nature of the Government's intention to impose time allocation, that we must stop it now until it agrees to at least divide the three principles. That seems to me to be the way Government ought to operate.

Mr. Cullen: Mr. Speaker, it is interesting to hear the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain giving his views on the Crow rate agreement, and that is my point. That is the kind of debate we should have. Perhaps it should be divided into three parts, I really do not know.

Mr. Deans: Let it go to committee.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Cullen: The Hon. Member is clapping. I said perhaps that is the way it should be, but who will know? Who in Canada will know? If I had not asked the Hon. Member the question through you, Mr. Speaker, the country would not have known that that Party would like it divided into three parts. We have an opportunity to debate it here. Let us debate it. Let us make the decision about whether or not in committee it should be split. It is obvious that that Party has made up its mind. It is a minority Party. It has the right to stall, to block and to do as much as it can. However, there comes a time when we should have debate. That is what Parliament is all about. I do not believe that the Government is receiving its just due here in having its opportunity to debate a Bill which it is satisfied is for the general benefit, not only of the people of western Canada, but the people in all of Canada.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Are there other questions? Debate.

[Translation]

Hon. Yvon Pinard (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, first of all, I want to say that I honestly believe there is not a single Member in this House who does not have a sincere desire to improve Parliament and to make this institution one that is eminently deserving of respect, because whenever extreme actions or tactics are used by any Members of the House to undermine the parliamentary process and Parliament's credibility, I think everyone of us has to pay for this in some way, and I feel it is very bad for a country where individual and collective freedoms are as respected as they are. I want to make it clear, first of all, that within the framework of the debate on this motion, we on this side of the House are willing to listen to any constructive proposals for improving the parliamentary process and making Parliament more effective, more modern and better able to meet the needs of Canadians.

However, when we read the text of the motion itself, it is clear that it lacks substance and that it is rather partisan. It would have been easy, this morning, to use the text of the motion, especially after the speech by the Acting Leader of the Official Opposition, to make this debate a purely partisan and political one, pointing out various abuses and making this a confrontation which, in the final instance, would have proved to be sterile and would not have enhanced the prestige of this institution, and would certainly not have increased the stature of our politicians in this country.

However, I would prefer to take this opportunity to express some views on our attempts, in recent years, and especially during this session, to improve the parliamentary process, and also to point out certain specific facts which speak for themselves and will illustrate the point I wish to make, and finally, I would like to set the record straight on some statements that have been made.

[English]

I would like to start by correcting the record and I hope it will be clear once and for all. The Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) has been here for over a quarter of a century and should know what happened in 1960 because he was here and most of us were not. I hear a good friend like the Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath), who just left the chamber, supporting the affirmation made by the Leader of the Opposition when he said that the Business of Supply was forced down the throat of the Opposition through closure in the year 1960. That is misleading the House and is unacceptable. I cannot understand how Members who were here at the time can so lightly support an affirmation such as this which has been made more than once during the last three years. It is absolutely contrary to the reality, the truth and to what happened in fact.

During the speech of the Leader of the Opposition I asked that I be provided with the proper extracts from the records of the House of Commons. I see the Hon. Member for St. John's East has come back and I hope he will convey the message to his dear leader, the Hon. Member for Yukon.

Mr. Smith: Beloved leader.

Mr. Pinard: His beloved leader, I am sorry. The reference is clear and it appears on page 4230 of Hansard for December 20, 1968, when the fourth and fifth reports of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization of the House were presented and adopted by all Parties unanimously. The questions were put and agreed to. As shown in the Journals of the House of Commons at page 554, December 20, 1968, we see the corroboration of the fact that the new Standing Orders, including 25 Opposition days and the whole Business of Supply we are now applying, were not carried on division, not forced through by closure. The questions were put to the House and they were agreed to unanimously.

So I hope that once and for all the Leader of the Opposition will stop saying the Business of Supply has been imposed on the Opposition. It was a decision taken by Parliamentarians, just like the decision we took a few months ago to experiment in parliamentary reform. That was supported unanimously by Members on both sides of the House. I hope that in future the Hon. Member for Yukon, who has been here for over a quarter of a century, would stop misleading the House on this in order to try and score cheap political points when the facts are absolutely contrary to what he is saying.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, when I started my speech, I said that I would also like to put certain facts on the record. For a better understanding of what I am about to say, the public must realize that in a week in Parliament—before the present experiment, that is, last year and in previous years—only four days were available to the Government to consider subjects, bills and measures introduced by the Government. On average, the Opposition was usually given one day on which it would select the subject for debate. If we consider the time that has been spent on a number of important measures in the national interest during this session, we realize how limited the Government is in its flexibility and its ability to introduce for debate enough measures in the national interest to meet the needs of a society as diversified as ours.

Perhaps I may refer Hon. Members to the major debates we have had during this session, of which we are particularly proud. The Leader of the Opposition alluded to the fact that this has been the longest session in history, having gone on for more than three years. We are nevertheless proud of that fact, because this session has produced many exceptionally important measures that have made history and that are vital to the entire country. I am referring to what we have done in very basic and specific areas such as the Constitution, energy and the economy. As soon as we started this session, we made it quite clear that we intended to be agressive, to table major issues and introduce appropriate measures, even if they might be controversial, because we felt it was necessary for the country, that it was our responsibility as a Government, and also because we knew these measures would come before Parliament, which would have an opportunity to debate them, we hoped, in a constructive and civilized manner. Unfortunately, that has not always been the case, and I shall talk about this later on. In any case, most people are aware of what happened on certain occasions.

Take the Constitution, for instance. In his motion, the Leader of the Opposition blames the Government, and I quote:

—for its continuing attempts to reduce Parliament and Parliamentary government to an irrelevant appendix in the formulation and application of major national policy decisions—

I should think the term national policy applies particularly well to patriation of the Constitution, the Charter of Rights, the inclusion of the principles sharing, equity and equalization in the constitutional resolution, as well as a new amending formula that was adopted.

However, in order to consider this national question, we had to use . . . I am not complaining, but it is a fact we should not overlook and which explains why so often other measures had to wait their turn, and why some sessions, during which a great deal of business is considered, will tend to last longer. The debate on the Constitution, not counting the meetings of the Committee, took up 38 days of debate in the House on the various motions we introduced, both before and after the debate in committee. If we add the months of televised debate on this important subject in committee, we will realize that Parliament, which consists not only of the House of Commons and the Senate but also of their respective committees, was asked to debate a very important issue, that Parliament was therefore involved in these decisions and that in the final instance, the constitutional resolution we brought before Parliament is a resolution that was debated in the House of Commons, before the Special Joint Committee of the House of Commons and the Senate, and, finally, in the Senate. The Constitution we have now is a constitution made in Canada, but considering the issue we are debating this morning, it is entirely proper to say that it is a constitution that was made in Parliament.

To think there are people who claim that we have downgraded Parliament. I wonder how they could forget the time the House spent not so long ago on issues that are of vital importance to the entire country. Thirty-eight days is quite a long time, when we realize that the Government has four days a week, which means that in one month, there are 16 days available, on average, for considering government business. This means that for more than two and a half months, aside from the days set aside for the Opposition, there was no time for anything else on the floor of the House except the debate on the Constitution. Almost one third of the time of the House of Commons was used for the exclusive consideration of constitutional resolutions, not including the debate in committee.

Another major issue was the National Energy Program. This major debate took 112 days of Government time in the House of Commons, Mr. Speaker. Perhaps we should realize that 112 days represents nealy a full year of the time of the House, spent exclusively on energy and the Bill on our national energy policy—112 days, which means 377 hours and 22 minutes, and this in addition to the six days of debate on the Budget, which was also debated in the same period, six days that are not included in the 112 days, and neither am I including 15 or 16 days when the division bells rang in Parliament, when the Progressive Conservatives, in a manner that is totally unacceptable, systematically paralyzed the Parliament of Canada and prevented any debate from taking place.

When I said that 112 days of Government time were used to debate the energy issue during this session, that does not include the 15 or 16 days we heard the division bells, and this means that for all practical purposes, we have once more had almost nine months or a full parliamentary year devoted almost exclusively to energy.

Another vital issue has been the economy. Parliament has considered the subject on many occasions. If I am not mistaken, we have had four budgets, in addition to statements on the economy, and I may remind the House that in the previous budget, we proposed our 6 and 5 policy to fight inflation, which has proved to be a tremendous success. I think it is irresponsible and unrealistic of an Opposition Member to claim that this major anti-inflation policy was put into effect outside Parliament. The policy was debated here in the House of Commons. It was analyzed, amended and debated in the Parliament of Canada, which was asked to consider one of the most pressing issues of the moment, in the middle of a recession: how do we prepare for economic recovery and how do we fight against inflation? This was followed by the budget brought down by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lalonde), which included $4.8 billion to stimulate the economy and create jobs in this country. People who say that the major economic issues were not debated in Parliament are either half or totally asleep, or they are entirely ignorant of what is going on in Parliament or they are not being sincere, but I hardly think that is the case.

Mr. Speaker, the fact is that as far as the 6 and 5 policy is concerned, we must not forget the time the House of Commons needed to debate this policy so that we could obtain the results we have today, at this very moment, namely, that inflation is now down to 6.6 per cent, from 13 per cent in August 1981. The bank rate, the rate set by the Bank of Canada, is now 9.5 per cent. We all remember that only a year and a half ago, mortgage rates were over 20 per cent. Our 6 and 5 policy has worked, it has benefited the entire country and has produced concrete results. We realize this now. How was this brought about? By the Government, who originated the plan, but also as a result of debate in Parliament. The Parliament of Canada was asked to consider this important question, and in fact did so for a grand total of 72 days, the equivalent of two full semesters of our parliamentary year, or 236 hours and five minutes, when it debated Bill C-131, Bill C-132, Bill C-133, Bill C-139 and Bill C-125, which are directly connected with our 6 and 5 policy and to amendments to update the Income Tax and remove any uncertainty in the business world.

Therefore, if we look at three major issues—the economy, energy and the Constitution—we realize that in the Parliament of Canada, in the House of Commons and in committee, a considerable number of days and hours were spent on debate on these issues, time that could therefore not be used to consider other issues of perhaps lesser importance nationally but nevertheless vital to certain activity sectors in this country. That is why, since we have been considerate and have shown respect for this institution, and since we have allowed debate on major issues despite the Opposition's often provocative attitude, we are asking Opposition Members for their cooperation regarding debate on less controversial measures. Now what happened then? Even before we could implement the parliamentary reform which we managed to get approved by the House because of a committee that worked in good faith and the cooperation of the House as a whole, and in spite of the unacceptable objections of a few senior members of the Progressive Conservative Party, we were able to carry out the present experiment, Mr. Speaker.

However, even before we proposed this parliamentary reform to the House, I had suggested to the Progressive Conservative Party and the New Democratic Party that we have a rational debate on a number of bills. I refer to last fall, to October 1982, when I submitted a list of 16 bills to the two House Leaders of the Opposition, and more particularly to the present Leader of the Progressive Party, the Acting Leader, the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen). There were 16 bills about which I said: "Listen, the session has been going on for two years, a reform is forthcoming, a committee is working on it; let us show that we want Parliament to work, let us forget the silliness of the bell-ringing incident that you, the Progressive Conservative Party, brought about, let us forget your filibuster during the constitutional debate, and let us try to show the people that parliamentarians on both sides of the House can agree so that Parliament may work in an efficient, civilized, modern and productive manner."

The Leader of the Progressive Conservative Party never agreed to negotiate any aspect of a single of those 16 bills, neither to draw up our work schedule and to determine the length of the debate nor to decide how much time the various stages of those bills required, quite the opposite! Undoubtedly that was not in keeping with the strategy of the Progressive Conservative Party which had to come to grips with its internal leadership problems and which opted instead for making every attempt to catch the Government off guard in a vote so as to trigger an election before having to decide the fate of their leader in Winnipeg and at the Civic Centre in a few days.

It is unfortunate that the Official Opposition chose to undermine the parliamentary process as a result of its internal squabbles. It is a sad comment, Mr. Speaker, but I think that was the real cause of the shameful incidents we have witnessed. Members of the Progressive Conservative Party have been frustrated, first in December 1979 when they lost power after only 37 days into the session, and ever since in their internal leadership crisis which has dictated their approach, their outlook and their behaviour with respect to the parliamentary system. For the first time in our history, we saw a party resort to such drastic means as the bell ringing incident to prevent rather than promote debate, to undermine the very essence of Parliament, in short, to torpedo Canada's democratic system by putting an end to any constructive debate in the House and systematically preventing this institution from tackling major issues.

I conclude by expressing the hope that after my remarks Hon. Members will keep in mind the fact that we have shown respect for Parliament and that we want to do even better, but that calls for co-operation from both sides of the House and not only from the Government. That cannot be achieved without good will on the part of the Opposition, and we are always prepared to do our best so that Parliament will be ever more efficient, humane, modern and respected by the people.

[English]

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask a question. One wonders, when one hears the Government House Leader, with all of the confidence he has about the many things we are doing wrong, why he does not simply call an election and take the issue to the polls, to the people.

Mr. Pinard: That's exactly the problem.

Mr. Lewis: Why does he not do that right now? I would invite him to do it right now. Mr. Speaker, the Government House Leader has continually referred to what he feels was unanimous support for the rules passed in 1969. I want to draw the Government House Leader's attention to the book by John B. Stewart entitled "The Canadian House of Commons, Procedure and Reform", specifically to page 250. The Government House Leader has continually suggested that these rules were passed unanimously. On page 250, Mr. Stewart makes the following point:

> Six months later, on 20 June 1969, the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization fulfilled the order of the House by recommending three new standing orders: 75A, 75B, and 75C. These were adopted, without alteration, by the House at the sitting of 24 July 1969, but only after closure had been used to terminate a filibuster by all the opposition parties.

Mr. Pinard: Standing Orders 75A, B and C? You're not talking about the same thing. That is not supply.

Mr. Lewis: I would refer to Hansard for July 24, 1969, at page 11619, wherein it is reported there was a vote in which the yeas and nays were recorded. The Government, the majority, steamrollered through the closure and then on July 24, 1969, the rules were finally passed, on closure, on a recorded vote in which the Opposition of the day voted against the rules.

I want to ask one simple question of the Government House Leader. Should we change Hansard and the book by John B. Stewart, or should the Government House Leader revise his version of what happened when those rules came in, in order to comply with the truth?

Mr. Smith: You're all mixed up, Doug.

• (1230)

Mr. Pinard: Mr. Speaker, just one point. One simply has to read and understand. The Hon. Member is talking about a vote after closure that took place merely to implement Standing Order 75A, B and C. That is absolutely not what I was talking about and that is absolutely not what his interim leader was talking about in his speech. We were talking about Opposition days, the Business of Supply. That is the reform and those are the rules to which I was referring and to which his leader was referring when I quoted Hansard and the Journals.

I would seek unanimous consent to table the proper extract from Commons Debates and the House of Commons Journals that very clearly demonstrate that in fact the Business of Supply, the Opposition days, were adopted unanimously by this House of Commons. I hope this consent will not be denied.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The President of the Privy Council (Mr. Pinard) asks unanimous consent to table a document. Is there unanimous consent?

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I would be glad to give unanimous consent if first I can see the documents ahead of time and, second, if we can also have unanimous consent to table the truth in the matter.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for the President of the Privy Council to table the document?

Mr. Lewis: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There is not unanimous consent.

Mr. Smith: They do not like the truth.

Mr. Pinard: Mr. Speaker, it is unfortunate that the galleries are empty.

Let me refer to Hansard at page 4230 and House of Commons Journals, page 554, both dated December 20, 1968. Those records are public. Since the Opposition does not want the truth to be obvious today, let those interested people refer to that.

At the beginning of the Hon. Member's question he remarked that all we have to do is call an election. That is exactly the point I was making in my speech. Since this session began a little more than three years ago, the Opposition has kept exactly that in mind all the time. They were frustrated by their defeat after 37 days in the House and frustrated by the continued division within because of their leadership crisis. All they had in mind was to use Parliament to catch the Government by surprise and force an election.

That is why it is an insult today to see the interim Leader of the Opposition, who himself instigated the undermining of Parliament by ringing the bells for 16 days, come here today with a motion asking that we respect Parliament. The Opposition has been undermining Parliament. They have been stopping Parliament from working exactly for the reason indicated by the Conservative House Leader (Mr. Lewis) at the beginning of his question. He said "Call an election; that will solve the problem". That is wrong. That is bad for democracy and is bad for the proper functioning of Parliament. Under our Constitution, elections are due every four or five years. It was not a means of allowing Parliament to deal with the problems of Canadians.

Despite all this we were more than generous. We consulted Parliament at length on the Constitution. We consulted Parliament at length on energy. We consulted Parliament at length on the economy. The situation is now improving because we had respect for the institution and were able to assume our own responsibilities.

It is a shame that the Opposition today is very hypocritically saying that Parliament has been undermined. They have caused this problem and are responsible for it. Despite their attitudes, we are still making efforts to make this Parliament work and to support parliamentary reform.

[Translation]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Do other Hon. Members want to ask questions?

[English]

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Mr. Speaker, there can be no doubt that this institution is in trouble. For any further proof of that one has only to listen to the debate today. But while I believe that the institution is in trouble, I also believe that it is the responsibility of all of us in this place to try to do something about it. We have lost confidence as an institution. Parliament has lost the confidence of the Canadian people. It has become irrelevant in the process of Government and has become irrelevant in the process of accountability.

While I do not want to enter into an unduly partisan exchange with the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Pinard), I would ask him when he is making the case that the Government is not trying to undermine Parliament to explain to the House and the country why we never have a statement from a Minister in this House. Why are statements on important national issues no longer made in the House? Ministers now go across the street to the National Press theatre, downstairs to Room 130S or to other cities to have a press conference. They actually leave this place to go elsewhere to make a statement that should have been made to the elected representatives of the people in the House. That is Exhibit A to my argument and upon which I could rest my case.

I strongly believe that if the Government does not show that it has respect for, or confidence in, this institution, then that lack of confidence and respect will permeate throughout the entire land. That is the message which I will leave here. When the public see the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) writing a letter to the Toronto Star to give the Government's position on the Cruise missile, they would naturally ask why that statement was not made in the House of Commons since it is in session. The House of Commons is sitting and the elected representatives of the people are there. Its sessions are nationally televised and the national press is here. Why was that statement not made in the House of Commons under the provisions of the Standing Orders which make allowance for that type of situation?

Perhaps the reason we are not receiving statements in the House is that while Standing Order 18(4) permits the Government to make statements on major issues, it also allows Opposition Parties the opportunity to respond briefly and to question the Minister on the particular statement that he has made. I will admit that the latter part of that Standing Order is a new procedure. Previously, a Minister could make a statement in the House which had to be brief or the Speaker would intervene. Each Opposition Party was allowed to make a brief response to the statement. Our new procedure allows for questions, and perhaps therein lies the mistake. If we were to return to the old procedure through which the Prime Minister's or a Minister's statement with replies would last about a half hour, perhaps we would then have more statements in the House. I do not know but I want to give the Government the benefit of the doubt.

I say to the President of the Privy Council, the Government and its supporters that as long as the Prime Minister and Ministers make statements in a place other than here, whether at the National Press theatre, downstairs, outside in the foyer or in other parts of the country, it will, more than anything else, telegraph a message to the country that we are in fact irrelevant to the process.

I remember when the Prime Minister said in this place a few years ago: "You want to keep the House sitting because when you get 50 miles from here you are nobodies". I do not believe the Prime Minister was correct in that statement. The fact of the matter is that we are nobodies here and somebodies when we leave here. This is where we are irrelevant and this is where we are nobodies. We sit here and have to listen to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) making a statement on the Crow in Winnipeg while depriving our Members from western Canada of an opportunity to respond to his statement in the House of Commons where they are charged with the responsibility of doing so. We must sit here and watch the Prime Minister take pen in hand and write a letter to the Toronto Star to make an important statement on the Cruise.

The point was made that we could use one of our allotted days for a foreign affairs debate. I can merely repeat what the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Nielsen) said. It used to be a well established convention of the House that there would be an annual debate in the House on external affairs under Government Orders. It was a two-day debate which took place every year without fail. We are now expected to give up one of our Opposition days in order to allow for a debate on foreign affairs which would presumably give the Prime Minister an opportunity—that is the logic in the intervention—which he never had to make his statement on the Cruise. I cannot follow that at all.

The Liberals are saying, why do we not give up one of our Opposition days? Why do we not designate one of our allotted days for a foreign affairs debate? Why should we? Our allotted days were given to us in exchange for giving up Committee of the Whole and allowing the estimates to go out of the House. The Opposition gave up a great deal in giving up supply in the House. The Leader of the Opposition referred to the Liberal Opposition during the days of the Diefenbaker Government. That was a Government with 208 seats with a combined Opposition of 58 Members. If ever there was a Government with a mandate, it was the Diefenbaker Government. But that Government saw the Opposition of the day holding up supply and the estimates of the House for a period of 49 days. Parliament was held up to the point where it was necessary for the Government to go to the Governor General to get a Governor General's writ in order to meet the Public Service payroll and you, Mr. Speaker, remember it very well. It was one of those situations that brought about the reform that we now have whereby estimates are dealt with by committees of the House.

To give up the estimates, we had to be given something in return. What we were given were 24 allotted days. The Government is suggesting that if we want a debate on foreign affairs we use an alloted day. I would expect the Government would want to hear input once a year from the elected representatives of the people on foreign policy as well as allowing the process whereby it would have its own input through foreign policy debate. This should be a matter of Government business. It should be done on the Government's time; it should not be done using the time of the Opposition.

I believe we have to work together if that is possible, and I have grave doubts about that in this Parliament. I believe we have to try to restore this institution to a place where it will once again have some relevancy in the country. I repeat, we have to start somewhere. I suggest as firmly and sincerely as I can to the Government that the place to start is by having the Government come into this place when the need arises to make statements and allow the Opposition Parties the opportunity, as provided for in the rules, to make a response. I firmly believe that if the President of the Privy Council were to come to the Opposition House Leaders of both Parties and tell them that the Prime Minister had an important statement to make that he wanted to make in the House, and that if they would give an undertaking to be brief in their responses and not get carried away with the question period, I am sure there would be agreement. We would want his statement made here in this Chamber where it should be made. But there has to be a start. There is the bottom line, and I hope the Special Committee on Standing Orders and Procedure will deal with it.

One of the changes that should be made, and I say this as an Opposition Member, is to give up the question period on statements and get back to the system whereby statements were brief with no opportunity for questions except for the response of the Opposition Parties. If we get back to that process perhaps then the Government might look upon this place as being more relevant than the National Press theatre across the street or the scrum room downstairs.

I was interested in the remarks of the President of the Privy Council. I believe I did not hear him make any reference to the reform process now under way, although it might have escaped my attention because I had to leave the House for a few moments. Credit has to go to the Government for instigating that reform process in the form of the Special Committee of the House. We know why it started: it was a direct response to the ringing of the bells. But we have to ask ourselves, why did the bells ring? In my view the ringing of the bells was a symptom of the problem, a symptom of the disease that has caught hold of Parliament and is causing it to become irrelevant.

The mistake started in the first instance with the Government bringing forward an omnibus Bill on a major energy policy for this country. It had eight or nine different provisions, many of them unrelated. The Government came into this Chamber with an omnibus Bill, expecting the Opposition to buy it holus-bolus with time allocation. Once the Government did that it seems to me the responsibility was on the Chair and the Table, and I say this with respect, to treat seriously the arguments put forwarded by the Opposition to have that omnibus Bill split. If the decision had been made to split that Bill by the Chair, and there were ample precedents for it, and if the Chair had been given the correct advice—and I say that without any disrespect—then the bells would not have rung and we would not have had the problem.

This was the ultimate example in the practice of using omnibus Bills. I suspect that as a result of the ringing of the bells the Government will think twice before it brings forward another omnibus Bill similar to the national energy policy Bill.

We have a committee on procedure, a great committee. In the few moments I have left I want to speak about that committee. The Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Smith) is a member. I think he will agree with most of the things I am going to say. The Special Committee on Standing Orders and Procedure was struck and had its first meeting on June 22, 1982, just about a year ago. Since that time we have had 62 meetings. We have heard from 42 witnesses. We have travelled to Westminster where we saw firsthand how the mother of Parliament works. It seems to work very efficiently. We travelled to Washington and studied the U.S. committee system. We have heard all the expert witnesses, the so-called expert witnesses and the scholars with respect to Parliament. We have made reports to the House. We are now operating under provisional Standing Orders as a result of our third report.

This, I believe, has brought debate back into the House. Before that debates were becoming structured and stunted. We had procedures which really could not in any way be described as debate. We had set speeches. But now at least there is an element of debate. If a Member speaks for 20 minutes, that Member knows he or she is to be accountable to the House for what has been said. For a period of ten minutes that Member can be cross-examined by the House. Comments can be made on statements in the speech. I think it is a marvellous innovation. If the committee accomplishes nothing else except that, it will have been well worth the exercise. Our innovation has been admired by other Parliaments. I suspect we will see other Parliaments adopting the procedure before too long.

Of course, we are all aware of the change in Parliament's sitting hours. I will not go into that except to suggest to those who are skeptical about giving up evening sittings that they take a look at other Parliaments. The U.S. Congress does not sit at night, for example. I say to the President of the Privy Council that by giving up evening sittings I believe this Chamber has become a little more efficient in terms of debate. I do not believe that evening sittings, quite frankly, were all that productive, not that these morning sittings are more productive. I believe they are.

Mr. Pinard: Yes, they are.

Mr. McGrath: Certainly they could be more productive.

Mr. Pinard: What about Wednesdays?

Mr. McGrath: The President of the Privy Council asks about Wednesdays. We attempted to elevate Private Members' Business in this place to give it some importance in the parliamentary calendar. I believe our work is incomplete in that regard. We have taken three hours, which would normally be from five to six three days a week, and lumped them together on a Wednesday afternoon. I believe we have to go a step further. Private Members' Business has to become more a part of the business of this House, and in so doing there has to be proper planning. There has to be adequate notice given in the House as to which Bills are coming forward. The Government has to be disposed on certain Bills to allow them to come to a vote and not to get into a situation where the order is discharged and the subject matter referred to a committee, but where there can be a vote on a Private Members' Bill and it has some chance of emerging as statute law. That is the next stage in elevating the role of the Private Member in this House.

The third report of the Special Committee on Standing Orders and Procedure is the substantive report, the first two reports being perfunctory. We are now operating under the third report until the end of the year. What about the fourth report? It deals with the Speakership. I believe the House should debate the Speakership, the role of the Speaker and how the House goes about electing a Speaker. I think we can do that without making any inferences or reflecting in any way upon the present distinguished incumbent of the Chair or yourself, Mr. Speaker, as Mr. Deputy Speaker. I do not think you would be sensitive to a debate like that. I do not think Madam Speaker would be sensitive to that kind of debate. For the life of me I do not understand why we have not moved on the fourth report.

More important, what about the fifth report? I believe it to be a very important report because it deals with the new committee structure whereby standing committees are now reduced to a membership of ten. The recommendation of the Special Committee was not less than ten and not more than 15. By the way, no one envisaged that the Government would take the minimum and use it as the norm. That was not the intent at all. As a result of ten-member standing committees, it means that the Official Opposition only has three Members on a particular committee. Under the present system we have to consider the chairman of the committee as being one of the Government supporters on the committee. That is another question which is dealt with in the sixth report.

The fifth report has not been concurred in. It makes provision whereby it would be necessary under the rules for the Clerk to convene a meeting of all standing committees within ten days of Parliament sitting, so that they can get on with electing chairmen, vice-chairmen and get off the ground. That, on the basis of it, may not seem very important but let me give an example of the kind of abuse it was designed to correct.

The Standing Committee on Labour, Manpower and Immigration did not meet this year until April 19. That Committee has the responsibility of dealing with the estimates of the Department of Labour, of the Department of Manpower and Immigration and of the Unemployment Insurance Commission. For one reason or another—and the Government may or may not have good reasons—that Committee was not struck. It did not hold its organizational meeting until April 19, notwithstanding the fact that on May 30 all estimates are deemed to have been reported back to the House. Other committees were well under way by April 19, but that Committee had not even met. That should not be allowed to happen, but it can and will happen again unless the Government acts on the recommendations of the fifth report. We are waiting for the Government to stand and move concurrence or allow the chairman of the Committee the right to stand and move concurrence in that report.

Now, what about the sixth report? It is critical to the recommendations we have made. What have we done with the committee system? We have gone for the British system of select committees. Our standing committees are now select committees. Under the rules in which the Government has concurred on a provisional basis, these standing committees-cum-select committees now have the annual reports of departments and agencies referred to them so that there is an ongoing order of reference and an ongoing investigative role. As well, they are charged with the responsibility of examining the estimates of departments, the idea being that small committees would develop a degree of expertise in the area with which they are charged and a degree of collegiality which is just as important in my view as expertise. As a result they would be able to give a more meaningful examination of the estimates referred to them.

The next step which the Government has failed to address by dealing with the sixth report is the establishment of ad hoc legislative committees. A very important reform is contained in that recommendation concerning a panel of chairmen. This is something about which we have talked for a long time but have never acted upon. Why cannot the Government act on legislative committees? It would go a long way toward deflecting or reducing our concern as an Opposition Party that somehow we have been had by virtue of the Government holding standing committees down to ten members.

I hope the Government gets on with legislative committees. I believe they are very important. I hope the Government agrees with the Speaker appointing a panel of chairmen to be an impartial presider over committees, just as you are, Mr. Speaker, in the House. I hope it goes one step further and gives us adequate committee rooms with proper decorations and proper furniture so that there will be a proper sense of decorum. I believe we now have the opportunity to complete what the Government initiated in June in terms of parliamentary reform. I hope the Government is not going soft on reform. I hope the Government will see it through, but it must send a signal to the Committee that it will see it through. The signal it can send is by getting on with concurrence in the fourth report, fifth report and sixth report of the Committee.

Mr. Pinard: Mr. Speaker, at the beginning of his speech the Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) referred to the fact that there were less and less statements by Ministers. That is a reality. Under the Standing Orders we know that a Minister may—he does not have to—make a statement. I understand in not too ancient times but many years ago that perhaps the Standing Order was used more often. I am sure the Hon. Member is honest and will understand that the situation has changed somewhat since we have been dealing with major issues, as I stated in my speech, which required a lot of time and provoked in some instances what I qualified as unjustified resort to tactics such as the bells, fallacious points of order and so on that wasted the time of the House. Thus we have had less time to deal with Government business. In fact that time has been reduced to three days a week with our experiment on parliamentary reform. Wednesdays are not to be used by the Government any more. I am not against Private Members' Business, but it could be dealt with otherwise. Also one day per week must be given to the Opposition, so there are only three days a week available to the Government.

I am sure the Hon. Member understands that is a problem we have to face. When a Minister makes a statement in the House, time is required for an exchange of questions and answers. That is normal. But if we do it on an Opposition day, we hear complaints. If we do it during Private Members' Business, we hear the complaints: "Don't interfere with Private Members' Business"; "Don't interfere with time available for the Opposition"; or "Do this only on Government time". We have no time; that is the real problem we must face.

I welcome suggestions. I am sure the Committee, of which the Hon. Member is a member, will look deeper into this problem. There is a problem with available time because days are short and they are not numerous. This is one of our concerns. If we had more time we would be tempted to make more statements in the House; it would be easier.

It is frustrating when we are trying to introduce legislation and we see an Opposition Party preventing leave to introduce a Bill and having the bells ring for five hours or six hours. This time could have been used efficiently for statements by Ministers. There are Members on both sides of the House who are interested in having Parliament work and would like solutions to the problems.

The Hon. Member attended with me a seminar in Westminster in approximately 1977. He knows very well that if we compare our Parliament with others, including our mother of Parliament in Westminster, London, we have the best Question Period in the world. Of all Parliaments of the world ours is the most lively. Most of the Ministers are here. We do not have pre-notice of questions. We do not have only a third of our Cabinet showing up once every week or so. To replace statements by Ministers in the meantime, at least Hon. Members have an opportunity, if statements are made outside the House, to ask questions of the Ministers who are here every day and are willing to answer without pre-notice. Also the Opposition have 25 Opposition days. All this explains the situation, but I agree with the Hon. Member that we should try to find a solution, not only at the expense of Government time.

Mr. McGrath: Mr. Speaker, I welcome the intervention of the Minister because it gives me an opportunity to make a suggestion. He does not have to await a recommendation from the Special Committee; he can act on this himself. The proceedings of this place are now televised. Why could the Minister or the Prime Minister not make a statement at six o'clock? That is prime time. It would not interfere with the business of the House. Statements could be made at six o'clock and it would go live across the country, at least in the eastern part of the country.

Another option would be that the Government could bring the House back and make tax statements at eight o'clock. In my view it does not have to cut into its time by taking an hour out of Government business at three o'clock, as is the custom. The situation has changed with television in the House. I believe the system could become much more relevant and more meaningful and that this institution would have a role to play. I make that as a suggestion to the Minister.

Mr. Simmons: Mr. Speaker, I rise on debate. May I call it one o'clock?

FEDERAL BUSINESS DEVELOPMENT BANK

RELOCATION OF LÉVIS, P.Q. BRANCH

Mr. Gaston Gourde (Lévis): Madam Speaker, Federal Business Development Bank authorities have shown reecently that they have much to learn about consultation in the areas they serve.

For the last several years, a branch of this bank was located in Lévis, in my constituency. Last week, this branch moved to Quebec City without properly informing the public. I was personally informed on June 2 by a senior official in Ottawa that the transfer was effective as of June 1. I find it hard to understand this so-called rationalization effort when the south shore opposite Quebec City is experiencing a major population increase and when several departments are now decentralizing their activities. If public servants now admit that it was a mistake to locate an FBDB branch on the south shore several years ago, they should also recognize that some consultation would have been helped prevent such a mistake.

I therefore ask the Federal Business Development Bank authorities and the minister responsible for this agency to reconsider their position immediately on the FBDB branch in Lévis.

Madam Speaker, I feel that two wrongs don't make a right.

WESTERN GRAIN TRANSPORTATION ACT

SUPPORT FOR GILSON PROPOSALS

Mr. Blaine A. Thacker (Lethbridge-Foothills): Madam Speaker, I am asking Liberal Members to help convince the Cabinet that its decision to reject both the Gilson and the Pepin proposals was terribly unwise and must be changed. If all of the money goes directly to the railways, then the grain producers are locked even more tightly under a large multinational monopoly. The whole collection system will remain locked into the ancient horse-and-wagon mode rather than a modern system which can compete against the United States, Australia, and Argentina. The livestock producers, feeders, and packing plants will be effectively blocked from obtaining access to the vast meat market in the western United States.

The Gilson proposals were a western solution to a western problem, and the Quebec caucus was simply wrong in caving in to the propaganda of the PQ Government and the UPA union. Just as we stand and defend the $2.8 billion of equalization money which flows into Quebec, as well as the separate Quebec Pension Plan, a separate French language TV system, a separate French radio system, and official bilingualism, they must stand and defend the amendment to C-155 which would give western farmers the freedom to choose.

On Friday last in my riding, at a public meeting 230 farmers voted for the choice option versus three who voted for paying 100 per cent to the railways.

POLITICAL PARTIES

STATEMENT BY PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVE PARTY LEADERSHIP CANDIDATE ON BILINGUALISM IN MANITOBA

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Madam Speaker, the former Leader of the Conservative Party, the Right Hon. Member for Yellowhead (Mr. Clark), has again demonstrated his inability to provide leadership and to combat the right wing reactionaries of his caucus and Party. In the past he has said that he is against capital punishment but would allow it to be reintroduced in Canada. This last week he has refused to endorse the Pawley Government's courageous decision to provide bilingual services in Manitoba. The former Prime Minister is quoted as saying:

> If I had been Premier of Manitoba and faced with this threat of a Supreme Court judgment, I would have waited for it, to indicate to worried citizens that unhappily they didn't have a choice.

This indicates again his willingness to do only what is politically expedient rather than what is right and honourable. For almost 100 years the French-speaking population of Manitoba were deprived illegally of their rights. Steps to redress this wrong should be applauded and encouraged. The former Leader of the Conservative Party should recognize that it is necessary to have courage to be a leader in this nation.

AIR SAFETY

TREATMENT OF NON-SMOKING AIR TRAVELLERS

M. Henri Tousignant (Témiscamingue): Madam Speaker, some time ago, I rose in this House to speak publicly about what I consider the ridiculous and unacceptable treatment given to non-smoking air travellers.

I then said that smoke must be more intelligent than man as it must inevitably obey non-smoking signs.

Any air traveller knows how easy it is to throw a cigarette butt inadvertently in the washroom trash can. In fact, this possibility has not yet been totally ruled out in the investigation of last Thursday's tragedy in Cincinnati.

In view of this, it is perhaps time to look straight in the eye those who persist in claiming the right to indulge in their little whims, not to say the right to endanger the life of their fellow travellers.

What is the Canadian Transport Commission waiting for to ban this cannibalistic practice outright or at least to charge $20 extra to those who think nothing of endangering the life of others?

An Hon. Member: Hear, hear!

ST. LAWRENCE SEAWAY

INTRODUCTION OF FLAT RATE LOCKAGE FEES

Mr. Joe Reid (St. Catharines): Madam Speaker, the shipping industry is in its worst crisis since World War II. What has been one of the most successful transportation industries in Canada, and one of the few industries in which Canadians have been internationally competitive, is now in serious trouble. To make matters even worse, the St. Lawrence Seaway has introduced a flat rate lockage charge, introduced to discourage the use of existing smaller ships on the Seaway. However, neither market conditions nor Government support warrant the carriers getting into a new larger ship construction program. Furthermore, few of the 40 or more community ports around the Great Lakes can handle ships the size contemplated by the Seaway.

As a result, there are fewer transits on the Seaway, resulting in a higher deficit to that agency than need be, and because of this shortsighted policy, port communities are threatened with job lay-offs and plant closures. Studies show the need for both small and intermediate sized ships to ensure the efficient transportation of bulk cargoes. Why, at a time when the sluggish economy of the nation has eliminated the reason for imposing flat rate lockage fees, does the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) not reverse this decision of high tolls and lockage fees, or does he really want to bring the industry to its knees?

LEAVE OF ABSENCE URGED FOR POLITICAL PARTY LEADERSHIP CANDIDATES

Mr. Stanley Hudecki (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): Madam Speaker, during a leadership convention of any of the federal political parties, a number of the candidates who are Members of Parliament completely withdraw their services from the House of Commons for as long as four months in order to run for the leadership, or else to lobby on behalf of one of the candidates.

In that period their campaign is one of directing their skills and their drive for personal gain and personal promotion. They do not generally participate in the day to day business of the House, nor do they debate the many important issues that must be settled for the good management of the country. Their attention to constituency business is also curtailed. Yet in this interval they draw full pay and allowances as parliamentarians.

I feel that the Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections should consider looking into the possibility of having MPs who are leadership candidates for the various Parties declared to be on leave of absence for the period of their campaigning, and study whether they should be paid on a per diem rate for the occasional days on which they appear in the House or undertake their constituency duties.

GOVERNMENT ADVERTISING

CONDEMNATION OF COST AND POLICY

Mr. Stan Darling (Parry Sound-Muskoka): Madam Speaker, according to a paper presented to a Learned Societies Conference at the University of British Columbia this week, the Government pays twice as much for the preparation of a public advertisement as does a private advertiser. The paper goes on to observe that this over-payment may in effect be compensation for cheap or even free services rendered to the Liberal Party at election time.

It has long been obvious that the vast majority of Government advertising served no public function other than to emphasize the benevolence of the Government and the governing Party and its omnipresence in our daily lives. It has been a burr under the saddles of all of us who have been concerned about Government waste and needless expense. Now the reason for it, and for the Government's refusal to cut back on it, is revealed. It is a reason that is repugnant to the vast majority of Canadians, to people who believe that morality in Government remains a valid requirement, one that is not overridden by the immediate interests of the Liberal Party. As has happened so frequently in the last three years, the Government stands condemned by its own actions, in the eyes of all of Canada.

MARITIME FREIGHT RATES ACT

CALL FOR CONTINUANCE

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Madam Speaker, just as the statutory Crowsnest Pass freight rates are of vital benefit to western Canada, so is the Maritime Freight Rates Act of benefit to Atlantic Canada.

The federal Government would like to change the maritime freight rate subsidies if it succeeds in cancelling the Crow rate. A similar policy to increase Maritime freight rates in the 1920s to commercial levels, cost 20,000 manufacturing jobs in Atlantic Canada. Reducing the subsidies today means that industries in the Atlantic region will move their operations closer to major markets.

• (1410)

Is it fair to change the industrial base and employment opportunities for those who located in Atlantic Canada with the understanding that freight subsidies were permanent? Are we prepared to pay the social and economic costs of increasing unemployment in Atlantic Canada? This nation has an obligation to provide low cost transportation to Atlantic Canada which gave up a prosperous trade with the United States when it entered Confederation.

LABOUR CONDITIONS

UNEMPLOYMENT IN PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

Mr. Mel Gass (Malpeque): Madam Speaker, I would like to address the serious unemployment situation which exists in Prince Edward Island. P.E.I. is experiencing an unemployment rate in excess of 11 per cent, according to April statistics.

I have recently received a telegram from the President of the P.E.I. Building Trades Council expressing great concern over the unemployment situation which exists among labourers on the Island. He indicated that it is imperative that proposed construction jobs commence as soon as possible.

Out of a union of 150 labourers on the Island, only 90 are currently employed. There is also a 75 per cent to 90 per cent rate of unemployment existing on the Island for carpenters, electricians, and plumbers. This is a drastic situation, and measures must be taken to help alleviate this serious problem.

The proposed projects for a veterinary college and construction of a new Charlottetown airport terminal must be started as soon as possible. Without a doubt, Islanders must feel some anxiety over the starting of these projects as the Charlottetown airport terminal construction has been delayed since 1974. The Federal-Provincial Planning Committee agreed that a new air terminal building would be constructed in 1974 but nothing has started yet, and it is 1983.

I urge that these projects be started without further delay and that the construction of a veterinary college, for which an agreement was signed over the weekend, begin immediately.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

SERVICE RENDERED BY PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVE PARTY LEADERSHIP CANDIDATES

Mr. Jack Shields (Athabasca): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member for Hamilton West (Mr. Hudecki) chided those Members of the Progressive Conservative Party who are Members of the House of Commons, and who are out seeking the leadership of the Party. I should like to suggest that they are doing a service to their country at the present time by letting their names stand for leadership of the Party. All of us in the House know that the next leader of the Conservative Party will be the Prime Minister of the country.

I should like to suggest also that people from coast to coast in Canada are waiting in anticipation for a certain number of Liberal Members, particularly those on the front bench, to withdraw completely from the House of Commons, and would encourage them to do so.

MEDICARE—POSITIONS OF PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVE PARTY LEADERSHIP CANDIDATES

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Madam Speaker, to respond to what has just been said, I think it is appropriate to point out that however good it may be that certain Members of the House have let their names stand for the leadership of the Progressive Conservative Party, it would be better for the whole country if they would also stand for something.

In that context I should like to call to the attention of the House and of all Canadians who might be concerned about the future of medicare that we do not know—except for Peter Pocklington who would like to get rid of the whole thing—where the various candidates stand on the future of medicare. Should any of them become Prime Minister of Canada, we do not know if they will stand up to what the Provinces are doing to medicare, or whether they will be patsies for the Provinces that are eroding medicare.

Like many other Canadians I should like to know where the various candidates for the Prime Ministership of Canada stand on important social programs like medicare. So far those who are really against it have not had the guts to come out and say so. No doubt there are many of them, because that is where the Tories really stand on medicare. And if there are any who are for medicare they have not had the guts to say so either, because then there would be visited upon them the retribution of the various right wing elements in the Conservative Party who would like to do away with medicare altogether.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

INCOME TAX

AUDITING OF FARMERS' INCOME—INTERPRETATION OF LAW

Mr. Lorne Greenaway (Cariboo-Chilcotin): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of National Revenue. It concerns, once again, the unfair application by Revenue Canada of Section 31 of the Income Tax Act.

The answer to my Order Paper question No. 4,766 reveals that 9,355 Canadian farmers were audited in the 11-month period ending February 28, 1983. Many Members of the House are receiving information on cases that indicate that Revenue Canada is disallowing farm losses and is reassessing four years in back taxes, penalties, and interest. The majority of these farmers use chartered accountants and follow their advice on tax matters.

I should like to ask the Minister why it is that farmers and chartered accountants who, according to Revenue Canada auditors, in past years have obeyed the tax laws implicitly, are now suddenly finding that the interpretation of these laws has been changed by the Government.

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member has raised this question before in this House and, if I remember well, at that time I suggested to him that he check the facts. Once more I would urge him to do so, because I know he is not in the habit of checking facts and having his questions based on factual data.

The Department of National Revenue has not changed anything with respect to the interpretation or implementation of the Income Tax Act. However if the Hon. Member will take the time to read carefully the provisions of Section 31 of the Income Tax Act, and especially the criteria for eligibility as a farmer, he will see that there is a certain period of time allowed to taxpayers in order to qualify as farmers, if they own property that may be operated as a farm, and taxpayers are allowed this period of time in order to submit such evidence. Unless this evidence is submitted, we must collect the taxes owed to society by those taxpayers.

[English]

Mr. Greenaway: Madam Speaker, the reason for this, as the farmers of Canada will tell the Minister, is that this is nothing but a tax grab by a bankrupt Government. That is what this is all about.

STAND TAKEN BY FARMERS—MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Lorne Greenaway (Cariboo-Chilcotin): Madam Speaker, I have a supplementary question. Farmers across the country are presently banding together to fight Revenue Canada over this issue. Over the past weeks I have provided the Minister with 36 typical cases but, as far as I have seen so far, no action has been taken by the Minister on these cases which he asked me for in the House.

Is the Minister of National Revenue not going to get Revenue Canada off the backs of Canadian farmers? Is he simply going to sit and take the responsiblity of Canada's first major tax revolt?

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, if I suggested in my previous answer that the Hon. Member was not the most industrious of fact finders, it was because I went to the trouble of making a careful study of each and every case he has submitted to me. It is my view that he is not properly using the term "farmer", because there is no obligation to own property or land that can be farmed in order to qualify as a farmer. But in order to qualify, one must comply with very strict provisions in the Income Tax Act, and this is to prevent a lot of abuse the Hon. Member is perfectly aware of. I would therefore invite him to exercise a little more patience, and I can then show him exactly that in the cases submitted by him, the Act has been implemented in a very fair way as far as the taxpayer is concerned.

[English]

Mr. Greenaway: Madam Speaker, we are all aware that there are abuses of Section 31. Be that as it may, there are lots of legitimate farmers being attacked under this unfair and ambiguous Section of the Act.

DISALLOWANCE OF WIVES' LABOUR

Mr. Lorne Greenaway (Cariboo-Chilcotin): Madam Speaker, my final supplementary question is directed to the Minister responsible for the Status of Women. We have heard from farmers across the country that Revenue Canada auditors appear to have a list of arbitrary criteria that they use to classify farms. One such criteria is the number of hours per year spent working on a farm. In recent years many farmers have been forced to work off the farm because of unexpected high costs. Many farm wives have had to take up the slack. Is the Minister responsible for the Status of Women aware that Revenue Canada auditors are rejecting and disallowing the hours of labour of these women? Is this not rank discrimination against women?

Hon. Judy Erola (Minister of State (Mines)): No, Madam Speaker, I am not aware, but it is true that the Government made some changes some time ago to allow the salaries paid to farm wives as a deductible expense. I am concerned that there is some misuse of this, and I would appreciate very much if the Hon. Member would bring the matter to my attention.

LABOUR RELATIONS

WEST COAST GRAIN HANDLERS' DISPUTE

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Madam Speaker, I have a related question directed to the Prime Minister in the absence of the Acting Minister of Labour and of the Minister of Transport. Would the Prime Minister tell the House what the Government intends to do about the grain handlers' dispute in Vancouver, which is going from bad to worse and which resulted over the weekend in no grain being moved through the Port of Vancouver? What steps does the Government intend to take to ensure that grain continues to move and that the farmers of western Canada will not be help up to ransom?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I believe the Hon. Member heard the answer from the Minister of Employment and Immigration last week, who was, I believe, answering on behalf of the Minister of Labour, that the Government is monitoring the situation and that we are happy at this time to see the parties themselves engage in an attempt to solve their problems. If it ever should happen that the public weal calls for government intervention, we would then consider intervention.

REQUEST THAT MEDIATOR BE APPOINTED

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Madam Speaker, government intervention perhaps can be avoided if the Government will take its responsibility now. I ask the Prime Minister if the Government intends to move in to try to mediate this dispute before it goes from bad to worse. Obviously, the next step will be a work to rule situation by the grain handlers, which will again slow down the movement of grain out of Vancouver. Does the Government intend, at least at this stage, to give consideration to appointing a mediator because, as the Prime Minister knows, the basis of the dispute goes back to the conciliation report on the last work stoppage in Vancouver in 1974?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member heard the Minister answer that it would not be appropriate nor conducive to a settlement at this time to bring in the services of a mediator. However, I repeat, the Government is following the situation.

CANADIAN SECURITY INTELLIGENCE SERVICE

McDONALD ROYAL COMMISSION RECOMMENDATIONS RESPECTING JUDICIAL WARRANTS

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Solicitor General. The Minister knows that when a state grants to security services new powers of intrusion in the name of protecting freedom, the result is that there actually is less freedom to protect. For this reason Justice McDonald recommended certain crucial safeguards which the Minister has discarded. I would like to ask him about some of these. Why did the Minister discard the requirement that the Security Service would have to meet very specific tests in applying to a judge for permission to do certain acts which otherwise would be quite illegal? And why did the Minister abandon the sensible anti judge shopping clause which Justice McDonald recommended?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General of Canada): Madam Speaker, to take the last first; as far as the anti judge shopping clause is concerned by requiring reference to a federal judge, there was already a considerable limitation of the number of judges who could be approached since there are only 16 federal judges and there will only be a small increase in that number in the foreseeable future. My anticipation also is that the Chief Justice of the Federal Court will develop a duty roster type of system so that it will be a matter of a small number of judges available at any particular time. In other words, there is no counterpart in this situation to the situation which exists within the Criminal Code, where I do not believe judge shopping occurs to a degree which amounts to a serious problem but where, nevertheless, structurally there are hundreds and hundreds of judicial officials available who can authorize the issuance of the judicial warrant.

On the question of the balance between the safeguards which are required for the exercise of obtaining a judicial warrant, and the effectiveness of the Service, I will simply say that I recognize very well the need for a balance. However, at the bottom of it Hon. Members of the House must recognize that national security is an intrusion on privacy and on civil liberties. Our goal is to try to develop a system of safeguards and controls which do not exist under present arrangements. We are seeking to create them, which will ensure that the intrusions are the minimum and that the safeguards and controls are adequate to ensure that the service will not unduly violate the privacy and civil liberties ofthe Canadian people.

ACTIVITIES WITHIN CANADA OF FOREIGN SECURITY AGENTS

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, it was precisely to deal with that important realm of freedom, at the same time as meeting the security requirements, that Justice McDonald laid down very specific tests which security agents should have to meet before they are given such extraordinary powers. It is those specific tests which the Minister has discarded, and he has not told us why.

I would also like to ask him why he provided a clause in the Bill which will permit foreign agents, for example, from the CIA, to act in Canada in a way which, if they acted in terms of Canadian laws which exist now, would be perfectly illegal, but in terms of the new Bill would be quite permissible. Why did he do that? In answering that, would the Minister also acknowledge that this Bill permits security agents in Canada, in asking for these exceptional powers, to ask them of a judge without even telling the judge all the laws they intend to break?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General of Canada): Madam Speaker, on the first point, I believe the Hon. Member is referring to Clause 18, which has been pretty widely misunderstood. I would ask him to read it—

Mr. Broadbent: I have read it.

Mr. Kaplan: —because the purpose of Section 18 is to give authority to the agency, with the approval of a judge, to carry out certain intrusive operations.

Mr. Broadbent: Right. Including activities by foreign agents.

Mr Kaplan: I can assure the Hon. Member that that authority will not be given and cannot, under law, be given to anyone but an employee of the agency. Certainly, it cannot be given to some foreigner and there is no suggestion in the legislation that that power should be given to one.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER WITHDRAW LEGISLATION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, the agent applying for the authority has to be a Canadian. The Minister is right in that. However, the Minister also knows that another agent of a foreign country, acting with a Canadian agent, can do acts in this country which now would be illegal. That is the point of the question.

Considering that the Minister himself last week acknowledged that there are serious flaws in the Bill, considering that all of the provincial representatives, equivalent to his office at the provincial level, the Attorneys General of all the Provinces, are opposed to the Bill, and that the professors of law at the universities have spoken out against it, as well as the civil liberties groups, will the Minister admit that he has brought in a seriously flawed piece of legislation, and withdraw it completely?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General of Canada): Madam Speaker, one must examine the proposals in this Bill and compare them with present arrangements where there are no legislated safeguards, although there are administrative safeguards. One must recognize that we are proposing to tighten the mandate, to describe it for the first time in the history of our country according to legislation of this Parliament, and to provide for a judicial pre-clearance of warrants, which has no counterpart today.

Any warrants which can be issued are issued by me and I am subject, unfairly I would say, to being guilty of partisanship or interest in the success of operations. In any event, a judicial warrant procedure is provided. And one must consider the creation of the office of Inspector General outside the service, an auditor with full power to review any operation and conduct an audit of it, and one must look at the review committee, where we are proposing to bring in three respected outsiders—not Members of the Government and not former Members of the Government, but outsiders with no vested interest in success—who will be there as a safeguard representing the public interest.

I know there has been some criticisms of the Bill, and some serious criticisms of the Bill, but if one compares the Bill with present arrangements, something which is understandably difficult for Parliament to do, and when one recognizes that national security at the bottom is an intrusion on the privacy and civil liberties of individuals, one which goes on now under present arrangements without these legislative safeguards, I believe the reasonable thing for the Hon. Member and his Party to do is to agree that this issue should be brought before Parliament, that the Bill should have second reading, and go to committee. Let us hear from all these experts who have comments to make to improve it, and comments to make to amplify it. Let us proceed and act as a Parliament to improve the arrangements which, twice in the past, have led to Royal Commissions.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

PROPOSED REVIEW PROCESS

Hon. Elmer M. MacKay (Central Nova): Madam Speaker, I wish to ask the Solicitor General a question about the review committee. Would the Solicitor General consider, if necessary, amending this process to make sure that Canadians, who, through honest mistake or human error are singled out by the new Service and suffer damage to their reputations or property, could get more speedy access to relief and that there would be more accountability than presently appears in the Bill?

• (1430)

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General of Canada): Madam Speaker, there are specific provisions for review in the Bill, and they have no counterpart now. An individual denied citizenship on security grounds, an individual denied immigration status, an individual denied employment or promotion in the Government on the grounds of national security, will have a right of review if this Bill is passed. Not only that, in response to the Hon. Member's question, there is already a complaints procedure provided in the Bill, which has no counterpart today, where anyone in the country who feels he or she has been victimized by the Security Service has a right to a hearing if that is what the review committee decide, and it is up to them to decide. Such a person will have the opportunity to get the records corrected and have justice done with respect to his or her case.

REDRESS FOR INNOCENT PERSONS

Hon. Elmer M. MacKay (Central Nova): Madam Speaker, I appreciate the Minister's answer, but I think he will recall, for example, when a member of the Protective Staff some years ago, one Paul Débien, was wrongly singled out by the RCMP drug squad and he had a very difficult time getting redress. In fact I am not certain if he ever did.

I come back to my first question. Is the Minister prepared to strengthen the process of accountability so that agents who make an error, supposing it is an honest error, will have it duly noted and the people affected will have an apology and some measure of quick redress by the Government, rather than having to go through a lengthy court process with a lot of dissembling as has been the case in the past?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General of Canada): Madam Speaker, if it is a complaint affecting national security and this agency, you do not have to go to court, although at present, as the Hon. Member knows, the redress is to the Solicitor General. There is less of the appearance and apparatus review and safeguard in that way than this Bill would propose. I draw the Hon. Member's attention to clause 37 which says that any person may make a complaint to the review committee with respect to anything done by the Service. I would urge the Hon. Member and his party to support this Bill as it is in principle, and take it to committee for a full hearing. The situation he has raised with me I think is covered by the Bill; whether additional machinery could be provided is something I think the committee should examine.

INCOME TAX

TAXATION OF CONTRIBUTIONS TO PENSION FUNDS

Miss Pat Carney (Vancouver Centre): Madam Speaker, my question is addressed to the Minister of Finance who is present but not in his seat. To save the time of the House, may I defer my question until he is in his place?

Mr. Paproski: He is only half present.

Miss Carney: Madam Speaker, many Canadians are facing possible double taxation of their pensions because the amount of pension contributions they are required to pay exceeds the limit they may deduct in calculating their income taxes. That means they are being taxed on both their contributions as well as the benefits when they take them. What steps will the Minister take to rectify this unfair situation?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member knows that at the present time there is a tax exemption for up to $3,500 for contributions to pension funds. There are certain groups, comparatively better off, who obviously have more money to contribute to pension funds than the maximum $3,500. These are subject to taxation, as she knows. I am examining this situation. The limit of $3,500 has not been increased for some time.

I have asked my officials to review this situation and I would intend to publish a working document in the next few months which I would like to see addressed and examined, particularly in the context of the review of pensions that Parliament is proceeding with at the present time, to try to ensure that there is equity in the treatment of all concerned.

Mr. Nielsen: Will there be a photo opportunity?

REQUEST THAT TAX EXEMPTION LIMIT BE RAISED

Miss Pat Carney (Vancouver Centre): Madam Speaker, my supplementary is directed to the same Minister. I would hope he addresses the limits for people who are self employed and whose pension fund is their only source of pension. Would the Minister consider raising the limit on an interim basis until the pension review and reform work have been completed?

[Translation]

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): No, Madam Speaker.

CANADIAN SECURITY INTELLIGENCE SERVICE

REQUEST THAT SUBJECT MATTER OF PROPOSED LEGISLATION BE STUDIED BY COMMITTEE

Hon. Walter Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Madam Speaker, my question is supplementary to those put to the Solicitor General with respect to the security Bill.

It is interesting, Madam Speaker, that almost each group in the country who has commented on the security Bill has been very much concerned about it and has raised some grave questions about it. The Minister himself has questioned the Bill and some of its provisions by saying that he is open to amendment. Would the Minister not consider it appropriate if, rather than proceeding with the Bill at this time, the subject matter could be sent to a committee of this House to be reviewed over a definite period of time in order that those groups could be heard, Parliament be consulted with respect to the Bill, and time would not be wasted? There are many who do not question the necessity of a Security Service for Canada but do indeed question the methods adopted by the Minister. Would he consider that?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General of Canada): Well, I would like to have some time to consider that and know if that is the position which would commend itself to other Members of the Hon. Member's Party and other Parties on the floor.

Mr. Broadbent: Yes.

Mr. Kaplan: But I must say at the heart of it a Security Service is hundreds and hundreds of men and women who are working in the interests of the national security of the country. I think Royal Commissions have recommended that they and their work, and national security in general, require a much greater degree of direction and control from Parliament than the national security agency has received in the past. I would not want it to be taken, by agreeing to such a proposal, that the Government was not committed in general, and to a rather large degree in detail, to the proposals I have put forward. I think we owe it to them and to the national security of the country, and to the Canadian people in general, to provide leadership in this area as a Government. That is the reason for this Bill.

I do not agree with most of the criticism I have heard. If a method could be worked out for Members of this House to consider the Bill, it would be something I would like to look into. But I want to make it clear that this is the direction in general terms, and in a considerable amount of detail, that this Government wants to lead the Security Service. I think much of the criticism is totally off base and I would not want any decision to refer the subject matter of the Bill to be taken to indicate that I think this Bill is wrong and that carte blanche is being given, or doors are being opened, or civil rights are being abused by the Bill. In my view the Bill does the opposite. I believe that in fair hearings of the committee that will be seen to be the case.

MINISTERIAL RESPONSIBILITY

Hon. Walter Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Madam Speaker, the whole purpose of such an inquiry would be to examine the very things the Minister asserts, for which there is some support in some parts of the House and no support in other parts of the House. The Minister has indicated his willingness to discuss that possibility and I will arrange to have that discussed with my colleagues.

In the meantime would the Minister consider that very important substance of our parliamentary system which has been eroded, that is the concept of ministerial responsibility? Would he indicate to the House that his mind is not closed with respect to a review of the question of ministerial responsibility for security matters, which strikes to the heart of our parliamentary system and which may very well be important to the acceptance of this legislation generally, and the creation of a Security Service in Canada?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General of Canada): Well, on that subject the Bill has sought to create a balance with, on the one hand, full ministerial accountability for the operation of the Security Service and, for the first time in legislation, a requirement that the Minister be fully informed and ready to respond to Parliament about all of the matters being carried out or not being carried out by the Security Service.

So far as the limitation in Clause 6 is concerned, to which the Hon. Member must be referring, that the Minister should not be enabled to overrule the director with respect to a particular case or report, I think that is a wise safeguard because it assures that the agency will not be used for partisan or improper purposes by the Government and that it will not become the private police force or private agency of the Government. To me, that is an extremely important safeguard in the interests of our democracy. It is also the system that commended itself to Australia, another parliamentary democracy, which has adopted, in virtually the same terms, exactly the proposals which I believe the Hon. Member is condemning. Therefore, one can have a parliamentary democracy which provides that safeguard, but I have certainly heard him and I have heard the other criticism on that subject.

• (1440)

Mr. Pinard: He should read the Bill.

Mr. Kaplan: I think it would be a good issue to explore in committee. I think it is one which ought to be preserved.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

CANADA-UNITED STATES RADAR TESTING PROJECT

Mr. Terry Sargeant (Selkirk-Interlake): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Defence who, 13 months ago, in reply to a letter of mine, wrote that the purpose of the joint Canadian-American research project being conducted in the prairie Provinces, ostensibly on radar ground clutter, was to improve the capabilities of civilian and military radar at low levels. On Saturday I learned that that may well have been a sham, and that one of the main purposes of this project is to improve the survivability of U.S. Cruise missiles. Will the Minister tell the House what is the real story? Is this a radar improvement project or is it a Cruise missile development project?

Hon. J. Gilles Lamontagne (Minister of National Defence): Madam Speaker, I think I did answer the Hon. Member on June 16, 1982, very clearly explaining the purpose of the program. It has nothing to do with the Cruise missile. It is related to the testing of the low level radar. As the Hon. Member knows, when any missiles or any low flying aircraft comes over Canadian airspace it mingles with clutter on the radar screen. What we are trying to do—

Mr. Nielsen: It is happening on the Treasury benches.

Mr. Lamontagne: —by this test program across Canada and the United States is to try to find out how we can eliminate this clutter on our radar so that we can identify these missiles or low flying aircraft, and in so doing identify the low flying object, thereby improving the security of the country.

INQUIRY RESPECTING COMPUTER PROGRAMMING FOR CRUISE MISSILE TESTING

Mr. Terry Sargeant (Selkirk-Interlake): Madam Speaker, for the last number of months in Alberta, where the tests have been going on, experts from the Cruise Missile Technology Group of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology have been going in on a weekly basis to monitor the testing. They are of the opinion that this testing is being done to prepare computer software to help the Cruise missile to fly over terrain in western and central Europe. I would like the Minister to comment on that situation. People who are conducting these tests right now are saying that this is to prepare computer programs for the Cruise missile. Is the Minister saying that this incorrect?

Hon. J. Gilles Lamontagne (Minister of National Defence): Madam Speaker, I said that the object of the testing is to try to find out how we can best detect a low flying object. It could be a missile. It could be any kind of low flying object. It could be an aircraft. It could be something coming from the United States or from Russia or from anywhere else. So, it is just a question of clarifying and improving our means of detecting whatever could come over Canada at a low altitude. It is as simple as that.

THE ADMINISTRATION

TRIP TO DENVER UNDERTAKEN BY FORMER SECRETARY OF STATE

Mr. Howard Crosby (Halifax West): Madam Speaker, I would like to ask a question of the Prime Minister concerning the travel activity of this Minister of State for International Trade. I am sure, in the light of the controversy which has arisen, that he has taken a look at the guidelines and the records involving that travel. Did the Prime Minister authorize his Minister of State for International Trade, who was then Secretary of State, to travel to Denver, Colorado, on March 4, 1982? I remind him that that was when the House of Commons was awaiting the decision with respect to the bell ringing incident. All Hon. Members, of course, were in Ottawa waiting to vote on a controversial Bill.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I cannot recall having authorized that particular trip at that particular time. However, there is a rule that, when Ministers want to leave the country, they do inform my office. If I see any objection to it, I make it known to them. They are also asked to check with the Department of External Affairs. That is the rule. As to March 4, I see no particular relevancy to the tail end of the question relating to the bell ringing incident. I am not quite sure what the Hon. Member is worried about in that regard.

PURPOSE OF TRIP

Mr. Howard Crosby (Halifax West): Madam Speaker, perhaps I should tell the Prime Minister, in the presence of his Minister of State for International Trade, that—

Mr. Lalonde: You could ask him a question.

Mr. Regan: You don't have the guts to ask me.

Mr. Crosby: —a Halifax newspaper has suggested that the Minister travelled to Denver, Colorado, to attend the World Cup skiing match on March 4, 1982, to see Mr. Podborski win the World Cup. I would like to confirm whether the Prime Minister had given him permission to do that when there was such controversy in Parliament. Was the Minister's presence not so required that he could be in Denver, Colorado, on a flighty activity of that nature?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, as to the Minister himself, we remember that he was Minister responsible for sports at that time. I am sure he went in relation to preparation of sports events, notably the Olympics to be held in Alberta. However, as to the relevance of the bell ringing incident, I suppose the Minister made a judgment that most Canadians made, that it was a mindless ringing of bells by an opposition Party which did not know how to make up its mind on anything and was just trying to tear down Parliament. He thought he would be more useful to the country there than in assisting in the destruction of Parliament by the Conservative Party.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

CANADIAN SECURITY INTELLIGENCE SERVICE

APPLICATION OF RULE OF LAW

Mr. David Kilgour (Edmonton-Strathcona): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Solicitor General, but I see that he is not here. I will direct my question to the Attorney General in his absence.

Mr. Lalonde: He'll be back. Here he is.

Mr. Kilgour: Maybe they can decide which one of them wants to answer it.

Mr. Cousineau: You decide.

Mr. Kilgour: The Minister will know that most people have criticized his security package on the basis that it allows people to break the law. No one is above the law in our system. Will the Minister tell us what he means by the "rule of law", whether he agrees that it authorizes people to break the law and, if so, what he intends to do about those aspects of the Bill?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General of Canada): Madam Speaker, it certainly does not allow people to break the law. It does not increase the authority of the agents in any way, beyond the authority and protection which they now enjoy as members of the RCMP, under the Criminal Code. I have heard all those people who have criticized it. I would ask the Hon. Member to take out the Criminal Code and read Section 25, which now provides for the limited protection that peace and police officers have in the exercise of their duties, and compare it with what I propose in the Bill. The words are not the same. The effect is the same. Members of the new agency will have no more power or authority than they already have in carrying out duties in national security under the Criminal Code.

PROVISIONS STIPULATED IN LEGISLATION

Mr. David Kilgour (Edmonton-Strathcona): Madam Speaker, as the Minister will know, all of the Attorneys-General of the Provinces have said that the Bill gives the SS carte blanche to break any law completely free from any independent, publicly accountable scrutiny or review. I take it that he disagrees with that. Will he tell us whether Clause 21 does not authorize law breaking? Would he also tell us in passing how, under his Bill, the Hugh Hambleton affair would have been handled any differently than it was at the time without the Bill?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General of Canada): Again, it is a reiteration of the first question. It does not authorize law-breaking. They have no immunity at all. There are some democratic countries where the security service in those countries is not subject to the rule of law and where they have immunity in court. We rejected that because we feel that, in a democratic society like Canada, those powers would be widely excessive. Therefore, we have confined them and have proposed that they be confined to exactly the same limited protection under the new Bill as they enjoy under the Criminal Code.

Another part of the Hon. Member's question concerned the Hugh Hambleton case, a case in which the relevance of the Official Secrets Act was being considered. The Official Secrets Act has not been changed by the Bill. It is a measure being reviewed by my colleague, the Minister of Justice and, in due course, amendments to that legislation will be brought forward.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

CANADIAN BILL OF RIGHTS—ABSENCE FROM DISPLAY WITHIN PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS

Mr. Bill McKnight (Kindersley-Lloydminster): Madam Speaker, I would like to ask a question of the Prime Minister as to why the Diefenbaker Bill of Rights which, since 1967, has been on constant display in one form or another to the public of Canada in the Parliament Buildings of Canada, is no longer on display in the Library of Parliament for the people of Canada.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I know of no action taken with regard to the Diefenbaker Bill of Rights. I have often referred to it as being the guarantee of property rights which I would like to see in the Canadian Constitution.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Trudeau: The Party opposite is not prepared to co-operate in that regard. However, as far as the Bill is concerned, as far as it goes, it is a good Bill of Rights.

REQUEST THAT BILL OF RIGHTS BE DISPLAYED

Mr. Bill McKnight (Kindersley-Lloydminster): May I ask the Prime Minister, Madam Speaker, when the Bill will again be displayed to the public of Canada along with the Union Act, the Quebec Act, the Constitution Act of 1982, and the Flag Proclamation, which are now presently displayed? This is still a statute of Canada, and a very historic one.

• (1450)

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, all statutes of Canada are not displayed, that I know of, in Parliament, except in the volumes that contain the statutes. I think that Mr. Diefenbaker himself very properly regretted that the climate in Canada at that time was such that his Bill of Rights could not be constitutionalized. I remember very clearly that he expressed those regrets in hearings before the House of Commons and the committee.

It is not a constitutional Bill of Rights. Perhaps that is the reason why it is not displayed with the other constitutional bills. I can assure the Hon. Member that I have no authority to decide whether or not the Bill shall be displayed in Parliament. That is not a matter for the Government, and the Hon. Member knows that.

AGRICULTURE

PROPOSED RED MEAT STABILIZATION PROGRAM

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Agriculture who has been promising to reach a solution to what he calls provincial top loading before he will implement any red meat stabilization program. Can the Minister tell us why he is so insistent upon doing away with the provincial power to top load before he will agree to any stabilization program for red meats?

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member knows as well as I, if he reads the record, that at one time all of the provincial Ministers said that they did not want any top loading.

At the present time the Canadian Cattlemen's Association does not want any top loading, as is the case with several other farm organizations. Some have some reservations. It causes inequity, inequality and economic disparity that one can hardly describe in the House in the short time one is given to answer a question. I would say that the Hon. Member himself knows what economic disparity it causes. For instance, the Province of Alberta could have one of the richest top loading programs, the Province of Saskatchewan probably second, and some could not afford any.

Mr. Althouse: I was pleased to hear the Minister outline his philosophical reasons for his commitment to attempt to wipe out top loading.

Oral Questions

FREIGHT RATE SUBSIDY

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Madam Speaker, with that commitment, why does the Minister support the current Crow rate changes in light of the fact that the proposals do nothing about the current top loading that exists of some $40 per tonne plus an additional $8 per tonne leased railway car subsidy which the Province of Alberta is paying to the rapeseed and canola crushing industry in that Province, which has virtually shut down crushing in Saskatchewan and Manitoba? Why is top loading so unacceptable to red meats but not in the oil seed crushing industry?

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture): That is strictly a provincial program that I have very little to do with, Madam Speaker. If I were having a program for all of western Canada for canola production, I certainly would not condone that kind of action. It appears to me that Alberta wants to take over the canola industry. It can do it by financing it in the way it is doing it now.

AUDITING OF FARMERS' INCOME—MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Jack Shields (Athabasca): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Agriculture. I am sure the Minister realizes by now that the Department of National Revenue is targeting farmers for audit this year in order to determine whether they are full time, part time, or hobby farmers. This is at a time when the income of farmers is at an all time low and their expenses are at an all time high.

Has he made representations to the Department of National Revenue on behalf of the farmers who have to go out to work and who are now being downgraded from fulltime to parttime, and indeed as hobby farmers in some cases, because they have to take another job to survive in the farming community at this time?

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member knows as well as I that farmers are very ambitious people. If they can do two jobs they will do it. In my constituency, 80 per cent of my farmers have other occupations besides farming. They have fulltime jobs, they are academics, they are professional or semi professional people, factory workers, and others.

I am as concerned as anyone in the House about the rules and laws by which we have to abide. The rules and laws concerning taxation come under the Minister of National Revenue. Some of those Members make out like they are saints looking after the people of Canada. Some of them have done no more than to make a lot of noise about it when their own provincial Governments have taxing systems that are just about as unfair.

Mr. Shields: None of us on this side of the House are making us out to be the saints or upholders of farmers. We are the upholders of fair play.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER MAKE REPRESENTATIONS ON ISSUE

Mr. Jack Shields (Athabasca): Madam Speaker, I would suggest to the Minister that farmers are now being audited and agriculture is an industry that has been targeted by the Department of National Revenue. They are being audited because some of them have had to take jobs off the farm just to survive on the farm. It is the responsibility of the Minister of Agriculture to help the farmer, and surely he must recognize that. Will he take his responsibility and make representations to the Department of National Revenue to cease and desist, and end this horrible situation that exists in the farming community because of the Department of National Revenue's action?

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member knows that I am as law abiding a citizen as he is. The laws are such. For him to try to say that the farming population is being singled out any more than any other business operation in this country, is just not so. Audits took place with the fishermen and they are going on with the fishermen at the present time, as well as with farmers and other small business people in Canada.

FINANCE

SAINT JOHN HARBOUR BRIDGE DEBT

Mr. Bob Corbett (Fundy-Royal): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. I gave the Minister notice of this question some weeks ago. He will recall that the Auditor General recommended in 1976 that the Saint John Harbour bridge debt be forgiven and the bridge be turned over to the provincial authority which is now willing to accept it. It has imparted that information to the Department of Finance in successive years. Is the Minister now prepared to take a decision that is positive to the Province and forgive that debt on the Saint John Harbour bridge?

[Translation]

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, that matter is under review.

PARLIAMENT

SENATE REFORM—PRIME MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Girve Fretz (Erie): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Right Hon. Prime Minister. He has been musing about making the Senate an elected body. Does he have other electoral reforms in mind before the next general election?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the matter of Senate reform is before a joint committee of both the House and the Senate. It is following its course there. I attach a great deal of importance to that committee work. One of the possibilities for a reformed Senate would be to have them elected, directly or indirectly. There are various ways in which the Senate can be reformed. The Hon. Member has mentioned one which I certainly would want to see considered. But it is not a decision or matter of policy by the Government that that should happen. The policy now is that the committee should look at every possible reform, and report to both Houses.

EXAMINATION OF ELECTORAL SYSTEM—THRONE SPEECH DECLARATION

Mr. Girve Fretz (Erie): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Right Hon. Prime Minister. In the Throne Speech of April, 1980, the Prime Minister said that he was going to:

—appoint a committee of Parliament to examine the electoral system in order to ensure that the highest degree of representativeness and responsibility is achieved and that the confidence of Canadians in Parliamentary institutions is strengthened.

Does the Prime Minister have in mind the appointment of such a committee in the next session, and does he have in mind general elections by proportional representation?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): No, Madam Speaker, that provision has now been met, at least in part, by the setting up of the joint committee of the House and the Senate to look into the matter of Senate reform.

The Minister of Justice informs me that a green paper which we have been preparing will be put before that committee to indicate the various options for Senate reform. As far as reform of the House of Commons is concerned, apart from the electoral reform bill which has already been dealt with, there are no plans that this Government intends to proceed with at the present time.

• (1500)

The Hon. Member will recall, however, in days following the 1980 election that there had been a discussion between the then Leader of the Conservative Party, the Leader of the New Democratic Party, and myself, as to the possibility of seeing some elements of proportional representation introduced for a limited number of Members to be added to the present number at the beginning of this Parliament. That was not done because there was no agreement between the three leaders as to how it should be proceeded with. As far as I am concerned and, as far as I know, that matter is no longer current with this Party.

TABLING OF REPORTS OF CLERK OF PETITIONS

Madam Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that the petitions presented by Hon. Members on Friday, June 3, 1983, meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

POINTS OF ORDER

MR. BLENKARN—VOTES IN MAIN ESTIMATES ALLEGED IRREGULAR—RULING BY MADAM SPEAKER

Madam Speaker: The Chair is prepared to rule on the point of order raised by the Hon. Member for Mississauga South (Mr. Blenkarn) on Wednesday, April 27, 1983, concerning the procedural acceptability of two Votes and one statutory item in the Main Estimates for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1984.

At the outset, I would like to observe that, although this matter was raised by the Hon. Member some weeks ago, I was unable to respond until now because at that time the Main Estimates were referred to the various committees and were therefore not before the House. As a matter of courtesy, however, and remembering that in the past I have suggested that Hon. Members would be helpful by raising points of order on the estimates in sufficient time to allow adequate study, I did not interrupt the Hon. Member. I thank him for having presented his point at that time. The estimates have now been reported or are deemed to be reported in accordance with our Standing Orders and, therefore, I am in a better position and I think I should rule on this particular point now.

The first two objections raised by the Hon. Member relate to the Export Development Corporation and appear under External Affairs in the Blue Book of estimates. They are Vote 40—Payment to the Export Development Corporation for operating losses in the amount of $35 million and a statutory non-budgetary item of $164 million for the purchase of shares and provision of loans and guarantees and export credit and foreign investment insurance.

The Hon. Member argued that, because the Export Development Corporation's financial statement for the year ended December 31, 1982, indicates that there are no losses, Vote 40 should be deleted from the estimates. If Hon. Members examine last year's estimates as approved by the House in the Appropriation Act No. 2, 1982-83, Chapter No. 103 of the current session's statutes, they will see, in Vote 65 under Industry, Trade and Commerce, that an amount of $58 million was voted as payment to the Export Development Corporation for operating losses. The same description is used for this year's Vote 40.

Hon. Members will understand and rightfully agree that the Chair cannot be asked to and will not elaborate on the matter of the Corporation's losses or on the propriety to ask Parliament for money to cover unexpected losses or even on the utilization or non-utilization of that money once granted. All this is irrelevant to the function of the Chair which is to determine that the correct procedure is followed in dealing with the estimates. I see no flaw with Vote 40 and must rule that it is properly before the House. The objection raised by the Hon. Member for Mississauga South is strictly a matter of debate which ought to be discussed during the regular time allotted to the consideration of supply.

In so far as the statutory item is concerned, the authority to spend is provided by the Export Development Act which gives the Minister and the Governor in Council the power to act. Again, the Chair cannot be asked to give an opinion on the legality of the Government's request through a statutory item in the estimates. As explained in Citation 484 of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition, and I quote:

> The purpose of the Estimates is to present to Parliament the budgetary and non-budgetary expenditure proposals of the Government for the next fiscal year. These Estimates include Votes, which Parliament is asked to approve through Appropriation Acts, as well as other items called statutory items, for which the required expenditures have already been approved through existing legislation and are included only for information purposes.

Therefore, I cannot agree with the Hon. Member's request that this statutory item be treated as a budgetary matter in order for the House to express its opinion as to whether the amount should be granted. Citation 498 of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition is quite clear on this subject. It reads:

> Statutory items which are included in the Estimates for informational purpose may be amended only by the introduction of amending legislation.

The third objection raised by the Hon. Member for Mississauga South concerns Vote 25 which appears under Industry, Trade and Commerce in the Main Estimates. It is a request for an amount of $185 million for payments under the Small Business Investment Grants Act. The Hon. Member asked that Vote 25 be ruled out of order on the grounds that the Act expired as of April 1, 1983.

In examining the Act, which was passed by this Parliament as Bill C-136 and is now Chapter 147 of the Statutes of Canada 1980-81-82-83, I find that this date of April 1, 1983 is mentioned only in Section 3(3), which indicates that the Minister may make grants only for investment debt obligations incurred prior to April 1, 1983. There is no indication as to the expiry date.

I cannot agree therefore with the Hon. Member and must rule that Vote 25 is also properly before the House.

MR. KRISTIANSEN—ALLEGED UNPARLIAMENTARY LANGUAGE OF MR. NIELSEN

Mr. Lyle S. Kristiansen (Kootenay West): Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. You are undoubtedly aware that Beauchesne's Fifth Edition at page 104, Citation 320(1)(y), reads:

> 320. (1) It has been ruled unparliamentary to refer to a Member as:
> (y) attempting to distort the facts as he had in the past—

I would ask you, Madam Speaker, to screen the blues of today's Hansard because in an answer to a question of mine at approximately 11.30 a.m. on the matter of Cruise missile testing and the two-track system, the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Nielsen) said something akin to the following, that "since coming to this House the Hon. Member for Kootenay West has been prone to twisting, distorting and changing colours on any matter". Further, he said that my opinion "should not be accepted on any matter" and that all I do is "twist, ride and distort" on every issue.

I would simply ask you to review the blues, Madam Speaker. This attack on my character and reputation, which used designated unparliamentary words, in my view demands either a retraction, a withdrawal by the Leader of the Opposition, or a temporary eviction from the House.

Madam Speaker: The Hon. Member mentions that this happened in this morning's sitting. I would remind Hon. Members with regard to unparliamentary language that two conditions have to be met; that is to say, that the language is unparliamentary, and that it creates some kind of disturbance in the House. Certainly the most important point is that these questions must be dealt with as they occur. I do not know whether the Hon. Member raised his point of order this morning but I will certainly look at the blues and try to determine whether there has been any use of unparliamentary language. I will check the language against the list.

I must say that the list is a bit contradictory and again I would ask Hon. Members to refrain from using language which might be offensive. I understand in the course of debate that one sometimes goes beyond one's thoughts, but a bit of discipline from all Members is certainly a good thing to try to achieve.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Yukon): Madam Speaker—

Madam Speaker: If the Leader of the Opposition wants to speak on this point, I must say that I will look at the blues. I do not think it is necessary to have a discussion.

Mr. Nielsen: I am sure you will insist upon hearing me, Madam Speaker, particularly when I rise to assist the Chair—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Nielsen: —and to say that while I did not hear in its entirety the submission of the Hon. Member who complains, what I did hear was uniquely accurate.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Kristiansen: Madam Speaker, I rise on the point of order, not to the substance of the words used but to the matter of disturbance.

Madam Speaker: Order, please.

PETITIONS

RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Madam Speaker, I have the honour and the duty to present a petition to the Hon. Members of the House of Commons in Parliament assembled. This petition is signed by 37 residents of Canada from Dauphin, Manitoba, Gilbert Plains, Swan River and Valley River, 32 of whom are members of the Manitoba Wheat Pool. They say that farmers paid $131 million to move export grain under the Crow freight rate in the 1981-82 crop year and that this grain in turn contributed $6.3 billion to the balance of trade for Canada. The undersigned believe this is the farmers' fair contribution to the Canadian economy and that western farmers should pay one times the Crow.

• (1510)

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, members of the Manitoba Pool Elevators, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to maintain the presence of the statutory grain rate. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Madam Speaker, I have a petition signed by some 33 residents of the Hepburn area of Saskatchewan, 30 of whom are members of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool. They are petitioning the House of Commons in the Parliament of Canada assembled and are exercising their right to present a grievance. They humbly sheweth that western Canadian farmers paid $131 million to move export grain under the Crow freight rate in the 1981-82 crop year, and that this grain in turn contributed $6.3 billion to the balance of trade.

The undersigned believe that the farmers' fair contribution to the Canadian economy should be one times the Crow rate and humbly pray and call upon Parliament to maintain the present statutory grain rate.

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Madam Speaker, it is my honour and duty to present to the House of Commons in Parliament assembled a petition signed by a number of the members of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool who are farmers in the Asquith, Saskatoon and Hepburn areas of the Province of Saskatchewan.

These petitioners want to put before Parliament their wish to maintain the present statutory Crow rate.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Madam Speaker, I happen to have another petition signed by some 37 residents of the Province of Manitoba, at least 18 of whom are members of the Manitoba Pool Elevators. They humbly petition the House to maintain the statutory grain rate and say that they are willing to pay one times Crow.

Wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to maintain the present statutory grain rate. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever and forever pray.

Madam Speaker: I would have hoped that they would all pray at the same time.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Madam Speaker: Since the two petitions were exactly the same, they could have been presented at the same time to save the time of the House. Hon. Members know that the time of the House is really precious and that the time in which to present petitions is normally quite limited in our procedures. Of course they are allowed, but there is another method by which to present petitions, and that is to file them. In cases where they are exactly similar, I think the Hon. Member could have mentioned them both at the same time.

Mr. Benjamin: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. What do Hon. Members of Parliament do when they receive separate, individual petitions signed by Canadian citizens and Canadian residents in hundreds of locations in Canada which arrive on different dates?

Madam Speaker: Order. Hon. Members may present those petitions, but there is nothing against presenting them together or even filing them with the Clerk. There has been no denial of that liberty on the part of Hon. Members, just a little admonition to try to save some of the time of the House; but obviously we are not saving much.

SENIOR CITIZENS ADVISORY ASSEMBLY ACT

MEASURE TO ESTABLISH

Mr. Dan McKenzie (Winnipeg-Assiniboine) moved for leave to introduce Bill C-686, an Act to constitute a senior citizens advisory assembly.

Some Hon. Members: Explain.

Mr. McKenzie: Madam Speaker, I am sure the Hon. Member for Victoria (Mr. McKinnon) is indeed pleased to second this Bill. It would establish a senior citizens' advisory assembly to assist the federal Government in developing policies and providing services for Canada's ever-increasing numbers in this segment of the population.

As the number of senior citizens is increasing at a rate of 3 per cent per year, so are their problems. This Bill would allow senior citizens' groups to meet once a year in this Chamber to discuss collectively their problems, make recommendations and present proposals to the Government. This senior citizens' parliament has been in effect in a number of American states and has proven very successful.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

Madam Speaker: Shall the remaining questions stand?

Some Hon. Members: Stand.

[English]

Mr. Oberle: Madam Speaker, I have a question for the Parliamentary Secretary which relates to numerous questions on the Order Paper dating back to 1980 and 1981 in the name of the late Hon. Member for Leeds-Grenville. At that time two-thirds of the questions on the Order Paper were in the name of the late Mr. Cossitt. Is it the intention of the Government to answer any of those questions? If so, to whom will the answers be given?

Mr. Smith: Madam Speaker, since the passing of the Hon. Member, the Government has answered questions on the Order Paper standing in his name. We will continue to do that. We fully respect the fact that those questions were asked during the course of this session, and throughout the balance of this session, as answers are provided by the various Ministers, they will be tabled in the House.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 62—PARLIAMENT

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Nielsen:

That this House condemns the Government for its deliberate and persistent undermining of the parliamentary process, for its flouting of parliamentary traditions and for its continuing attempts to reduce Parliament and parliamentary government to an irrelevant appendix in the formulation and application of major national policy decisions and the expenditure of public funds, and demands that the Government immediately reverse its attitude of regarding Parliament as the private preserve of the Liberal Party thus hastening the restoration of respect for and the dignity of this institution.

Mr. Roger Simmons (Burin-St. George's): Mr. Speaker, it was the Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Nielsen) who earlier today set down this motion. I, as others in the House, listened with great interest to his speech this morning, in the fond hope that somehow we would hear from him why he had chosen so scandalously to waste the time of the House with this absolutely silly and frivolous motion.

He did not do that, but he did achieve a record of sorts. He managed to deliver the worst speech ever delivered by any Opposition Leader in this House or in any legislature anywhere. What a hypocritical pack of nonsense we heard from the Hon. Member for Yukon this morning. I say to him: "Get yourself a new ghost writer; the present one has failed you miserably". What a terrible excuse for a speech we heard this morning. Surely he, with all of his years in this House, could have done a lot better than that.

On a more compassionate note, it is surely a sad spectacle to sit here and watch the Leader of the Opposition in his present frame of mind. John Donne, I think it was, said that no man is an island. It is true that the Hon. Member for Yukon and I sit in different caucuses, support different Parties and for the most part hold widely divergent views on many issues, but it is nevertheless painful to sit here and watch his virtual demise. Despite our adversary relationship, I find no particular joy in his ever lessening grip on reality. It is not a pleasant matter to watch a fellow human being struggling to adjust to what must be a diminished use of his God-given faculties.

Mr. McKinnon: You ought to pass out bags for this, the airlines do.

Mr. Simmons: In that context, it is difficult to muster the bile, the hate, the scorn, to match what the Leader of the Opposition metes out every time he opens his mouth, as he did this morning with such consistency. Indeed, I feel no particular desire to try and match his bile or hate. We on this side do not reciprocate with hate. We are too preoccupied with pity for that gentleman, pity for his one-track mind, pity for his lifelong obsession with revenge, pity for one of God's own creatures, a man who in earlier times had made such a significant contribution to this country, a man who in more recent times has allowed his talent to become the servant of his temper, a man who has allowed his benevolence as a human being to play second fiddle to his bile.

I feel no particular desire to attack the Leader of the Opposition. I do want to attack some of his ideas, and I shall. In the debate this morning, the outgoing Leader of the Opposition, the temporary Leader of the Opposition, the soon-to-be decapitated Leader of the Opposition, talked about running everything from the Prime Minister's office. I say to him and his Party that they should know.

I suggest that they get out the estimates, that they look at the actual expenditures for 1979, 1980, 1981 and 1982. They will find, as I found and pointed out in the Miscellaneous Estimates a few weeks ago, in the presence of some Opposition Members, that it was during the period of the short-lived Clark Government that the numbers in the Prime Minister's office escalated and the expenditures for the Prime Minister's office escalated. It was after that period when the present administration took over in February or March, 1980 that the numbers came down in both respects. The number of people employed in the PMO came down and the expenditure on that Department of Government came down. The Leader of the Opposition will well know what he is talking about when he says there has been an effort to run things from the PMO because he was part of that effort during the days of the short-lived Tory administration.

He also talked rather fervently about Parliament being shunted to the sidelines. I say to him, not quite. I recognize, as he does, that there has been quite an effort to shunt it to the sidelines. I recognize that it is he and his co-artists who have been trying to do that shunting. Yes, there has been quite a manipulation. They have done everything in the book, and some things not permitted by the book, to shunt Parliament to the sidelines to the extent that this Government has been obliged to find other mechanisms to get its messages across, to tell the people of Canada what it is doing as the Government and answering to the people of Canada.

It is true the Government has had to go across the road to the Press Club theatre or downstairs to the scrum room. We have had to go across the country calling press conferences, doing things that normally should have been done in this House. We recognize that. We also recognize the realities in this House, some very unpleasant realities because of the effort of the gentleman from Yukon to shunt Parliament aside, to use his own words.

If ever there was an example anywhere in the free world of parliamentary terrorism, this is it. What we have seen under the guise of fighting for people's rights under the leadership of the gentleman from Yukon has been nothing short of parliamentary terrorism. The people elected us to come here, not because they want to see institutions destroyed, including this institution. They elected us to come here to operate within the rule of law, to see to the proper functioning of the nation's institutions. I find it difficult to see how Members of the Official Opposition can take much credit for aiming at that kind of functioning and facilitating it.

The Leader of the Opposition pro tem talked about the occasion on which the Government thwarted the parliamentary process. Then he fumbled around for examples. It is significant that he did not cite one example. In fairness, he did cite one: he did go back to 1963 and tried to justify the Tory action which he condemns in the Liberals. He said that the big bad Liberals of 1963 forced the then Prime Minister, Mr. Diefenbaker, to use Governor General's warrants. Put that side by side with what they say when we use Governor General's warrants. That is the only half example we heard from that member all morning.

He spoke of undermining the parliamentary process. I say to him and his colleagues that Governments which propose policies and responsible Members who debate and vote on them are not the people who are undermining the institution of Parliament. It is people like him who obstruct, obscure, mislead, hurl insults and contempt at the Chair, the symbol of respect in this House. We have seen him do that. He is the person who undermines the parliamentary process.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): No, he is not.

Mr. Simmons: It is people like him and the Hon. Member for Esquimalt-Saanich (Mr. Munro) who in the absence of ideas substitute hoots and disorder, act like infants and try to shout down Members, as he is doing now, who have something worth while to say.

Mr. Cooper: Then let's hear it.

Mr. Simmons: I say to the Hon. Member for Peace River (Mr. Cooper) that they are the people who undermine the system. He is the person who undermines the system. These people waste the taxpayers' money through mindless delay. They are the people who undermine the parliamentary process. Idiots who ring bells unnecessarily are the people who undermine the system. If anybody here is trying to make this institution irrelevant, it is the Hon. Member for Yukon and his Party.

Many taxpayers were not amused when their refunds were delayed this year. Why were they delayed? It was because an irresponsible Opposition filibustered the fund raising legislation mindlessly, without purpose. The five major budget Bills from 1982 took no fewer than 72 days, 53 in this House and 19 in committee, over 236 hours. This came after a full six-day debate on the budget and a mini-debate on an economic statement. They succeeded in paralysing the House for an entire winter. The Opposition insisted on this kind of obstruction even while hundreds of farmers, fishermen and small-businessmen were losing their livelihood and their homes. The Opposition was blocking consideration of the bankruptcy Bill and it has been obstructed for close to a decade by the Opposition. That is what undermines the parliamentary process, Mr. Speaker.

The claim that the Government is reducing the role of Parliament in the formulation and application of major policy is almost too absurd to repeat but it needs a response. It is the Government which has enacted and will shortly proclaim the Access to Information Act. The Government initiated the all-Party parliamentary task forces and special subcommittees that have played such an important part in policy development.

The Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) may not go to committee now because there is not always a headline there to be scared up, but he must be aware of the excellent work being done on the disabled, acid rain, native self-government, pension reform, to name a few, by the special task forces.

What matter could be more important than the Constitution? In this Chamber we spent more than 38 days and scores of hours in public and in the committee whose proceedings were broadcast writing the Constitution in detail. We have not only a Constitution that is Canadian made, we have one made in this House. The problem is that the Hon. Member for Yukon wants to eat his cake and have it too. His Party is famous for being unable to make up its mind. It is often badly split on issues. Unlike the Liberal caucus, of which I am proud to be a part, it cannot even resolve its differences in an intelligent manner behind closed doors. There is only one rule—

Mr. Taylor: We do not have a dictator.

Mr. Simmons: —for uniting that bunch—the rule of political expediency. We see that rule in play this very moment, Mr. Speaker, as the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor) comes awake for a moment to get into the issue. He sees that somehow there may be an opportunity for some political expediency.

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The Hon. Member has no right to tell a lie. I have been awake all day. I am wide awake all the time I am in the House. Why try to mislead people?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member is not rising on a point of order. The Hon. Member for Burin-St. George's (Mr. Simmons) has the floor.

Mr. Simmons: Mr. Speaker, there can be no question that the Hon. Member for Bow River is now awake. That is exactly what I said a moment ago.

I invite the Hon. Member to look at the western grain transportation legislation. His Party is so divided between the people who are in the pockets of the railways on the one hand and the people who are in the pockets of the cattle barons on the other, that when they try to please everyone they wind up opposing mutely and supporting nothing whatsoever.

Mr. Taylor: Go and talk to the people.

Mr. Simmons: I am talking to the people. I am not hiding on the other side of the camera like the gentleman from Bow River.

Mr. Taylor: You are hiding under the Prime Minister's coattails.

Mr. Simmons: He will get his opportunity in this debate. I am standing in front of the camera; he is hiding behind it. When he gets his chance I invite him to get up and make the kind of speech he is making now. On second thought, he should not make the kind of speech he is making now because he would make an awful show of himself. He should make an intelligent speech as soon as I am through with my few remarks.

Mr. Taylor: Then mind your own business.

Mr. Simmons: This is my business.

Mr. Taylor: We will look after the West; you look after Newfoundland.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for Burin-St. George's has the floor.

Mr. Simmons: Mr. Speaker, that is the kind of regionalism that is tearing the country apart. I am a Member from Newfoundland but I have concerns for other parts of the country. If the Hon. Member for Bow River had the same kinds of concerns for my part of the country—

Mr. Taylor: Telling them what is good for them.

Mr. Simmons: —we would have a much more united country.

Mr. Taylor: If you would listen, we would have a much more united country.

Mr. Simmons: It is a fundamental principle of Parliament that there be an informed, well-intentioned Opposition. That is what this Parliament lacks. In its place we have an Opposition that is obsessed with power, obsessed with bile, obsessed with regionalism, obsessed with hate.

Mr. Taylor: We listen to the people.

Mr. Simmons: It is a Parliament with an Opposition which is still fighting the 1980 election; an Opposition which refuses to accept the electoral decision of the Canadian people made in February, 1980. When will this Opposition stop shouting across the aisle and tell us in cool, candid terms what it stands for? It stands for democracy—yet it deals with its own members in the most ruthless, undemocratic manner. Ask the Hon. Member for Yellowhead (Mr. Clark). Ask the Hon. Member for Capilano (Mr. Huntington) how it feels to be dealt with, in a ruthless, undemocratic manner. That Party stands for PetroCan—and against it; it stands for social programs, but it wants to cut them; it stands for bilingualism—and against it.

Mr. Taylor: We stand for honesty.

Mr. Simmons: It stands for a united country, yet it works day and night to divide it and fragment it, to play one region against the other. It stands on a fence.

Mr. Taylor: We stand for everything above the table, not under it.

Mr. Simmons: It stands on a fence. Fences have a way of doing painful things to those who stand on them too long.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Or to those who try to jump over them.

Mr. Simmons: Where does that Party stand on Canadian-American relations?

Mr. Taylor: Above the table.

Mr. Simmons: Ask the Hon. Member for St. John's West (Mr. Crosbie), then the Hon. Member for Yellowhead, and you will get two different answers about where they stand on Canadian-American relations.

Mr. Taylor: They will both be honest.

[Translation]

Mr. Simmons: Mr. Speaker, what is the Tories' position concerning the Constitution in relation with Quebec? When the Hon. Member for Yellowhead and the Hon. Member for St. John's West are asked the question, we get two entirely different answers.

[English]

Mr. Taylor: They won't be under the table. They won't be sneaking around.

Mr. Simmons: Mr. Speaker, does the Hon. Member opposite become unwound sometimes or does he talk like that all the time? Does he make some sense sometimes?

Mr. Taylor: We are above the table all the time; we are not sneaking around.

Mr. Simmons: Mr. Speaker, I will send the Hon. Member a throat lozenge in a moment because he is going to need it.

I listened with great interest to the Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) and I have two points to make, in conclusion.

Mr. Taylor: You have not said anything yet.

Mr. Simmons: First, he asked why the Tories should give up an Opposition day for foreign policy. Why, indeed? If they do not think foreign policy is important, then they should not give up a day. I always understood that those debates were put down on important issues. If Hon. Members opposite believe foreign policy is important, let them use an Opposition day to debate it. They cannot have it both ways. It is the old Tory tactic again, however—the old business of trying to have their cake and eat it too. Having said that—

Mr. Taylor: The cake is always above the table, never under it.

Mr. Simmons: —I assure my good friend from St. John's East, who has just come into the Chamber, that my notes clearly reflect the following.

Mr. Taylor: You have notes? You needed notes to make this speech?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for Burin-St. George's has the floor.

Mr. Simmons: Mr. Speaker, I want to say to my good friend from St. John's East that I felt he made several excellent observations and constructive suggestions for change. Indeed, his colleague from Yukon could take a page out of his book. I would say the same thing for the hon. gentleman for Bow River, but that would require some ability—

Mr. Taylor: Whatever we say will be above the table, not sneaking around. I won't be full of hatred.

Mr. Simmons: I want to say to the Hon. Member for St. John's East that it was a real pleasure to work with him on committee and it continues to be a pleasure. Unlike some Tories I know, he has the ability, learned over long years in this Chamber, to put his partisanship aside sometimes, as he did in this debate today—

Mr. Taylor: I wish you would follow his example.

Mr. Simmons: —and to come before the committee on parliamentary reform with some constructive ideas. It has been an absolute pleasure to work with him, the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton (Mr. Baker), and several other Members who are not in the House.

Mr. Taylor: Why don't you follow their example?

Mr. Simmons: I share the guarded optimism which the Hon. Member for St. John's East brought to the debate this morning. There was a constructive tone to his remarks. If I may paraphrase his remarks roughly, he said he is not very happy with many things he has seen in the House. I agree with him on that. Then he said in effect, "I believe there is some hope if we do this and this and this." The ideas expressed here this morning, he and I and others have already expressed in the parliamentary reform committee, and I expect in time many of these ideas will come forward by way of recommendations from that committee to this Chamber for implementation.

• (1540)

I want to make one other point to the Hon. Member for St. John's East. The Hon. Member made much of the fact that certain of the reports of the committee had not been concurred in. I am not disturbed about that particular issue because I understood that what was really needed in this House we already have, that is, a concurrence on those measures which were proposed on an interim basis. We have concurrence on that and we are working under those interim arrangements for the balance of this calendar year. In the meantime, we have literally many months in which to address the issue of whether we will concur in the subsequent reports which will come forward from that committee. Therefore, I would say to that Hon. Member that I am not particularly concerned that the House has not seen fit at this point in time to concur in those reports, although I would say to him that if he is really concerned about the issue, as I believe him to be, he should talk to the interim Leader of the Opposition because in many of these matters, I understand from our Government House Leader, we are waiting for the signal from the Tory Opposition House Leader so that we can seek concurrence in several of those reports.

Mr. McGrath: Mr. Speaker, would the Hon. Member for Burin-St. George's (Mr. Simmons) be prepared, as a Government supporter, to take the initiative and move concurrence in the fifth and sixth reports? He can forget the fourth report dealing with the speakership, but the fifth report and sixth report are critical to what we have already done. Is he prepared to move concurrence and test the House? That is the true test. It is not whether or not Members opposite are waiting for a signal from us. The initiative has to come from the Government.

Mr. Simmons: Mr. Speaker, I say to my friend, the Hon. Member for St. John's East, that that would certainly be the "grandstand" thing to do. I have never been known for a lot of grandstanding. I would rather await the process. If this were the end of the calendar year and we were coming close to the new year in which we would have to revert to the old rules or anticipate some new ones, then I could see the urgency of doing something and I would be urging the Hon. Member to get up and move a private resolution, or I would think about doing it myself, for that matter. What I am saying now is that we have six months before the end of the year and certainly in that time either the interim Leader of the Opposition and the Government House Leader, or the successor, the gentleman from St. John's West, next week, will be able to do that. Perhaps the individual from Baie Comeau, Antigonish, or whoever becomes the Leader of the Party will be able to do it. However, I say to the Hon. Member that I see the need for a change because I participated in the committee proceedings which recommended that change. I do not see the need for a stampede. It is going to be a number of months before the interim rules run out in terms of the sunset clause on them and in that time, surely, we can get heads together, the new Leader of the Opposition with the Government House Leader.

Hon. Allan B. McKinnon (Victoria): Mr. Speaker, 10 per cent of the Hon. Member's speech was devoted to the issues and during the other 90 per cent he attacked personally the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Nielsen), but during that 10 per cent of his speech he mentioned that the reason we do not discuss foreign policy very often here seems to be the fault of the Opposition. I am sure he is aware that we could discuss it any time that the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. MacEachen), or the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau), chose to make a statement on motions on any of the international conferences they attend. However, they prefer to make them, as the Hon. Member knows, at press conferences. I wonder if the Hon. Member could tell us the last time that the Government side made a statement on motions on anything to do with external affairs?

Mr. Simmons: Mr. Speaker, in answer to the specific last question, I do not think they have made one for a long time, and I will go further and say that they would be crazy if they tried to make one under the present circumstances in the House. You cannot make statements by Ministers with the bells ringing and when we have some Government business we have to get through. We have very little Government time in which to get it through.

The Hon. Member for St. John's East made a suggestion this morning which is worthy of note and will be taken under advisement, which is whether we should be making statements at six o'clock or at eight o'clock. The crux of the issue is not whether the Government wants to make statements, I say, but whether the Government can find a way to do so without eating too heavily into Government time which is so badly needed to expedite Government business in this Chamber.

With respect to the Hon. Member's earlier comment, Mr. Speaker, as to how much of my time was spent on the issues and how much time was not, I say to him that I scarcely see how he could hear what I was saying in any event because he was being harassed from behind by his friend, the Hon. Member for Bow River. How he could hear anything I said I am at a loss to understand. Obviously, he has good ears and he has the earpiece in his ear, and it makes all the difference, and I thank him for listening to me.

Hon. Walter Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I awakened this morning with the resolution in my heart that I would say or do nothing partisan this week.

Mr. Johnston: That's a precedent.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): The Minister of State for Economic Development (Mr. Johnston) says that that is a precedent. He may be right or wrong with that resolution. I would like to start off by congratulating the Hon. Member for Burin-St. George's (Mr. Simmons) on the very high quality of his speech. In fact, it is of a higher quality than we usually hear from the Hon. Member for Burin-St. George's and for that I believe the House should be extremely grateful. I know they were thrilled in the gallery with the speech he made. In fact, I understand they left before I got up and as he was sitting down. I did not want to be partisan and that is not my intention. I want the Hon. Member to know that I as well accept kindly and warmly his expressions of goodwill toward the present Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Nielsen) in the House of Commons. I am sure that, although the Chamber is awash with his crocodile tears worrying about the Leader of the Opposition, all of it will be taken in the best of heart, and that the Leader of the Opposition has his own way of expressing his grateful thanks for such warm words as he is about to depart. I am certain that the Hon. Member for Burin-St. George's will be sending the Leader of the Opposition an autographed copy of his speech which the Leader of the Opposition can hang up in the place where he usually keeps these memorials and testimonials to the work he has done in the period of time he has been Leader of the Opposition.

As a matter of fact, I believe, we are going to have an evening for the Leader of the Opposition within the next day or so. I feel it might be a good idea to read the speech of my friend during that evening, which will indicate to the Leader of the Opposition just how effective he has been in this interim period, and I want to take this opportunity to congratulate the Leader of the Opposition for the work he has done in this Parliament in a very difficult situation, and in dealing with a very difficult Government.

I wanted to begin my remarks in that ecumenical sense with respect to my friend, the Hon. Member for Burin-St. George's. I want to say to the people of Burin-St. George's that he is not always like this.

Mr. McKinnon: He is asleep part of the time.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Yes, perhaps he is not that way when he is asleep, but I see him under other circumstances. I just want to say that he is not always of such a high quality. In fact, there are occasions when he is of much higher quality in terms of his contribution to the Parliament of Canada.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): When?

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Well, I share with him a membership on the Special Committee on Standing Orders and Procedure, and I must say that he has made a good contribution. And it was because of the contributions he has made on these occasions, away from the spotlight, away from the television cameras, and away from the Press Gallery, very constructive contributions, that I became a little concerned about my friend from Burin-St. George's as I listened to him today. I felt only that he had been overcome by the atmosphere in this House of Commons today and by the people who were here to listen to him, those who did not leave. I sat through it all and that is why I am prepared to say, Mr. Speaker, and prepared to attest anywhere, that his speech today is of higher quality than he has delivered on other occasions in the House of Commons, and he is to be congratulated. We have sat together on committee, and I want to talk about that committee because, frankly, it was one of the most rewarding experiences I have had since I came to Parliament, bar none. I believe that has been the experience of all Hon. Members who have sat or are sitting on that Special Committee on Standing Orders and Procedures which has examined the rules and procedures, and we have some reports which I hope that the Hon. Members of this House of Commons, and the Government, will consider very carefully. They are there on the record.

There have been some fundamental changes made in the operation of this House of Commons. Members of the Committees understand the powers given to smaller but I believe more effective standing committees, at least potentially so. It will come as some surprise to Members as they begin to realize the scope of the work open to private Members with respect to those reforms. Some of the members of the Committee travelled to the United Kingdom and watched committees in operation and talked about special kinds of committees. It became apparent that we had just taken the first step and that the second step was to ensure that somehow or other, while Members of the standing committees of this House would exercise their function examining the Estimates and beyond that to exercise their right to investigate, there was a necessity for the Government to be assured that its legislative program could proceed. There could be some conflict between the Members' work on Estimates in the standing committees and their investigative capacity and the initiative the House gave them by accepting the third report and the necessity of this House being able to deal with legislation in a sensible way.

I do not think any Member has spoken yet, Mr. Speaker, about the sixth report in which the Special Committee considered one of the fundamental tasks of Parliament, that is the examination and consideration of legislation. What we in the Committee presumed to suggest to the House in our sixth report were two fundamental changes which will allow private Members of Parliament to undertake the expanding workload the Committee members feel is going to be pressed upon Parliament as a result of the reforms. Dealing with legislation, the Special Committee proposed that we establish what are to be called ad hoc legislative committees which would work this way: upon second reading of a Bill and the reference to committee, there would be established by the striking committee a representative committee of Members from all sides, the size and composition of which would represent the Party strengths in the House which could vary from Parliament to Parliament. That committee would have all the powers to examine legislation that our standing committees now have for the period of time necessary, and then the committee would dissolve itself.

Mr. McGrath: Changeability.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): My friend, the Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) has reminded me that that would allow consideration of legislation to go on while standing committees were dealing with Estimates and matters flowing therefrom. More than that, it would allow Members with interest and expertise to be taken from the standing committees of the House to be placed on the legislative committees. I believe that would get away from the conflict which can sometimes exist when the standing committees are dealing with Estimates and dealing with legislation at the same time. It would allow the best expertise of the House of Commons to be free, Bill after Bill after Bill, to deal with the principles set forth in particular Bills. They would then dissolve, the next piece of legislation would come forward, another committee struck, and it can be dealt with in that way.

This was the unanimous opinion of the Committee. The report of the Committee, under the very able chairmanship of the Hon. Member for Pontiac-Gatineau-Labelle (Mr. Lefebvre) is there to be read, and we hope it will be adopted.

The other aspect of that report which was missed completely in the press reports at the time is the creation of a system of so-called neutral chairmen. A panel of chairmen would be chosen by the Speaker in the House who would become from time to time the chairmen of these legislative committees. The Committee thought that the composition of that panel of chairmen would be more or less proportionally equal to the physical division of the House of Commons. There would be representation from Members of the Opposition, who have the same interests in legislation but maybe from a different point of view, as well as from the Government side on a more or less equal basis. The Speaker would have the responsiblity of assigning from that panel, presumably after some consultation if that was the particular style, a chairman of the legislative committee to deal with Bill No. so and so. That person would act in that capacity and that committee would have all the powers of a committee of the House of Commons.

Our hope is not only to establish a sense of impartiality in dealing with legislation so far as the chairmanship of these committees is concerned, but to develop within the House of Commons men and women who could be seen by Members of the House of Commons over a period of time to be training themselves for the office which you hold, Mr. Speaker, the office that Madam Speaker holds and the office that the Hon. Member for Lachine (Mr. Blaker) holds. That ties in with the hope of the Committee that those who aspire to the job of Speakership do so for the job itself and go into that role with that objective in mind, namely that of becoming the first commoner in this House of Commons. We believe that not only would legislation be better considered by Members who are interested in the legislation, because a striking committee would decide what Members would be on the particular committee, but that those committees would be chaired in a neutral way so that this Government's legislative work could be facilitated. At the same time we would be strengthening the institution of the Speakership.

I ask all my colleagues in the House of Commons to consider that sixth report, particularly the last part dealing with the neutral chairmen, which has never been considered. I would ask the press to consider it as well as it has not been considered by them.

I never cease to be amazed, Mr. Speaker, at the capacity of this partisan House, from time to time, to do things and act in a worth-while way. People do not believe it. They watch Question Period and think that is all that occurs. They never watch debates in the House of Commons. They never see a committee operating. They had one good occasion to do that during the constitutional committee hearings in the course of this Parliament, but normally they never see it. When you tell them there are standing committees and Members labouring day and night, week after week, on the standing committees, they do not believe it at all because they do not see it on television. It is my hope that sometime, without destroying the committee system, there will be opportunities for the committee meetings to be televised. I hope that will be the case.

I was truly astounded at the results of the work of the subcommittee of the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs under the chairmanship of the Hon. Member for Windsor-Walkerville (Mr. MacGuigan), who is now the Attorney General and the Minister of Justice, with respect to prison reform. As a result of the non-partisan "seek the truth" approach that subcommittee took, there is a process in place in the Department concerning prison reform. All the special committees have worked well, with the objective being to seek the truth and make the best recommendation. Those special committees were established under this Government and were foreseen by our Government with our select committees on volunteerism and a host of other subjects.

Today I asked a very serious question of the Solicitor General (Mr. Kaplan) in the House of Commons with respect to the security legislation in the House. There is a great deal of controversy in Canada over the Government's proposal with regard to the new security service. There are problems within the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. There are problems within the House of Commons. I say to the Government of the day, as I would say to any Government of the day, that among the private members of this House of Commons, the ones who do not hold office, those who are not House Leaders, Cabinet Ministers, Parliamentary Secretaries or Speakers, there is a great deal of expertise. There are numbers of inquiring minds and there is an ability to work hard.

Today I suggested very seriously, and the Solicitor General seemed to take kindly to the suggestion, that perhaps it would be appropriate if the subject matter of the Bill, which I believe is Bill C-157, were sent to a special committee of the House of Commons. There should be a simple reference of the Bill to the committee, having attached to the reference the actual text of the Bill itself. That committee, whatever it is, should be given a specific time within which to report, a reasonable time not a long time so that those who are interested in it could be heard.

Does Your Honour remember that the last time that was done concerning a major piece of legislation it was with regard to the immigration Bill, before 1979? That was a controversial piece of legislation, legislation so fundamental that it had the potential to change the complexion of the country. My friend, the Hon. Member for Sarnia-Lambton (Mr. Cullen), was the Minister at that time, I believe. What occurred was that the Government of the day was wise enough, smart enough and, I guess, even political enough to recognize the problems. There was a special joint committee which went across the country and spoke to the interest groups, allowing the public to be heard and submissions to be made to Parliament before the Government had taken a hard and fast position, as it invariably does on second reading under our rules, which are silly from time to time. They are positions which cannot be changed. The results and report of the committee went to the Department. The Bill was vastly rewritten. It followed many of the recommendations from Members of Parliament.

If Your Honour will recall, the second reading debate on that fundamental position, that fundamental piece of legislation, did not amount to 10 days or two weeks and the bells were not rung. It was not a case of the Government trying to shove a piece of legislation down Parliament's throat, as it is trying to do with regard to the Crow rate. It was not a case similar to the omnibus Bill. It was a sensible seeking for the truth by a parliamentary committee, with the result that truth was found and considered. As a result of the process involving what started off as being a very controversial Bill, it took only four days to complete the second reading debate. There were some amendments later on. However, to my mind, that was a sensible operation within the parliamentary system.

It is amazing how the task forces have worked within this Parliament, when Members of Parliament have been asked to concentrate together on a particular matter and to seek the truth. Members of Parliament are capable of some great things. This is an opportunity for the Solicitor General, his colleagues and the Government to emulate a process which had worked before. I hope they will consider it.

I do not speak in any partisan terms with respect to this motion. Our process with respect to motions requires them to be dealt with in partisan terms. One motion may be less partisan and another one more partisan. However, that is the kind of process we have in this House. That is why it must be reformed and changed.

I say to Your Honour that I worry about what the well-meaning, well-intentioned democracy thinks of Parliament. I am worried about the regard for Parliament in the Privy Council Office from time to time. Why should I not worry? I have been reading a report which appeared in the Vancouver Sun by Mr. Jamie Lamb of Ottawa. There is a requirement for Crown agencies and corporations to file annual reports and to file them within a certain period of time. The Canada Post Corporation has not filed its annual report and financial statements within three months of the end of its fiscal year. It is not the only offender. The column states that according to the latest report by the Auditor General, not a single Crown agency filed its report within a three-month period after the end of its fiscal year, not one.

Every Member of Parliament, including Your Honour, and every person who cares about this place must be concerned about that kind of regard for the law which is passed here. That is the purpose of this motion. That is why I believe that the motion is supportable in allowing the House to advance some positive improvements to the institution to make it much more responsible, not only concerning Members of Parliament but also concerning the requirements of the Canadian people.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Are there Hon. Members rising to ask questions? If not, the Chair recognizes the Hon. Member for Sarnia-Lambton (Mr. Cullen).

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Bud Cullen (Sarnia-Lambton): I thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I give thanks to the Minister of Supply and Services (Mr. Blais) for that round of applause.

My first words must be words of compliment to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Pinard) who had an awesome task, a very difficult one, in very difficult times, in endeavouring to pass legislation, motions or budget through this particular House. Those of us from both sides of the House who have been here for some time are quick to mention to almost anyone who asks that the mood in the House has been sour, bitter and certainly inappropriate if work is to be done on a co-operative basis. Therefore, the President of the Privy Council, faced with that particular hurdle, has done a commendable job when one considers the volume of legislation that he has been able to get through.

There are good reasons why this session has had to be extended. To be fair, as my friend, the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton (Mr. Baker) said, trying to be non-partisan, there are difficulties or faults on both sides. What we must do in this Parliament is to strive the best we can to overcome that kind of bitterness. For that reason, I was a little sorry that the motion was in the name of the Leader of the Official Opposition (Mr. Nielsen) because his very nature, his very style in the House, is pretty partisan, whether as the Hon. Member for Yukon or as House Leader or as Leader of the Official Opposition. That is his way of doing things and he is very tough in his approaches. However, his kind of introduction to a speech on Parliament and how Parliament should operate gives us certain vibes, on this particular side, which make us want to respond in kind.

I have written my comments at least three different times because of the tone of that particular speech. With the number of years of service he has had in the House of Commons, particularly having served as a House Leader for the Official Opposition, I thought that in addition to his criticisms about the things that are happening now, we might have heard some more positive approach as to what he would like to see, rather than only those things which are disturbing him. However, I waited, as my friend and colleague did, to hear something in a positive vein from the Leader of the Official Opposition, something that he might have had to lend to the debate. After all, this is his motion, standing in his name. However, his speech was badly lacking.

I listened very carefully to the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans). He gave the impression that because the Government has the majority, that Government has no right to believe that it should be able to get its legislation through and that, in effect this should become a sausage factory, with a quick and easy debate and, bang, the legislation going through. He and I both know that this is not the idea of this Government, a majority Government, in this House or in any particular legislature. However, I think we must recognize that a Party is elected to govern a country and has the right, as accepted in the mother of Parliament, Westminster, to get its legislation through.

What we are entitled to in this House as backbenchers, whether we be on the Government side or the Opposition side, is a good ventilation of a particular piece of legislation, even to the extent that the debate may establish, in the mind of the Government, that the particular Bill should not go through, that it should be changed, or that amendments should be made at the committee stage. That is what debate is all about. That is what the Government believes when it puts forward a particular piece of legislation. Always remember that when legislation comes forward, it is not a measure that the Minister or the Government has dreamed up overnight. It is legislation that has taken a lot of work by departmental people, Ministers' advisers and others. It goes through caucuses and Cabinet committees before it sees the light of day in the House. Legislation has already had a fair amount of debate even before being introduced in the House.

This is not to suggest that legislation is perfect, because much of it is imperfect. Changes were made to much of the legislation I had the honour of introducing in the House, and it was better legislation as a result.

The Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton mentioned the immigration situation. I do not want to take credit for the splendid work done by the late Bob Andras. He initiated the idea for this particular committee to travel across the country to hear the views of the people. Unfortunately, I think too many Canadians missed a glorious opportunity to voice their opinion. Many people came to those meetings with a particular axe to grind and disrupted many meetings.

I will never forget the Hon. Martin O'Connell who chaired that particular committee. There was no one more dedicated to doing something for the immigration procedures in Canada than Mr. O'Connell. All too often his committee came up against people who were abusive, loud and ill-prepared to make a cogent argument. In the final analysis, that committee submitted a splendid report.

I want to say that I believe that many cheap shots are taken at the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau), saying that he is in fact downgrading Parliament. I think we should remember that it was this Prime Minister who realized that Governments and Cabinet Ministers had access to the civil service and substantial back-up information which was not available to the Opposition Parties. He saw fit to make research money available to the Opposition Parties so that they could have better research facilities to ask more informed questions on the Order Paper, make better speeches and have more informed positions. This could be done rather than a Member of Parliament having to rely on one or two persons or a small over-all group to give assistance. This was done with the purpose of making the Opposition better informed and to give them a greater opportunity to have access to more information on a particular subject before the House.

The Prime Minister is here for every Question Period which it is possible for him to attend. He consistently attended even when there was a trial system in place some years ago when half the Cabinet would attend one day and the other half of the Cabinet on the next. This was somewhat similar to the British system where certain Cabinet Ministers and junior Ministers are there only on certain days of the week. My colleague referred to that earlier. I believe that our Question Period is better. However, it was proper to experiment because a lot of Ministers' time is in fact wasted in the House of Commons when they sit here day after day without being asked a question. They conceivably could be working on other projects. In any event, that experiment failed and we returned to the practice of having all Cabinet Ministers in the House when they were in Ottawa. It was only an attempt to improve the Question Period.

One area for which we come under criticism from time to time concerns the trips that Members of Parliament make, whether it is to Commonwealth parliamentary associations or Canada-United States meetings. I hope that we will not bow to the pressure from people who say that these trips are merely junkets which are not worthwhile. In the approximately 15 years that I have been here, I found that I have learned something on every trip that I have made. One of the significant things I have learned is that there are many fine people on the other side of the House. When we leave the country, we do not go abroad as Liberal Members of Parliament, NDP Members of Parliament or Conservative Members of Parliament; we go outside of the country as Canadian Members of Parliament, and very often that is when we do our most effective work.

I want to compliment the Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) for raising the level of the debate. In his way I think he tried to convey some of the ideas that he, the Member for Nepean-Carleton, and those of us on this side who served on that particular committee felt were necessary in order to make Parliament more relevant and efficient, in order to give the ordinary Member of Parliament more responsibility and relevance.

In this respect, many of us came here from businesses, busy law practices, medical professions and farms. We were busy people doing important things and believed we could do something more important by coming here. It is a frustrating experience to find that the work one has done, speeches and the representations one has made and the questions asked, are seemingly ignored. The frustration builds to a point where a Member from either side feels that all the work that has been done with the best intentions does not have the significance or importance that it should in fact have.

I agree with the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton that the Committee has presented some significant reports. However, I am somewhat apprehensive about the fact that the Member for St. John's East and the Member for Nepean-Carleton may be pushing these reports too quickly. While these are excellent reports that can be applied, I believe they need further study.

I am particularly supportive of the concept of a committee of chairmen. I am also in favour of the idea of a legislative committee that studies various pieces of legislation. There may be Members who serve on committees now but who are not interested in a particular piece of legislation.

There are areas in the report for which we were able to obtain great co-operation. I recommend these reports to all Members of the House, particularly to the backbenchers on both sides, because they are particularly significant for them.

In small tribute to the class of 1968, the group which came here at that particular time, I would like to read a few comments made by a very nervous Member of Parliament who was moving the Address in Reply back in 1969. It is rather interesting to quote the Governor General at that time who said:

—the possibilities for good for Canada of my new office and duty—

That is what we took as a particular tone. This Member said as reported at page 6 of Hansard of October 23, 1969:

Some in this House may have to be reminded from time to time that we are here for the good of Canada and that is our prime responsibility. No one is asked to lose sight of the fact that we are politicians and that we have obligations to our respective parties nor that we, as individuals, are accountable to our constituents. But, in the final analysis, Canada and the betterment of Canada must come first.

He went on to say:

We in this House have an awesome responsibility and it far outweighs the immediate responsibility imposed upon the Prime Minister and his cabinet to deal with present day legislation. We, and I mean all members of this House, have an obligation to make the House of Commons more relevant, to establish to the satisfaction of the citizens of Canada that the government has the single, most important role to play in the development of our country. Our legislation, our conduct, our rules and our dedication all receive the daily scrutiny of the press, radio and television. The legislation of the present Liberal government receives the criticism, constructive and, unfortunately, sometimes otherwise, of the opposition parties.

In the various committees of the House this legislation is reviewed, critized, amended and reported back to the House. This legislation is then subject to amendment and these amendments are debated. There are many safeguards before proposed legislation becomes law and this is as it should be.

It is difficult however to explain to the citizen of Canada who is not familiar with these procedures the necessity for taking time and having safeguards. But that self-same citizen has a good point. I think we must be careful in the House of Commons that we do not take too much time. We must look at the program of legislative proposals, establish the priorities, and then calculate the time which is available to us if we are to ensure that this legislative program will be adopted within the time available.

It is interesting to note that the Sarnia Observer in an article in July, 1969, said this:

The real threat to parliament isn't the possible danger of cutting off productive and informative debate on a measure, but the steady erosion of prestige by tiresome speeches, lack of decorum, obstructionism and poor attendance in the House. The House of Commons is its own worst enemy and every time it aids its own weaknesses it chips away a little more of its own fabric.

That was written in the Sarnia Observer some 14 years ago.

Mr. Benjamin: Who said what you quoted earlier?

Mr. Cullen: I know those asking will want to get a copy of it. If they go back to Hansard of October 23, 1969, they will find that the Hon. Member for Sarnia that day made those particular comments.

One comment particularly made by Members opposite concerns the so-called lack of accountability as a result of the Estimates. I would invite those Members, if they will take the time, to look at the Estimates presently being studied before the various committees. They will find that very few questions are asked about the Estimates. The only questions asked are on issues that happened to be particularly attractive on that particular day. They do not concern whether a Minister has ten more person years in his Department or why so many people have been added or subtracted in management. Those questions do not ask why a departmental budget has risen by $100 million or $200 million. Usually it is a political question that is asked. I am not being critical, although I sometimes think there is a bit of hypocrisy when I hear the Government is not being held accountable. We now have the Estimates before several committees. All kinds of information is made available by the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. Gray) and by Treasury Board. There is an opportunity to do an effective examination of the accounts of the Government. That opportunity is not taken in too many cases. Here is an area where, if Members of the Opposition feel they do not have an important enough role to play because they are not introducing legislation, they might give some thought to using the committees as they were meant to be used.

• (1620)

Our special committee had the opportunity to visit Westminster. One of the areas that impressed me was the idea of communicating through the usual channel. House Leaders do not work one with the other; they talk in the House, they debate in the House. The usual channel is a civil servant, the Government House Leader, the Whip of whoever is handling the matter who moves a particular program for the week. The usual channel discusses the program with the Opposition. Perhaps the Opposition says: "We do not like this, move it to another day." Negotiations take place in that particular atmosphere. I often wonder how House Leaders for the Government side and for the Opposition Parties harangue one another in a debate and then immediately move into a House Leaders' meeting and try to resolve something in a co-operative way. It seems to me the whole atmosphere is poisoned from the standpoint of working out some co-operative method whereby House business can be moved forward. On that basis I think there is something to be said for the British idea of the usual channel.

Mr. Benjamin: You know better than that.

Mr. Cullen: I am happy this particular debate was initiated today. I believe the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton indicated that probably there would not be many people listening to it or for that matter interested in it. But those of us who have a feeling for this place, and particularly for the House of Commons, have an obligation to read some of the reports put out by our Committee. We have an obligation to try to determine how we can make a better and more important contribution, how we can make this place more relevant for people who come after us and serve in this capacity. If the motion put forward by the Leader of the Opposition does not do anything more or accomplish anything more than that, if we have done that, we will have fulfilled our obligations.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Hon. Member for Sarnia-Lambton (Mr. Cullen), who has been here as long as I have. I look forward to June 22. Does the Hon. Member think it proper that when a House Leader for an Opposition Party submits a proposal in writing to the Government House Leader on how to deal with a Bill in a much more expeditious manner—or deal in a much more expeditious manner with at least parts of it—that it deserves the courtesy of a reply, yes, no or maybe, and that it deserves some further discussion? If the Hon. Member agrees with that, then would he also give us a commitment that he will talk with his own House Leader? I am speaking about Bill C-155 on the statutory grain rates in particular.

Mr. Cullen: First I must say to the Hon. Member that I have not been in the House as long as he has. He may have forgotten that I lost my seat in 1979, so I have a gestation period shortage of about nine months.

At the beginning I thought the Hon. Member was making a case. Then he said "if we are prepared to put parts of a Bill through." I think the House Leader has to worry about all of the legislation. During the bell ringing on the energy Bill, the House Leaders did meet and did work out a scheme whereby that very controversial and difficult piece of legislation became pieces of legislation which were passed before the end of the year.

We have not finished the debate on the Crow by a long shot. It may be the Government House Leader is looking at it. I am not being paid even a Parliamentary Secretary's salary so I do not want to usurp the role of a Minister, but I have so much respect for the House leader we have that I expect the Hon. Member will get a reply soon.

Mr. Benjamin: That is what he said.

Mr. Albert Cooper (Peace River): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have the opportunity to enter the debate today. This debate is one of considerable interest to me. I am pleased to follow the Hon. Member for Sarnia-Lambton (Mr. Cullen). I served with him on the Special Committee on Standing Orders and Procedure. I have enjoyed his contributions in the Committee and his comments here today.

I was going to comment on the remarks made by the Hon. Member for Burin-St. George's (Mr. Simmons), but I think the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton (Mr. Baker) did a most adequate job and made the point very effectively. Therefore I will not comment.

I will speak briefly of the Committee. Serving on this Committee has been an exciting experience for me as a new Member of this House. I have had an opportunity to look at the rules, learn about them and to learn of their implications. Essentially, I have been able to get a better feel for this House than I would have otherwise had I not been a Member of this Special Committee.

I have been listening to the debate with interest today, in particular the comments made by the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton, the Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath), and other Members.

I want to approach this subject on three different levels. The first is to look a little bit at what I see as the historical purpose of Parliament. Second, I will look briefly at the way I see the present situation and outline some of the concerns that I have with it. Third, I will look at what I perceive as some potential for change and relate some of the ideas we have been debating in Committee.

Looking first at the history of Parliament, we find that the purpose of Parliament, our Parliament's mother, really grew out of the frustration of a people who had rulers with absolute power. The king and Parliament could not agree on the role of one or the other. Parliament had control of taxation and the king had control of virtually everything else. Because Parliament did not co-operate and grant the king excessive taxation, he turned around and suspended it. A revolution took place that displaced the king and we ended up with a fellow by the name of Cromwell, who eventually became a dictator. That era was followed by a king with fewer powers, and Parliament began the long evolution that brings us to where we are today. Parliament has moved toward becoming both the representative and the governor of its people, which is a unique role, and is in some ways a profound contradiction. However, we as parliamentarians must do all we can to preserve both of these aspects.

Lately I have had some concern. I can speak only as a Member of this House since 1980. This Government has ignored its task of according Parliament the respect it is due. First, in some cases I think it has ignored the legitimacy of respresentation, and I think in some other cases it has been concentrating Government power outside of Parliament.

We have seen demonstrations of limited debate, which tend to reduce the function of representation for which all of us have a responsibility. Also, some of the decision-making process has been removed from Parliament, and that diminishes Parliament as governor.

I have some concern that Parliament has had its procedures undermined at the expense of traditions by having the importance of its conventions ignored, conventions which are a large part of our history and are of fundamental value to the way Parliament works and functions. Second, the vitality of the House is dependent upon a free and lively debate. The rules and procedures are backed up to a great degree by unwritten laws, conventions and things that we simply cannot put down in clear language.

I think this Government has ignored the history of the House, through its use of written rules. This Government has used them in certain ways in a spirit that is in contradiction to the conventions that were established. It is not in a sense doing anything illegal but very often it is doing something that is in fact excessive. I guess it very simply boils down to—and we talk about it often in Committee—the entire issue of attitude. Attitude is the difference between making a rule work, abusing a rule or just generally breaking down a rule. The question of attitude has been one of my concerns.

I would like to give some examples to demonstrate this. The first one was that which brought about the bells. This has become a significant matter. I guess it was the reason we then proceeded with the establishment of the Committee which has been very important to all of us. I am referring to the omnibus Bills, national energy Bills. They caused a great deal of concern to Members of the Opposition and all of us are familiar with the net result. Of course it then led to the formation of the Committee. The omnibus Bills are the first example I give of an abuse of Parliament.

The second example of that is so-called incomplete Bills. The most recent demonstration of that is the one now before the House in the Crow debate. The Minister amended the Bill outside the House, so on and so forth. There are many difficulties.

The third example is vague Bills. The most recent example would be the so-called spy Bill about which there were several questions today during Question Period.

The Government seems to resent—and I know it is a fact because I have heard several comments about it; in fact we heard comments about it today—the fact that we as an Opposition resist bad legislation. As a result, it has turned around and invoked, or at least threatened to invoke, closure or time allocation in some 22 instances since 1980. Two particularly significant debates on which the Government brought in closure were both on very important issues. Of course the first one was the Constitution. I found it quite unacceptable to see closure introduced on something as fundamental as the central laws or the rules by which the country will be operated. It was unacceptable to see closure brought in before many Members of the House had an opportunity to speak on the particular issue. The second one—and we will see evidence of it again tomorrow—was Canagrex. This Bill has a significant impact on a very large part of the country. In fact, it will ultimately affect all Canadians.

It becomes very much a concern of Members of the Opposition when the Government beings in closure, particularly when we think that in the present situation the Goverment does not have any representatives in a large part of the country west of Winnipeg. The Government has no Members from that area. Thus it is necessary to have time to debate issues which are very important to the people of that area in the House of Commons. Of course the two most recent examples were the Constitution and Canagrex. To have our opportunities to debate important new laws frustrated by closure is an abuse of Parliament.

There are a number of danger signals of which all Member should be aware. We have some conerns when the highest Government Members do not have much regard for our parliamentary tradition. One of the most recent examples was the budget leaks. We know from looking at British examples that there have been resignation for the most minute leaks, but in this case there was no resignation or admission that anything out of the ordinary had been done. According to the Government everything was fine.

Also we have seen the Government allowing non-Members—in this case the Party President—to pass out Government cheques at a particularly partisan function. People who wanted to receive cheques had to attend the partisan function to collect them. This happened in the riding of the Hon. Member for Bruce-Grey (Mr. Gurbin). That is the kind of danger signal at which we in Parliament should be looking. We should be worried about this type of thing and it should cause us some concern. It is the type of thing that can erode Parliament.

Another example was the Coalgate affair. Also we have seen favours bestowed upon people such as the architect about whom we recently talked in the House of Commons. Another area of concern was that of the executive being held accountable to Parliament. We have seen different ways in which the Government has managed to get around this. The first may well be that of attempting to overborrow. We have seen this in some of the borrowing Bills that have come before the House. We have seen letters of comfort being given to companies such as Canadair and Consolidated Computer. Of course, the net result is that we as Opposition Members and Parliament as a whole do not have a full opportunity in which to debate such issues.

Another would be the loose reporting rules for Crown corporations. Several Crown corporations have not been reporting although they are obligated to do so on a once a year basis. We are not seeing that translated into action. Another method of the Government's avoiding accounting for its actions in the House is the entire area of advocacy advertising. I refer to the advertising we have seen recently on the Crow issue and that on the Constitution. I believe they are examples of abuse of Parliament and of the rights of Members of Parliament. It takes away our opportunity to debate an issue thoroughly, clearly and freely in a forum which was designed for that purpose. It is an abuse of power and an abuse of Parliament.

Then there is the area of the agents of government policy which are beyond the scrutiny of the House. Recently we saw the formation of CIDC, a master Crown corporation, which is causing some concern. There is no authority from Parliament for that particular organization. In fact, it is operating by taking funds and channeling them through other Crown corporations. It is managing to survive, keep afloat and grow without Parliament's having had an opportunity to debate it.

Then we have the whole area of secrecy, those areas in which parliament has not been able to touch the Government. There have been Orders in Council. Probably one of the most significant ones debated in a while was the War Measures Act and the changes made to it behind closed doors without any debate in Parliament. This was a concern to people. Also there is the area of ministerial discretion which was clearly demonstrated in Bill C-48. I sat in on the committee which looked into that matter. We talked about some of the areas which gave Ministers so much power, latitude and freedom. Perhaps that abuse of Parliament is beneficial to the administrators, to Government Members and to Cabinet, but if the trend continues we will eventually have a Government without meaningful representation of the elected people. We will have government in secret, Cabinet-made law, laws made by bureaucrats and Crown corporations which have a significant impact upon the economy and upon the country, without any opportunity for debate in the House of Commons. Therefore, essentially Parliament will not be the source of law because it has no meaningful debate or representation on central issues. In fact we will have created a mere shell of a great institution.

Canadians are beginning to realize that many of the forces affecting them are government and that they are no longer Parliament. In other words, as individuals or as representatives of a given area, we do not have an opportunity really to influence or have an impact upon matters which will dramatically affect our people. Canadians have the right to expect democratic representation in institutions which have or should have control over government. Potentially we could return to much the same situation about which I talked in my earliest example of the reasons Parliament came about. We now have Cabinet gathering into its hands unlimited financial control, as well as control over everything else.

In the last part of my remarks I want to touch upon some of the things that have been done to effect some changes in this institution. I want to refer to two examples which we are practising right now in the House that are demonstrative of the things the Committee has been attempting to accomplish. The first item which caused concern in the House was the moving of Private Members' business to Wednesday to provide an entire day exclusively for Private Members' business. The purpose was to raise the profile of the private Member because as a Committee we have been struggling to see private Members take their due place in this institution and begin to have an impact. This can only happen when we as Members of the House of Commons become involved in the process and when it becomes alive and begins to function. This is very demonstrative of what the Commitee is trying to do.

The second change has been really quite exciting. I have heard a lot of comments from Members on both sides of the House. I refer to the 20-minute speech with the 10-minute question period. That has allowed some spontaneity in the House. It has allowed an exchange between Members. As a result of that, it tends to make us all a little more careful about what we are saying. We have to think a little more about what we are doing. The net result, hopefully, will be, as time goes on, a higher quality debate. Those are the kinds of things the Committee was trying to address. In December we will have to make a decision on the rules that are presently in force.

I want to look at a few things that I think are needed. Some of them have been talked about by previous speakers. One I have not heard anyone mention, and which I think is important, addresses some of the concerns of the Hon. Member for Sarnia-Lambton. I refer to the legislative timetable. It would allow Members on both sides of the House to come to grips with some of the concerns that we have as a Parliament. It would give the Opposition an opportunity to look at legislation that will be coming forward. We would know approximately when it would be coming forward. At that point we could sit down and discuss where we want to dig our heels in and what legislation we want to go through quickly.

There would be a sense of co-operation, a sense of give and take. In Britain they have that system. It is the so-called "usual channels" system. It seems to work fairly well. There is considerable agreement from all sides of the House about the legislation to go forward. We cannot write something like that into the rules, but it is something that can be brought forward with the proper attitude. I would like to see it done.

The second point I would like to see utilized in this House is the paper that has been under discussion for quite some time by various Members of the House, the Huntington-Lachance paper. It was written by these two Members on opposite sides of the House. They have done a great deal of work. They put a great deal of effort into the concerns that we have about Parliament and this institution, having a dramatic impact on the financial control of the House of Commons or the financial control of Government expenditures. That, of course, goes into all things like Crown corporations and agencies. I think it could become particularly significant and of concern to all Canadians. That is the second matter I would like to see the House deal with. Of course, we are now dealing with it in Committee. Hopefully we will have a chance to have it brought forward and the House will have the opportunity to make a decision on it.

Third, and I will not go into much detail on this because the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton spoke very clearly about it, is the whole area of legislative committees, those committees which deal with specific Bills. They are set up by a striking committee. Hopefully, there will be representation of the talent on both sides of the House in relation to a particular piece of legislation. That would have a positive effect on the way that we deal with legislation, the debate put forward on it. It could be a very positive move which this House can take.

The fourth point has become really exciting. It is very important. It would have a dramatic impact on the way that we approach our committees and quite an impact on that which is so fundamental to this House, namely, attitude. I refer, of course, to the chairmens' panel. We have heard mention of it. What it boils down to is that you have several Members from both Opposition and Governmnt who would become part of the Chairmen's panel. From that panel the Speaker would choose a chairman to be the chairman of a particular legislative committee to look at a particular piece of legislation. We could well have an Opposition Member as chairman of a particular committee. What you do is break down the partisan elements of the debate and you tend to focus on good legislation. That is something this Government, this Parliament and this House was designed to accomplish in the first place.

The fifth item is really the whole matter of attitude. That is the wide-ranging authority of this House to investigate executive action and related bodies' action, essentially anything that goes on which comes under the umbrella of the Government of the country. That is what we as Members of Parliament, no matter what Party or region we represent, were elected to do. That is the whole purpose and reason for a parliamentary government.

In conclusion I should like to say that this is an important institution. It is worth protecting and worth fighting for. We have to look very closely at the danger signals. That is why I mentioned some of them in my remarks. They are in fact dangerous signals and we should look at them. They should be flagged. We have to maintain with a vigilance the responsibility which we as elected Members have to ensure that the power of authority really does rest within this House and not within a select group of people.

Mr. Harquail: Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct one short question to the Hon. Member regarding Wednesday afternoon. I agree with him about the importance of Private Members' Hour, but it does break the momentum of the regular business of the House. Would the Hon. Member be good enough to elaborate on this? He stated that he had discussed this with a number of people. I would like to hear their view about taking up the heart of the week in this way. Members travel on Mondays and Fridays. I feel it breaks the momentum of the business of the House to have this in the very important middle part of the week, that is, on Wednesday. Could the Hon. Member elaborate a little more on that? He said that Private Members' business on Wednesday was the best solution and that it was the best time. I would like to hear his comments on how it affects the continuity of the business of the House, being in the middle of the week, and his comments on having Private Members' Hour on either Monday or Friday. I support him in the fact that Private Members' business is a very important element of the proceedings of this House.

Mr. Cooper: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the question. It is a legitimate one. I was not a Member of the Committee when the decision was made, but I know from discussions with Members on both sides of the House who were members of the Committee and Members at large that the reason for having it on Wednesday, as I mentioned earlier, was to raise the profile. In other words, putting it in the middle of the week would make it a significant and important debate. As the Hon. Member mentioned, Members travel on Monday and Friday.

The Committee realizes that this may not in fact be working. The House will have the opportunity to look at this in December. It may want to change that rule. I hope all Members will very carefully think through the importance of this. Some of the changes that have been made are very good. Some of the things we may wish to change, such as having Private Members' hour on another day. I have no objection to that as long as we accomplish what we set out to do, namely, raise the profile of the backbench Member.

Mr. Harquail: Mr. Speaker, since this began I have observed that there is a considerable decrease in attendance in mid-week. With the location of the nation's capital here, people go to Montreal or Toronto. They come back for a day or two.

Mr. Benjamin: That is not the whole country.

Mr. Harquail: No, but it involves a significant number of Members. The Hon. Member for Sarnia-Lambton talked about trying to bring importance back to the House. We are all very much interested in that. However, it seems to be counter-productive to have Private Members' business on Wednesday afternoon. Has the Hon. Member any further comments on that?

Mr. Cooper: Once again, Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the Hon. Member's comments. I am reminded by the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton that the Committee is prepared to look at that matter. In fact, it is encouraging Members who have a concern to address it to the Committee. They would like to know about the various problems and difficulties and some of the purely logistical questions regarding timing. That is important. What we want to accomplish is an authoritative report. We would like to raise the profile of the individual backbencher. That is what is important, not whether it be on Wednesday or a Friday. The Hon. Member's question is legitimate. I am certain the Members of the Committee will have no trouble considering it.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 45, to inform the House that the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment are as follows: the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood (Ms. McDonald)—Criminal Code—Pornography—inquiry respecting ministerial action—Introduction of legislation—Definition of obscenity; the Hon. Member for Cariboo-Chilcotin (Mr. Greenaway)—Income Tax—Auditing of farmers' income—Interpretation of law—Stand taken by farmers—Minister's position—Disallowances of wife's labour; the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Assiniboine (Mr. McKenzie)—Veterans Affairs—Review of War Veterans Allowance Act.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 62—PARLIAMENT

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Nielsen:

That this House condemns the Government for its deliberate and persistent undermining of the parliamentary process, for its flouting of parliamentary traditions and for its continuing attempts to reduce Parliament and parliamentary government to an irrelevant appendix in the formulation and application of major national policy decisions and the expenditure of public funds, and demands that the Government immediately reverse its attitude of regarding Parliament as the private preserve of the Liberal Party thus hastening the restoration of respect for and the dignity of this institution.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The Chair will recognize the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council (Mr. Smith) and thereafter the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin).

Mr. David Smith (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I am very happy to participate in this debate. It gives me the opportunity to discuss the atmosphere and climate in the House. I am a relatively junior Member of the House but I enjoy spending time here trying to learn the rules and get a feel for the House. Unfortunately I cannot say that all Hon. Members have the same interest in the House, but many who do are present today.

The motion is in the name of the Leader of the Opposition, the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) who still has one week to go before the gong rings on his current role. This gave him an opportunity to play the role of the parliamentarian, perhaps even the role of statesman. I regret that he missed that opportunity. I think he injected into this debate a tone that was not very healthy. He huffed and puffed and, in my view, misled the House in the way of a brawler, rather than a parliamentarian. I think the level of debate picked up the moment he sat down.

I thought the contribution made to the debate by the Hon. Member for Hamilton (Mr. Deans) was worth-while. The Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) also made a worth-while contribution. I enjoyed the remarks of the Hon. Member for Peace River (Mr. Cooper). I thought my friend, the Hon. Member for Sarnia-Lambton (Mr. Cullen) made a contribution, as did my great friend, the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton (Mr. Baker).

Regrettably, however, the motion stands in the name of the Hon. Member for Yukon. We heard a lot of hollow bravado from him today. I think I should set the record straight on some of the points he made. He accused the Government of deliberately and persistently undermining the parliamentary process and flouting parliamentary traditions. First of all, he spent a lot of time complaining about the role of the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) with regard to a debate on international affairs and the fact that he released a public letter on the subject of the Cruise. Let us see whether that is a legitimate point. I do not think so.

The Government House Leader (Mr. Pinard) pointed out that there are 25 Opposition days per year and this subject could have been chosen at any time and we would have had a debate in the House. There have been 11 supply days since Easter, but the Opposition always opted for something else. That is fine, but it is difficult to have it both ways. In the old days, I am told, we used to have a two-day debate on international affairs. I suggest that the Hon. Member for Yukon has a selective memory. I pointed out to him that in the early part of this session, last July, we had a two-day debate on international affairs, and that it was taken from Government time. The Hon. Member for Yukon jumped up and said that what I was saying was a crock of rhubarb. He did not dispute its validity or veracity, but he injected that silly little note into the debate. As far as I am concerned, Mr. Speaker, next week cannot come too soon if that is the level of debate we are going to get from the Leader of the Opposition.

There was also a Private Members' debate on the subject of the Cruise. The motion stood in the name of the Hon. Member for The Battlefords-Meadow Lake (Mr. Anguish). On this side of the House we gave unanimous consent to allowing that matter to go to the top of the list. One Conservative Member, I believe it was the Hon. Member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert) objected and so we could not go that route. When we got to the other Private Member's Bill that was set down for that day there was a vote that we go to another one, and we on this side supported that vote unanimously.

With regard to the letter the Prime Minister released, it is on record that he has received thousands and thousands of letters regarding the Cruise, so he wanted to send out a statement that responded to them in a comprehensive way. That is a legitimate action and he would probably be criticized if he threw all those letters in the garbage and did not respond. It seems that you cannot have it both ways.

The Leader of the Opposition complained about the role of the Prime Minister at Williamsburg as if this had something to do with flouting parliamentary tradition. He said it was unbecoming of the Canadian Prime Minister to play the role of an umpire between the two super powers. I think he is a little too close to the action to be objective about that. In response to questions almost daily in the House in recent months, particularly in answer to questions from the NDP, the Prime Minister has reiterated that there is Canadian Government support for remaining in NATO, and he has reiterated our support for the Western Alliance. I feel proud that the Prime Minister and the Government remain firm on our role as part of the NATO Alliance while, nevertheless, wanting to exercise a moderating influence on issues relating to disarmament.

Perhaps the world press is more objective than the press at home but it has said that the Prime Minister was one of the leading figures at the Williamsburg Summit. Quite frankly, I was proud of the role he played there.

The Leader of the Opposition complained that after we had a budget the ink was hardly dry before we had another. That is a bit of an exaggeration; it is what he said, but he is used to exaggeration. I can hardly recall a day after recent budgets when he was not on his feet demanding a new budget, so he cannot have it both ways.

The Hon. Leader of the Opposition complained that the Government is too interventionist, yet he is always complaining that we did not intervene enough with regard to unemployment. Does he think that everyone should be put on the Government payroll in order to solve unemployment? He complained that we were not intervening enough on interest rates either. Does he suggest we should be subsidizing them? Is this what we get from the Leader of a Party that is supposedly a great free enterprise Party, one that believes in market forces?

Those are the points the Leader of the Opposition made today. It was a lot of hot air and not worthy of someone who holds what I believe to be a very important position in our Parliament, that of Leader of the Opposition.

The Hon. Member for St. John's East pointed out that Parliament is in trouble. I think there are a number of reasons for that, Mr. Speaker, and I shall try to be objective. Part of the problem is that the Official Opposition has never been able to forget the last election. It has been demoralized by it to some extent; it has been divided; it has had leadership problems, and I think the outcome of the election in which this Party won all seats in Quebec but one, and was blanked out in the three most western Provinces, has to some extent contributed to regional divisions in the country. This has shown up on such matters as the Constitution and the Crow rate.

The Official Opposition has tended to distract public attention from its internal problems by precipitating crises in the House. I refer to such things as the ringing of bells, over 100 points of order, spurious questions of privilege on the Constitution and slowing down the legislative process to a crawl. Yet, if one reads the polls, perhaps it has been done with apparent immunity and impunity, because it has been doing well in the polls. I hope that Hon. Members opposite will not think that this is because of the Opposition's tactics. I think it is doing well in the polls in spite of those tactics and because we have gone through a very rough economic period. Any Government which would be in office would probably suffer the fate we have. I do not believe it is because of those tactics. I feel that when we move into a new phase, after the events of this weekend have occurred, hopefully that approach, trying to make Parliament work or not work, will be forgotten and it will be approached with a more positive attitude.

We have been accused of flouting the parliamentary tradition. Mr. Speaker, what is the legitimate role of the Opposition? On March 2 of last year it set the bells ringing for 14 days and 22 hours. On March 9 of this year the bells rang for seven hours and 40 minutes; on May 10, for 13 hours and 45 minutes; on May 17, for five hours and 54 minutes; on May 24, for over three hours. Is that the parliamentary tradition? I do not believe anyone who is trying to be objective about what legitimate parliamentary tactics are would defend that as falling within parliamentary tradition.

At Westminster, in the British House of Commons, which is the mother of Parliament, when the bell starts ringing it rings for eight minutes. It rings for eight minutes in the mother of Parliament, and here it rings for 14 days. Who was it that raised during the Constitution debate over 100 spurious and specious points of order and questions of privilege? It was not the Government, it was the Official Opposition. That sort of thing is unheard of at Westminster. That is not within the parliamentary tradition. I believe that the end result of these tactics has been a divisive House and bitter debates. I feel that to analyse it and attribute it all to this side of the House in a tirade such as we heard from the Hon. Member for the Yukon is not coming to grips with the problems at all; it is simply fanning the flames to make them worse.

I happen to feel that one of the biggest problems we have in this Parliament is the inability of the Government to get a reasonable legislative program through the House. What happened when we entered into the recent interim trial on reforms of the Standing Orders? This side of the House entered into those reforms in a spirit of good faith. There are a number of changes in there which could prove quite difficult and tricky for a Government. I am referring to something like the changes in Standing Order 69, Subsection 3, which obliges the Government within 120 days to report in response to a report from a committee. I believe that is a good experiment but that it can be tricky for a Government. It can be awkward and embarrassing for a Government. Notwithstanding that, we entered into that agreement.

Standing Order 46, Subsection 4, automatically refers annual reports, which are obliged to be tabled with the House, to standing committees for scrutiny, so you can get the bureaucrats and the senior mandarins in any Department before committee and ask them questions on policy formulation. I happen to feel that is a good thing, regardless of who is in power. The point I am trying to make, Mr. Speaker, is that we have entered into some of these changes.

Another experiment is changing Wednesdays so as to give an entire day to Private Members' Business. The end result of that is that there are only four days a week—and when you consider all the supply days, we are really only talking about three days a week—in which we can deal with Government business. There are disadvantages to that for the Government. I believe for Parliament as a whole it may well be an improvement. However, we entered into all of these things and, hopefully, we were going to try to get a spirit in which the legislative program of the Government would move along with some degree of reason. What happened was that instead of that being the case, we have found even more obstruction and more filibustering in recent Bills than had occurred before.

Let me go back to the period prior to the changes in the Standing Orders and look at some of the Bills. On Bill C-48 we spent six days. On Bill C-54 we spent six days. On Bill C-58 we spent five days. On Bill C-89 we spent eight days. This was all at second reading stage. That was before the experiment. We wanted a legislative timetable. In October of last fall the Government House Leader wrote the Opposition and gave it what our proposed schedule of legislation was for the fall session. In January of this year the Government House Leader wrote the Opposition and set out what was going to be a reasonable legislative timetable. In March he did the same thing with regard to a spring timetable. I can tell you, Mr. Speaker, that there has not been any meaningful effort on the part of the Official Opposition to come to some agreement with regard to a timetable.

The New Democratic Party, by and large, with the exception of the Crow Bill, has been pretty responsible and reasonable, but not the Official Opposition. What has happened since the experiment? Let us look at three very recent Bills, and I am referring to Bill C-139, Bill C-143 and Bill C-151.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Which ones are they?

Mr. Smith: These are the two borrowing authority Bills and also the amendments to the Income Tax Act. Of course, those who are familiar with parliamentary practice know that second reading is debate of a Bill in general principle. In Westminster, the mother of Parliament, second reading debates take one day. It does not have an automatic adjournment hour and often there is not a vote until the wee hours of the night, but it takes one day. On Bill C-139, at second reading, there were 102 speeches; there were nine Government speeches and 75 Conservative speeches. No reasonable person could deny that that was a filibuster. There were 17 speeches from the New Democratic Party and one speech from the Independent Member. On Bill C-143 there were over ten speeches on a point of order introduced by the Hon. Member for Calgary Centre (Mr. Andre) before the Bill was even introduced. When we got to the Bill there were 114 Tory speeches, 31 Government speeches and 32 New Democratic Party Speeches, for a total of 187 speeches.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): You are trying to gag Parliament.

Mr. Smith: On Bill C-151 there were three Government speakers, and 54 Conservative speakers—54—and we are accused of flouting parliamentary tradition! There were 15 New Democratic Party speeches. There was a total of 72 speeches, of which we on this side provided three, and there were 54 Conservative speeches. Who is being unparliamentary?

I would like to refer to a speech given by the Late John Diefenbaker in 1949 to the Empire Club of Canada. He said this:

> If parliament is to be preserved as a living institution, His Majesty's Loyal Opposition must fearlessly perform its functions. When it properly discharges them the preservation of our freedom is assured . . .It finds fault; it suggests amendments; it asks questions and elicits information; it arouses, educates and moulds public opinion by voice and vote. I must scrutinize every action by the government.

Mr. Diefenbaker concluded:

> I would like to conclude by emphasizing that the opposition, whatever its policies and tactics may be, shares with the Government and, of course, with the electorate, the responsibility of making our form of democracy, based on parliamentary institutions, work for the welfare of all the citizens.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Diefenbaker is absolutely right.

Mr. Smith: I would like to refer to the comments of Sir Ivor Jennings, the great constitutional expert, when he talked about the Opposition. He said this:

> The Opposition's task is not to prevent the Government from carrying out its policy but to criticize that policy in the hope that the electors will choose a different Government next time.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Ivor Jennings is right also.

Mr. Smith: I could go on quoting from Sir Ivor Jennings. However, it is important to realize that the Opposition has a very responsible role to play which, quite frankly, under the leadership of the Hon. Member for the Yukon, it has not been living up to. I feel that he has not been a positive influence. It is not the Government, Mr. Speaker, which has tried to prevent debate in this House. It is not the Government which has refused Hon. Members the right to vote. It is not the Government which has refused to allow Bills to be introduced, and it is not the Government which rang the bells for over two weeks, although we are not without fault. We have entered into these recommendations as an experiment.

I believe that the point made by the Hon. Member for St. John's East with respect to Ministers' statements is a valid one. I feel that if we could come to some reasonable agreement on whose time it would be taken from, if anyone's time, perhaps we could see more of that. However, there must be a desire on the part of every person in the House to make Parliament work for the benefit of all Canadians. I for one am very anxious to see that happen. I for one am anxious to see us perhaps enter into a new era, after the events of this weekend have occurred, regardless of what the outcome may be. Can we not pull together and try to give Canadians a House which functions, a House which works, regardless of our partisan differences? Some of these points which have been made have been valid, but when the Official Opposition is putting up over 100 speakers on Bills—and we have had three examples of that in recent months alone—no one can suggest for a minute that that is not probably the most outrageous flouting of parliamentary tradition which we have ever seen in the House.

So, Mr. Speaker, I think this motion standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Yukon has brought about useful debate. I think his contribution to it was very negative. I do not regret the fact he will not be in that role next week because when he is gone I hope we will have an occupant of that seat who will approach this House with a positive attitude and, in contrast to the Hon. Member for Yukon, try to make it work.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I notice my friend referred to the speech of the Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) and the problem with respect to ministerial statements. I take it he is anxious that there be some way in which this would be preserved, and the Government wants to preserve it but not at the price of losing legislative time. Let me just say that I am not going to lay a trap. I happen to agree with that. I was Government House Leader once and I understand the concern over time, but I also think there is some importance to Parliament that statements be made in this House rather than outside at press conferences and in other places.

Would the Parliamentary Secretary agree that it is reasonable for us to consider, having regard to the fact that we have vacant time, so to speak, at nights, that statements might be made in the latter part of an afternoon, after markets have closed if necessary? It could be perhaps at 6.30 or 6 o'clock, perhaps during the period of the adjournment debate. Would he agree that we begin the practice of having statements made in the House, perhaps using the free time which the rule changes have made available to use for House time for a limited purpose and without interfering with the work of committees?

Mr. Smith: Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the Hon. Member for that question. I think the point he makes is a valid one. I think it is desirable to have more major policy statements made by Ministers in the House. But in order to do that we have to have a reasonable agreement that this is not taken from Government time. The current system is such that by and large if we were to have Ministers make statements on either Opposition days or private Members' days, the Hon. Member knows full well that there would be an outcry.

The real problem is that in order to reach an agreement there has to be a mood, atmosphere or climate of good faith and good will on both sides of the House. Until there has been a demonstration of that on the part of the Official Opposition with regard to second reading debates, where they are not putting up 50, 60, 70 or 80 speakers, I am afraid I could not sell that to my colleagues. I had to work quite hard to sell this experiment to some of my colleagues on this side of the House. The Hon. Member knows that. I did it because I believed in it, and I would happily do the same thing again, but I say to the Hon. Member that in order for that to be brought about we need some reasonable attitudes to be shown on the part of the Official Opposition with regard to second reading debates. This sort of obstruction—and it is on the part of the leadership, not the rank and file; I am not accusing anyone present in this House of doing that—where the House Leader and the Whip are told to go and round up 30, 40 50 speakers for second reading debates on numerous occasions, and anyone who looks at Hansard knows that is the case, that has to stop if we are going to have a climate in which we can achieve some of these worth-while things suggested by Members such as the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I want to participate in this debate because some parts of the motion I can agree with, but for entirely different reasons than those put forward by the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Nielsen). The motion refers to the Government's:

—deliberate and persistent undermining of the parliamentary process—

I do not know about the word "deliberate", but it certainly has been persistent. Quite often it might have been only by accident because Members opposite did not know what the hell they were doing. The motion continues:

—and for its continuing attempts to reduce Parliament and Parliamentary government to an irrelevant appendix in the formulation and application of major national policy decisions—

I want to start off, Mr. Speaker, on the premise that we are sort of a child or creature, successor or inheritor, of the British parliamentary traditions and practices. But over the past four or five years I do not believe there have been any statements by Ministers on motions. There is the matter of Cabinet Ministers being present to answer questions in the House. It seems to me that a Government of whatever political stripe has to be forthright and forthcoming, and it should present a policy or Bill to Parliament first before anyone else. The practice, which has become somewhat endemic over the last several years, of holding press conferences and flitting around the country to announce the Government's intentions surely can be nothing more than a depletion and may be an accidental, if not deliberate, downgrading of Parliament and the parliamentary system.

I submit that when the Government refuses to announce policy in the House of Commons and chooses instead a press conference across the street or somewhere else in the country, it in fact becomes a victim of its own actions and the complaints, as has just been enunciated by the Parliamentary Secretary to the Government House Leader, about the Opposition taking up inordinate time making speeches, have been incited by the Government. A Minister could have got up in the House, the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) or the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau), and announced the Government's policy and intentions regarding the statutory grain rates. I recall under Speaker Lamoureux and for a while under Speaker Jerome that the Minister made a statement, it took him 10, 12 or 15 minutes, and one spokesman from each Party responded for not more than the same length of time, but most often less. One or two questioners from each Party could ask questions of the Minister. I am quite agreeable to our setting aside one hour for one, two or three days a week for statements by Ministers, and we used that time to obtain in Parliament first the Government's policy and legislation. I have often wondered whether there should not be some questions at first reading, but I will leave that aside.

Going to another aspect, Mr. Speaker, I often wonder what would happen if we could reach unanimous agreement that none of us will make a statement or announcement or send out a press release until we actually did it in the House of Commons. There would be a few exceptions to that on minor details when a backbencher wanted to send out something to his constituents and the local media about a private Bill he is proposing. It would be interesting if the Press Gallery had to wait like MPs do on both sides of the House to hear what a Minister has to say at a press conference in Winnipeg or Gopher Gulch or wherever else. But there is the media getting the news while MPs are sitting down here wondering what it is he is going to say. Surely a Government of any political stripe doing that is evading and avoiding the parliamentary system. In fact, I submit that the Minister of Transport would have had much less difficulty if he had been more forthright and forthcoming in this Chamber over his proposals on Dominion coal lands, rial line upgrading, statutory grain rates, and if his four predecessors—and I have been through five Ministers of Transport since I have come here—had been more forthright and forthcoming in this Chamber. They would have had a lot less difficulty in subsequent dealings with whatever it was he was bringing forward in Parliament.

It seems to me, involving the matter of the presence of Cabinet Ministers, that there is an onus on Members of the Opposition, as a matter of courtesy as well as for the sake of obtaining information, to give notice of it to Cabinet Ministers. If it is something that just came up in the hour before Question Period, it could be a hurried phone call or a note across the floor. If it is a matter in which one has tried, through one's caucus, to be recognized in Question Period for several days, one could give several days' notice. However, once the notice is given, the Minister should be here to answer or he should provide the answer to the acting Minister or to the Parliamentary Secretary.

It is common practice and knowledge amongst Members of the Opposition and, I suspect, amongst backbenchers on the Government side, that if the Minister to whom one wants to direct a question will not be present that day, one will not ask the question. We have all phoned up a Minister's office to ask whether he will be present during Question Period that day. If he will not be there, one will not ask a question because otherwise it is a totally wasted question. Lord knows how many more days it will be before one is recognized. Therefore, the presence of Ministers should be a requirement, particularly when they know, either by notice or because of something very obvious, such as a disaster, that they will be asked questions the next day by the very first questioner. I appreciate the fact that Ministers cannot plan their schedules very well, but who the dickens can in our type of job? It is part of the hazards of the occupation.

I also want to suggest that when a Party House Leader makes an alternative proposal to the other House Leaders, it is worthy of at least the courtesy of a reply, which, by the way, our House Leader has yet to receive to a letter which was written something over two weeks ago to the Government House Leader on Bill C-155. Whether they like, dislike or are willing to discuss the alternate proposal, they should have done it.

I do not want the Progressive Conservative Party to become all that holy on a matter of bypassing Parliament. I have done a little research since I received notice of the motion yesterday. For example, on September 6, 1917, the Robert Borden Government of the day took over the Canadian Northern Railway by Order in Council and there was no statement on motions and there were no announcements of any legislation, so there is nothing unusual about this matter. It goes back a long time in the Canadian Parliament. It does not go back a long time in the British House. Therefore, the practice here has been endemic for decades. In fact, it not only took over the railroad, but it also appointed a board of directors. By Order in Council, it appointed a board and amalgamated Canadian Northern Railway with other Government-owned railroads. It was not until almost three years later that it brought in legislation which formally announced Government policy about the Canadian Northern Railway. If one wanted to do some more research, one could come up with countless instances of the Conservative Party in the House when it was governing doing just as well as one could expect from the Liberal Party. Therefore, it is a case of the pot calling the kettle black, and they both need a thorough cleaning.

Parliament must be primary. It must be first. Anything a Member of the Government wants to do should be said here, first, before anywhere else. If he wants to hold a press conference an hour later or go out and speak at a public meeting and issue written statements, that is fair ball. I think the same applies to Members of the Opposition.

Frankly, considering the way all of us turn out press releases here, most of which are not covered, and if they are covered, most of them are at the back with the hemorrhoid ads in the fourth or fifth section of the paper. When I think of the amount of time we spend doing that, when we save that material for presentation in Parliament as and when the opportunity permits, we should make the gallery do its own work for a change instead of MPs and Cabinet Ministers having their staffs writing the copy. I would like to see how good some writers would be if they had to sit down and write out their own stuff.

However, the main point of the motion is that through habit, through the efforts to obtain political advantage, through reasons of secrecy, most of which are totally devoid of any kind of reason or validity, Governments in the Parliament of Canada have made deliberate or other kinds of efforts to detract from Parliament, to govern by public relations exercises. They have tried to manipulate the media which, in turn and as a result, would deliberately or inadvertently end up trying to manipulate public opinion. The media should obtain its coverage from what occurs in Parliament and obtain further follow-up coverage as a result of what occurs in Parliament. Would Governments use advertising agencies, press conferences, consultants who divulge reports before Parliament knows about them or has an opportunity to ask about them? Surely that is some kind of denigration of the parliamentary process.

I think that there is an onus, first, on the Government, because it is the one which initiates. Except for Private Members' Hour and the odd motion by unanimous consent, only the Government can initiate. However, there is also a responsibility on Hon. Members in the Opposition Parties to conduct themselves in the same manner, through notice to Ministers, presenting a Bill for first reading, making a speech in the House in debate, which does not go out to anyone else until one has started making a speech. Therefore, there is a responsibility on both sides to make this place function in somewhat the tradition of the British House, although it cannot be exactly the same.

The subject of the Estimates was mentioned by the Hon. Member for Sarnia-Lambton (Mr. Cullen). We all know that that is a total exercise in futility. Committees are not provided with the expertise to really go into what is behind those numbers and those man-years. One can move to remove an Estimate by a certain amount or reduce it to a dollar, and that might be fun and games in the committee. It would be interesting to see what would happen if a Government Member felt free to reduce an Estimate because of an item that he thought to be inappropriate, and one which some Opposition Members thought to be appropriate. Estimates would be dealt with in a much more neutral and effective manner.

I believe it was the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton (Mr. Baker) who used the word "neutral". Around here, neutral is like trying to be half pregnant. There ain't no such thing.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): At the moment.

Mr. Benjamin: There ain't such a thing, and there hasn't been since I came here in 1968.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): We always hope for improvement.

• (1730)

Mr. Benjamin: I suggest the question concerns neutrality versus accommodation. I would rather use the word accommodation because it would be totally in error to expect any person in this place to be completely human and neutral on any subject raised here. A Member might try to have a balance of bias, but he will not be able to be neutral. Therefore, I suggest that the word "accommodation" is more suitable.

There are rare occasions in Parliament when one or more of the Opposition Parties will go to extraordinary lengths to take what appear to be obstructionist measures such as filibustering. My colleague, the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) made a very appropriate remark earlier today when he said that the Opposition not only has a duty to oppose and question but also the obligation to propose. The Opposition has a responsibility to try to accommodate.

I can think of some other examples besides Bill C-155. I think of the Criminal Code amendments in 1969 and 1970. I think of the War Measures Act of 1970 when attempts were made at accommodation. I am reminded of the first grain stabilization Bill when my Party, I think with deliberate honesty, put up speakers and had the same Members speak again a second and third time. We took the Government to court and it had to withdraw the Bill. When occasions like this occur only four times in 15 years, it can hardly be called abuse by the Opposition. Even under the British rules the Government may be intent upon passing legislation that is so exceptional that the Opposition has no other choice but to use whatever method it can under the rules to obstruct or prevent a Government from taking that action.

Like my colleague, the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain said, simply because the Government has the majority does not mean that it has that majority every day on every issue all year around. I am sure the Hon. Member for Nepean-Carleton would agree with that as a result of episodes in 1979. In fact, the most outrageous and disastrous statement of policy ever made by a Prime Minister in this country occurred in June of that year when the then Prime Minister said in a minority Parliament that he would govern as though he had a majority. I phoned the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) to ask what that meant. He said, "That means that this Parliament will not last very long." He was perfectly correct. A Grade 6 social studies student would know that if you have a minority Parliament you cannot govern as though you had a majority. I hope those who are the manufacturers of their own demise should have learned something from that, although I predict that they will be condemned to repeat it following this weekend.

If there is anything Parliament should know it is that the tail cannot be wagging the dog. No longer can heads of Royal commissions, Department heads and deputy ministers make announcements and speeches which should properly first be made by the Minister in charge in this place. Whatever happens after that is fair ball.

My final point, which I make for the benefit of the Hon. Member for Sarnia-Lambton and the Parliamentary Secretary to the Government House Leader (Mr. Smith), is that omnibus Bills incite many speeches. Our written proposal to divide Bill C-155 into three parts would reduce the number of speeches on two of those parts incredibly. It could be dealt with and become law of the land by June 30. Similarly, when the Official Opposition succeeded in having the Government divide a Bill into several parts, it was amazing how quickly some of them passed. The minute the Government tries to cover the waterfront in a piece of legislation, do they expect the Opposition to sit back and vote in principle for two items which they may favour while also voting for three or four other items which they do not like? That is too much to ask and is the reason why the word "accommodation" should be used instead of "neutrality".

I submit that that accommodation can be arranged. We could even start with Bill C-155. There are several other proposals that the Government is contemplating. It is trying to include matters in the same Bill which are not remotely related. When it does that, the number of speeches will multiply, which is a natural reaction which can be expected from any Opposition that is worthy of the name.

Mr. Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I wish to make a comment. I think that my hon. friend has misinterpreted what I said in the course of my remarks. I want to make sure that the record is clear.

He talked about the issue of neutral chairmen of committees. He said that he would rather deal with this under the term "accommodation". I can understand the use of accommodation between House Leaders and amongst Parties in terms of what might happen to a Bill. But I want to make it clear to him that the use of the term "neutral" or "neutrality" was used from the point of view of the attitude that would prevail by the chairmen of parliamentary committees. I did not mean that a Member of Parliament who was chosen chairman of the legislative committee from a panel of chairmen would hang his principles on the coatrack before coming into the House of Commons. In terms of the operation of a committee, the hearing of witnesses, the witnesses who would be called and the interpretation of the rules of order, he would be seen as a person who was fair, neutral, and who would not choose sides in a manner similar to how the speakership of the House has traditionally operated.

We made that proposal in the hope of accommodating that situation. It was not to say that the Member who was chosen would have no opinions about the principles that were established in the Bill. Certainly he would. However, the committee would be conducted in such a way that even those who lost the day in terms of the argument in the committee would ultimately be able to say that the committee was conducted and the work of the chairman was done fairly, evenly, and that justice was not only done but seen and felt to be done.

I wanted to make sure that my friend understood that and that the record is clear on what the special committee meant and what I meant when I used the words "neutral chairman of legislative committees".

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the remarks of the Hon. Member but they fly in the face of the motion moved by the Leader of the Opposition. It has certainly been my experience in the number of committees on which I have sat that they have been neutral in terms of their operation and interpretation of the rules. I have seen Government appointed chairmen of committees rule Government Members of the committee out of order. I remember the 1972-74 minority Parliament when the former Hon. Member for Crowfoot was chairman of the Transport Committee and I was vice chairman, that we had a majority over Government Members on that committee. On one of the few occasions that I chaired a committee meeting, I had to rule out one of my own colleagues. Surely that neutrality is in place and it must be assumed that any Member from whatever side is seen to be and is in fact neutral when chairing a meeting and enforcing the rules.

I think that begs the question of what is in the motion. The motion says that the Government—and I submit not only this Government but many previous Governments—has bypassed Parliament. I agree with that portion of the resolution. The practice of giving press conferences and everything else avoids and evades not only the House of Commons but also committees. Surely that is where the responsibility lies, first on the Government because it initiates policy and legislation, and second, on the Opposition Parties because they too have a counter-responsibility not only to oppose but to propose. This is where the word accommodation comes in. Again the Government, because it can initiate legislation, has the responsibility more often than not to make the first move to accommodate. There is almost an equal responsibility on the part of the Opposition Parties to make moves to accommodate so as to get the business of Parliament done faster. Too often when we have tried to do that we did not even get the courtesy of an answer. Surely that is what contributes to the 100 and some speeches about which the Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Smith) was complaining. What does he expect Members of the Opposition to do, just lie down, not say anything, give up and cry? Of course not. We have no other choice but to do what can be construed by the Government and some of the media as obstruction. What other choice do we have if the Government is not willing to accommodate? It seems to me that that word "accommodation" could overcome much of what is in the motion put forward by the Leader of the Opposition.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The previous occupant of the Chair indicated to me upon my arrival that the appropriate order of recognizing hon. Members would be for the Chair to see the Hon. Member for Rosemont (Mr. Lachance) and then to see the Hon. Member for Esquimalt-Saanich (Mr. Munro). I know of no understanding between Hon. Members that might affect that agreement. But obviously there is not enough time for both Members to speak in light of the total time available. I would assume that some accommodation has been made. I have already indicated that that is the assumption on which I was working. I will recognize the Hon. Member for Rosemont. Of course, if an Hon. Member wishes to rise on a point of order, I will hear him.

[Translation]

Mr. Claude-André Lachance (Rosemont): Certainly, Mr. Speaker. I am prepared to give my colleague half the time we have left, if he agrees.

In the hallway, on my way to the House, I noticed the Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Nielsen). He was alive and well, and what better proof of an old French saying, which translates as: Being ridiculous is not a fatal affliction. I must say that the motion moved by the Hon. Leader of the Opposition comes as somewhat of a surprise from a former House Leader who has more or less invented a new dilatory tactic for which there is no parliamentary remedy. At the end of my speech I intend to get back to this problem of using the bells and refusing to come in for a vote as a dilatory tactic. First, however, I would like to indicate the principles according to which the House operates and, more particularly, the two linch pins of our proceedings, namely, the Standing Orders, which, as everyone knows, have a number of deficiencies and which are being scrutinized by a special committee in an attempt to provide appropriate remedies, and the attitudes of Members on which depends the ability of this House, on a day-to-day basis, to reach a consensus on the most appropriate manner of conducting its business.

As far as procedure itself is concerned, the Special Committee has already tabled an interim report, and many of the recommendations proposed by Committee Members are now part of the Standing Orders, at least on a provisional basis.

I would like to spend a few minutes on one aspect of our Standing Orders and parliamentary practice that is now being studied by the Special Committee and regarding which recommendations may be made, we hope, in the not too distant future. I am referring to the Government's obligation to be accountable to Parliament, with respect to its finances. Mr. Speaker, Hon. Members will be aware that a sub-committee of the Special Committee—a sub-committee of which I have the honour to be a Member and which is known in our parlance as the Huntington-Lachance Committee has formulated a number of recommendations for the Special Committee which are aimed at making the Government accountable to the House and at giving Parliament the mechanisms it needs to deal with this accountability in an appropriate manner.

I hope that once again, the Committee will be able to submit recommendations that will receive the support of the House and its Members, but I would like to add that it is essential that Parliament should improve its ability to exercise this basic parliamentary right, namely, to oblige the Government to account for its finances.

Since the Lambert Commission made its proposals, which led to a new system for tabling budget votes, Hon. Members have been able to obtain information from the annual Estimates tabled by the President of the Treasury Board in a more easily digestible form. The Estimates are now published in three volumes. Part I explains Government expenditures in terms of Government envelopes, for instance, a social envelope, an economic envelope, and so forth, which gives a better idea of the priorities set by the Government in each of these major areas of Government activity. Part II provides details on votes being submitted for approval by the Government, such as person-years and technical resources, including the capital expenditures required, and finally, Part III provides a detailed breakdown of programs and a detailed analysis according to comprehensive audit principles.

Parliament, however, has not adjusted to this new formula for submitting the Government's expenditure proposals. Because of the obsolete operating procedures of its parliamentary committees, although they only go back to 1968, Parliament lacks the instruments it needs to carry out a proper analysis of all three parts of the estimates, and I would especially like to draw to the attention of the Chair the absence of any appropriate procedure for consideration by envelope, something none of our parliamentary committees can do as things stand now.

In any event, I hope that the Special Committee will be able to make recommendations to the House that will eventually provide Parliament with better ways of digesting, analyzing, criticizing, and reporting back to the House on, Government expenditure proposals, and as far as I am concerned, I think the Committee should be able to do so fairly quickly.

However, procedures are only one aspect of the parliamentary process, which is now relatively well covered by the work of the Special Committee, and, in fact, I think all Members of this House are anxious to modernize this institution.

Attitudes are another aspect altogether. Unfortunately, attitudes cannot be regulated, and as my colleague, the Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Smith) commented earlier, the atmosphere in this Parliament is pretty tense. How it got that way? I will let Hon. Members answer that question! In the past 18 months, the harmful atmosphere prevailing in the House since the beginning of this Parliament has given rise to novel dilatory tactics that are prejudicial to parliamentary life. Let me explain what I mean.

• (1750)

On the one hand, the House is a deliberative assembly. Everybody has to agree with me on that point. We are here to debate, to discuss proposals introduced either by the government or by private members, either to amend pieces of legislation, to propose new measures or to discuss the proposals or financial plans of the Government.

Unfortunately, a new dilatory tactic has been introduced in addition to all those already allowed under our rules, of which, needless to say, there is quite a number. This new dilatory tactic is aimed, for all practical purposes, at preventing the House from playing its fundamental role, namely to debate.

In this regard, I only have to recall what occurred recently and what is still occurring in relation to the government's proposals for the Crow rate because one party in this House has decided not only that it objects to these proposals, which it has a perfect right to do, not only that it objects in principle to these proposals, which is its privilege, but also that it objects to debating them in this House. Once again, I know that there are always two sides to an issue, and as the previous speaker said earlier, there are reasons for this, and the fact that a time allocation motion appeared on the Order Paper has perhaps prompted some members to even refuse to debate the matter.

The fact remains, Mr. Speaker, that in some cases this House is no longer even a deliberative assembly because some members or parties prevent us from deliberating. This is an extremely dangerous trend on which we should all reflect individually because no committee of this House, whether a special or a standing committee, can codify or regulate attitudes.

The second basic characteristic of a legislative assembly is that its deliberations must lead to a conclusion. That is normal, the people expect us to take decisions. So the second strategy which has been developed is to prevent the House from reaching a conclusion once its deliberations are over. The Opposition resorts to a "technicality" of the Standing Orders which stems from a new interpretation given in Beauchesne's Fifth Edition. Unfortunately I do not have time to quote it because I want to leave a few minutes for my colleague to close the debate. I am referring to an interpretation of the Standing Orders, or a codification of a practice if you will, which does not exist, at least not in Beauchesne's Fourth Edition, namely the whips walking up the aisle to signal the Chair that the House is ready to vote. In Beauchesne's Fourth Edition—I am trying to rush, Mr. Speaker—it was the Sergeant-at-Arms who was designated as the one who walks up to the Chair to say that the House is ready to proceed with the vote, whereas in Beauchesne's Fifth Edition the two whips, the Government's and the Official Opposition's, do that. That new interpretation has made it possible in some instances to delay the vote indefinitely by keeping the bells ringing, and the saddest and best known example is obviously the bell ringing incident which lasted for ten days.

In my opinion, Mr. Speaker, there are reasons for that strategy, that dilatory tactic to which, I repeat, the Standing Orders offer no answer. There may be a way out through the residual powers of the Chair, but that is another question. With respect to our attitudes, Mr. Speaker, we will be unable to achieve a real parliamentary reform and the House will never again be a deliberating assembly where decisions are taken unless we act as responsible parliamentarians who accept those two essential roles in our work as legislators.

Mr. Donald W. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Mr. Speaker, before I begin my remarks, I want to commend my colleague from Rosemont (Mr. Lachance) for acting like a true parliamentarian. He has agreed to share the time remaining in this debate so that both of us would be able to make a few comments on the problem under study.

[English]

The motion before us is in a way a deception. I will tell the House why. I was brought up in the tradition of MacGregor Dawson and Alexander Brady, in the belief that Parliament was a responsible agency, that the responsibility of the Government should make itself manifest and that it was the responsibility of the Opposition to ensure that that responsibility was fulfilled. I find that is not the situation today. I will come to the area of Crown corporations because to my way of thinking it is the most outrageous demonstration of the manner in which the parliamentary process is being endangered through the multiplication and proliferation of Crown corporations.

From my academic beginnings under the guidance of MacGregor Dawson and Alexander Brady, I was led to other authorities from Elizabethan times, Coke and also Blackstone from the eighteenth century, both of whom I have read. This gave me a feeling that when I came to Parliament I would find an institution which was responsive and responsible and that the notion of responsibility would be amply displayed. Today I find that is not the case, and that is where my feeling of deception is. It is unfortunate that we have to put forward a motion of this sort.

I would like to refer to the Lambert Report which was prepared in 1978 or 1979. In the opening of Chapter 21, Mr. Lambert, a Royal Commissioner charged with looking into the matter of financial management and accountability, reported:

> Accountability is the working principle of our parliamentary system.

That is as simple as can be. It should be that way. He continued:

> Therefore, we have chosen to end our Report with our conclusions about Parliament's role in the accountability process, for it is in that institution, as our mandate foresaw, that accountability culminates.

On page 370 he referred to the relations between governments and parliaments. He indicated:

> This means that the relationship is so unequal that the principles of responsible government, while still generally accepted, are in danger of becoming irrelevant to the actual situation.

That is the danger I foresee and that is what brought this motion forward. Then on page 371 he said:

> —we have concluded that ways must be found to improve the accountability of the Government to Parliament and its committees.

That is what I deplore, the deception of coming to Parliament and finding that it is not responsive to popular need, nor responsible to the Opposition, in its governing and its expenditure of public funds.

For example, in three years in this session of Parliament—and we are now getting into the fourth year—we have been asked to approve authority for the Government to borrow over $73 billion, which is about $24 billion for each of those years. The most recent Bill did not give us any indication of how that money was to be spent. That is not responsibility, and that is what worries me. That is why today we had to bring forward a motion of this kind. The motion says that we are in danger of losing this institution which has grown up over the last 700 or 800 years, gradually developing a responsiveness to public need and demand, and also the institution of give and take across the floor. Principally, the notion of responsibility in Government is to be accountable to the Opposition and to the country. The accountability is not just on election day. It is throughout the life of Parliament. That is what I find so unfortunate, and that is what the Hon. Member for Rosemont (Mr. Lachance) was saying. He wants responsibility to be restored to this House. He is seeking in that Special Committee, along with my colleague for Nepean-Carleton (Mr. Baker), a means whereby responsibility can be restored.

I see that the hour approaches. I have many more comments to make, but I do appreciate the division of time which permitted me to say these few words. At least I got that part of it in.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 45 deemed to have been moved.

CRIMINAL CODE—PORNOGRAPHY—INQUIRY RESPECTING MINISTERIAL ACTION—INTRODUCTION OF LEGISLATION—DEFINITION OF OBSCENITY

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, my question on pornography in broadcasting was answered by the Minister of Justice (Mr. MacGuigan) who said that he was considering amendments to the law of obscenity which would apply everywhere, including broadcasting. He said this was a better way to proceed than attempting to segment particular areas and to have a special law which relates to them. This response is inadequate.

Where special problems exist, special laws are needed. There are already well demonstrated problems with pornography in broadcasting. Broadcasting happens to be a highly regulated media. There are regulations for patent medicines, drugs, booze, children's advertising, religious broadcasting, politics, lotteries, how venereal disease can be discussed, and birth control, but not, in the case of Pay TV at least, pornography, a rather important item that is missing from the list of regulations.

[Translation]

Radio and television broadcasting regulations now forbid abuse on grounds of race or religious beliefs. However, abuse on grounds of sex—in other words, abuse of women—is acceptable to the CRTC. Children are also victims of sexual abuse, but pornography's main victims are women. Could anyone imagine a religious minority being abused in the same way as women are abused by pornography? Take, for instance, anti-Semitism. Unfortunately, it does exist in our society. Could anyone imagine anti-Semitic pornography? I shall give you a sketch. For three hours every evening, late enough to keep children from watching, TV programs are broadcast in which Jews appear naked and non-Jews are dressed. Jews are stupid, non-Jews are intelligent. Jews are abused. Jews submit to non-Jews, Jews are beaten, by non-Jews. Jews kneel before non-Jews. Non-Jews carry whips, knives, pistols and other arms. Jews have none. Jews dance naked in front of non-Jews, while their bodies are looked at and commented upon. Jews are obliged to give the impression they enjoy this kind of treatment, that they are naturally submissive to non-Jews that they are unworthy. Finally, some Jews are raped, tortured and killed by non-Jews. Their fear and suffering are shown, while non-Jews are laughing and having a good time. That would be pornographic anti-Semitism, and we could not imagine seeing this on public television in Canada. But suppose the Ku-Klux-Klan happened to get a pay television licence? What would the CRTC's response be? "If you do not like anti-Semitism, switch channels, do not subscribe", or would we get this answer from the Minister of Communications (Mr. Fox): "Censorship is socialism?" I do not think so. One would expect a better answer from the CRTC and the Minister. However, abusing women seems to be acceptable to the CRTC. The Council is against censorship as far as women are concerned. It does exercise censorship in many other areas, such as commercials that are directed to children, drugs, alcohol, religious broadcasts—areas it thinks are more important than protecting women against abuse.

[English]

The problem of pornography is growing; qualitatively and quantitively it is getting worse. What is the correct role for the Criminal Code in the control of pornography? The Criminal Code must be the base, I suggest. It must give a clear and reasonable definition. The current Code is not clear on what constitutes undue exploitation of sex, and the courts have interpreted it in a way that is objectionable to many Canadians. They have included scenes that are frankly sexual but are not abusive or coercive.

In my view, a good definition would specify excessive violence, coercive sex, degradation of human persons, the sexual exploitation of children and bestiality. In the latter two cases the understanding is that children and animals, by definition, cannot give consent. Even if there were no explicit violence, these would not be allowed.

The Criminal Code badly needs repair but it is not only the Criminal Code that needs repair. The broadcasting regulations for television and radio forbid programs that are profane, indecent or obscene, but no penalties are specified. Penalties must be made clear and applied to Pay-TV as well. It should be a condition of licence to respect the guidelines of sex stereotyping in the broadcasting media. A conviction for obscenity should be grounds for revocation of licence. A $300 fine is not going to stop pornography in any part of our society. Violence against women in our society is a serious problem. It is time the Minister of Justice took his responsibilities seriously and worked with the Minister of Communications (Mr. Fox) to ensure that there are adequate laws. The time, Mr. Speaker, is now.

Mr. Henri Tousignant (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to respond to the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood (Ms. McDonald) on behalf of the Minister of Communications. We understand her concerns very well.

The issue of pornography is a matter of grave concern to us all. The Broadcast Act was adopted unanimously by Parliament in 1968. The Broadcasting Act provided for the regulation of broadcasting by the CRTC, placing this agency at arm's length from the Government of the day. Even at that, the Broadcasting Act also places primary responsibility for the content of programming with the broadcaster. Section 3(c) of the Broadcasting Act says:

> All persons licensed to carry on broadcasting undertakings have a responsibility for programs they broadcast but the right to freedom of expression and the right of persons to receive programs, subject only to generally applicable statutes and regulation, is unquestioned.

This system of self-regulation has on the whole over the years proven effective. By and large, broadcasters have exercised responsibility in choosing programming for broadcast. Broadcasters who do not, face the possibility of criminal prosecution.

The CRTC is attempting to extend this self-regulatory principle to pay operators and, as Hon. Members will recall, has had meetings with the pay-television licensees to develop a voluntary code. Dr. Meisel informed Members of the Communications Committee of this during his appearance on May 26.

As the Broadcasting Act says, this freedom of expression should be subject only to generally applicable statutes and regulations. The Criminal Code is a general law of general applicability. The Criminal Code defines obscenity. If a broadcaster does not behave responsibly and does carry pornographic material, he is in violation of the Criminal Code and subject to the penalties therein.

• (1810)

Very recently the Minister responsible for the Status of Women announced that, in consultation with the Minister of Communications (Mr. Fox), the Government was funding a voluntary body established by the National Women's Organization called "Media Watch". The purpose of "Media Watch" is to monitor and evaluate over a two-year period the self-regulatory standards implemented by the broadcasting and advertising industries. As the Minister of Justice (Mr. MacGuigan) indicated to the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood during Question Period on May 16, the Government is considering amendements to the law on obscenity which, of course, will affect that law wherever it is applied, broadcasting or anywhere else. The Minister intends introducing these amendments in the immediate future. It is hoped that the New Democratic Party will support amendments to the Criminal Code on obscenity this time. It rejected proposed amendments on child pornography proposed by the Minister of Justice last June.

INCOME TAX—AUDITING OF FARMERS' INCOME—INTERPRETATION OF LAW—STAND TAKEN BY FARMERS—MINISTER'S POSITION—DISALLOWANCE OF WIFE'S LABOUR

Mr. Lorne Greenaway (Cariboo-Chilcotin): Mr. Speaker, I wonder how long it is going to take this Government to realize that the Department of National Revenue is running amuck and harassing farmers under Section 31 of the Income Tax Act? I hope I receive answers from the Parliamentary Secretary tonight, rather than answers from some bureaucrat who has written those answers for him.

The last time I asked this question I received an answer from the Parliamentary Secretary I had mentioned in my question that Revenue Canada auditors have no agricultural experience. I would like to quote what the Parliamentary Secretary said to me and I quote from page 25215 of Hansard for May 5, 1983:

> The Hon. Member has also commented on the qualification of the auditors performing the audit. In this regard I would like to say that the Department's auditors have the know-how to determine the profit or loss of an enterprise.

I challenge the Parliamentary Secretary, Mr. Speaker, to find five auditors in the Department who know one end of a cow from the other.

Today I asked the Minister why it is that farmers and chartered accountants who, according to Revenue Canada auditors, in past years have obeyed the tax laws implicitly are now suddenly finding that the interpretation of those laws has been changed by the Government? I should now like to read from parts of a few letters I received from farmers, and I would like to show the Parliamentary Secretary my file. This is some of the correspondence which I have on this issue. It is an issue which goes right across the country. Farmers in all ten Provinces are being audited and I am receiving many representations from Members on the other side of the House.

Let me quote from the letter of a farmer from 100 Mile House, British Columbia, to the auditors. He says, and I quote:

> I am writing this letter grieving my recent audit.
> How can one of your senior audit men (Mr. Bill Donaldson) come and do an audit of my farming operation four years ago and tell me that everything is fine with comments like "keep it up!" or "if you continue as you are." And then four years later, after all kinds of improvements are made (more machinery, buildings built, irrigation installed etc. at considerable expense) another audit is done, only this time disallowing the farming operation?
> I have had Mr. H. A. McTavish, Chartered Accountant do all my returns since I began the operation to ensure what has happened now, would not happen. (As a matter of fact Mr. Bill Donaldson even recommended Mr. McTavish as the best accountant in our area).
> This last audit was done by two of your field men who I felt did not understand farming and could care less. They made statements like "The Government needs money this year." and "We are only doing our job" etc. They did not go to see the farming operation at all! I tried to explain that beef prices were down and that we have had very wet haying weather for the past several years, but to no avail.
> Please, I beg of you be fair.

It is signed, "Yours truly". It is not often, Mr. Speaker, that farmers beg anybody for anything.

I have another letter from the wife of a farmer in Quesnel, British Columbia. She says, and I quote:

> The evening of April 7, 1983, we were called to our accountants' office to be informed that we owe Revenue Canada $17,285.74. $3,551.16 being interest!
> To people such as ourselves who take pride in paying our creditors regularly it was rather a shock to find that we suddenly owe a sum like this, without prior knowledge, and that interest had been added to a bill that goes back 4 years without knowing anything about it. We have always filed our income tax on time, each year it has been accepted by Revenue Canada and now they decide that for the years, 1978, 79, 80 and 81, that they made a Big mistake, in fact a $13,000.00 mistake, most naturally not in our favour, add interest and bill us, expecting that we have $17,000.00 stuffed away in some sock somewhere!

• (1815)

I have dozens of these kinds of letters. I told the Minister that if he does not do something about this, he is going to have a tax revolt on his hands. An association has been formed in my riding called the Cariboo-Chilcotin Farmers' Alliance. It is contacting agricultural groups right across the country urging them to band together and fight this unfair and unjust process Revenue Canada is undertaking. I ask the Minister to consider that.

I also informed the Minister today that women are being discriminated against under this Section. The auditors have a very arbitrary set of rules and regulations which set out whether a farm is a farm. One of the things they insist on is that a certain number of hours per year are worked on the farm. As you know, Mr. Speaker, if the husband has had to work off the farm to try and make ends meet over the last couple of tough years, then his wife has had to pick up a lot of the slack and do a lot of the farm work. The auditors are not allowing the work of these women to count at all toward the labour provided on the farm. I have proof of that here in two letters.

The first letter is from a lady in Lac La Hache, British Columbia, who says, in referring to the auditor:

> He also doubted whether I would be capable of managing the herd (being female, I guess) while my husband worked, a comment that raised my ire, to say the least!

Let me read another comment by the lady of Quesnel who I quoted a moment ago. She wrote:

> For some reason, no doubt the usual, my own work on the farm is not given consideration in this matter. When we bought this place, I had to sign an affidavit stating that I was not buying under duress and that the payments on the farm would be my responsibility, should anything happen to my husband. I put in a full day's work, each and every day to make this farm pay! We know that a place is considered a farm where the husband stays home and the wife works out, so why not the reverse?

This problem is not going to go away, Mr. Speaker, and I would urge the Parliamentary Secretary to give me some kind of an answer that makes some sense.

Mr. Garnet M. Bloomfield (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Revenue): The Hon. Member in his question today referred to the "unfair" application of Section 31 of the Income Tax Act, to the reply to a question he placed on the Order Paper about the number of farm audits, to changes in procedure, to a tax grab by the Government and to a number of individual cases he has referred to the Minister. Let me take the latter matter first.

To be perfectly fair, the Hon. Member sent in some of the cases in late April. To deal with them it is necessary to obtain the files of the individual taxpayers concerned from our offices in British Columbia, and then subject each file to the kind of thorough analysis I am sure he would wish to have them given. In fact, some of the cases came to the Department only with the Hon. Member's letter of May 26, hardly two weeks ago. He should not, therefore, be surprised that the analysis is not yet complete. But he will have the Minister's reply as quickly as possible.

He has spoken of fairness. I wonder why he considers it fair to have some people with a preference for living in a rural environment claim what are really living expenses as if they are the expenses of running a farm. Let me emphasize that when the Hon. Member refers to the disallowance of farm losses under Section 31 of the Income Tax Act, he is at best only partly correct. That Section deals with the situation of a farm as a business, and the question of whether the taxpayer may be allowed limited losses of up to $5,000 or losses without limit. In both cases, whether the allowable losses are required to be limited or not, it has to be a farm as a business; that is an enterprise carried on with a reasonable expectation of profits.

In many situations Section 31 is not at issue at all. The claimed losses cannot be associated with a business since there is no reasonable expectation of profit. The losses are therefore disallowed because they are personal living expenses and the Income Tax Act specifically denies allowing them as deductions from taxable income.

• (1820)

This is a very complex question and is worthy of a fully detailed answer, particularly with respect to the cases brought to the Minister's attention. I can assure the Hon. Member that the review of these cases is being given a very high priority.

VETERANS AFFAIRS—REVIEW OF WAR VETERANS ALLOWANCE ACT

Mr. Dan McKenzie (Winnipeg-Assiniboine): Mr. Speaker, on May 12 I questioned the Minister of Veterans Affairs (Mr. Campbell) on the War Veterans Allowance Act which is currently under review by the Department. The Minister informed me that no legislative proposals would be considered until the fall or next spring. In other words, in all probability Canadian veterans should not expect any improvements with regard to this matter for quite some time.

At the moment, we have approximately 750,000 veterans, 242,000 of whom are between 60 and 64 years of age. An estimated 275,000 are over the age of 64. I do not feel the Minister is taking into consideration the age of many of these veterans who have been waiting what seems to be an endless length of time to receive the benefits they have justly earned.

Recently the Minister took great pleasure in informing us that the average processing time for first time pension applications is 70-odd days. I must say I am pleased that the Minister is attempting to implement my private Members' Bill C-641 which, if adopted by the House, would ensure that pension applications would be processed completely with a time span of no more than 90 days, and would impose a 45-day limit at each of the two levels in the appeal process. If a decision was not made within any of these periods, the applicant would be automatically awarded the whole amount claimed.

The Minister may be proud of his accomplishments with regard to this matter, but may I remind the House of the years it has taken to reduce the time to this still lengthy amount. Most important, may I remind the House of the many veterans who have died while waiting for their reward. I am hopeful that the Minister will continue his efforts and that we in the House of Commons and veterans can look forward to seeing a full enactment of my Private Members Bill C-641.

The Minister should take heed of the past experiences before continuing to put off too much longer the implementation of any future legislation. Over the years, veterans organizations have made an exceptional number of recommendations to improve the welfare of Canadian veterans. Thousands of veterans feel, as I do, that it is unfortunate that more of these proposals have not been implemented.

One area of concern which comes to mind involves the Aging Veterans program. Presently the program is only offered to those veterans in receipt of a war-related disability pension, thereby excluding many deserving elderly veterans. It is thought that the program should be extended to all disability pensioners and War Veterans Allowance recipients qualifying for treatment under Sections 5, 6, 7 and 12 of the Veterans' Treatment Regulations.

Another matter which is in dire need of immediate upgrading is the War Veterans Allowance interest exemption. The War Veterans Allowance Act limits to $100 per year the exemption in respect of bank, bond and dividend share interest. This small amount is ludicrous by today's standards and does not allow for even the smallest of investments.

The War Veterans Allowance and Civilian War Pensions Allowances Act should also be amended to allow Canadian war veterans living outside Canada to receive the allowance, if they are unable to return to Canada because of health, financial or other mitigating circumstances. The Minister's position is that the War Veterans Allowance legislation is deemed for Canadian veterans living in Canada. I know, and this is known also to veterans' organizations, that there are veterans who are virtually unable to return to Canada. Why should these people who defended our country be ignored?

Another recommendation by veterans' organizations is that all income other than that received from CWA or WBA be exempted as part of a recipient's casual earnings, up to the maximum as set out in the regulations. This proposal, if implemented, would benefit those veterans who are unable to work and who are in receipt of a small disability pension, OAS, GIS, CPP or a small superannuation allowance.

Over the years, veterans' organizations have supplied the department with both problems and solutions. On one hand, the Liberal Government has quickly overlooked many of these recommendations, stating that they are not feasible or, because of financial restraint, are impossible. On the one hand, the Secretary of State has publicized his intention to make Canada a French state, regardless of cost. For the Liberal Government to financially endorse this commitment and blatantly ignore the heroes who defended this country is atrocious. The logic behind this policy is repulsive.

My Conservative colleagues and I feel that veterans deserve better treatment, and a step in the right direction would be to amend the War Veterans Allowance Act as quickly as possible. We are therefore requesting that this Act be revised on the return of the House in September. This would provide ample time for the Minister and his Department to draft the necessary changes to this legislation. Furthermore, this legislation can be passed through all stages in one hour. There is no valid reason for veterans to wait any longer for these necessary revisions to be made.

Mr. Roland de Corneille (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Veterans Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I am glad that the Hon. Member raised this question concerning the review of war veterans allowance and the timing of the opening of the Act. The review has made good progress to date and the Minister anticipates that legislative proposals will be ready for consideration either in the fall or early next spring.

The Hon. Member indicated that the War Veterans Allowance Act had several deficiencies that require correction. I think it is most important in discussing the perceived inadequacy of the War Veterans Allowance Act to understand the history of this dynamic piece of legislation and the basic purpose to which it has always addressed itself.

The War Veterans Allowance Act was introduced in 1930 to ensure that veterans with few assets and very little income were provided with a decent standard of living. It addressed particularly those veterans who had experienced pre-aging due to their war time service. This was a pioneer piece of social legislation which, over the last 53 years, has been frequently amended to ensure its continuing relevance to the needs of veterans and dependents.

It will be of interest to Members to know that some of the special provisions of this legislation include guaranteeing the surviving spouse of the recipient of war veterans allowance the equivalent of one year's married rate in order to ensure that the initial period of bereavement is without financial hardship. This really helps in the time of acute need.

In addition, Members will appreciate that veterans' allowances are fully indexed and are adjusted quarterly to ensure that benefits paid are as responsive as possible to changes in price of goods such as shelter, food and clothing. Furthermore, allowances are paid for dependent children. In 1973, the requirement to declare assets or to have them reduced to a certain level in order to qualify for the allowance was removed.

As mentioned earlier, this Act has been changed several times to ensure its continuing relevance to the changing needs of veterans and dependents. The most recent change, Members will recall, took place in 1980 with the passage of Bill C-40. The major improvements made at that time included an increase in the single rate of allowance of $480 per year and of the married rate of allowance of $840 per year.

Moreover, the amount of income received by single and married allowance recipients over age 65 and under age 65 began to be corrected with this legislation which will be resolved by April 1, 1986. An enhanced capacity of the Minister to forgive allowance overpayments that were received either through no fault of the recipients or where the collection would cause hardship, was enacted. This has resulted in a much more compassionate administration of this legislation in line with its intent to help low income veterans and their dependents to provide for their ongoing maintenance.

Finally, just in April of this year, the level of casual earning exemption under this legislation was significantly increased.

In respect of the current review it is not so much prompted by the inadequacy of this statute but rather the need to ensure that it has no inequitable provisions, that WVA benefits can be delivered quickly and that the Act is managed as efficiently and as effectively as possible.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): The motion to adjourn the House is now deemed to have been adopted. Accordingly, this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 11 a.m.

At 6.30 p.m. the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

CANAGREX

MEASURE TO ESTABLISH

The House resumed from Thursday, July 29, 1982, consideration of Bill C-85, to establish a corporation called Canagrex to promote, facilitate and engage in the export of agricultural and food products from Canada, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Agriculture; and Motions Nos. 1, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12 (p. 19829).

Mr. G. M. Gurbin (Bruce-Grey): Mr. Speaker, it seems like only yesterday but in fact it was July 29, 1982, when I was interrupted in my speech on Canagrex. During that time little has changed. During that ten-month period the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) has made two interventions in the House of Commons, one to bring in closure on Canagrex, and one to bring in closure on the Crow Bill. Little has changed and we are now forced to the end of a debate on a Bill for which there is no consensus and over which there is major concern. In the meantime, throughout those ten months approximately 10,000 agricultural and business bankruptcies have occurred in Canada.

This little Bill, as it is called by the Minister, would establish a Crown corporation for the promotion and facilitation of and engagement in the export of agricultural products in Canada. The root problems of Canadian agriculture do not lie in the failure of our export markets but in the inability of farmers to achieve commodity prices that can compensate them fairly for the high interest rates and high energy prices which are part of Liberal Government policy. The root problems of our ability to increase agricultural exports are tariff and non-tariff barriers in other countries, or the poverty that exists in countries where food is really needed and their inability to pay for our products.

All of Canadian agriculture, whether supportive of this Canagrex Bill or not, has been disappointed and dismayed at the neglect of the Government and the inability of the Minister of Agriculture to face agricultural problems in a constructive way. There is the Minister's failure to influence the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lalonde) to bring in, in the last budget, effective long-term financing measures. There is his continued support of Liberal Government measures which have doubled fuel costs and added significantly to fertilizer costs for farmers in Canada, the failure of the Minister to support a stabilization plan for the hog and beef industries, and his failure to ensure a fair tax system for capital gains and farmers who must work off the farm to survive. None of these things would be quite so bad if he had not promised them repeatedly.

Canagrex has its supporters and its detractors. As part of its support, I would quote the Ontario Federation of Agriculture who said:

> It appears to us, hearing the discussions to date, that many of the opponents to Canagrex have painted the worst possible scenario, depicting the crown corporation as a threat to free enterprise. We believe that it will be a boon to free enterprise, especially to small producers of agricultural and food products. Canada's farmers need the assistance and expertise such a body could offer, to allow us to compete effectively in the world marketplace.

The Toronto Star wrote an editorial in support of Canagrex. It said:

> On the other hand, increased exports could allow farmers to produce more and receive the incomes they need without having to impose price increases on the consumer. In fact, properly handled, the Canagrex activity could allow Ottawa to move away from the use of food marketing boards which regulate food production and prices—and which have been shown to add considerably to consumer costs.

But it also has its detractors, Mr. Speaker, among whom are the Canadian Agricultural Market Development Advisory Council who make several points:

> (A) Enabling legislation should be abandoned because the need for the formation and existence of Canagrex has not been justified in the discussion paper.
> (B) Lack of qualified, experienced personnel.
> (C) The proposed funding for Canagrex would be more effectively used if added to the budgets of I.T. & C., E.D.C., and C.C.C.
> (D) The proposed "Policy Advisory Committee" for the proposed Canagrex might well be a good adjunct to assist I.T. & C. with their policies and programs, and to gain some inputs from the private sector.
> (E) If Agriculture Canada would employ its resources for agricultural export marketing by assisting IT&C, this would be much more profitable and come closer to the 'one-stop-shopping' suggested in paper as being desirable.

• (1110)

Finally:

> Agriculture Canada's concern with 'import replacements' could, and should, be handled by them but does not require Canagrex.

In addition, The Globe and Mail wrote an editorial opposing the proposed legislation of Canagrex as it has been presented by the Minister. I quote from it as well:

> Those who oppose the bill believe that it is an unwarranted Government intervention in the agriculture and exporting businesses. Earlier this year the opposition parties kept it for four months in the Commons Agriculture Committee and forced a considerable number of changes, among them that Canagrex could not itself go into the producing end of farming and that its buying and selling activities would be limited to joint ventures with private traders, farm marketing boards or state to state deals.

Yet the opposition increases. More than 20 agricultural associations, representing more than half the agricultural industry measured by cash receipts from farm production, are now out against Canagrex. So are the Consumers Association of Canada, the Canadian Manufacturers Association, the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, the Canadian Export Association, and the Export Trade Development Board. And so, briefly, when he was a junior minister and more easily shushed by his seniors, was Industry and Regional Expansion Minister Edward Lumley, who might not now be so easily shushed.

The Minister of Agriculture has made a variety of comments following his press release of February, 1981 announcing Canagrex. I would quote from one of them:

We must not surrender to the fear and the suspicion and cynicism that would smother Canagrex. Canagrex will help to show that we can co-operate, we can act positively as a nation, in the national interest.

Then in December, 1982, after only two days of proposed debate, he brought in closure. The last day of proposed debate in the House adjourned with me sitting in my seat waiting to speak and the Liberals could not find 18 Members of Parliament to form a quorum to debate this Bill. Then the Minister brought in closure.

We have an interesting situation and one that provides an opportunity for the Government to live up to its responsibility and the brave words of co-operation by the Minister.

We all have pride and expectation for Canada's agricultural producers. The one million Canadian farm workers each produce ten times the amount that a Russian farm worker produces and 100 times the amount an Asian farmer produces. Productivity has increased three times in the last 20 years and 12 times in the last 50 years. Our agricultural exports in 1981 were $8.8 billion and growing. We can do better and the Government can assist.

None of us is that happy with another Crown corporation. But if this is the best answer that the Liberals have to improve our long-term agricultural exports, then there is a consensus that Canagrex could be tried without the buy-sell provisions. The necessary financing could, as is now possible, be gained through Treasury Board approval. This would allow the corporation to be judged on its merit without having the automatic right to infringe on private enterprise activities which could give it a very unfair advantage, and if confidence was established it could be amended in the future. As it stands, it does indeed represent an entity capable of the worst fears of its detractors—unlimited and nearly unchallengeable bureaucratic invasion of the food production sector.

I do not expect the Minister to accept this suggestion because he has already refused on grounds that are at least as absurd as any argument against the Bill. Besides, it would be a reasonable thing to do and when he cannot do anything else for agriculture the smoke and mirrors of creating another diversion within agriculture is in his best political interest. It keeps farmers from putting themselves together to put pressure on him to help solve some of those root problems that threaten the viability of family farms across Canada.

[Translation]

Mr. Marcel Dionne (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased with this opportunity to speak to Bill C-85, which is a very important piece of legislation for Canada's agricultural industry. As we all know, Canagrex will be a very important and useful agency for the Canadian agricultural sector. I wish I could say that I had invented Canagrex, but I have to admit that the suggestion came from the Canadian Federation of Agriculture.

The agency was created as a direct result of requests made by the Canadian Federation of Agriculture to the federal Government for an organization to promote export sales of agricultural products. In its representation, the Federation emphasized the fact that Canada's efforts to market agricultural products abroad were both fragmented and limited. Fragmented, because our trading partners often have trouble finding out with whom they should be dealing, and limited, because many producers who would be able to export Canadian agricultural products do not have the necessary resources to bring their products on the world market.

We know all the arguments advanced by opponents to the Bill. They claim the Bill would be an affront since it ignores everything they have done to promote exports of our agricultural products.

Perhaps we should stop here for a while. As I said before, positive measures have been taken in the agri-food export business in the past, especialy with respect to wheat, oil seeds and meat. No one is denying that. In fact, all this is clear from the fact that last year, our agricultural exports were worth $9.5 billion, which means a trading surplus of $3.1 billion, and 60 per cent of that surplus was due to grain and oil seed exports.

However, and this is our justification for creating the Canagrex Corporation, if we compare the remainder of our exports, that is, minus the grain component, with our total imports, we have an agricultural trade deficit of approximately $2 billion.

The non-grain sector of our industry is lagging behind because, as was pointed out earlier, here in Canada we do not have a mechanism to help farmers seek out potential markets.

Canadian farmers themselves have expressed the need for an agency like Canagrex that would provide a more diversified and better co-ordinated approach to the marketing of agri-food products abroad. It is not a takeover of our agricultural industry or a Communist plot, as our opponents are claiming in their propaganda literature. In fact, the kind of propaganda being made about Canagrex and the Crow rate reminds me of the words of a former President of the United States, Franklin Roosevelt, who said that we have nothing to fear but fear itself.

In recent months, copies of Bill C-85 to establish the Canagrex Corporation have been distributed, but from the controversy the Bill continues to raise, it would seem that our opponents have not bothered to read the actual text of the Bill.

Following certain concerns that were expressed, we made 14 substantial changes in the Bill, and I may point out that they were made to meet the demands of the New Democratic Party and the Progressive Conservative Party.

Opponents of the Bill have based their charge of a takeover of the agricultural industry on three specific points: the purchase and sales aspect, the power to purchase property, and the Corporation's accountability. Every time, opponents to the Bill have managed to misrepresent the provisions of the Bill.

The powers of Canagrex with respect to the purchase and sales of products can be exercised only within the framework of its mandate, which is to promote and facilitate export sales of agricultural products and to proceed with the sale of such products, subject to the following restrictions. Canagrex may engage in export sales of agricultural products only when it is asked to enter into ventures jointly or in co-operation with companies, co-operatives, marketing boards, or individuals carrying on business in Canada, or within the framework of contracts with foreign governments.

The power to purchase, lease or otherwise acquire and hold real and personal property for actual use by the Corporation does not include the power to purchase, lease or otherwise acquire real property for the production of fruit, forage, grain, vegetable or other crops, the raising of cattle, poultry, sheep, swine or other livestock or the processing of any agricultural product or food product.

How can anyone be more precise, Mr. Speaker? Canagrex will not act unilaterally and be able to disregard agents now engaged in the international trade of agricultural products, I repeat, Canagrex will not be able to disregard agents now engaged in the international trade or to act as primary producer. That is very important because our colleagues opposite have often questioned the very existence or the aims of Canagrex. It was stated in false advertising that Canagrex would be in a position to act as primary producer, but that is false, Mr. Speaker. The legislation is quite clear in that respect and anyone who maintains the opposite view is unfair and can only be trying to mislead people.

As to criticisms about Canagrex being empowered to sign cooperative agreements with private commercial and agricultural organizations, I would point out that a good many provincial Crown corporations in Saskatchewan, Quebec and Prince Edward Island already have the power to buy, sell or hold real property. In fact, under the Agricultural Products Board Act, the Federal Government has had the power to buy and sell since 1952. Never did the provinces and the Federal Government abuse that power, and things will not be any different with Canagrex.

As to the accountability of the corporation, the Bill provides for an annual comprehensive audit by the Auditor General. No other Crown corporation is subjected to such an audit and I must point out that the Auditor General, Mr. Kenneth Dye, was quite pleased with that provision. Being on that committee myself, I was very glad to see that Mr. Kenneth Dye had commended the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) and Agriculture Canada for advocating that kind of control over a new Crown corporation. I really wonder how anyone can be critical of a Crown corporation whose accountability has been praised by the Auditor General himself.

Some people have claimed that they are not against the kind of power which Canagrex would have, but they would rather extend it only to existing corporations. I have only one comment to make in that respect, Mr. Speaker: since those corporations deal as well in the promotion of footwear, electronic equipment and agricultural products, which products will they promote first? Not food products, if the lack of respect sometimes shown for agriculture is an indication. What we need and what the Federation is asking for is a corporation which would deal exclusively in exports of agricultural products.

There can be no doubt that the private sector and the taxpayers are very well protected. We have done everything to ensure that Canagrex will show responsibility in exercising its powers. Briefly, Canagrex has the following powers: publish information on the markets, offer publicity and information services, make and give loans and guarantees; upon request, enter into cooperative contracts with private enterprises, marketing boards and cooperatives; enter into contracts with foreign governments; make grants or contributions to speed up promotion or development projects or the installation of the necessary infrastructures.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to continue to speak at length on this Bill, but I must conclude since the time allotted to me has ended.

[English]

Mr. Gordon Towers (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, it is with a great deal of disgust that I rise to speak in the House of Commons this morning. The Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) and the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) are making a definite attempt to socialize a basic industry in Canada, that of producing food or agriculture in general.

• (1125)

It is absolutely distressing to see the Prime Minister allow the Minister of Agriculture to get away with it. We have to recognize that it was 5,000 years ago that an individual sold his birthright for a bowl of porridge. That is exactly what is happening in the House of Commons today. The Minister of Agriculture says he just wants a window on the industry. We heard that message some time ago when the then Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources wanted PetroCan just for a window on the industry. A fine window it has developed into. It is one of the five largest oil companies in Canada. It was bought with the people's money.

Now we have a Bill that will allow the Government to price agriculture products. All you have to do to control anything is just set the selling price on it. If the Minister did not have that in mind, why would he not take away the buy and sell provision? Our concerns would then be alleviated. However, he will not drop that part of it. Therefore we have to assume that he is setting a mechanism in place that will allow this to happen.

I now quote some excerpts from a book:

Federalism must be welcomed as a valuable tool which permits dynamic Parties to plant socialist governments in certain Provinces from which the seed of radicalism can slowly spread—

—it is folly to endorse strategies that are devised to swing the whole country at the same time and in the same way into the path of socialism—

In terms of political tactics, the only real question democratic socialists must answer is: "Just how much reform can the majority of the people be brought to desire at the present time?"—

Perhaps even Parties with different names may reach the same ideology in different Provinces—

I should like to see socialists feeling free to espouse whatever political trends or to use whatever constitutional tools happen to fit each particular problem at each particular time.

Those quotes are taken from the book "Federalism and the French Canadian", written by the present Prime Minister, pages 125, 127, 128 and 130. If that does not tell us something, I do not know what will.

Some of the major agriculture industries in Canada do not want Canagrex, yet the Government and the Minister of Agriculture are flying in the face of those industries. I will read the names of some of them: Alberta Beekeepers Association; Alberta Canada All Breeds Association; Alberta Canola Growers Association; Alberta Cattle Commission; Alberta Pork Producers Marketing Board; British Columbia Cattlemen's Association; British Columbia Pork Producers Association; Canadian Cattlemen's Association; Canadian Export Association; Canadian Meat Council; Canadian Seed Trade Association; Consumers' Association of Canada; Flax Growers Western Canada; Manitoba Canola Growers Association; Manitoba Cattle Producers' Association; Ontario Bean Dealers Association; Palliser Wheat Growers Association; Saskatchewan Canola Growers Association; Saskatchewan Hog Marketing Commission; Saskatchewan Stockgrowers' Association; Shippers and Exporters Association; Western Barley Growers' Association; Western Stockgrowers' Association. In spite of all this opposition, the Government is going to push through legislation that these people do not want. What in the world is Parliament coming to?

The Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Dionne) said that the Canadian Federation of Agriculture started this some years ago. That is not so. It was the Manitoba Farm Bureau that started it about seven years ago. That body has now come around and is opposing it. Why does the Government misrepresent the position taken by these people? It is absolutely wrong that we are pushing the free enterprise agriculture community into this socialist program. That is all it is. It will take control in spite of the denials made by the Minister of Agriculture.

• (1130)

As my colleague, the Hon. Member for Bruce-Grey (Mr. Gurbin), just mentioned, the Canadian agricultural producer produces ten times more than does his counterpart in Russia. Why, then, do we want to fall into a socialist trap? It is unbecoming, unrealistic and unwarranted.

I want to read from a press release, Mr. Speaker, issued by all of the people who are in opposition to Canagrex so that it will be on the record:

The Government has again announced its intention to proceed in the House of Commons with the passage of Bill C-85, that would establish an Agricultural Export Crown Corporation—CANAGREX.

This, despite widespread opposition from the agricultural, trade and consumers sectors across Canada, including a majority of farm producers that could be affected by CANAGREX. The above mentioned associations have consistently opposed CANAGREX, as proposed in Bill C-85, and will today reestablish the facts about Canada's agricultural export trade and its potential. We are currently enjoying an all time high in agricultural export activity and, through existing export structures, are breaking new ground almost daily. We welcome the interest of the Government in seeing these exports expanded, but, we believe that the Government's initiative to create CANAGREX is redundant, most inappropriate and misdirected.

How much more straightforward can the opposition be than that, Mr. Speaker? Perhaps the Prime Minister and the Minister of Agriculture do not understand English.

REDUNDANT because we believe that the Government has presently at its disposal all the means it needs to support export growth in agriculture, without having to resort to the creation of yet another Crown Corporation. With only minor enlargement of their mandate, the Export Development Corporation, the Canadian Commercial Corporation and the Foreign Trade Service could quite adequately fulfill financial, institutional and marketing support functions—at a much lower expense to the taxpayer.

The Government forgets about the taxpayer. All the Government thinks about is how it can pick another buck out of the taxpayer's pocket. I must tell Members opposite that the supply of those bucks is coming to an end.

INAPPROPRIATE because through CANAGREX the Government wishes to establish itself as a direct trader, with the powers to buy and sell on international markets. This move would be directly opposite to the Government's earlier decision not to proceed with a National Trading Corporation.

There was certainly a lot of publicity about that. It is a good thing that it was dropped.

It will bring unfair competition to bear on existing export structures with potentially serious negative consequences on our overall agricultural trade performance. It is unnecessary as the agricultural support organizations in other countries, which CANAGREX is meant to correspond to, do not engage in direct exporting.

MISDIRECTED in that the basic issue in Canada's agricultural exports growth is totally ignored in the CANAGREX proposal.

Of course, people who are interested in agriculture know how the present Minister of Agriculture has suppressed agricultural production by his marketing board concept whenever he had the opportunity.

The Prime Minister has himself identified the crucial issue, that is our ability to supply internationally competitive priced products. The Government proposal for CANAGREX does not address this question.

When the Government, in the words of the Prime Minister, says we must "fight to keep the deficit in check", the above mentioned Associations believe that the Government then should not be committing public funds to an initiative of which the raison d'être is so much in doubt. It must revise its position.

The Government has not relented nor has it revised its position in spite of some of the so-called amendments that the Minister of Agriculture has put forward. Those amendments are inconsequential.

For the sake of cooperation, so crucial to our agricultural export success, we would find it specially deplorable if the Government should choose to force this legislation through Parliament by means of the most drastic parliamentary measures. Because of the obvious serious opposition to CANAGREX by a very large proportion of those in Canada who would be affected by it, we urge the Government once again to recognize that the proposal is not adequately supported and to seek the means to achieve consensus through consultation along the lines advocated by the Prime Minister in recent public statements.

Apparently, Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister has departed from that policy. I see that you are about to rise, Mr. Speaker. Thank you for allowing me the opportunity to express my views, and I do hope that the Minister of Agriculture will give this matter a second thought.

Mr. Ralph Ferguson (Lambton-Middlesex): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to take part in today's debate at the report stage of Bill C-85, the Canagrex Bill, because I am one of the first to recognize that we do not have, particularly in eastern Canada, the marketing mechanisms necessary to expand our export trade such as those in western Canada who are under the jurisdiction of the Canadian Wheat Board.

I should point out, however, that when this Bill was in committee, amendments were made to it to ensure that Canagrex could never get involved in food production. This in fact would squelch the unwarranted rumours circulated by Members of the Opposition who use this as a point of contention.

In addition to that, there have been amendments made so that Canagrex could not get involved in exporting except in coordination with, or at the request of, producers' groups, processors, manufacturers or individuals. I would like to point out that by looking at last year's exports of agricultural products and taking into consideration that in 1982 the exports of wheat went up by 15 per cent over 1981 and other agricultural products only went up by 2 per cent, that alone tells us that something is sadly lacking in the export of agricultural products from within Canada.

I must take issue with Members of the Official Opposition opposite who would deny Canadian farmers the right to have a voice in the exporting of their products entering world trade. I simply cannot believe that Members of the Official Opposition can suggest that the farmers do not have the knowledge or expertise necessary to work with processors in order to further their own potential as members of an exporting nation. They do have this knowledge and expertise, and to suggest otherwise, as does the Official Opposition, is certainly an insult to the intelligence of farmers across Canada.

I also must take issue with Members of the Official Opposition when they talk about Canagrex being another move toward socialism. Look at the list of Crown corporations within the Province of Alberta. The Government of Alberta owns half of the land, it owns the mineral rights, and it does not allow an individual to own his own mineral rights as is allowed in Ontario. The Government is directly involved in trust companies and various other areas, and the Government is directly involved in the exporting of agricultural products. I think that what we are asking for here, Mr. Speaker, will ensure that all farmers in Canada have the same vehicles available to them to expand their production and sell on the world markets as enjoyed by the farmers in western Canada.

Officials of one of the most productive counties in Ontario wrote to their Member of Parliament, a Member of the Official Opposition, and their letter ended by saying:

Sir—however you fell you must vote, when the vote comes, the farmers of Oxford want Canagrex and we want it now! No more fooling around.

That is laying the issue right on the table, Mr. Speaker, and I think we must ensure that this is the route we take. Particularly with the low prices being experienced on the commodity markets at the present time, Canagrex can serve as a vehicle to bring into focus the potential that there is in Canada's export markets and fill those markets.

Farmers from Ontario, from all of eastern Canada, from western Canada and all farmers who wish to become involved, members of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, members from the National Farmers' Union, from various organizations, from the Ontario Tobacco Board, all support this legislation. In fact, the Ontario Tobacco Board lost a major sale recently because the legislation was not in place. The Horticulture Council, which spreads all the way from British Columbia through to the Maritimes, supports Canagrex and recognizes the need for it. These are all representative farm organizations across Canada whose members want to expand and utilize the potential that they have, a potential that has been bestowed upon them by Mother Nature and is not being utilized to its fullest capacity.

Only a small group within the agricultural sector is opposed to Canagrex. The vast majority of the groups are in favour of it.

• (1140)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member. The Chair has listened attentively to the Hon. Member who now has the floor, and to previous speakers as well. I would like to indicate to the House that we are now at report stage. Remarks must be relevant to the subject matter at hand. We are, of course, at the stage of discussing proposed amendments, a grouping of a number of amendments, and I would invite all Hon. Members to relate their remarks to the amendments as they have been grouped. Report stage, if I may be permitted, is not an occasion to discuss the general principle of the Bill. This is usually done at second reading stage or, again, at third reading stage. Therefore, I would seek the co-operation of Hon. Members in adhering to practice in this respect.

Mr. Ferguson: Mr. Speaker, I would be very pleased to discuss the amendments as proposed. I have already referred to the one which would ensure that Canagrex cannot become actively involved except in co-ordination with, or in co-operation with, an exporting organization, a company, a farm organization and so on.

Incidentally, I should point out that the official critic of the Official Opposition indicated that those amendments which we put forward as a Government at that time were acceptable to them, the Official Opposition. However, to remove those provisions would simply place Canagrex in the same position as a steer, perhaps, amid a bunch of heifers. It has to have that buy-sell provision if we are going to deal on a state to state basis with other countries, which are insisting on dealing this way because many of the products which are offered in the world markets are not of the quality which we want to see, and which we know we can produce.

In fact, when you look at the situation, particularly in the grain industry, various companies are allowed a 3 per cent tare. Quite often that tare percentage is added to the grain after it has been sold by the farmers. We want to ensure that the food products exported by Canagrex are top quality. We have the vehicle here to ensure long-term contracts, ensuring continuity of supply and a quality product. We have the vehicle in place to do this, but we need the bridge financing as provided for in the Canagrex legislation.

Many of our marketing boards would love to expand their production. It is that last 10 per cent of production which is the cheapest. Consequently, they can tie in to a long-term contractual arrangement with an offshore market. However, like the Canadian Wheat Board, which is able to sign up long-term contractual arrangements with other countries, we in the rest of Canada do not have that available to us. Consequently, it is absolutely essential that we have the buy-sell provision in the Canagrex legislation. To remove that, as has been suggested by the Opposition, would simply make Canagrex a vehicle to promote agriculture products with no real potential for tying up long-term contracts with other nations who so desperately need our food.

Another point is that we have provided for an audit in this legislation by the Auditor General, an audit which meets his criteria and one which is somewhat lacking in other Crown corporations. I would like to commend the Hon. Members of the New Democratic Party for bringing forward this amendment and for taking such an interest in the legislation as it came through committee. They certainly saw the need for this legislation. By providing that type of auditing procedure, we can be sure that the interests not only of the producer but of all of Canada, including the taxpayers, are represented.

I must point out also that in regard to the development of offshore markets with other nations, I have had it brought to my attention on various occasions that Canadians have not been aggressive enough in their sales to other countries except for, perhaps, the Canadian Wheat Board and the Canadian Dairy Commission. We have not had continuity of aggressiveness towards promoting our own products. The existing system would tend to indicate that on the many occasions where we do have a temporary surplus of a product in Canada, it is offered to world markets at fire sale prices. There is no incentive there for the farmers themselves to gear up and supply a market, if they know they are only going to be able to sell at a time when they have a temporary surplus on hand. Therefore, there is no way that we can give those countries our assurances that we will always have lots of product to supply their needs.

I firmly support this legislation, Mr. Speaker, and I am proud to say that most of the major farm organizations in Ontario give us their unqualified support and are asking that this legislation be passed as quickly as possible.

Mr. Ron Stewart (Simcoe South): Mr. Speaker, again, it is a sad moment for me in this House to rise and have to speak against a Bill which has been put upon us by closure. Not only that, it is the most blatant move to enforce state control which we have seen in the House. It is another erosion of our rights and freedoms, this time directed at the farmer.

Many farmers would no doubt welcome assistance from the Government in defining and developing export markets, as some of these amendments state. I would like to speak particularly to Motion No. 1. The farmers would welcome help for research and development in the agricultural industry totally. Government assistance in this respect makes a great deal of sense. It would be a laudable and sound concept, and this Bill purports that this is its intent. However, you will note, Mr. Speaker, that I used the phrase "Government assistance". The reason that many farmers and farm organizations and related groups across the country are opposed to Canagrex is that the concept behind the Bill is not Government assistance. It is another direct move towards Government interference, pure state control of agriculture.

Mr. Stewart: In a meeting with two of my colleagues, many OFA representatives and county agricultural representatives, I am proud to tell you, Mr. Speaker, that Mr. Garth Cubitt, the President of the Simcoe County Agricultural Association, had the foreseight to understand what this is all about, that it is state control, and to oppose it.

There are many fears over this Bill, the majority of them justified, given the previous track record of this Government. There is valid concern that the Government will be in direct competition with private companies. There is worry that Canagrex will venture into unprofitable areas for political purposes. And how many times have we seen this happen? There have been predictions of higher food prices for Canadians once the Government gets involved.

The many specific concerns related to this Bill are in Clause 1, Mr. Speaker. They have already been dealt with in detail by my colleagues in committee, and you have just heard two fine speeches by the Hon. Member for Bruce-Grey (Mr. Gurbin) and the Hon. Member for Red Deer (Mr. Towers) on the subject. I will not dwell on the atmosphere resulting from the Bill. I will deal directly with Clause 1. There is apprehension and distrust which is well founded when you realize the broad and potentially dangerous scope of power proposed for this Corporation.

Of the many areas in this Bill which I could use to illustrate the questionable magnitude of these powers, I am particularly alarmed over the provisions in Clause 14(g), which allows Canagrex to:

(g) purchase, lease or otherwise acquire and hold real and personal property for actual use by Canagrex in the operation and management of its business—

If this Government wishes to create Canagrex as a tool to aid farm report, why in heaven's name does the Corporation need to own property and buy and sell property? Would its success in meddling in the finances of the farm be comparable to the post office and to Canadair? I would think so. Why does it have to set up its own farms to compete with those existing? Is it in conjunction with this Order in Council that we have had imposed upon us the establishment of internment camps, or are prison farms the next step? Is it maybe just to build office towers to house more Government bureaucrats in its Crown corporations?

How ironic it is that this particular Government wants to guarantee the rights of the Corporation to own property. It was this Government which flatly refused to make any reference to the property rights of Canadians when it patriated the Constitution and had the Charter of Rights proclaimed, and was the major reason I voted against it. Obviously this Government feels the right to own property is the prerogative of Government, not the people. Check the U.S.S.R. and Poland and see how they love it! The measures contained in this Bill were designed to reinforce that concept totally.

Beyond the immediate concerns regarding the structure and powers being assigned to the Canagrex Corporation in this Bill, there is an even more important and fundamental issue at stake, as listed in the amendments. What we are being asked to approve here is the creation of yet another Crown corporation, another intrusion by Government into the lives of Canadians, another definite move towards state control. Read the Auditor General's report. He classes the Crown corporations in existence now as sub-governments. I would love to know who those people across the way would like to put on top of the agricultural Crown corporation because that will be the real porkbarrel. They love Canadair and its $2.3 billion loss.

In my view, those in the agricultural community who have pledged their support to this Bill have not really understood its very basic implication. That is what this is all about. It is not whether you assist someone in buying or selling in our overseas markets; it is the state control of agriculture.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Stewart: How many Canadians in general realize just how far down the slippery slope to socialism we as a nation have travelled? Not because we wanted to take the trip; we are on this path only because the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) put us there. This Prime Minister firmly believes in state control and socialism. Back in the 1950s and 1960s, before he had the authority and power to implement his goal, he was writing his views on both, and I do not know why Members across the way do not read them. They are in black and white. Let us have a few quotes from this philosophy of the Prime Minister. He said it, not I:

—it seems to me that the regime of free enterprise has shown itself incapable of adequately resolving problems of contemporary society. That's why I am personally convinced that with the upheavals inherent in automation, cybernetics and nuclear energy, Liberal democracy will not long be able to satisfy our growing demands for justice and liberty—

I believe in the necessity of state control to maximize the liberty and welfare of all. The erroneous liberal idea of property helped to emancipate the bourgeoise, but is now hampering the march toward economic democracy.

He goes on:

I should like to see socialists feeling free to espouse whatever political trends or to use whatever constitutional tools happen to fit each particular problem at each particular time.

That was said by the Prime Minister of Canada. The constitutional tools already available to him when he took over were obviously lacking, so he eventually managed to design new ones to suit his socialistic purposes. Closure. Making announcements outside this House and taking power away from Parliament.

The Bill before us provides the Government with an especially vital tool for the expansion of socialism: state control of production, food production in this instance, the staple of our existence. How much more control can you get? Look at what happened to Tanzania when they got state control of production. Look at Poland with the most arable land in the whole of Europe. They owe us $500 million for imports of wheat. Look at the Ukraine, once the bread basket of Europe, and at what happened to it when state control of agriculture came in. When you have state control, it ties up the means of production, controls economic freedom and that is when you lose your individual freedom.

That is what is at stake in this Bill. I say to the farmers who are in favour of this Bill: Please wake up before it is too late. The people under the control of such a state are known as slaves. They are dependent on state aid, and the greater the dependency the greater the power of the state to expand its control. We see that in communications, in industry, and now the Minister is trying to extend it to farming. The Prime Minister recognized the power inherent in such a dependency when he wrote:

Since the sum total of Governments is the sum total of powers, the first task of a socialist is to educate all of the people to demand maximum service from all their Governments.

That is what those people over there are trying to make the farmer think. Did your grandparents, Mr. Speaker, espouse this philosophy? You bet your sweet patootie they did not. Our grandfathers built this country, but they did not build one bit of it on socialism. Check the records. It was built on sweat and hard work. The people of this country are being educated in the ways of socialism, and we would do well to ask the people of Russia, Cuba or China how they benefit from such an education. The creation of another Crown corporation such as Canagrex simply expands the concept of state control and socialism. That is a dangerous and destructive concept.

I see you are waving at me, Mr. Speaker, so I will conclude by simply saying this. Through its embrace of and dedication to socialism, this Government has created very grave problems for Canada and this is the latest and worst of them. Socialism in the hands of this Prime Minister has taken on a new form and meaning. It has, as this Bill amply demonstrates, become nothing less than communization. I am convinced, and with good reason, that the Prime Minister, given his way, would turn this nation into a huge organized commune in which every single aspect of our lives would be controlled by Government.

Mr. Ferguson: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I would ask that the rule of relevance be applied here and that we get back to the amendments, please.

Mr. Taylor: You are the last one to be referring to that.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: What is relevant to you may not be relevant to me.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The Hon. Member for Moose Jaw (Mr. Neil) on the same point of order.

Mr. Neil: Mr. Speaker, we are dealing with a series of amendments, the first of which changes the concept of this Bill. It seems to me that if we are to deal properly with the first amendment, plus the others grouped with it, we have to have a wide scope to speak on the subject matter.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. The Chair thanks Hon. Members for their contributions to the procedural matter. As a matter of fact, the time allocated to the Hon. Member for Simcoe South (Mr. Stewart) had in fact expired and the Chair had proposed to rise at that point so as not to interrupt the Hon. Member in his remarks to refer Hon. Members to procedural paper No. 2, dealing with rules respecting repetition and relevance in debate. I would like to quote the following paragraph:

> Motions which are amendments to change, to delete or to restore clauses in the bill can be moved and debated at this stage.

I am referring to report stage. It goes on:

> To avoid excessive repetition of debate, the Speaker has the power to select and to combine motions and amendments.

This was done previously as Hon. Members know. It goes on:

> Also, the Speaker can control debate through use of irrelevancy rule as applied to debate on clauses of a bill. Despite the resemblance of debate at report stage to that at committee stage, there is no allowance in the Standing Orders of the House for a wide-ranging discussion of a bill as occurs by practice in committee on study of clause 1.

When the Hon. Member for Simcoe South rose to make his speech, he said specifically that he would address his remarks to Clause 1 of the Bill. The Chair waited with some patience, I may say, for the Hon. Member to speak with some greater relevance to the amendments at hand. Along the way the Hon. Member did touch on some of the general contents of those amendments.

Because of the large grouping of amendments, it is, of course, rather difficult for the Chair to determine on the spot if a Member is speaking to any one of the more than half a dozen amendments we are now debating together. Therefore, I would invite Hon. Members to make as much as possible a determined effort to relate their remarks to the specific amendments now before the House. Otherwise the Chair will have no other choice but to invite Hon. Members to relate their remarks in fact to those amendments.

Taking into account, as I have just said, that the amendments are numerous but in a sense are all related to each other, hopefully we will be able to make progress in the debate.

• (1200)

The Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River (Mr. Skelly) rises on a point of order?

Mr. Skelly: On this point of order, Mr. Speaker, I am pursuing the matter of relevance. I can see that it will be a problem throughout the day in that in Beauchesne's Citation 102 there is the indication that the question of relevance must address the question of rationality. I believe that any intelligent examination of the remarks of the Hon. Member who spoke previously would indicate that the speech was absolutely irrational. Therefore, I feel that he was not relevant in what he was dealing with in the matter. He should probably have been ruled out of order immediately.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): I thank the Hon. Member but, of course, that is a matter of opinion. The Chair has wide discretion in the exercise of its judgment. I am attempting to do an objective job of assessing, if I may use that term, Hon. Members' remarks as they relate to the matter at hand. It is not an easy task, mind you, especially in the context of today's debate.

I now recognize the Hon. Member for Moose Jaw for debate.

Mr. Doug Neil (Moose Jaw): Mr. Speaker, I can understand the concern of my friends to the left with respect to some of the remarks which have been made here this morning. It is hitting home, I think, and it is an indication as to how closely allied they are with the Government, which is attempting to put forward a Bill that is entirely in keeping with the philosophy of those on my left.

It is a sad day for Canada, as the Hon. Member who spoke previously said. We are faced here with a Bill restricted to two days of debate by a motion of closure, two days of debate which cover not only the third reading stage but also the second reading stage. We are faced with some ten or 12 substantial amendments to the Bill. We as Members should have been given the opportunity to spend a considerable amount of time on these amendments.

I voiced my concern about the Bill on second reading and in committee. I pointed out, as forcefully as I could, the dangers inherent in the Bill because it gives the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) and the Government the potential of complete control, not only of production of agricultural products but of the food chain as well.

It is a further extension of the Government's social philosophy which has crept in since the Party opposite was taken over by the present Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau), a Prime Minister whose background and writings have dedicated him to socialism, Marxism and all the other "isms" which exist.

Mr. Smith: That is absolute garbage.

Mr. Stewart: He has written it down. Read it.

Mr. Neil: Obviously, the Hon. Member on the other side has not taken the time to read some of the writings of his Leader.

Mr. Smith: I have read them. By their deeds ye shall know them.

Mr. Neil: I am sure that if he had read them, then he would understand what is happening to his Party and what is happening to the country. If he says that he has read them, then obviously he has not understood them.

Mr. Smith: Oh, I did both.

Mr. Thacker: Or else he agrees.

Mr. Huntington: He supports him.

Mr. Neil: It is interesting that when the Bill was in committee and Members of the Official Opposition were proposing to remove a number of clauses, buy and sell, joint ventures and so on, we attempted to bring in as witnesses senior officials from the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce and from the Department of External Affairs who have been involved over the years in the type of promotion which the Bill authorizes. I moved a motion in committee that these witnesses appear before the committee, but it was voted down by the Government Members.

I am wondering what will happen if the Bill passes, as it undoubtedly will because of the Government majority and the support of the NDP. What will happen to the agricultural arm of IT&C which is out in the world trying to sell our goods, and what will happen to the agricultural representatives of the Department of External Affairs? Surely the whole aspect should have been examined to determine whether or not the Bill was necessary or whether or not IT&C and the Department of External Affairs should have been given additional powers to carry out the functions of which the Minister speaks.

However, it seems to me that the Minister of Agriculture is interested in power. He wants control, control of the production of agricultural products and control of the food chain. Otherwise, why would he include buy and sell clauses? Why would he include joint ventures? He says: "All I want is a window on the industry". We know what a window on the industry is. The Bill is wide enough that the Minister of Agriculture or Canagrex could end up putting quotas on various agricultural products. We would have a situation where the producer could no longer make the decision as to what products he would produce in a particular year or how he would sell them, except through this organization which has such sweeping powers.

Mr. Whelan: You know that is nonsense.

Mr. Neil: The Minister says that it is nonsense. We asked the Minister in committee and on numerous other occasions, if what we are speaking about is nonsense, why he leaves these clauses in the Bill. The Minister said on several occasions that he had no intention of exercising many of the powers contained in the Bill.

Mr. Huntington: Why put them in the Bill?

Mr. Neil: We said that if he does not intend to exercise these powers, he should remove them.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Neil: What did he say? He said: "Some of the Provinces have legislation with similar types of clauses".

Mr. Huntington: The Prime Minister won't let him.

Mr. Neil: We do not care what the Provinces have. We are concerned about the Bill, the country and the agricultural industry.

Mr. Whelan: There are no such powers in that Bill that you claim there are, no such powers.

Mr. Neil: The Minister is repeating, like a broken record, the things he said over the years, not only in committee but in public as well.

Mr. Whelan: Just state the facts as they are, that's all.

Mr. Neil: I am fast running out of time, and if there are any more interventions by Hon. Members on the other side, I will run out of time. However, I would like to suggest that one of the serious flaws in the Bill is the fact that Canagrex could operate on a regional basis. It could divide the country even more than it is divided today, because if Canagrex went offshore and found markets, it would be faced with the situation where the Minister or Canagrex would have to make a decision as to whether or not such a contract went to eastern Canada, western Canada, the Maritimes or wherever. That would be quite a chore.

Take, for example, the pork producer. Supposing the Minister went offshore and obtained a contract for the sale of pork. We have pork producers in Quebec, in Ontario and in western Canada. Who would receive the contract? Would the Minister or Canagrex make the decision and say: "Oh, this contract goes here, into a certain area, because they are having a few more problems than us", or perhaps because there were more votes in that particular area?

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary, on a point of order.

Mr. Dionne (Chicoutimi): Mr. Speaker, would my colleague opposite agree to being asked a question at this point?

• (1210)

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): A question could only be asked at this time with the Hon. Member's consent.

Mr. Neil: Mr. Speaker, if these were 20-minute speeches, I would be very happy to accept a question; but because of the limited time, I do not feel that I have time. I will answer his question personally afterwards, if he so desires, but I only have about one and one half minutes left. If I have any little bit of time left, I might entertain a question.

I might say in closing that the amendments with which we are dealing today are ones which will make the Bill palatable to the majority of agricultural groups and producers in Canada. As the Bill exists at the present time, without these amendments well over half of the witnesses who appeared before us opposed the Bill in its present form. The majority of people have no objection to giving Conagrex, IT&C or the Department of External Affairs the power to promote and facilitate the export of agricultural products. However, they are absolutely opposed to the powers which are in the Bill to take complete control of agriculture.

If there is any time left, Mr. Speaker, I would be happy to entertain a question from the Hon. Member.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Is the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Dionne) rising to ask a question?

Mr. Dionne (Chicoutimi): Yes, Mr. Speaker. I would like to know whether big corporations like CN, CP and the Canadian Wheat Board that were established by the Progressive Conservative Party—I would like to know whether my colleague opposite means that the Canadian Wheat Board, which has the power to purchase and sell agricultural products, should have those powers withdrawn.

[English]

Mr. Neil: I am not saying that at all, Mr. Speaker. The Wheat Board is dealing in a different type of commodity. The commodity with which it deals is traded on the world market.

Mr. Smith: What's the difference?

Mr. Neil: The production of wheat, oats and barley, with which the Wheat Board deals, is concentrated in the West, in the Wheat Board area, and there is no possibility of playing off the East against the West by the Wheat Board, as there is in the Bill.

[Translation]

Mr. Dionne (Chicoutimi): Mr. Speaker, I have another question for the Hon. Member.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. That is subject to the unanimous consent of the House.

[English]

Is there unanimous consent to allow the Hon. Member to ask another question?

Some Hon. Members: No.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): There is no unanimous consent.

[English]

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak on the amendments to the Canagrex Bill, Bill C-85, amendments which have been proposed by the Progressive Conservative Party to take away the buy and sell provisions in the original legislation. I find that we in this corner of the House will not be able to support that sort of amendment.

This particular aspect of the Bill was discussed quite broadly in committee, but apparently not broadly enough for Hon. Members of the Official Opposition to comprehend what it takes to complete a sale. This seems a little hard to believe, considering that they claim to be members of a free enterprise Party and to have a full and complete understanding of the workings of the market. It is perhaps ironic that a democratic socialist like myself will have to explain to them how one goes about completing a sale, how one goes about making a market function and how one goes about making an agency like Canagrex one which will be of some use to the farmers of Canada.

There are a number of basic routes from production to the final market through which any commodity goes. Farmers know how to do the production. Usually they have no trouble arranging transportation. Usually we can do some of the processing in Canada which is required before the commodity is sold to the consumer who wants the final product, although there are sometimes difficulties involved in the storage and handling of some of the products which are perishable. However, it is the movement, the selling and the completing of the sale, the little details of ensuring and amassing enough product to attract the attention of foreign buyers, which is usually the aspect which farmers do not have the time, money or expertise to complete.

A number of the Provinces recognized that fact and set up agencies very similar to Canagrex in order to complete sales to foreign markets. In fact, seven of the ten provincial Governments in this country have set up agencies and marketing institutions similar to Canagrex. My own Province of Saskatchewan has had such an agency for about ten years. My neighbouring Province, Alberta, had one of the first, complete with all of the powers found in Canagrex, plus a few more.

Mr. Whelan: Shame.

Mr. Althouse: No, it was introduced by a Progressive Conservative Government, with virtually no debate in the provincial House, basically by cabinet fiat. There has never been any screaming or yelling from the Tories in the House, saying that this is a big Government grab.

The agency in Alberta has all of the powers of Canagrex. I would like to just read a couple of sections with regard to the purchase of goods, setting out some of the powers of the Alberta Export Agency, as follows:

When necessary, the Agency would purchase goods from the Producer/Processor for resale and thereby become the "exporter of record".

The section entitled "Take Title" sets out what is involved when the Agency buys and sells as follows:

The Agency would, when deemed advisable, take delivery of, and title to, goods in progress, et cetera and provide storage or inventory facilities until completion, shipment and collection of funds.

It is very clearly taking possession of the goods, and buying and selling.

Mr. Whelan: If a Conservative does it, it's free enterprise. If anything else does it, it's socialism.

Mr. Huntington: How is it sold?

Mr. Althouse: I find that one of the other provincial agencies has a section concerning buying and selling which is probably the epitome of Tory rhetoric. A section in the Prince Edward Island Market Development Centre Act sets out one of its powers as follows:

—to carry on any other business which may seem to the directors of the Corporation capable of being conveniently carried on in conjunction with the attainment of the objects of the Corporation or calculated directly or indirectly to enhance the value or render profitable any of the Corporation's property or rights, and to co-operate in, aid in, subscribe to or subsidize any proceedings or undertaking which may seem to the directors calculated directly or indirectly to benefit the Corporation;—

It continues as follows:

—to acquire or obtain from any Government or authority in Prince Edward Island or elsewhere or from any Corporation or person any charter, contract, decree, rights, privileges and concessions which my be deemed conducive to any of the objects of the Corporations and to accept, make payments under, carry out, exercise and comply with any such charter, contract, decree, rights, privileges and concessions; —to do all such other things as are incidental or conducive to the attainment of the above objects or any of them.

The Conservatives are correct. It does not include buy and sell. It has gone about obtaining those same rights and provisions by writing in a bunch of legal gobbledygook which gives the very same powers. It goes beyond that, in fact. Therefore, I think there are plenty of precedents by Conservative Governments and other Governments in this country, which understand that the power to buy and sell must be in this kind of legislation.

I go on to cite my own experience before I came to this place. One of the things that I did for a while was to help set up a hog marketing commission in Saskatchewan. In one of the preliminaries, I was on short-term contract to the provincial Department of Agriculture and in that role occasionally held meetings with potential buyers of pork from Japan. As marketing specialists at the time, we would sit down and carry on discussions to find out how much product the Japanese wanted, what price they were willing to pay and under what terms and conditions shipment would be made. When it came down to it, we would never complete a contract, for the very simple reason that we could not sign on the dotted line and complete the sale.

A few months later I was part of the Saskatchewan Hog Commission which had the power to complete such sales. Those discussions went very well and we completed the sales without any problem. The point is that we had to be able to complete the sales or else the potential buyers were not interested in talking to us. We heard this in committee in presentations by the Canada-Alberta All Breeds Association.

To be fair, the All Breeds Association said they did not want Canagrex. I suppose they do not really need it since they have all of the same powers operating under provincial legislation. However, they told us the same story. When they first started operating in international markets they completed very few sales because their mandate did not include buying and selling. As soon as they were granted the authority to buy and sell and complete deals, their business soared. Their business was into the millions of dollars almost overnight simply because they had the power to buy and sell, complete a deal and deal directly with the potential buyer.

We revised this Bill in a number of key areas when it first went to committee. We made it very clear in committee that the agency Canagrex cannot go into the production of agricultural products on its own account. The only way it can get products is by agreement with a producer or processor who holds the product. This is the same procedure as any other corporation operating in the free market in Canada. The powers of Canagrex are no greater than any other public corporation operating in this country.

We feel that Canagrex is necessary since there are a number of farm commodity groups scattered across several Provinces which have no ability to combine their products to form a large enough package to attract buyers under any other type of legislation. Since it cannot come under provincial legislation it must be done under federal legislation, and that is why we support Canagrex at this time.

Mr. Stan Schellenberger (Wetaskiwin): Mr. Speaker, I have risen twice in the House to speak to this Bill, once at second reading and once at closure, to point out the dangers of this legislation.

Mr. Whelan: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Every Member on the other side who has risen has mentioned closure. This is not closure; it is time allocation. It is used in the Mother of Parliament all of the time in Britain. They keep using the terminology "closure". After 85 hours of debate in the House and committee, it is not a form of closure.

Canagrex

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, on the same point of order, I rise to point out that it is not a point of order. The Minister is simply being argumentative. On every agricultural bill of any consequence to Canada, or to western Canada in particular, the Minister is tring to curtail debate because he is afraid of the issues. That is why he rises.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. The point raised initially by the Hon. Minister is not a point of order. Members may interpret or give other names to particular items in the rules as they wish, but that is not for the Chair to interfere with at this time.

The Hon. Minister of Agriculture indicates he wishes to rise on another point of order.

Mr. Whelan: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Saskatoon West (Mr. Hnatyshyn) has made the comment that in every instance when there is legislation before the House I try to curtail debate. That is far, far from the truth and he knows it.

Mr. Huntington: What did you do on the Crow?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: After eight hours of debate you put closure on it.

Mr. Whelan: The Mother of Parliament does the same thing.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. The matter raised by the Hon. Minister of Agriculture is debate and not a point of order.

I recognize the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council on another point of order.

Mr. Smith: Mr. Speaker, I simply rise to set the record straight. On page 30 of the new Standing Orders, the Standing Orders themselves identify Standing Order 37 as closure. We are not operating under that rule. The Minister of Agriculture is correct that this is time allocation and not closure, which is clearly identified as Rule 37 in the Standing Orders.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. I presume time is of the essence. The Chair certainly does not intend to interfere with the names that Hon. Members want to give to a particular point in our rules, procedures or precedents. If an Hon. Member wants to call my mother-in-law by any other name, that is the Hon. Member's privilege. I would invite Hon. Members to continue with the debate. However, the Hon. Member for Capilano did rise on a point of order.

Mr. Huntington: Mr. Speaker, with respect to that scurrilous non-point of order raised by the Minister of Agriculture, I would draw to the Chair's attention that four minutes of the time allotted to the Hon. Member for Wetaskiwin (Mr. Schellenberger) has been used and I suggest that that time be added to his ten-minute speech.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The point raised by the Hon. Member for Capilano is well taken, and the Chair will exercise its usual discretion. The Hon. Member for Wetaskiwin.

Mr. Schellenberger: Mr. Speaker, I did not realize the Minister would get so exercised when I rose to speak, but any time a motion is moved in the House that curtails my right to speak on every one of these substantial amendments that were made to the Bill, I call it closure on debate. Time allocation is just a nice way of putting it. It is in fact closure.

As Members on this side have already pointed out, when the Minister becomes disturbed about the various aspects of this Bill he is very quick to rise in an attempt to defend the indefensible. Let us review the last ten months with respect to closure motions. The only two times that the Minister has risen in the House to enter into the debate was to move closure—once on Canagrex and once on the Crow rate. Both those measures have a substantial effect in western Canada where the Government has no Members.

Why is he doing this? He knows very well that he cannot stand the heat of debate on both of those issues in western Canada. Therefore his solution is to close the debate before Members in the House have the right to put forward their debate or before the various commodity and other groups in the western Provinces, including the Premiers and their Cabinets, have a chance to speak on this legislation.

Let us see what the Minister has done since 1972. The Minister has only taken one new initiative in the House of Commons. That is the meat import law. Every other time he has risen in the House it has been to amend good legislation which has been brought forward by other Governments. When he did rise on two new issues in the last ten months, the purpose on both occasions was to move a motion of time allocation.

At a time when there are tens of hundreds of farms in this country going out of business, we are debating in the House two Bills that will not assist them in any way. This Bill in particular will not assist them in any way to become more viable in the country. Powers in this Bill already exist in other legislation which could provide the same type of opportunities for agriculture in this country. They exist in IT&C, the Commercial Trading Corporation and the foreign service.

If this Bill is passed, will the private trading corporations in this country have the same opportunities to carry out the good work that they have been doing in the past on behalf of farmers? Will the marketing boards in this country, whether or not they are supply management, have the same opportunity to provide these types of trading services for farmers that they have in the past? The answer obviously has to be no.

The Minister was pressed in committee to answer why he wishes to have the powers that are contained in Clause 14. Today we are debating Motions 6, 7, 8 and 9 which I put on the Order Paper and which will remove the powers to buy and sell from this corporation. At least 50 organizations mainly from western Canada have disapproved of Clause 14 and have stated so on the record in committee. Many other national corporations have said the same thing. They have asked the Minister why we need the excessive powers in Clause 14. They include such powers as to purchase agricultural products and food products and to package, process, store, ship, insure, import, export or sell or otherwise dispose of products purchased by Canagrex. Its powers include being able to enter into contracts with Canadian companies, co-operatives and marketing boards, but the Minister says only in joint ventures. However, if any farm or co-operative is in financial trouble, it is very easy to put out the hand of Government and get involved in a joint venture.

It has the power to purchase and lease property as it wishes in the operation and management of its business, to pledge, mortgage, hypothecate, sell, lease or otherwise deal with and dispose of personal property and sell and otherwise dispose of real property. These powers go on for three pages in the Bill.

Those are the powers that the majority of Canadian agriculture is saying it does not accept or want. Canadian agriculture says it has no objection to the promotion of agricultural products or to the facilitation of the export of agricultural products, or to the desire of many agricultural product boards in this country to have some export credit. To have some export credit is essential in order to compete in today's world. Many other countries have those powers and are using them. There is no objection to that.

If we were to spend this $12 million and the $75 million in credit which the corporation has to assist private ventures in this country, to assist marketing boards which have been set up and which have the facilities to do this job, to assist our foreign trade service in putting in place agricultural exports people around the world, there would be no objections from any person in this country.

Take a look at what Japan has done. Its trading company does not have these powers yet it is one of the most successful in the world. The Japanese have at least 80,000 persons worldwide trading in their various products. They assist various private corporations around the world. Japan's trading company has no powers to buy and sell. It has no powers to store or otherwise get involved in the private production of products in Japan. The trading company is out there to facilitate exports.

Often in committee the Minister raised the matter of what other countries are doing. I looked into that matter. Only one of those countries, the totally socialist country of Israel under Agrexco, has the powers that are in this Bill.

Other socialist countries such as Denmark do not have these powers. Denmark has trading corporations and they do exactly what I have been talking about except for having those powers. Let us take a look at Germany. It has a very successful agricultural trading board, a non-profit organization. It lobbies for exports and imports. It handles legal issues. It is involved in food and drug regulations.It advertises and promotes imported and exported German products directly to consumers. Nowhere does this German marketing board have the power to buy and sell.

I can go on and mention Mexico, France, Britain—

Mr. Whelan: The Danish Hog Marketing Board?

Mr. Schellenberger: —and Australia. They all have very viable and successful trading corporations, none of which has the power to buy and sell.

I do not believe in the arguments which the Minister has put forward. He said in committee that without the buy and sell provisions this corporation, Canagrex, will be as useless as—he used another term but I will use the term mammary glands on a boar. If he is saying that, then he is saying that all these other very successful trading corporations in the world are failures. Well, they run circles around what we have been able to do. They do not need the powers that are in Bill C-85 to do so. If the Minister would remove that particular section, there would be no objections. The motions which I have put on the Order Paper deal with that. If the Minister removed those sections, there would be no objections from anyone in this country regarding this Bill and we could get on with the excellent work that is necessary to make trade viable.

The real point and the point which many Canadians are getting fed up with is the creation of more Crown corporations, of which this is one. It is just like Petro-Canada. My colleague the Hon. Member for Lethbridge-Foothills (Mr. Thacker) will be raising a very important issue as to what happens when you create Crown corporations, how these Crown corporations spend their time building bureaucracies and subsidiaries until they use the powers granted by legislation in the House. We are coming to the point where we, as Members of Parliament, recognize the dangers of allowing the Governor in Council the right to do certain things, to put powers in Bills beyond their real need to function properly. Crown corporations do not have to worry about making profits. They do not have to worry about going bankrupt. They do not have to worry about initiative and incentive because the taxpayer, through this Government over the past ten or twelve years, has continually funded them. Look at what has happened to Canadair, which is a recent example. That is why it is dangerous. That is why private corporations across Canada which have traded excellently in the agriculture industry are frightened for their security. I do not blame them.

We could do the same things by adding these funds to the Export Development Corporation or to the Commercial Development Corporation, expanding our foreign trade service, giving our various private companies and marketing boards the power to use export credit. With those functions we have no need whatsoever for this Bill called Canagrex.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Well spoken.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Guy Dubois (Lotbinière): Mr. Speaker, on the subject of Bill C-85 and the motions before the House at the present time, I am rather surprised at the comments made by my colleagues opposite, who are saying we do not need the Canagrex Bill, that everything it is meant to do can be done quite easily by the private sector and that this kind of corporation is useless.

Mr. Speaker, I am indeed surprised, especially since I know that representatives of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture have been asking very regularly about Bill C-85, in papers they send to us, in their own publications and in those published in Eastern Canada, particularly in Quebec, such as Terre de Chez-Nous, where they wonder what is happening to Bill C-85.

Mr. Speaker, last fall, in November, to be precise, we met with representatives of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, and I know that the Federation was also supposed to meet Members of the Official Opposition, and, I imagine, Members of the New Democratic Party as well. The Federation, which is a national body, was anxious to see the Canagrex Bill passed and implemented to help promote and export our agricultural and food products. I am surprised to hear Members of the Official Opposition tell us that this is unnecessary. I am also surprised to hear that this might trigger a war between the West and the East. I am also surprised to see, considering the amendments that have been moved, that their official agricultural critic is not even in the House. I am also very surprised that now we have examined this Bill in committee, in terms of the various amendments, after motions had been moved to delay the proceedings, and so forth, that now they are telling us, after so many hours of debate, that there has not been sufficient debate on this issue. Mr. Speaker, I am astonished at this attitude, and I think that, in view of the Government's intention to see to it that this Corporation, which would have the power to facilitate and promote exports of agricultural products, meets with the approval of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, Canada has a duty to establish an export mechanism if it is to remain competitive with other countries that are taking concrete measures to extend their export markets for agricultural products. That is the kind of mechanism that is being urgently requested by our country's agricultural organizations.

Our competitors have already taken steps to increase their exports of agri-food products, and I am thinking of our neighbours to the South, the United States. The Americans have a number of organizations, including the Foreign Agriculture Service, the Co-operative Program, the Commodity Credit Corporation with its various credit programs such as Public Law 480, to improve their agri-food exports, which have already earned the U.S. over $36 billion. As far as our agriculture is concerned, we are in a position to take a different approach, while helping to promote our products abroad, and with Canagrex, we shall be serving the interests of all Canadians and especially Canadian farmers.

This example shows what priority is given by countries such as the United States to the agri-food export trade. Motion No. 1 aims at removing the word "engage in". It seems to me that its move simply wants to dilute the provisions of the Bill. That is also the purpose of the other amendments being considered today, even though this Bill would effectively allow us to do as other countries have done by giving proper priority to our agricultural and food product export trade. Other countries have in fact already done this, including France, Denmark, Great Britain, Germany, Israel and Mexico, by setting up the required mechanisms to maximize the development of their export markets.

The powers conferred to farm product sales promotion agencies in the United States allow them to take a judicious and flexible approach aimed at increasing their export markets. Why should Canada, which is so close to the United States, not be able to take advantage of this situation and use the same type of system to export our agri-food products? Thanks to the agricultural policies applied by the Canadian government for the past several years, this sector of the economy has been very stable in spite of the present recession and must be further supported in order to develop. Why is this? Thanks to the various governments, to the people involved and to farm organizations, we have been able to stimulate production, increase our purchasing power and develop our export capacity. In my opinion, this is extremely important for Canadian agriculture, and indeed, the Canadian Federation of Agriculture has recognized this fact and has asked that this Bill be promoted and passed.

Thus, the powers granted to farm product sales promotion agencies in other countries such as the United States provide for a judicious and flexible approach aimed at conquering export markets. It is also very interesting to note that the industry is trying to secure more powers.

In addition, many circles are in favour of a better coordination of activities and much pressure is brought to bear in order to have the Export Trading Act passed, which would provide for the creation of export trading companies similar to the Japanese giants which look after every aspect of the export trade. This is what we must do, Mr. Speaker, we must act.

In other words, Canada will have to face an increasingly stronger competition on the international markets and we must act now if we do not want to be left behind. Some people suggest that Canagrex will be different from agri-food export development programs now existing in other countries. Nothing can be further from the truth, Mr. Speaker. Our competitors do not compete with other sectors in their own country, but rather with other countries. They have set up agencies which promote sales to foreign buyers in order to maximize the sales of their products.

This is exactly what Canagrex will do, i.e. it will act as a facilitating agent and promote, through its members as described in Bill C-85, the quick sale of Canadian agricultural and food products on the export markets. Therefore, when we look at the title, from which Motion No. 1 seeks to strike out the words "engage in", I feel this would be unfairly diluting the terms of reference of Canagrex.

In order to illustrate the current situation of Canadian agri-food exports in some sectors, it is interesting to look at the comments made by Mr. William Jenkins, a former Dean of the Nova Scotia College of Agriculture, in an interview last year, and I quote:

> In the Atlantic Provinces, the export of agricultural products is nothing short of a war. It is every man for himself, a very crude way to sell anything ... It practically amounts to chaos.

Canadian agriculture cannot afford such a situation. Some degree of co-ordination is needed, and, in my view, Bill C-85, with the establishment of Canagrex would help bring us back to a most sensible situation. When we look at what other countries are doing to prevent such a war, we cannot but realize the importance of making Canada competitive on the export markets.

We must therefore get our act together and pass this Bill without delay, and this is why we have asked for a time allocation for the consideration of the Bill. Hon. Members opposite refer to closure. Mr. Speaker, concerning the current situation, when a Bill has gone through all the stages, first and second reading and study in Committee, when we read all the amendments or motions to emphasize that this or that individual has not been in attendance, people who had not even wanted to appear, the Official Opposition having requested it stating they wanted to hear such and such a group that had not even been summoned to appear before the Committee, they simply wanted to delay consideration of the Bill, it is my view that today, when we speak of time allocation, if my colleague will speak of closure, he is quite free to do it if he so wishes, but my view is that we have taken up enough time, and since the Canadian Federation of Agriculture is anxious to have the Bill, we must respect the wishes of our farmers and we will do so, Mr. Speaker, by passing the Bill, especially since, as I said, farm organizations across Canada are asking for it.

[English]

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey-White Rock-North Delta): Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak on Bill C-85, to establish a corporation called Canagrex. In my ten minutes I would like to focus on Motions Nos. 6, 7, 8 and 9 in the name of the Hon. Member for Wetaskiwin (Mr. Schellenberger), who was the last speaker from this side of the House. He spoke in a very informed and eloquent manner regarding the offending principle in the Bill. The Hon. Member for Wetaskiwin, representing a farming community, understands very well the impact of Subclause 14(1)(a) on the farming community. It indicates that Cangrex would be empowered to:

Canagrex

> —purchase agricultural products and food products and package, process, store, ship, insure, import, export or sell or otherwise dispose of products purchased by it;—

That is the offending principle because it empowers Cangrex to buy and sell.

It is clear to a growing number of Canadians that the Government has embarked upon a strategy to control major sectors of the economy. If I were to put it in more ideological terms, it would be to establish state control over the major means of production. That is at the heart of it. It has been moving into sector after sector to establish Government control.

Let me illustrate. It seems that the Government is using a strategy to create a sense of dependency upon the Government in each sector of the economy, largely through the use of a state of continual economic anxiety. I would like to illustrate that further by the use of another metaphor. Hon. Members will recall that during and after the Korean War there was a new phenomenon known as brainwashing. I am not talking about brainwashing here but about the technique the Koreans used which was new to the western mind.

Mr. Whelan: What does that have to do with the Bill?

Mr. Friesen: If the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) will listen, I will explain it to him.

Mr. Mayer: Show him in pictures.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: There is something wrong with the sound.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. Hon. Members are obviously annoyed by the extraneous noise. I presume someone is drilling through the roof or the walls; however, we are having the matter checked. For now I invite the Hon. Member to continue his remarks.

Mr. Friesen: I was indicating that that new phenomenon used a technique of continued long periods of anxiety to create an attitude of instability and insecurity, by which they were then able to do anything they wanted with those prisoners. I suggest to the Minister and to Hon. Members of the House that that kind of technique has been used in successive industrial sectors of the economy, whereby the Government maintained an atmosphere of insecurity and by that atmosphere of insecurity then manipulated an industry or a sector to do anything the Government wanted it to do.

Let me illustrate. In the industrial sector, notice the grant system which has become so very popular and the dependency that has been created on the federal Government through the grant system. The textile industry, which years ago should have been rationalized into a major industrial shift, considering all of the industrial strategies of Canada and around the world, should have been taken into consideration. Rather than that, the Government through the grand system keeps the textile industry in a state of anxiety. The same is true of the shoe industry and the forest industry. As soon as you invoke a system of grants to any sector of the economy, you create a dependency on the Government and an atmosphere of insecurity which makes that sector vulnerable.

Second, we have the energy field, the second sector of the economy which the Government by design is taking into an area of state control through a system of overtaxation, grants and other mediums. The direct control of exploration and development of resources is not now a matter of the magic of the marketplace but a matter of the National Energy Program and PetroCan. Members will recall that originally Petro-Canada was set up to be only a window on the industry. Some window! It is now a major determinant of the energy direction of Canada as far as the Government is concerned. What we find so offensive is that PetroCan is not a window on the industry, but is in a privileged position in the industry. The Government directs its energy policy through that Government corporation. It is not simply that there are a few PetroCan stations across Canada, but that it now has a privileged position in the industry. Through the back-in provisions, all of the other companies are held in servitude to that one Government corporation.

This brings me to Canagrex. We have the same principle being invoked in this Government corporation. Whereas it was the grant system in the obsolescent industries in Canada and the grant and back-in provisions in the energy field, we now have the buy and sell provisions. They will give the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) through Order in Council or any provision control of the food industry in Canada.

Mr. Whelan: That is nonsense and you know it.

Mr. Friesen: The Minister had the chance to introduce the Bill. He mumbled throughout the speech of the Hon. Member for Wetaskiwin (Mr. Schellenberger). He is now intervening when I am speaking. He will have a chance to wrap up the comments on this Bill. Let him wait until then.

Bill C-85 is not an innocent or innocuous support for an ailing industry.

Mr. Whelan: Just nonsense.

Mr. Friesen: I know it is too much to ask the Minister of Agriculture to keep his mouth shut.

Mr. Whelan: Tell your colleagues to be quiet.

Mr. Huntington: Now you have the Speaker up.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Yes. It is the Speaker's duty to protect the right of the Member who has the floor. I invite Hon. Members to co-operate with the Chair.

Mr. Whelan: Tell them to be quiet too.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: If the shoe fits, it is a size 15.

Mr. Friesen: As I was saying before I was interrupted by the Minister of Agriculture, Bill C-85, Canagrex, is not an innocent or innocuous support system for an ailing industry. It is the beginning of a major intervention in the most vulnerable industry in our country. Members have enough agricultural roots to know that the farmer has enough to do to cope with the vicissitudes of nature. Witness what is happening in southern Ontario this year where the farmers cannot get into the fields to plant their crops.

Mr. Whelan: I suppose that is my fault.

Mr. Friesen: That is a major problem which the farmers face. Now they are being asked to cope with the vicissitudes and whims of a bureaucracy. It is the magic of the marketplace which makes any industry function. We used to think about the threat of the dictatorship of the proletariat and about all those other ideological terms. I am convinced that the dictatorship of the proletariat is no longer the major threat. We are now facing the dictatorship of the bureaucracy.

Mr. Whelan: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. We should remind ourselves what the Bill is about. They talk about what my Bill is doing and what the Minister is doing. I have some rights as a Member of Parliament. The Member should say who started Crown corporations. It was the Conservative Government that set up the CNR, the CBC, other huge corporations such as the Canadian Wheat Board. Is he saying that is bad? The Wheat Board was started in 1935 by a Tory Government.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order.

Mr. Friesen: If the enlightened comments of the Minister of Agriculture were worth responding to, I would take the time, but they seldom are. This reminds me of the former Right Hon. Member for Prince Albert who used to say he read all of the Minister's speeches, sometimes for information but mostly for amusement. That is generally the category in which his remarks fall.

Mr. Whelan: We know what your Party did to him.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order.

Mr. Friesen: We are facing the intrusion of bureaucratic control into a very vulnerable industry. As my friend for Wetaskiwin pointed out, even those countries which have elected bona fide socialist Governments—we have a socialist Government which does not call itself by that name—have not included in their corporations relating to agriculture these buy and sell provisions. What we face is the opportunity for Government corporations to move into the food sections of every urban area. They will build stores. This is why the Consumers' Association is opposed to it. They will build retail outlets to package and sell and they will be major competitors in the food industry.

That is why we are so opposed to this legislation. It is because the Government is disturbing the marketplace. It is not allowing farmers to be what they are, the most productive people in the country. That is why we will oppose this legislation right to the very end.

Mr. Roy: May I call it one o'clock, Mr. Speaker?

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Is the House disposed to call it one o'clock?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The Hon. Member for Laval (Mr. Roy) has the floor.

Mr. Marcel Roy (Laval): Mr. Speaker, I consider it somewhat a privilege to be able to rise in the House today to deal with a legislation which will very significantly affect the future of Canadian farmers. Moreover, before coming to this place, I had been involved for 12 years in agriculture at both the private enterprise and co-operative levels. Thanks to my expertise, I feel I am in a position to understand both points of view, namely that of private enterprise as well as the view of the co-operative enterprise. I have been a member of Parliament for the past 15 years, and the remarks I have heard today remind me of the times—I think you were sitting on the Standing Committee on Agriculture then, Mr. Speaker—when we had to deal with the legislation establishing farm product marketing agencies. We hear again today the same whining we heard then while trying to set up farm product marketing agencies and to make sure farmers had stable incomes more in line with their production costs. The Tories' moaning is exactly the same as before, as you can ascertain from reading the official record of the times. Even after 13 years, they are raising the same issues.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. It being one o'clock, I do now leave the Chair until 2 p.m.

At 1 p.m. the House took recess.

MUNICIPAL GRANTS ACT, 1980

OPPORTUNITY TO REASSESS EXCEPTIONS AND TO AMEND LEGISLATION

Mr. Gaston Gourde (Lévis): Madam Speaker, I should like to draw the attention of the House on a Bill passed in the early days of the session. I refer to Bill C-4 respecting grants to municipalities in lieu of taxes. Since 1980, the Government of Canada has been discharging its obligations as a taxpayer like all other citizens in Quebec. However, there are some exceptions to that legislation which, in my opinion, should be changed. Indeed, not subjected to that legislation and thus excluded from the accounts for the grant purposes are some fixed assets such as jetties, breakwaters and drydocks. Recently, the City of Lauzon has advised me that the exclusion of drydocks alone was reducing the cash taxable value by $20 million and that the Government of Canada was establishing its grants on a basis of $2 million instead of $22 million. We think, Madam Speaker, that this real property should not be excluded and that the legislation should be amended accordingly. I tabled a Notice of Motion asking the Government to consider the opportunity of amending the legislation in order to satisfy several municipalities. We should also take that opportunity to reassess all the exclusions to the legislation and consult the organizations involved such as the Union des municipalités.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

SUPPORT URGED FOR FRIENDSHIP AND CO-OPERATION WITH UNITED STATES

Mr. Girve Fretz (Erie): Madam Speaker, it is high time that the people in Government recognize that if you live in a glass house you should not throw stones.

To the south of us exists a powerful and democratic society known as the United States of America. This country is undisputedly one of the greatest countries in the world. Yet more abuse is heaped upon the leaders of this country than is their due. There exist groups and individuals in Canada who condemn all aspects of United States' foreign policy and its stand on defence requirements, without offering reasonable alternatives.

Any positive action taken by the American leaders to ensure security of the North American continent is greeted by such groups as being somehow evil and subversive. These groups fail to realize that the Soviet Union is a very real and threatening power which does not share their humanitarian concerns.

All this would be more tolerable if we did not have a Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) who denounced the President of the United States as being warlike. He seems to enjoy alienating the President of the United States. How can we expect the co-operation and aid of that great country when we are in need of protection in time of war?

I suggest that we renew our pledge to friendship and co-operation with our friend and greatest ally, the United States of America, a country which has no fences to keep its people in, a country which has accepted millions of people from over crowded and under privileged countries. God bless America.

NUCLEAR ENERGY

CALL FOR INQUIRY INTO USE OF NUCLEAR FUEL

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Madam Speaker, at this time I would like to call upon the Government to set up a full public national inquiry into the nuclear fuel cycle in Canada, including the mining of uranium, the storage of radioactive wastes, the transportation of those wastes, safeguard treaties, and both the export and domestic uses of nuclear materials and technologies and the relationship between them and the proliferation of nuclear weapons.

There are many good reasons, Madam Speaker, to hold such an inquiry. Unresolved questions abound around the nuclear power issue, and Canadians have never really had the opportunity to be heard on the decision made by technocrats in back rooms to forge ahead with a nuclear future for Canada in spite of growing economic and environmental concerns about the viability of nuclear power as an energy option.

Instead of bending over backward to save a vain and unacceptable energy choice which poses ethical questions that will never be addressed properly within the confines of AECL's internal reviews, the Government should look to the involvement of the people of Canada for instruction on how best to pursue energy for Canada. It should heed the call of the United Church and of many other groups for a public enquiry, something I asked for myself on April 10, 1981, when speaking to a Private Members' Bill in my name that called for just such a process.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

ROLES OF TRI-LATERAL COMMISSION AND BILDERBURG ORGANIZATION

Mr. Stanley Hudecki (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): Madam Speaker, two international organizations on which the Canadian Government is unofficially represented and in which the Parliament Centre for Foreign Affairs and Foreign Trade appears to play a role, are a source of concern. One is the Trilateral Commission and the other is the Bilderburg Organization. The latter held a meeting recently at Montebello in the Province of Quebec. Both organizations carry on with a secret agenda. Both have ties with the United States and overseas countries. In both organizations, members with contacts in international financial circles are present.

Where there are secrecy and foreign involvement, dealing with finances, suspicion and distrust exist. What is the ultimate goal of such organizations? Are they concerned with international trade, with the exchange of scientific data? Are they concerned with foreign aid, or are they social gatherings? I feel that those Canadians who are involved in these all-made power broker organizations should be asked to report to the Committee on External Affairs, or a statement should be made by External Affairs on the role of such organizations where Canada is involved.

There is a body of Canadians who fear that such organizations are designed to gain control eventually, at an international level, of the banking systems, which in turn would give them political power exerted through monetary control. The anxieties, concerns, and suspicions created by such surreptitious organizations can, to a degree, be laid to rest by official statements indicating their aims and their goals.

AVIATION INDUSTRY

ASSEMBLY OF WATER BOMBER PARTS SOUGHT FOR WINNIPEG WORKERS

Mr. Dan McKenzie (Winnipeg-Assiniboine): Madam Speaker, the government has announced that it will be building 20 new CL-215 water bombers. CAE in Winnipeg has the assembly jibs and tooling to continue building wing flaps and rudders for water bombers, as it has already been doing during the time from 1980 to 1982. There is now talk of this equipment being moved from Winnipeg to Montreal.

The Winnipeg aerospace industry was promised 10 per cent of the new fighter aircraft contract. This has never materialized. There are 120 aerospace machinists being laid off in Winnipeg by Air Canada. CAE is being forced to close down becauce of lack of contracts. Every effort must now be made to keep hundreds of aerospace workers employed in Winnipeg. This can be done if the Government would leave the equipment that is ready to build the parts for the water bombers in Winnipeg, and not move it to Montreal. Aerospace workers can be employed in Winnipeg if the Government will award contracts to that city in which workers are already knowledgeable and are prepared to assemble the water bombers.

INDUSTRY

FOOD SERVICE INDUSTRY—NECESSITY TO UPGRADE TRAINING FACILITIES

Mr. Gus Mitges (Grey-Simcoe): Madam Speaker, the food service industry in Canada has 600,000 people on its payroll, 5.7 per cent of the national labour force. Last year the industry made $15 billion in sales which comprised 4.5 per cent of the Gross National Product.

The food service industry also generated some $1 billion in foreign exchange last year from visiting tourists. For every $1 million in sales, $300,000 is generated into wages, and $55,000 goes to the Government in payroll taxes.

Madam Speaker, as you are well aware, serving people is an art, and preparing food is a skill. Our colleges graduate good cooks but not world class chefs. There is a lack of schools with standards necessary to educate skilled technicians. This shortage is creating a bottleneck in the expansion of the food service industry. This is one area where Government can easily stimulate the economy by fulfilling its responsibility to educate Canadians for gainful employment, by upgrading training facilities and thus overcome skill shortages in the food service industry. This should receive the same priority as skill shortages in the manufacturing and resort industries.

Chefs and other food service trades should be designated as national occupations under the National Training Act. It is my hope that the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mr. Axworthy) will give serious consideration to this and that it will become a reality as soon as possible.

POLITICAL PARTIES

PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVE PARTY LEADERSHIP CAMPAIGN

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Madam Speaker, I have the duty and responsibility to call to the attention of the House and the country a very serious issue which has arisen in Ottawa this week. It is commonly known in various quarters as the "Week of the Long Knives".

I would like to point out to the House that, some years ago, when the organization to my right went through this exercise, its Leader, who was leaving at that time, happened to make a speech in which he said that the Conservative Party and the Liberal Party were the same, and that anyone within his organization who said that they were not the same did a great disservice to the Party. The problem, as was related by the then Leader, was that the Liberals and Conservatives were basically the same and only the New Democratic Party would change things.

The second individual who has come forward in this "Week of the Long Knives" is a Member of the House and a candidate for Leader who is running on the platform that they will create a policy for the country. In May, 1981, when this individual was asked what his Party would do to change the mess which the Liberals had put in place, he indicated that if they told the Canadian public what would happen, certainly they would never be elected. Hopefully that would be true today, Madam Speaker.

• (1410)

Finally, I believe, to most observers, right back to the beginning of parliamentary tradition in Canada, the first sign of the alignment of the Conservative Party and Liberal Party was under the banner of an organization called the Liberal-Conservative Party—

Madam Speaker: Order, please.

CUSTOMS AND EXCISE

CLEARANCE FOR TROPHIES WON ABROAD

Mr. Joe Reid (St. Catharines): Madam Speaker, it was not many months ago that the Minister of National Revenue (Mr. Bussières) was taking the joy out of winning an international hockey tournament by declaring a team-won trophy to be owned by one or two of the players and fixed with a value for customs purposes. Medals, trophies, and exchange gifts were dutiable, so Revenue bureaucracy declared. Well, the scrooge strikes again.

Producing and winning an Oscar for his film, "Just Another Missing Kid", was only slightly harder for the St. Catharines-Toronto producer, John Zaritsky, than getting his award home. It took 30 minutes and three separate customs officials to clear the trophy finally before the by then thoroughly annoyed and frustrated producer could get his award through customs.

Trophies or awards such as these are symbolic representations of victory in the field of sport or of achievement in areas of special endeavour. To hassle a team or a winner of such an award, and to delay many other international passengers while so doing, brings discredit to the Department, smacks of bureaucratic red tape and bungling, and calls for an early clarification by the Minister.

ETHNIC AFFAIRS

MEMORIAL SERVICE SPONSORED BY BALTIC AND UKRAINIAN GROUPS

Mr. G. M. Gurbin (Bruce-Grey): Madam Speaker, this coming Wednesday, June 8, there will be an ecumenical memorial service sponsored by the Ukrainian, Lithuanian, Latvian, and Estonian communities of Ottawa. This inter-denominational service is held in June of each year in memory of the victims of the religious and national oppression of the Baltic and Ukrainian nations.

This year marks the 50th anniversary of the artificially created famine in the Ukraine when that nation became victim to a conscious and deliberate attempt by the Soviets to extinguish Ukrainian peasants and workers. Their resistance to the Soviet imposition of a collective, state-run agricultural system was viewed as a bid for independence from Moscow. To suppress what they thought was a politically motivated attitude, the Russian communists caused a genocidal famine to occur by restricting the availability of food in the Ukraine. In addition, the country suffered further population losses from mass deportations and the decimation of its intellectual elite.

In addition, the month of June, 1940, is recalled by Baltic peoples throughout the world as the most devastating time of their countries' history. Between the 15th and 17th of June, 1940, Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, all neutral and prospering countries, were occupied by the Soviets. These three countries are, even today, still under the oppressive influence of the Soviets.

The service this Wednesday at Notre Dame Basilica, commemorating the sufferings of the Baltic and Ukraine nations, will serve to remind us of one of the most threatening aspects of communism, and of the fundamental rights our often taken for granted freedom gives us.

CROWN CORPORATIONS

CANADAIR—ANNOUNCEMENT OF LOSSES

Miss Pat Carney (Vancouver Centre): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Today Canadian taxpayers learned that government owned Canadair lost $1.4 billion in 1982, mainly through the Challenger executive jet program, one of the greatest corporate nosedives in our history. The Government also admitted that $1 billion will never be recovered. It is just money down the drain.

Since the Auditor General has warned that spending by Canadair was beyond the control of Parliament, and since the Liberal Government bought Canadair seven years ago, why did the Government blow away $1 billion worth of taxpayers' money before taking steps to correct this situation?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member might be reminded of the rule that a matter which is being discussed in committee is not the subject matter of debate or questions in Parliament. The Minister responsible for the whole matter is in front of a committee of this House this very day. The Hon. Member knows, or she should know if she is interested in the question for real, that the matter is being discussed there, and under the rules she should attend that committee and find out what is going on.

Mr. Beatty: It is up to the Speaker to decide; not you.

MANAGEMENT OF CORPORATION

Miss Pat Carney (Vancouver Centre): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Prime Minister because it is well known that issues of this importance can be brought before the House of Commons.

The Minister responsible for Canadair is blaming Canadair's management for the company's problems, claiming executives gave its shareholders—who are the Canadian taxpayers—misleading information about sales, delivery, and future prospects. For instance, the company was erstimating the sale of 48 Challengers this year. In fact only one has been sold. If corporate mismanagement is the villain, why did the Government appoint some of Canadair's management to the board of the new super Crown agency, the Canadian Development Investment Corporation, Canadair's new owner? If the management was so poor, why did the Government not clean house?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member is clearly in breach of the rules. She is making a speech now, probably for the benefit of television, when she should be in committee asking these questions of the Minister responsible.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Madam Speaker: Order. I feel that I can allow the question. The Right Hon. Prime Minister is not obligated to answer the question. However, I feel I can allow the question because the Hon.Member for Vancouver Centre is not referring to discussions which took place in committee. The Hon. Member is discussing a subject which can be allowed in Question Period.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Miss Carney: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

FUNDING OF CORPORATION—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Miss Pat Carney (Vancouver Centre): I would like to direct my final supplementary question to the Minister of Finance. The Auditor General has reported in the past that the Government has risked $1.35 billion of taxpayers' money on Canadair by issuing letters of comfort which are beyond the scrutiny or control of Parliament. It is clear that the $240 million in new funding now before Parliament would not even pay the interest on the company's debt this year, let alone the payroll costs, or even its bills.

Was the Government informed last October that taxpayers may have to spend another $500 million to $1 billion to bail out Canadair? Does the Government have any plans to commit more funds to Canadair this year to support the Challenger program? And, if not, how will the company survive?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, there are estimates before the parliamentary committee for, I believe, $240 million, which is exactly an injection of equity into Canadair. The Minister responsible for Canadair, as the Prime Minister has indicated, is appearing before both the Public Accounts Committee and the Finance Committee, and he will be very happy, I am sure, to provide all the information to the Hon. Member.

Mr. Nielsen: More cover up.

PAYMENT OF LIABILITIES

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the President of the Treasury Board. The President of the Treasury Board will know that his colleague, Senator Austin, has disclosed to the press and to others that there is no way that Canadair can ever pay back to its creditors the $1 billion or so which it owes, that that matter will have to be written off. I was wondering if the President of the Treasury Board will advise this House if he will be issuing supplementary estimates allowing the Government of Canada to take over, as a direct debt of Canada, the liabilities of Canadair because, as those liabilities will never be paid by Canadair, they have to be borne by the people of Canada? We have guaranteed the debt. Therefore, will he be issuing a supplementary estimate to allow that to be handled directly so that statements for Canada will be properly representative?

Hon. Herb Gray (President of the Treasury Board): Madam Speaker, the matter which my hon. friend is raising is one which will involve a decision of Cabinet, to be taken on the advice of the Minister of Finance. When a decision in this area is taken, I will be happy to report to the Hon. Member.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): The President of the Treasury Board will know that in November, 1981, there was a special investigative statement brought to Cabinet indicating the financial position of Canadair at that time. The President of the Treasury Board will also know that there was a further inquiry and study presented to the Cabinet in October, 1982. That statement was used to ask for the $200 million which was supplied last year. Will the President of the Treasury Board, now that the Government has decided to come clean to some extent with Canadair, deliver an exposé to this House and make available to this House those investigative documents in connection with Canadair so that we can know how we, as a people, lost all that money?

• (1420)

Hon. Herb Gray (President of the Treasury Board): Madam Speaker, I will have to consult my colleagues on whether or not documents of this sort prepared for Cabinet can properly be released. But I am aware that the Minister responsible for the Canada Development Investment Corporation has today tabled a very extensive report on the operations of Canadair, both now and in the past, and with regard to its future prospects, before the Public Accounts Committee and the Finance Committee. I would think that report, plus the answers by the Minister and his advisers in Committee, will cover the kind of ground in which my hon. friend is interested.

CANADIAN SECURITY INTELLIGENCE SERVICE

REQUEST THAT SUBJECT MATTER OF BILL BE REFERRED TO COMMITTEE

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, I have a question for the Solicitor General concerning the new Security Services Bill which has been criticized by lawyers and civil liberties groups all across the country, and which the Minister himself has acknowledged is flawed.

Considering that the Minister said yesterday he might be prepared to have the subject matter referred to a special committee of the House for study and report, has he thought more about this in the past 24 hours, and is he now prepared to say that is a course of action the Government is prepared to pursue?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General of Canada): Madam Speaker, the suggestion that the Bill is flawed is one which I reject. I am certainly willing to consider amendments to the Bill, but I am also willing, and I think I am in a position, to defend all of the provisions of the Bill, so it is not a matter of my agreeing that the Bill is flawed. It is debatable, and the purpose of Parliament is to debate Bills. I have acknowledged that I am certainly prepared to see it debated and to accept constructive amendments.

On the question of the reference of the Bill to a committee, I have spoken to my House leader. As the Hon. Member knows, it is a matter for House leaders to decide. I have expressed considerable enthusiasm for that, provided that a number of conditions can be met concerning the amount of time it would take, and when it would begin and end. I think the proper way for that matter to be handled is for House leaders to raise it, having the Hon. Member's support for the idea, my support, and the support of Members who spoke yesterday on behalf of the Conservatives.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Madam Speaker, let me begin by saying that I agree entirely with this kind of procedure. Perhaps what we have agreed on in principle on the floor of the House should be worked out by the House leaders. But I would like to clarify exactly what the Minister has in mind when he talks about a reference to committee. Does he mean that the committee, as was suggested here in the House yesterday, would simply look at the subject matter, an idea that we in this Party are prepared to support entirely, or is he saying that one of his preconditions is that the House has to agree to second reading of the Bill which is before it now?

Mr. Nielsen: No, of course not.

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General of Canada): I am certainly glad to provide that clarification. I would like second reading of the Bill, but I am not insisting on it.

Mr. Lewis: Just as well.

Mr. Kaplan: I am certainly prepared to see the Bill referred as a subject to be discussed in the way it has been done in connection with other Bills before second reading.

Mr. Broadbent: Madam Speaker, this is one of those rare occasions in the House where civility might prevail. I can simply say to the Minister that we are prepared to consider that very seriously.

THE ADMINISTRATION

TAXATION OF TRAVEL BENEFITS PROVIDED BY MINISTERS

Hon. Elmer M. MacKay (Central Nova): Madam Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of National Revenue pertaining to what benefits are imputed or otherwise accrue when Cabinet Ministers take friends, or relatives not directly related as are wives and children, on Jet Stars. The Minister knows that in the private sector an executive officer of a corporation, or somebody has to pay tax on this sort of thing unless he can prove the trip is necessary for business. Has the Minister considered what the situation is with regard to the case I am now asking him about?

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, the Department of National Revenue has issued a very clear Interpretation Bulletin on benefits which might be taxable and which are in addition to the income of a taxpayer. According to the Interpretation Bulletin, the first explicit condition for such a benefit to be taxable is that it must be directly related to a job. If in the exercise of job related duties an individual is given a benefit, it becomes taxable, and the Department of National Revenue has issued guidelines on that subject.

[English]

TAXATION OF IMPUTED BENEFITS ACCRUING TO MINISTER'S FRIENDS

Hon. Elmer M. MacKay (Central Nova): Let me be more specific, Madam Speaker. The Minister of International Trade, now known by some of his friends as "Wing Commander NC", which means "now caught", is quoted in today's Globe and Mail as saying that he would take friends along for free flights unless there is a specific rule against doing so. Assuming there is no specific rule against doing so, will the friends have any imputed taxable benefits, or will the Minister, because in the private sector people even who have the use of cars are taxed on that use, as the Minister knows. This should be straightened out.

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, I should think that the Hon. Member would be the first one to take the Minister of National Revenue to task for giving any indication, ruling or interpretation whatsoever with respect to the Income Taxt Act when a question has to do with a private individual.

USE OF EXECUTIVE AIRCRAFT BY MINISTERS

Mr. Howard Crosby (Halifax West): Madam Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Transport concerning the use of the Department's executive aircraft by Ministers and others. I want to ask him what the policy is with respect to persons who may be carried on those aircraft and, in particular, whether the possibility of taking members of one's family extends to in-laws. I also want to know who is responsible for preparing the manifests for the flights and who is responsible for providing the information with respect to passengers, particularly the status of those passengers, be they family, staff, or whatever?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I have already stated what the guidelines were on the subject. But there has recently been a de facto change in view of the future access to information legislation. The manifest, which includes the names of the passengers, will from now on be accessible to whomever Members of Parliament for example would like to have this information.

STATUS OF PASSENGERS ON FLIGHT TO ANTIGUA

Mr. Howard Crosby (Halifax West): Madam Speaker, I want to point out to the Minister of Transport that the manifest for the infamous flight taken by the former Minister of State to Antigua indicates a Mr. and Mrs. Golightly, who have been identified as the Minister's mother-in-law and her husband.

Mr. Nielsen: Gerry "go lightly" is right.

Mr. Crosby: Unfortunately the manifest indicates they are employees of the Secretary of State. Could the Minister clarify that, and tell us whether his Cabinet colleague was carrying employees connected with the Department of the Secretary of State, or simply taking his in-laws on a holiday?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, the information I have is that the Minister of State for International Trade was on his way to represent the Government in Antigua, he was representing the Government of Canada at an official ceremony. That is my information. The plane had to make a refueling stop, and the place where the plane stopped was a normal stopping place on the way to where the Minister of International Trade was going.

Mr. Lewis: And they were standing there.

YOUTH

PROPOSED APPOINTMENT OF TASK FORCE

Mr. Albert Cooper (Peace River): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Secretary of State. He is on record as supporting and encouraging, in fact promoting, a task force on youth issues. When can we expect announcement of that task force?

[Translation]

Hon. Serge Joyal (Secretary of State): Madam Speaker, I want to thank the Hon. Member for his question. It is indeed one of the options we are now considering. When I appeared before the Committee on Communications and Culture during the study of the estimates of the Secretary of State, I announced that I will get in touch with all youth organizations this summer with a view to presenting them with a series of proposals on a consultation mechanism through which they could air their views on a youth policy reflecting the interests of young people and of all Canadians concerning those priorities.

[English]

UNEMPLOYMENT AMONG YOUNG PEOPLE

Mr. Albert Cooper (Peace River): Madam Speaker, the Minister is well aware that the serious unemployment situation among young people in Canada is at crisis proportions right now. All indications are that it is going to continue for a long period of time, and that puts a very serious sense of urgency on the problem. Will the Minister not proceed quickly, and then make available to all Members of this House the opportunity to discuss this issue with young people right across the country, rather than delaying for a period of time?

• (1430)

[Translation]

Hon. Serge Joyal (Secretary of State): Madam Speaker, the concern of the Hon. Member has already been the object of a decision by our colleague the Minister of Employment and Immigration who has suggested that a national conference on young people and employment be held this summer in August. As a result of that conference we will be in a position to take decisions reflecting the initiatives which the Government of Canada intends to take to meet the needs of young people in Canada.

NUCLEAR ARMAMENTS

SOVIET OFFER TO ESTABLISH BALTIC NUCLEAR WEAPON-FREE ZONE

Hon. Allan B. McKinnon (Victoria): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Secretary Andropov has made an offer to discuss making the Baltic a nuclear weapon-free zone if Finland, Sweden, Norway and Denmark declare their countries to be nuclear weapon-free zones.

In his role of elder statesman, could the Prime Minister inform the House what advice he might give to our NATO allies and President Palme with regard to this rather unbalanced offer?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, they have not asked for my advice, but if the Hon. Member really recognizes in me an elder statesman, I would be happy to discuss the matter with him.

Mr. McKinnon: The Prime Minister has given out a lot of advice in the last month or so without being asked for it, I believe.

SOVIET LEADER'S STATEMENT ON DEPLOYMENT OF NUCLEAR WEAPONS

Hon. Allan B. McKinnon (Victoria): I wonder if the Prime Minister would think about Mr. Andropov's recent threatening statement that, if the deployment of the Pershing IIs and Cruise missiles went on, he would retaliate by deploying nuclear weapons in the buffer states. I do not know whether Mr. Andropov expected NATO to believe that his short-range ballistic missiles were deployed far out of range of their targets or not, but could the Prime Minister tell the House what his advice to other NATO leaders is on that statement by Andropov? Should it be ignored, or should it be accepted as a basis for negotiations?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, it seems to me that we have an example here of the Tory Party desperately struggling for information on a policy. Its Members should be discussing this matter. They have a leadership convention going on. They should know what their position is on this matter.

Mr. Nielsen: Write another letter to the newspapers.

Mr. Trudeau: The Hon. Member suggests that I have given a lot of advice for which I have not been asked. That is not true. If Mr. Palme wants to have my advice on this matter, he will pick up a phone and he will talk to me, as he frequently does. He has not asked my advice on this matter. The Hon. Member should be asking advice of people within his Party who are expected to lead it in some way or another.

Mr. Nielsen: Write another letter to the Toronto Star.

Miss MacDonald: I thought we were still in NATO.

Oral Questions

CANADA DAY

CELEBRATION OF FIRST OFFICIAL FESTIVAL

Mr. Maurice Harquail (Restigouche): Madam Speaker, because of the good work accomplished by the Hon. Member for Vaudreuil with respect to Canada Day, this will be the first year that we will officially celebrate Canada Day on July 1. I wonder if the Secretary of State could inform us of some of the special plans which will be organized for this year's celebration.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

[Translation]

Hon. Serge Joyal (Secretary of State): Madam Speaker, I join with all Members who voted for the amendment which enables us to celebrate Canada Day this year for the first time in our history. With that in mind, I will be in a position this week to advise all associations as well as all men and women who have prepared projects to celebrate this national holiday so that they will receive grants early enough to plan their celebration of Canada Day carefully.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

LOW ANGLE RADAR PROGRAM—APPLICATION TO POSSIBLE CRUISE MISSILE TESTING

Mr. Terry Sargeant (Selkirk-Interlake): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Defence. It is a follow-up to the question I asked yesterday with regard to the "low angle radar measurement" program. Yesterday, both in the House and outside it, the Minister stated that this project has nothing to do with Cruise missiles. Does the Minister still stand by that statement? If so, can he tell us why scientists from the Cruise Missile Technology Group of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology are regular participants in the testing program, and why a Canadian consultant to the program would freely admit that the major spinoff is for the Cruise missile, that the information yielded by the testing will improve the survivability of these missiles?

Hon. J. Gilles Lamontagne (Minister of National Defence): Madam Speaker, I think that this question involving the low angle radar measurement test concerns a test agreement which was signed in 1979. If I remember correctly, it was in November of 1979 that a memorandum of understanding was signed between the United States and Canada to test low angle radar measurement equipment. There was no connection then with the Cruise missile. It was a question of improving our radar capabilities, as I said yesterday, and I think I gave the right answer then. I think, by the way, that the media interpreted my answer very well in the newspapers. I think the Hon. Member should read everything I said yesterday. I still hold to the view that when this agreement was signed in 1979 there was no question of involving the Cruise missile. No one knew about it in the United States. Then, after that, maybe the technology of what they refer to as low angle radar measurement could be involved in some of the improvements or refinements to the Cruise missile to be tested.

INVOLVEMENT OF UNITED STATES MISSILE TECHNOLOGY GROUP

Mr. Terry Sargeant (Selkirk-Interlake): Madam Speaker, I have no doubt that the first part of the Minister's answer is correct and that part of this testing is for low angle radar, but I want to ask him specifically what has happened since that memorandum of understanding was signed in November, 1979? Why would a group, which is called the Cruise Missile Technology Group, be studying this matter if it is not working toward developing technology to use on the Cruise missile? Will the Minister undertake to determine just what is going on in this testing, and undertake to determine if any other testing in Canada is going on which may involve applications to be used in nuclear weapons systems?

Hon. J. Gilles Lamontagne (Minister of National Defence): Madam Speaker, I think the Hon. Member seems to have an obsession about the Cruise missile. There are some other things going on in Canada and in other countries with regard to investigating new technology related to radar, and related to detecting low flying aircraft or low flying missiles, and all of that. The Cruise missile is not the only thing in existence. This radar techonology could be applied to civilian aircraft, it could be applied to the facilities used in the approaches to airports. It could be applied in many areas. In 1979, when we decided to sign the memorandum of understanding, there was nothing about the Cruise missile in the memorandum.

FISHERIES

GEORGES BANK—IMPACT OF UNITED STATES ACTION

Mr. Lloyd R. Crouse (South Shore): Madam Speaker, I wish to direct my question to the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans. On March 10 President Ronald Reagan proclaimed an exclusive economic zone, claiming sovereign rights over all living and non-living resources within 200 miles of United States territories. Following this action a Bill was introduced in Congress that would close the U.S. 200 mile zone to all foreign fishing vessels by the end of 1987, with a gradual phase-out beginning next year.

Since this move by the United States could pre-empt the International Court's decision at the Hague on the boundary issue, an action which I know he will agree could be most harmful to Canadian fishing interests, I ask the Minister if he has made any representations to his American counterpart to safeguard our fishermen's rights on Georges Bank.

Hon. Pierre De Bané (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): No, I think that, as my hon. friend knows, this case is now before the International Court. I do not think those unilateral decisions by either country can have any impact. The legal questions at issue here are not influenced by those decisions of the United States.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER ACT TO PROTECT CANADIAN INTERESTS

Mr. Lloyd R. Crouse (South Shore): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is also directed to the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans. It is my understanding that the President made the proclamation as a consequence of his decision not to sign the International Law of the Sea Treaty which was finalized in 1982 after more than a decade of consultations and complex negotiations.

Since the American declaration of an exclusive economic zone will mean that the State Department will no longer be under any obligation whatsoever to allocate any kind of fish to foreign nations, as was required previously under the Fisheries Conservation and Management Act, does the Minister plan to take any action whatsoever to protect Canadian fishing interests in the Georges Bank area?

Hon. Pierre De Bané (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Madam Speaker, the reason the American Government did not sign the Law of the Sea Treaty was, of course, because of those clauses relating to the mining of the sea bed. Essentially, its reservations were based on that part of the Treaty which Canada and most countries have signed. As for the question about Georges Bank, there is a dispute between Canada and the U.S. Both sides have voluntarily referred the matter to the International Court, and I think we will have to wait until the decision of the Court.

INDUSTRY

PETROCHEMICAL INDUSTRY—APPOINTMENT OF TASK FORCE

Hon. Bud Cullen (Sarnia-Lambton): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce. Following the Minister's announcement about the assistance to be given to the oil-based petrochemical industry, he indicated that a committee or a task force would be established. Has the chairman of that committee been appointed, have the Members been appointed, and when does the Minister anticipate their first meeting?

Hon. Ed Lumley (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce and Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): Madam Speaker, the co-chairmen, one from business and one from labour, have been chosen, and a tentative membership list has been selected. These individuals are now being called to determine if they are willing to sit on the task force. I think the co-chairmen are planning to hold their first meeting in the third week of June.

CROWN CORPORATIONS

CANADAIR—ANNUAL LOSSES—INFORMATION GIVEN TO PARLIAMENT

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister and it concerns the apparent insolvency of Canadair. The Prime Minister is the only consistent Minister to have taken responsibility for this company.

It has been represented to us that in each of the years 1976 through to 1981 this company made approximately $3 million per year. Now, as of a report dated May 18, it is revealed that it actually lost money in each of the years, to the tune of an aggregate $700 million. Would the Prime Minister indicate first when he became aware of this misrepresentation and, second, what explanation he has for the House for this gross misleading of the House?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, keeping your earlier judgment on the rules in mind, I would just tell the Hon. Member, with respect, that these matters are being discussed currently before two committees of the House. The Minister responsible for the dossier is testifying in front of those committees today.

Before the Hon. Member reaches the conclusion that there has been misrepresentation or gross misinformation, he might at least do the committee the courtesy of waiting for testimony, asking questions, and seeing what conclusions it will draw. If the Hon. Member feels the Government should then be answering more questions, we will be pleased to do so.

FUTURE FUNDING FOR CORPORATION—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Madam Speaker, in view of that answer perhaps I could ask my supplementary question of the Minister of Finance and deal with something that is before the House at the present time. To what extent is the Minister of Finance prepared to bail out this corporation, bearing in mind that $200 million extra or $300 million extra will not be sufficient? Would he now level with the House and state what it will take to make this insolvent corporation solvent on a viable basis?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, again this is a matter that is being examined. I have had discussions with the Minister responsible for Canadair, for the CDIC, together with the Secretary of the Treasury Board. We are examining this dossier completely. We have been doing this for several weeks, and this examination will be pursued.

As I have indicated, there is in the estimates before the House a request for $240 million for further equity injection into the company.

Mr. Stevens: Is that enough?

Mr. Lalonde: That will be enough to carry the company over a few months—

Mr. Stevens: A few months.

Mr. Lalonde: —for the bills and the work that has to be carried out over the next while.

Obviously, in terms of the money that would be required over the next five years, that is a matter being examined at the present time. When a decision is reached I will be very happy to inform the Hon. Member.

THE ECONOMY

INTEREST RATE LEVELS

Mr. G. M. Gurbin (Bruce-Grey): Madam Speaker, my question is also directed to the Minister of Finance. Canadian borrowers have a broad concern about the level of interest rates that will prevail in Canada over the next few months and several years. Does the Minister have any idea of what interest rate levels will be in Canada in the next few months? Would he like to give us an indication of what those levels will be?

[Translation]

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member is very clever, but he knows perfectly well it would be extremely presumptuous of me to say what the interest rate situation will be in a few weeks or months. I can only express the hope that interest rates in Canada will continue to drop as they have done during the past year. At the Summit in Williamsburg, very strong pressure was put on the Americans by all the other industrialized countries, urging them to adopt a policy that would bring about a drop in interest rates between now and the end of the year. I hope it will be possible to bring down interest rates, but as for guaranteeing that this will happen, I am not in a position to do so, and as for telling the Hon. Member by how much interest rates are likely to drop, there again, I think it would be presumptuous on my part to prejudge the situation.

[English]

IMPACT OF GOVERNMENT BORROWING

Mr. G. M. Gurbin (Bruce-Grey): Madam Speaker, in view of the massive Government deficits and the Government's borrowing requirements, when does the Minister anticipate that the impact of this will be felt on the interest rate market? What effect does he feel it will have on interest rate levels in Canada?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, the very large consensus at the present time is that the deficit has no impact in terms of the interest rates in the short term, that is, either this year or next year. The consensus is that the savings of the country are very large and that there is no danger of crowding out the private sector because the demand for investment in the private sector will be comparatively low in the course of this year and will increase only gradually in the course of next year.

As a matter of fact, I had a discussion in this regard with the American Secretary of the Treasury at Williamsburg, who was arguing quite strongly indeed that, even with their $210 billion estimated deficit, they did not expect this to have a negative impact on interest rates in the short term.

However, the problem of the deficit in the medium term, that is, over a period of several years, is one that should be borne in mind. I have addressed that in my budget by announcing a certain number of measures aimed at gradually reducing the deficit while at the same time meeting the needs and looking afther the best interests of the people of Canada by protecting them against unemployment while trying to stimulate growth of the economy.

NATIONAL REVENUE

TAXATION OF WORK RELATED FRINGE BENEFITS

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Revenue. Could the Minister inform the House whether his Department has initiated a program to change the method for determining the benefits to employees of certain companies, in the industrial, financial or life insurance sector, in terms of the value of meals taken by employees in company cafeterias or dining rooms? Could he also inform the House how he intends to proceed and whether this is only the beginning? Does the Minister now intend to tax the benefit accruing to employees as a result of meals taken at the Department of National Revenue and in other departments?

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, I think that what the Hon. Member is referring to, namely, the possibility or necessity of taxing work-related benefits, is not a new practice. It is a practice that goes back a number of years, and if I am not mistaken, it was expanded in 1980. Employers are responsible for declaring taxable work-related benefits on the T-4 slips, and the Hon. Member's example comes under this category. Furthermore, employers must follow the guidelines issued at the time in one of the interpretation bulletins.

Mr. Lambert: Madam Speaker, I have a supplementary. Could the Minister inform the House what other employee fringe benefits he intends to tax. Is he going to include free parking, based on the rates at the commercial parking lot on the next block, and so on?

Mr. Bussières: Madam Speaker, it has been some time since I last read the interpretation bulletin for employers, concerning work-related benefits. I promise the Hon. Member and this House that I will review this interpretation bulletin, and I shall then be in a better position to provide further details on this matter to the Hon. Member and other Members of this House.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

MINISTER'S STATEMENT ON DRINKING QUALITY OF GREAT LAKES WATER

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of the Environment. Yesterday the Minister visited a number of dump sites on the U.S. side of the Niagara River. Following that visit he said that he was calling for an urgent series of meetings amongst Government at all levels. He also said the reason for these meetings was that:

• (1450)

—only a fraction of the 2,000 potentially harmful substances that have been detected in the Great Lakes basin ecosystem—

—have been identified. Then, in the same breath, the Minister went on to say:

There is no reason to be concerned about the present drinking water quality of water in the Great Lakes.

Can the Minister explain to the House what he means by that kind of a contradictory statement? There is either a problem, or there is not a problem. All the evidence indicates that there is a very serious problem, yet the Minister attempts to brush it aside by making that kind of a statement. It does not make sense, Madam Speaker.

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of the Environment): Madam Speaker, yes, I will explain the statement. Perhaps the most useful thing I can do is to refer the Hon. Member to a series of articles appearing at the present time in The Globe and Mail, which very clearly make exactly the same point.

There is no reason to doubt that the present health standards are being met. What we are finding in the water confirms not only that the water quality well and easily meets the standards established by Health and Welfare and also by the World Health Organization. The problems that we are detectin now, however, give us concern for the longer term development of water quality in the Great Lakes. If the Hon. Member looks carefully at the speech I made last night, and if he looks carefully at the articles which have appeared in The Globe and Mail, I think he will find a very clear explanation of the difference between the short-term situation and the long-term challenge it presents.

Mr. Young: Madam Speaker, I did not read his speech but I certainly read the press release.

POLLUTION CAUSED BY UNITED STATES DUMPS

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Madam Speaker, in the Minister's press release he expresses great concern about the Hyde Park site, the "S" area site, the Love Canal site, and others. The Minister points out that the pollution is certainly stemming from those sources and that the U.S. Government is not taking enough speedy action to clean them up. Will the Minister tell the House whether he has considered taking any legal action against either the U.S. Government or the owners of those dump sites to protect the drinking water supply of some four million Canadians around Lake Ontario?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of the Environment): Yes, Madam Speaker, we have considered that course of action. If the Hon. Member would refer to past answers that I have given to the House, he will see that we have explained why we do not believe it is useful for the federal Government to institute legal actions.

We have a variety of means of redress which we exercise with the American authorities. I think it would be unwise for us to abandon, as practically would be the case, our alternative remedies by relying on the court process. If we were to enter legal action it is very possible, indeed probable, that the American administration would say, "Since you entered the legal process we must abide by the results of that process". In fact that process is a very lengthy, time consuming one. While we have supported, in a variety of ways, groups which do intervene in the American legal process, simply in terms of practicality and in maximizing the means by which we have to call upon the American administration for redress it would be unwise for us to restrain ourselves, or restrict ourselves to the legalistic approach.

I think the Hon. Member will find, if he looks at the record, that there has been a long discussion and description of why it is we have taken that approach in terms of the federal Government's involvement in legal action.

NATIONAL ENERGY PROGRAM

EFFECT ON WESTERN CANADA

Mr. John Thomson (Calgary South): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. Does the Minister appreciate the degree of devastation that has been caused in western Canada by the National Energy Program?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, I do not know if that is a very appropriate question. I could go on and explain all the policies, the advantages, and the convenience of every policy.

Miss MacDonald: Don't try it.

Mr. Chrétien: I think the Hon. Member should realize at this time that in western Canada I am having very good relations with the Government of Alberta. When I meet representatives of the industry, they receive me very well. In fact in Calgary the other day 1,650 people from the Chamber of Commerce came to hear me. It is certainly not a very hostile climate.

Miss MacDonald: It is what they said afterwards that you should have listened to.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. John Thomson (Calgary South): Madam Speaker, does the Minister seriously believe that that in any way answers the question that I have just asked? Does he really seriously believe just what he said—because people come to see him that he understands the degree of the devastation which the National Energy Program has caused in western Canada? That is no answer at all, Madam Speaker.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I am afraid the Hon. Member is not asking a question. He is simply expressing a view which he is entitled to have, but it is not really a question of such magnitude, and it is very difficult to answer in a Question Period. The Hon. Member for Red Deer (Mr. Towers).

Mr. Chrétien: I would like to answer the question, Madam Speaker.

Some Hon. Members: Sit down.

Mr. Chrétien: I have followed the press very closely—

Some Hon. Members: Sit down.

Madam Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for Red Deer.

CANADIAN DAIRY COMMISSION

RCMP INVESTIGATION—PRESENTATION OF REPORT

Mr. Gordon Towers (Red Deer): Madam Speaker, in view of the dissatisfaction of the Auditor General with the management of the Canadian Dairy Commission, my question is for the Minister of Justice. In view of the fact that the RCMP have undertaken an investigation of the Canadian Dairy Commission, can the Minister of Justice tell the House when its report will be forthcoming?

Hon. Mark MacGuigan (Minister of Justice): I will take that question as notice, Madam Speaker.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER MAKE REPORT TO HOUSE OF COMMONS

Mr. Gordon Towers (Red Deer): Could we have the understanding, Madam Speaker, that the Minister of Justice will be making a report to the House of Commons when it is forthcoming?

Hon. Mark MacGuigan (Minister of Justice): I will certainly consider that suggestion, Madam Speaker.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

NIAGARA RIVER—UNITED STATES POLLUTANT SOURCES

Mr. Joe Reid (St. Catharines): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of the Environment, following his visit to Niagara yesterday. Recognizing, as the Minister does, that most of the sources of pollutants are on the American side of the river, what commitment did the Minister get from his colleagues on the American side to remedy some time—sooner, not later—the problems of those source pollutants?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of the Environment): Madam Speaker, I did meet with the new Secretary of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Mr. Ruckelshaus, a couple of weeks ago. Yesterday when I was in the Niagara region I did meet with the regional EPA administrator and discussed exactly those issues with her. I do believe the American administration is looking now for ways of acting rather than simply studying these problems. I was encouraged yesterday that the American Government announced it will be using superfund moneys, something like $700,000 as an initial step, in application to the toxic site problems in the Niagara Peninsula. I hope that is a first step and not a final step.

There are some reasons to be encouraged by what appears to be a new attitude taken by the new team in EPA in Washington. But I suggest that it is still important for us to continue with our representations and urgings that the United States take prompt action to respond to these problems.

ACTION TAKEN IN UNITED STATES

Mr. Joe Reid (St. Catharines): Madam Speaker, the Minister knows that he himself stated that his proposed tri-government level approach is a short-term approach. The Minister has not answered this afternoon anything different from what he has answered on previous occasions. Will he then, if he will not initiate proceedings against U.S. authorities that are polluting the Niagara River, join with the other intervenors in opposition to the "S" area contaminant site?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of the Environment): Madam Speaker, I have not announced anything particularly new in answer to the questions today because the questions are the same old questions we have continually been receiving, and the answers are the same. I have already explained. If the hon.

gentleman had been more interested in listening to the question posed by his colleague in the New Democratic Party he would have realized the question he has now asked is one I have already answered previously today.

I have given as full an explanation as I can, not only today but in the past, about why it would be unwise to confine ourselves to the legal processes as a means of getting redress for these situations in the United States. We must use the whole array of instruments available to us. Those include direct government representation, public information programs, and assisting groups who do intervene in the legal processes. But it would be unwise, impractical, and counter to our interests if we were to intervene directly in the American court process ourselves.

TEXTILES AND CLOTHING

GRANT SOUGHT BY EDMONTON PLANT

Mr. Douglas Roche (Edmonton South): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce, to whom I gave notice. My question concerns the possible loss of 600 jobs in Edmonton in the textile industry. Will the Minister support an application by GWG of Edmonton to the Canadian Industrial Renewal Board for a $200,000 grant that will enable a $700,000 modernization program to take place, undertaken by GWG? That would save 600 jobs in the hard hit textile industry at a time when the unemployment rate in Edmonton is at a very high 13 per cent.

• (1500)

Hon. Ed Lumley (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce and Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): Madam Speaker, based on the information which the Hon. Member has given me, it seems like a very legitimate application. I will discuss it on his behalf with the officials of CIRB.

STANDING ORDERS AND PROCEDURE

PRESENTATION OF SEVENTH REPORT OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE

Hon. Walter Baker (Nepean-Carleton): Madam Speaker, with the consent of and in the name of the Hon. Member for Pontiac-Gatineau-Labelle (Mr. Lefebvre), I have the honour to present the Seventh Report of the Special Committee on Standing Orders and Procedure in both official languages. I want to say to the House that this is the famous "Huntington-Lachance" report which has now been the light of day in this particular form.

PETITIONS

MR. BLENKARN—PROPOSED CANADA HEALTH ACT

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Madam Speaker, I have the honour and privilege today to present a petition on behalf of the Peel Chapter of the 43,000-member Registered nurses Association of Ontario who wish to call on Members of Canada's Parliament to ensure that the proposals of the Canadian Nurses Association for health care are included in the drafting of the new Canada Health Act.

MR. SCHELLENBERGER—RECONSIDERATION OF BILL C-85

Mr. Stan Schellenberger (Wetaskiwin): Madam Speaker, I have the duty to present a petition on behalf of my constituents. The purpose of this petition, signed by a number of citizens in central Alberta, is to register concern over Bill C-85, an Act to establish a corporation called Canagrex. The nature of this petition is to have Clause 14 removed from the Bill.

The petitioners hope, Madam Speaker, that in your examination of their petition you will find the petition in order, sense the urgency of their plea, and that you might use the powers of your office to allow for discussion and further debate on this matter.

MR. ANGUISH—TESTING OF CRUISE MISSILE ON CANADIAN SOIL

Mr. Doug Anguish (The Battlefords-Meadow Lake): Madam Speaker, it is my duty and honour today to present a petition on behalf of some 72 students of the North Battleford Comprehensive High School in the City of North Battleford. They are concerned about and opposed to the testing of the Cruise missile on or over Canadian territory. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

Order Paper Questions

MR. SKELLY—MARINE INDUSTRIAL STRATEGY

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Madam Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition to the House of Commons from a number of residents of the community of Prince Rupert, British Columbia. Those citizens ask that Canada create a marine industrial strategy which would allow thousands of jobs and billions of dollars in industrial benefits to accrue to Canadians. In addition, I would indicate that the Government of Canada should produce legislation to implement the recent marine policy put forward, and finally that there should in fact be serious consideration of the Canadian frigate program with the two-two-two split in eastern Canada, central Canada and western Canada.

MR. ALTHOUSE—RETENTION OF CROWSNEST PASS RATES

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Madam Speaker, it is my duty and honour to present a petition from the residents of Mozart, Saskatchewan, who now exercise their right to present a grievance. They humbly sheweth that the Crow rate is basic to the bargain of Confederation made with the people of western Canada, that changing the Crow rate will drastically reduce farm incomes and will effectively destroy the competitiveness of Canadian grain on world markets, and that three royal commissions have recommended that the Crow rate must remain.

The petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to maintain the Crow rate into perpetuity as presently guaranteed in statute.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. David Smith (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, the following question will be answered today: No. 4,791.

[Text]

SURPLUS PUBLIC SERVANTS

Question No. 4,791—Mr. Herbert

1. What is the total number of supernumeraries or vulnerable employees in the Public Service?

2. In the last year, how many have been (a) added to (b) removed from the list?

Mr. David Smith (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): 1. In the Public Service, employees whose jobs are abolished as a result of the discontinuance of functions or the lack of work, are identified as being "surplus" to operational requirements and are notified in writing that they are "surplus". The notification has to be sent to employees at least three months before the date the functions are no longer needed. This surplus period is a period of redeployment, that is to say, during that time the Department and the PSC concentrate their efforts on appointing these people to vacant positions elsewhere in the Public Service. At the end of this period, however, if offers have been turned down or no job has been found, the employee is laid off. The term "supernumeraries" or "vulnerable employees" is used in some Departments to refer to employees who are likely to become surplus but have not yet been declared surplus. When Departments refer to employees as being "supernumerary" or "vulnerable", it is normally because they expect to find other jobs in their own Department for the employees.

At the end of April, 1983, there were 705 surplus employees in the Public Service on the surplus priority list.

2. During the fiscal year 1982-83, 1,128 were declared surplus and added to the priority list. During the same period 956 employees were removed from the list.

[English]

Mr. Smith: Madam Speaker, I ask that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Madam Speaker: The question mentioned by the Parliamentary Secretary has been answered. Shall the remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

CANAGREX

MEASURE TO ESTABLISH

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-85, to establish a corporation called Canagrex to promote, facilitate and engage in the export of agricultural and food products from Canada, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Agriculture; and Motions Nos. 1, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12.

Mr. Marcel Roy (Laval): Madam Speaker, before recess, I was explaining what was the situation when the Liberal Government decided to set up marketing boards so as to provide producers with a higher income and more especially greater income stability because of the substantial increase in production costs. The Opposition was against that plan. The arguments they put forward then were exactly the same as those I heard during the 85 hours this bill was considered in committee and discussed in the House. So much for the evolution of Conservative thinking. If the Canadian people had had to wait for that evolution, many bills would never have seen the light of day. What I find most surprising however is their difficulty in taking a stand or in agreeing on a program. Opinions are always divided.

I referred earlier to marketing boards, mentioning what they have meant for poultry, broiler and egg producers. At the moment, we are not dealing with a marketing board. The purpose of Canagrex is to facilitate and promote the export of agricultural and food products from Canada. There is no need to look any further than the position of the Progressive Conservatives about the whole slate of Bills introduced by the Liberal Government. Take the Crow rate alone, again a source of division within the Progressive Conservative Party. The issue of Canada Day was raised earlier this afternoon and, sure enough, they were divided again. It stands to reason that the Progressive Conservative Party simply cannot be unanimous in endorsing Canagrex. During the leadership campaign, I would have liked to hear the candidates say where they stand on health programs in Canada. The subject was not even mentioned because they have no definite policy on those wide ranging programs which concern the people of Canada. None of the leadership candidates—

• (1510)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. The Hon. Member is getting too far away from the subject or the amendments now before the House. He has just introduced an entirely new element in the debate. I would urge the Hon. Member to relate his comments as much as possible to the amendments now before the House.

Mr. Roy: You are quite right, Mr. Speaker. But the reason why I used that argument is that I was talking about the approach and the philosophy of a party, and I will use an example to illustrate again—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. I apologize to the Hon. Member for Laval (Mr. Roy), but I should like to remind him and other Members that we are now at the report stage, that the scope of the debate is considerably reduced, and that speeches must be relevant to the regrouped amendments. It is true that we are now studying over half a dozen amendments, but remarks such as the Hon. Member's would be more appropriate either on second or third reading. So, again I would urge the Hon. Member to co-operate and keep his remarks within the ambit of the amendments.

Mr. Roy: Mr. Speaker, I was talking about philosophy, and I do think this is relevant to the Bill. I am referring to the speech made by the Member for Moose Jaw (Mr. Neil), and that is where attitudes and philosophy come in. We were comparing Canagrex. Mr. Speaker, Canagrex will have exactly the same powers the Canadian Wheat Board has now. We only want to give Canagrex the same powers as the Canadian Wheat Board. However, as soon as the Canadian Wheat Board is mentioned, the Progressive Conservatives get upset because the Board is the West's baby. We in the East are proud of the Canadian Wheat Board. All we want is an agency through which Canadian products will find their way more readily to export markets. This is extremely important to Canada, because our domestic market is limited to 24 million consumers, and 50 per cent of Quebec and Canada's products and food products are exported outside the country, because, as I said, our domestic consumption is limited. Perhaps I may draw a parallel with the situation in the United States, which has 10 times as many people and where exports represent only 30 per cent of their income, while in Canada, farm producers depend on export markets for 50 per cent of their income. That is why we want to have a mechanism through which we can continue to develop our export markets—and that mechanism is Canagrex—in order to help producers increase sales and expand their markets.

Canagrex has no power to be in a monopoly position with respect to any product whatsoever, and this is quite clear in the legislation and applies to both exports and imports. It is not a marketing board, a subject to which I referred at the beginning of my speech, which plans production on the basis of demand, so as to guarantee the producer a steady income, more directly based on his production costs and reflecting a satisfactory profit margin. That is the purpose of marketing boards, and the principle is now being applied to the market for roasting chickens, poultry and eggs. The Opposition has objected to those boards systematically, and similarly. It is objecting again today to the Liberal Government's decision to implement certain plans. They would rather kill the issue here and now. They prefer the status quo to whatever measures we have introduced. They said no to the Crow rate. What is wrong with the status quo? Do not touch the marketing boards! Do not change the Crow rate! No to Canagrex! Do not touch it! They go along with the principle, but they refuse to give the Government any power. They buy the machine, not bad, but no gas, no power! That was more or less the attitude embodied in the amendments moved by the Opposition on July 19, 1982, and today, they are blaming us for imposing closure on a debate that has already gone on for 85 hours in committee. The amendments were brought in on July 19, 1982, and today again, they are indulging in systematic obstruction because all they know how to say is no.

However, their differences on the subject of national policies have put the Progressive Conservatives in the Opposition for several decades, and those differences, their inability to agree on national policies, will continue to keep them in the Opposition, Mr. Speaker.

They referred to—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please! The Hon. Member's time has expired.

[English]

Hon. Ron Huntington (Capilano): Mr. Speaker, for the Government to bring Canagrex, Bill C-85, into the House of Commons when it has probably less than ten days of Government business between now and the date of rising for the summer recess is nothing but public mischief. The trouble in the country today is that the people have lost all trust and faith in this Government. This Bill leads to control over individual lives, control over the Canadian farming community and Canadian farmers and control over businesses in the food chain.

This is not a farmers' Bill. It is not an agricultural Bill. It is a Bill that will touch the lives of all of us in Canada. It is just like the Government's mischief in turning 180 degrees on the Gilson formula for the resolution of the Crow debate in Canada. It is doing this in the dying hours of this session, provided we do not come in and renew it on July 4 or later in the fall.

Very few people have their eye on the real game that is being played and won in Ottawa. We all have a tendency to get locked into our own thing around here or to have our attention diverted by deliberate confrontations with labour, the Provinces, businesses and regions in this country. We just heard a speech by the Hon. Member for Laval (Mr. Roy). That is just trying to dig up regional alienation and confrontation. We are allowing mega-political change to take place in this country without an electoral mandate.

Before you worry about my speaking to the Bill, Mr. Speaker, I want to advise you that I am speaking to Motions Nos. 1, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12, all grouped together. This means that in ten minutes I have to speak in rather broad, general terms. I therefore ask your forgiveness if I do not stay within specific limits.

On the point that I am making, in the weekend paper Mr. Tetley had his finger on the kind of mischief we are getting into in this House in our political alienation and the antagonism that is developing within regions. Speaking of the next election, Mr. Tetley said:

> But don't ever count the dreaded Grits out of the big race that is yet to come.
> When the Party that brought you Japanese internment camps in the Second World War starts worrying about racism and bigotry, you can bet there is something up their sleeve other than somebody else's silverware.
>
> Save Quebec they whisper and ethnic the hell out of Ontario. Screw the West and we'll win again.

• (1520)

That seems to be the type of mistrust that is developing in the country, especially on the part of some of us out West, in response to the Government's attitude in bringing in Bill C-85 in the last hours of the session. What has the Government done to the potential we had? The Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) had the potential to create a very positive debate on the Crow and implement the Gilson proposals right in the palm of his hand. But I want to tell you, Mr. Speaker, that the way he went about it was not rough, tough politics. He had pacified the country in a very intelligent way. That is what the Minister of Agriculture should be doing with this Bill instead of imposing closure on it and forcing the hand of the House on something of this magnitude that affects the lives of every Canadian, the whole food industry in the country and changes the whole structure and nature of the country. Instead of that, he is trying to pull this kind of a trick. No wonder some of us are annoyed.

Today we have heard much from the Minister and from the Hon. Member for Laval. They have indicated that we as a Party were gifted in the art of putting Crown corporations in place. That is quite true, but if the Hon. Member for Laval knew anything about Crown corporations, he would know that they have a history. First we were in a pioneering phase, then we were in a depression phase. There then followed a wartime period. Mr. Howe, a great Canadian, created 32 Crown corporations during that national emergency. Only one of those Crown corporations was phased out after the war.

Following that phase, there was a nationalism and patriotism phase that created further Crown corporations. We then went to the mixed enterprise phase that the Right Hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) introduced in 1968 in order to create a mixed economy, and Crown corporations were used for that. Then from 1972 on, Mr. Speaker, we went to a proliferation phase.

I can remember when Treasury Board officials were asked in committee how many Crown corporations there were, they did not know. Four months later they came back with an inventory of 387 Crown corporations. That is what has happened to the country. We have allowed a subgovernment across the country to remove power from the House of Commons. We have transferred power, and it is this raw, bald power over freedom, over lives, over the right to choose that we have transferred to this subgovernment. It is a power that you and I will never have, Mr. Speaker. Kings and queens do not have the kind of power that some of the officials of these Crown corporations have. The new emperors of Canada are the Maurice Strongs and the Jack Austins. These are the men who are in control of a power that is beyond belief. Kings and queens have never had that kind of power. I as a Member of Parliament who represents people from western Canada want that power restricted.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Huntington: I want the House of Commons to start doing its job, to show some responsibility by pulling some control back into the House of Commons. Backbenchers must start serving the people, not these bureaucrats and appointees and these ideologues who control these corporations. The situation has become so dangerous that we are losing our freedom to choose. It is time some of us got angry and did something about it. I would like to hear free speeches from Government backbenchers in order to get the matter under control.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please! The Hon. Member for Laval (Mr. Roy), on a point of order.

Mr. Roy: Mr. Speaker, I am being accused of saying things I never said. When I talked about the question of powers, I meant that in that case, most members of the board are taken from the private sector, and it is not a matter of having all the powers of a Crown corporation, because I have a great many reservations as to the activities of a number of Crown corporations, and I would refer the Hon. Member to a speech I made previously—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please! This is obviously a contribution to the debate and certainly not a point of order.

[English]

Mr. Huntington: Mr. Speaker, as that was not a point of order, could you please add two minutes to the time allotted to me? The Hon. Member was only trying to break my train of thought and disrupt a message that I have for the people of the country.

You heard from other speakers today, Mr. Speaker, including the Hon. Member for Red Deer (Mr. Towers), that there are 32 powerful organizations and associations in the food industry and the agricultural industry in western Canada that are dead against this Bill. Provincial Premiers are against this Bill as well. One provincial Minister of Agriculture calls this Bill a piranha in a goldfish bowl. I have spoken to the Agriculture Minister of British Columbia and he is against this Bill. Yet the Government continues to ram it through under closure even when it creates this kind of alienation, temper and concern in the country. It is dangerous to try to force this Bill through in the final hours of this session.

I want to remind you, Mr. Speaker, that the Government under this Prime Minister has three basic priorities. The first priority is the control of culture and communications. Look at what has happened in this session with the Kent Commission and the Applebaum-Hébert Report under Jacques Hébert. Look at Pierre Juneau who, along with the Prime Minister and the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lalonde), was one of the drafters of this strategy back in 1964. Where is he now? He is the head of the CBC and is now rewriting the Broadcasting Act. Culture and communications are very important to the Government. We will be controlled by a great cultural wave.

[Translation]

Mr. Dionne (Chicoutimi): Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Dionne), on a point of order.

Mr. Dionne (Chicoutimi): Mr. Speaker, I was listening to my hon. colleague speaking to Bill C-85, and I must say he completely by-passed the subject, as usual. I would therefore ask the Chair to ask the Hon. Member to speak to Bill C-85.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Dionne) has invoked the rule of relevancy. As usual, the Chair has been listening intently to the speech now being made and the Chair finds itself in some difficulty. In a sense, the remarks made by the Hon. Member for Capilano (Mr. Huntington) are related in a general way to the subject matter now before the House. Of course, in case of doubt the Chair must exercise lenience in favour of the Member who is speaking. Nevertheless, all Hon. Members should be guided by the general rule of relevancy and should try to stick with it as much as possible.

Mr. Huntington: Mr. Speaker, I trust that you will add another three minutes to my allotted time, and I thank you for your courtesy and your consideration.

The second fundamental priority of the Government is control of energy through the central Government. It is removing control of resources from the Provinces.

Let me now deal with the third priority. Just go back and look at the Government's legislative timetable. The third priority of the Government is state control over the food chain. That is what Canagrex is all about. Canagrex is nothing but another national energy policy, but this time it is designed to control food. The Minister of Agriculture can shout across the House and say: "Those words are in the Bill but we will not use them; I said in committee that we would not use them". If he does not require the powers contained in the Bill, all he need do is remove the buy-sell powers, listen to the amendments suggested by the Hon. Member for Wetaskiwin (Mr. Schellenberger) instead of turning a deaf ear to them, and he can have the Bill. In committee we told him repeatedly that all he has to do is remove the buy-sell powers and he can have the Bill. I doubt, Mr. Speaker, that what the Government is doing is something that even the Hon. Minister of Agriculture understands. He is under instructions from his chief, the Prime Minister. He does not even know what he is really doing. He senses the presence of power that can be given to friends who will be put in charge of this corporation.

What about those who run food businesses and are of a different political ideology? Will those people ever have a chance if they are not in the political favour of the Party in power that controls an organization like Canagrex? No, the freedom of choice is disappearing with this kind of legislation. Canagrex, Mr. Speaker, is empowered to purchase agricultural and food products and package, process, store, ship, insure, import, export, sell or otherwise dispose of products purchased by it. It is empowered to make grants and contributions for the purposes for which it was established and to purchase, lease or otherwise acquire and hold real personal property for actual use by Canagrex.

Those powers, Mr. Speaker, are awesome and dangerous when the House of Commons and the Auditor General do not even have the power to overview, audit or question professionally the people who comprise this subgovernment through the power that is distributed to friends and ideologues. That is what is at issue in this Bill. This is not the hour in Canada's history to be shoving this Bill down our throats under the force of closure!

• (1530)

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Huntington: Canagrex, Mr. Speaker, can create a state monopoly for the export of agricultural products along the lines of such trading bureaucracies as exist in the socialist countries. My goodness, can we not learn from the experience of others who stifled and smothered initiative, the right to be free and the right to make a decision in the agricultural communities and the agricultural processing communities? When are we going to learn in this country? Why do we have to throw away that heritage and that freedom which we were given? That is what this Bill is doing, Mr. Speaker. What is happening with this avalanche of Crown corporations is the transferring of power out to ideologues and to "friends" and to people who are not answerable or accountable to the people of Canada. It is time we stopped it, and the time to stop it is with this Bill right now. Wait until we catch our breath. The Government does not need it right now. It is not going to add anything to this country. It is just going to damage us and create more regional antagonism and, of course, that is their very game.

[Translation]

Mr. Dionne (Chicoutimi): Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Dionne), on a point of order.

Mr. Dionne (Chicoutimi): I would like to ask the Hon. Member how many times he attended the meetings of the Committee on Agriculture?

An Hon. Member: Never!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. Before asking a question, the Hon. Member must obtain the consent of the Hon. Member who just finished speaking.

Mr. Dionne (Chicoutimi): Mr. Speaker, does the Hon. Member agree to my asking him a question?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): That requires the unanimous consent of the House, because the Hon. Member's time has expired.

[English]

Is there unanimous consent to allow the Parliamentary Secretary to ask a question?

Mr. Mayer: Not from a bunch of goofs like you guys, that is for sure.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): I gather there is not unanimous consent.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. Order.

Mr. Blaine A. Thacker (Lethbridge-Foothills): Mr. Speaker, like other Hon. Members, I rise to speak on this Bill C-85, at the report stage, in a dispute which is totally unnecessary because, as you will know, Mr. Speaker, at second reading we said that this Bill has three provisions: the first one is to promote the export of agricultural production from this country, and on that heading we agreed totally; the second is the establishment of credit facilities in order to help companies financially to compete against other companies which were subsidizing the export of agricultural products, and with that heading we agreed completely. However, right from the start we have disagreed with the third part of this Bill because we know it is part of a broader scheme referred to by the Hon. Member for Capilano (Mr. Huntington), with whom I agree 100 per cent, that is, the clauses wherein Canagrex can become the Petro-Canada of the food industry in that it has broad powers to buy and sell. That has been the basis of our opposition, Mr. Speaker, right from the start. The Government could have had the Canagrex Bill within one hour, a speech from each of the three Parties, if it had discarded that third clause, the buy and sell provision. The people of Canada have to know that. Certainly those in the agricultural industry do.

I am speaking to eight of the amendments and I want to say to you, Mr. Speaker, that it is obvious that the Government will prevail with the alliance between itself and the New Democratic Party, because the NDP is going to defeat these motions before us which will take away the buy and sell provisions. The New Democratic Party is once again going to sell out the West. It is going to vote with the Liberal Government as it did on the Constitution, because, of course, you have a New Democratic Party which does not want people to own land. That Party opposes the right to property. Why would Hon. Members of that Party now stand and argue for a clause—

Mr. Skelly: A point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. Order, please.

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Speaker, I believe that the Hon. Member over there is suffering from delusions, and I would ask that you bring in the point of relevancy again at this stage, with a test of rationality on this, of course.

Mr. Taylor: You are out of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order.

Mr. Thacker: Mr. Speaker, the New Democratic Party is very nervous about that because it has lost a Government in the West over their ideological stand to block individuals from having the privilege of owning land. Therefore, the Party is very sensitive. It is also sensitive because it stood with the Government over the National Energy Program. However, I would like to explain to you why we put that argument against the buy-sell provision in this clause, why the amendments before you are to withdraw those buy-sell powers. There is some very good evidence which Hon. Members opposite should listen to. It concerns the growth of these Crown corporations, once we get them going. You would need to look, Mr. Speaker, at the most recent report from the Treasury Board, the Government's own document, which points out, for example, that Air Canada has five subsidiaries which it owns 100 per cent. It has seven subsidiaries which it owns 50 per cent to 99 per cent and there are 12 subsidiaries in which it holds less than 50 per cent interest. The CNR has 59 subsidiary corporations in which it owns 100 per cent of the shares. There are six subsidiaries of the CNR in which it owns 50 per cent to 99 per cent, and there are some eight subsidiaries in which the CNR owns less than 50 per cent of the shares. There is the CDIC which is just being put together now by 17 Orders in Council before a Bill was put before the House. It will be the most massive intervention in the civil and business part of this country which we have ever seen.

Let me give an example which is so typical of the attack on the West, Mr. Speaker, that is, the National Energy Program and the Petro-Canada legislation. You can ask me, Mr. Speaker, why we have all of these subsections to take out the buy-sell provision. Let us look at Petro-Canada. As you know, Mr. Speaker, Petro-Canada started in 1976. It has bought out three major private corporations, all of which were paying income tax to National Revenue. Petro-Canada pays a few dollars in but still takes out more than twice, in terms of parliamentary appropriations, of what it returns in income tax. Then there is the four cents a gallon tax. Let us look at the subsidiaries, Mr. Speaker. Since 1976, Petro-Canada has 44 subsidiary corporations in which it owns 100 per cent of the shares. It has two subsidiary corporations in which it owns between 50 per cent and 99 per cent of the shares, and it has eight subsidiary corporations in which it owns less than 50 per cent. That is a total of 54 subsidiary corporations which have now been taken over by Petro-Canada or set up by Petro-Canada. We must remember, Mr. Speaker, that they must all have their bureaucracies and those bureaucracies are appointed by the Cabinet. When the Hon. Member for Capilano says that we have corporations with more power than ancient kings and queens, he speaks the truth.

I believe, Mr. Speaker, in order to make the point so that the Government and the New Democratic Party will finally see the error of their ways and vote for these amendments, I am going to give you the names of those subsidiaries of Petro-Canada. And that is right on the major point which we are discussing. Subsidiaries held at 100 per cent are Canertech Conservation Inc., Pacific Enercon Ltd., Mechron Energy Ltd., 107744 Canada Inc.—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Taylor: Oh, sit down, he is on the motion.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. Order, please. The Chair would ask the Hon. Member for Lethbridge-Foothills (Mr. Thacker) to indicate in what way the list of companies he is now putting before the House is related to the specific amendments now before the House.

Mr. Malone: That should be very obvious.

Mr. Thacker: Mr. Speaker, we have eight motions which take the buy-sell provisions, the state corporation dimensions, out of Canagrex. And I am, by way of illustration, pointing out to you how important these amendments are because since 1976, Petro-Canada, as an illustration, has now 54 subs and sub-subsidiary corporations. In order to make that point, I want to list them. I want to stick it down the throats of those guys sideways, if I can, so that they finally speak up and stop being "yes men"—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. Order. I am sure the Hon. Member in his mind believes that the matter he is now raising is related in some way to the specific amendments. However, even though the amendments have been regrouped for the purpose of debate, I must ask the Hon. Member to indicate to the Chair to what amendment or amendments the matter he is now raising relates? The chair finds it difficult to make the connection. Of course, the Chair may be totally wrong; it sometimes happens. The Hon. Member would be helpful if he could explain the matter a little more.

• (1540)

Mr. Thacker: Mr. Speaker, I thought I had when I was explaining to you that, by illustration, you can often show just how damaging the clauses in this Bill are. That is the reason we have these eight amendments to take out the buy-sell power, the state trading corporation aspect. I seek your ruling on this, but it seems perfectly clear to me that an illustration from another example within the last few months can show you clearly that there is danger in this Canagrex Bill. That is why I intend to carry on, Mr. Speaker, unless you rule me totally out of order. I think the House needs to hear this.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Thacker: Mr. Speaker, I am listing as follows the 100 per cent fully owned Petro-Canada subsidiaries: Drilling Inc.; Petro-Canada Consulting Corporation; Petro-Canada Exploration Inc.; Asher American, Inc.; Big EAgle Oil & Gas Ltd.;

Aquilla Holdings Ltd.; Fifth Pacific Stations Ltd.; GMI Co. (Bahamas) Limited; Opal Oils Limited; Commodore Oils Limited; First Pacific Stations Ltd.; Second Pacific Stations Ltd.; Third Pacific Stations Ltd.; Fourth Pacific Stations Ltd.; Pacific Petrochemicals Ltd.; Pacific Pipelines, Inc.; Pacific Petroleums (Overseas) Limited; Petro-Canada Enterprises Inc.; Arctic Islands Resources Ltd.; Independent Fuels & Lumber Ltd.; Joseph Elie Limitée; March Dufresne (1979) Inc.; Petro-Canada Chemicals Inc.; Petro-Canada Espanola S.A.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. The Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River (Mr. Skelly) is rising on a point of order.

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Speaker, there can only be one reason for such an animated reading into the record of the list the Hon. Member is reading at this time. He must seriously be considering a last minute bid for the leadership, because he is certainly not relevant to what is being debated in the House today.

Mr. Taylor: At least he is talking to the point; that is more than you did.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. The Chair is exercising considerable leniency in ruling in favour of the Hon. Member for Lethbridge-Foothills. It seems to me the matter is rather on the borderline at this stage.

Mr. Thacker: Mr. Speaker, you can see the point being made. The people who want state control and ownership are very upset about this. All these corporations have come out since 1976. I am going to tell the Canadian people about it, and they are going to listen because they now see the danger of that Government.

Why do we need Petro-Canada Espanola S.A.? Why do we need Petro-Canada Norway A.S.? Why do we need Petro-Canada Petroleum Inc., Petro-Canada Products Inc., Petro-Canada Resources, Petro-Canada (U.K.) Limited, Petroleum Transmission Company, Petron Petroleum Ltd., Rocair Limited, Tri-Mountain Petroleums Ltd., Value Serve Stations Ltd., or Venezuelan Canadian Oils, C.A.?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. The Chair must really bring this matter to some finality. In the Chair's opinion, the Hon. Member has departed considerably from the subject of the amendments at hand.

Mr. Thacker: Mr. Speaker, I accept your ruling.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): I must invite the Hon. Member to relate his comments to the object of the amendments. Some of them deal with loans and guarantees, others with financial arrangements, the promotion and trade of agricultural produce and so on. The orientation of the Hon. Member's speech is really taking us into the field of energy per se, which is another substantial matter which ought to be debated at another time. I invite the Hon. Member to relate his remarks to Canagrex.

Mr. Thacker: Mr. Speaker, I could read on and on from the list of Petro-Canada subsidiary corporations, but I certainly accept your ruling that it might not be strictly relevant. I think the point has been made. I can tell Members opposite, some of them who come from eastern European countries and should know better because they have friends and relatives who are living and suffering in those countries right now, that this Canagrex legislation is going to be exactly the same.

Mr. Blais: Don't be silly.

Mr. Thacker: It will not be tomorrow; it will be two years or five years down the road, and I will be standing up here reading a list of corporations which are subsidiaries of Canagrex. When the Estimates came in, I stood and asked the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. Gray): "Will this be all?" They were bragging about how it was only a 10 per cent increase over last year. I pointed out how the increases are always up 17 per cent when the Supplementary Estimates come in. He stood up and said "Oh, there will be no Supplementary Estimates. Don't worry about it, Mr. Thacker". Well, in fact we have already had one set of Supplementary Estimates for $1.3 billion. The federal Government spending will be up 17 per cent this year, as it has been for every year recently.

Within a very few short years, Mr. Speaker, Canagrex will have itself subsidiary corporations which will take over more and more of the food industry. The cost, which is the important point, will come out of taxpayers' pockets. Ordinary Canadians will be paying for the high, fancy salaries of dozens and dozens of directors and presidents of these corporations.

One of my amendments to this Bill is to make those salaries public. The Government rejects that because it does not want the ordinary Canadian to see how much some of the Liberal political friends are making in these appointments to jobs as presidents and directors. If the Liberals were not of that mind, Mr. Speaker, why did they not accept my amendment to make that information public? Why would they not put a limitation on the tenure of directors? My amendment would have done that, and the Government is going to reject it. It is just like the situation we found when we got in Government in 1979. Some of the Liberal's best friends had been appointed to powerful positions for ten years, I think in one case it was for 20 years. What kind of Government is that? These appointments should be limited to three years, with perhaps one renewal if they are lucky. After that we would bring other people in because that is a way of renewing and revitalizing these corporations and making them more sensitive. That is one of the amendments we want to make to this Canagrex Bill and it is not there.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, the main point we are trying to make is that these Crown corporations are a sub-Government. They permit an unnatural concentration of power and decision-making authority over the lives of other people, and they do it on a non-accountable basis to Members of Parliament, the elected representatives. If you talk to Canadians on the street, they believe that we as their elected representatives should be exercising some control over these corporations. But we do not exercise that control. The fact of the matter is that the Government backbenchers, the NDP and the Official Opposition have no control over them. They are totally unaccountable to us and to Cabinet, and we have to solve that problem. If the Government would accept these amendments, that would happen.

Hon. J.-J. Blais (Minister of Supply and Services): Mr. Speaker, I will not be speaking very long but I simply wanted to register my views relating to the amendments before us and take issue with the comments made by my friend opposite.

Mr. Huntington: I think you have your nerve speaking on it at all. It is under closure.

Mr. Blais: Mr. Speaker, I get tired, as I am sure most other Members do, of hearing about these immense conspiracies afoot relating to the creation of Crown corporations in order to prevent the Canadian people from learning what is going on. I just cannot imagine that hon. gentleman saying and meaning those comments, especially—

Mr. Thacker: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I look forward to the Minister discussing the 54 subsidiary corporations of Petro-Canada and whether or not that does indicate some conspiracy.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. That is not a point of order.

Mr. Blais: Especially when he knows, Mr. Speaker, that, in accordance with the rules under which we operate in this House, all the annual reports of Crown corporations are automatically referred to committee. Those committees can call upon those particular Crown corporations to come forward and be examined by them. Any amounts that are requested by Crown corporations from appropriations or through votes, approved by this Parliament, must all be reviewed by the parliamentary committees which are responsible—

• (1550)

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): That's not true.

Mr. Blais: —for those individual companies. We saw, in the Canadair question—

Mr. Huntington: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I am sure the Minister does not want to mislead the House with that last statement. Crown corporations are not coming before parliamentary committees for proper examination. Most of them one cannot even identify.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. That is obviously debate.

Mr. Blais: The example in point is Canadair, Mr. Speaker, which was before two committees this morning.

Mr. Huntington: Because it just lost $1.4 billion.

Mr. Blais: It was before the Finance Committee and before the Public Accounts Committee at the request of the individual committees themselves and the Chairmen.

Mr. Taylor: I rise on a point of order. Mr. Speaker, you ruled the Hon. Member for Lethbridge-Foothills (Mr. Thacker) out of order for speaking of this matter. Surely to goodness, Your Honour will not now permit the other side to speak on it.

Mr. Rossi: Go back to sleep.

Mr. Taylor: It's all right for you, but not for anyone else. Let's have the same rules, eh?

Mr. Rossi: Go back to sleep.

An Hon. Member: You were snoring for awhile there.

Mr. Taylor: Let's have the same rules.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. The Chair feels that the Hon. Member for Bow River is quite right. In fact, the Chair was at the point of rising to invite the Minister to relate his remarks to the amendments before the House. The Chair invites all Hon. Members to do just that. It is a testy time, and the Chair is called upon to rule upon these differences, and especially to apply the rules. Surely, experienced parliamentarians would not want the Chair to rise every two or three minutes to remind them what the rules are all about.

Mr. Malone: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. What the Minister is doing is giving his view that Crown corporations are accountable. Coming to the point of order, I just—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): I must immediately indicate that a point of order must have something to do with procedure before the House. It should not relate to points of debate. Therefore, if the Hon. Member for Crowfoot has a point of order, I would like to hear it.

Mr. Huntington: Get to your point of order.

Mr. Malone: I would like to point out, Mr. Speaker, that it would be quite acceptable for the Minister to continue in that vein as long as he quotes from the most recent Report of the Auditor General of Canada who has very carefully documented that thesis.

Mr. Blais: Mr. Speaker, at the outset I want to commend the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan).

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Oh, no!

Mr. Neil: You did that last time.

Mr. Blais: In terms of the Canagrex Bill, you, Mr. Speaker, who have seen the development of this particular Bill, will know that it has had a very long history. There has been a great deal of determination on the part of the Minister of Agriculture. He is promoting the Bill, and has been very flexible in committee on this Bill—

Mr. Huntington: Forgive him, Father, for he knows not what he does.

Mr. Blais: —in order to accommodate a great deal of the criticism which has been brought to our attention by Members of the Opposition. I personally feel that the Minister of Agriculture, who has held this portfolio for a number of years, has really been one of the most progressive Members of the Government. I am very pleased to be able to second him in the efforts he is making relating to this particular legislation.

It is not surprising that such a Bill has a hard time getting through the House. We have heard the howls from the Members of the Opposition. They seem to forget that Canada is an exporting country and that it is one of the four countries of the world which are exporters in agricultural products. As a matter of interest, last year our exports were over $4 billion to the good. We had a net export surplus of over $4.6 billion.

Mr. Huntington: Tell us about finished goods.

Mr. Blais: One of the major agents in securing that export is the Canadian Wheat Board. Anyone who attempts to tell me that the Canadian Wheat Board is somehow a creation of the private sector evidently does not know—

Mr. Thacker: Point of order.

Mr. Blais: —of what he speaks and, indeed, Mr. Speaker—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. The Hon. Member for Lethbridge-Foothills is rising on a point of order.

Mr. Thacker: In terms of procedure, the Hon. Member should know that the U.S. increased its exports by 500 per cent, and the Canadian Wheat Board by 50 per cent in the same comparable period. The United States does not have Crown corporations.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. That is debate.

Mr. Malone: It sure is.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The Minister has the floor.

Mr. Blais: Mr. Speaker, it has been recognized in the International Wheat Market that the Canadian Wheat Board is the most efficient and most competent wheat agency in the market at this particular time.

Mr. Whelan: In the world.

Mr. Blais: No one disputes that fact.

Mr. Huntington: It's the only one.

Mr. Blais: As a result of the presence of the Canadian Wheat Board, wheat farmers in western Canada have been able to bank upon their assets, knowing full well that they have one of the best marketing agencies involved in the marketplace trying to sell their product, and it has been sold quite effectively.

Mr. Neil: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Minister is aware of the fact that the Wheat Board makes use of the private sector to carry out most of its sales.

Mr. Huntington: All of its sales in the private sector.

Mr. Blais: Mr. Speaker, that is exactly what Canagrex will be doing, in any event.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Blais: I would also point out that there is another outfit called the Canadian Dairy Commission—

Mr. Huntington: Yes, it's under criminal investigation.

Mr. Blais: —which, again, is in the international marketplace liquidating some of the surpluses which are generated as a result of the productivity of the Canadian farmer—

Mr. Huntington: Why is the RCMP in there, looking at it?

Mr. Blais: —especially the milk farmer. As a result of its aggressive marketing, it has been able to liquidate large surpluses of powdered milk—and my friend, the Minister of Agriculture, will be able to support me in that—and other industrial milk products.

Mr. Huntington: You've picked the wrong corporation.

Mr. Blais: In effect, it has been very aggressive in doing that, and it has liquidated those surpluses, which the Europeans have had greater difficulty in doing, and which, indeed, the Americans as well have had greater difficulty is doing.

Mr. Thacker: Mr. Speaker, the CDC is so aggressive that it has had to have an Auditor General's audit, and it is being investigated by the RCMP. That's a great corporation.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. That is definitely an abuse of the invocation of the point of order.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): The Minister has been abusing it. Tell the truth.

Mr. Huntington: What motion are you speaking to?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): May we have some order, please? The best discipline is self-discipline. I would invite Hon. Members to abide by the rules and traditions of the House.

Mr. Malone: Ask Whelan to resign.

Mr. Blais: Mr. Speaker, I trust that the interventions by Members of the Opposition will not be taken from my allotted time. I know that I am making some telling points because they are jumping up like jackrabbits.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Telling what? Telling the truth?

An Hon. Member: Like jackasses.

Mr. Blais: Yes, perhaps. Maybe that is why they have to have their backsides refreshed from time to time.

I just hope that the philosophy which is being vented today by Hon. Members from the Tory Party who participated in the debate will be the views which will be advanced during the next federal election, because there is nothing that I would enjoy more than a repeat of the Petro-Canada debate. We know the exact result visited upon the Tories who were trying to defend their Government at the time of the 1980 election.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Huntington: How many Liberals got elected in the West?

Mr. Blais: Having said that, it does not surprise me that the Minister of Agriculture has had a great deal of difficulty with Canagrex, because there has been a tendency on the part of the Conservative Opposition, the real Conservative Opposition, to react on most issues, as it is their wont, to react whenever there is an initiative taken to enhance our export capacity and capabilities.

Mr. Huntington: It's raw socialism and you know it, J.J., and you're all for it.

Mr. Blais: Mr. Speaker, that has been endemic in the Tory Party since the national policy of John A. MacDonald. I would recommend to the hon. gentlemen opposite—

Mr. Rossi: Where are you going?

Mr. Huntington: Right here. I won't be very far away.

Mr. Blais: —and even to the hon. gentleman who is leaving his seat, to read a recent book entitled "Not for Export" by Professor Glen Williams of Carleton University, wherein he explains the Canadian attitude toward export. The attitude of Canada and Canadian producers has been to satisfy the domestic market. We have had this particular weakness of not wanting to enter into the international marketplace. Indeed, we have suffered substantially as a result of that in the food producing sector. In effect, we are in a deficit position. We tend to export our agricultural products in an unprocessed form or after very slight processing. That has been our tendency because we have basically wanted to satisfy our domestic market. That has been one reason why we have experienced some huge deficits in the recent past in terms of finished products and manufactured products.

• (1600)

In effect, the attitude of the Tory Party vis-à-vis Canagrex is exactly that. The arguments which they have advanced are inaccurate. There were two very important amendments to Bill C-85 made by the Government in the committee with the expressed purpose of alleviating any fears that the industry might have regarding this important piece of legislation.

The main issue was the buy and sell provision. It was felt that this new Canagrex corporation would somehow compete with the private sector. We said time and again that Canagrex would be there to complement the private sector activity, not to compete with it. We are trying to introduce Canagrex in order to enhance the ability of Canadian agricultural producers to produce by providing them with an additional market. Its purpose is not to get involved in competition with the private sector. At no time has there been any indication of wanting to involve it in the private sector.

I happen to know of what I speak because indeed I run the Canadian Commercial Corporation through the Export Supply Directorate. We do not compete with the private sector. We are in the international marketplace complementing the activities of the private sector. I have asked the private sector to identify one instance when we were competing with them in terms of exports. Not once has there been an indication of any competition. Quite to the contrary, we have enhanced the ability of the small business sector in Canada and the manufacturing sector to enter into the international marketplace to market their goods. As a matter of fact, last year we increased the exports by 34 per cent to make over one-half billion dollars in exports from Canadian manufacturers. It is that sort of organization that we envisage with Canagrex, not a corporation that competes with the private sector.

There is nothing in this Bill to indicate that this company will be competing with the private sector. It is not in the tradition of Crown corporations in Canada to compete with the private sector. Of course, there are some minor exceptions to that rule. But they were introduced as a result of the Canadian Government and the Canadian people feeling that perhaps their participation in certain sectors was not sufficient to ensure that the national interest is protected.

The provisions of this particular Bill do not allow Canagrex to get involved in the production of food products or own land for the purpose of farming. That is clearly set out in the Bill. It cannot produce or get involved in the production of food.

Necessary changes were made to ensure that Canagrex will only act at the request of or in coordination with organizations, corporations or individuals who wish to take advantage of the opportunities offered under this legislation. Canagrex is saying that it cannot go out into the marketplace unless it is asked to do so. I should know what the Minister is talking about because that is exactly how my operation functions. We cannot go into the marketplace unless we are requested to do so. Sometimes I feel that this is a restriction, but nevertheless it is a provision in the Bill.

In effect, those fears that are manifested by Members opposite when talking about dark conspiracies and about the creation of Crown corporations that will somehow dictate to farmers what they should be doing in the marketplace are completely false.

Mr. Huntington: Sheep, sheep.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The Chair has extended time to the Hon. Minister because of the frequent points of order. I would invite another Hon. Member to rise.

Mr. Terry Sargeant (Selkirk-Interlake): Mr. Speaker, it is indeed a pleasure to rise this afternoon and speak on this very important Bill. I hope to return the level of the debate to some form of sanity, because while it has been rather interesting it has been somewhat disappointing to hear some of the ridiculous statements that have been made from all sides.

I was especially surprised at some of the comments made by my friend, the Hon. Member for Lethbridge-Foothills (Mr. Thacker), who has since left the House briefly. He talked about the Liberal and NDP alliance. The Hon. Member for Lethbridge-Foothills is a relatively intelligent person whom I know reasonably well. We attended French classes together for a number of months when I first came here. Indeed, I might point out that if my colleague, the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River (Mr. Skelly), was correct in suggesting that the Hon. Member is gearing up for a last minute bid for the leadership of his Party, I would suggest he has probably the third or fourth best capability of any of the candidates to speak the second language of this country.

Since the Hon. Member talked about the Liberal NDP alliance, I wanted to point out to him that during the life of this Parliament the Conservative Party has voted with the Liberal Government twice as often as the NDP has voted with the Government. Let me also point out the kind of legislation on which the Conservatives have supported the Liberals. They support the Liberals when it is in the interest of the banks in Canada, the oil companies in Canada and big business. When legislation deals with removing collective bargaining for many workers in this country how do they vote then?

Mr. Skelly: Still with the Liberals.

Mr. Sargeant: Still with the Liberals. When it comes to removing clauses from Government legislation that remove collective bargaining for workers in this country, the Conservatives certainly do not vote with this Party in opposition to the Government. The Hon. Member for Lethbridge-Foothills also said that we were selling out the West by supporting Canagrex.

Mr. Malone: That is right.

Mr. Sargeant: I would point out to my friend, the Hon. Member for Crowfoot (Mr. Malone), that this piece of legislation has the support of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, which represents 300,000 farmers in this country. It has the support of the wheat pools in western Canada, which represent virtually every wheat grower in western Canada.

Who is selling out the West with this piece of legislation? Who has held it up for some three years now? The Conservative Party is selling out the West.

My friend, the Hon. Member for Lethbridge-Foothills, said that he was fearful of Canagrex growing and that it might become too big. What is wrong with that if Canagrex grows and helps farmers? Why are we here if not to help the people of this country? There is no single group in Canada which needs help more than farmers.

I am perplexed over the position the Conservative Party has taken to this piece of legislation. Today they are attempting to remove the buy and sell provisions in the Bill. According to Conservative logic, they would set up a company like Air Canada then take away its right to fly.

Let me review the history of this Bill to see how it has progressed over the three years it has been delayed by the Conservatives. This Bill began rather innocently when the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) asked for unanimous consent to waive the normal 48 hours' notice needed to introduce new Bills in the House. He wanted to bring it forward in order to discuss it with agricultural Ministers and representatives at an agricultural outlook conference in the fall or early winter of 1981.

At the time, the Conservatives greeted this Bill with enthusiasm. Indeed, the then House Leader of that Party, the now temporary, soon to be former, Opposition Leader (Mr. Nielsen), had this to say:

● (1610)

Madam Speaker, we on this side are delighted to give our consent to the introduction of an idea initiated by the Honourable Member for Elgin (Mr. Wise) when he was in office. We in this Party express our gratitutde to the Minister for perpetuating the idea of the Honourable Member for Elgin in this legislation.

Actually, the Hon. Member for the Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) at that time was not exactly correct in his comments on the origins of Canagrex. It was really the Ontario Federation of Agriculture that pushed to have an export agency for farm products created by the federal Government.

We in this Party have supported Canagrex since the beginning. However, we have been mindful of problems with it. We have been mindful of past abuses perpetuated particularly by the present Government. We have put in certain riders. We want to ensure that Canagrex really does benefit the farmers in the long run. One idea is that we insist Canagrex be controlled by the producers. It must be staffed by qualified professionals, not Liberal hacks. Canagrex must not get into the business of pushing inappropriate exports to the Third World that diminish those countries' abilities to be self-reliant. All of these concerns are matters largely of policy, not legislation.

I go back to some of the initial speeches in the House that were very supportive of this legislation from all three Parties when the Bill was first introduced. I am told that my friend, the Hon. Member for Provencher (Mr. Epp), who happens to be my neighbour in Manitoba, was rather supportive of Canagrex and suggested at the time it would probably help a group of farmers in his constituency who were having difficulty selling plane loads of calves to the State of Israel. He looked forward to the establishment of Canagrex because it would help his constituents sell their produce abroad. At that time the Hon. Member for Elgin (Mr. Wise) criticized the Minister of Agriculture for the fact that the proposed agency was to be given only a fraction of the budget and manpower originally proposed by the Hon. Member for Elgin when he was Minister of Agriculture. It was not until the Hon. Member for Etobicoke Centre (Mr. Wilson), one of the Bay Street boys, decided that this was a threat to free enterprise. It was at that point, when some of the big corporations that feed the Conservative Party, like Canada Packers, Northern Sales and other such corporations, got into the act, that the Conservatives suddenly did a turnaround on this.

Some of the overkill on this legislation has really been something to behold. We heard just a few moments ago from the Hon. Member for Capilano (Mr. Huntington) who goes nuts over it. He has this fear that Canagrex will collectivize Canada's agriculture. He talks about a state monopoly for the import and export of agricultural products. This is absolutely looney, Mr. Speaker. I think probably the looniest statement that has come out in this debate came from the Hon. Member for Assinboia (Mr. Gustafson) some time ago. I am not sure when it was, but he made this suggestion:

> Say that the president of Socialist International put out a decree that all members, the Communist countries and the socialist countries, only buy state-to-state. Would not Canagrex become a level to automatically eliminate any private trading company within Canada? In my opinion Canagrex will give the socialists and Communist world a tremendous lever.

So said the Hon. Member for Assiniboia some time ago. As The Globe and Mail said at that time, that statement took the level of debate to a new low of comedy in this House.

An Hon. Member: Tory low.

Mr. Sargeant: I see, Mr. Speaker, that you are cutting me off. I think my comments should make it rather obvious that we are supportive of this piece of legislation and really do hope it works to the benefit of all Canadian farmers.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. It would be wrong for the Hon. Member to suggest that the Speaker is cutting him off. I simply inform him that his time has expired. The Hon. Member for Burin-St. George's (Mr. Simmons).

[Translation]

Mr. Roger Simmons (Burin-St. George's): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to express my support for this Bill, because Canagrex is really the best thing that could happen to this country.

[English]

This Bill will facilitate the promotion—

[Translation]

This is just to show that some Newfies are able to communicate with Quebecers. When my good friend, the Member for St. John's West (Mr. Crosbie), becomes Leader, he will need someone who understands French and can translate from French into Newfie.

[English]

This Bill will facilitate the promotion and trade of agricultural produce.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): And Liberals.

Mr. Simmons: There is no sinister plan here. I say this especially for the information of my good friend from Capilano and of my good friend from Lethbridge-Foothills. There is no sinister plan here. You can search for it all you want. If the hon. gentlemen opposite want to know how sinister this proposal is, I will give them a clue. There is already in existence a plan equally sinister, equally diabolical and equally all-embracing. It is known as the Canadian Wheat Board.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Mayer: How much wheat do you grow in Newfoundland?

Mr. Simmons: That is the sinister plan. I am seeing first-hand what can happen when there is no co-ordinating strategy to promote abroad the produce from a primary industry. I am thinking of the fishing industry and the chaos in which we find ourselves in Atlantic Canada, particularly in Newfoundland, because of the absence of any co-ordinated strategy.

I say to my good friend from Vancouver that I do not expect a private importer to be excited about public exports, but I ask him at least to listen to what is being said because he may learn something, the real reason why we are doing what we do. I say to him that there is a good parallel in the fishing industry where things would have been less miserable for the fishermen and the fish plant workers on the South Coast of Newfoundland, in parts of Nova Scotia, in parts of Quebec, if we had had the kind of co-operative marketing strategy being proposed under the Canagrex Bill. I cannot find anything especially diabolical or sinister about this Bill.

On the subject of the fishing industry, if I have one criticism with the Kirby Task Force Report that was presented some months ago, it is, it has been and will continue to be, that Doctor Kirby and his associates failed to bite the bullet on the important issue of export marketing. They failed to do what needs to be done in so far as the sale of fish products abroad is concerned.

The Hon. Member for Capilano (Mr. Huntington) attempts, as he so often does, to spread great fears about creeping socialism, to connote and represent the Canagrex Bill as another power grabbing effort. I ask him whether he has not looked at the very agency to which I made reference a moment ago, the Canadian Wheat Board. Why does the Hon. Member not tell us just how much power the major food retail chains have in this country? Is that what he wants to happen in this particular sector as well? There are five major retail chains controlling 70 per cent of retail food sales in the country. Is that private enterprise at its best?

• (1620)

Mr. Malone: So what?

Mr. Simmons: I hear the Hon. Member saying, "So what?". I am against it, that is what. Perhaps the Hon. Member for Capilano should tell us about the four large grain trading multinational companies—Cargill, Dryfus, Bunge and Continental.

Mr. Malone: So what?

Mr. Simmons: Again I hear the Hon. Member. I know his Party has long been in the pockets of multinationals, but that does not mean that we have to be in the pockets of the multinationals. Thank God we have that great Crown corporation.

Mr. Mayer: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I wonder whether the Hon. Member would accept a question.

Mr. Simmons: That is not a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Would the Hon. Member accept a question at this point?

Mr. Simmons: Mr. Speaker, I have very limited time. At the end of my ten minutes I would be delighted to accept questions for an hour or so.

Thank God we have that great Crown corporation called the Canadian Wheat Board. It was brought in by a Tory Government, albeit it was comprised of a bunch of Tories who had a lot more foresight than the modern Tories with whom we deal in the House. The Canadian Wheat Board was constituted by a Tory Government of former days. These Tories in their day gave the Canadian Wheat Board powers to buy and sell. In the words of Dan Morgan in his book "The Merchants of Grain", the Canadian Wheat Board is the most sophisticated grain marketing system in the world.

Mr. Thacker: You should try living under it.

Mr. Simmons: What are they against over there? They are against progress. We have known that for a long time. What in particular are they against?

Mr. Mayer: What do you know about grain?

Mr. Simmons: They are afraid of the possibility that one day Canagrex will become as successful in its mandate as the Canadian Wheat Board has become in respect of its mandate. That is their concern.

Let us get back to the persons who will be involved in the operation of this agency. They will be persons who come from the farming community. What do the Tories have against them?

Mr. Malone: They will be Liberals.

Mr. Simmons: They will be processors, businessmen and professional people who have an interest in Canada and have Canada at heart. They will have expertise in the production, processing, shipping and marketing sectors. They will be Canadians working together as partners for the benefit of Canadians. I do not find that sinister. I think it is a good formula, and that is why I support it with such enthusiasm this afternoon.

Mr. Thacker: You would support anything.

Mr. Simmons: I say to the Hon. Member for Lethbridge-Foothills (Mr. Thacker) that I cannot support anything. For example, I cannot support his candidate for the leadership of the Tory Party.

Since 1971 Canadian wheat sales have skyrocketed from $832 million to $4.25 billion 11 years later in 1982, an increase or more than 500 per cent. How could the Tories possibly deprive other sectors of Canadian agriculture of that kind of export benefit?

The Hon. Member for Lethbridge-Foothills wanted to launch a fairly wide-ranging debate on Crown corporations. This is not the time to do that, but I look forward with enthusiasm to the day that he and I can debate that particular issue in the House of Commons. What does he have against the principle of Crown corporations? Is he also against Petro-Canada? If so, is he now articulating the latest position of the Tory Party that has been for Petro-Canada and against Petro-Canada? Is he for the great Canadian Broadcasting Corporation? Is he against the Canadian Wheat Board? Why did he not tell us how many subsidiaries of the Canadian Wheat Board there were? Why did he not take the time today to run through the list of subsidiaries of the Canadian Wheat Board? It would not have taken very long at all, and it would have been much more relevant to the item under debate now. He talked about the appointment of friends. I can only say to him that we on this side of the House have a nice problem in that respect. We find ourselves appointing friends to many boards. The reason is that we have so many friends it is difficult to appoint competent people to boards without appointing some of our friends.

Those poor reactionary Tories. Pavlov would have been pleased because they respond in Pavlovian style to everything. If we are for it, they are agin it. I invite them to put aside their partisanship and support a good Bill which will work to the good of Canadian agriculture in the years ahead.

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, first of all I want to deal with one or two comments that were made by Government Members. A few moments ago the Hon. Minister said that we had $4.6 billion in export trade. Yes, but I add that we accomplished that without Canagrex. That was done by private industry, and that is exactly what we want to do. Also he asked why we were against export. We are not against export. We are not against an export agency. An Hon. Member of the New Democratic Party indicated that we were favouring some items to which we object. We are not opposed to exporting. We believe in exporting. We want to help exporting but we think it should be done through private enterprise. This Bill is putting another handcuff on free enterprise. This is what Government Members are doing.

Private enterprisers have put money into this area. They have been carrying out the export business. They have a lot of money invested in it. Now they will have to compete against Government money. Now they will have to compete against taxes which they themselves pay. They will now have to compete against that type of thing. Hon. Members of the Government and of the New Democratic Party think that that is okay. We do not think it is okay. In a democracy Members should reflect the thinking of the people who sent us here.

The farmers I represent do not want Canagrex. I will voice their views whether or not Liberal or NDP Members like it. The misrepresentation from the other side of the House and from the New Democratic Party certainly indicates that they have never read Bill C-85.

One Minister said, "Show me where there will be any conflict with private enterprise". Well, why will this corporation purchase agricultural products and food products? Why will this corporation package, process, store, ship, insure, import, export or sell or otherwise dispose of products purchased by it? It is going into business against people who have invested money. It will use the tax dollars paid by these people to fight them. That is what the Government is trying to do. It has done it before. It will do it again.

I heard Hon. Members talking about the Alberta Wheat Board. The Alberta Wheat Board has done many good things, but it was not put in at the objection of half the farmers of western Canada. It was put in because farmers wanted a marketing agency. This Bill is going in with half the agricultural people of Canada opposed to it, with half the nation opposed to it. I have difficulty finding one person in Bow River who would support this Bill.

The Government wants to ignore their representations. They want to ignore them and tell them what is good for them. People from the cities and from the East want to tell western farmers, who spent their lives on the farm, what is good for them. They know what is good for them. They want to do their own marketing and to conduct their own businesses. This is why they do not want Canagrex.

The powers given in this Bill are something terrific. The over-all affect of our amendments would cure the problems. We want the Bill but we do not want the clauses which will ruin the industry. We do not want the clauses which will give the corporation the power, if some future Government wants to do it, to take over the entire food industry. The powers are in the Bill. All they have to do is to read them. They are tremendous powers.

I see someone opposite shaking his head. Let me tell him that I want to deal with one or two more points. The Alberta Report carried a story on May 17 entitled, "The Food Grab—Ottawa's Next Big Play". On the front cover of the magazine there is a huge hand posing over the farmhouse, the cattle, the hogs, the chickens, the livestock and the land. It is the great, big grab. There is power in this Bill for the corporation to take over a farm and to take personal property without even a court trial. That is what the NDP and Liberal backbenchers are supporting. If they do not think that is so, there is a section here which gives the corporation tremendous power to acquire by foreclosure, other proceedings or in any other manner, to go in and confiscate. It can take real property and any personal property, mortgaged to Canagrex. It can sell, lease or otherwise dispose of such property.

What kind of power do we want this outfit to have? Some farmer will not only have his house and his land taken away, but they will go in and take the jewels from his wife's neck. That is what it will do. It is going to take personal property.

Do Members opposite want those kinds of things in this Bill? That is the type of legislation they will pass. We do not want that and neither do the farmers. Someone mentioned Alberta legislation. The people of Alberta trust the Alberta Government. The people of Canada do not trust this Government.

Mr. Althouse: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Since the Hon. Member is referring to the section dealing with mortgages, is he now telling us that his Party has changed its mind on the ability of individuals to sign mortgages and to enter into contracts.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. If the Hon. Member wishes to put a question to the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor), he should first inquire whether that Hon. Member will accept a question.

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, we are concerned about the farmer having his goods grabbed, taken away without a proper court procedure, confiscated. The power is in the Bill to do that.

With regard to free enterprise, it can pay to producers and processors a subsidy on any agricultural food product. They are going to pay a subsidy. They want to entice the farmers by saying they will pay them public money. This will affect those competitors who have been carrying out work in the export industry.

The Albert Report is noted for its accuracy and honesty. It shows the huge hand of the Government hanging over, something that will stick in the minds of those who read that magazine. They can buy, sell, store, process agricultural products, acquire real and personal property, taking it by foreclosure or any other proceeding. That is the type of thing we are trying to correct.

There is no use talking in this House. You cannot carry an argument here. When the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) says, "Jump in the lake", the clones over there jump in the lake and the NDP Members are right behind them. They are all swimming in the same hole. Talk about the same bed, they are all in the same hole.

Maclean's, our national magazine, said the same thing. They say that Canagrex can grow like a cancerous cell until it gets wide, sweeping powers which permit the actual control of the entire food industry. The power is in this Bill. Just read the clauses. The trouble with Members opposite is that they do not read the clauses. They just accept what the Minister tells them and vote accordingly. That is exactly what they do.

I see the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) has come into the House for a change. I am glad he has. He should have been here for the entire debate. It is his legislation.

Mr. Whelan: Having heard you once, Gordon, I have heard you always.

Mr. Taylor: The habit of this Government is to have only one or two Ministers here. They do not want to hear what the Members say. What this Minister is trying to do is to build up a little nestegg for himself. He is getting near retirement age. He wants a resting place that pays $100,000 a year. He wants to be the president of Canagrex.

Mr. Whelan: Mr. Speaker, maybe the Hon. Member would like to tell us what his nestegg is, with his provincial pension and his federal pay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order.

Mr. Taylor: I earned mine. I did not accept a job that pays $100,000. What is more, I even paid some of the money back to the Crown. Do you?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order.

Mr. Taylor: It is all right for you to get up and start talking about pensions.

Mr. Simmons: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I thought the Minister was rising to make this point of order. Since he has not done it, I will. Immediately before the Hon. Member rose, the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor) imputed motives to the Minister of Agriculture. That is not permissible. Under the rules of this House it is not permissible to impute motives to another Member of the Chamber. He must withdraw that attempt to impute motives. I suggest that the Chair invite the Hon. Member to do that or else fling him out of the House where he belongs.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order.

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, if the Member thinks I was way out, he should look at the record of one of his own Liberal Members when we came into power. How much did he get paid to leave his job at Air Canada? How much public money did he get paid, money he should never have got at all? Another thing, the directors of this—

Mr. Simmons: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege. I, as one Member of this Chamber, am not going to sit here and watch this smear job on the Minister of Agriculture who is doing his duty as the Minister responsible for introducing this Bill. What he does when he leaves this Chamber is his own sweet business. However, under our rules and our well established tradition no Member can rise in this Chamber and impute motives to another Member of this Chamber, Minister or not. That is what the Hon. Member for Bow River has done. That is low, even for him. I invite him to withdraw. I suggest to the Chair that he be made to withdraw. He cannot stand here and impute motives to another Member of this Chamber. With his long experience in the Alberta House and here, he should know that. I believe he knows better. I invite him to have the decency to stand and withdraw what he said.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. The Hon. Member for Burin-St. George's (Mr. Simmons) claims privilege. The Chair is of the opinion that that is hardly privilege. The Chair does not see in what way the remarks of the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor) hamper the Hon. Member for Burin-St. George's in the exercise of his mandate as a Member of Parliament. In any case, the Minister of Agriculture is in the Chamber. The Chair has not seen the Minister rise and protest. The Chair must therefore conclude that the Minister of Agriculture does not in any way feel slighted. However, in the opinion of the Chair I thought we were doing rather well on Canagrex and the amendments up to that point in the debate. I invite the Hon. Member for Bow River to continue along that line.

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, this Bill provides for a president and one or two vice-presidents. I am suggesting it may well be that the Minister may become the president. What is derogatory about that? That is what the Liberals do all the time, putting their own Members as head of things. Has it suddenly become wrong? I would not be a bit surprised if the directors were Mackasey, Buchanan, and who is the other fellow? Gillespie. I would not be surprised if they were made directors. The people of Canada would not be surprised. That is the kind of thing they do all the time. The Members' conscience is hurting him. I want to get on with Canagrex.

The farmers of Canada, including those in my constituency, do not like this Bill the way it is. If these amendments are accepted, it can become an exporting agency. Without these amendments, the corporation will have the power to take over farms and the food industry, becoming the master. The Government has done this in energy, it has done this in culture. Now it wants to do it in the food industry. What is the Government trying to do, make the people of Canada bond slaves? What kind of society is the Government trying to build? If it does not want to do this, why is it laying the ground work for some Government of the future to do it? That is what Canagrex is doing. The powers are there and no one in the Government can deny them. Read the Bill. Let the people read the Bill. Farmers have read it. That is why they are writing letters to me that say: "Whatever you do, stop Canagrex. We in the country cannot live under Canagrex."

• (1640)

Mr. Whelan: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. You, Mr. Speaker, commented that I was present in the House but perhaps did not raise a point of order or a point of privilege when the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor) spoke about my intentions of becoming head of Canagrex and creating this body only for myself. Nothing is further from the truth than that. I have no desire to be the head of Canagrex although I know that I am fully capable of being the head of Canagrex. I know there are other people who are just as capable as I am. Publications in Alberta have said that the motive behind Canagrex is that I want a job for myself. That is not a fact. That is an untruth.

Hon. W. Bennett Campbell (Minister of Veterans Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I welcome the opportunity to make some brief remarks at report stage of the Canagrex Bill. I have been present in the House since two o'clock this afternoon and have been listening very intently to the debate. I would like to discuss Canagrex in the context of the Province and the area of the country which I have the privilege to represent. I might say, Mr. Speaker, that it is the only Province in the country where the primary industry of the Province is agriculture.

Mr. Malone: That is false.

Mr. Campbell (Cardigan): It is true.

Mr. Malone: No, what about Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Alberta?

Mr. Campbell (Cardigan): But not the primary industry.

Mr. Malone: Yes.

Mr. Campbell (Cardigan): Well, Mr. Speaker, then at least we can share in the industry. But I do want to comment within that context. I have listened very intently to the discussion this afternoon. Members of the Official Opposition have indicated to the House that the Canagrex Bill really sets out to do three things, two of which they can support, the third of which they have objections to.

The first objective of Canagrex is the question of promotion and marketing. I think that, generally speaking, most Members of the House can accept that particular objective. Coming from a Province as small as Prince Edward Island, I can say that within the Province there are numerous producers and quite a number of exporters who are not in a financial position to promote and identify markets for themselves, particularly dealing with the major export, that is, potatoes, and more particularly seed potatoes. Opportunities do exist for the export of these products to many countries around the world.

I am certainly pleased by the report that I have received dealing with trade surplus in agricultural products, but I am concerned that there are opportunities there which are not being taken advantage of. After eliminating wheat and oil seed from that surplus and dealing only with non-grain, what is left? We are left with a $2 billion deficit. This should indicate to all Members that there are opportunities which are not being taken advantage of.

Exporters and promoters in a Province the size of mine are in no position to travel to the Middle East or to the Caribbean to promote their products. They simply cannot do it. They cannot afford to do it. Yet the opportunities are there, so from my perspective I support wholeheartedly the promotion and marketing aspects of Canagrex.

Let us look at the financing aspect of Canagrex. If there has been a problem in terms of exports in many areas of the country, it has been the inability to put a financing package together. I will give you a very real example of this, Mr. Speaker. An exporter from my Province had the opportunity to make a sale of seed potatoes to a Caribbean country. He went to the banking system to try to put a financing package together, and he was successful in doing so. But do you know what it cost the potato producers of my Province to do that, Mr. Speaker? It cost them eight cents per hundred above and beyond the going interest rate. Why? Because the country to which the product was exported happened to have a low credit rating. The additional cost of that interest charge was passed on to the suppliers, the farmers for that particular package. So here is an excellent opportunity for Canagrex to play an important role in exporting.

Dealing with the buying and selling aspects of Canagrex, there is no question that concerns were expressed about this. While I do not want to dispute any comment made in the House, I must draw something to the attention of all Hon. Members. With respect to the comment made by the Hon. Member for Capilano (Mr. Huntington) who said that Canagrex has been brought forward in the dying hours of the House at a time when closure is being invoked to force it through, I would ask you, Mr. Speaker, when this legislation was first introduced in the House. As I recall, it was first introduced in December of 1981.

Mr. Taylor: January.

Mr. Campbell (Cardigan): All right, January, 1982. So this legislation has been under discussion on a relatively ongoing basis for some 16 or 17 months. Yet it still has not gone beyond report stage.

Let us deal with the buying and selling aspects of Canagrex. Most Canadian Crown corporations have that capacity. The Hon. Member for Bow River can tell us that the Crown corporation in his own Province has the ability to buy and sell because there are situations when it is necessary for it to have that ability. However, to address that particular concern, amendments have been accepted by the Government. When can buying and selling powers be activated? They can be activated in only two instances. The first instance is when Canagrex is requested to do so by a developer, an entrepreneur or an exporter. The second instance is on a state-to-state package. Again, I—

Mr. Malone: That is the point.

Mr. Campbell (Cardigan): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member has said that that is the point. Let me give him a very excellent example of how Canagrex could have ensured an export deal for the Province of Prince Edward Island. Officials of one of the Middle East countries said: "We want to buy seed potatoes and we want to buy Prince Edward Island seed potatoes, but we will not deal with the individual seller because the package has been put together by the Department of Agriculture of our country and we would like to deal on a government-to-government basis." Do you know what happened, Mr. Speaker? The deal was never signed because the instrument to facilitate it did not exist.

How could this deal have taken place? Canagrex would act on behalf of the exporter. Canagrex would in fact buy the product from the exporter and sell it to the Government agency in the other country. To me, that makes perfect sense. I find it very difficult to understand the objections of Members of the Official Opposition. I do not say this in any partisan or political sense. I am being very sincere in my attempt to understand the objections to the Bill made by Members of the Official Opposition.

There have been instances where valid concerns have been expressed and, from my perspective, those concerns have been addressed by limiting the powers of Canagrex to act when requested to do so and on a state-to-state basis. We in the House have been led to believe that, all of a sudden, Crown corporations are taboo. We have been led to believe that a Crown corporation is something that we should not entertain, something that should not be created. Yet where have successes taken place with in much of the agricultural sector? They have taken place in areas where Crown corporations exist. In the Province of Prince Edward Island, there would be severe problems in the dairy industry if it were not for the Canadian Dairy Corporation. In the hog area we have a hog board and it is a stable area. What do we have in beef, anything? No, we have problems. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, from my perspective, I fail to understand why, in the manufacturing area, we can have a Crown corporation which has worked extremely successfully in identifying opportunities for our Canadian manufacturers, and yet in our own area of agriculture, where such a great potential exists, we are prepared to say we should not do that. The private sector in many areas of agriculture is doing extremely well and we encourage it to continue on. However, let us not destroy the mechanism which can enable that particular sector of our Canadian economy, which has such great potential, to realize that potential and to realize it in a very real way.

• (1650)

Mr. Thacker: A point of order, Mr. Speaker. I believe there is some time left in the Hon. Member's ten minutes. I wonder if he would accept a question?

Mr. Campbell (Cardigan): Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Thacker: Mr. Speaker, I wonder what the Hon. Minister would say to the evidence that the committee had that Industry, Trade and Commerce was providing some pretty good service in the area of assisting agriculture? It has the PEMD project which provides for specific project bidding, market identification, participation in trade fairs, incoming foreign buyers, export consortia. In short, we have a whole bureaucracy in the Government right now. As well, we have financing provisions and others in the Export Development Corporation which could help these people. Why do we need a whole new corporation with all these enormous powers, duplication and expense?

Mr. Campbell (Cardigan): Mr. Speaker,, I believe the answer to that question is a very simple one. The Export Development Corporation and Industry, Trade and Commerce have a very clear mandate to assist the manufacturer in our country to realize his full potential. However, I fail to see why we are against setting up a parallel operation which can help one of the areas where we probably have the greatest potential, and that is in agriculture. One of the difficulties, as I understand, in the export development area, and in the mandate of Industry, Trade and Commerce, is that one of the areas which has been excluded is the area of agricultural products. Therefore, we have been having problems in that area in a very real way. All I am saying, Mr. Speaker, is that if Industry, Trade and Commerce can complement the thrust of this particular Bill, so much the better. Let us have an organization, however, which can direct its full attention, its full focus and its full effort to take full advantage of what I said right at the very beginning, the $2 billion opportunity which exists for agriculture in our country today.

Mr. Donald W. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the comments made by the Minister of Veterans Affairs (Mr. Campbell). However, I believe that in making his case he has downgraded or neglected—perhaps "neglected" would be the better word—the services which are already provided by the trade commissioners service which is composed of members of the foreign service who are posted abroad to promote and help market Canadian products. That has been their mandate and they have earned the respect of Canadian producers throughout the world. I have, upon occasion, acted in the absence of a foreign trade commissioner in my office, by performing in that capacity and receiving a load of cattle in Central America at a time when there was a group of Ontario cattle producers who had the initiative to carry forward and get their cattle into the Central American market. I went down there to help them. They did all the groundwork themselves. There was a bit of prestige involved, I suppose, by the Ambassador going out to help them off-load the cattle and get them to market. That is promotion, if you like, but that sort of operation should not be downgraded. That part of the work is being done in the agricultural field as well as in other fields.

However, Mr. Speaker, I am delighted today in taking part in this debate because it is not often that one has his comments cut off short at six o'clock by the clock on one day in one particular debate and is able to carry them on the following day in another debate. That is exactly what has happened to me today. I had about four minutes last evening, Mr. Speaker, in which to speak about the problems of responsibility of Crown corporations and the dangers which lie within them, and that is one of the elements in our debate today. We are talking about these corporations getting into buying and selling and that sort of thing.

I am sure that many of the Hon. Members on the other side of the House have not read this particular Bill and realize the dangers which lie within it. Nor, Mr. Speaker, does it appear that they have seen or examined in any way at all the proliferation, the spawning nature, of a Crown corporation once it gets into the hands of an ambitious bureaucracy which does not have to come back to the House of Commons or Parliament to account for its expenditures and its operations.

I wonder how many Members could tell me, including the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan), how many corporations are under the general direction, fully or partially, of Canadian National Railways, a Crown corporation? I just happened to add them up. I bet it would surprise the Minister to learn that there are 87 of them. This is one of the dangers, Mr. Speaker, of which we must be aware. CN has 87 proliferated parts. This is not Canagrex, Mr. Speaker, this is "Canaworms". And it is just twisting around like that, just waiting to get out and proliferate. The Minister knows that if you cut a worm, it makes two worms, does it not? If you cut the two worms, then you have four worms.

An Hon. Member: No, you do not.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Yes, you do.

Mr. Neil: They are thinking of the wrong kind of worms. We know the kind.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): That is right, we know the kind. This is basically the problem which has me deeply concerned, the proliferation of this particular Canagrex or "can a worms" as I prefer to call it. I feel that we should also bear in mind that the buying and selling, and some of the other functions assigned to the corporation, could all too easily, I say to you, Mr. Speaker, and through you to the Minister, lead us into the collective farm development, which, I hope, we all deplore in the Soviet Union and which cannot produce food at the same rate and as well as does private enterprise in Canada. I am told by someone who knows that about 22 per cent of the agricultural land in the Soviet Union is in the hands of private enterprisers, individuals; the rest is in the hands of the state. But that 22 per cent which is in the hands of individual enterprisers who are committed to their soil and get out of that soil what they know that soil can produce, produces five times as much as that 78 per cent of land held by people who have no interest in the soil. This is the sort of thing, Mr. Speaker, that we are facing down the road if this "Canaworms" gets to become law. This is the fear which Canadians have.

None of us knows how many Crown corporations there are in this country. I have run across four different numbers. I will wager the Minister of Agriculture could not tell me how many Crown corporations there are in Canada. I have read the Treasury Board report, for example, which recently came out, where 315 are listed. The Hon. Member for Scarborough East (Mr. Gilchrist) asked that question on the Order Paper. The reply was that there were 179 Crown corporations. Now, was that a lie? It must have been. That or the respondent was ignorant. That is possible, of course. But the Minister signed the answer saying that there was only 179 Crown corporations. The Auditor General, on the other hand, on page 49 of his report of March 31, 1982, says there were 306. Then I see that Charles Lynch, in a report in The Citizen, on June 1, reckons there are 320. So we have 315 on the one hand, or 179, or 306, or 320. I do not think we need any more Crown corporations in this country under this Government.

• (1700)

Someone mentioned the number of Crown corporations under Petro-Canada. I started to go through that and it immediately seriously worried me. Then there is Canadair, which is now up on the block, if that is the right place. Well, it should have its head chopped off, having a deficit of $1.5 billion. It claims to be responsible and yet, it has affiliates; it has spawned six subsidiaries in one way or another.

Mr. Whelan: You tell me how many Crown corporations have been spawned under agriculture. Can you say how many there are?

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Agriculture is a growing industry and Canagrex would be a growing Crown corporation. The seeds are there.

Mr. Whelan: We could have used Orders in Council to set it up but I chose legislation.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Oh, boy, talk about Orders in Council! He wants to know about Orders in Council. Did he realize that Clause 15 of this Bill says:

> There shall be paid to Canagrex annually on the requisition of the Minister an amount of money appropriated by Parliament for that purpose.

That is only one of the ways it gets its money. In Clause 17 it says:

> At the request of Canagrex, the Minister of Finance may, with the approval of the Minister, lend money to Canagrex out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund on terms and conditions approved by the Governor in Council.

Where is Parliament? This is the danger of Crown corporations.

Mr. Whelan: The programs have to be submitted in advance to Parliament.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): In advance to whom?

Mr. Whelan: To Parliament.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): I wish the Minister would cite the clause. I would be glad to know. I have looked for that link with Parliament in this legislation. That is what really worries so many of us, Mr. Speaker. There is no direct line to Parliament in this legislation. Then I read in Clause 36(1):

> In each financial year, Canagrex shall prepare a capital budget . . . and shall submit it to the Minister for his approval and the approval of the Minister of Finance and the Treasury Board.

That is fine, that is the responsibility of the Government to do that sort of thing. But, and here we were being completely misled not very long ago by one of the previous speakers, it says in Clause 36(5):

> The Minister shall cause a copy of the summary of a capital budget approved by him to be tabled in Parliament—

Then we are told that the tabling of a report or request of that sort goes to a committee and is therefore automatically open to Parliament to question. That is not true, Mr. Speaker. The tabling of a report to a committee does not cause that committee to meet on that subject. That is what the Special Committee on Standing Orders and Procedure ought to have done. Every report that goes to committee ought to cause that committee to meet, and if those provisions were there it would be a different matter, but committees do not necessarily meet.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member, but his time has expired.

Mr. Arnold Malone (Crowfoot): Mr. Speaker, this particular legislation has very obviously caused a degree of anger in the House of Commons which, while it surfaces on other Bills and issues, is not necessarily typical of all legislation. I submit to you, Sir, that imbedded in the antics which have taken place in this debate to date is the fact that there is something fundamentally wrong with this Bill which has divided this country East from West, in which there is a difference in ideology, and that the Government is not paying attention to what that difference is. It is not making any attempt to rectify fundamental concerns of the people of one region of this country.

I submit to you, Sir, that the underlying motivation for this Bill is a drunken thirst for power. This is an attempt to gain control of a major industry, namely that of agriculture. The Minister of Veterans Affairs (Mr. Campbell) mentioned that Prince Edward Island was the only Province whose primary industry was agriculture. I submit that almost all the Provinces have agriculture as their major or second major source of income. But that is beside the point. The point is: why are we opposed to this Bill?

Let me state to begin with that this Bill is not all bad. Few pieces of legislation ever are. It is not totally negative, but whatever good is imbedded within it is outweighed by Clause 14 which outlines the powers of Canagrex. It is excessive in the extreme. It is excessive to the extent it drives fear into one region of the country. That one clause describing the powers of the corporation takes up almost four pages of the Bill. Included in those powers, Mr. Speaker, are the following:

(a) purchase agricultural products and food products and package, process, store, ship, insure, import, export or sell or otherwise dispose—

That means, Mr. Speaker, that the Government now has everything it wants within the domain of agriculture. What we have left is free enterprise on agricultural labour, and state ownership of agricultural management.

It is not that the Bill is totally wrong. There are people who produce products such as white beans or sunflower products, commodities with relatively smaller production, who could benefit from a marketing agency, although I submit that one already exists within the domain of Industry, Trade and Commerce. But there are two things wrong with this Bill. The first is that it forms another Crown corporation. While I do not like that, I can swallow sideways and let it go down in a lump and then go home and explain it away to my constituents. But I can never sell to the people of western Canada the concept of a Bill which gives the Government of Canada the powers I have referred to in Clause 14. It means, Mr. Speaker, that I could go into the supermarket and, instead of finding the traditional labels on our food, I would see the label: "Canagrex, it's ours". This is because the legislation itself includes the words, "the right to package". In the debate today, a number of Hon. Members have said, "Oh, listen, that is simply not the case. That is not at all what the Government is requesting. The Government has no intention of doing that. That is nonsense". That was precisely the same position that they took with regard to the questions involving Petro-Canada. When I find my notes in a moment, I will put on the record that little bit with regard to Petro-Canada. We will come to that in a few moments.

• (1710)

Mr. Blaikie: You've only got a few.

Mr. Malone: I have found it right here at the bottom of my pile. Mr. Speaker, I know there is some question by the Chair as to whether or not we can make the analogy on Petro-Canada. I want to make it because I want to make it on the point that there is reason for concern. I want to quote what Donald Macdonald said back in 1973. He said that Petro-Canada would be about the country, soothing the fears of corporate Canada, that it would likely be nothing more than a small player in the domestic oil patch so that the federal Government could learn how the energy sector worked. He said it would be a window on the industry. What happened in 1974 was that it began the federal Government's existing, petroleum interests with $383 million. In 1977, Ottawa added to that, infusing another $155 million. It is still a relatively small corporation. By 1978, the pace had quickened. The corporation bought out Pacific Petroleum for $1.5 billion, with further federal corporation contributions of another $240 million in equity. It finished the year with a B.C. oil refinery, interest in coal, uranium and various other minerals, minority shares in two pipelines and 426 gasoline stations. Then, to bring us a little closer to the present, in 1981 the company bought Petrofina for $1.5 billion, financed in part by a 4 cents a gallon tax on all persons using gasoline, and including home heating fuel. At year's end, with reference to the corporation which was only to be a window on the industry to allow the Government to see how the private sector works, that being the corporate objective, it is into the private sector with total assets of $6.6 billion, 169 million gross acres, 5,800 employees and 1,500 gas stations. That is its window on the industry. Here we have Canagrex.

The Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) should be protecting the individual pride of that one bastion of free enterprising people left in the country, the farm people of Canada who believe in pride, not only of their ownership, but also of their self management. He says that the Government of Canada, with these powers, can purchase agricultural and food products and may package, put the little labels on the can, and process, store, ship and insure them. That is what the Minister of Agriculture is doing. No one in the House, from any of the three Parties, is denying that we need to have a stronger effort in international marketing. I believe that to be the position of all three political Parties. However, to presume that the Government needs those powers is absolutely folly. Furthermore, to stand in the House and to say, "But we will not use those powers", is not possible. I say to the House of Commons, there is no such thing in the world of politics as granting power and then not using it. If the power is granted, sooner or later the power will be used. That ought to be very serious indeed.

It is important that we underscore why the debate is in the House at this time. It is because the Liberals are where they are in the Gallup polls today. There is a pattern amongst the Liberals in the country—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I hesitate to interrupt the Hon. Member, but the time allotted to him has expired. He may continue with unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There does not appear to be unanimous consent.

Mr. Malone: Mr. Speaker, I am just on page one.

Mr. Blaikie: We gave consent, Arnold. We wanted more.

Mr. Jesse P. Flis (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased that Bill C-85, an Act to Establish a Corporation called Canagrex, to promote, facilitate and engage in the export of agricultural and food products from Canada, is finally reaching the harvest stage. The Hon. Member asks who wrote it. I can tell him who wrote it. I did today, while I was sitting here, bored to death with the kind of speeches I heard from the opposite side. This is not the first time that I have stood in this House to speak on the subject of Canagrex. I raised it in the House two and one half years ago, to be exact. The Hon. Member who is asking who wrote it can check the proceedings as reported in Hansard on November 28, 1980, when this topic was raised by myself in the House of Commons. I spoke to it again on February 3, 1982 from the standpoint of promoting Canadian exports. I am pleased to take part in the debate on this Bill again today.

I was pleased that the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) rose this morning on a point of order and clarified the difference between closure and time allocation. When does the Government use time allocation?

Mr. McKnight: Every time.

Mr. Flis: I think that when the Minister and the Government feel that there has been ample time to discuss the Bill in committee, ample time to debate a piece of legislation in the House, ample time to receive feedback from across the country and to hear witnesses before committee and, if the Bill is not going through its proper stages, then I think that the Government has no choice but to bring in time allocation. However, after 85 hours of debate in committee and in the House, I do not think anyone can complain that the Minister brought in time allocation.

In the British parliamentary system, when unconstructive and unproductive methods are being employed to hamper passage of important legislation before the House, time allocation is a correct and needed mechanism. That is why it was written into our Standing Orders. The British Parliament repeatedly uses it when all other avenues have been exhausted. This is the case with Canagrex.

I listened very carefully to the speeches this morning and this afternoon by the Hon. Members opposite. I was very interested by the comments made by the Hon. Member for Capilano (Mr. Huntington). I lost my respect for the Hon. Member a bit when I heard his comments—

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): He speaks from knowledge.

Mr. Flis: —in expressing his views this morning. He said that the Bill is nothing more than public mischief. He said that this is another Bill to "screw the West, and I quote him. There is no one more interested in Canadian unity than all the Hon. Members on this side of the House.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Malone: That's the joke of the year.

Mr. Flis: I think that with the Tories lowering themselves to that kind of debate, I am pleased that the Government did bring in time allocation.

Mr. Malone: Come West and say that.

Mr. Flis: Then the Hon. Member for Lethbridge-Foothills (Mr. Thacker) called this a communist plot. He looked and pointed at me and said, "The Members from eastern Europe should know better". I would like to draw to the Hon. Member's attention that I am not from eastern Europe.

Mr. Taylor: Who said you were?

Mr. Flis: I am a Canadian, born and raised in Saskatchewan. I am a western Canadian, not an eastern European, but—

Mr. Taylor: You sure don't show it, the way you vote.

Mr. Flis: This, again, is the stereotyping of Canadians by Conservatives, "One is this, one is this and one is this", instead of considering us as being Canadians and parliamentarians in the House.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Flis: I was also very interested in the words spoken by the Hon. Member for Simcoe South (Mr. Stewart) when he referred to the Bill and said, "Another definite move toward state control".

Mr. Taylor: Right on.

Mr. Flis: The Hon. Member for Bow River says, "Right on". I would like to ask the Hon. Member and his Party whether his Party was right on when it established the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Mr. Taylor: Now you're going to change the subject.

Mr. Flis: Was his Party right on when it established the Canadian National Railways?

Mr. Malone: Right on.

Mr. Flis: Was his Party right on when it established the Canadian Wheat Board?

Mr. Lalonde: Yes.

Mr. McKnight: There is no comparison.

Mr. Flis: What is the difference between the Bill before us today, the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, the Canadian National Railways and the Canadian Wheat Board?

Mr. Taylor: They didn't have the power to take over the farms.

Mr. Flis: The Hon. Member for Simcoe South referred to Poland and to the U.S.S.R. I can tell the Hon. Member that I know of the seven million Ukranians who starved to death under the Soviet system in 1932-33, not even having a loaf of bread to eat. I can tell the Opposition about what is happening in Poland and the reasons for the Solidarity movement. I can tell the Hon. Member that the state farms, the kolhozi, in the Soviet Union, do not work or the PGR in Poland do not work.

• (1720)

The purpose of this Bill is to go the opposite route. Its purpose is to make sure that our farmers do produce more not only to feed Canadians but to feed people in other parts of this planet. Our country is blessed with the type of soil and weather conditions that enable us to feed not only Canadians but people around the world who are not as fortunate as us. This Bill will do nothing more than to motivate producers to produce more and to export.

It seems that anything the Liberals introduce in this House that will make the Government look good, the Official Opposition tears it down with statements such as state control, communist plot or that the Liberals are nationalizing everything in this country.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Are they not?

Mr. Flis: They are afraid that the Government will look good when this piece of leigislation gets through.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Flis: That is what they are afraid of. I say that this Bill is another move by the Liberal Government to assist the Canadian entrepreneur to seek new markets around the world. Canagrex will be the stimulus to more successful free entreprise in the agri-food sector of our economy.

Mr. Taylor: Is that why you want to confiscate the farms?

Mr. Flis: If the Opposition feels that this Bill is moving toward state control, again I would ask them why their Government formed Crown corporations. Members opposite listed the various Crown corporations they are against. I ask again why they formed the CBC, CNR and CWB? Have the 12 Tories running for leadership, some of whom have dropped off, come out with a platform to ban the Canadian Wheat Board or the CBC? No, those Crown corporations are all right.

Let us look at the Canadian Wheat Board, a Crown corporation established by the Tories.

Mr. Taylor: It does not have the power to take over the farms.

Mr. Flis: Why did the Progressive Conservative Government give the Canadian Wheat Board the power to buy and sell when it was created?

Mr. Taylor: It does not have the power to take over the farms.

Mr. Flis: We are talking about the amendments and the dispute around the philosophy of buying and selling in this Bill. Let me ask again why the Progressive Conservative Government, in creating the Canadian Wheat Board, gave it powers to buy and sell while their amendments seek to withdraw the same powers from Canagrex?

Mr. Taylor: It has no power to confiscate the farms.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The Parliamentary Secretary has the floor.

Mr. Flis: I think someone mentioned already that taking those powers from Canagrex would be like letting a steer out into a herd of young cattle. Then the Tories would scratch their heads and ask why the stock is not increasing. Perhaps they understand that kind of language.

The Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Dionne) tells me that all of the Opposition amendments were debated extensively in committee. They were extensively debated, and eight of the Opposition amendments add up to one thing—

Mr. Taylor: You just read that page.

Mr. Flis: Those amendments say to strip Canagrex of its power to engage in exports when so requested. Without that ability Canagrex will not be seen as an active, potent partner of the Canadian agricultural industry and would not address the requests of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture when they identified a need for "an agricultural trading agency to assist export expansion."

As the Minister has already stated in the Chamber, a number of provincial Crown corporations such as those in Saskatchewan, Quebec and Prince Edward Island, already have power to buy and sell and/or purchase property. Those powers have not been abused or misused by the Provinces.

Other countries who are major competitors have already acted to further their agricultural and food exports.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I regret to interrupt the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary but the time allotted to him has expired.

Mr. Flis: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I just want to ask if you have deducted the time for interruptions?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: An extra minute was allowed for interruptions.

Mr. Maurice Bossy (Kent): Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Mayer: You are filibustering your own Bill.

Mr. Bossy: I can assure you that I do not want to take part in any filibuster. I feel it my duty, as a representative of an area with some of the best agriculture in Canada that needs this export corporation, Canagrex, to help market our farm products, to speak on this Bill.

When the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) introduced Bill C-85 into the House in December, 1981, I remember the favourable press that the idea of an agricultural export agency received. In addition, during the course of the debate which followed in the House, Hon. Member after Hon. Member stated his support for Canagrex.

I might just refresh the memory of the House with just a few of these statements of support. I know that much of this support came from Members of the New Democratic Party, but we also saw at that time support from the Official Opposition.

I know that the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Althouse) stated, as reported at page 14292 of Hansard:

> The farm community too has waited a long time for this legislation.

And:

> We agree that there are special needs for some agricultural exports which will require the full time attention and practical knowledge of people involved in the process at all times.

On page 14391 of Hansard, the Hon. Member for Prince Albert (Mr. Hovdebo) stated:

> Canagrex is going to be another federal Crown corporation which will have some responsibility for the marketing of agricultural products. That sounds like a very good idea and it probably is. It will likely do some good in the marketing of agricultural products;

The Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom) stated, as reported at page 14472 of Hansard:

> At the outset, I want to say that the establishment of an agency such as this is a measure which our Party supports and has urged for a long time. Canada should have a corporation that is involved solely with the promotion and export of agricultural products around the world.

As reported at page 14483 of Hansard, the Hon. Member for Huron-Bruce (Mr. Cardiff) said:

> On the face of it I believe there are grounds for hoping that Canagrex can work to the advantage of Canada's trade performance over-all and to the benefit of the food-producing sector, which should be the primary beneficiary.

All of this support came from Members of the two Opposition Parties. They joined the voices of many of my colleagues on this side of the House who expressed full support for Canagrex and have urged a speedy passage of Bill C-85.

When this legislation first came before the Standing Committee on Agriculture last year, I had the honour to be its chairman and member of the Committee. The Committee spent four months studying the Bill and finally approved 14 amendments to the original 41 clauses. Members of the Committee heard and read briefs from most groups within the Canadian agri-food system and the vast majority expressed their support for Canagrex.

• (1730)

Mr. Malone: That is false and it is wrong.

Mr. Bossy: I must say at this point that the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, the National Farmers' Union and a strong plea from the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, the UPA from Quebec, all these organizations—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Crowfoot (Mr. Malone).

Mr. Malone: Mr. Speaker, I know the Hon. Member now speaking does not wish to deliberately mislead the House. He should know that the Alberta Beekeepers' Association—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please, the Hon. Member for Kent (Mr. Bossy) has the floor. On what grounds does the Hon. Member for Crowfoot rise?

Mr. Malone: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the point that well over half of the average agriculture associations of Canada are strongly opposed to this legislation.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: That is a point of argument. The Hon. Member for Kent (Mr. Bossy) has the floor.

Mr. Taylor: It is half the agricultural people of Canada.

Mr. Bossy: Mr. Speaker, I might agree that many organizations are opposed, but many of these same people belong to the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, and this is a different membership. If the Canadian Federation of Agriculture is not really representative in the eyes of the Official Opposition, I do not know what better organization could represent the farmers of Canada.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Taylor: Name all the organizations opposed to this legislation.

Mr. Bossy: Members of the Committee also heard the agriculture critic of the Official Opposition, the Hon. Member for Elgin (Mr. Wise). He has stayed away from debate on this Bill to a large degree. He was a former Minister of Agriculture. He stated his support for Canagrex by saying, referring to the 14 amendments, that these amendments are quite acceptable.

Mr. Malone: So what? What does that mean? What is your conclusion?

Mr. Bossy: Let me quote what the then Minister of Agriculture said in 1979. I am quoting from the London Free Press. The article said that the new agricultural Minister, John Wise, is ready to go "full steam ahead" on policies. This newspaper report states:

He will implement, with possible changes, the Agricultural Export Corp. announced by the Liberal cabinet during the election campaign as a tool to sell Canadian food abroad.

Further on in this newspaper report, we find this:

Concerning the Agricultural Export Corp., which would have powers similar to those of the Canadian Wheat Board, Wise said he would prefer it to be part of his ministry, but after talking with ministry officials he thinks that may be impossible.

It may well be that because of the business nature of that structure, it may be necessary to have a crown corporation. I won't quibble over that.

That is what he said.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Taylor: He did not say he would give them power. Read the whole story. He was not going to confiscate the farms.

Mr. Bossy: In a further article that appeared on June 6, 1979, and Hon. Members must read the entire article, there is a picture of the then Minister with the headline "More agricultural exports planned". It is stated in the article:

Wise has said one tool that will be used to increase exports is the recently announced Agricultural Export Corp., which will sell Canadian foodstuffs abroad.

Mr. Taylor: Without confiscation of farms.

Mr. Bossy: I have another article here where it is reported that the Agriculture Minister stated:

The Progressive Conservative party campaigned on the pledge to concentrate on expanding markets for Canadian agricultural products and Wise says he wants to act quickly to complete efforts started by former minister Eugene Whelan to establish an export marketing body for agriculture.

An Hon. Member: Very wise man. There is one intelligent Member on the other side.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Taylor: Without confiscation. Why do you not tell the whole story? Take out confiscation.

Mr. Bossy: I believe farmers, especially in the area of Ontario that I happen to represent, have asked me to convey this message to the House, that that corporation must become part of our trust to help agriculture and the farmer and not necessarily just the exporters of this country, which seems to be the support the Opposition wants to give strictly in that area.

Members of the Committee heard and read briefs from most groups within the Canadian agri-food system, and the vast majority expressed their support for Canagrex. I am going back to what we heard in Committee.

Mr. Taylor: You have gone back a long way.

Mr. Bossy: The Committee recommended changes, and as the legislation now stands Canagrex can only get involved in exports in co-operation or jointly with private trade or when it is acting as an agent of the Crown when dealing in state to state contracts.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member, but his allotted time has expired.

Mr. Thacker: Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that time allocation was put on this Bill and in view of the ruling by the Acting Speaker on July 29, 1982, we on this side would like to put the argument that Motion No. 2 should quite properly be debated and voted upon because the Acting Speaker at that time indicated that subsequent argument could be put. We are prepared to do that.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair faces a certain difficulty at this point. We are debating a group of motions which have been grouped for debate. They do not include Motion No. 2. After disposing of them there might be a very brief period of time before the limit of debate at 5:45 p.m. takes over.

If it is the wish of the House, the Chair will put the question on Motion No. 6 which we are debating now. However, there appear to be other Hon. Members rising.

Mr. Thacker: Mr. Speaker, it is my understanding that we are finished with that first grouping of Bills and we are prepared to go on to Motion No. 2.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: From the Chair's point of view as long as Hon. Members are rising, it is very difficult to do other than to recognize them. In this case, the Chair recognizes the Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster (Mr. McKnight).

Mr. McKnight: Mr. Speaker, if there was unanimous consent among all colleagues in the House to move along, some 12 amendments have been placed. We think under closure it would only be in the style of the magnanimity of the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) that we could move on to other Bills.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

The Hon. Member for Lethbridge-Foothills (Mr. Thacker) is rising on a point of order.

Mr. Thacker: Mr. Speaker, I am sure Members opposite realize that the Hon. Member for Medicine Hat (Mr. Hargrave) would have been here to present this motion on behalf of the livestock industry, but unfortunately his wife passed away today and he has had to rush away. We want very much, on behalf of the Hon. Member for Medicine Hat who has represented that industry for many, many years, to put this motion before the House so that it can be properly voted upon as the Bill is voted on this afternoon. I am asking for unanimous consent for that purpose.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is on Motion No. 6. Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour of the motion please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed to the motion please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 79(11), a recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

The question is on Motion No. 7. Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour of the motion please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed to the motion please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 79(11), a recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

• (1740)

Mr. Thacker: Mr. Speaker, Motion No. 2 was originally moved out of order. We believe that there are precedents with which you will agree to indicate that this amendment can be put to Clause 2, which is the interpretation clause.

Because I think you can rule on it very quickly, I briefly refer to Bill C-176 which was debated in late 1971. If you look at the December 30, 1971 edition of Hansard on page Nos. 10895, 10896, 10944 and 10945, you will see that amendments were accepted to the interpretation clause which permitted the amendment to go forth. I think it is just that simple, and we ask for that ruling now.

Mr. Nowlan: Mr. Speaker, I just want to amplify very quickly what my hon. friend said.

Mr. Smith: You are just trying to be helpful.

Mr. Nowlan: Right, I am just trying to be helpful to the Chair and to Hon. Members. The amendment of the Hon. Member for Medicine Hat (Mr. Hargrave) was obviously to extend the meaning of the interpretation clause. The debate on the National Farm Products Marketing Act, which I think Your Honour and other Hon. Members will remember was a very contentious matter both in committee and in the House, went on for ten months and was led by the eminent Mr. Horner, the then Hon. Member for Crowfoot, along with the then Hon. Member for Swift Current-Maple Creek, Mr. McIntosh. As reported on page 10895 of Hansard, the Hon. Member for Swift Current-Maple Creek, Mr. McIntosh, moved an amendment to the interpretation clause which in effect had the same thrust as the amendment of the Hon. Member for Medicine Hat in Motion No. 2. At that time he moved the following amendment:

> That the amendment be amended by adding thereto, immediately following the word 'product' at the end thereof, the words 'but, for the purpose of any of the provisions of this act, shall not include cattle or calves;'

The point I want to make very briefly and succinctly, in view of the fact that the clock is ticking away, is that in the interpretation clause of Bill C-85 there are already certain items set out which are excluded, for example, fish and forestry products or by-products. The amendment of the Hon. Member for Medicine Hat does not add any new substantive matter. It adds to the exception.

I have referred to the precedent in the debate on the National Farm Products Marketing Act. I must admit that that amendment was accepted. The Chair may appreciate that it was not debated too extensively, but the interesting thing is that the amendment of the Hon. Member for Swift Current-Maple Creek at that time was to amend the amendment in the interpretation clause to include cattle or calves. It was accepted and it was put to a vote. Certainly I think it is the most recent precedent I have been able to find. It happens to be right on point because it is the very same issue of cattle or calves.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Deputy Chairman of Committees has already expressed an opinion on the matter. I would like to quote from a decision of Mr. Speaker Lamoureux as reported in Hansard on November 28, 1974. It reads:

> It seems to me that an amendment which adds to the definition clause of a bill a definition which was not contemplated in the original drafting of the bill, thereby seeking not simply to clarify the definition section but to limit the application of the bill to the kind of activity that is defined by the proposed amendment, would go not only beyond the scope of the clause under consideration but would probably be outside the principle and scope of the bill itself.

In this case, the exclusions of fish and forest products are clearly of a generic kind. The attempt to exclude cattle, in the opinion of the Chair, goes beyond the principle of the Bill and introduces something substantially beyond the original intent in the drafting of the Bill.

That was the interpretation of the Deputy Chairman in the previous debate in the House. The Chair has heard no argument which would persuade it to change the position of the Deputy Chairman. Therefore I rule Motion No. 2 to be unacceptable.

Canagrex

Mr. Thacker: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a separate point of order. I ask for the unanimous consent of the House so that the following motion can be included in the vote. It will not have any different result. It reads:

That Bill C-85, an Act to establish a corporation called Canagrex to promote, facilitate and engage in the export of agricultural and food products from Canada, be amended in Clause 14 by adding immediately after line 45 at page 11 the following:

"(e) buy, sell or otherwise deal in beef cattle and beef products nor any product or by-product thereof".

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair has ruled that amendment unacceptable, and an amendment which is ruled unacceptable cannot be put to a vote.

It being 5.45 o'clock p.m., pursuant to order made Thursday, December 16, 1982, it is my duty to interrupt the proceedings and put forthwith every question necessary to dispose of the report stage of the Bill.

The next question is on Motion No. 3 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Lethbridge-Foothills (Mr. Thacker).

Mr. Blaine A. Thacker (Lethbridge-Foothills) moved:

Motion No. 3.

That Bill C-85, An Act to establish a corporation called Canagrex to promote, facilitate and engage in the export of agricultural and food products from Canada, be amended

"(2) All directors, other than the President, shall have tenure for no longer than two consecutive terms of office."

(b) by renumbering the subsequent subclauses accordingly.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed to the motion will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 79(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

The next question is on Motion No. 4 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Lethbridge-Foothills (Mr. Thacker).

Mr. Blaine A. Thacker (Lethbridge-Foothills) moved:

Motion No. 4.

That Bill C-85, An Act to establish a corporation called Canagrex to promote, facilitate and engage in the export of agricultural and food products from Canada, be amended in Clause 11 by striking out line 35 at page 4 and substituting the following therefor:

"Council to hold office during pleasure for such term, not exceeding five years, and one only renewal term of five years."

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed to the motion will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 79(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

The next question is on Motion No. 5 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Lethbridge-Foothills (Mr. Thacker).

Mr. Blaine A. Thacker (Lethbridge-Foothills) moved:

Motion No. 5.

That Bill C-85, An Act to establish a corporation called Canagrex to promote, facilitate and engage in the export of agricultural and food products from Canada, be amended by adding immediately after line 27 at page 5, the following:

"(3) The salary, fees or other remuneration, and travel expenses and other expenses shall be itemized for each director, the President and each vice-president and shall be published in each annual report filed in accordance with section 40 of this Act."

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed to the motion will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 79(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

The next question is on Motion No. 13 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Rimouski-Témiscouata (Mrs. Côté).

Mrs. Eva Côté (Rimouski-Témiscouata): moved:

Motion Nº 13.

That Bill C-85, An Act to establish a corporation called Canagrex to promote, facilitate and engage in the export of agricultural and food products from Canada, be amended in Clause 29 by striking out line 8 at page 18 of the French version and substituting the following therefor:

"vérification intégrée des comptes de ladite".

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: On division.

Motion agreed to on division.

● (1750)

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The next question is on Motion No. 14 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Moose Jaw (Mr. Neil).

Mr. Doug Neil (Moose Jaw) moved:

Motion No. 14.

That Bill C-85, An Act to establish a corporation called Canagrex to promote, facilitate and engage in the export of agricultural and food products from Canada, be amended in Clause 41 by striking out lines 9 to 15 at page 22 and substituting the following therefor:

"Coming into Force and Expiration

41.(1) This Act shall come into force on the day immediately following the day it is assented to.

(2) This Act expires on December 31, 1988, or on such earlier date as may be fixed by proclamation or a motion for the consideration of the House of Commons that is approved by the House pursuant to subsections (6) and (7) unless, before December 31, 1988 or any earlier date fixed by proclamation or any such motion for the consideration of the House that is so approved by the House, an Order in Council is made to the effect that this Act shall continue in force for such period of time as may be set out in the Order in Council.

(3) A motion for consideration of an Order in Council referred to in subsection (2) shall be laid before Parliament not later than three days after the Order is made or if Parliament is not then sitting, within the first fifteen days next thereafter that Parliament is sitting, and each House shall, in accordance with the Rules of that House, take up and consider the motion, and all questions in connection with the motion taken up and considered by that House shall be debated without interruption and decided not later than the end of the third sitting day next after the day the motion is first so taken up and considered.

(4) If, at the conclusion of the consideration of an Order in Council pursuant to subsection (3), both Houses of Parliament do not resolve that the Order in Council be approved, it shall thereupon cease to have effect.

(5) Failure of either House or both Houses of Parliament to resolve that an Order in Council referred to in subsection (2) be approved does not affect the validity of any action taken or not taken in reliance on the Order in Council prior to the conclusion of consideration thereof pursuant to subsection (3).

(6) Where a motion for the consideration of the House of Commons, signed by not less than fifty Members of the House, is filed with the Speaker to the effect that this Act shall expire on a date before December 31, 1988 that is specified in the motion, the House of Commons shall, within the first fifteen days next after the motion is filed that the House is sitting, in accordance with the Rules of the House, take up and consider the motion, and if the motion, with or without amendments, is approved by the House, this Act expires on the date that is specified in the motion.

(7) All questions in connection with any motion taken up and considered by the House of Commons pursuant to subsection (6) shall be debated without interruption and decided not later than the end of the third sitting day next after the day the motion is first so taken up and considered."

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed to the motion will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Section 11 of Standing Order 70, the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

The House will now proceed to the taking of the deferred divisions.

Call in the Members.

Madam Speaker: The question is on Motion No. 6.

The House divided on Motion No. 6 (Mr. Schellenberger), which was negatived on the following division.

Hon. Yvon Pinard (President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, I had consultations with representatives of the Parties in the House and, in light of the fact there are many motions on the Order Paper, I would like to propose the following: That the recorded division we just had on Motion No. 6 will dispose of Motions numbered 1 and 8, and that this division will also apply to Motion No. 7 which disposes of Motions numbered 9, 10, 11 and 12, and further applies to Motions numbered 3, 4, 5 and 14.

In other words, Madam Speaker, what I am suggesting is that the recorded division on Motion No. 6 should be recorded in our annals as also applying to Motions numbered 7, 3, 4, 5 and 14. It is also my understanding that the Motion for concurrence will be on division.

Madam Speaker: Does the House agree to the proposal?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Madam Speaker: Agreed and so ordered.

The House divided on Motion No. 7 (Mr. Schellenberger) which was negatived on the following division:

Mr. Thacker: Madam Speaker, there has been a very serious breach of order in that for the first time here in many years we have seen the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray) laugh.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Crosbie: I hope I never have that experience again.

Madam Speaker: The next question is on the motion of the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) that Bill C-85 as amended be concurred in.

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, if the same recorded division could be registered in Hansard, we are agreeable to the matter going on division.

Madam Speaker: Is that agreed?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Whelan moved that the Bill as amended be concurred in.

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

JUDGE'S RULING ON NUDE DANCING IN TAVERN

Mr. Garnet M. Bloomfield (London-Middlesex): Madam Speaker, I wish to bring to your attention a recent court case in the city of London where Judge Menzies acquitted a restaurant owner charged with allowing an exotic dancing female to perform indecently in his tavern.

The judge was reported to have said that the standard is what the community will tolerate in a tavern performance and not what the tavern patrons will tolerate. The performance he was considering involved "a nude dance with gestures", and he noted he could not find a legitimate claim to artistic merit in the performance. It would be difficult to explain away the dancer's movements as being other than indecent, when taking into account the description of the act by morality officers.

The judge said he had no doubt that many people would find the performance, or a portion of the performance, offensive. However, he doubted whether the particular dance went beyond the tolerance of the community.

The judge would have been much more correct, I believe, if he had said "most" instead of "many" people would find the act to be offensive because I can assure Your Honour that by far the majority of the London and Middlesex community would find this to be totally unacceptable behaviour. The judge, by further suggesting that the community would be served by appealing his decision, either did not disagree with this performance or did not have the intestinal fortitude to rule against it.

Madam Speaker, I am beginning to wonder if we should set up some kind of a review board similar to the doctors' to make sure that judges remain qualified to deal with their cases.

PIPELINES

CALL FOR PRODUCTION OF TASK FORCE REPORT

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Madam Speaker, the report of the National Energy Board on pipeline construction costs was released one year ago in June, 1982. This report confirmed that pipeline costs had been rising at a rate appreciably greater than the general rate of inflation since 1975, and it recommended certain approaches whereby the problem might be alleviated.

In response, the then Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources in August of 1982 created the special Task Force on Pipeline Construction Costs headed by Mr. Vernon Horte, and we were told that the task force would report by June of 1983. The Task Force was to have examined costs of materials, and labour, and contracting costs, and particularly regulatory costs.

• (1410)

It is now June, 1983, and no report has been forthcoming. We therefore urge the task force to complete its work as soon as possible, and urge the new Minister to make the report public within the promised time period and to state what positive action will be taken by the Government to keep Canadian pipeline construction costs competitive.

HUMAN RIGHTS

SOUTH AFRICA—SCHEDULED EXECUTION OF AFRICAN NATIONAL CONGRESS MEMBERS

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Madam Speaker, three members of the African National Congress are scheduled to be executed tomorrow in South Africa, which is late this evening Ottawa time. It is the first politically motivated execution in four years. At the same time three other ANC members have had their sentences commuted to life imprisonment. This inconsistent and excessively harsh execution decision is a tragic move which will make peaceful settlement of South Africa's difficulties almost impossible.

Despite warnings from human rights groups and Amnesty International that the executions will only serve to intensify racial conflict in that unhappy white minority ruled country, the South African Government persists in its inhuman, racist policy of apartheid, and in a provocative declared war on the African National Congress. It is a war which was recently extended into the territories of neighbouring countries.

Canadian officials made representations to the South African Government last fall asking that the sentences be commuted. In keeping with Canada's opposition to capital punishment and in recognition of South Africans, both black and white, who are struggling for racial equality in that country, on behalf of the whole NDP federal caucus I urge the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) to issue a personal plea for the lives of these three South Africans while there is yet time before an&ed250;-1 y more blood is added to the judgment which white South Africa must face sooner or later for its unjust policies.

While the Prime Minister is at it, will he also make representations on behalf of Nelson Mendela, leader of the largest section of the South African population, who is in prison and has lately had the severity of his punishment while in prison increased to the point where he, and other leading political prisoners, are having their very survival threatened.

BILINGUALISM

ABILITY OF MEMBER FOR ST. JOHN'S WEST TO COMMUNICATE

Mr. Roger Simmons (Burin-St. George's): Madam Speaker. I am rising to defend a very deserving fellow Newfoundlander, who has been mercilessly misrepresented by the press. My good friend, the Member for St. John's West (Mr. Crosbie) has been accused of lacking the ability to communicate with Francophones as well as he does with other groups in this country. This gross allegation is a cowardly distortion of the facts, which must not be allowed to go unchallenged. I have known the Hon. Member for St. John's West for 20 years. I know him as a federal politician, and I have known him as a provincial politician, both as a Tory and as a Liberal, and, Madam Speaker, I can assure you—and I do not think anyone will be able to deny—that during his mandate as a provincial politician, we in Newfoundland were able to fully appreciate his ability to understand and respond to the poor, the unemployed and people on low incomes. Francophones, have no fear! You will be understood as well or even better by the Hon. Member for St. John's West, once he has been elected Leader of the Progressive Conservative Party. There is no doubt about that!

AIR SAFETY

DEMAND THAT PLANES BE REFITTED WITH FIRE RETARDANT MATERIALS

Mr. Geoff Scott (Hamilton-Wentworth): Madam Speaker, some 48 hours after the Dallas to Toronto Air Canada fire tragedy, my family and I confidently climbed aboard a Tampa to Toronto flight on Air Canada, which we still regard as one of the world's safest airlines.

Until all investigations are completed in both Canada and the United States, we will not know for sure what triggered the blaze in a rear washroom and killed 23 people. What we do know is that any fire aboard the most sophisticated airliners can spread with frightening intensity. A professional chemist who witnessed the fiery landing says he saw the billowing smoke changing from white to deep gray, and then to black, which made him "pretty sure that was PVC, polyvinyl chlorides, burning . . . Those folks were stunned to their seats and couldn't breathe."

It deeply worries me, Madam Speaker, that anyone who smokes on a commercial airliner can accidentally or deliberately set fire to an airplane's cushions, fabrics, plastic panelling, and other highly flammable materials. My first instinct is to ban all smoking on all airlines under Canadian registry. Realistically, this would be a monumental regulation to enforce. We do protect passengers from guns and explosives through security detection devices, but we cannot prevent people from torching planes, or even the chance that someone might stealthily light up in a lavatory.

• (1415)

What this Parliament can and must do is require domestic air carriers to refit their planes with fire retardant materials. One expert in the field says this could cost passengers an extra two cents a ticket.

Madam Speaker: Order, please.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

CROWN CORPORATIONS

CANADAIR—REQUEST THAT AUDITOR GENERAL CONDUCT COMPREHENSIVE AUDIT

Mr. Scott Fennell (Ontario): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. Yesterday he suggested that we go to the committee and ask the Minister who is in the other place to answer our questions. Unfortunately, we got no answers.

Mr. Nielsen: Stonewalled.

Mr. Fennell: Yes, we were stonewalled by him. That is correct.

I would like to point out to the Prime Minister that in 1975 the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce came out with a report stating that Canadair was not equipped nor did it have the personnel to build a plane from the ground up. Further, in 1982, another report from the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce came out stating that this company would lose at least $1.8 billion and possibly $2.3 billion.

I would like to know from the Prime Minister what right the Government has to provide more funds for the Corporation until such time as a comprehensive audit is completed by the Auditor General.

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, in 1975, the Government supported Canadair, and when it received the corporation's proposal for the Challenger program, the Government agreed with great enthusiasm, because it knew that Canadians were capable of tackling this job and putting the program on the right track. Today, we have an aircraft that is among the most sophisticated in its field. While this program was being developed, Canadair experienced management problems. Yesterday, the Minister responsible tabled a report analyzing the problems of Canadair. The Government was aware of these problems and knew that a business-like response was necessary. The Government provided that response by establishing the Canada Development Investment Corporation, through which the shareholder, in other words the Government and Canadian taxpayers, is represented at Canadair and the program can be put back on the right track, and we shall then be able to market an aircraft of which all Canadians are proud and that will make its way in the international aeronautics field.

[English]

Mr. Fennell: Madam Speaker, that is a total coverup. The Prime Minister will not answer questions regarding Canadair and other Crown Corporations. CDIC has been created to absorb Canadair, and TeleGlobe's profit can be—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. All we need are questions, not comments on the answers.

JUSTIFICATION FOR ESTABLISHING NEW CORPORATIONS

Mr. Scott Fennell (Ontario): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. What justification does the Government have to set up any further Crown corporations when the already existing corporations, as exhibited by Canadair, cannot manage themselves, are not supervised by the Ministry, and are not watched over by the Government of this country?

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, the Members opposite have been asking repeatedly to have Canadair and other Crown corporations given the opportunity to testify before committees of the House, and to provide answers to questions that have been and are being raised by Parliamentarians and the Canadian public. Yesterday, today and probably next week, there have been and will be committee sittings, at which Members have an opportunity to direct questions to the people responsible for Canadair, to the people responsible for the new Corporation representing the Government and to Canadians employed by Canadair. The Hon. Member seems to think we are hiding something. How can he justify that assumption when, in fact, opportunities are being provided for examining the accounting practices of Canadair before the Committee on Public Accounts and for examining the policy that will be adopted by the new Corporation vis-à-vis Canadair before the Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs. We are providing a golden opportunity for Hon. members and the public to ask questions about the actions of the Government and its Corporations.

• (1420)

AUDITING OF CROWN CORPORATIONS—GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. It concerns a matter of policy. The Prime Minister will know that Canadair, according to his favourite, Joel Bell, carried on a liberal accounting policy. It did not quite account for its losses. Indeed, in every year since we have owned this company it showed a profit, despite the fact that it had over $700 million in losses. Would it now be the policy of the Government to require the Auditor General to audit every Crown corporation so that at least we would have consistent auditing and no fancy tricks, and Members of Parliament, and indeed the Government, would know when they looked at a financial statement that all reports were prepared with the same degree of clarity, honesty, and forthrightness?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, if the Hon. Member is following the debates in committee, he will see that the decision to transfer the assets of Canadair to CDIC and to bring the matter before Parliament by way of a supplementary estimate was precisely so that Members on all sides, and the public, could be satisfied with the auditing. I do not think the debate is on the quality of the auditing or on its frequency, because the Government is undertaking, through CDIC, to ensure the most complete auditing done by respected auditors. Whether or not they be in the Auditor General's office, in my mind is a secondary matter.

The main matter is what decision the Government should be taking with Canadair and, in a parallel way, with de Havilland. The Government decided back in the middle 1970s that it should not let the aircraft industry go under when de Havilland, on the one hand, and General Dynamics, on the other hand, were letting Canadair and de Havilland in Toronto go under. They were letting them get out of the business. The Government decided at that point that the aeronautics industry was too important for Canada to let it disappear because there were no private takers to keep it going. That is why we kept it going.

There is no doubt that some of the events in the development of the Challenger, in particular, in Canadair have been most unfortunate. The Minister responsible has been saying that in front of the committee. The question for the Government—and I would think for the whole of Parliament—is what do we do for that industry. Do we let it sink? Do we write it off? Do we forget the potential for Canada in the aeronautics industry, or do we try to rescue it? On the matter of rescuing it, I do not think the Hon. Member could come forth with anybody in the private sector who would be prepared to take over or buy the assets of Canadair or de Havilland now.

Some Hon. Members: Not now.

Mr. Trudeau: My case rests. Since the Opposition recognizes that the private sector would not take it now, we have a choice of letting that industry die or of keeping it going with government funds. We chose the latter. If the Opposition chooses to let it die, it should say so now.

Mr. Blenkarn: The Prime Minister will know that we have lost $1.4 billion. The Government has come to the House of Commons for another $240 million. That will not even last us through the balance of this year. The Government will have to return to the House of Commons for more money later this year. Somewhere along the line we need some sense of accounting and some sense of accountability.

REQUEST THAT ALL CROWN CORPORATIONS BE AUDITED BY AUDITOR GENERAL

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Madam Speaker, I would like to ask the Prime Minister another question. In the CDIC Bill there is no provision for the Auditor General to audit the accounts of CDIC. The Auditor General has indicated that every other aircraft company audited its books in such a fashion as not to capitalize interest, as not to capitalize free flights to "nowheresville", as not to capitalize promotion items, but this company did.

• (1425)

If we had one consistent auditing system we would know where we have been going, and where we have been going wrong. We would have known five years ago, four years ago—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I cannot let the Hon. Member go on. He must ask a question.

Mr. Blenkarn: I am just trying to have equal time, Madam Speaker.

Will the Prime Minister now undertake, as far as the Canada Development Investment Corporation is concerned, that that corporation—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member very often asks questions in Question Period. He knows that he cannot go on in this manner.

Mr. Blenkarn: I will repeat the question. Will the Prime Minister now undertake that the Canada Development Investment Corporation and its subsidiaries will be audited by the Auditor General?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I think the Government is doing even better. It is asking that the accounts be audited by the House of Commons. That is why their accounts are in front of the House of Commons. Surely, if the Hon. Member wants to address the real question, it will be on how we manage that company now and in the future. Whether it is audited by the Auditor General or not is secondary. There are successful companies in Canada in the private sector which are obviously not audited by the Auditor General, yet the audits made by qualified auditors in Canada are accepted by everybody. Therefore, that is a secondary question.

The main question is how to ensure that management in the future should be good and should be accountable. That is the question. Short of being able to pass it on to the private sector, which the Opposition says is not possible at this time, we can either let it die or we can make sure that it is managed in a way which is responsible to Parliament. This is the purpose of giving it to the CIDC. That is why we now have the Minister in front of the parliamentary committee responding on the management and undertaking to do certain things.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

CENTRAL AMERICA—UNITED STATES MILITARY INVOLVEMENT

Miss Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Madam Speaker, the tensions in Central America grow greater every day. The U.S. military involvement, directly and indirectly, is also growing greater. The Prime Minister, to whom I direct my question, has called for an end to all foreign intervention and the opening up of political discussions and negotiations. On Friday evening the Secretary of State for External Affairs, although he repeated that call at the meeting of the United Nations Association, failed to condemn increased U.S. military presence in the area and justified U.S. actions in the area because it is strategically important. Is the Government now saying that there is a need and a justification for U.S. military involvement in the region?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I agree with the Secretary of State for External Affairs that Central America is an area of strategic importance to the United States. I agree with the proposition put forward by the President of the United States that all sides should withdraw outside military systems and other forms of arms. That is the Canadian Government's policy. In the meantime, it is obvious that the other side is not withdrawing its military support. Therefore the bargain put forward by President Reagan is not being accepted by the other side.

The question the Hon. Member asks is on what is best for the future of that area. I think it is arguable that merely military intervention will not solve the problems of Central America. The problems go far beyond that. In that regard the Secretary of State for External Affairs and myself have held views which are somewhat divergent from those of President Reagan and the U.S. administration. I know that when one begins to say that, the Opposition gets all bewildered and says: "Well, is he in agreement or is he not in agreement?"

• (1430)

There are some things that we do agree with, Madam Speaker. We do agree that Central America is an area of strategic importance to the United States. The ways in which it tries to ensure that Central America remains within, shall we say, the influence and the camp of democratic societies rather than going over to communist societies can be a subject of difference. On that subject, the Secretary of State for External Affairs has indicated several times that the problems there are social and economic before they are military. That is the position of this Government.

Miss Jewett: Madam Speaker, within that long answer the Prime Minister is still broadcasting to the Canadian public two different signals. On the one hand, the Secretary of State at the United Nations—

Madam Speaker: Order, please. Order, please. Today's Question Period is off to a bad start. Questions are far too long. I can see that the Hon. Member is about to repeat what the Prime Minister has said. I would like her to go directly to her question.

Miss Jewett: Madam Speaker, I believe that that is most unfair, because I asked a very short question.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

CANADIAN POSITION

Miss Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Madam Speaker, I will ask the Prime Minister if there is not an inconsistency between, on the one hand, saying at the United Nations that Canada is opposed to all military intervention and, on the other hand, saying that some military intervention is all right if it is in the strategic interests of the United States.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I will try to keep my answer very short. I think that the two propositions are not exclusive. If all military intervention ceases, as we hope, then obviously it would be bad for the United States to intervene militarily because the hypothesis is that all should cease, including both sides. But if all military intervention does not cease, then we do not think that the United States must necessarily cease when the other side continues sending arms.

Miss Jewett: Madam Speaker, perhaps the Prime Minister will say that at the United Nations next time.

CONTADORA GROUP CONFERENCES

Miss Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Madam Speaker, my final supplementary question is to ask whether or not Canada would, if asked, agree to be an observer at the Contadora group conferences.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I think that I would have to take that question as notice. It is a suggestion that I have discussed myself with the Secretary of State for External Affairs. I raised the subject at Williamsburg with the other Summiteers. I had the assurance from our main partners that they are sympathetic to the actions of the Contadoras, but as to whether we will or should be an observer or not, I would have to say that I have not had an answer yet from the Department or from the Minister.

NATIONAL ENERGY PROGRAM

RECOMMENDATION THAT PROGRAM BE SCRAPPED

Mr. Harvie Andre (Calgary Centre): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance and deals with the National Energy Program which was introduced in the Minister's budget of October 28, 1980. Yesterday the C.D. Howe Research Institute released a study confirming the widely held if not universally held view that the National Energy Program has had disastrous consequences for the Canadian economy by costing Canadians billions of dollars and thousands of jobs. The study concludes that the NEP must be scrapped, and calls for a parliamentary task force to reassess Canada's energy objectives. Will the Minister accept the recommendations of this non-partisan research institute, admit the failure of the National Energy Program, and appoint a task force with a mandate to do the job quickly and report back to the House quickly so that new and more appropriate energy policies can be implemented?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, first the Hon. Member refers to a report prepared by two researchers. Second, I would invite the Hon. Member to read the report. The report does not say what the Hon. Member has indicated that it says. Third, I would indicate to the Hon. Member that many changes have been made to the National Energy Program since its announcement in 1980 to take into account the evolution of the oil and gas sector. Some changes were announced in my last budget and others were announced as part of the agreement made with Alberta in September, 1981. Other changes have been made at various times through various budgets. There has been a flexible examination of the situation at all times, and adjustments have been made.

I would argue to the contrary and say that the situation in Canada compared to that in the United States, for instance, is very good at the present time. I could mention a number of foreign companies that have decided to move some of their investments back to Canada or expand investments in Canada rather than in the United States at this time.

Mr. Andre: Madam Speaker, the Minister's answer indicates the vital necessity for such a task force because he is completely out of touch with reality. The report says that the National Energy Program failed to promote Canadianization. It did the opposite. The report says that the National Energy Program failed to bring about fair taxation. It did the opposite. The report says that the National Energy Program has delayed self-sufficiency until well into the next century, if we ever get out of the current recession.

REQUEST THAT TASK FORCE STUDY BE INITIATED

Mr. Harvie Andre (Calgary Centre): Madam Speaker, in view of the incredible damage being done to Canadians through the loss of jobs, will the Minister not put the future of the country ahead of his own pride and at least admit that there is some truth to this report which everyone except the Minister, supports and will he initiate such a study so that corrections can be made and Canadians can be given some hope for the future now, and not have to wait for the next election?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, not only does the Hon. Member's question show that he has not read the report, but it shows as well that he continues to live in his own dream world. I will deal with the three points he has mentioned. Canadianization has been substantially expanded since 1980. The share of Canadian ownership in the oil and gas industry has expanded very significantly and Canada will, within this decade and at long last, own and control 50 per cent of its oil and gas industry.

As to the question of self-sufficiency, I would remind the Hon. Member that the country has been self-sufficient since last August, some seven years previous to the 1990 target date set by the National Energy Program. It is true that there will be some problems as consumption increases, but again everyone recognizes that the target date of 1990 for self-sufficiency is a very modest one, and most people recognize that the country will achieve this well before 1990.

As to the point the Hon. Member made about taxation, I remind my hon. friend that a company such as Total, which had decided to withdraw from Canada and sell its assets, has reversed its position in the last few months and, on the contrary, has decided to expand its investments in Canada because returns on investments in Canada are higher than they are in the United States. Net profits going back to oil and gas companies are higher in Canada than in the United States.

CROWN CORPORATIONS

CANADAIR—MANAGEMENT PERFORMANCE RECORD

Miss Pat Carney (Vancouver Centre): Madam Speaker, my question is addressed to the Prime Minister. The Prime Minister has explained why the Government bought Canadair seven years ago, and he has explained some of his plans for its future, but he has not explained why his Government managed Canadair so badly that it lost $1.4 billion last year creating the largest corporate disaster in Canadian history. The question that Canadians want to ask is this: since there were at least two task forces on Canadair, and since the Government does have its own members on the board of directors, why did the Government not know that Canadair was going into such a deep dive and, if it did know, why did it not do something about it?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, it is because some of the members of the board of directors alerted us to some of their worries that we set up the task forces. It is because the task forces reported that we decided to take over the management of Canadair in a way that would see it become responsible to Parliament. As the Hon. Member knows, the previous situation was one of having a commercial type Crown corporation, one which was not under direct Government management and which did not prevent the same kind—

Mr. Stevens: Why not?

Mr. Trudeau: Why not, Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member asks? It is because when we took over Canadair and de Havilland, we did it in the hope that we would be able to turn in over to the private sector as soon as possible and therefore—

Mr. Stevens: The Prime Minister was the manager.

Mr. Trudeau: Madam Speaker, perhaps the Hon. Member for York-Peel will rise on a supplementary question, but I cannot answer two questions at the same time. I am sorry.

Miss Carney: Madam Speaker, we are making some progress. The Prime Minister has just told us that his Government, through either cash injections or loan guarantees, committed the Government—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

An Hon. Member: Ask the question.

Miss Carney: I think the Prime Minister should be allowed to hear my question. He has just told us that he committed Canadians to—

• (1440)

Madam Speaker: Order, please. I saw the Hon. Member shake her head when another Hon. Member was repeating an answer. I would urge her to ask her question and not repeat the answers.

FUNDING AND MANAGEMENT

Miss Pat Carney (Vancouver Centre): Madam Speaker, could the Prime Minister tell the House why his Government made either cash injections or loan guarantees totalling $2.3 billion, or roughly $1 million per employee at Canadair, without bothering to manage the company, which he has just said they did not do?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member will have to understand the type of Crown corporation.

Miss Carney: We sure do.

Mr. Trudeau: It was a commercial type Crown corporation which the Government does not directly manage. It names directors, it has a management group, and from time to time the Department, in this case the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce, through representatives of the bureaucracy on the board, attempt to follow the matter. It has been proven that this is not the best way of managing because the civil servants in Departments are not equipped to second guess, nor should they, perhaps, second guess the management and say, "You should have decided this rather than that." All they can do is send out danger signals. It was because the danger signals became very worrisome that we decided to change the form of management.

We now have management through the CDIC which is managing a commercial company which in a way has more responsibility to parliament. The CDIC is that, Madam Speaker. It is appearing before Parliamentary committees now and it will do so in the future. It has undertaken to give quarterly reports on the management so that Parliament and the Government can be more up to date on how the management is performing. That is why we made the change. Until then, Madam Speaker, we thought—

Madam Speaker: The Hon. Member for Trinity.

SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

DIFFUSION OF KNOWLEDGE THROUGH PATENTS OFFICE

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. In view of the recent Economic Council of Canada studies which suggest that information about new technological advances is slow to reach potential users in Canada, will the Minister consider enlarging the role of the Patents Office to allow it to play a more active role in the diffusion of knowledge about technological advances as is done in the countries of some of our competitors?

Hon. André Ouellet (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Madam Speaker, this is a very interesting question. I should be happy to discuss this point with my departmental officials, and I wish to thank the Hon. Member for making this very interesting suggestion.

CANADIAN SECURITY INTELLIGENCE SERVICE

PENALTY PROPOSED FOR MEDIA DISCLOSURE OFFENCES

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Solicitor General and it concerns the proposed legislation to create the new Security Service. If a member of this new Security Service, or even an informer for the Service, commits a serious criminal offence, is convicted of the offence and possibly fired, the Minister knows that under Clause 12 of the legislation any member of the press, or anyone else who reports that fact or details of the offence, can be sent to prison for five years. How can the Minister possibly justify this totalitarian media gag which, in effect, is a denial of the right of freedom of the press under the Charter of Rights, and makes a mockery of the safeguards under the law?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General of Canada): Madam Speaker, Clause 12 is intended to protect Service members who are under deep cover or in cases where revelation of their identity would be injurious to the operations of the Security Service. It is not intended as a coverup for wrongdoing. I look forward to dealing with that Clause and others in a constructive way in committee when the Bill is referred.

Mr. Robinson (Burnaby): Madam Speaker, the Minister knows very well that is in fact a coverup of any details whatsoever of any possible wrongdoing.

ACCESS TO CONFIDENTIAL RECORDS

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Madam Speaker, under Clause 22 of the new Bill the new Security Service is given carte blanche access to all confidential records, including tax records, medical records, journalists' notes, lawyers' files, MPs' records, social insurance numbers and, incredibly, even census records. How can the Minister possibly justify this massive invasion of the privacy of Canadians? Specifically, what possible reason can there be for the Minister's ignoring the recommendations of the McDonald Commission and allowing the new secret police carte blanche access to census records which are obtained from all Canadians on the basis of total and absolute confidentiality?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (Solicitor General of Canada): Madam Speaker, what the Hon. Member has forgotten to mention, as he misrepresents the Bill across the country, is that there is a very strong safeguard provided in the fact that none of these new intrusive powers can be exercised without a member of the agency approaching a judge and satisfying the judge that the target is a threat to the security of Canada under the tight definition provided in the legislation, and that the operation is justified. I think if the Hon. Member would inform people about the balancing safeguards, as well as telling them about the powers, and about the requirement that this country has, as do all countries, for a national security program, he would be serving the interests of Canada better.

Oral Questions

CROWN CORPORATIONS

CANADAIR—FORMER MINISTER'S STATEMENT ON FUNDING OF EXECUTIVE JET PROGRAM

Hon. Allan B. McKinnon (Victoria): Madam Speaker, I would have liked to have put my question to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources but, in his absence, I will put it to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce.

To keep the Canadair fiasco and its causes in proper perspective, could the Minister tell the House what the former Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce meant when he said in Hansard on October 18, 1976, speaking about the finances of what was then called the Lear jet proposition, as reported at page 142:

> We took no decision yet concerning this proposition which seems extremely interesting and which does not require direct financial intervention by the Government.

Could the Minister explain that gross misrepresentation to the House?

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, I think the Hon. Member should take a careful look at the report submitted yesterday to Members of the Committee by the Minister responsible. This report is available to all Members. Furthermore, I fail to see how attempts to seek contradictions in various answers that were given can clarify the subject we are discussing at the present time.

[English]

CLAIM OF SALES OF CHALLENGER JET AIRCRAFT

Hon. Allan B. McKinnon (Victoria): Madam Speaker, I will direct my supplementary question to the same Minister. In 1977 the then Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce, now the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, speaking about the Lear jet challenger program said, as reported in Hansard:

> Some people felt I was taking a gamble going into that. I am glad to report to this House today that as of yesterday we signed sixty-five contracts and another ten will be completed very soon. The marketing is so good that we hope by the end of the year to have sold at least 125, the break-even point. We have done this in the past two months. I wish the Opposition would open their eyes once in a while.

Seeing that the then Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce was boasting about the program at that time, is the Minister now agreed that the Minister who boasted about it should accept some of the responsibility for this financial bath of unparalleled proportions?

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, earlier, in response to a previous question, I indicated that the Government had been enthusiastic in its support for the Challenger program, and that it was still supporting the Challenger marketing program. Obviously, the outlook for marketing and sales may be revised at some point, because of a number of conditions that are going to change according to the report tabled yesterday by the Minister responsible. Furthermore, it seems that a great many conditions have changed throughout the program, including marketing conditions, delivery of engines for the aircraft, and so on, so that the original forecasts are no longer entirely accurate. These forecasts have now been revised. The commercial development plan for Canadair is based on new forecasts, and we hope they will be positive.

AIR SAFETY

REQUEST THAT SMOKING BE BANNED ON AIR CANADA FLIGHTS

Mr. Gilbert Parent (Welland): Madam Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of Transport. Following on the tragedy of the Air Canada flight which had to land at Cincinnati, and following on the statement made today by my hon. colleague on the other side, could the Minister tell the House if he would consider imposing a ban on smoking on Air Canada flights? If not, would he consider imposing a ban on smoking on all flights of a duration of less than two hours? Surely people who are smoking could give it up for a couple of hours if it would mean greater safety for the people of Canada.

• (1450)

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, to my knowledge that question has not been addressed as yet. Smoking in our country is still considered to be socially acceptable, rightly or wrongly.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: It depends what it is.

Mr. Pepin: Certain sections of aircraft are designed for smokers, others for non-smokers. There are regulations concerning the precautions which must be taken in the aircraft, for example in the washrooms. There are all kinds of regulations concerning extinguishers, detectors, and so on. This is implemented now. The real cause of the DC-9 accident, as everyone knows from reading the newspapers, is still unclear. I feel we should wait until the report is addressed to us.

I am toying with the idea, because this is such an important subject, of suggesting to the Transport committee when matters are clarified, to have a meeting where experts could come and explain to Hon. Members what took place.

CROWN CORPORATIONS

CANADAIR—IMPACT OF FINANCIAL LOSSES

Mr. Charles Mayer (Portage-Marquette): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister and it has to do with the reported $1.4 billion loss by Canadair. A billion dollars is a lot of money for most Canadians. To put it in some kind of perspective, $1.4 billion would mean that in Manitoba, for instance, the taxation level could be half of what it is now for one year. Would the Prime Minister tell the House how his Government establishes spending priorities for such large sums of money when there are so many obvious requests on the public purse for Government to get involved in different programs?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member obviously realizes that this loss was not a spending priority of the Government. It is an unfortunate loss and one which, indeed, has to be shared by the taxpayers of all Provinces, and that is very unfortunate. What a responsible Government must do now—and I would suggest what a responsible Opposition should do, if we had one—would be to ask itself the question: do we kill the industry? Do we let it die because of these unfortunate incidents? Or do we try to keep it alive and manage it in a better way? For the time being the Government has chosen the latter option. The Opposition does not seem to have taken any option at all. It does not dare say to let it die. It just bemoans the past. It has no plans for the future, which has been proven by that Party throughout its leadership campaign.

LABOUR RELATIONS

WEST COAST GRAIN HANDLERS' DISPUTE

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. It concerns the possibility of a grain port shutdown on the West Coast. It also concerns the important $5 billion per year grain trade. Last Friday in the House we suggested the possibility of having Mr. Justice Emmett Hall mediate this dispute. The union was reported yesterday as having welcomed the idea of Mr. Hall being a special mediator—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Nystrom: Madam Speaker, can you get those crows to quiet down over there, please?

Given the Government's reluctance to intervene in this dispute, will the Minister now at least propose the idea of Mr. Hall being a special mediator to both sides, and let them decide whether or not they would accept this avenue of solving a dispute which is so potentially damaging to the economy of western Canada?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, the Minister of Employment and Immigration, who was answering the question for the Minister of Labour on this subject a week or four or five days ago, has explained very, very well, in my view, that in this, as in other instances, the responsibility for settling labour problems belongs to the employers and the employees. It is apparently, and that is obvious for everyone to see, the judgment of the Department of Labour that the problem is better left now in the hands of the parties. This is a judgment call which it has made. This is the present situation.

I have read in the newspapers that the union has said that it has no intention to strike, and that the employers have said that they have no intention to lock out. That would indicate a willingness on the part of the two parties to compromise, and that is the judgment call which the Department of Labour has made. While I respect the suggestion made by my hon. friend of Justice Hall as a possible conciliator, he should go along with the judgment which has been made. Because both parties seem to want to reconcile their views, we should let them exercise this particular right.

CALL FOR MEDIATION

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Madam Speaker, the union has repeatedly called for mediation and is now willing to accept Mr. Justice Hall. We have had no opposition to the idea expressed by the grain companies. Our Party and the Conservative Party have both called for mediation. The people in western Canada want mediation. I wonder when the Government is going to act. When is the Minister going to show some compassion for the people of western Canada? Why is he going to sacrifice the West once again? When is he going to act?

Mr. Nielsen: Act responsibly.

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member seems to postulate his question on the grounds that the parties have no intention of coming to an agreement, that it is a wrong judgment call on the part of the Department of Labour. Be that as it may, I can only assure the Hon. Member that I am informed the Department is keeping in very close touch. There is a certain gentleman there by the name of R. Kelly, who knows something about these questions. He is on the job and watching events.

ENERGY

PROVISION OF NATURAL GAS FOR MARITIME PROVINCES

Mr. Tom McMillan (Hillsborough): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. Among the many broken promises of the Government since the last federal election was a firm commitment to make the maritime Provinces energy self-sufficient through natural gas by this very year, 1983. Will the Minister tell us how the Government can justify blowing hundreds of millions of dollars, probably more than $2 billion in all, on Canadair Ltd., when for a lesser amount it could have solved the whole energy problem of an entire region, with enormous job and economic spin-offs?

Hon. Marc Lalonde (Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, first of all I would like to remind the Hon. Member that Canadair eight years ago had 700 employees. During the period since it was taken over by the Government it employed directly up to 7,500 employees and the average employment maintained during that period was about 5,000 people, who would not have had jobs otherwise. That does not include the hundreds of suppliers all across Canada who have benefited from orders from Canadair. My hon. friend should bear that in mind. What has happened in the meantime has been the creation of jobs and benefits all over Canada. That money did not disappear into a hole. It went into the hands of Canadians who have been kept at work, and these people are taxpayers, which has benefited the whole country.

As far as the maritime program is concerned, I would remind my hon. friend that the decisions have been taken as a result of extensive consultation with the provincial Governments in the Maritimes. The Province of Nova Scotia, in particular, is on the verge of being a supplier of natural gas from off Sable Island and we have decided, rather than bring gas from Alberta, for instance, into the Maritimes, it would be to the benefit of the maritimers if they could use gas which is going to be produced in the maritimes area. We have invested hundreds of—

CROWN CORPORATIONS

JUSTIFICATION FOR CREATION OF CANAGREX

Mr. Len Gustafson (Assiniboia): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Given the record of Crown corporations such as Canadair and the fact that there are close to 400 Crown corporations, how can the Prime Minister justify allowing his Government to create another Crown corporation called "Canagrex", which will add to the bureaucracy, with powers to buy and to sell and to control the entire food industry of Canada?

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member knows what he says is exaggerated. I do not know how far his exaggeration goes, but it is widely exaggerated, that is for sure. His Party was the one which created the first Crown corporations in this country, the Canadian Wheat Board, the Canadian National Railways, the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. He has not said he wants to get rid of any of those. There are Crown corporations in his Province which his Province is not getting rid of such as the Saskatchewan Potash Corporation. The Deputy Premier of that Province said the other day, "We are not getting rid of it. It is making money for us". If you look at Alberta you find they have successful Crown corporations there which are working. They are not intending to get rid of any of those, either. We are putting Canagrex into operation because the farmers of Canada have asked for it—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Whelan: —the vast majority of farmers. There are a few farmers, a few exporters and so on, who are objecting to it, but, Madam Speaker, it is something the Liberal Party promised in two campaigns. It was endorsed by the vast majority of farm organizations. That is why it is being put forward.

CANADAIR—LEVEL OF DEBT—SALARIES OF MANAGEMENT

Mr. David Kilgour (Edmonton-Strathcona): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Right Hon. Prime Minister. Is he listening to me? Is he prepared to admit in the House that Canadair's total debt, that is $2.3 billion, is equivalent to the debts of all small and medium size enterprises which went bankrupt last year and, second, is he prepared to admit as well in the House that Canadair now has 120 senior officials earning more than $95,000 a year?

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, the facts mentioned by the Hon. Member confirm that there are indications which indeed made the Government aware that the situation at Canadair was not normal. That is why the Government reacted by advocating a realistic solution, namely to be present so as to make it possible to keep a closer watch on Canadair's files and strengthen its commercial position.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. David Smith (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: Nos. 4,621 and 4,841.

[Text]

EXPORT DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION

Question No. 4,621—Mr. Stewart:

1. Did Lavalin International Incorporated make application to the Export Development Corporation for financial guarantees or credit insurance in connection with (a) four construction projects in Algeria (b) the construction of a sour gas plant in the Astrakhan region of the USSR?

2. Is (a) Algeria (b) the USSR eligible for credit from the Corporation and, if so, what would be the total dollar amount of credit that each would be eligible for?

3. What interest rates does the Corporation apply to credit loans from foreign buyers in such instances and do standard Canadian bank interest rates apply?

Hon. Gerald Regan (Minister of State (International Trade)): Export Development Corporation states that:

1. (a) and (b) As a matter of general policy the Corporation does not disclose where applications are made to the Corporation for financial guarantees or credits insurance, information on transactions such as that which is of the subject of the present request. In view of the intense competition that prevails among countries in foreign trade and because information on bids, participation or negotiations, given at the application stage by companies to EDC in confidence, would assist an exporter's competitors both foreign and domestic, the Corporation, to respect that confidence, refrains from even indicating that it has been approached for financial guarantees or credits insurance in a transaction.

2. (a) and (b) In principle Algeria and the USSR are eligible for export credits financing from the Corporation to facilitate the sale of Canadian goods and services only. Such credits are available in support of Canadian exporters on a case-by-case basis after giving consideration to certain criteria applied by EDC to each transaction such as: the creditworthiness of the foreign borrower and country; the nature and extent of the security offered; the financial and economic soundness of the project, the financial justification for extended credit terms; the level of Canadian material and labour content; the industrial benefits to Canada; and the expectation of future markets for Canadian exports in the geographic area concerned.

3. Loans to foreign borrowers are at interst rates established in competition with Export Credit Agencies in other countries and are generally below commercial rates.

ATLANTIC PROVINCES HIGHWAY STRENGTHENING AGREEMENT

Question No. 4,841—Mr. Howie:

What was the (a) Government contribution (b) total cost of construction under the Atlantic Provinces Highway Strengthening Agreement with reference to the Geary-Oromocto-Lincoln-Fredericton Bypass, including bridges and overpasses?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Total expenditures and federal Government contribution to the Geary-Oromocto-Lincoln-Fredericton By-pass, including bridges and overpasses under the Canada/New Brunswick Primary Highway Strengthening/Improvement Agreement (Phase I): (a) $ 8,479,244.80; (b) $16,958,489.60.

[English]

Mr. Smith: I would ask, Madam Speaker, that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

[Translation]

Madam Speaker: The questions enumerated by the Parliamentary Secretary have been answered.

[English]

Mr. McKenzie: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I would like to ask the Parliamentary Secretary about a question I placed on the Order Paper in November of 1981 which reads as follows:

Did the (a) Minister of Supply and Services (b) Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (c) Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development take a JetStar flight to Winnipeg for the official opening of General Aluminum Forgings Incorporated on October 30, 1981 and, if so, in each case, other than the Minister and the aircraft crew, who was on the flight?

I find it to be very strange that the question has not been answered, because Mr. Al Holman of the CBC requested manifest information on Liberal Cabinet Ministers' misuse of the JetStar flights and, in particular, with regard to the Minister of State for International Trade, who was flying his mother-in-law around the country. Mr. Holman requested this information in October of 1982, and he received the information in May of 1983.

I would like the Parliamentary Secretary to explain to me or inquire from the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) why this double standard is being applied by the Government. Members of Parliament have placed questions on the Order Paper which the Government refuses to answer, but all members of the press have to do is phone up and ask for information on the misuse of these JetStars and they receive the information.

Mr. Nielsen: Freedom of information.

Mr. McKenzie: Will the Parliamentary Secretary explain to me why my question, which dates back to 1981, is not being answered?

Mr. Nielsen: Damn good point.

Mr. Smith: Madam Speaker, I am unable to give the Hon. Member an explanation, and I think his point is well taken. I do not know why this information has not been provided to me. I will again make inquiries. I think there has been enough time to come up with the answers.

Mr. Stevens: I rise on a point of order. Madam Speaker, along the same theme, and in view of the assurance of the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) that any MP who wants to receive details with respect to ministerial travel on Government planes will be provided with such detail, I would point out to the Parliamentary Secretary that on January 29, 1981 I asked two very simple questions, the first being: "What was the total cost of the Prime Minister's December 1980 to January 1981 world tour?" Second, I asked: "What percentage of the total cost of the trip will be paid by the Canadian taxpayer?"

Madam Speaker, you will note that I did not even ask who the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) took along as guests on the trip. I just asked about the total cost and how much the Canadian public would be called upon to pay. Can the Parliamentary Secretary explain to the House why, almost two and one half years after the event, we are still unable to receive those simple figures?

Mr. Smith: Madam Speaker, I am unable to offer an explanation in this case either, although I do know that in this particular case a number of departments are involved and that the answer to the question is, in fact, more complicated. However, in any event I will make further inquiries to see if I can expedite an answer.

Mr. Stevens: Madam Speaker, again I would direct the Parliamentary Secretary's attention to question No. 3,216, asked by myself on October 23, 1981. It simply asked: "Did the Prime Minister travel to New York in March, 1981 and, if so, what was the total cost of the trip and what percentage will be paid by the taxpayer?" Again. in question No. 3,217 on October 23 I asked: "Did the Prime Minister travel to Algeria in May, 1981 and, if so, what was the total cost of the trip and what percentage will be paid by the taxpayer?"

Can the Parliamentary Secretary tell me why we are still not furnished with answers to those two questions? Surely he cannot keep saying that more than one Department is involved.

Mr. Smith: Madam Speaker, the reason the answer has not been tabled is that I have not been provided with it. However, I will, of course, as always, be delighted to look into this matter on behalf of the Hon. Member and see what I can do to expedite an answer.

Mr. Stevens: A point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): I recognize the Hon. Member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe on a point of order.

Mr. Beatty: I rise on the same point of order, Mr. Speaker. I would like to draw the Parliamentary Secretary's attention to question No. 2,670 which stands in my name, which was placed on the Order Paper on June 23, 1981 asking about Cabinet Ministers and the use they have made of Government aircraft. Can the Parliamentary Secretary tell the House why that question is yet to be answered almost two years after the day? Will he also give us an answer with regard to question No. 2,673, also put on the Order Paper on June 23, 1981, asking on what occasions Cabinet Ministers employed or otherwise used the services of professional speech writers. Why could he not have answered by now?

• (1510)

Mr. Smith: Mr. Speaker, the answer again is that I have not been provided with the answer by the appropriate Ministers. I will certainly make inquiries. I will be happy to see what I can do to expedite the forthcoming answers.

Mr. Stevens: Mr. Speaker, if I could continue my line of questioning to the Parliamentary Secretary, I would point out to him that question No. 3,218 asked by myself on October 23, 1981, asked if the Prime Minister travelled to Washington, D.C. in July, 1981 and, if so, what was the total cost of the trip and what percentage will be paid by the taxpayers.

Question No. 3,219, also asked on October 23, 1981, deals with another almost world jaunt by the Prime Minister to Australia, Korea, the Philippines and Fiji in September and October of 1981. That question has not been answered.

Again, there is another trip to Mexico inquired about in question No. 3,220. Could the Parliamentary Secretary indicate why those three questions are so tough? Who really has the ultimate responsibility to report back to the House with answers? You are handling this almost as poorly as Canadair itself.

Mr. Smith: Mr. Speaker, I will be happy to look into those matters on behalf of the Hon. Member. I am not in a position to advise him as to the exact status of the preparation of the answers to those questions.

However, I would totally reject the suggestion that these are jaunts. They are official working visits on behalf of the country wherein the Prime Minister represents all of us. He does a very good job and it is money well spent.

Mr. Beatty: Mr. Speaker, I think what this calls into question is the whole process that is followed here. I already raised a point of order some weeks ago with respect to question No. 2,672 which was put on the Order Paper on June 23, 1981, asking about public opinion surveys commissioned by the Government since the last election. The Parliamentary Secretary undertook then, as he is undertaking today, to look into our representation.

What does he do about this? Does he not do anything? Is there any point to our raising questions with him that have not been answered for years? Does he not feel that it is his responsibility not simply to wait for some initiative by the bureaucrats but, as Parliamentary Secretary, to start going through the Order Paper and calling up these people to ask when we will get answers to these questions?

No other parliamentary system in the world with this sort of dilatory behaviour on the part of the Public Service and Government would be tolerated in terms of withholding information from Parliament. Does he think that he is doing his job if he does not follow up on these unanswered questions after years?

Mr. Smith: Mr. Speaker, I do not believe there is any other parliamentary system in the world that spends as much money in the preparation of answers to Parliament.

Mr. Beatty: Storing them.

Mr. Smith: I might say that as of today the Government has answered 4,126 questions this session. That amounts to 83.1 per cent of all questions put on the Order Paper this session. Some of them have been lengthy responses to questions tabled by the Hon. Member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe (Mr. Beatty). I think one response a few days ago was about two or three inches thick.

Any suggestion that serious efforts are not being made to answer these questions is, of course, quite inaccurate. I want to assure the Hon. Member, however, that I will make representations to the Ministers involved, as I always do. Upon receiving a reply it will be tabled in the House.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Shall all remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

MOTIONS FOR PAPERS

Mr. David Smith (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I ask that all notices of motions for the production of papers be allowed to stand.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Shall all notices of motions be allowed to stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' BUSINESS—MOTIONS

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Shall all orders listed under Private Members' Notices of Motions preceding order No. 81 be allowed to stand by unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

SUGGESTED ESTABLISHMENT OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO STUDY IMPACT OF TECHNOLOGICAL CHANGE

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville) moved:

That a Special Committee on the Social and Economic Impact of Technological Change be established which would have the mandate to chart a direction and to recommend policies to respond to the revolutionary impact of technological change.

He said: Mr. Speaker, the motion which I put on the Order Paper and which you just read states that we should have a special committee on the social and economic impact of technological change which would have the mandate to chart a direction and to recommend policies to respond to the revolutionary impact of technological change in our society. I hope that we can dispose of this motion today and that it will not be talked out. I hope all three Parties in the House will agree to establish such a committee.

I believe there is a feeling in the country that this should be done. We are in the midst of a very exciting era of transformation to the information society. I have heard spokespeople from the Conservative Party and the Liberal Party say that such a committee should be welcomed and established. The President of the Science Council of Canada, Dr. Stewart Smith, has said many times in the past that there should be such a committee. Other science reports have recommended such a committee to look at the social and economic impact of technological change.

This afternoon I want very briefly to outline a few reasons why I think this should be done. First, I believe it is obvious that we are in a society in transition whether we like it or not. We are undergoing a tremendous revolution from the old industrial age into the information society whether we like it or not. Since this transformation is taking place now, it is important that we in Canada be part of this new society. It is very important that Canadians make sure we introduce this new society in terms of human values, objectives and the moral values that benefit all Canadians.

There are a number of factors which I believe should be studied to explain why we should establish this committee. First, Parliament is the highest court in the land. I believe Parliament should provide more leadership in advanced technology. We must be implicated in the production of advanced technical goods in Canada to a much greater extent than we are today. If one looks at the many reports, one can see that we are lagging behind most other industrial states in the world. In fact, the Science Council said a month ago that we are about five years behind most small European countries in terms of the production of high-tech goods and commodities. We had a deficit of some $8 billion in high-tech in this country last year. That deficit is growing very rapidly every month. In fact, by the year 1990, according to some spokesman in the computer industry, our deficit in computers alone will be approximately $10 million a year. This deficit will exist in a society in which very soon every child in every classroom in this country will have a computer on his or her desk. In a few years 75 per cent or more of the jobs in our society will be connected with the use of a computer. Yet we do not have a computer industry in Canada of which we can be proud. This is an area that the committee could look into.

Second, as I said previously, we must plan the introduction of this new society and technology in accordance with human goals and objectives. This committee could look at a number of areas where this is very important to Canada in terms of production and how it implicates our people. We can first look at the impact of world-wide technological change on cost competitiveness in Canada and abroad of our manufacturing sector. There is much unemployment in Canada. There is a tremendous deficit of approximately $21 billion in manufacturing trade.

Let us look at the economies of Britain, France, Germany, Japan, the Scandinavian countries and the United States. We find that we as Canadians are lagging farther and farther behind most of these countries' manufacturing sectors. We also notice that advanced technology is having a tremendous impact in these areas as well.

• (1520)

A couple of days ago I had a chance to tour a factory that produces frames for cars in southern Ontario. I was told that around five years ago there were approximately 3,000 people working in this factory. Today there are about 1,200 working in the factory and the factory is more productive now than it was five years ago, despite the fact that nearly two-thirds of the jobs have gone because of automation and the introduction of robotics.

We have to take a look at whether or not our manufacturing is going to be competitive in terms of preserving what jobs we can, in terms of exporting what we can and in trying to supply the domestic market in the age of robotics and fully automated factories.

I think this kind of committee could look at the impact of technological change on jobs in every sector of the Canadian economy. What are we doing about retraining? What are we doing about relocation for our working people? How do our efforts compare to those in other countries? I have already mentioned the impact on jobs in the existing or so-called mature industries. I want to say a word now about retraining and relocation.

We are lagging far, far behind almost every other industrialized country in the world in terms of retraining our people and preparing our young people for the information society. Japan, for example, has about five times the population of Canada, yet the Japanese have about 40 times as many young people in electrical engineering schools as we have in Canada. Is it any wonder the Japanese are leading the world in electronic goods, microelectronics and computers when they put such emphasis on retraining, the retraining of the young as well as the middle-aged and older worker?

The impact on jobs is there. I heard a researcher speak at a convention in Chicago last September. This gentleman was director of research for the UAW. He said that by the year 2000 around 80 per cent of the jobs that existed in the auto industry in the United States in the last 1970s will have disappeared. We have to make sure that we retrain those workers, that we have some alternative for them because they have to provide incomes for themselves and their families. In many ways it is like the great revolution in technology and agriculture a number of years ago.

When my father was growing up in Saskatchewan he used to have great threshing crews in the days before the combine. There would be 20 to 25 members of the threshing crew hauling the sheaves, throwing them into the threshing machine and hauling away the grain. Today that job is done by one person with a modern combine. Those farms are now more productive than they were 40 years or 45 years ago. We cannot turn back the clock to the days of the threshing crews and the oxcart. We have to make sure the transition into this new society is one that ensures people are retrained and have a job.

Third is the whole area of labour-management relations and the question of who should control the introduction of new technology. Can we continue with existing management prerogatives regarding production and planning functions? Has the federal Government a leadership role to play? Has this Parliament a leadership role to play? I suggest we must look very carefully at having the workers in the plants, the consumers, the farmers, and everyone affected more involved in the decision-making about the introduction of new technology and the introduction of technological change.

I think we should look at the whole question of democracy to make sure that ordinary people have a say in the economic destiny of this country and their own lives. This should not be in the hands of just a few people holding the stocks or the shares, or the management of a company having the whole say over economic destiny and the introduction of technological change.

The fourth area is the whole question of Canadian ownership. This is something we should look at very seriously as a Parliament. There is the question of public intervention or public investment in high technology. The economic transition to the information society is characterized in most other nations by increased public investment, by increased public participation in terms of the direction of these industries.

We have to ask ourselves in comparison to others—the Germans, the French, the Japanese, or whomever—whether Canada has an adequate investment strategy. Does Canada have an adequate strategy in terms of making sure that high technolgy is Canadian, that it serves Canadian purposes, that it provides Canadian jobs, that it is developed quickly enough that we will have an industry here to supply not only Canadian needs but the export market for many people around the world?

Fifth, this committee can look at occupational health and safety. We have had many complaints about the low level of radiation in many offices. We have had problems dealing with stress on the new production line in the case of VDT operators in many offices and plants across the nation. We have to look at this scenario. We have to ask ourselves about the present health and safety measures in legislation, as to whether or not they are adequate or have to be revised.

Sixth is the question of privacy. Is the privacy of Canadians adequately protected given the profusion of data banks and the extension of information on individual finances, health, medical records and things of that sort? The whole question of privacy in the information society will become something that we should look at as legislators in this House.

Seventh is the question of research and development. Historically we have lagged far, far behind most every other industrial state in the world in terms of spending money on research and development. In fact, if we were to take away the foreign-owned industries in Canada or the branch plants, you would find, Mr. Speaker, that our Canadian firms spend roughly as much in Canada on research and development as do the French, the Germans, the Japanese, the Austrians and the Scandinavians. But because our economy is foreign-owned, about 26 per cent compared to 3 per cent in the United States and 1 per cent in Japan, we find that these branch plants of the foreign firms spend virtually nothing at all on research and development. Because of that we are lagging far, far behind in product innovation, modernization, new ideas, jobs for the young people of Canada, in scientific research, technology and development. High technology is a brand-new field for which we should be training our young people in the years ahead.

Eighth is the question of co-ordination of efforts between the federal Government and the provincial Governments vis-à-vis our different procurement policies, how we use the public purse in terms of high technology and economic strategy in Canada. I think, for example, of my own native Province of Saskatchewan where the Government three or four years ago, together with the Saskatchewan Telephone Company, decided to go into fiberoptics. It was decided to transform the telephone system into one based on fiberoptics. The Government used leverage it had with Northern Telecom to get Northern Telecom to establish a plant in Saskatoon to produce fiberoptics. The Government said to Northern Telecom that it could have the contract but it had to establish a plant in the Province and provide jobs for its people.

Once we have a fiberoptics industry established in our Province, we want a plant which will provide world leadership and have the efficiency and productivity to export fiberoptics and fiberoptic technology around the world. This type of thing could be done by the federal Government and by the Governments of Ontario, Quebec or any other Province, particularly in the field of computers with all schools, hospitals, municipal offices and Crown corporations using computers.

We should use Government procurement policies more to promote Canadian industries in a planned and rational manner instead of buying many of these things abroad. We as Canadians could produce these and provide long-term economic security and job security to Canadians for the rest of this century.

My list is far from complete, but finally—and ninth in terms of the items I have listed this afternoon—this committee could take a look at the human and moral implications of high-tech. It could ensure that its introduction is in accordance with long time accepted human values and objectives. We must ensure that high-tech in Canada is introduced in such a way as to give more freedom and liberation to people, not enslave them to the robot and the computer. We must ensure that the tasks done are the dirty, dull, boring or dangerous jobs, not the more creative ones. We have to ensure that this technology does not make our society a less productive one, a poorer one or an unemployed one. We must ensure that the introduction of new technology makes us more productive, more exciting and wealthier, each and every one of us in the country.

One could say many other things about advanced technology and its importance in the country, but mainly I believe that we need a committee of the House to study the social and economic implications of high technology in Canada. I have listed a number of reasons for that and a number of things at which we should be looking. I call on Hon. Members of all political Parties in the House to come together on this idea and agree to pass this motion and establish such a committee for the fall session of Parliament, so that Canadians through their Members of Parliament will have some input into one of the most exciting and massive transformations in society in many, many years.

Mr. Jim Schroder (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom) for bringing this matter to the attention of the House and making us aware of the impact of technological change on our society. I think he gave a very useful list of things about which we as a Government and as a Parliament should be concerned. This afternoon I intend to talk about some of the things the Government is doing and to indicate that indeed we take into account many of the things he mentioned.

I am pleased to take the opportunity this afternoon to outline the Government's efforts to manage the technological change for the benefit of all Canadians. The recently announced technical policy clearly recognized the social dimensions of technology and the need for greater efforts to manage the social impact of technological change. Among the primary national objectives of the policy is our determination to manage the process of technological development to ensure that Canadians are aware of both the opportunities and the problems which might arise.

Our efforts are focused on longer term economic goals which will be achieved through the increased management of technological change. The Government has approved a $10 million fund to be spent over the next two years to encourage business and labour to establish a centre for productivity and employment growth.

The federal Government has set more detailed objectives for itself to support individuals and institutions in responding to the changes, challenges and opportunities posed by technological development. One objective is to ensure that all Canadians are aware of technological change on their lives, which is very important. Another is to anticipate the impact of technological change and to minimize its negative impacts in close consultation with those most likely to be affected, particularly working Canadians whose jobs may be affected. Also we want to provide access to training and educational opportunities that will help individuals take advantage of new opportunities. We have a fear that people will get the impression that there is nothing they can do about the technological revolution and that it will leave them behind. As I said, we have to provide access to these training and educational opportunities so that individuals will take advantage of them rather than fear them.

Another objective is to ensure that individuals in all regions of the nation have similar ranges of opportunity and that all regional economies take advantage of technological opportunities in line with their comparative advantage. The recently announced budget allocated an additional $155 million over the next two years for human resource development programs, to upgrade the skills of Canadian workers and to ease their adaptation to technological change.

A subcommittee on technological development has been formed. As was announced in the recent technology policy statement, the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) has established a special subcommittee of Cabinet, chaired by the Minister of State for Economic Development and Minister of State for Economic Development and Minister of State for Science and Technology (Mr. Johnston), to deal with all matters concerning technological development. Because of their departmental mandates, the Ministers on the subcommittee have the power and resources to influence all matters concerning the implementation and impact of new technologies. The subcommittee provides a vital policy link which will assess the social impact of technological growth and initiate programs to ease the negative aspects of technological change on our social environment.

At the meeting of the Standing Committee on Miscellaneous Estimates, Members of all Parties favoured the idea of establishing some sort of parliamentary committee to look at important science and technology policy issues, including the socioeconomic impact of technological change. This is being considered now, although the concept of a standing committee rather than a special committee is attractive because we are concerned with the effects which will take place over the longer term. This will require continued attention rather than a short, one-time study. As well, such a parliamentary committee would consider a wider range of issues, such as how technology can be successfully transferred and implemented and how technology development will benefit Canadians in the long term. One of the fears of many people is that there will be displacement of jobs by new technology, that robots will take over and there will be a tremendous loss of jobs. The adoption of new technologies will not sweep away large numbers of jobs in spite of the short-sighted views of alarmists who seem to say that the gains in productivity we are now realizing thanks to the new technologies will somehow be bad for the economy.

A recent study by Informetrica, an Ottawa-based consulting firm, indicates that while the new technologies will result in massive labour-saving effects, productivity increases nevertheless, and the recycling of the income benefits by the consumers, the investors and Governments will generate tremendous offsetting and provide jobs elsewhere in the economy. This study concludes that failure to adapt to the latest technologies would result in the loss of competitiveness for jobs far more serious than the direct displacement effects. In other words, if we are to be competitive in this world of change, technological change, we have to look at what must be done.

It is important to look at technological change and women. The federal Government is particularly concerned about the impact of technological change on women. The recent "Office of the Future" trials in federal Government offices will have special implications for the secretarial and clerical professions. They were conducted with that in mind in order that we would have some idea of what the impact of technological change in the office will be on women.

I recently saw a telephone system developed in Canada which has its own information screen. I can find out from that screen what my appointments are for this month, this week or this day. I do not have to phone my secretary and ask what I will be doing tomorrow at ten o'clock. I do not have to flip through the calendar to find out whether I can do something next week. It could be said that this has an implication for jobs. Does that mean that a secretary will be replaced? It is this kind of information that studies about the office of the future will give us. What is going to happen? What do we have to do? What are the social and economic concerns?

The federal Government is increasingly aware of the importance of encouraging young women to continue their studies in the sciences and mathematics. It is vital for the future economic and social well-being of this country that we encourage women to enter professions, such as engineering and scientific research and development, and to make contributions which will benefit all of us.

What about the changes that we have brought about in some of our federal departments? Let us talk about some of the recent studies on technological change by federal departments. Several federal departments have recently released studies specifically related to the impact of technology on society and the economy. One of these studies is "Employment Impacts of New Technologies" by the Canada Employment and Immigration Advisory Council. The recommendations made in this report are now under consideration by the Minister of Labour (Mr. Caccia). The Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council will spend $700,000 in the current fiscal year on its strategic grants program in the human context of society and technology, a program which promotes research and research training relating to the interaction of science and society.

The Hon. Member who spoke previously to me made some very important points with regard to the fact that it is time we started looking seriously at the possible impacts, rather than just going to sleep thinking that everything will turn out all right in spite of the fact that we are afraid. It is important that we begin thinking about the interaction of science in society. We have had the industrial revolution. We are now into the biomedical, biotechnology revolution, a whole new revolution. We have had trouble adapting to all these kinds of changes throughout our lifetime. Surely it is time we learned that as well as making use of these technologies we have to start thinking about the kind of impact they are going to have on people. If the new technologies do not benefit people, we have to ask seriously whether it is worth while having anything to do with it.

It is very important to think about public awareness. Scientists have to take the public into their confidence and try to explain as simply as they can how the technology works, why it works and who it will work for. We are entering a technological era when most career and day to day activities directly involve working with, understanding and living comfortably with science, mathematics and technology. That is important. A growing number of personal, public and professional decisions require awareness and familiarity with the activities, principles and methods of science and technology. We have to face that. The federal Government has established a $1.5 million fund to promote public awareness and understanding of science and technology issues and their impact on society.

As the Minister of State for Science and Technology noted in his statement of May 3 before the House of Commons on a technology policy for Canada, the federal Government will be sponsoring a "Canada Tomorrow" conference in the fall. The purpose of this conference will be to bring together in one forum the issues related to the impact of technology and technological change, not only on our economic environment but also on our social environment. Dialogue and discussion of this kind will promote a better understanding on the part of all Canadians of the forces which are currently shaping our lives.

Mr. Roger Simmons (Burin-St. George's): Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Nystrom: En français!

Mr. Simmons: My good friend for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom)—

[Translation]

Mr. Nystrom: In French, in French!

Mr. Simmons: —is urging me to speak in French. I would rather speak in English now since my notes are in English. Besides, it is a subject on which I prefer to comment in English.

[English]

For his benefit, but especially for mine, I will stick to English. I had not realized the demand for my French was so great or I would have brought some French notes for the occasion. It is a subject so important that one would not want to ad lib on it in any language. For that reason, I say to my good friend from Winnipeg-Birds Hill (Mr. Blaikie) that I shall rely on the English notes before me.

The notes inform me that the gentleman from Yorkton-Melville has put down a motion today that there be another special committee on the social and economic impact of technological change. He is for the establishment of that committee. I suppose it would be wrong of me to say I would be against such a committee, except that I do not see the need for it, given the present situation.

• (1550)

I am referring in particular to the policy that my good friend, the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of National Health and Welfare and the Hon. Member for Guelph (Mr. Schroder), referred to a few moments ago. Just a month ago, on May 3, 1983, the Government introduced in the House a technology program for Canada. I am sure my friend, the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville, has seen the policy, has read and understood it and no doubt subscribes to the main tenets of that policy. The policy, like the Hon. Member's motion, is like motherhood. Who can be against the kinds of admirable things that have been advanced in the policy which the Government has now adopted and made public?

I may say, Mr. Speaker, that the policy is one result of a very concerted effort made by the Government at the Cabinet level, an effort which flowed from an appointment by the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) of a special subcommittee of Cabinet on technology development. That subcomittee did its job and brought forward the makings of a technology policy. I would like to take a moment to bring to the attention of the House the broad objectives which are embodied in that technology policy, as follows:

> The first objective of the technology policy is to strengthen the Canadian economy through the creation, application and diffusion of state-of-the-art technologies.
> Second, we intend to manage the process of technological development so that Canadians are aware of both the opportunities and the problems that might arise . . .
>
> Third, we must ensure that the benefits of technology development are shared equitably among all Canadians in every region.
> And last . . . we must encourage a social climate that places a premium on scientific and technological excellence, curiosity and innovation.

I submit to the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville that these four objectives are the very objectives that he would seek to achieve in his resolution. I say to him and to the House that the Government, as is sometimes the case, is ahead of him. The Hon. Member is known to be a forward thinking individual who has spent a long time in the House and has served his constituents and the House well, but I must say that on this particular issue the Government has at least caught up to him and is perhaps slightly ahead of him in that the course that he would have the committee chart has already been charted by the Government. The evidence for that is the policy statement made public by the Minister of State for Economic Development and Minister of State for Science and Technology (Mr. Johnston) a month ago, on May 3.

I am sure that the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville has seen that policy statement with its accompanying documents that deal with the Government's support for technology development and outline in detail the various aspects of the policy, including the "Canada Tomorrow" conference which my friend the Hon. Member for Guelph made reference to, a conference which the Government will sponsor a few months from now in the fall of this year.

Mr. Nystrom: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I wonder if the Hon. Member would entertain a serious question.

Mr. Simmons: By all means, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Nystrom: Mr. Speaker, I have followed closely and undertand very well all the points the Hon. Member is making and I am quite aware of what the Government is doing. I would like to ask the Hon. Member whether or not he would agree to a committee so that those of us who are Parliamentarians but are not in Cabinet, including himself, could have some input into these very, very important questions that we as a nation must address. I wonder if the Hon. Member could address that question. Why should we not, as Members of Parliament, have some input? After all, this is a democratic country and I think that my suggestion is nothing more than an extension of parliamentary democracy.

Mr. Simmons: Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for his question. I submit to him that Members have had a fair amount of input. I hope that the hon. gentleman is not suggesting that during the various debates in which he has participated in the House he has not used the occasion to inform the House of his views on this particular subject. While he is not a member of Cabinet and while I am not a member of Cabinet, I understand that the Cabinet subcommittee took full cognizance of the views that had been expressed in this Chamber and elsewhere.

When I say elsewhere, I include in particular a reference to another task force which has just recently concluded its work, the Task Force on Employment Opportunities in the Eighties. Part of that task force report deals specifically with the issues that we are discussing today. That task force operated under a mandate from the House, was appointed by the House and had representatives from all Parties of the House, including representations form the New Democratic Party of which my friend, the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville, is a member. In response to his question, I must say to the Hon. Member that I do not believe there has been any lack of input by Members of the House, particularly through the task force but in other ways as well, and for that reason I see no real need to adopt the Hon. Member's suggestion.

I would also say to the Hon. Member that if this were only an academic exercise and something that could take a number of months or years to accomplish, I would support his resolution for the creation of a special committee on the subject. The fact is that at this point in time it is my view that we have not yet taken full advantage of the economic opportunities and job opportunities which high technology has to offer the country. I commend Cabinet for having focused on the issue and having made, so expeditiously, a decision which allows that policy to be formulated and to become public, as it did on May 3. I would invite the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville not to pursue a course of action, however much it resembles motherhood on its surface, that would have the effect of delaying the implementation of a very good policy.

I would be remiss if at this time I did not note the occasion of the occupancy of the chair by my good friend, the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor), who performs in this capacity extremely well, as he does in all others. I hope he stays there a long time.

It is true, Mr. Speaker, that we have had to deal with the issue of radical changes in employment patterns in the past and we have coped with it. We expect that we will have to deal with this issue in the future and we will cope with it. We will cope with it again just as long as we face the issue directly and continue to devise intelligent policies to deal with it.

I say that we have dealt with that problem in the past, Mr. Speaker, and I will give you an example of it that involves the field of agriculture. In only 15 years between 1946 and 1961, the number of people employed in agriculture dropped from just over one million to just over 600,000, a drop of almost half a million jobs. Over the same 15-year period, the percentage of employed Canadians who worked in agriculture dipped from 25 per cent to just over 11 per cent. In 1981 that percentage stood at only 4.4 per cent.

This was indeed a wrenching change in employment patterns and one we would have viewed with alarm if we had been able to forecast the disappearance of farm jobs without any clear idea of the opportunities that would emerge as the economy grew and changed. It has always been far easier to identify the jobs at risk than it has been to identify the jobs likely to be created by change. But hundreds of years of experiencing the emergence of new technologies have shown that there is always a parallel and unforeseen set of new opportunities that will emerge to create wealth and jobs.

Before we become too disheartened, Mr. Speaker, it is worth remembering that in the 1970s total employment grew by almost three million. It grew from eight million employed in 1971 to 10.9 million a decade later. Moreover, massive adjustments in the labour force are taking place all the time. The Task Force on Labour-Market Development in the 1980s found that every year one million new jobs are created and three-quarters of a million jobs disappear in the same period.

• (1600)

I should like to return for a moment to my agricultural example. It is clear that we managed transition because we had a strong economy, one that was creating wealth and favouring the growth of capital investment. In turn, that called for a work force adapted to new circumstances. In the 1950s and 1960s the economy was able to provide that growth, and in order to maintain our ability to adapt to new technologies and to changing world patterns, we need a strong economy again.

Regaining that economic strength is the objective toward which the efforts of the Government are targeted. It seems clear that the future will be a highly competitive one. If Canada is to prosper, the Canadian economy must be competitive in terms of cost, quality, technological sophistication and marketing.

The reality is before us; it is inescapable. If we try to hide from the reality of the new product and production technologies, we will slip into an economic backwater. If we refuse to hide our heads in the sand and if we meet the challenge head on with intelligence, I foresee continued growth and social wealth, the wealth of our society as a whole and the emergence of new ways of work and wealth sharing.

Perhaps we should look at this not as a problem but as an opportunity. I am told that in the Chinese language there is one set of symbols for two words. They use a set of symbols to designate on paper the word we know as "problem", but they use the same set of symbols, without rearrangement, to connote "opportunity". I submit that those who see the coming high technology as a problem would do well also to look at it from the perspective of it being an opportunity—indeed, a set of opportunities—for Canadians.

Human beings have always been at their best when facing challenge. Our adaptability has always been our strength. The technology policy that the Government has proposed and the specific initiatives it has announced are actions which will facilitate the transition of our economy and our society to a new world, the shape of which we can only begin to guess. I for one face that new world with some optimism. I repeat the essential point, that job losses are always easy to see and forecast while the new opportunities cannot be nearly as readily predicted. These opportunities will emerge just as long as we continue to put in place the programs and policies that will ensure we are able to seize the advantage in a timely way. No one will argue that the period we face is not one of profound structural change. That change will eliminate jobs; no one would argue with that. My point is that it will also create new jobs.

The choice is an important one, Mr. Speaker, but a fairly simple one—to hide our heads in the sand, to try to freeze everything in time, to fight high technology as some kind of evil monster or, conversely and more positively and certainly more productively and sensibly, to see high technology as a set of opportunities we must latch on to, a new door which opens to create new kinds of job opportunities to replace those which have disappeared because of passing technology. That is the story of civilization, is it not, Mr. Speaker? Those who oppose would have us go back to an earlier time; they would have us remain nomadic herders.

I would like to hear the views of my good friend to my right, the Hon. Member for Sarnia-Lambton (Mr. Cullen), who indicates that he would like to have a little time to speak on this. I realize that the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Birds Hill (Mr. Blaikie) would like to hear some other comments on the subject. My colleague has words of wisdom that the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Birds Hill has never heard. The Hon. Member for Sarnia-Lambton is a former Minister of a department which was so concerned about these new opportunities that we require that he must take a fair amount of credit for the policies that are now in place. It is the policy of great foresight which this Government has launched, building on the foundation laid by the Hon. Member for Sarnia-Lambton during his period in the ministry. I have pleasure in concluding my remarks so that we may all listen with rapt attention to the wisdom of my colleague.

Hon. Bud Cullen (Sarnia-Lambton): Mr. Speaker, I thank my hon. colleague for his very kind comments about the foresight of earlier Governments. Unfortunately, it did not impress the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) enough to reappoint me to that particular post. Here I am today, in Private Members' Hour, carrying this particular heavy load.

I do not want to make light of the subject that the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom) has introduced because it is one that pricks the conscience of all of us. It is easy to see all the benefits that would accrue as a result of technological change. Governments of all political stripe, both at the provincial and federal level, are doing what they feel is appropriate to see to it that we do not drop into some black hole as far as technology is concerned, but that we remain in the forefront and take advantage of all these marvellous improvements. Many of these are labour-saving operations that can be done better by the improvement in technology, machinery and the intelligence that is applied to the kind of scientific miracle that is taking place around us every day.

When I heard that this motion was coming up for debate today I wondered if it might not be somewhat redundant. I am given to understand by the chairman of the Standing Committee on Labour, Manpower and Immigration that that particular Committee has a reference to study basically the same sort of thing—the impact of technological change, particularly on the work force. If that is the case, it may be that even if all of those who wish to participate in this debate find they will not have the opportunity to do so because of the limited time, the Hon. Member may find that he has gained his victory in any event by highlighting the subject in a motion, only to find that he has been pre-empted by the Committee with the eight or nine points that he made. No doubt he will be making those points again for the consideration of the Committee.

This subject is a matter of serious concern to those of us who are charged with the responsibility of governing. We have to recognize that as a result of technological change jobs will be lost. In the automobile manufacturing industry in particular there are jobs which will never be occupied again because of robotics and other technological changes. But these changes have to be made in the interest of being competitive, particularly in the automobile industry, in the world economy.

As I was listening today to the debate, I happened to glance through the most recent issue of Maclean's magazine. I see that the Conservative convention which is taking place at the present time has also become the victim, or the beneficiary, I suppose is more correct, of technological change, in that if the candidates do not keep up with the changes and advancements made since 1976, they feel they will be left in the backwaters somehow. We find, therefore, there are no fewer than 1,000 walkie-talkies at that particular convention. On the last occasion, those who were using walkie-talkies found themselves on the same frequency. One individual indicated it was like listening to ten telephone conversations at the same time.

The powers that be then decided that was inappropriate, that there must be a more effective and efficient way of contacting one another without the Opposition knowing exactly what was being talked about, who was talking and what the various plans were. Therefore, as a result of technology there will be different transmissions. What does that create? It creates for the television people an additional difficulty because they must be concerned about interference. Special casings must be built. So we find as a result of all this modern technology and advancements more jobs are being created at this particular convention and more expertise must be used if candidates for leadership in a political convention are not to be left in the wake of other candidates.

I suppose our prime concern, and I am sure the concern of the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville who moved this particular motion, is that it is all well and good to talk about the positive aspects of technological change and, heaven knows, there are many hundreds of thousands of them, but there will be employment fallout, the loss of employment as the result of machines or electronic devices and technological devices taking over and doing work which at one time was performed by ten people. One man or one woman operating one machine can now do that particular amount of work.

This was brought home to me most forcefully as a young man in those days when I was working my way through school. It was quite usual in the area of Sudbury to have young students working underground. Obviously, during the pre-war years there were not sufficient numbers of miners so they were hiring students to do a lot of the "bull-work", if you will. A lot of us were at the business end of a shovel and doing that which was necessary in order to muck out the ore. With technological change there were mucking machines, slushing machines, trains and trams, better drills, and more diamond drilling equipment, to the point that where 10, 15 or 20 people had been employed in a particular drift or shaft construction, much of that work was done, as the result of technological change, by about one-tenth the number.

What also came about as the result of technological change is that there were a lot of people working on new machinery, so there was a tendency to have accidents. To the credit of the union, it was brought to the attention of management that it was appropriate that they should be concerned about safety first and production second. To their surprise, by proper use of machinery, proper instructions to the employees, adequately trained people, and putting the emphasis on safety, production actually increased. Therefore, it was to the benefit of the workers and management that this particular change was effected. It did have the impact, of course, of doing away with a lot of jobs, but it did save a lot of the "bull-work". It also enabled the management of the mine to move faster, to build larger drifts and shafts, and to do more "slushing" work, as they called at that time. As a consequence they were able to maintain their workers at a pretty comparable level to what it was in pre-war days. With the advancement of machinery they were able to do much more work in open pit mining.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. Pursuant to Standing Order 24, paragraph (2), it is my duty to interrupt the proceedings.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' PUBLIC BILLS

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Shall all orders listed under Private Members' Public Bills preceding Order No. 384 be allowed to stand by unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

CRIMINAL CODE

AMENDMENT TO IMPOSE DEATH SENTENCE IN CASES OF FIRST DEGREE MURDER

Mr. Bill Domm (Peterborough) moved that Bill C-584, an Act to amend the Criminal Code (capital punishment), be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

He Said: Mr. Speaker, we are now at second reading of bill C-584, which is an Act to amend the Criminal Code to reinstate capital punishment for cases of premeditated first degree murder. We are discussing the subject today after a very long and sustained effort on the part of the Official Opposition, the Progressive Conservative Party, to have the serious question of capital punishment referred to committee and to allow a free vote in the House of Commons. I am attempting to satisfy the majority of my constituents who wish the Government to review the possibility of a return to capital punishment for premeditated first degree murder.

On December 15, 1980, as reported on page 5742 of Hansard, I asked the Government House Leader to allow one of the many Private Members' Bills dealing with capital punishment to come to a vote. I subsequently introduced this Private Members' Bill, Bill C-584, which received first reading on May 2, 1980. I hoped then, as I do now, that the Bill would come up for debate during this session of the Thirty-second Parliament. Again, on January 27, 1981, as reported on page 6589 of Hansard, I rose under Standing Order 43, asking to refer the subject of capital punishment to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

On June 11, 1981, the Progressive Conservative Party managed to arrange an Opposition day in which I had the opportunity to present the motion which appears on page 10504 of Hansard once again to refer the question of the reintroduction of capital punishment as the penalty for some classes of murder to the Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs. Bill C-584, which has been on the Order Paper for four years, would effectively reimpose the death sentence in cases of first degree murder.

The decision to bring this matter to the attention of the House of Commons is not only representative of an enlightened leadership, but more significantly reaffirms the sense of responsibility towards the electorate which is shared by all Hon. Members of the Progressive Conservative Party.

In a poll conducted in the riding of Peterborough in 1981, 87.2 per cent of persons polled favoured a return to capital punishment for premeditated first degree murder. On a national level in 1982, a poll carried out by the Ottawa Citizen revealed that nearly three-quarters of the Canadian population want the death penalty restored and, even more, support a referendum on the question. The surveys accurately reflect the desire of a strong majority of all Members of Parliament to have a free vote on the question of capital punishment in order to fulfil their obligations and responsibilities to their constituents. I hope that this Bill, C-584, an Act to amend the Criminal Code, will be read a second time today and referred to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, Bill C-584 is a Bill to bring back capital punishment. I suggest that is a very wrong and mistaken principle and that this is a very wrong and mistaken Bill. We can understand why people want to reinstate capital punishment when there are murderers like Clifford Olson. However, I suggest that the risks are far too great. In addition to Clifford Olson and, far more likely, we have examples like Donald Marshall, who spent 11 years in a penitentiary for a murder he did not commit and for which someone else has since been charged. One of the last people executed in the United Kingdom, where there is a system of criminal justice very much like our own, was executed for a murder which it was subsequently found out he did not commit.

We now have plenty of information that capital punishment does not act as a deterrent in any general or specific way as for police officers. There have been many United Nations studies which have demonstrated this in many countries. We have actually seen the murder rate decline in Canada over a number of years, after the effective abolition of capital punishment here. I will not suggest that if capital punishment were reintroduced the murder rate would rise again; there are slight fluctuations from year to year. I suspect that there is in fact no relationship in terms of deterrence and the actual murder rate with capital punishment.

The Hon. Member who introduced the Bill spoke of the popularity of capital punishment in the general population. I will concede that a majority of Canadians at the present time would like capital punishment to be reinstated, at least for some purposes. However, I happen to be a sociologist, and a criminologist in fact, and I have done a little bit of work on this subject. In a book that I published: "The Sociology of Law and Order", I reported results from a survey in which I not only asked "Would you like to have the penalty of capital punishment?", but, as well, "If so, for what kinds of offences and what kinds of circumstances?" I found that support for capital punishment was highly qualified. People said that they only wanted it for mass murderers, multiple murderers, or cases where there could be no mistake because there were actually eye witnesses, or in situations of child abuse; in other words, extremely rare situations in terms of the crime committed and the witnesses to it, conditions which would almost never obtain.

I believe that when people indicate that they still want punishment, they really want a symbol on the books. They want to demonstrate that murder is really a heinous crime and that capital punishment is the sort of sentence which would be appropriate for it. They do not really want to see executioners back in business.

I understand the need for symbols, but I would like to suggest that this could be a very poor symbol. Symbols could have effects that we do not want. Bringing back capital punishment could give people a false sense of security. It could give the appearance of something being done to give them better protection against violence than, in fact, would be the case.

When we think of capital punishment and murder, we are, of course, focusing on an individual criminal. We have all been raised in terms of personal morality. It is easier to see a wicked person than to think of wickedness and evil in terms of corporations and generalities in institutions. Our stereotype of the criminal is of a wicked-looking deviant, an evil-looking person. If we lock him up and throw away the key or kill this person, we have a sense of security that something is better.

However, murder is in fact very infrequent in Canada. We are not a violent society. People who watch too much American television are left with the impression that there is far more murder than is actually the case, especially elderly people, who are far too often presented on television as being victims of crime. This gives them the impression that they are in great danger when, in fact, they are not. We are much more likely to be killed in a car accident, in a fire or because of bad working conditions. Here the time span is such that people do not realize they are being killed by hazardous conditions at work or where they live. We are much more likely to be killed by the unintended effects of corporate decisions than by premeditated murder. The culprit here is not a wicked person, but, rather, a negligent corporation, or a municipality or provincial or federal Government which licenses, permits, or, in the case of Crown corporations, actively perpetrates bad working conditions, such as pollutants, or low level radioactivity. There are many situations which cause long-term cancers in large numbers of people, such as pollutants in drinking water, in the air, the general conditions around us. There is no evil-looking crook here but the glossy pages of annual reports of corporations and smiling Cabinet Ministers saying that all is well.

[Translation]

There is no easy remedy for violence, but I am confident we can at least reduce the rate of violence, if we cannot eliminate it altogether. In fact, crime was worse in the 19th century, but further improvement can be expected only if we tackle the causes of violence.

Violence against women will be reduced as soon as women are respected in our society and accepted as equal partners. Meanwhile, we can improve the investigation procedures used by police in so-called domestic conflicts. We need research and experimentation, and the results of new procedures must be analyzed. Psychologists advise using the principles of negotiation in family conflicts and elsewhere. These procedures can be taught to young people. We should carry out experiments in resolving conflicts in our schools and with young people convicted of violent crimes.

We must seek out the best way of rehabilitating offenders and criminals. Recently, remarkable results were obtained in federal prisons through the use of post-secondary education. And then the Solicitor General dropped this program, which had the best record in the country! I feel this experiment should be continued and extended to other programs, instead of cutting the program.

It is generally agreed that there is a direct relationship between alcoholism and drinking, and the murder rate. However, in our society, the consumption of alcohol is encouraged by the advertising media. Prohibition is impossible without creating a black market, but we should not encourage consumption through advertising.

Hard-core pornography actually encourages violence, especialy towards women and children. Nevertheless, the federal Government has now given licences to pay television companies for broadcasting pornography. I say we should put a stop to hard-core pornography. That would be better than building new prisons for violent criminals. What does the Progressive Conservative Party intend to do about this? They would rather talk about capital punishment for murder instead of preventing murders. Did the Progressive Conservatives support my proposal for introducing measures to control pornography on pay TV? Are they against the causes of violence? No, they are not.

Recently, a Progressive Conservative Member introduced a Private Member's Bill aimed at removing certain firearm control measures. We must have very strict laws to control the possession of firearms. No more firearms, no more violent crimes including murder! It is mostly the Progressive Conservatives who want to bring back capital punishment, but the Liberals are also making false promises with respect to security. The Solicitor General has proposed amendments that will provide for longer incarceration of prisoners considered to be dangerous. He says this is to protect society by preventing violent crime. At least the public will get the impression that the Government is listening and is doing something about violent crime. However, I would like to point that fraud is also a crime. If such measures are to be successful, we must be able to determine which prisoners will continue to live a life of crime and which have been entirely rehabilitated. That is impossible, however. We would like to hope it would be possible, but that is not what reality tells us. It was the fond hope of reformers at the end of the 19th and at the beginning of this century. It was also a fond hope of my own party when it was founded in the thirties.

The Regina Manifesto recommended doing away with the present system of prison yards and prisons and so forth, and introducing a so-called scientific system with experts in psychology and psychiatrists who would treat crime as a disease. We know now that there is no system for the treatment of criminality. We in the New Democratic Party have abandoned these false dreams of science, but the Liberals still have a misguided confidence in the possibility of making scientific predictions on recidivism.

• (1630)

My point finally is that both the Liberals and the Conservatives will hold out false solutions and give false promises to the Canadian public. The Conservatives do so by suggesting that we can have security with capital punishment when there is no evidence that it has ever had this effect in the past or any reason to believe that it will in the future. The Liberals would do so by building more prisons and special handling units and by investing in more hardware. They are both simplistic, hardware solutions—gallows and steel bars—but they will not work. Life is more complicated than that. I am not saying there are no solutions in the sense of measures that would reduce violence. I would encourage experiments at rehabilitation and re-education, conflict resolutions, new methods of policing on the streets and in crime investigation, as well as gun control and measures to reduce alcoholism and drunkenness. Others include early identification of child abuse and re-education of parents, modest experiments with research follow-up to see how successful they are and changes in practice if they are warranted.

Finally, let me note that the rate of violence including murder would be reduced if we build a more decent society, a society in which there is care for those with difficulties, and help so that people will not be driven to desperate measures by unemployment, illness and despair. There is nothing to be gained by holding up false promises. Indeed, we may be lulling people into complacency with false measures and preventing the development of better measures. A bill such as the one before us today will accomplish no good. Let us not attempt to delude the public. Let us be honest about the problems, diligent and careful about seeking better solutions. We must now allow this Bill to pass.

Mr. Roland de Corneille (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Veterans Affairs): Mr. Speaker, it is to Bill C-584 that I address my remarks. In its simplest terms, this Bill is an attempt to reinstate the death penalty. Clause 2, subclause (2) states:

> Everyone who commits second degree murder is guilty of an indictable offence and shall be sentenced to imprisonment for life.

Subclause (1) states:

> Everyone who commits first degree murder is guilty of an indictable offence and shall be sentence to death.

One can see what kind of lugubrious subject we are dealing by reading the terms of Clause 3 which states in regard to section 597;

> A female person who is sentenced to death may move in arrest of execution on the ground that she is pregnant.

It continues in its humanitarian way:

> Where a motion is made under subsection (1), the court shall direct one or more registered medical practitioners to be sworn to examine the female person together or successively and to determine whether or not she is pregnant.

In other words, we are talking about how we will ascertain whether we will give a stay of execution on the ground that she is pregnant.

It is with deep sorrow and sadness that we find ourselves as legislators having to address the subject of those who have taken the life of another by murder. Certainly murder is the most gruesome and awful crime we can think of because murder is the violation of the most precious and basic human right of all; that is to say, the right to life. It is very hard for us to think that people could reach such a base point that they feel they have to take someone else's life. We talk about human rights. Certainly the most fundamental right of all is the right to life. It is the right to enjoy one's life and live it out.

I have to say that all too often we are only concerned with the subject of what we do with a person we think has committed murder, overlooking the suffering that has been wrought upon those who are relatives of the person killed. We spend a lot of time thinking about what we should do to the offender and perhaps too little time thinking of how we can try to help those who have been bereaved, those who have lost a loved one. All in all, it is a very sad subject.

It surprises me that we so often find ourselves faced with this same debate. We know that in 1976, the year of abolition, there were many debates. The debate raged on for three months. When the final vote on abolition of the death penalty was reached, the leaders of all three Parties agreed that the Bill should be passed and the death penalty abolished. The subject has been debated ever since.

One has to wonder why this debate is continually recurring. I ask Members and the people of Canada if it is because there is a deterrent when capital punishment is reinstated. Would the death penalty eliminate the murders that take place in Canada? All of the studies that have been made seem to indicate that most murders that occur in Canada are murders within the family.

We know also that the record and the facts show that the rate of homocide in 1975 was 2.77 per 100,000 in the population. In 1976, the year of abolition of the death penalty, the rate dropped to 2.66. In 1977 it rose marginally to 2.72. It fell again in 1978 to 2.62. In 1979 it was 2.5. In 1980, it dropped to 2.1 and in 1981 to 2.5. In other words, ever since capital punishment was abolished, since the death penalty was eliminated, the rate of homicide has been less than it was the year before. The rate was 2.77 per 100,000 of population in 1975 and it has continually been below that figure since. It was at 2.5 in 1981.

Would any reasonable person suggest that if we bring back capital punishment we will deter people from committing murder? All the statistics we have indicate to the contrary. There is no sociological explanation for that. There is no pragmatic evidence that we would be able to lessen the number of murders.

Why would capital punishment be reinstated? Do we want to try to discourage murders or is there another reason that people wish to bring back capital punishment? The pragmatic evidence certainly shows that it cannot be because it is a deterrent. If the obsession of certain Members of the Progressive Conservative Party to constantly bring back the request for capital punishment is not then based on deterrent, it must be based on some other reason. There must be another reason why they want to bring back capital punishment and go back to the olden days, the days of horror.

I suggest that if there is no evidence of deterrent, there must then be a desire for punishment in order to punish or get revenge on someone because they committed a murder. That must be the reason. Certainly it is not because it will reduce the number of murders. The facts indicate the contrary.

I am surprised that anyone would want to give the impression that they were speaking on the basis of moral suasion. Surely they cannot turn to the Scriptures, to religious organizations, or to the facts to support the idea that there should be a return of hanging. This Bill does not even say capital punishment, but leaves to some humanitarian discoveries what should be done and how it should be done. In fact, it prescribes hanging. In any case, where is the moral backing for the idea that we should have a return to capital pune?

The sixth United Nations Congress on the prevention of crime and the treatment of offenders called for all Governments that retained capital punishment to cease employing it. It called upon the General Assembly of the United Nations to promulgate a declaration that would urge its total worldwide abolition, to call on all non-governmental organizations concerned with human rights to make every effort at the national and international level to secure the abolition of capital punishment.

This opinion was submitted by such organizations as Amnesty International, Caritas Internationalis, Commission of the Churches on International Affairs of the World Council of Churches, Friends World Committee for Consultation (Quakers), International Alliance of Women, International Association for Religious Freedom, International Confederation of Free Trade Unions, International Council of Jewish Women, International Federation of Free Journalists, Pax Christi, Pax Romana, World Alliance of Young Men's Christian Associations, World Federation of United Nations Associations, World Jewish Congress, World Muslim Congress, World Student Christian Federation and the World Young Women's Christian Association.

All these world bodies condemned punishment and called for the elimination of capital punishment in every nation throughout the world. Surely, hon. gentlemen cannot suggest that this is some kind of moral cause these bodies are espousing. Nor can that argument be supported in terms of Canadian religious organizations on the suggestion that maybe these others are all communist infiltrated because they are world bodies.

When it comes to Canada, the argument is that maybe these are pinko organizations. But, these are world religious organizations. On the Canadian scene we have a similar endorsement in that the following churches and organizations have also condemned capital punishment and have called for its elimination—

Mr. Darling: What about the people in the churches?

Mr. de Corneille: —the Anglican Church of Canada, the United Church of Canada, the Canadian Catholic Conference, the Central Conference of American Rabbis, the Presbyterian Church in Canada, the Baptist Convention of Ontario and Quebec, the Canadian Unitarian Council, the Lutheran Church in America, the Quaker Society of Friends and the Mennonite Central Committee. They all oppose the death penalty.

Mr. Darling: What about the people in the congregations?

Mr. Fretz: What about the Canadian people?

Mr. Taylor: Don't the Canadian people count?

Mr. de Corneille: I am astounded that these people would try to set forth an idea that simply calls forth some idea of brutal revenge and punishment.

Mr. Taylor: You are talking about 80 per cent of the Canadian people, you know. They do not matter to you.

Mr. de Corneille: They do not wish to hear the truth. They do not wish to be confused by the facts, but the pragmatic evidence is, as I have tried to show you, Mr. Speaker, that bringing back the death penalty cannot act as a deterrent but acts, if anything, as a stimulus to murder.

Mr. Taylor: It stops them. They will never do it a second or a third time.

Mr. de Corneille: All the evidence indicates that since we have brought in the abolition of capital punishment the rate of homicide has gone down, not up, year after year after year.

Mr. Darling: What about attempted murders? The numbers are way up.

Mr. de Corneille: I have cited those statistics for you, Mr. Speaker. They are official statistics.

I hear a lot of noise from the other side, Mr. Speaker. They have had their chance to present their points of view. They do not need to make this noise. It is my turn to speak. I hope those in the Tory benches will allow me to have my say in a democratic society, something which is hard for them.

Mr. Taylor: Go ahead and mollycoddle.

Mr. de Corneille: There is this objection that has been raised. It is said that there are people in Canada, in terms of statistical who according to polls indicate they would like to see the return of capital punishment.

Some Hon. Members: Right.

Mr. de Corneille: When one phrases the question in different ways, one gets different results. When you ask Canadian people whether they would like to see capital punishment brought back and that we use the rope or whatever, you find that the number of people who want to bring back capital punishment, when confronted by those specifics, drops to less than 40 per cent. When one phrases the wording one way, one gets perhaps a kind of an emotional reaction. When one puts the facts before the Canadian people, one gets another.

If people still say to me, "nevertheless, you are the Member from Eglinton-Lawrence and we think there are more people in your riding who want a return of capital punishment than there are who want to eliminate it," I would have to say to them that I have to use my judgment—

Some Hon. Members: You tell them—

Mr. de Corneille: —as a Member of Parliament. There is still noise from the other side, Mr. Speaker. It is incredible.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. The parliamentary secretary has the floor.

Mr. de Corneille: I appreciate your bringing order back to the other side, Mr. Speaker. I have to say that I still have to use my judgment.

I want to quote from a speech delivered by Sir Edmund Burke upon his election to the constituency of Bristol in 1774. I address these words to my hon. friends on the other side in the hope that they will take them to heart. This excerpt from Sir Edmund Burke's speech reads:

Certainly, gentlemen, it ought to be the happiness and glory of a representative to live in the strictest union, the closest correspondence and the most unreserved communication with his constituents. Their wishes ought to have great weight with him; their opinion high respect; their business unremitted attention. It is his duty—

That is the duty of a Member of Parliament.

—to sacrifice his repose, his pleasures, his satisfactions, to theirs, and, above all, ever, and in all cases, to prefer their interest to his own. But—

And this is a point that Hon. Members on the other side have not taken into account.

—his unbiased opinion, his mature judgment, his enlightened conscience, he ought not to sacrifice to you—

The speech continues:

They are a trust from Providence, for the abuse of which he is deeply answerable. Your representative owes you, not his industry only, but his judgment; and he betrays, instead of serving you, if he sacrifices it to your opinion—

To deliver an opinion is the right of all men; that of constituents is a weighty and respectable opinion, which a representative ought always to rejoice to hear; and which he ought always most seriously to consider.

The last excerpt reads:

Parliament is not a congress of ambassadors from different and hostile interests; which interests each must maintain, as an agent and advocate, against other agents and advocates; but parliament is a deliberative assembly of one nation, with one interest, that of the whole; where, not local purposes, not local prejudices ought to guide, but the general good, resulting from the general reason of the whole. You choose a member indeed; but when you have chosen him he is not a member from Bristol, but he is a member of parliament.

I suggest it is my duty to look at the statistics and the facts. I have a responsibility if I want to try to reduce the number of murders in this country to make sure that we do not reintroduce capital punishment. Since we have eliminated capital punishment, the number of homicides has gone down. In all conscience as an individual and as a Member of Parliament I must speak out and say that there is no moral reason to bring it back. Every major religious denomination in Canada, indeed throughout the world, whether Christian, Jewish or Muslim, has condemned capital punishment and called for its elimination.

I must use my judgment, and I believe the judgment of my constituents would be the same as mine; with these facts and with the knowledge of the opinions of all moral and religious leaders, I feel that they would not agree with this Bill or want to see it passed.

• (1650)

I would like to commend the speaker who preceded me, although I disassociate myself from her remarks regarding the Liberal Party. I commend her approach when she said it is sad that we constantly have Bills introduced in the House dealing with homicide and how to deal with murderers, instead of dealing with the far greater slaughter throughout this country about which we hear so little from the Official Opposition. All kinds of gruesome things are going on, not only in this country but throughout the world. Let us remember our sins of omission. Millions of people are dying of hunger and starvation, yet all too often we in this country wallow in a great deal of affluence. Perhaps we should concentrate more on having Private Members' bills introduced, perhaps by Opposition Members, to draw our attention to those problems. Perhaps they would like to bring in more bills which deal with the unnecessary slaughter of so many people on our highways, or the lack of adequate protection of our workers in the workplace. It would be better if we had more bills that dealt with the prevention of violence and murder rather than a constant repetition of the desire to bring about revenge.

Mr. Ron Stewart (Simcoe South): Mr. Speaker, I rise in complete support of Bill C-584. My reasons for this support are very well documented. I would like to indicate to the Hon. Member for Eglinton-Lawrence (Mr. de Corneille) that although I am not a member from Bristol, I am a Member of Parliament and my duty is to convey the wishes of my constituents in an outright manner. It was interesting to listen to the statistics given by the Hon. Member, but he did not give us any statistics on how his constituents think. Did he give the percentages shown by the poll conducted among his constituents?

The previous speaker, the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood (Ms. McDonald), is a so-called expert on criminology and a sociologist. She said that she studied the system completely, but she did not study the wishes of her constituents. We did not hear any statistics from her about what those constituents want.

What we saw today was that same old socialist marriage; the Liberal-NDP coalition. We saw performed here a homicidal marriage of one side of the House to the other. I presented a petition in the House on behalf of my constituents in favour of the return. I have stood here in the House time after time indicating the wishes of my constituents. Approximately 88 per cent of them say, "Please return". I hope the constituents of the previous two speakers took due note of that unholy alliance.

[Translation]

Mr. Alain Tardif (Parliamentary Secretary to Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to participate in the debate on Bill C-584, particularly since I was not a Member when a historical debate was held on that issue in 1976. I am also very pleased to take part in the debate because I have never had an opportunity to voice my opinion on this very important question. The general public is very much aware of the issue, if only because every day newspapers' headlines relate to odious crimes which make capital punishment the main topic of discussions and conversations.

I think that people do seek such sensational news reports as a forum to debate the pros and cons of the death penalty. In all honesty, I think that we ought to admit that most Canadians are in favour of the return of the death penalty.

Still, a serious study of the matter would show that most if not all Canadians at first react intuitively and emotionally but that basically they are opposed to capital punishment. In my opinion, in 1983 we have a lot more data than was available when the law was changed in 1976, and we can now collate, quantify and interpret statistics which prove beyond the shadow of a doubt that the death penalty is not a deterent. On the contrary, statistics reveal that in recent years, since the death penalty was abolished, the number of qualified murders has declined.

If I may, Mr. Speaker, I should like to review everything connected with this topic. Given the vast amount of publicity related to it, it is very difficult to speak on such an issue without repeating old arguments or referring to certain aspects which have been heard one way or another in practically all discussions and debates.

My intention today is to mention only a few. First of all, as I have just said, it seems to me we should deal with the death penalty itself and ask ourselves whether we ought to devote part of the precious time of the House to this subject at a time when there are so many pressing problems to consider because Canadians are a lot more concerned about them than they are about capital punishment.

First, let us review very briefly what the problem is at the international level and in the Canadian context as a result of the Canadian Parliament's 1976 decision to abolish the death penalty for all Criminal offences. Second, I think it is important to examine the main arguments of capital punishment supporters. Although Hon. Members know that already, perhaps I ought to remind the House that a free vote was held on this question on July 14, 1976 with the results as follows: 130 for and 124 against, so the House abolished the death penalty for all Criminal offences. This vote brought to an end a most animated debate that lasted over three months and in which more than half the Members of Parliament took part. Bill C-84 was therefore in keeping with an abolition process started more than a century before in countries with the same common law system as Canada. The British criminal law was introduced in Canada in 1763, then called the blood code, and required the death penalty for over 200 types of offences, from the simple theft of turnips to being caught in disguise in a forest.

• (1700)

Following in the steps of Great Britain, Canada restricted the application of the death penalty in 1859 and again in 1865, when it was decided that it would be carried out only in cases of murder, treason or rape. In addition, changes were gradually made to Canadian laws dealing with the application of the death penalty, to reflect the reforms brought about in the United States.

A whole series of private bills calling for the abolition of the death penalty were also introduced in Canada between 1914 and 1917, but these bills gave rise only to short debates that were not followed by votes when they were not immediately ruled out of order. After the Second World War, both Canada and the United Kingdom passed legislation to restrict even more the types of offences punishable by death. After the royal commission responsible for considering the possibility of limiting and amending the statutes on the death penalty tabled its report in 1953, the British Parliament passed in 1957 a piece of legislation entitled the Homicide Act, which differentiated between crimes punishable by death and all the others.

In Canada, a joint parliamentary committee was set up in 1953 to consider various issues, including the death penalty. Following publication in 1956 of that committee's bulky report, a whole series of procedural amendments were passed which granted additional rights to the accused. In fact, a piece of legislation was introduced in 1960 to differentiate between offences punishable by the death penalty and the others, as the British Parliament had done in 1957.

In 1966, a multipartite resolution calling for the abolition of the death penalty was introduced in the House of Commons and was defeated, but one year later, following a free vote, the Government put a moratorium on the death penalty, except for the murder of a police officer or a prison guard. The last executions in Canada took place in December 1962. The five-year moratorium came to an end in 1972 and an act to extend it for another five years was passed by a narrow margin after another free vote in November 1973.

These, Mr. Speaker, were the various legislative steps taken over a rather long period which preceded the discussion and passage of Bill C-84 seven years ago. It is appropriate to note that all parties represented in this House participated actively in some very interesting and positive debates on this issue in 1966, 1967, 1973 and 1976. It should also be pointed out that all the arguments for and against the death penalty invoked today and during every one of those debates are very similar to those raised by the proponents and opponents of the death penalty through the years, and even by the Roman senators more than 2,000 years ago.

This issue should also be placed in its proper context, that is in a more global or internatonal context. While most countries still retain the death penalty at least for certain offences, for some decades, its application has been gradually restricted, not only theoretically, but also in practice, throughout the world.

In fact, the General Assembly of the United Nations passed resolutions in 1971 and 1977 asking all its members to reduce the number of offences punishable by death, which several countries have done in recent years.

Quite recently indeed, in April of 1980, the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe voted with a very strong majority a resolution and a recommendation in support of abolishing capital punishment in the Council's 21 member countries. According to a report submitted by Amnesty International, the 1977 Nobel Prize winner for Peace, three countries have completely abolished capital punishment last year, and another one has abolished it for crimes committed in peacetime. And, finally, another one has drafted a new constitution which was to come into force in July of 1980 and has abolished capital punishment for crimes committed in peacetime. Also, in 1979 and early 1980, significant attempts to reinstate capital punishment aborted in several countries.

If I am allowed to digress, I would say that each time we go through highly dramatic experiences, I admit that . . . In fact, I am referring of course to what unfortunately we have gone through on two occasions in Montreal penitentiaries, involving wardens. Each time, people see a relationship between capital punishment and what goes on inside penitentiaries. In other terms, the public at large, I do suggest, is often under the false impression that were capital punishment to be reinstated, incidents of that sort would not occur or would be prevented. As for as that aspect is concerned, I would merely refer Hon. Members to Bill C-584, which would provide that anyone sentenced to death could appeal. Under that legislation, there would be automatic appeals. Various sections of the Act provide for a whole series of time periods, whether to appeal, to review the proceedings, some sort of stay of execution.

I would therefore remind those who believe that capital punishment could prevent such tragedies from occurring, that convicts sentenced to capital punishment would still be under the supervision of wardens for relatively long periods of time.

I would therefore ask the following question: Is it not a fact that persons knowing that they have been sentenced to death could in theory and in practice be considered as a lot more dangerous to their fellow inmates than those who still hope to get out, even though their prison terms could be very lengthy ones as compared to someone whose life would be subjected to a specific term, namely the date of his execution?

In my view, that person would be a much greater, a much more serious potential danger for the institutional environment, for those who would have to come into contact with him or her while awaiting execution. This in my view flies in the face of the suggestion that capital punishment could prevent or put an end to tragedies such as the ones we have been through.

And outside Canada there is worldwide experience on the matter. The United Nations Report on the Abolition and Suspension of Capital Punishment which came out in 1962 did conclude that this does not have the immediate effect of significantly increasing the crime rate.

Let us now look at the Canadian experience since capital punishment was abolished in 1976.

Mr. Domm: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I cannot let this go without saying that it is obviously a filibuster on the part of Members of the NDP and the Liberal Party. We have only taken five minutes of the 55 minutes allowed for debate in order that we can refer this to the Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs. It is regrettable that Members of those Parties have gotten together again in order to filibuster any discussion on the subject of—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. That is not a point of order. The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the Solicitor General of Canada has the floor.

[Translation]

Mr. Tardif: Mr. Speaker, this was hardly a point of order—

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. Would Hon. Members resume their seats, please?

Mr. de Corneille: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I would like to ask how we can discuss that as a point of order when in fact it has insulted the Members on this side who are debating this subject with all sincerity.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. The Chair has ruled that the point raised by the Hon. Member for Peterborough (Mr. Domm) was not a point of order, and the Chair invites the Parliamentary Secretary to the Solicitor General of Canada to continue his remarks.

[Translation]

Mr. Tardif: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I must remind my hon. friends of the Opposition that if they only spend five minutes on the subject, it is likely because they have nothing to say. For that matter, in case they are interested, I wonder why there are only six of them present in the House now.

With your permission, Mr. Speaker, I shall continue my remarks.

As I was saying, capital punishment was abolished in 1976 in this country, which means that we can look back to seven years of statistical data. What, then, is the current murder rate? If Canada had witnessed a disproportionate increase in the murder rate since the abolition of capital punishment, I could understand why some members want one more debate on this issue, but what are really the facts? I refer Hon. Members to "Murder Statistics", a booklet published by Statistics Canada in August 1979. Tables I and II of this document provide full detailed information on the number of murders committed over the last few years. Table I deals with murder incidents, while Table II deals with individual murder cases. The incidents refer to the circumstances under which a murder was committed, irrespective of the number of the victims. On the other hand, individual murder cases found in Table II refer to the total number of murder victims per year. Well, in each case, the murder rate in 1978 was the lowest since 1974, that is, two years before capital punishment was abolished. I should add, for the information of my hon. friends opposite, that the 1978 data are the latest available. Now, let us have a look at these data.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order! I regret but I have to inform the Hon. Member that the time allotted to him has expired.

Mr. Pierre Gimaïel (Lac-Saint-Jean): Mr. Speaker, I simply wish to take a few minutes to point out to what extent the issue now before us may appear to be a fundamental choice for society.

An Hon. Member: The question!

Mr. Gimaïel: Of course, when I say a fundamental choice, I mean that the fact that a society may or may not have capital punishment is a measure of its progressiveness.

An Hon. Member: Filibuster!

Mr. Gimaïel: The Hon. Members who spoke before me, Mr. Speaker, have shown beyond a reasonable doubt that there has been a steady progress, not only in Canada but in almost all of the democratic societies of the world, and this goes to show how much enlightenment is part of our everyday life.

I listened earlier to the Hon. Member for Simcoe-South (Mr. Stewart), who would have capital punishment reinstated. We are reminded that the same Hon. Member had suggested earlier that the Durham Report should have been implemented in Canada, in other words that there should be one official language in Canada.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. The Hon. Member who was given the floor to make a speech should not be interrupted.

[Translation]

Mr. Gimaïel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

As I was saying, we are faced with the same kind of bigotry, because indeed there are prople in our society who like to promote confrontation. They will not face the facts. We have two languages in this country, because some of the people have French as their mother tongue while others have English. If there are criminals in our society, it is because of deficiencies in society. Why should society resort to the same tools as were used by murderers to wreak vengeance on them? What benefit can society derive from seeking vengeance, Mr. Speaker? None at all, and if there is one thing—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. Pursuant to Standing Order 24(2), it is my duty to interrupt the proceedings.

ELECTORAL BOUNDARIES READJUSTMENT ACT

FILING OF OBJECTION TO REPORT OF COMMISSION FOR NORTHWEST TERRITORIES

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. It is my duty to inform the House that an objection signed by the Hon. Members for Timiskaming (Mr. MacDougall), Western Arctic (Mr. Nickerson), Peterborough (Mr. Domm), Hastings-Frontenac-Lennox and Addington (Mr. Vankoughnet), Haldimand-Norfolk (Mr. Bradley), Surrey-White Rock-North Delta (Mr. Friesen), Parry Sound-Muskoka (Mr. Darling), Simcoe North (Mr. Lewis), Esquimalt-Saanich (Mr. Munro) and Halifax West (Mr. Crosby) has been filed with me pursuant to Section 20 of the Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act, Chapter E2 RSC 1970, to the report of the Electoral Boundaries Commission for the Northwest Territories. If the House agrees, I would suggest we follow past practice and print the text of the objection as an appendix to this day's Votes and Proceedings. Is that agreed?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. Shall all orders listed under Private Members' Public Bills preceding Order No. 246 be allowed to stand by unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

CANADA EVIDENCE ACT

INCRIMINATING STATEMENTS

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North) moved that Bill C-446, an Act to amend the Canada Evidence Act (incriminating statements), be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

He said: Mr. Speaker, the purpose of my Bill, as you have indicated, is to amend the Canada Evidence Act in respect to incriminating statements. It is my belief that a fundamental principle of our system of justice is that accused person are deemed to be innocent until they have been proven guilty. Yet, if and when these people are questioned or charged by the police without being giving the opportunity to be represented and protected by counsel they can in fact make admissions or statements and answer questions in ways which would very seriously prejudice their rights.

I am sure it is known by many Members of Parliament who receive reports from their constituents, and it is certainly known by lawyers, especially criminal lawyers, that frequently people who are being held by the police are not permitted to contact their lawyers when they ask for that right, or are not permitted to do so until after they have been questioned for as long as the police wish. There are many examples of that, Mr. Speaker.

I would remind Hon. Members of the Stephen Truscott case. This man was questioned by the police for long periods of time without counsel and was later charged and convicted of the most serious of offenses in our society, the offense of murder, without having had the opportunity, which I submit he should have had to have counsel present to make sure he was being questioned in a correct and proper way.

The Canadian Civil Liberties Association conducted surveys in the 1970s to find out what experiences arrested people had experienced in this regard. They conducted several hundred interviews and found that of those who requested access to the telephone a minority reported that such requests were granted immediately. In the greater number of cases, access to the telephone was denied outright or delayed until after questioning took place.

This survey only dealt with people who were later charged. Many of the people who were questioned and not given the right to get counsel were never charged. Even for those who were charged, the number permitted to get in touch with a lawyer was quite small.

I submit that the law should affirmatively oblige the police—and this is not the case now—as soon as practicable to advise an arrested person of his right to counsel and to make telephones available for such purpose. Some people will say that the law gives rights so that they cannot be involved in self-incrimination, and ask if this right does not also represent protection against police harassment. The answer is no. Many arrested people do not know they have such a right and many who do know lack the courage to exercise it. I refer to young people, native people, immigrants and particularly those who are not familiar with or comfortable in either of the official languages.

To repeat, I submit that the law should oblige the police, and it does not now do so, as soon as is practicable to advise an arrested person or people being questioned by the police of their right to counsel, and to make telephones available to such people. Until this is done the police should be barred from conducting interrogations until the arrested person has consulted with counsel or, having been advised of his right to do so, has waived the opportunity. To enforce such a provision, all of the information obtained by ignoring such measures should be inadmissible as evidence in court. What I propose is not something very revolutionary as I will try to indicate. It is the practice in Scotland and in the United States.

Let me list some of the major aspects of the Bill, Mr. Speaker. First of all, statements made by the accused must be made voluntarily to be admissible as evidence. Second, no statement is admissible unless its author is warned that he is not obliged to make a statement or that if he voluntarily chooses to make a statement it will be taken down in writing and can be used as evidence. Third, an accused is entitled to counsel and if he cannot afford counsel, one will be assigned.

Fourth, the accused shall have the opportunity to contact counsel or advise the local legal aid officials. Fifth, no interrogation shall take place after the person has requested counsel until the person has reasonable time to confer with counsel. Six, every person has the right to the presence of counsel during the interrogation. And seven, no statement made without the presence of counsel is admissible unless the person knowingly and voluntarily waives his right to counsel.

Such a clause does not exist in the Bill which is now before the Senate to amend the Canada Evidence Act, Bill S-33. Some protection for the person accused or questioned about a crime might be available in the Charter of Rights, Section 24(2), which deals with the exclusion of evidence bringing the administration of justice into disrepute. The problem with this is that the Section has not yet been tested. There is some indication that the Charter is being interpreted in a relatively conservative manner, particularly in the Province of Ontario. It will be some time before test cases indicate the strength with which the Charter will be interpreted.

To put the measure I propose into a statute makes it more all-encompassing and offers more positive protection—a more readily accessible protection—and puts the onus on the state to inform the person of his rights. It is a direct and positive action.

I said earlier that I am not suggesting something that is new and untried. In Scotland there is a total ban on custodial interrogation by the police and the restriction is backed by an exclusionary rule for any statements obtained in violation of it. Despite that, in 1971 Scotland had a crime clearance rate of 38.2 per cent, which compares very favourably with Canada which had a crime clearance rate of 35.5 per cent in the same year.

Similarly in the United States, where the procedures are much as I have indicated in the Bill, as a result of decisions brought down by the United States Supreme Court in the Miranda case among others, in-depth studies have shown no significant reduction in conviction or clearance rates since that major decision.

I think the principles I have enunciated in the Bill would widen the protection given to people and would further implement the fundamental principle that people shall be considered to be innocent until proven guilty. I know that what I propose is extremely controversial, not only among the general public but among lawyers and judges. I doubt very much that Members of the House would agree to pass the Bill today, but I would urge them to at least permit it to go to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs where it may get the kind of study in depth which I think it merits.

Mr. David Weatherhead (Scarborough West): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to speak on Bill C-446 and to follow the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow) who has been in this House since 1962. During this period of more than 20 years he has been in the forefront of social policy matters, legal, labour and employment matters, including issues such as the one we are discussing this afternoon.

Bill C-446 proposes to amend the Canada Evidence Act with respect to incriminating statements. Although the Bill's intent may be judged laudable in that it says it seeks to clarify the law, Members should be aware that, in fact, it fails to do so. In order to appreciate how this Bill fails to do so, one must begin with an appreciation of the existing state of the law. The subject of incriminating statements or, more colloquially, "confessions" has received and continues to receive a great deal of attention in our law.

I need not remind Members that the rule that a confession must be voluntary to be admissible is of long-standing. The rule can be traced back to two oft-quoted passages on the subject of confessions. The first, contained in Lord Sumner's speech in Ibrahim v. The King, (1914) A.C. 599 at pp. 609-10, is as follows:

> It has long been established as a positive rule of English criminal law, that no statement by an accused is admissible in evidence against him unless it is shewn by the prosecution to have been a voluntary statement, in the sense that it has not been obtained from him either by fear of prejudice or hope of advantage exercised or held out by a person in authority. The principle is as old as Lord Hale. The burden of proof in the matter has been decided by high authority in recent times in Reg. v. Thompson—

● (1730)

The second is found in the case to which Lord Summer refers: Mr. Justice Cave's judgment in Regina versus Thompson, 1893, 2 Queen's Bench 12 at page 16, wherein Mr. Justice Cave said:

> The material question consequently is whether the confession has been obtained by the influence of hope or fear, and the evidence to this point being in its nature preliminary, is addressed to the judge, who will require the prosecutor to shew affirmatively, to his satisfaction, that the statement was not made under the influence of an improper inducement, and who, in the event of any doubts subsisting on this head, will reject the confession.

This Bill seeks to define the term "voluntary statement" and in doing so adopts the rule in the Ibrahim case. What the Bill fails to do, Mr. Speaker, is to resolve the considerable debate which has raged over the proper definition of the term "voluntary".

I would refer Members to the leading Canadian authority in this area, Mr. Justice Fred Kaufman, of the Quebec Court of Appeal, who in the third edition of his classic work," Admissibility of Confessions", published in Toronto by Carswell in 1979, sets out the debate in the chapter dealing with the definition of "free and voluntary".

Mr. Justice Kaufman, on page 106, refers to an article by Professor Vincent Del Buono entitled "Voluntariness and Confessions: A Question of Fact or Question of Law", 1976-77, 19 Criminal Law Cases 100, which speaks of the two definitions of the term "voluntary" which have been adopted in Canada. This article was, by the way, cited with the approval by Mr. Justice Lamer of the Supreme Court of Canada in his judgment in the recent Supreme Court of Canada decision in Rothman versus The Queen, 1981, 59 Canadian Criminal Cases at page 31, and I quote:

> The first of the two definitions of "voluntary" comes from what may be termed a "narrow" reading of Lord Sumner's speech. In this reading, "voluntary" simply means that neither "fear of prejudice" nor "hope of advantage" was "exercised or held out by a person in authority." Accordingly, the only onus on the prosecution is to show affirmatively that neither of these elements led to the making of the statement. The two elements "fear of prejudice" and "hope of advantage" together are regarded as exhaustively defining those circumstances which would render the statement involuntary. The second definition of "voluntary" takes what may be seen as a "wider" view of what the term encompasses. "Fear of prejudice" and "hope of advantage" are not regarded as exhaustive, but rather merely as illustrative, of those circumstances which would render a statement involuntary. After a consideration of all the surrounding circumstances, it would still be open to the trial judge, under this "wider" definition, to find that the statement was not voluntary, even though he was satisfied that the Crown has discharged the onus of showing affirmatively that no threat was made and no promise held out by a person in authority.

This illustrates the two approaches and concludes as follows:

An approach to the issue of voluntariness based on the "narrow" definition of the term fails to satisfy a "wise rule of policy" in that it impels a limited and mechanistic application of a "special legal definition" and at the same time prohibits the exercise of a suitably wide measure of judicial discretion—a discretion which, as Lord Sumner observes, even predates his discussion of it in Ibrahim. It may be, as well, that the "narrow" definition is anachronistic, since it evolved from a set of historical circumstances which no longer obtain. It should be borne in mind that the Board's decision in Ibrahim came only two years after the promulgation of the first set of Judges' Rules in 1912. In one sense, the "narrow" reading of Lord Sumner's speech may be said to consider the speech as nothing more than a further exposition of those rules. The import of the "narrow" definition is to place a stricture upon police officers and other comparable "persons in authority" to neither exercise "fear of prejudice" nor hold out "hope of advantage" when obtaining a statement from an accused. The focus of this definition, then, is on the conduct of "persons in authority", and it proceeds from the premise that every statement made by an accused is presumed to be voluntary and true unless "persons in authority" are shown to have engaged in a certain specific course of prohibited conduct, namely, exercising "fear of prejudice" or holding out "hope of advantage". The proper concern of the courts, however, ought to extend beyond a mere review of the conduct of the authorities; moreover, the presumption on which the "narrow" definition is premised is, I submit, no longer warranted—if, indeed, it ever was. The "wide" definition quite properly shifts the focus of the inquiry from determination of whether or not a person in authority engaged in a certain category of prohibited conduct, to the real issue of whether the confession was made in such circumstances that the court may rely on its truthfulness. It is to this latter question that the trial judges in Rasmussen (1934), 62 CCC 217 (NBCA), Washer (1947), 92 CCC 218 (Ont. SC), Murakami (1951), 99 CCC 347, affirmed 100 CCC 177 (SCC), Gillis (1966) 2 CCC 219 (BCCA), and Beaulieu (1968) 1 CCC 143 (Alta. CA) were addressing themselves, and this ought to be, I submit, the true concern of all trial judges faced with questions of voluntariness. The absence of certain prohibited types of conduct on the part of persons in authority does not in itself guarantee the trustworthiness of a confession, although it is certainly some evidence of it. An inquiry into all the circumstances surrounding the making of the confession, including the mental state of the accused at the time, would provide a much greater guarantee of the statement's trustworthiness, since the trial judge would be free to address his mind to the entire question of voluntariness rather than being restricted to examining the conduct of "persons in authority".

It must be borne in mind that the ultimate concern must be to guarantee "the evidentiary trustworthiness of statements". Unfortunately, the present Bill, although intending to enhance the rights of the accused, may in fact inadvertently have the exact opposite result. The Bill reproduces the rule in the Ibrahim case and adds an additional ground of exclusion, oppression.

Is it the intent of the proponent of the Bill that oppression constitute an entirely separate category of exclusion? If so, should not the Bill seek to define that term with more exactitude? Further, while statutorily providing for the definition of "voluntary statement", the Bill has not explicitly provided for judicial discretion to exclude the confession in circumstances which, although not falling within the conduct prohibited to persons in authority, nonetheless places the trustworthiness of the confession in doubt.

The second major deficiency of the present Bill is that it does not seem to take cognizance of Section 10 of the Charter. Under Section 10, any accused has the right on arrest or detention to retain and instruct counsel without delay and to be informed of that right. The ambit of that right is at present under consideration by the courts. Clearly the courts have the power to exclude statements obtained from accused who have not been informed of their right to counsel. The courts will exercise that power when, in the words of Section 24(2) of the Charter which was referred to by the previous speaker, the admission of the confession into the proceedings would, having regard to all of the circumstances, bring the administration of justice into disrepute.

The law surrounding the admissibility of confessions has evolved slowly and carefully through the case law. This long development has attempted to balance the interests of society against the rights of the accused. The law as it presently stands is continuing to evolve, now within the context of the Charter. It may be useful if at sometime in the future police departments experiment with the procedures outlined in the Bill to see whether the number of controversies would, in fact, be reduced. But in the absence of such evidence, it would be a grave mistake to pass this Bill, for its effect may be exactly opposite to what its proponents intend.

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, I want to speak briefly on the Bill. I would like to commend the Hon. Member for bringing it before the House. I acknowledge the legal arguments which have been made by the Hon. Member speaking for the Government. However, I believe we are discussing people who are not acquainted with the Charter of Rights and Freedoms or acquainted with the law, or learned in the law. Many of them have never had any contact with the law before.

People have come to me time and time again saying that when they were arrested and taken to the police station, they were not even permitted to use the telephone. Some have told me that they did not know they had the right to ask to use the telephone. Many of them, most young people today, for instance, do not have a lawyer. They might not even know a lawyer. Therefore, when one of them is asked whether he wants to phone his lawyer or is told that he may phone his lawyer, it is superfluous because the lad probably does not know a lawyer in the whole city and would not know who to phone.

If there are one or two deficiencies in the Bill, as the Parliamentary Secretary just outlined, they could certainly be corrected in the committee. That is why we have committees. I feel very concerned about the fact that almost every Bill, no matter what its merit, that comes before Private Members is talked out by the Government. Surely some of these Bills have merit and would be worth while. I think that the Government must have adopted a policy of talking out Bills. We have committees set up. We could all learn from a number of these Bills. If a Bill cannot be amended so that it is satisfactory in committee, then, of course, it should be defeated. However, a search light could be put on many of these Bills. The importance of a committee carrying out a study of a particular matter should be brought out. This is not a study by highly legally trained lawyers, but rather by ordinary, everyday representatives of the people who come in contact with those who face these difficulties.

I suppose there is a great number of people who do not know their rights and who are alleged to have breached criminal law. Many of them were in the wrong place at the wrong time. Maybe they had no business being there, but they were not there fore any criminal purpose. However, I can understand a police officer taking such a person to the jailhouse or to the court room to question him about these matters. I am not worried about the seasoned criminal who may have been before a court two times, five times, ten times or, as in one case with which I am familiar, 150 times. Such people know their rights and demand them. There is no bluffing them. However, I am greatly concerned about young people who happen to be in the wrong place at the wrong time, with no criminal intent, who are apprehended and taken to be questioned. I certainly object to any type of law that deems that these people have been properly notified and advised, because, in some cases the police officers do not take the trouble to do so. As a matter of fact, as one or two police officers have told me, some police officers cannot be bothered. They are satisfied that a certain person has committed the offence, and that is it.

Let us say, for example, that John Doe is in a park at two o'clock in the morning and is taken by the police who believe him to have breached some criminal law. Why should he not be asked if he wants to phone his parents? His parents should have the right to know. If he is a young teenager, I think it should be a requirement that his parents be notified. He is there, never having been in a courtroom or perhaps never having been that close to a police officer, surrounded by policemen, and he is frightened stiff. He does not know what to do. He is simply a victim. He may or may not have committed a crime. Whether he did or did not, surely our laws should require that a teenager be permitted to phone his parents and have his father or mother come down. If he has a lawyer, he should be asked whether he wants to phone his lawyer. The police should not wait for him to demand it. Many of these young people would not think of demanding; they do not even know thay have the right to demand.

I think we can enhance this right of access to counsel, and the more we do the closer we will come to the desirable standard we have set out in the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. That is a right. However, if these young people do not ask for that right, or do not know they have it then often they may be accused and charged when, actually, they should not even have been charged. Once they are charged they do have a terrible feeling about it all.

The Parliamentary Secretary mentioned that we must weigh the rights of society versus the rights of the accused. I say that is fine if we are satisfied that the accused, the person charged, is the one who has committed a terrible crime. Then we must weight the evidence. Even so, why should he not have the right to counsel, as set out in the Charter of Rights and Freedoms? Why should the police not ensure that he has the opportunity to call his counsel or at least to call a friend or someone? People have told me that they were refused the right to phone a friend. They did not know a lawyer. Their parents were not in the city and they wanted to call a friend. They were refused that right. I do not think that is at all right. That is not weighing the merits of society against the merits of the accused. Let us give the accused every possibility to prove his innocence. He should be considered to be innocent. If he is found not to be innocent, then the punishment of the law should come into force or effect.

It would be a very good idea to send this Bill to the committee for examination. It should be examined with a spotlight, a searchlight; making corrections when something is not right, and maybe adding to it to make it a better Bill. I am sure the mover of the Bill would have no objection to either. However, it would tend to make our people in Canada realize that when they are picked up, wrongly or rightly, then they will have the full right of a citizen to prove innocence before being found guilty.

Mr. Robert Daudlin (Essex-Kent): Mr. Speaker, like my friend, the Hon. Member for Scarborough West (Mr. Weatherhead), I would like to compliment the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow) for having brought this issue forward. I also share some of the concerns just placed on the record by the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor). All of us have had experience with respect to those people uninitiated with the law and proceedings before the bar who have found themselves involved with local police officers and law enforcement agencies, very much at a loss in terms of how to deal with it.

• (1750)

My hon. friend for Scarborough West raised a number of issues with which this Bill does not deal. Obviously, all of us in the House would not want to be party to a piece of legislation that could result in the requirement of a pro forma, the likes of which all of us have seen on TV. I do not believe we would see it as an improvement of individual rights for an arresting officer to read from a card or by memory "You have the right to remain silent and if you decide to waive that right you have the right to counsel. If you cannot afford counsel you have the right to have one appointed for you by the court under the legal aid system . . . " The confusion that could exist in the minds of those individuals who are brought before legal authorities under those circumstances would prevent them, I believe, from having the opportunity of really knowing what was being put to them by way of choices.

Under the current laws and rules of evidence that have evolved, as my friend from Scarborough West has indicated, the court at least has the discretion to look at all the circumstances and determine whether or not in that instance a voluntary and informed decision was made to make a statement in the absence of counsel.

I suggest that as a result of the confining definitions that exist in this particular Bill, there quite frankly might be a loss of some of the protections that now exist rather than their enhancement. It certainly would in fact require a pro forma. I wonder if that is the end result my friend is seeking by putting forward this Bill. I suspect not.

Mr. Orlikow: It has worked much better in the United States.

Mr. Daudlin: My friend says that it works much better in the United States. I have had the opportunity to discuss this issue with defence counsel, prosecuting attorneys and people from the bench in the United States. It seems to me that the Miranda decision in the United States has fallen onto rather hard times and into disrepute. In fact, while the civil libertarians apparently heralded that decision tremendously when it came in, I think a contrary view of it is being taken now. They rather suspect that by giving at least lip service to the Miranda decision substantial erosion of civil liberties is taking place instead of increasing protection. I think one would want to be very careful that that line of reasoning not be taken here.

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Would the Hon. Member permit a question?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): The Hon. Member wishes to put a question to the Hon. Member for Essex-Kent. Is it agreed?

Mr. Daudlin: Mr. Speaker, I would be delighted to entertain a question, but perhaps a little closer to the end of my allotted time.

I wish to indicate to my friend for Winnipeg North that I do in fact have a great deal of sympathy for what he is attempting to accomplish by way of this Bill. I think it would be imprudent if we were to act upon it for the reasons I have indicated and others which I will make now.

I am sure the House is aware that the Senate Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee has before it Bill S-33, a proposed new Canada Evidence Act. Though not a complete code, it is nevertheless quite comprehensive in its treatment of the law of evidence. The question of admissibility of statements made by an accused to persons in authority is one of the areas dealt with in that Bill.

I understand that we are likely to have Bill S-33 before us in the fall and I think it would be wise to postpone discussion of the important questions raised by the Hon. Member in Bill C-446 until it can be debated in the context of the proposed new Canada Evidence Act. It has been said that the law of evidence is a seamless web. I submit that it would be counterproductive for this House to consider Bill C-446 out of context and without full awareness of the substance of Bill S-33. It is my understanding that we will not have to wait long for this opportunity, as the Minister of Justice (Mr. Lalonde) indicated his intention to proceed with the proposed new Canada Evidence Act as soon as possible.

Members of the House may not be aware of the amount of work that has gone into the preparation of Bill S-33. I think it might be of interest for them to know something of its history.

The law of evidence is, of course, one of the most technical subjects in the entire legal system. I think my hon. friend from Scarborough West demonstrated that in his speech a few moments ago. It is an accumulation of common law rules, exceptions to the rules and exceptions to the exceptions. As a result, it is extremely difficult to state the law with respect to many aspects of evidence and the principles of the law are frequently obscured in a morass of details.

Nor is the present Canada Evidence Act of much assistance in clarifying the law. The core of the Canada Evidence Act dates back to 1893 and represents the social values of that era. Such amendments as there have been occurred on a piecemeal basis, with the result that the Act displays a lack of consistency and, indeed in some instances, actually confusion as to its meaning and application. The law is further complicated by the fact that all Provinces except Quebec also have Evidence Acts to govern civil proceedings in their jurisdictions. There is no uniformity either between the provincial and federal Evidence Acts or between the Evidence Acts of different Provinces.

In an effort to bring some order into this important area of the law, the Minister of Justice in 1971 referred the subject to the Law Reform Commission of Canada for investigation and report. The Law Reform Commission studied the subject extensively over a period of four years, submitting its final report in December, 1975. The Commission recommended the adoption of an evidence code that would have replaced the common law entirely insofar as proceedings within federal jurisdiction were concerned.

Following reception of the Law Reform Commission Report the Department of Justice carried out consultations with the bar and bench across Canada over a period of almost a year. The reaction of the profession was generally unfavourable. The common law lawyers were particularly opposed to the concept of a code that would eliminate further reference to the common law precedents and principles that had become part of their intellectual and professional capital. Likewise, they were opposed to any change that would increase the area of discretion accorded to the judge in deciding whether or not evidence would be admissible. The climate was therefore clearly not favourable to rationalizing the rules of evidence along the lines proposed by the Law Reform Commission.

At about the same time some of the Provinces were showing interest in reform of their own rules of evidence. Indeed, the Law Reform Commission of Ontario published a report a few months after that of the Law Reform Commission of Canada in which it recommended passage of a new Ontario Evidence Act.

In an attempt to develop common rules of evidence that would apply to all the court proceedings, whether under the jurisdiction of the federal or the provincial Governments, the Ministers of Justice and Attorneys General in June, 1977, decided to approach the Uniform Law Conference of Canada to see whether it would be interested in acting as a non-partisan host for a project aimed at developing a uniform Evidence Act.

I should perhaps mention that the Uniform Law Conference of Canada is an independent body comprising legal experts from both the public and private sector. It was established to promote uniformity of legislation. The Deputy Ministers of Justice and the Deputy Attorneys General are ex officio members.

The Uniform Law Conference agreed to undertake this project, and in the fall of 1977 established a federal-provincial task force to study the laws of evidence, examine the recent reports on evidence by the Law Reform Commissions of Canada and Ontario and other recent reports and legislation in the area with a view to recommending uniform legislation. The task force, which was to complete its work and report back within three years, submitted its final report and a draft act in January, 1981.

Unlike the evidence code of the Law Reform Commission of Canada, the task force report recommended a legislative statement that, though broadly comprehensive, left room for development of certain areas through the common law. In addition, the common law would continue to serve as a guide to interpreting the new legislation and less scope would be given to judicial discretion in the interpretation and application of the rules than was given under the Law of Reform Commission code.

The report of the task force was accompanied by a draft uniform evidence act. The report and draft act were considered at a series of special plenary sessions of the Uniform Law Conference held from April to July, 1981.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 62—GOVERNMENT POLICIES

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville) moved:

That this House rejects the centralizing and interventionist policies of the Government as an ideological thrust aimed at introducing socialization of the Canadian economy by the back door and without the authorization of Parliament, and a definite and present threat to the freedom of Canadians.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this motion quite clearly and succinctly zeroes in on the main root of the problem that exists in our nation of Canada today. It is with increasing frequency, increasing obviousness and increasing clarity that the economic, social and political ills of this country can be directly linked to the massive Government intervention, collectivism and centralization that has been provided by the Liberal Government, aided and supported by the NDP, which is tantamount to a Liberal-NDP coalition. The tragedy is that all Canadians are paying the price, particularly those Canadians who face the task of seeking work and who find themselves on the unemployment rolls.

There are signals and warnings from literally every corner of Canadian society that this direction must change. There are admissions even from Members of the Government and apologists for the Government that this social experiment is not working and must be changed. There is a clear recognition that it has failed.

But what do we get from the Government? It basically steamrolls ahead, keeping on in an unrelenting fashion day by day, further penetrating the economy. In the course of that it is crushing the entrepreneurial spirit of Canadians, the creative spirit of Canadians and their innovative capability. It is destroying the confidence of the business community and is confiscating hard-earned taxpaying dollars from Canadians.

What is most important is that there is an underlying erosion and suppression of Canada's fundamental and basic freedoms. Just yesterday, the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) admitted to the House that the Government had lost control over a major Crown corporation, namely Canadair. He admitted that the Government was misled. The Government admitted that the mismanagement of this country had continued unchecked for a long period of time. The Government admitted that it failed to exercise proper accountability and to ensure the proper managerial expertise in this company, primarily because to a point it selects its friends to the board of directors rather than selecting people on the basis of their expertise. What happens? The Canadian taxpayer has been faced with the loss of $1.5 billion. This amount will probably reach $2 billion by the time this fiasco is through.

What has the Government set out to do? It really does not set out to correct the problem; it sets out to establish a bigger, bolder and more blatant monster by transforming the Canadian Development Investment Corporation into a Crown Corporation. It is really further perpetuating the problem that existed heretofore. Why does the Government do it? I suppose it is so it can appoint a few more of its friends to high positions and power and can further penetrate the marketplace. The combination of penetration of the marketplace and mismanagement can only amount to one thing—more dollars from the taxpayers' pockets.

The Globe and Mail just stated with reference to the Canadian Development Investment Corporation that it is a holding company to end all holding companies. It will be the largest holding company in Canada. It will have share capital of $1 billion. It will be able to borrow up to $3 billion. It is not accountable to the shareholders, or to the average Canadian who is the shareholder. It is not accountable to Parliament but to Cabinet. There is no control with regard to the value for money that will be expended. It has the ability to spin off numerous other Crown Corporations, to buy and to sell without any reference to Parliament and without a word of debate. Above all, Mr. Speaker, it can do this with no reference or control by the Auditor General of Canada. These monsters grow and multiply like rabbits.

What is more important and is becoming increasingly a concern of Canadians is that the Government proceeds with such blatancy and contempt for the taxpayer that Canadians from coast to coast are rising up and saying "Enough is enough." We have over 400 Crown corporations that are literally out of control. Let us look at Petro-Canada for a moment. When Petro-Canada was established it was to have been merely a modest window on the industry. It was to be involved in state to state trading and in exploration and development, particularly in those areas where the private sector did not enter. It was to encourage energy self-sufficiency. It did this because of the encouragement and the mandate from the Government.

There was no mention made of service stations. As a matter of fact, the former Energy Minister, Mr. Macdonald, who introduced this corporation, indicated that it was not the intention of Petro-Canada to become involved in the service station business. But what happened? Petro-Canada has over 1,500 service stations. How are we paying for them? An amount of $5 billion has been expended by this Crown Corporation, and where did it get the money? From the Canadian taxpayer. Every time an individual fills up his or her gas tank at any pump, he or she contributes four cents to a slush fund. We understand that in the next six months or so the bills will be paid for Pacific Petroleum, Atlantic Richfield, Petrofina and the British Petroleum acquisitions. Most of those companies were purchased at inflated prices. But the collection of the four-cent a gallon surtax will continue. The Government will build up a $3.5 billion slush fund. What for? I suppose to buy up more Crown corporations.

When you look at Petro-Canada over a seven-year period, on the basis of the 1982 financial statement it showed net retained earnings of $186 million. We have to bear in mind that this company gets its capital free. There is little interest on debt. If Petro-Canada had to function in the normal way in the marketplace and reward its shareholders, conforming to the financial and commercial marketing conditions of the real world, it would probably show a loss in excess of half a billion dollars.

More and more Canadians are realizing that Petro-Canada has not been a good investment. Reserves are not increasing. As a matter of fact, I think oil reserves have remained relatively the same and gas reserves have decreased. What about self-sufficiency? Petro-Canada has really not contributed to Canada's self-sufficiency. This corporation seems to be more interested in self-sufficiency in places like China, Senegal, Jamaica, Pakistan or Tanzania.

• (1115)

What else is concerning Canadians? It is the slip-shod accounting procedures and tactics to which the Auditor General referred. For example, there was the acquisition of Petrofina for $1.7 billion and the purchase of British Petroleum Canada, which started out at $347 million and ended up at $577 million. In his latest report, the Auditor General drew attention to the fact and warned the Government that there was a serious weakness in the manner in which Petro-Canada has been delegated authority to act as the major instrument in implementing the provisions of the National Energy Program. Quoting from page 12 of the Report of the Auditor General, in part it reads:

> This means the Government of Canada chose to delegate the implementation of a crucial decision concerning the National Energy Program to an entity that is not fully accountable to Parliament. This constitutes a serious weakness in the management of public funds.

What has been done to check that? We know of nothing. What did the Auditor General say about Petro-Canada? He said:

> When the Petro-Canada Act was given second reading in the House of Commons, the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources placed great emphasis on the need for energy development, including risky and costly exploration in the far north, and government-to-government oil deals. However, the company's biggest financial undertaking to date, involving an investment of $1.7 billion, was in the oil refining and marketing business—Petro-Canada's purchase of Petrofina.

It has become an agency to infiltrate the private sector.

What about the broader context? There is a deep concern shared by all Canadians in the country. In effect, in the section dealing with matters of special importance and interest with respect to Crown corporations, the Auditor General referred to the myriad of Crown corporations as a form of subgovernment. He said:

> The citizens of Canada have a right to consider themselves the principal shareholders of these organizations; parliamentarians speak for them. Crown-owned corporations must be held accountable through Parliament.

He went on to say:

> These organizations have a greater impact on the economy and the life of Canadians than ever before. There are now more people working for Crown-owned organizations than there are working in government departments and agencies when the RCMP and the Armed Forces are excluded. A subgovernment has been created to fulfil some of the social and economic aims of Government. This subgovernment structure is not as accountable as I believe it should be.

To top it all off, we have his warnings and the warnings of the previous Auditor General. Also we have the admission of the Prime Minister yesterday that things were out of control. Yet Government refuses to change direction.

The country must be relieved of the technocrats and elitists who believe they can make the best decisions for Canadians. They believe that through the centralization of authority and decision-making they can make the ultimate in decisions for Canadians. Essentially this is based upon their maligned and disjointed philosophy. They do this, ignoring the realities of the world marketplace and ignoring the intelligence and the expertise of individual Canadians and individual Canadian businesses.

I find this action contemptuous. The utopian ideal, which may be espoused by my friends across the way and particularly by my friends to the left, that Government can plan and regulate everything to perfection has clearly been discredited; yet that myth prevails here in Ottawa. A country as large and diverse as Canada, with its potential and capacity in human and natural resources, requires the freedom of individuals based upon their intelligence, their instincts and their intuition to make decisions; to share those decisions with other individuals, with other corporations and with other governments; and to encourage risk-taking unfettered by the manipulation and interference of government.

No one person or group of persons can be a substitute for the complexity and variety of decisions which must be made in the day to day operations of the economy and of the stock market and that make the business engine turn. That is what we have in Ottawa today. Basically Canada's economy has become a game, played by the bureaucrats and the theorists, and essentially Canadians are the pawns.

Instead of the producers and builders running their operations, generating wealth and maintaining jobs, they must come to Ottawa cap in hand and wait for a decision. They have to wait for the next bureaucratic edict, tax policy or royalty policy to be espoused. The cost has been crushing to business, particularly those businesses associated with the energy sector, as a result of the National Energy Program.

The National Energy Program, with its attack on the oil sector and its discrimination against the domestic and foreign investor, has created a disaster in this country. It still continues to be the Liberal policy. It has destroyed the service and supply sector in western Canada. Some 20,000 to 30,000 jobs have been lost. Only 30 per cent of the rig fleet is working today. Every well that is being drilled creates 692 man-days of work. There have been bankruptcies, not of large businesses but of small Canadian businesses.

What this Government has overlooked is that every dollar spent in the energy sector in western Canada generates two dollars worth of activity in other places. Of every dollar spent in Alberta, 42 cents ends up in Ontario, 15 cents in Quebec, 29 cents in Alberta and 14 cents in other Provinces.

We could not find fault with the fundamental objectives of the National Energy Program; it is the manner in which the implementation took place. There was to be fairness in revenue sharing, acceleration of the Canadianization of the oil and gaz industry and oil self-sufficiency by 1990. The Government however was basically aiming at extracting the highest possible federal revenue that it could and imposing an increased Canadian ownership and Government control upon an industry which was tantamount to nationalization.

We have not achieved the goal of self-sufficiency and we have not achieved a fair pricing regime. Our gasoline prices at the pump are higher than in the United States. This is particularly true with regard to agriculture. Every time a farmer fills his tractor, 65 cents per gallon goes into Government coffers.

It has not attacked the multinationals, as was suggested it would. A recent edition of Oilweek magazine indicates that the net income for foreign-controlled companies declined by 11 per cent. By the same token, the income of Canadian companies declined by 37 per cent.

What is very disturbing as well is that it was a calculated decision to shift the exploration of oil from the conventional area to the frontier and offshore. A recent example is Petro-Can spending $70 million on a dry hole drilled off the coast of Nova Scotia. They did not use a Canadian rig but a Norwegian rig. With that amount of money, 240 gas wells or 98 oil wells could have been drilled in the sedimentary basin. Either of those projects would have created 38,000 man-days of employment.

The result of generation of a huge bureaucracy, which is costing about $1.5 billion, is that we now have three accountants for one working geologist whereas before the NEP we had one accountant for three geologists. We have a situation where the bottom line is simply that the NEP has been a massive failure. There is no other way in which it can be described.

What is more disturbing is that this Government wants to repeat this tragedy and penetrate its influence further in other areas. I refer to agriculture. Canagrex is the monstrous equivalent of the National Energy Program. It will probably lead to the establishment of five-year plans where Canadian farmers will have to check with Ottawa before deciding what to seed, how much fertilizer they will require and how much weed spray they should buy. There will probably be supermarkets. This proposal is a step in the wrong direction. When will we learn from the experiences of the past?

A new feed grains policy is being drafted. It, too, will put more power and influence in the hands of the livestock feed board and the Minister responsible. The new western rail policy provides for additional powers, more centralization of power in the hands of the Minister.

• (1125)

There is a debate now going on about the fishing sector. I suspect that the Government will probably espouse the formation of a Crown corporation that will take over the fishing sector.

Mr. Epp: We will have to blame Canagrex for that.

Mr. Mazankowski: My hon. colleague says that we will have to blame Canagrex for that. The Government wants control over the news media.

The emergency planning order has not been brought to the House for debate. It has been imposed simply through regulation, and in times of real or apprehended emergencies the Government can take total control of the economy. It can invoke censorship and suspend civil liberties. It will take over all of these things, Sir, from basic civil liberties to the whole of the economy.

The November, 1981 budget really was the most anti-business, anti-investment and anti-growth budget that has ever been delivered in the House. Thank God that, through the efforts of the Opposition and others, there has been a retraction of that budget. But the latest budget is really no better. The Government has indicated that the new budget will use the private sector as the main engine for recovery. The Minister of State for Economic Development (Mr. Johnston), the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Lumley) and the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lalonde) masquerade by saying that they are the great defenders and supporters of the private sector. Yet looking at their policies they are really espousing more and more state Government control.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, seven years ago 36 per cent of Canadians polled saw big labour as the biggest threat to Canada's future; 29 per cent named big Government and 20 per cent named big business as the biggest threat to Canada's future. This November that same poll shows that 50 per cent of Canadian people believe that the federal Government's influence on their way of life is too great.

The fact of the matter is that the Government's unrelenting intervention, its confiscating tax policies, its huge bureaucracies, and its creation of a multitude of Crown corporations have complicated the economy and created a costly burden upon all Canadians in the country. Furthermore, these things have stifled and eroded not only our economic freedom but indeed our political freedom. We all know, Sir, that true democracy cannot function within this kind of a controlled economy. That is why we brought this motion forward for debate. We draw to the attention of the House and Canadians in general that the Government's trend is wrong. The Government must reverse its dangerous and tragic trend and we implore it to do so without delay.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Speaker, that was a very interesting speech made by the previous Member. I would like to make a comment, and the possibility of a response to my comment would be appreciated.

I would like to observe, Mr. Speaker, in speaking about energy, that the combined efforts of both the Conservative provincial Government of Alberta and the Liberal federal Government in Ottawa is what has really destroyed or harmed the energy industry in Alberta. I would recall to the previous speaker that Peter Lougheed, the Premier of Alberta, gave a $5 billion incentive to Alberta oil companies and these companies promtly took that $5 billion out of the Province. In his blind adherence to free and private enterprise, Premier Lougheed attached no performance guarantees to that money. He gave a $5 billion gift to the oil companies and that money was promptly removed from the Province of Alberta and used to buy 20-cent dollars in order to drill offshore and in Canadian lands.

I suggest to the previous speaker that it was the blind adherence to the ridiculous policies of both the Conservatives and the Liberals that caused a great deal of harm in Alberta and ended up creating an enormous amount of unemployment and a serious hampering of the energy industry in the Province. If a proposal were put forward to rectify this situation, that proposal would not only have to change Liberal policies but would certainly have to change that blind and ridiculous approach of the Conservative Government. I suggest that if we are to continue following that blind approach, we will end up destroying medicare and most of the institutions that have been created in the country.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Epp: That is a 6 per cent solution.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please.

Mr. Mazankowski: I thank the Hon. Member for his question. I might begin by reminding him that I am still a Member; I am not a former Member.

Second, I think he would find that there was general concurrence among the Canadian population and indeed among all sectors of the energy industry that it was not the combined forces of the Liberal and Conservative Governments that brought the energy industry to its knees. It was really the efforts of the Liberal Government, aided and abetted by the NDP in Ottawa, that perpetrated the mess. I know that the Hon. Member is supportive of the so-called New Democratic Party industrial strategy which would propose to turn the total Canadian industrial sector into the equivalent of a National Energy Program. We disagree with that fundamentally because it has been proven that it does not work in the energy sector. It will not work in the other sectors of the economy either.

• (1130)

As far as blaming the Province of Alberta is concerned—and I take offence at that—I think the Hon. Member should know that the benefit of the low price provided by the Government of Alberta and the producing Provinces has not accrued to the consumer. That is concurred in by the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Chrétien), who points out day after day in this House that it was really the Provinces of Quebec and Ontario that moved to take up the slack. Any slack that they did not take up was absorbed by the federal Government. I would remind the Hon. Member that 65 cents per gallon goes into federal coffers. While Alberta was selling oil at the wellhead price of 50 per cent of 55 per cent of world price, that advantage was not accruing to the consumer, and I say that is a tragedy.

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Speaker, I should like to run through this one more time to see if the Hon. Member can get it straight. Many other Conservative Members have problems with this.

The point I was making was that the Premier of Alberta—a Tory's Tory—gave away $5 billion of Alberta's money without any performance requirements in that Province. As a result, we are now looking at deficits in that Province and 136,000 people unemployed as well as a serious problem in developing adequate energy supplies. The Alberta Energy Corporation simply took the gift at the expense of the people of Alberta, bought 20-cent dollars and moved the industrial activity or energy activity offshore into Canada lands.

I would ask the Hon. Member if he does not agree that that was a failure of the Conservatives at the provincial level and of the Liberals at the federal level.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member should go to Alberta and talk to some of his NDP friends who offered an alternative to the Government which the people of Alberta rejected.

As far as the Hon. Member trying to explain the NDP energy policy is concerned, the polls show that only 16 per cent of the Canadian people understand it. I do not think I have to take any lessons from the Hon. Member about the way the Government of Alberta is run. Neither does the Premier of that Province. I invite the Hon. Member to go to the Province of Alberta, talk to a few people and he will be enlightened. It might improve the quality of his questions.

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Speaker, I recognize that the Hon. Member, being from the Province of Alberta, may spend a little more time there than is required in Ottawa without surveying opinions in his Province. He should be aware that in the last few months, in the times that I have been in Alberta, there has been a great deal of criticism of the policies that have harmed the economy. Alternatives have been put forward. If the Hon. Member were sincere in his presentation to the House, he would recognize the serious problem. The Conservatives must clean up their act. Blind adherence to private enterprise is not the way the country will function effectively or ensure an even distribution of benefits.

It is Conservative Governments that are destroying other institutions in the country, not just energy. Medicare is on the rocks and so are hospitalization schemes in Provinces where Conservative Governments are in power. Gradually we will see the complete erosion of an equitable approach to distribution in Canada if that Party gains power federally.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I do not want to be flippant but I want to say to the Hon. Member that I can only back up the sincerity of my argument by the fact that people support the policy of the Government of Alberta both at the ballot box and in the public opinion polls. As far as the Conservative policy is concerned vis-à-vis the NDP, I think it is quite clear from public opinion polls that the NDP is out of the picture. The Conservatives must be doing something right. They must have some policies that Canadians embrace.

Perhaps the Hon. Member should go to the Province of Saskatchewan as well. Not only did a Liberal Government destroy what was left of the energy sector in Saskatchewan, but that destruction was aided and abetted by a provincial NDP Government. The new thrust, "Open for Business", in Saskatchewan is really taking hold. In spite of the National Energy Program, a vibrant new energy sector is emerging. It means jobs and it means the generation of new wealth.

Perhaps the Hon. Member exemplifies the reason the NDP is doing so poorly around the country. It is trying to do everything in its power to take hold of an issue, but I suggest to the Hon. Member that he is on the wrong wicket with this particular issue.

Mr. Althouse: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Hon. Member would explain to the House how the industrial policy is working in Saskatchewan. As a Member from that Province, it seems to me that we have succeeded in getting that so-called industrial expansion in the oil business which he referred to and which is not very apparent to people on the ground there, at the expense of a provincial deficit like none we have ever had, somewhere in the area of $350 million by the end of this year. That is because we have given away the oil revenues and the resource revenues of the Province in our attempt to attract some activity.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, the New Democratic Party cannot have it both ways. It says that the Conservative Governments are not compassionate, that they do not care about people, I think the Premier of Saskatchewan and his Cabinet demonstrated compassion in their budget when they considered the importance of maintaining the level of social and welfare standards. They encouraged job-creation activities, as a Government should in times of economic decline.

I think the fact is that they have put more money into the hands of the average citizen in Saskatchewan by the reduction of the sales tax on gasoline. They have assisted home owners and have done a lot of things to help the average Saskatchewan citizen.

It is really strange that all the flak is coming from the socialists. Perhaps the message is getting through to the Government. It may be prepared to take a new course, but it certainly does not meet with the approval of my socialist friends to my left.

A Member from British Columbia was chastising me not too long ago about the fact that they were going to walk over the Social Credit Party in British Columbia. We have not heard anything from them lately on that issue. They are most sensitive. I guess the motion has already served its purpose.

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) knows of the affectionate regard in which I hold him. Nothing he has said today will shake that regard. He started off by saying this motion was very clear and succinct. I am not surprised that he did not read it. It says:

> That this House rejects the centralizing and interventionist policies of the Government as an ideological thrust aimed at introducing socialization of the Canadian economy by the back door and without the authorization of Parliament, and a definite and present threat to the freedom of Canadians.

If the Hon. Member believes that is clear and succinct he will believe anything—as clearly he does. It is a motion which is typical of so much of what is happening in the Tory Party these days. It is excessive, myopic and confused. I doubt that the Hon. Member knows what it means.

• (1140)

He accuses us of the terrible sin of "socialization". He should look at the Oxford Dictionary; it is a well-known book. "Socialization" means acting in a social manner. If there is anyone who is being socialized around Ottawa these days, it is the Tory Party. It is out wining and dining and partying as the candidates are looking for delegates in the their quest for new leadership.

This motion is a ragbag of windy rhetoric without any substance. What the Hon. Members have done is drop into the motion any old scare word they could find. A few years ago, Mr. Speaker, there was an election campaign in the American south in which one of the Senators—in fact still a distinguished representative of the American Congress—was attacked by his opponent in a vicious campaign. His opponent said: "His brother is a self-confessed philanthropist and his wife is a thespian". If the Hon. Member had thought he could scare up any votes, he would have accused us of being self-confessed philanthropists and thespians.

Mr. Mazankowski: Watch the polls next month.

Mr. Roberts: What does the Hon. Member really mean by "socialization"? It is hard to know. He certainly does not seem to understand what the word means. Perhaps he means that this Government, this Party, is committed to social reform, that we do believe we can help.

I apologize, I did not mean to be so harsh. That the Hon. Member could not stand it; that he had to leave the House. However, if he thinks this is bad, wait until my colleague the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) goes after him this afternoon.

Yes, Mr. Speaker, we do believe that Government can help society by providing a basic structure of social protection. If that is his accusation, then we are guilty. We are not only guilty, we are proud. We in this Party and this Government are proud that we have been responsible for building the basic structure—

Mr. Taylor: That is why you are way down in the polls.

Mr. Roberts: —of social protection.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Roberts: We do believe that society should care not only for the rich and the self-important. We do believe that society should care and that Government can help those who are not fortunate in a society. We do believe in those things.

Yes, we were responsible for Family Allowances; guilty. Yes, we believe in old age pensions; guilty. Yes, we support the Unemployment Insurance Program which, in these days, has shown how important and valuable it can be to a country in a period of recession. Yes, we are proud that we brought in medicare; guilty. Yes, we believe in Guaranteed Income Supplements; guilty. Yes, we support the Canada Assistance Program; guilty. If that is what the Hon. Member means by "socialization", then we are guilty.

It is odd, though, Mr. Speaker, to realize that these programs we brought forward, that "socialization", were fought by that Party opposite. The Conservatives fought these programs when they were introduced. They do not fight them now, however, not in specifics. They do, of course, with their windy rhetoric but not in specifics.

I would like to welcome the Hon. Member back to the House. I promise not to say anything too unkind about him from now on.

Mr. Mazankowski: I just had to take a phone call, and they agreed with everything I said.

Mr. Roberts: One has only to look at that Party's leading candidates, and perhaps I should not say this to the Hon. Member because he has not the courage to support any of the candidates for the Progressive Conservative leadership. Perhaps, Mr. Speaker, "lacking in courage", is not a parliamentary expression. Perhaps I should say he has the good sense not to support any of the Progressive Conservative candidates for leadership. However, you do not find those leaders attacking these programs. Mr. Mulroney is not opposing medicare. The Hon. Member for Yellowhead (Mr. Clark) is not opposed to Family Allowances. The Hon. Member for St. John's West (Mr. Crosbie) is not opposing old age pensions. Oh, no. With rhetoric, yes, they are against "socialization", but they are not against those programs. Perhaps they do not understand why those programs are good. However, what they do understand is that the Canadian public needs them and wants to have them.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Roberts: Perhaps what that Party is talking about with "socialization" is economic socialism. Maybe that is the ragtag they are trying to stick to our image. In that case, they do not have very long memories, do they, Mr. Speaker? They forget that it was Liberal Governments with Louis St. Laurent and C. D. Howe which established the basic, tremendous growth and structure of economic development in Canada. Is that the kind of intervention which they are opposed to in their resolution?

They do not have very short memories, either. Is it because we stand for some sort of "socialization" that the recent budget brought forward by my colleague, the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lalonde), was applauded by virtually all-business people—small business, large business, medium-sized business? Is the investment tax credit socialization? Is the special recovery refundable tax credit socialization? Is the special recovery share-purchase tax credit socialization? Is the special recovery investment fund socialization? Is the special recovery exports financing fund socialization? If that is "socialization", then the country is certainly going to benefit from that kind of approach to our economic problems.

This motion rejects "interventionist policies". That Party is against intervention. It is wonderful to listen to the Hon. Member. His speeches ring out across the land. Who can forget those marvellous attacks against Premier Lougheed for the purchase of Pacific Western Airlines? Who can forget his astringent comments against the Conservative Government of Ontario for the purchase of Suncor and for their involvement with Ontario Hydro? Who can forget his flaming attacks against the retroactive appropriation of trust companies? Oh, yes, he is against intervention. Every day we hear the Hon. Member speak out against such intervention as the Canadian Wheat Board, for instance.

Every day I listen to the comments of his colleagues. For instance, in my own area of responsibility, when we talk about forestry policies in this House of Commons, his colleagues seem to be always asking me to do less in forestry. They seem to be always suggesting we could get by without doing as much, that we do not need more, that we should not be more active. That is what his colleagues seem to be saying all the time. Nonsense. He should talk to his seatmates. They are pushing and pressing the Government to do more and more in the forestry area.

Mr. Taylor: More for the people. Less for the Liberals.

Mr. Roberts: In science and technology, for which I used to have some responsibility, of course, his colleagues are saying to do less. "Do not intervene. Do not help. Do not assist. Do not provide a context in which research and development can get done." And pigs will fly! Every day they are urging me not to intervene, not to seek better regulation of industry to try and tackle the acid rain problem. Oh, yes, each day on the other side of the House they are asking us to do less in tackling water quality problems in Canada. Yes, in theory, in rhetoric, in that kind of overblown, windbag style. However, when it comes down to specifics—because more of them over there are practical and understand the wants of their constituents—they want Government to be involved and to help.

Mr. Thacker: Tell us about the debt and the interest to service the debt.

Mr. Roberts: Their rhetoric simply does not match the realities of this country. The sad fact, Mr. Speaker, is that they do not understand the realities of this country. "Socialization" means "render fit for society". Yes, we believe that the Canadian economy should be fit for this society, that it should serve this society. That is why we have always had in this country a positive involvement of Government in the Canadian economy. It is not because there is some, to quote the words of the Hon. Members opposite, "ideological thrust". Does that not sound sinister, Mr. Speaker? It is not because of some ideological thrust. It is not because of ragbag rhetoric. It is because of the practical realities of this country.

There has always been Government involvement in the economy of this country. It is at the heart of the history of our country. Government has been involved from its beginning in the creation of canals, in the creation of railways, in marketing, in air transportation, and in countless programs. Not because of some abstract, windblown, ideological conception, but because given the size of this country, and given the size of its population, there has had to be a constructive and positive role for Government in assisting economic growth and assisting the private sector to do what it can in the creation of growth in this country. The Government must be involved and it must help if Canadian society is to thrive.

• (1150)

That is what Hon. Members opposite do not understand. They think that what we have done, as Liberal Governments, is because of some sort of—how did they put it?—some sort of "back door" approach? This was not done by the back door; it was done because of elections. Why we have been able to do these things as a Government is that the people of Canada wanted us to do them. I suppose it might be possible, somehow, to do them by the back door. It might be possible somehow to be sneaky, to fool the people once and a while and to take power that way. However, would it be possible for 45 of the last 50 years? It was not because we did it by the back door, but, rather, because we responded to the reality of the country in a way which Canadians could understand and did not simply try to serve up to them empty, posturing rhetoric.

The tragedy of the motion is that Canadians deserve much better from the Conservative Party. They deserve to have an Opposition which is prepared to define alternative policies which relate to the reality of this country so that Canadians have an effective choice.

The tragedy is that the Conservative Party has turned its back on its own heritage. Its one great Prime Minister understood the reality of country. Sir John A. Macdonald understood that reality. If he were back here now, he would stand in the pillory condemned by the Hon. Member for Vegreville for the kind of approach that he took with regard to that terrible railroad, that awful railroad, the intervention of Government into society to create that railroad, that terrible intervention, that kind of centralization. If Sir John A. Macdonald were back in the House today to hear the motion, he would have crossed the floor to this side, if he would not have crossed it long ago.

Mr. Gray: He was a Liberal Conservative.

Mr. Roberts: What this country needs is not the kind of vacuous piffle which this motion represents. What it needs is a Conservative Party which remembers the heritage it once had, and remembers the kind of approach that once made it a relevant Party to the problems of this country.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mazankowski: I would like to ask a question of the Minister who just concluded his remarks. He essentially ignored the issue of the economic thrust as contained in the motion and sought to divert his comments in an attempt to focus on the various social programs, the old age pension, Unemployment Insurance, and things of that nature which, as Members of a compassionate Party, we have always supported.

Mr. Fisher: Careful now.

Mr. Mazankowski: The fact of the matter is that there has been an increasing wave of Government intervention in the Canadian economy, as witnessed by the NEP, as witnessed by the economic development thrust into the 1980s, as Government policy. This is acknowledged by increasing numbers of Canadians. Does the Minister really ignore the fact that as of today, some 60 per cent of Canadians throughout the country believe that the federal Government's influence on their daily lives is too great?

He also refers to the fact that the Liberals have been in power for the last 40-odd years. What is very disconcerting about the present trend is that over the last 15 years there has been a major escalation of Government intervention, and particularly in the last two years. Sixty per cent of the Canadian people believe that that intervention is too great.

Mr. Roberts: Mr. Speaker, I welcome the question because it enables me to return to a part of my speech which I had not had the time to deliver. I will answer the Hon. Member in two ways. First, if he would take an objective look, which is easy to do by looking over the past record from Statistics Canada, he will find that federal participation in the Canadian economy has not increased significantly, as a proportion of the Gross National Product, since the Second World War. Clearly, as I have said in my speech, the kind of policies which these past Liberal Governments have supported have been clearly supported by the Canadian public. If he wants to consider the last 15 years, if my memory serves me correctly, the Opposition has been in power for nine months of those last 15 years, which seems to me to be a relevant indication of the degree of support his Party has had.

The second point in reply to his question is exactly this: the kind of economic policy which the Government has always espoused is that which was presented within the budget of my colleague, the Minister of Finance. That clearly does argue two points, one being that the private sector is a motor for economic development and, second, that the Government has a positive role to play in creating a context which would make that private sector activity fruitful and effective.

We do not believe what perhaps the Hon. Member believes. I am not sure that he believes it. We do not believe, as many Conservatives do, that the proper role for Government is simply to stand as far away as possible from these concerns and allow the private sector to work without any role for Government at all. We believe that the proper approach and the one which has clearly been the approach followed throughout Canadian history, is a positive partnership of Government and the private sector.

That is why in the budgetary proposals brought forward by the Minister of Finance—

Mr. Mazankowski: You don't practice what you preach, though.

Mr. Roberts: —we brought forward a variety of tax proposals which we believe, and I think the private sector believes, will create economic activity and growth in the country. The budget also recognizes that it will take some time for the impact of those budgetary proposals to be felt. As a result, we brought forward the Special Recovery Program which involves a direct participation of the Government in creating jobs to bridge that gap until the private sector incentives begin to have their impact. The budget quite clearly idicates the kind of general economic approach we on this side of the House follow, one which states that the Government does have a legitimate and useful role which should be pursued, and one which also tries to create as open and as positive a context for private sector activity as possible. Does the hon. gentleman disagree with that approach?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. The Minister's answer is rather long.

Mr. Thacker: Mr. Speaker, I want the Minister to tell me where the governing Party believes the amount of revenue which goes to service the debt should stop, because when it first came to power in 1968, it was very small. Some 5 per cent of tax revenue went to service the debt. During those 15 years the debt has risen dramatically, so that now the percentage to service the debt is over 30 per cent of tax revenue. One dollar in three goes to service the debt, which means that it is concentrating wealth into the hands of people who already have wealth. We are very much becoming a class society. Where does the Minister want to cut it off, at 40 per cent, 50 per cent, 60 per cent or 70 per cent?

Mr. Roberts: Mr. Speaker, I will not give the hon. gentleman a specific percentage. I would suggest two facts that he should keep in mind in approaching or determining that question. The first is that a great deal depends upon what stage of the economic cycle one finds oneself. The level of debt which is appropriate when there is a high level of prosperity and, therefore, high revenues in terms of the take in Government taxes, is a different situation from one in which one is managing fiscal and monetary policy in a recessionary situation.

The other suggestion I would make to the hon. gentleman is that he should not only look at the debt side, but he should also realize that the debt and the service charges on the debt reflect payments for real assets which are in the country and that the importance of those assets can be reflected in the size of the Gross National Product.

Mr. Thacker: Canadair.

Mr. Roberts: He should not only look at the debt side, but he should also make an assessment of the tremendous assets of the country which that debt has helped to create.

Mr. McKnight: Mr. Speaker, I would just like briefly to ask the Minister a question and make the comment that, as far as economic development and the economic spin-off is concerned, the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Evans) feels that the Conservative Party has contributed more economically to his riding, I am sure, in the last three or four days than the Party which is in Government will over the next number of days in the future.

I would simply like to say that when one speaks of the increase, when one considers on a national accounts basis the increase in debt over the last 12 years, the debt has increased 693 per cent. That is more than a slight variance. If one wants to use the public accounts basis, it has increased 554 per cent.

As we have debated in the House concerning the Canadair issue, where the known amount of debt is $1.4 billion, used in another way a contribution of this amount would have run the Canada Students Loans Program for three years. The $1.4 billion would have implemented the Kirby Commission recommendations. It would have built seven Calgary Olympics or four new frigates.

• (1200)

When one compares the management of this Crown Corporation under the direction of the Government, these funds could have been used for these other purposes in a more positive manner for the people of Canada than under the direction of the Government.

Mr. Roberts: Mr. Speaker, if the Hon. Member is right about the impact that the Conservative Convention is having on the constituency of the Hon. Member for Ottawa West (Mr. Francis), I suspect it is about the only positive thing it has done in the past three and a half years. I think the Hon. Member's question as he expressed it is confused. He began talking about the level of debt and its implications. By the end of the question he was not talking about the size of expenditure but whether the expenditure had been efficiently and effectively made. Those are two separate questions.

To answer the first question, I have to return to answers I have already given. One has to look at the size of the debt in terms of the economic cycle and the assets it helps create. Opposition Members in the House urge us day in and day out to undertake more and more expenditures for projects which they think are valuable and useful, given the economic situation which we confront. It is easy for them to disclaim the over-all impact of what they suggest and forget that it is the accumulation of all of the individual programs they would bring forward that would lead to such a debt.

In terms of the proper expenditure of the funds the Hon. Member described, the simplest way to focus on that question would be to ask him if it woulld have been right for the federal Government to withdraw its support of the aerospace industry in this country. His Government made that mistake back in the 1950s in terms of the Avro Arrow and we are still suffering from it.

If he was asking for my personal opinion, I would say that it is important that the federal Government support the aerospace industry. When you do that, some things go well and some do not go well. Yesterday we saw the shuttle flying into Ottawa. There was great enthusiasm. I think Members on the other side of the House would suggest that it was beneficial for Canada to support the development of Canadarm. That was a gamble we took which succeeded tremendously.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. The time provided for questions has expired.

Before proceeding to another Hon. Member, the Chair would like to remind Hon. Members of Standing Order 15(3), which states:

When a Member is speaking, no Member shall pass between that Member and the Chair—

In the course of the Minister's speech, an Hon. Member did cross the floor between the Hon. Minister and the Chair. The Chair would hesitate to stop a Member dead in his tracks for fear of the consequences, but I would be very happy if Hon. Members would co-operate and respect that basic rule of debate.

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, today we witness another spectacle and more evidence that the Canadian conservative tradition in the Conservative Party of Canada is philosphically disintegrating before our very eyes.

An Hon. Member: Give us the 16 per cent solution.

Mr. Blaikie: Actually, I was just about to come to that. An Hon. Member says to give the 16 per cent solution, referring, of course, to the latest Gallup poll and the indication that my Party only has 16 per cent support in the polls.

I was going to come to that topic because the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) was arguing the validity of Conservative policies by citing the support that those policies appear to be receiving in the Gallup poll. I cite that as evidence of what I previously referred to as the philosophical disintegration of the Conservative Party.

I am sure that Edmond Burke is rolling over in his grave after hearing Conservatives citing polls as evidence for the validity of their policies. Edmund Burke was that great Tory and defender of parliamentary government who said that he owed his constituents his best judgment and the exercise of his conscience. Although he would not have been able to say it this way at the time, he would have argued that he was not there simply to cater to the latest survey or opinion poll. Yet I believe that is where the Conservative Party has arrived via the long route that has seen the gradual Americanization of Canadian Conservatism.

I think it is a tragedy for Canadian politics and a tragedy for the political context in which debates take place in Canada to see a Party trying to take advantage of legitimate anti-Government feeling on the part of Canadians instead of attempting to help Canadians and others understand, through intelligent debate and reasonable argument, what is happening, in what ways their anti-Government feelings are legitimate and what other factors may be involved that cannot be blamed on Government alone.

The Conservatives make no attempt to help Canadians understand. Instead, we see them trying to ride out this anti-Government phenomenon felt by Canadians to victory. Perhaps they do not understand themselves. The Hon. Member for Vegreville said that his motion put clearly and succinctly what was happening. Surely he could not have meant that. Surely a motion which purports to be an analysis of what is happening to the Canadian economy and society but lays the blame for everything at the door of one particular sector in our society cannot be called clear or succinct.

For instance, there is no mention made of the environmental dimensions to the economic problems we are now facing. There is no mention made of errors and omissions of policies in the private sector of the country. There is no mention made of the global conditions in which the Canadian economy must develop. There is no mention of the North-South dialogue. In other words, there is no attempt to be intellectually honest with themselves or with the Canadian people in describing what is going on.

I say this without defending the Government in any way. I simply ask that the Conservatives make their analysis with intellectual honesty. I too have lots to say in criticism of the Government and many of its policies, but we serve no useful purpose in the House when we try to pretend that the issues are as simple as this motion would have us think they are.

Another reason why the motion and the speech made by the Hon. Member for Vegreville are not intellectually honest or respectable is that no specific alternatives were suggested. He went on at great length to speak in very general ideological terms. I did not hear the Hon. Member for Vegreville take a stand on Petro-Canada and I challenge him to get up to say whether a Conservative Government will or will not get rid of Petro-Canada. When he has the opportunity to rise after my speech, I challenge him to get up and say whether or not the Conservatives intend to get rid of medicare. They are already eliminating it slowly and surely anyway through the aegis of their various provincial Governments. But what would the stand of a Progressive Conservative Government be on medicare? There is no honesty, just generalities. We hear no statements about what the Progressive Conservative Government would do with respect to some of the issues about which they speak at great length.

The Hon. Member for Vegreville criticized Petro-Canada in his speech. I also have many criticisms I wish to make about Petro-Canada. However, the Hon. Member lacked intellectual honesty in this area as well because, for all his criticisms of Petro-Canada, he did not allow, as he should have allowed, that all of those criticisms could have been made of the private sector corporations. He could have made those criticisms of private sector corporations that run up huge debts and that are involved in mergers that are not very productive and do not create jobs. They have to go the banks to borrow. Many of them cannot repay those loans. Then they go to the Government cap in hand to be bailed out. We did not hear anything about that. We did not hear anything about the sins of the private sector from the Tories. You would not hear that from the Tories. They are not interested in knowing what is going on; they are interested in painting a distorted picture of what is really going on in the Canadian economy.

The Hon. Member for Vegreville also did not distinguish between Liberal policy and NDP policy in this area. He likes to perpetrate the political lie that there is no difference between the Liberals and the NDP on these various matters. He knows very well that is not true. He knows very well that New Democrats over the years have been interested in making Crown corporations more accountable. The Hon. Member for Vegreville served for years on the Standing Committee on Transport along with the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin). He knows that no one has been more devoted to the idea of making the CNR more accountable to Parliament and more accountable to the needs of the Canadian people and Canadian communities than the Hon. Member for Regina West. Yet the same individual who has witnessed that all these years gets up and says that the Liberals and the NDP are one and the same when it comes to Crown corporations. That is just not true, Mr. Speaker. Anybody with a whit of intelligence or honesty would not have got up and alleged what the Hon. Member alleges with regard to the "great Liberal-NDP conspiracy".

On the matter of accountability, we in this Party believe that freedom suffers not just when there is a lack of accountability between Crown corporations and Parliament, but when there is a lack of accountability to the common good and to the public interest wherever that lack of accountability occurs. We are concerned about the lack of accountability between Crown corporations and Parliament. We are also concerned about the lack of accountability between multinational corporations, the common good and the public interest. We do not single out one sector for accountability and leave another sector to do as it pleases. We want accountability for all. We want all economic activity in this country to be accountable to the common good. That is the fatal flaw in the Conservative position. It would single out government activity for accountability and allow another sector of the economy to go unhindered and unaccountable.

No one is more aware than we are, of the need for accountability, myself in particular, having served on the Special Committee on Standing Orders and Procedure, where we discussed the whole matter of the parliamentary accountability of the subgovernment to which the Hon. Member refers. There is a real problem. But let us not concentrate on that problem at the expense of pretending all these other problems do not exist. We would not be doing a service to the Canadian people by doing so. We should want to counter the threat to freedom, Mr. Speaker, wherever we find it.

There is a problem with bureaucracy in this country. There is a problem with bureaucracy in the modern world. It does not matter really whether it is a Crown corporation or a private corporation. There are certain organizational structures which we find in the world today which are stifling, unaccountable and against which people are rightly rebelling. But let us not pretend that this is just a phenomenon peculiar to government. We find it in large corporations as well as in government. And there are problems peculiar to government, of course.

We in the NDP do not see ourselves as part of any Liberal-NDP coalition. No one is more unhappy than we are with the bad name that the Liberals have given to government. As democratic socialists who want to see more interventionist government, more active government, and who believe in a positive role for government, no one is more unhappy than we are with the bad name the Liberals have given to public ownership and to government in general over the last 14 years to 15 years. Quite contrary to what the Hon. Member for Vegreville says, we do not sit here with any kind of delight at what the Liberals do when it comes to Petro-Canada or any other instrument of public ownership in the economy. We were critical of the way in which Petro-Canada purchased Petrofina, and we have been critical of other things Petro-Canada has done.

However, I wanted to put on the record that we do not oppose Crown corporations or public ownership on principle as the Tories now seem to do, contrary to their tradition, but we are critical of the way the Liberals have gone about doing this. In fact, the NDP was the first to bring up the recent Canadair troubles, even before the Tories. My leader, the Hon. Member for Oshawa (Mr. Broadbent), was the first to question the Government in the House on the latest debacle in Canadair.

Let us not pretend that it is only the Tories who are interested in the accountability of Crown corporations.

What, then, is the NDP's view on this, Mr. Speaker? The Hon. Member for Vegreville has initiated an ideological argument and I am going to give him that kind of answer. We are interested in both equality and community. We believe that both these concepts are central to our vision of the way things ought to be. Equality and community have to go together. This connection between the two is found in the name of the NDP's predecessor, the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, which through the idea of a commonwealth went far beyond the notion of mere income redistribution, which so often passes for left-leaning, social economic policies these days, particularly on the other side of the House.

In the vision of the Co-operative Commonwealth Party equality would not only be possible but it would be cherished. People presumably would abandon the dehumanizing and undignified motives that economic competitiveness creates. In place of the law of the jungle which the Conservatives advocate we would have a truly civilized society based on co-operation with each and every person, according to their God-given endowment, making his or her creative contribution to the betterment of the human community and each, in turn, receiving what he or she needs out of the abundance created by that very same co-operative endeavour. It would be the brotherhood and sisterhood of the human family instead of the cut-throat individualism or the exploitive monopoly which is characteristic of capitalism these days.

In so far as cut-throat individualism has prevailed, we have seen an increasing breakdown of social purpose and sense of community, the very things the Conservatives lament. Indeed, if we are all just isolated individuals in the marketplace looking after number one, what sense does it make to use words like "social" or "community", the very concept against which this motion is directed? Socialization has everything to do with community and everything to do with people not just acting as individuals. Yet that is what the Conservatives oppose.

We have an economy which does not recognize such concepts, let alone take heed of them. We are simply to trust that all this organized selfishness will somehow lead to a happy ending.

I notice, Mr. Speaker, that I have driven a number of Tory delegates out of the balcony.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Cullen: It is lunch time.

Mr. Blaikie: They have walked out in disgust. I can only surmise that I am touching some kind of nerve.

New Democrats know that organized selfishness is not the way to the just society. We all know that the kind of economy which we have and which we want to change is one in which many important human needs are neglected because there is no profit to be made in meeting such needs. Many unnecessary and harmful wants are created and encouraged through advertising and what is harmlessly called marketing.

Thus we are not half as surprised as our right-wing opponents that people do not want to do a good day's work any more. Why should they when they have been taught from day one that more for less is the ethic of our society? And when the companies they work for have records a mile long of putting their profit margins ahead of workplace safety and health, ahead of the general environment and ahead of the economic needs of the surrounding community, why should they? If there is to be a genuine, renewed sense of the value and the meaning of work, as there should be, then the renewal would have to be on all sides of the labour-management divide.

We are not half as surprised as our right-wing friends that people do not feel as much responsibility for others as they should and look to government to care for the inconvenient. It is their world view, not ours, which has glorified convenience and self-interest and created an economy in which many families are too geographically separated or too economically weak to look after the old, the disabled, the unemployable or the young.

We agree that a real human community would not have to look to government all the time. We want to set about building that kind of community. We can do it only through a fundamental change in our economy and through leaving many of the values we have learned from capitalism behind us. Instead, we see increasingly smaller groups of people acquiring more and more control over our economy and thus our very lives. This is called free enterprise by the Conservatives.

• (1220)

I refer to some recent mergers, such as Thomson taking over Hudson's Bay or the sweetheart monopolistic arrangements between Thomson and Southam which led to the demise of the Winnipeg Tribune. These are only two of many such undesirable incidents in the last few years. These mergers have been unproductive in terms of employment and have contributed to high interest rates. The only merger I could imagine being in favour of would be the one long dreamed of by the left in Canada, the merger and indeed the disappearance of Canadian Pacific into Canadian National Railways, thus socializing once and for all that great Canadian symbol of corporate greed and irresponsible power.

Monopoly means power, and the redistribution of power is what socialization is all about. As I said before, simply to redistribute income without power is not really enough. This is one fault among others of the welfare state. The same people are still in charge, whereas the goal of our movement is not just to see people prosper but also to see people enjoy more responsibility and control over their own lives. The most significant form of monopoly which we find today is that of the multinational corporation or the global corporation, as I prefer to call it. In such corporations we have institutions that are larger and more powerful than many nation states of the word. They blackmail. They play one country against another. They seek the weakest labour and environmental laws they can find.

They create needless markets to sell resources which would be better left unused. They finance governments favourable to their interests. They are power gone wild, power unaccountable, power which must be seen for what it is and broken globally through the election and subsequent co-operation of democratic socialists in all parts of the world. People must see the need for taking such a stand against these corporations which control such important things in our common lives as energy, information, food, finances—you name it.

In breaking the power of the multinationals, I have alluded to public ownership and the nationalization of such corporations, the very thing which is in many ways the subject of the debate today. Indeed it is established NDP policy to use public ownership as a tool for returning to Canadians power over their own economy. Basically, though, we are talking about social ownership as opposed to state ownership in particular. Social ownership is any form of ownership in which people themselves own the facilities for production, distribution and exchange. State ownership is but one category of social ownership which has been used and should be used more to overcome the injustices of certain monopolies such as automobile insurance, public utilities and energy resources, for instance.

We are reminded of the encyclical statement long ago by Pope Leo XIII, "anything which dominates the life of a community should be owned by the community". Just as important, there is a form of social ownership known as co-operative ownership. In this case not government but the people themselves own, operate and control certain enterprises. This is the form of social ownership I would like to emphasize.

I know I do not have enough time left in which to go into the subject, but I want to say that we in the NDP and those before us in the CCF never intended an economy in which the state owns everything. We have always believed in a mixed economy in which co-operative endeavour was just as significant as government or private sector activity. That is the truth about the political tradition out of which we come. That is the truth or one of the truths with which the Progressive Conservative Party has to reckon if it is to be honest with Canadians in the genuine debate about our economy which is so badly needed in the country. This motion is a political lie that contributes nothing to that debate. For that reason it deserves to be condemned.

Mr. Neil: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Birds Hill (Mr. Blaikie). I have been a Member of Parliament for quite a while. It seems to me that in the last year or two every time New Democratic Party Members rise to speak they begin to protest the fact that they have been accused of allying themselves too closely with the Government. They try to quote figures to indicate the number of times they have voted against the Government. But if we look at the record, we find that they have closely associated themselves with the Government on anything of a socialistic nature which falls in with the philosophy or the ideology of the NDP.

I listened with interest to the Hon. Member talking about free enterprise and public enterprise. I was reminded of his former Leader who ran around the country talking about corporate welfare bums, indicating that any corporation making money was a bum, whether it was small or large. That particular Leader of the NDP and his Party kept this Government in power for a good long time in a minority situation.

Mr. Keeper: Question.

Mr. Neil: I will put a question, but I understand this time allows for both comments and questions.

The Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Birds Hill talked about socializing Canadian Pacific. He is quite aware of the fact that Canadian National Railways for many years, almost during its entire life, has been a Crown corporation. Is there something magic about Crown corporations? Do they act any better than private corporations? Could the Hon. Member tell me why CNR basically operates in the same manner as the CPR? I have never heard CN officials talk about reducing tariffs or doing things to assist the public. They have been a drain on the public purse over the years. What is the difference between the CNR, a Crown corporation, and the CPR, a privately-owned corporation?

Mr. Blaikie: Mr. Speaker, that is precisely the point I would have made if I had had more time. Under the Liberal Government there has not been a heck of a lot of difference between public and private corporations. Indeed, CNR was formally instructed to act no differently from CPR ever since 1975 in particular when Otto Lang gave that instruction. I was trying to point that out as one of the differences between the NDP and the Liberal Party when it comes to public ownership.

Take Petro-Canada as another example. We believe that if it acts no differently from Shell or Gulf, then what is the point of public ownership? Sure, the profits stay here in Canada, and that is not to be taken lightly.

Mr. Neil: What profits?

Mr. Blaikie: Far too much of the wealth exploited by foreign and domestic private companies over the years has not been reinvested in Canada. But Crown corporations have to be different in many respects. I would like to indicate just a few ways in which they have to be different. They have to be leaders in the perfection of occupational safety and health. They must be willing to experiment with different models of worker input and decision-making. They have to be more obedient to the laws of the environment and the need for industrial development to respect ecological principles and that sort of thing.

We do not have Crown corporations which do that. This is why we stand in judgment over the kind of public ownership the Liberal Government has developed. If Petro-Canada is drilling in the Beaufort Sea without the techonoloby to clean up a spill, that is every bit as morally reprehensible as Gulf doing it.

Mr. Neil: I do not think the Hon. Member has answered my question. He talked about worker safety and so on. As far as CN is concerned, it has a reasonably good record. It is unionized, and I think many of the things about which he talked have in fact happened. How would the Hon. Member treat CN if his Party were in power? How would he make it function more efficiently and more effectively? How would he make it more competitive with CPR?

Mr. Blaikie: The word "efficiency" begs all kinds of questions because it is not as if everyone agrees on what constitutes efficiency. We do not think the abandonment of branch lines is efficient in terms of its larger social impact, yet according to certain economic models it is very efficient.

• (1230)

That is the kind of debate that has been going on in this House over the last few weeks about the Crow rate and what actually constitutes efficiency. In the first place, we would not have to worry about the CNR being competitive with the CPR because we would merge the two into one railway. We would have that railroad serve the social and economic well-being of the country. It would operate according to a criterion of efficiency which took into account social and environmental factors as well as economic factors. If you do not take those other factors into consideration, you are not talking about efficiency. You have to judge efficiency over the long term, not just the short term; for example, the profit margin in the latest quarter.

Mr. Taylor: The Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Birds Hill (Mr. Blaikie) mentioned that the profits of PetroCan stay in Canada. A few years ago I heard Liberal and NDP speakers say the same thing about Canadair. Will the Hon. Member tell us what happened to the profits of Canadair? Are the people better off because it was operated by Government rather than private enterprise? If there were losses, they would not then come out of the pockets of the taxpayers. Would the Hon. Member outline that for me so I will be aware where the profit of PetroCan is so far? How much profit has it made and where is it?

Mr. Blaikie: Mr. Speaker, I maintain that the profits which Crown corporations generate are more likely to be reinvested in Canada than the profits of multinational corporations. I stand by that. If a corporation like Canadair has not made a profit, that does not contradict my argument. It has something to do with the way Canadair has been managed and the way the Government has mishandled the whole affair. It is not evidence against my argument that when profits are generated and there is good management, those profits are more likely to be reinvested in Canada. Think logically for a change. I quite agree with the Hon. Member's condemnation of the way Canadair has been handled, but that is not contrary to what I have been maintaining.

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask one more question. Does the Hon. Member believe that today there is sufficient accountability of PetroCan to the Parliament of Canada?

Mr. Blaikie: Mr. Speaker, no, I do not. That was the point I made in my speech. Both as a New Democrat and as one who had the opportunity to study this issue in the Special Committee on Standing Orders and Procedure, I have stated there is not enough accountability of Crown corporations to Government and I am concerned about the many quasi-government agencies that are proliferating and which need to be made accountable to this Parliament. We do not disagree on the need for more accountability. Where we disagree is on whether we are going to use that lack of accountability which exists to attack the existence of these instruments of public policy on principle, or whether we are going to make them accountable and thereby make them better instruments of public policy. Our second disagreement is whether we are going to make private power in this country as accountable to the common good as the Hon. Member and I want to make public power. That is where we disagree.

I wish to comment with respect to an element of a question asked before which I did not answer regarding the taxpayers having to pick up losses of various Crown corporations. Let us not kid ourselves. When private corporations suffer losses, somebody picks up the cost of those losses. People either pick up these losses as taxpayers then they are Crown corporations, or pick them up as consumers if it is a private corporation. When private corporations suffer a loss, they do not assume that they cannot pass on that loss through the marketplace. It works its way into the marketplace. Let us not be naive about the way the marketplace works.

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, today we are dealing with a Government that often talks about the rights of Canadians. When the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) finally goes on to his retirement, and it will certainly be a well justified retirement, one thing he will want to be remembered for is the Charter of Rights and Freedoms which guarantees Canadians specific rights. It is possible to talk about rights and it is possible to enshrine the principle in the Constitution. However, this Government acts in a hundred different ways to undermine those rights. It daily circumscribes the rights of Canadians, daily confiscates their wealth and their income, daily restricts their ability to watch what they want to see and listen to what they want to hear, and daily prevents them from exercising what we as Canadians feel to be our most basic freedoms. This is what we have seen done by this Government, particularly since 1980. We have seen it in many different ways.

The Government has made an attack upon the basic freedoms of Canadians. When the Prime Minister retires from office or, more appropriately, when he is retired from office, we will find that Canadians are less free than they were at the time when he came to office in 1968.

In no area is that more conspicuous than in the case of freedom of the press in Canada. Read the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. Lip service is paid to the right of freedom of speech. Lip service is paid to the right to a free press. Indeed, the two are inseparable. In many ways what this Government has done is to attack one of the most basic liberties of Canadians, one of the most essential rights that any Canadian must have if our democracy is to survive and flourish.

There are a number of different ways in which the Government has done this. This is the first Government in the history of Canada ever to launch a raid on a newspaper under the Official Secrets Act. It was done by this Government against the Toronto Sun when it did not appreciate the fact that the Sun was publishing documents on the extent of Soviet subversion in Canada. Therefore, what it did was to sic the RCMP on the Sun. It is the first time in our history that this was done.

This is a Government which has threatened the publicly-funded CBC on more than one occasion, including one case where the Prime Minister threatened to put the lid on Radio-Canada if it did not change its coverage because it did not like the people who were giving coverage to events.

This is a Government which has set aside a massive war chest, unparalleled in the history of Canada, for propaganda—often very highly partisan propaganda—to sell a contentious, disputed point of view and to ensure that when it cannot earn good publicity in the nation's news media, it will buy it. It will bypass the news media, using it simply as a vehicle for going directly to Canadians with their tax dollars, trying to persuade Canadians that the Liberal point of view is right.

There is nothing in the law which prevented previous governments from doing that. The only thing that prevented previous governments from abusing tax dollars in that way was a sense of self-restraint, moderation and decency, a respect for the Canadian way of life.

Many of our freedoms as Canadians over the years since Confederation have depended upon the willingness of governments to recognize that fundamental reality. Part of what makes us Canadian is our respect for the rights of one another and the unwillingness of people who have power to abuse power and to take away the rights of others. That was the case and it has worked well until this Trudeau Government came to office.

What we have found in recent years is a steady accretion of power in the hands of a few and a steady diminution of the rights of Canadians and of liberties which we have historically taken for granted. The Government is about to embark upon a new assault on freedom of the press in Canada. The Minister of State for Multiculturalism (Mr. Fleming) has been waging a one-man war against Canada's daily newspaper industry. In the past few days he made a speech in which he said that before the end of this month the Government will be tabling legislation which will hobble or control the daily newspaper industry in Canada. It will regulate the ownership of daily newspapers and affect the ability of newspaper to do their job.

It is essential if our democracy is to function well that we have a press that is free and unfettered. Even when the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Ouellet) does not approve, as he sometimes does not, that right must still be exercised by the fourth estate to hold the Minister to account. It will shine light into areas of government administration where the Government does not want the public or the news media to go.

• (1240)

Mr. Ouellet: Have you seen your psychiatrist lately?

Mr. Beatty: Do you see, Mr. Speaker, what happens when one points out the mentality that there is on the part of the Liberal Government? Do you see, Mr. Speaker, how particularly the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs vociferously indicates that there is no way that this could be the case?

Mr. Fisher: He is right, you are wrong.

Mr. Beatty: You can tell a guilty conscience when you see one, Mr. Speaker. No one should have a more guilty conscience than this Minister, who has consistently attacked the independence of Radio-Canada over the years and has shown by his own actions that he has no regard for the need for independence of the news media and for the need for a free press in Canada.

Mr. Ouellet: You are sick. I attacked separatists.

Mr. Fisher: He is protecting Canada.

Mr. Beatty: Mr. Speaker, we have a Government that is incapable of distinguishing between the national interest and its own interest. It cloaks its actions by saying that everything it does is in the national interest, yet everything it does is calculated to be in its own interest. What is seen time after time, both in the House of Commons and across the country, is that any Canadian who dares to challenge the Liberal Government, any Canadian who dares to question the policies of the Liberal Government or their actions, finds his Canadianism impugned and is told that he is a bad Canadian and that somehow he is doing a disservice to his country because he does not agree with the Liberal Government. This is the attitude that the Liberal Government has shown toward the press.

As a result of the Kent Commission, which was set up after the simultaneous shutdowns of the Ottawe Journal and the Winnipeg Tribune and which made broad and sweeping recommendations that would have seen an extremely dangerous intrusion by the Government into the daily newspaper industry in Canada, we found that the Liberal Government used this as a Trojan horse to get its foot in the newsroom door. In the future the Government will control the ability of people or organizations to buy a daily newspaper. It will give direct grants to daily newspapers in order for them to open new bureaux, something that was systematically rejected by every reputable news organization in the country because those news organizations did not want to be beholden to the Government or its friends. The Government will set up a Government-sponsored and Government-funded press council to pass judgment on the nation's journalists. The first chairman and vice-chairman of this Government-funded press council will be appointed by the Government and the funding will come from the Government. It will create a convenient vehicle for the Government to use at any time when it needs an excuse to enter further into the daily newspaper industry in Canada. What could be a more dangerous attitude on the part of a Government that professes to respect freedom of speech and freedom of the press?

I invite Members of the Government at large to ask themselves this question: Where freedom of the press has died around the world, has it died because of neglect by government or has it died because of too much involvement and control by government? In every single instance in the history of the press around the world, the single greatest threat to a free and unfettered press has been a government that believes it has a monopoly on truth, that it has the responsibility of sitting in judgment on journalists and that it has the right to ensure, through whatever method it wishes, that its particular point of view prevails. Because of this measure, that is what we are seeing happening today. The Government, Mr. Speaker, has used the taxpayers' money, it has used intimidation, and now it is prepared to use the law to attack one of the most basic liberties that all Canadians must enjoy if our democracy is to flourish.

I have a copy of a confidential document that was prepared by the Minister on March 31, 1982, and is marked "Minister's Eyes Only", in which the Government analysed the Kent Commission proposal. One of the problems found with the Kent Commission proposals was that they might be largely unconstitutional and illegal. The Government backed off somewhat and made other proposals. Interestingly enough, Mr. Speaker, this document has never been officially released by the Minister or made available to Parliament because he does not want Canadians to see it.

In its own document, the Government raises very serious questions as to the legality of its own proposals. For example, Mr. Speaker, I mentioned to you earlier that the Government had a proposal for review if a non-media company wanted to purchase a daily newspaper. The Government proposed that a non-media company must go before the Restrictive Trades Practices Commission and justify to Government appointees that the purchase of a newspaper would be in the public interest. Well, I know what the Liberal Government means when it refers to the public interest; it means the interest of the Liberal Party.

On the bottom of the page that deals with this proposal, the Minister, in his "Minister's Eyes Only" document, says that even this review process may be struck down by courts. The Government is preparing to introduce in Parliament legislation that, according to the Minister's own documents, may very well be illegal and unconstitutional. Indeed, there are serious doubts as to whether the whole of the initiatives being taken by the Government may first contravene the provisions of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms which guarantees freedom of the press in Canada, and second, and even more probably may very well violate the separation of jurisdiction provisions in the Canadian Constitution.

The Minister of State for Multiculturalism, who is responsible for these proposals, has not released and will not release any legal opinion that he has received on this question. The closest thing that we have to a legal opinion is this internal document which indicates that he himself recognizes that his proposal may be illegal. He will not release it. He will claim solicitor-client confidentiality if we ask him for that document. It may also be that he has never asked for any official legal opinion from the law officers of the Crown. But one thing is certain. Parliament will not be allowed to see that document.

I have asked the Library of Parliament and its research branch to prepare a paper on the division of powers implication of the Kent Commission and the Minister's proposals on press ownership. That document is available to Parliament, to Canadians at large and to anyone who has an interest in it, including the Minister. The conclusion reached by that document is that there is a very serious question as to the constitutional right of the Government to act in the way in which it is proposing. It concluded that there is serious doubt as to whether in fact the Government has the jurisdiction that it claims it has. For example, the conclusion reads:

> From the above, it can be seen that it is by no means clear that the central government has the legislative authority to enact the proposals of the Commission.

It refers there to the Kent Commission.

> The best arguments for jurisdiction would seem to relate to the central government's power to regulate or restrict competition. This, however, creates a problem for the Commission, because if the basis for the claim of legislative jurisdiction is the control of competition, the proposals may suffer the same emasculation that the merger provisions presently found in the Combines Investigation Act have undergone.

Further, the paper concludes this:

> Specifically, it may be concluded that:
> 1) The proposals of the Commission dealing with concentration of ownership on the basis of market shares and the divestment requirements related thereto do not fall clearly within the legislative competence of the central government. This would apply as well to the Fleming proposal on non-media ownership. On the basis of the legislative competence of the central government and the provinces to deal with competition, trade and commerce, property, and civil liberties, the jurisdiction to enact these proposals is at best shared between the two orders of government.

It goes on to deal with other aspects of the question as well. This legal opinion, Mr. Speaker, is available to Parliament. It is available to the Canadian people. I challenge the Minister of State for Multiculturalism, when he introduces his odious Bill, to introduce a legal opinion as well which will indicate the constitutional validity of what he is proposing. I invite him to refer to the Supreme Court the Bill that he will be introducing to see whether in fact he is making a serious attack both on the freedom of the press provision of the Charter of Rights and on the constitutional division of powers which are so important to the Canadian federal system.

The Government will not do as I have suggested. Instead, it will attempt to introduce legislation and to ram it through the House of Commons. That will seriously restrict the rights to freedom of the press in Canada. It is a proposal that will be fiercely resisted by Members on this side of the House who believe in a free press. As well, it will be fiercely resisted by Canadians at large who recognize that nothing could be more dangerous to our system of Government than to have the Government's foot intruding into the doors of the newsrooms of the daily newpapers of Canada.

In his very powerful and disturbing novel, "1984", George Orwell wrote about the way in which politicians could corrupt the English language. As well, he dealt with that subject in many of the other pieces he has written. He pointed out that often the most innocuous of terms are used by politicians to throw a veil over the most odious of actions. By co-opting language which was positive, by misusing it, by perverting the language and by making it mean something it was never intended to mean, they were able to mask actions which the public at large would refuse to accept if they were honestly presented.

• (1250)

Nowhere could there be a better example of what Orwell was referring to than for a Government, under the guise of legislation dealing with freedom of the press, ostensibly to enhance freedom of the press, to bring in measures which would make the press financially beholden to that Government, make it so that potential purchasers of news outlets would have to win the favour of the Government before they could act, and make the actions of working journalists subject to scrutiny and review by a government-sponsored and, in large part, government-appointed press council. What could be more dangerous than that? What could be a worse corruption of language than that which, in its face, seems straightforward? If Orwell were here today I think he would be amazed to find how well the Government has learned the techniques he warned about in passage after passage.

If we are to preserve the freedoms of Canadians, it is essential that we begin now to prevent any action by the Government which will chip away, erode, undermine or circumscribe those fundamental freedoms.

It should be pointed out to the Government that it is ironic that at the very same time as it laments the fact that there are fewer daily newspapers in Canada, it has made no positive proposals that would increase the number of dailies. It has not suggested changes to tax legislation which would encourage advertisers to use the newspapers. It has not proposed changes in legislation that would allow the heirs to independent daily newspapers to be able to hang on when the owner dies and so continue the ownership. Instead of spending money on direct grants to newspapers, the Government has not proposed fellowships for journalists or an increase in funding for journalism schools in the country. These were not concerns of the Government; its concern was the control of a dwindling number of dailies in Canada.

At the same time as the Minister of State for Multiculturalism complains about the shrinking number of dailies in the country, successive Ministers of Communications have done everything they could to impede the ability of Canadians to see and hear what they would like on their radio and television stations. On the one hand the Government argues that diversity is essential; on the other hand it has consistently tried to prevent that diversity.

Finally, I think I should bring to the attention of the House a statement which perhaps explains better than I can a concern that many people in Canada have about what the Government is doing. When the Minister of the Environment (Mr. Roberts) was Secretary of State, he delivered an address to the 20th General Assembly of UNESCO. He said this:

> On every continent there are some people who think that governments should regulate journalists, should tell them, in the public interest, what to write, or should pass judgment on their accuracy. Canadians do not believe that either politicians or public servants should have anything to say in the management, direction or correction of the media. Quite the contrary. In their view, only a free press can guarantee that the decisions of the state power are in harmony with the wishes of the people. Governments have no means of knowing what the needs of society are for its own well being, unless they are told by an informed public.

None of us here today, Mr. Speaker, could have expressed the importance of a free and unfettered press better than did the Minister of the Environment. The onus is on Members here today to take that message to heart and resist attempts by the Government to shackle the free press that is so important to our democracy.

Mr. Breau: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member started off by saying—and I believe I paraphrase him correctly—that when the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) retires the rights of Canadians will have been lessened if you compare them to what they were in 1968. The Hon. Member acknowledges that I am quoting him correctly. He is either being grossly partisan or is guilty of a grave oversight. I wonder how he could say that about language rights unless he does not consider language rights to be important human and social rights.

How can the Hon. Member be so hypocritical when his Party tried for weeks and months—and buckled under the presure of the Provinces—to resist the enshrining of a Charter of Rights in our Constitution?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Before recognizing the Hon. Member I wish to remark that I saw him frown at the use of a certain word. That word is in both lists but nevertheless I would caution the Hon. Member for Gloucester (Mr. Breau) and all Hon. Members about the choice of words when referring to other Hon. Members.

Mr. Beatty: Mr. Speaker, I find it a novel construction by the Hon. Member that we should measure the totality of rights in Canada on the strength of what the Prime Minister did on language rights. He has shown strength on language rights in Canada but in so many other areas he has either refused to act or has circumscribed important rights.

Mr. Breau: Oh, oh!

Mr. Beatty: The Hon. Member asks a question and then attempts to drown out the answer. One of the most fundamental rights in Canada is the right to free speech in Parliament, yet the Hon. Member would try to drown me out when I answer his question.

I pointed out one of those areas. A fundamental right is a right to a free and unfettered press. We find that the Government is going in exactly the opposite direction.

Another right is property rights which have been systematically undermined by the Government. The Hon. Member for Gloucester mentioned the Charter of Rights. In committee I moved an amendment which would have included property rights in the Charter of Rights. Initially I had the agreement of the Liberal Government that it would allow the amendment to go forward. The Hon. Member referred to buckling. Under pressure from the NDP the Government—

Mr. Fisher: And the Provinces.

Mr. Beatty: —did a back flip and buckled and decided to vote against enshrining property rights for Canadians. It attempted to confiscate the property of Canadians in many instances, the back-in provision for Petro-Canada being just one example, and refused to take any action which would have protected property rights in the Constitution. It voted against such a provision.

The Hon. Member now has the temerity to say that because language rights have been broadened during the term of the Prime Minister, somehow Canadians are more free today than they were before the Prime Minister came to office. This is the Prime Minister who jailed Canadians without warrants for their arrest and who operated on the basis of secret information.

Mr. Ouellet: That is untrue.

Mr. Breau: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member talked about the danger of providing assistance to newspapers. I share his concern in that regard. I wonder if he is aware that in an election campaign in New Brunswick last fall, a Tory Premier and now one of his senior ministers indicated that the Government of New Brunswick would provide provincial guarantees and whatever assistance necessary for a French language paper in New Brunswick despite the fact there is a private group with totally private money that wants to start a French language paper there. How does the Hon. Member square that, or does he totally disagree with the policy of Premier Hatfield in that regard?

Mr. Beatty: Mr. Speaker, let me turn the question back to my hon. friend. Apparently he disagrees with Premier Hatfield's position of direct financial assistance to newspapers. When the Minister of State for Multiculturalism introduces legislation in the House, as he says he will before the end of the month, will the Hon. Member have the courage to stand in his place in this House in an area where he has jurisdiction—I do not have jurisdiction in New Brunswick but he has jurisdiction in the federal House—and vote against that dangerous and odious provision?

[Translation]

Mr. Ouellet: Mr. Speaker, I find it hard to understand why the Hon. Member spoke to the House for about 20 minutes about a Bill that has yet to be tabled in the House. He cannot speak with any measure of certainty about the contents of a Bill that has not even been drafted. He does not know what its provisions will be nor what those provisions will cover. Consequently, the Hon. Member's speech is purely hypothetical, and there is nothing he can state with any degree of certainty. However, he has revealed to us his tormented soul, his fears and, I assume, his personal problems. He feels persecuted, and thinks the Canadian press is persecuted as well. I think it is all in his mind, Mr. Speaker. In fact, I think the whole situation is rather bizarre, and perhaps I may ask him when he last saw his psychiatrist.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order, please. It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock this afternoon.

At 1 p.m. the House took recess.

SHIPBUILDING

MEETING AT VICTORIAVILLE, P.Q.—AWARDING OF FRIGATE CONSTRUCTION CONTRACT—SCAN MARINE AND DAVIE SHIPBUILDING

Mr. Gaston Gourde (Lévis): Madam Speaker, yesterday, the Members for Beauce, Lotbinière, Bellechasse and Frontenac (Messrs. Lapointe, Dubois, Garant and Corriveau) and myself had a meeting with economic partners from the Quebec south shore and the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Lamontagne), who is responsible for this region.

The meeting, held in Victoriaville, was organized as a follow-up to the meeting held last year in Lévis. Twelve briefs were submitted, in which the emphasis was on the disastrous situation in the textile and garment industry, a sector that is being severely affected by imports, for which controls are being sought. A number of economic partners were also concerned about the role of the Federal Business Development Bank and felt that the Bank's role with respect to small- and medium-sized businesses should be redefined.

Three briefs were submitted in which organizations from the Quebec south shore expressed their support for the efforts being made by Scan and Davie to obtain the Canadian Forces frigate contract. There were also lengthy discussions on forest rehabilitation and reforestation. As was the case last year, all briefs will be routed to the decision-making levels of the Canadian Government, and replies will be sent to those who came personally to explain their positions and make representations.

Last year, nine out of fourteen cases were dealt with satisfactorily, while the remaining ones are well on their way to being solved. We intend to repeat this experiment next year for the benefit of all individuals living in the ridings represented by the group of Liberal Members from the Quebec south shore.

AGRICULTURE

NEW EVALUATION OF FARM LAND SOUGHT

Mr. Mel Gass (Malpeque): Madam Speaker, I would like to address a topic of concern which was brought to my attention by the Prince Edward Island Women in Support of Agriculture, regarding farm evaluation. In their annual meeting held on April 13, 1983, the Women in Support of Agriculture passed a resolution which stated:

Whereas farm evaluation has not been revised since 1971, and whereas the rate of inflation, having escalated in the past 12 years, if a farmer sells his farm in 1983 the capital gains tax will be exorbitant, be it resolved that we approach our Members of Parliament and our Members of the Legislative Assembly to request a new evaluation, and by so doing have the capital gains tax lowered.

I support this resolution 100 per cent, Madam Speaker, and feel that capital gains tax should not be assessed to farmers. The policy of the Progressive Conservative Party in the elections of 1979 and 1980 stated that the first $200,000 would not be taxed for capital gains on the sale of a farm.

I join with the P.E.I. Women in Support of Agriculture in urging a new evaluation of farm land, considering how land prices have soared due to inflation since 1971, the last evaluation year. If a farmer sells his land today, his capital gains tax will be exorbitant. I urge that this escalating situation be corrected as the agricultural system is being adversely effected by high property taxes and high capital gains tax. I urge that the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) realize the importance of this issue.

NEW EMPLOYMENT EXPANSION AND DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM

EMPLOYMENT OF OBSERVERS ON FOREIGN FISHING VESSELS

Mr. Ted Miller (Nanaimo-Alberni): Madam Speaker, my colleagues have spoken several times before in this House, denouncing the Government's abuse of the NEED Program. Obviously their words were not heeded, because this abuse continues to spread. In a couple of weeks the over-the-side herring sale program will be getting under way in the Bay of Fundy. The Department of Fisheries and Oceans traditionally provides observers on the foreign vessels whose owners are here to buy fish from our fishermen. This year, however, those observers are not being rehired. Instead these duties will be performed by workers on a NEED grant.

The lion's share of the work done by these observers is troubleshooting any problems which arise between our fishermen and the foreign vessel owners. This kind of work requires a 24-hour a day commitment for extended periods, in unfamiliar and sometimes hostile and unpleasant conditions. Can we really expect the recipients of NEED funds to put up with these kinds of conditions for only $200 per week? It is quite possible that many of them do not know they are getting into. A similar program tried a few months ago with Canadian offshore vessels fell apart after a couple of weeks because many of the participants resigned after they found out what the conditions were like.

The Government is using the NEED Program to replace higher paid skilled workers with lower paid untrained ones. It is becoming a restraint program, not a job-creation program. In this case our fishing industry could suffer seriously.

MINERS' MEMORIAL DAY

CELEBRATION OF CAPE BRETON'S MINING HISTORY

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, as the sitting Member for Cape Breton-East Richmond, an area proud of its coal mining tradition, we approach Miners' Memorial Day, on Saturday, June 11, 1983, with a sense of pride and a sense of sorrow. On this date we are reminded of the history of coal mining in Cape Breton and of the role coal mining has played in the shaping of our community. Mining on the Island dates back to 1720. Many technological advances have evolved since then. While mining methods have changed over the years, the unique qualities of the miner, which can be best described in one word, courageous, have not.

The struggle of the miner has not been without adversity. We remember the fight to bring in the United Mines Workers of America and the infamous strike of 1909-1910; the six years of protest culminating in the strike of 1925 and the tragic death of William Davis, killed 58 years ago; the Number 12 mine explosion of 1917, and more recently, the explosion in 1979. Over the years there have been triumphs and disasters. At this time we remember the contributions made by all miners and their families, and honour those who lost their lives.

CROWN CORPORATIONS

DEMAND FOR ACCOUNTABILITY TO PARLIAMENT

Mr. Blaine A. Thacker (Lethbridge-Foothills): Madam Speaker, Crown Corporations were brought into life with the noble objective of pursuing the public interest. As instruments of public policy they have played a key role in our nation's development. However, during the last 16 years, we have witnessed unlimited expansion of state owned agencies and ever increasing government involvement in the Canadian economy. This sub-government of state enterprise has resulted in Crown Corporations becoming increasingly less accountable to the people, while their financial operations have continued to grow exponentially. Canadians have been denied the right to scrutinize their operations through this Parliament.

The recently introduced Bill C-158 is a further example of the Liberal attempt to prevent Parliament from exercising its fundamental responsibility. CDIC, a newly established Crown Corporation, is to be granted powers which would allow it to delve into Canadian business and spend the taxpayers' money without adequate control on the part of Parliament. The public interest requires that this House oppose the Liberals' policy of doing indirectly what they cannot do directly.

DISARMAMENT

ORDER TO DISMANTLE PEACE CAMP ON PARLIAMENT HILL

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Madam Speaker, since mid-April a group of young Canadians has been camping out for peace on Parliament Hill. When they first began their vigil to protest Cruise missile testing in Canada, they encountered tremendous odds from forces beyond anyone's control. They spent nights huddled while freezing rain, driving snow, and hail fell all around them. They did all this without benefit of tents, which they were told they could not erect on the grass of Parliament Hill.

Now, forces beyond their control—but not beyond Parliament's control—have decreed that the Peace Camp be dismantled today at four o'clock. In a hand delivered letter today, the protesters were told to pack up their sign and cart off their information table, ostensibly because there is not enough room for peace protesters and tourists on Parliament Hill.

There are Ministers in this House who sympathize with the protesters outside. And there are Ministers in this House who have the power to reverse the decision of the House of Commons administrator from whom this directive to disband emanates. These protesters do not want to leave the Hill, and I and my colleagues in the New Democratic Party support their right to be here. We believe their protest is a legitimate protest being which is carried out in a non-violent and legitimate fashion. The arguments about the Peace Camp being a threat to security, or an eyesore and nuisance to tourists, do not wash with us. What is happening here is the suppression of the individual's right to freedom of speech—

Madam Speaker: Order. Order, please. The Hon. Member, of course, is entitled to make a statement at this particular time. However, I must tell him that whatever takes place on the grounds outside the House of Commons does not come under my jurisdiction, nor under that of the administrator.

HEALTH

LEUKEMIA RESEARCH—NECESSITY FOR FUNDING

Mr. Stanley Hudecki (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): Madam Speaker, through its grant program the Medical Research Council provides support for research projects in health sciences whether basic, applied, or clinical.

Currently, at Princess Margaret Hospital in Toronto, and at a number of selected centres in Canada, bone marrow transplants are being carried out for leukemia patients. This is a well controlled, collaborative study designed to improve transplant techniques and to evaluate the benefit of transplants in comparison with conservative management. Preliminary results are most promising and encouraging, but it will be another two years before it can be said whether transplants will make a significant breakthrough in the search for a leukemia cure.

This study is seriously jeopardized by the small number of available medical research grants in Canada whether private, provincial, or federal in origin. In the current year 916 projects were submitted to the Medical Research Council. Seven hundred and twenty were considered worthy of funding, but only 92 were given grants due to budget constraints. The award rate was therefore 10 per cent. It had never been below 25 per cent in previous years.

Canada is fortunate in having dedicated, outstanding scientists in the field of medical research. One such medical scientist working on the marrow transplants for a leukemia cure in Toronto has M.D. and Ph.D. degrees with nine years of research experience. He and his kind are deserving of the full support of our Medical Research Council. Funding should not be limited to only 10 per cent of Canada's pool of gifted and trained—

Madam Speaker: Order.

AGRICULTURE

CONDEMMATION OF GOVERNMENT POLICIES AFFECTING FARMERS IN WESTERN CANADA

Mr. Lee Clark (Brandon-Souris): Madam Speaker, there is a very real crisis in western Canadian agriculture today, due to a number of factors. A combination of rising costs, declining grain prices, disastrously high interest rates, and inadequate Government policies, have forced many farmers to the verge of bankruptcy.

Unfortunately, the Government's energy and transportation policies have added substantially to this problem. While many improvements are needed, two changes can be made immediately. First of all, the farmers' very substantial operating costs can be and should be reduced by abolishing the 9 per cent federal sales tax on farm fuels and fertilizers.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Clark (Brandon-Souris): Second, the prairie farmer must be guaranteed that his transportation costs never exceed the long term average. During the last quarter century prairie wheat farmers have paid transportation costs which averaged approximately 7 per cent of the initial price, and any safety net which is to be established must never exceed that percentage.

Madam Speaker, I wish to inform all the Members of this House, through you, that western Canadian farmers are very disappointed in the Government's agricultural policies. The proof for that statement lies in the fact that those policies were supported by only 17 per cent of the electorate in the recent by-election in Brandon-Souris.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

WESTERN GRAIN TRANSPORTATION ACT

SUPPORT FOR PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVE PARTY AMENDMENT

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Madam Speaker, the Right Hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) and the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pepin) have stated in the House a number of times that they wanted consensus in the West on changes to the Crow rate policy. The freedom of choice amendment recommended by the Progressive Conservative Party and the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) in this House is an acceptable framework for agreement.

This amendment has received wide acclaim in western Canada, and at public meetings the vast majority of a cross-section of farmers, almost unanimously, supported the concept. This is understandable, as the freedom of choice option goes right back to basic democratic principles; the people who have to live with the program decide what the program will be. Real democracy! Producers themselves will decide whether their share of the Crow shortfall will go to the railways or to the producers. The producers choosing to take the shortfall themselves will then decide to use the railway or the trucks, or feed their grain to livestock. This freedom of choice will hurt no one but will be a unifying force in Canada. The program will provide the instrument which will permit all industries in the West to reach their real potential, and it will hurt no one in any part of Canada.

I urge the Government to accept this amendment. It will do much to unite Canada. The freedom of choice concept will guarantee the consensus which the Prime Minister and the Minister of Transport said they were seeking.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

LABOUR RELATIONS

WEST COAST GRAIN HANDLERS' DISPUTE

Mr. Charles Mayer (Portage-Marquette): Madam Speaker, I would like to ask a question of the Minister of Transport relating to the problem of the West Coast grain handling dispute. As the Minister will know, grain exports account for billions of dollars and are very important not only to western Canada but to the whole economy as well. I understand that there has been no negotiation between either labour or management since June 1. I wonder if the Minister can give us an update regarding this very critical situation on the West Coast.

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, I might reply on behalf of the Minister of Labour who is still overseas, but who, we all hope, will be back very soon. The situation in relation to the West Coast problem is still that the two Parties must make a decision that they want to arrive at a settlement. We have responded to their telegram, suggesting to them that any attempt to introduce mediation or conciliation must first be preceded by a clear example that they themselves are willing to come to the table and get down to bargaining so that an arrangement or decision can be made in that kind of spirit. There is no point in intervening someone in that particular situation until both parties clearly demonstrate their own willingness to arrive at an agreement.

REQUEST THAT NEGOTIATIONS BE UNDERTAKEN

Mr. Charles Mayer (Portage-Marquette): Madam Speaker, I would point out to the same Minister that the Government has a responsibility in that, in 1974, through the Neil Perry Report it gave parity with longshoremen to the grain workers. As of last year, 1982, there has been a conflict because the Government imposed a six and five package on grain handling companies Therefore the Government has a responsibility in this situation because there is a conflict of Government policies which both parties are trying to work out. Would the Minister reconsider his position so that the Government would become involved, either by appointing a commission or a board to become directly involved, to ensure that some face to face negotiations take place again between labour and management?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, I think we in this House are all deeply concerned that an agreement be reached. No one, in any way, wants to witness the kind of blockage of transportation of our grain which has happened in the past. However, I must say that absolutely no good is being served by members of the Opposition standing up in the House trying to negotiate a settlement across the floor of the House of Commons. The negotiation must take place between the parties to the dispute. That is what collective bargaining is all about.

GOVERNMENT RESPONSIBILITY

Mr. Charles Mayer (Portage-Marquette): Madam Speaker, I point out to the Minister that it is not a question of any good being done by the Opposition. The reason that we are asking the Minister to do something is because the Government is doing no good in this situation.

Mr. Lalonde: Question.

Mr. Mayer: I would further like to ask the Minister why the Government is so reluctant to become involved because, as I understand it, as of about an hour and a half ago, both parties were willing to sit down and negotiate.

Mr. Lalonde: Why don't they?

Mr. Mayer: Both parties would be willing to accept a mediator. As I understand it, this is the first time in 30 years that a Minister of Labour has refused to become involved by either appointing a conciliator or a board. May I ask the Government to reconsider, to become involved, and to show some responsibility in this very important situation?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, the Minister of Labour has always indicated his full willingness to respond to the requirements of the situation, and so has the Government of Canada. If the Hon. Member's reports are, in fact, accurate, that there is now a willingness to move toward the negotiating table, then I am sure the Minister of Labour will be in a position to respond to the request. However, I would say that it is important that the parties to the dispute indicate their willingness, because they are the ones who must ultimately come to the table and make the agreement. Therefore, when we hear from both parties that they are prepared to respond in a constructive and positive way, obviously the Government will be prepared to do likewise.

Mr. Mayer: They are ready to do it now.

CONTINUANCE OF GRAIN SHIPMENTS

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Madam Speaker, I would like to direct my question to the Minister of Transport since the Acting Minister of Labour does not seem to have a feel for the urgency of the problem at all. I direct it to him in the absence of the Minister. The Minister knows that there was no grain handled last weekend. He also knows that, because of the keenness of competition in the world market, any threat of a shutdown is seriously impeding the market at a very difficult time for western grain farmers. I hope the Minister of Transport understands that fact. I want the Minister to tell the House what steps he is taking to ensure that grain will continue to be handled on the West Coast this week, and then throughout the rest of the month.

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I can only repeat the spirit of what the Minister of Employment and Immigration has said. I answered a question yesterday in the same way. There has been an assessment by the Department of Labour that the best way to proceed at this time is to let the parties get together and find their way out of this situation. That is an assessment and a decision made to go that way. I am told, at the same time, that there is not a stoppage in the handling of grain facilities at the ports. Therefore, the position taken by the Government is a conscious one. It is not one which is without reflection. It is one which was arrived at after deep analysis of the situation. I take comfort in the fact that the employees have said that they do not want to strike and the employers have said that they do not want to lock them out. That has all the makings of an agreement.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER INTERVENE

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Madam Speaker, the Government has a responsibility. It cannot continue to reach for the silver bowl. There was a refusal to handle grain last weekend, there is a possibility of a work to rule and a lock out, all of which is having an impact on the world market, which impact is very serious at the present time. In view of those facts I ask the Minister, who has a direct responsibility here, why he does not go to Vancouver and take his responsibility in his hands and make sure there is no further slowdown in the handling of grain on the West Coast.

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, and when I come back the Member would be the first one to ask why the Minister went to Vancouver and made a mess of it all.

Mr. McGrath: Madam Speaker, the Minister is right in a certain sense. If he does go to Vancouver we will hold him accountable when he comes back. But the point is that he has a responsibility to go to Vancouver and make sure there are no more work stoppages and no more slowdowns. That is his responsibility, and he ought to take that responsibility.

Madam Speaker: Order. I want to remind the Hon. Member for St. John's East that he asked me for an extra supplementary question which I gave him, and he did not ask a question.

Oral Questions

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

DUMPING OF TOXIC SUBSTANCE IN RESTIGOUCHE RIVER

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of the Environment who, I am sure, is aware by now that some 575 gallons of fenitrathrion, Atlox, and Dowanol were dumped into the Restigouche River the night before last. It is enough to spray 4,000 acres. The U.S. label for fenitrathrion states:

> This product is toxic to fish, birds and other wildlife. Birds and other wildlife in treated areas may be killed. Avoid direct application to lakes, ponds and streams.

Since fenitrathrion has been found to cause mutations and chromosome aberrations in human cells, and since the salmon fishery in the Restigouche, which is an internationally renowned river, is opening up a week from today, is the Minister planning to encourage his colleague, the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans, to close that river temporarily to sports fishing?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of the Environment): Madam Speaker, we think that this is a serious situation. We are examining it closely. I am not yet able to report to the Hon. Member or the House what action we would recommend.

MONITORING OF WILDLIFE KILLED IN BUDWORM SPRAYING PROGRAM

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Madam Speaker, as the Minister is no doubt aware, this year's budworm spraying program in New Brunswick comes hard on the heels of the facts released by Statistics Canada that the cancer rate in New Brunswick is double that in areas bordering it that are not being sprayed. I am sure he is also aware that the spraying program has been demonstrated to do nothing other than to maintain epidemic proportions of budworms in New Brunswick.

In light of the fact that he released funds earlier this year to test the effects of acid rain on rabbits' eyes, will the Minister inform the House whether he plans to monitor the death rate of birds and other wildlife from the spraying, keeping in mind his international responsibility under the Migratory Birds Convention?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of the Environment): Madam Speaker, I will look into the Hon. Member's representations.

REQUEST THAT RIVER STUDY BE INITIATED

Mr. Maurice A. Dionne (Northumberland-Miramichi): Madam Speaker, my question is for the same Minister. Will he give the House assurances that there will be a thorough analysis of the situation in the Restigouche River and that he will not simply recommend that the sports fishery be closed, which would be pretty devastating economically to those earning a living there, and simply not respond to the hysteria of the Hon. Member from the NDP?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of the Environment): Madam Speaker, I can assure the Hon. Member that we will undertake a serious, thorough, and responsible review of this situation. We will not urge or recommend actions which respond to hysteria.

The Members of the House know that the decision to spray or not to spray is one which is in provincial hands. Members also know that, in terms of impact, there are Departments other than Environment Canada that are concerned. I think the responsible course of action is to take these reports seriously and investigate them before coming to any rapid conclusion as to what action, if any, should be taken.

CROWN CORPORATIONS

AUDITOR GENERAL'S COMMENTS ON PROPOSED LEGISLATION—CALL FOR WITHDRAWAL

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. The Prime Minister will know that the Auditor General stated in public today with respect to the Canadair affair:

> Bills C-153 on Crown corporations and C-158 on CDIC legislation do not go far enough to prevent a repetition of this tragic affair.

In view of that clear statement by the Auditor General, will the Prime Minister and the Government withdraw Bill C-153 and Bill C-158 and have those Bills re-engrossed to comply with the requirements of the Auditor General concerning accountability?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, on Bill C-153 the Hon. Member will recall that it was the result of us dividing the earlier Bill in a way which accommodated the Opposition. They wanted the Bill to be divided, and we divided it.

Mr. Lewis: Split.

Mr. Trudeau: We split it.

I have not seen the Auditor General's statements. I am happy to look at them. If he made those statements, it will be one man's opinion.

CANADAIR—AUDITING OF CORPORATION'S ACCOUNTS

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Madam Speaker, the Prime Minister will know that the Auditor General is Parliament's servant. Would the Prime Minister also note, when he reads that statement, that it goes on to say:

> What we have here is a costly experiment about which Parliament and the public received little relevant and realistic information.

The Auditor General states that if the accounts had been audited in accordance with the Financial Administration Act, the Government, Parliament, and the public would not have suffered this massive loss as it would have been stopped earlier. In view of that statement will the Prime Minister do something to stop a repetition of these losses? Last year we had Consolidated Computers. This year we have Canadair. What is next?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, the debate in Question Period for the past few days has indicated that the Government has taken steps to prevent a repetition of that unfortunate period of time at Canadair. Those are the steps the Government has taken.

With respect to the quotes from the Auditor General, I repeat that I have not seen them. My impression is that in the questions asked there was a point where the quotation marks stopped and where the Hon. Member interpreted in his own way what the Auditor General might or might not have said.

PETRO-CANADA

DISMISSAL OF EMPLOYEES

Mr. Howard Crosby (Halifax West): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. It concerns the dismissal of several Petro-Canada employees engaged in East Coast exploration work. There are reports that these employees were dismissed because they either demanded or received favours from Petro-Canada contractors.

We know there has been political interference in Petro-Canada's operations on the East Coast, particularly with reference to supply bases and services. Will the Minister confirm or deny these allegations of improper conduct by Petro-Canada employees, and will he assure the House that he will not tolerate any pay-offs or kick-backs on Petro-Canada contracts?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, everyone knows that I do not intervene in the operations of Petro-Canada on a daily basis. It is managed like any other company. If the Hon. Member is aware of some irregularities, it is his duty to give those to me. I will make sure that the employees will serve Petro-Canada in a most honest way, as they must.

Mr. Crosby: I will be glad to provide the Minister with the information. There are at least three Petro-Canada employees who were dismissed.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER CONDUCT INVESTIGATION

Mr. Howard Crosby (Halifax West): Madam Speaker, I want to know why they were dismissed, because they were involved in important offshore exploration work with several companies, including Wolf Offshore Transport Ltd., which is one of those great Canadian companies whose owner lives in Europe and spends very little in Canada. If the Minister wishes to investigate this, he can ask Mr. Walter Wolf and his friends what is going on, and ask the manager for Petro-Canada Explorations what is going on. I hope he will then report to the House.

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, if employees have been dismissed it is because the management has found good reasons for dismissal. If they have done something wrong and have lost their jobs because they have not acted properly, I think the management has done exactly what had to be done.

FORESTRY

FIRES IN BRITISH COLUMBIA—INQUIRY RESPECTING FEDERAL ASSISTANCE

Mr. F. Oberle (Prince George-Peace River): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of the Environment and Forestry, who was informed in a question last week about the serious situation with forest fires in British Columbia. This has now reached crisis proportions. Thousands of hectares or acres of prime forest land are being destroyed daily. Could the Minister tell us today to what extent this Department of the federal Ministry is involved in the attack and the fighting of this serious situation in British Columbia? Has he negotiated with the Provinces to determine what aid and weight his office can give to alleviate the situation?

• (1430)

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of the Environment): Yes, Madam Speaker, I believe the situation is a fluctuating one. There was some indication of improvement last week. The situation may be becoming serious again. The co-ordination of federal and provincial efforts in this area is managed through the Canadian Interagency Forest Fire Centre in Winnipeg, which has been in touch with the Government of British Columbia about the situation and which is co-ordinating the organization of resources as they may be needed to confront the problem.

FUNDING OF FOREST FIRE CENTRE AGENCY

Mr. F. Oberle (Prince George-Peace River): Madam Speaker, the Canadian Interagency Forest Centre in Winnipeg has a total of about $100,000. Could the Minister tell me how far $100,000 would go to fight such a disaster situation in a Province that depends for 50 per cent of its economy on its forestry resource, and where one major forest company alone will have 25 per cent of its feedstock destroyed before the year is out? Does the Minister feel that is the only effort the federal Government should make in response to such a crisis?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of the Environment): Madam Speaker, I would remind the Hon. Member, as he knows but some Members of the House may not, that the role of the agency is to co-ordinate the firefighting fleets and the facilities available in a variety of Provinces, and also to keep in touch with resources which are available in the United States. It is not the direct expenditure of effort by the Centre itself; it plays a co-ordinating role. The basic backup is the material available in the various provincial fleets.

I find it astounding that the Hon. Member should ask whether we think this effort is sufficient when he also knows that we recently indicated that we are committing virtually $150 million of federal Government funds to upgrade and to improve firefighting capacity across Canada by assisting the Provinces in the purchase, on a matching basis, of the most modern and up to date firefighting planes, a move which his colleague from British Columbia has roundly chastised us for taking. I wish he would talk to her and manage to straighten her out on what is required for adequate fire protection in this country.

WESTERN GRAIN TRANSPORTATION ACT

CAP ON TRANSPORTATION FUNDING

Mr. Blaine A. Thacker (Lethbridge-Foothills): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. He knows that the Government decision on the Crow has resulted in a cap being put on the export of grain of about 31.1 million tonnes. This will cost the nation about $4 billion to $5 billion by 1990, whereas an investment of $150 million a year to remove that cap would result in the nation being richer by $4 billion or $5 billion. How can the Prime Minister justify the loss of $1.5 billion for Canadair and other Crown Corporations when the Government is not prepared to make this investment that will give a return of ten or 20 times that amount?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, there is no cap on the export of grain from Canada, none whatsoever. The Bill presently before the House states, however, that there would be a cap on the contribution that the Government of Canada will make to grain transportation. There is a big difference between the two. That was a suggestion made by the Gilson group, and the Government of Canada had accepted that simply as an indication that there is a limitation on the amount of money the federal Government can put into the transportation of grain.

Should the farmers of Canada prefer not to have the cap, that is a suggestion I am quite willing to receive, but only inasmuch as it would be understood that this would not affect the total amount of the contribution of the federal Government.

In specific answer to the question, the fact is completely different from the implication. It is estimated that the amounts of grain exported by Canada will move from 31 million tonnes to 42 million tonnes by the end of the decade.

Mr. Thacker: Madam Speaker, the farmers are paying 10 per cent of the price up to 31 million tonnes. If they pay 100 per cent beyond that, that is an effective cap.

GILSON REPORT RECOMMENDATION

Mr. Blaine A. Thacker (Lethbridge-Foothills): Madam Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Minister of Transport. If the Government were prepared to accept the Gilson compromise with respect to the cap, why has it not accepted the Gilson compromise with respect to paying 81 per cent to the producers and 19 per cent to the railways?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, the fact is that when Gilson produced his report he had a number of supporters; there is no doubt about that. But a great number of groups of farmers and producers of livestock and others disagreed with this or that aspect of the Gilson report. Since then we have been trying to put together a package that would be acceptable to the greatest number of people. As it is not possible to have everybody agreeing with every part of it, the poor Minister of Transport has been begging people kindly to settle for 65 per cent or 75 per cent of their interest and their points of view on the subject. Hopefully, he will get that soon.

NATIONAL REVENUE

REQUEST FOR RE-EVALUATION OF FARM LAND

Mr. Mel Gass (Malpeque): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Revenue. It concerns the valuation date for farm land and other properties, dating back to 1971. Has the Minister or his Department any plans to raise the value of farm properties, or to eliminate the clause which makes it necessary for farmers to pay capital gains on cash for farm sales?

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member's proposal would require an amendment to the Income Tax Act, which would be in the nature of a change in the tax system and, therefore, the responsibility of the Minister of Finance. I can, however, advise the Minister of Finance of the representations made by the Hon. Member with respect to a change in the Income Tax Act in this area.

HUMAN RIGHTS

INTERNMENT OF JAPANESE-CANADIANS—PAYMENT OF COMPENSATION

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Madam Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Justice. He indicated recently that the Government was considering compensation for Canadians of Japanese ancestry who lost their homes in World War II and were placed in internment camps. Would the Minister tell the House what progress is being made on this matter and what process has been set up to establish what kinds of compensation should be paid?

Hon. Mark MacGuigan (Minister of Justice): Madam Speaker, this matter is indeed under some consideration by Government. It is far from being ripe at the present time. I understand the Japanese Canadians are holding a conference in the Fall at which they will discuss what their own position might be. Of course I should remind the Hon. Member and the House that there was a Royal Commission which was appointed and which reported in 1950, according to which Japanese Canadians were compensated to a great extent for the losses which they suffered.

Ms. McDonald: Madam Speaker, certainly members of my Party would welcome compensation being worked on at the present time, and I am sure other Hon. Members would welcome it too.

FORM OF COMPENSATION

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Madam Speaker, my second question is for the Minister of Justice. Would he be a little more explicit on how consultations might be carried out and what the role of Parliament would be in determining the amount of compensation, and the form of compensation?

Hon. Mark MacGuigan (Minister of Justice): Madam Speaker, I think it would be rather unusual for Parliament to be involved in the amount of compensation. Perhaps with respect to the form of compensation, this is a matter about which, at the appropriate time, the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs would want to give some advice to the Minister. I think we are a long way from having the issues before us in sufficiently concrete form to enable us to face these questions precisely.

PORTS

INVESTMENT IN QUEBEC—INQUIRY RESPECTING PORT OF CHURCHILL

Mr. Doug Neil (Moose Jaw): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Transport. In today's mail I received an information bulletin from the Minister indicating a $14.5 million investment in an elevator operated by Bunge of Canada Limited, at the Port of Quebec. When will the Minister be making an announcement with respect to spending some money on the Port of Churchill?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, this must be an investment by the Port of Quebec on the grain facility. It is not an investment of the Department of Transport.

EXPORTS OF GRAIN

Mr. Doug Neil (Moose Jaw): Madam Speaker, the information came from the Minister of Transport's office indicating a Government of Canada investment of $14.5 million.

Mr. Munro (Esquimalt-Saanich): Oh, he doesn't know about it.

Mr. Neil: The Minister is aware of the fact that you can ship grain much more cheaply through the Port of Churchill than you can through Quebec or the Great Lakes system. When is the Minister going to do some work in the Port of Churchill and start directing the export of grain through that port?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I think I am right in suggesting that the investment in the Port of Quebec is an investment by the Port of Quebec, which is part of Ports Canada.

• (1440)

On the subject of Churchill, my hon. friend is wrong in intimating that no money has been spent on that port. To the contrary, millions of dollars have been spent both on the Port of Churchill and on making adequate the rail that leads to Churchill. Each time we talk about Churchill, the question arises: what is the Canadian Wheat Board willing to do on behalf of Canadian farmers for the Port of Churchill? Is it willing to commit itself to certain minimum quantities on an annual basis for that port? Each time the Canadian Wheat Board, on behalf of Canadian farmers, says no, that there are some limitations to what price it can charge Canadian farmers for the use of that port. Consequently, in recent years 500,000 tonnes to 600,000 tonnes have been shipped from Churchill, but it is estimated by most people that, contrary to the opinion expressed just now by my hon. friend, there is an added cost to ship through Churchill.

FOOD AND DRUGS

SALE OF NON-PRESCRIPTION DRUGS—SECURITY REGULATIONS

Mr. Geoff Scott (Hamilton-Wentworth): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. I have given her office notice of it. In light of the recent occurrences of tampering with bottles of laxative in the Ottawa area, known as the Metamucil scare, could the Minister give us a progress report on proposed regulations for the security of non-prescription drugs? Can she also give us an update on whether the Metamucil scare is just an isolated incident or whether it has moved to other parts of the country outside the Ottawa area?

Hon. Monique Bégin (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Madam Speaker, starting with the latter part of the question, from all investigations conducted by the police and by my departmental officials, we are confident that these incidents are localized. Unfortunately it happened here, but at least there is no sign of any other such problems in Canada. Of course they had to do with deliberate acts of tampering. We are continuing the investigation, by the way.

I want to add on the general problem of drug security packaging that, after extensive consultations with the pharmaceutical industry and other interested parties, we will be promulgating regulations under the Food and Drugs Act to provide consumers with additional protection. These new regulations will be effective as of the next—I am speaking Chinese, I am sorry; I am speaking like Crosbie right now—

[Translation]

—what I mean is, the 1st of January 1984!

[English]

Mr. Scott (Hamilton-Wentworth): I am not going to touch that one with a 3.584 metre barge pole, Madam Speaker.

APPLICATION OF PROPOSED REGULATIONS

Mr. Geoff Scott (Hamilton-Wentworth): Madam Speaker, could the Minister say whether these regulations will be voluntary on the part of manufacturers, or mandatory? Will they be legislated, as she said, in 1984, to make security precautions mandatory for non-prescription drugs?

Hon. Monique Bégin (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Madam Speaker, I will have to countercheck, but my understanding is that they will be mandatory. The way the Hon. Member asks his question creates doubt in my mind, so I will come back to him and to the House with a reconfirmation of it. I forgot to say that as part of the new regulations the labelling will have to indicate whether or not the drugs have been opened prior to being sold.

POLITICAL PARTIES

BUTTON WEARING LIBERALS

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey-White Rock-North Delta): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Supply and Services. It is clearly visible that the Minister and Hon. Members on the Government benches are wearing buttons with the Prime Minister's name on them.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Friesen: It is not so clearly visible that they are written with very easily erasable crayola.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Friesen: Since Marshall McLuhan has said that the medium is the message, I wonder whether the Minister of Supply and Services and other Government members are trying to convey a subtle message to the Prime Minister, or have they finally agreed that, whereas one can lead a Liberal to a water hole, one cannot make him drink?

Hon. J.-J. Blais (Minister of Supply and Services): Madam Speaker, I can tell the hon. gentleman that on this side of the House we are very pleased to wear this particular button. There has been no hesitation at all in wearing the buttons, and we can see that the Hon. Member has no difficulty reading what they say.

Madam Speaker: We are away out in left field as far as that question and answer are concerned. The Hon. Member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe.

Mr. Beatty: The whole Government is away out in left field.

THE PRESS

CONSTITUTIONALITY OF PROPOSED NEWSPAPER REGULATING LEGISLATION

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to one of the Government leftfielders, the Minister of State for Multiculturalism, who has been waging a one-man war on Canada's newspaper industry.

An Hon. Member: You are away out in left field.

Mr. Beatty: If the Minister's colleague will let me finish, in view of the fact that within the past two weeks the Minister was reported to have made another speech in which he said that he would be tabling legislation in the House before the end of the month to regulate the newspaper industry, will he tell the House whether he has asked for and received a legal opinion on the constitutionality of what he is doing? If so, will he table that opinion in the House of Commons at the same time the Bill is introduced?

Hon. Jim Fleming (Minister of State (Multiculturalism)): Madam Speaker, I have not said nor read anywhere where I was reported to have said that I would table the Bill in the House. I said that I hoped to have drafted legislation ready by the end of this month. I still have that hope. Although I might not make that deadline, I hope I will.

As to constitutionality, the advice of the Department of Justice, which I take as a Minister, is that our proposal will be quite within constitutional parameters.

LEGAL OPINION

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe): Madam Speaker, could the Minister tell us whether he read the article in The Gazette of Montreal on Tuesday, May 31, which indicated that the Minister hoped to table legislation affecting the ownership and accountability of daily newspapers, by the end of June? In view of the fact that he says he is confident about the constitutionality of his proposals, how does he square that with his "For Ministers' Eyes Only" memorandum of March 31, 1982, which dealt with the legislation as it deals with conglomerates, and said, "even this review process may be struck down by courts". On what legal opinion was this statement made, if he says that he has a legal opinion saying that everything he is doing is perfectly legal?

Hon. Jim Fleming (Minister of State (Multiculturalism)): Madam Speaker, I do not have before me nor did I have any notice of the particular document, if it is a Government document. All I know is that a Royal Commission found that there was a great danger to freedom of the press if there was increased concentration of ownership in the daily newspaper business, that every major and minor daily newspaper owner in the country agrees there does come a point when there can be too much concentration, and that the Government has produced a number of proposals and is now putting them in legislative form according to what we believe is correct within the law.

As far as The Gazette of Montreal is concerned, I am simply saying that I have not told The Gazette or anybody else that I would table legislation by the end of the month. I said that I hoped to have a draft ready.

ATOMIC ENERGY CONTROL BOARD

REAPPOINTMENT OF DIRECTOR

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Madam Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources who has responsibility for appointments to the Atomic Energy Control Board. The Minister knows that Roy Olsen, a member since 1975, was reappointed as of February 19, 1983. The Minister should also know that Mr. Olsen is President of Phillip Cables Limited, which held contracts during the past three years for the Pickering and Darlington nuclear generating stations in the amount of nearly $1.5 million. Does the Minister not consider that Mr. Olsen has a conflict of interest in administering the Control Board that awards licences to Ontario Hydro for these projects from which he profits as a supplier?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member makes a kind of affirmation about conflict of interest on which I will certainly check and report to the House. I do not know the particulars.

INQUIRY RESPECTING DIRECTOR

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Madam Speaker, since the Minister seems to be unaware of Mr. Olsen whom he appointed, will he also check the fact that Mr. Olsen is chairman of the Electrical and Electronics Manufacturers' Association and chairman of a joint industry task force which is lobbying to have the Ontario Government convert all its buildings to electrical heating and otherwise puff up the use of electrical power by another 4,000 megawatts more than Darlington will supply?

• (1450)

I would like to know whether the Minister insists that Mr. Olsen, who has been called Canada's top nuclear reactor salesman, is a person without conflict of interest, fit to administer the pursuit of private profit that endangers Canadian lives and health and the Canadian environment. Does he regard him as a fit and unbiased person?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, the first question and the second question are of the same nature. I will check into the matter.

CUSTOMS AND EXCISE

SUMMER EMPLOYMENT FOR STUDENTS

Mr. Fred McCain (Carleton-Charlotte): Madam Speaker, I would like to address a question to the Minister of National Revenue, of which I have given him notice. Have any students been hired in the customs service at the border points in Carleton-Charlotte for summer employment?

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Yes, Madam Speaker, students have been hired for the summer in this area. If I remember correctly, 16 students were hired for the summer.

[English]

STUDENTS' PROXIMITY TO WORK

Mr. Fred McCain (Carleton-Charlotte): Madam Speaker, in order to extend to students the maximum benefit of their earnings, it has been customary for the Government to hire them within their residential range of the positions which may be vacant. How many of those students who have been hired are residing 15 miles beyond their point of work, which is about the limit of a student's capability to commute?

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, 10 of the 16 students who were hired live within a radius of 15 miles from their place of work.

PARLIAMENT

ELECTORAL REFORM—GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mr. Girve Fretz (Erie): Madam Speaker, my question is for the Government House Leader. He will recall that earlier this week I raised the question of electoral reforms in the House. According to reports, the Government House Leader stated that the appointment of a committee to study such reforms has been shelved until at least the next session of Parliament. This leads us to believe that the Government does indeed have plans to proceed with electoral reforms in the House of Commons in the not too distant future. This seems to contradict the Prime Minister's statement this week to the effect that the Government has no plans to proceed in that direction. My question then is, who speaks for Government policy in that area, the Government House Leader or the Prime Minister?

[Translation]

Hon. Yvon Pinard (President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, I am not aware of the statement or passage to which the Hon. Member is referring.

[English]

REQUEST THAT PRIME MINISTER CONSULT OPPOSITION LEADERS

Mr. Girve Fretz (Erie): Madam Speaker, I wish to direct a supplementary question to the Prime Minister with regard to electoral reform, a question which I posed to him earlier this week. He will recall that the three Party leaders have failed to come to an agreement. That was his statement. Will he promise this House that he will not proceed with any action to implement such a policy without consultation with the Leaders of the Opposition Parties?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, if the Hon. Member is asking me about the policy that we attempted to have accepted shortly after the last election, the answer is yes. The acceptance of that policy by the Government was predicated on the acceptance by the three Party leaders. I think I told the Hon. Member that the other day. As far as I am concerned, that is a dead issue.

NATIONAL REVENUE

SEIZURE OF CHILDREN'S THEATRE COMPANY FUNDS

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Madam Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the Minister of National Revenue. A few months ago officials of Revenue Canada moved in and seized the funds of Carousel Players, a children's theatre company based in St. Catharines, Ontario, which has been entertaining children for many years. These funds were seized on the pretext that the theatre company had failed to make remittances for UIC and Canada Pension Plan contributions. The Minister must know that virtually all theatre groups in Canada operate on the basis that actors are considered self-employed. They are very seldom employed. Will the Minister clarify his Department's position on this matter? With this action, is the federal policy being changed with respect to Canadian artists? If this is the case, what other Government Departments or agencies have been consulted in this area?

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, for several years, the Department of National Revenue has been examining the insurability and nature of the employment of the persons in question. After a thorough study, it was determined, according to the customary criteria used by the Department, that their employment was insurable under the provisions of the Unemployment Insurance Act and the Canada Pension Plan Act. In the circumstances, the Department has no alternative but to request that both employee and employer pay their share of the unemployment insurance and Canada Pension Plan premiums. This was done, without prejudice to employees, employers or the work they are doing, and in accordance with the legislation now in effect.

[English]

EFFECT ON PERFORMING ARTS GROUPS

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Madam Speaker, can the Minister tell us whether it is the intention of the Department to move on other theatre groups across the country and do to them what was done to the Carousel group? Does the Minister realize that the arts community is very concerned about the effect this kind of policy will have on the work which these theatre groups do? I ask this because many of these people are employed sporadically and temporarily.

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Bussières (Minister of National Revenue): Madam Speaker, what the Hon. Member just said merely confirms that a thorough study of each specific case must be made before the Department can decide as to the insurability or non-insurability of employment. The Department looks at the employee's status vis-à-vis his employer and also considers whether or not his employment is permanent, and a final decision is made on the basis of these criteria. It does not mean that a decision made in this particular situation will necessarily apply to other cases. I am merely pointing out that a thorough study is made of the case before a final conclusion is reached.

LABOUR RELATIONS

WEST COAST GRAIN HANDLERS' DISPUTE—REPORT OF DEPARTMENTAL OFFICIAL

Mr. Bill McKnight (Kindersley-Lloydminster): Madam Speaker, I would like to direct my question to the Acting Minister of Labour. As the Minister is well aware, Mr. Bill Kelly, the Assistant Deputy Minister, has been in Vancouver where he is monitoring the progress, or lack of progress, between the grain handlers and the elevator operators on the West Coast. Can the minister inform the House on the report Mr. Kelly has given to him on the situation as he now sees it?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, we in this House all know what a distinguished record Mr. Kelly has had over the past years in working on labour-management matters. The House will be pleased to know that at this time the best advice received from Mr. Kelly and the Department is that we must first determine very carefully the inclination or willingness of the partners to this dispute to give signs of coming together to find an agreement that will not only suit their economic interest but also be in the public interest. Mr. Kelly, who is certainly one of the best people we have on that situation, is monitoring it on a daily basis, which should give some comfort and support to the Hon. Member.

ENERGY

DRILLING OPERATIONS—SERVICE SECTOR DIFFICULTIES

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Madam Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. The Minister will be aware that this week there have been several representatives of the energy supply and service sector in Ottawa making representations to Members of Parliament, and indeed to Government, on the very serious difficulties that are being faced by that sector as a result of the slowdown in drilling activity in these sedimentary basin. Less than 30 per cent of the drilling fleet is working. That has a direct impact upon the service and supply sector. What words of encouragement and hope has the Minister given this very important sector, or is he going to allow this multi-billion industry to collapse like a punctured balloon?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, the message of hope that I can give to them is that for 1983 it is forecast that the cash flow in the industry will increase by about 8 per cent or 9 per cent while the same industry in the United States will see a negative cash flow in 1983. The fact that we have been able to increase the price of a barrel of oil by $4 as of January 1 substantially improved the position of that industry in relation to the situation south of the border. As you know, some of the people who were very keen to go to the United States some years ago, have come back to Canada. For instance, Total Petroleum have indicated that they are now very happy that they were not able to sell their Canadian assets two years ago. They kept those assets, and the Canadian sector of the company is the only one in which there was a profit made this year.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

WEEKLY STATEMENT

Mr. Lewis: Madam Speaker, this being Thursday, I would like to ask the Government House Leader if he can give the House some idea as to the business of the House for next week.

Mr. Pinard: Yes, Madam Speaker, but first I would like to seek unanimous consent that the House does not sit tomorrow.

Madam Speaker: Is there unanimous consent not to sit tomorrow?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Madam Speaker: It is agreed and so ordered.

[Translation]

Mr. Pinard: As far as the business of the House for next week is concerned, Madam Speaker, on Monday, we shall consider the third reading stage of Bill C-85 to establish Canagrex, a corporation to facilitate the export of agricultural products. I would like to designate Tuesday as an Opposition day. Since it will be the last Opposition day in the present supply period, votes will be taken at the end of the day. Wednesday is usually set aside for Private Members' Business, according to the Standing Orders, but I wish to advise the House that I shall seek the Chair's permission to move a motion to extend the hours of sitting until the end of June, as provided in our new Standing Orders, since we now have a parliamentary calendar, and in order to be able to finish Government business, to get as much work done as possible, we are entitled to extend sitting hours during the last two weeks of June. We therefore intend to move a motion to this end on Wednesday. If the motion is challenged, the Standing Orders provide, as Hon. Members are aware, a debate of two hours followed by a vote, if necessary. Finally, next week Thursday we shall resume debate on second reading of Bill C-155, an Act to facilitate the transportation, shipping and handling of Western grain.

[English]

Mr. Lewis: Madam Speaker, that is satisfactory to us. However, at this time, Madam Speaker, I would like to go on record as expressing our displeasure that the last allotted day would be in the middle of the month rather than in the last week of the month. As well, I would like to express displeasure on behalf of all Private Members in the Conservative Party that the Government intends to take the time of Private Members on Wednesday to debate the motion to extend hours. It seems to us, Madam Speaker, that this is the type of motion that should be debated on a Government business day since it is Government business that we would be dealing with.

Mr. Pinard: Madam Speaker, on the latter point raised by the Hon. Member, I have no other choice under the new Standing Orders but to move that motion next Wednesday. I refer my hon. colleague to Standing Order 9, which indicated that this kind of motion must be moved on the tenth sitting day before June 30. The tenth sitting day before June 30 is June 15, which is next Wednesday.

There is a possibility that we could come to an agreement. As I have indicated to him earlier, I intend to talk to my colleague about those extended hours, and if we were to come to an agreement with the NDP and with the Progressive Conservative Party, it may be that it will not be necessary to debate the motion and it would be passed by House Order without debate. Failing to come to such an agreement, we intend to follow the rules and have no other choice but to move the motion on the tenth day preceding June 30, as is stated very clearly in the Standing Orders.

On the first point made by the Hon. Member, the fact that the last allotted day this year would be in mid-June was well known by my colleague. I told him in advance that we are experimenting with parliamentary reform and that after June 15 we will have long sitting days. During this period of supply beginning after Easter, we have given the Opposition 12 allotted days so far. That is a lot of time that has been used by the Opposition. I think it is very reasonable that the last allotted day is to be before days with extended sitting hours. Even though we are acting under the new parliamentary reform, I would like to tell my colleague that in the past when hours were not extended it often happened that the last allotted day was somewhere around June 17, 18 or 19. This is nothing new; it is perfectly normal under the rules. It is our prerogative, and we officially designate next Tuesday as an Opposition Day.

Mr. Skelly: Madam Speaker, I would like to ask the Government House Leader a question that has to do with House business. My question deals with a theme that I have raised previously. I request the Government House Leader to give the House some information as to when the Government will present to the House legislation that will give effect to the policy that was brought forward on shipbuilding.

The second aspect of my question related to that theme is that there is a great deal of concern about the allocation of the frigate program and there is a movement to ask that the Government report to the House of Commons on the feasibility of spreading the construction of these six frigates across the country on a regional basis; two in the West, two in central Canada and two in eastern Canada. I was wondering if the Government House Leader could tell us if Canadians and the House will have a chance to examine, before we sit in the fall, the legislation that will give effect to the shipbuilding policy, and will the Government be reporting to the House prior to adjournment and prior to the decision on the frigate program on the feasibility of spreading across the nation on a regional basis the construction of those frigates?

Mr. Pinard: Madam Speaker, I will be glad to bring the matter to the attention of the Minister responsible. I am not in a position to make any commitment as to what will be done or what will not be done before the date of adjournment because we do not know what the date of adjournment will be.

Mr. Skelly: Madam Speaker, I would like to say that it would certainly be sufficient if the Government House Leader could consult and attempt to provide the House and the country with that kind of information prior to sitting. That would then provide us with an opportunity to respond in a possibly very effective and quick way in the fall should those programs be suitable.

Mr. Lewis: Madam Speaker, at our caucus meeting on Wednesday of next week we will be discussing whether or not our Party might grant unanimous consent to bring that motion forward on the Thursday rather than on the Wednesday in order that the time allotted for Private Members' Business will not be infringed upon. I will communicate that to the Government House Leader at a later time.

Mr. Pinard: Madam Speaker, we are not in the hands of the Tory caucus on this issue. We follow the rules. The Special Committee on Parliamentary Reform proposed, and it was accepted unanimously, that the motion to extend the hours, if there is no agreement, must be moved on the tenth sitting day before June 30 this year. The Committee knew that. It so happens that the tenth sitting day before June 30 is a Wednesday. I hope that the Tories will agree to that, but failing that agreement, we will certainly not be dictated to by what the Tory caucus decides.

PETITIONS

MR. TAYLOR—CLIFFORD ROBERT OLSON

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Madam Speaker, I have great pleasure in presenting another petition containing some 425 names of Canadians who are asking the House of Commons and the Government to hear their plea for the execution of Clifford Robert Olson, who planned the murder of 11 young people and now brags that he killed many others.

Women and children and young people will not be safe if Mr. Olson is ever released from prison to roam the streets looking for more victims.

MR. SKELLY—MARINE INDUSTRIAL STRATEGY

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Madam Speaker, I have the honour to present today a petition from many residents of Manitoba asking that the Government implement a marine industrial strategy that would provide thousands of jobs and billions of dollars in industrial and economic activities for Canadians.

It is also hoped that the Government will be able to produce legislation to give effect to its policy on shipbuilding and to ensure that, in the development of the frigate program, there will be a distribution of benefits across the nation on a regional basis.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. Douglas Fisher (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: Nos. 4,837 and 4,869.

[Text]

MARITIME FORESTRY COMPLEX, FREDERICTON, N.B.

Question No. 4,837—Mr. Howie:

To the date on which this question is answered, what is the status of the Maritime Forestry Complex which is to be built at Fredericton, New Brunswick?

Hon. John Roberts (Minister of the Environment): The federal Government has confirmed its participation in the construction of the Maritimes Forestry Complex as part of its Forest Sector Strategy for Canada, under the Special Capital Recovery Projects Program. As announced on May 18 by the Hon. John Roberts, Minister of Environment Canada and the Hon. Roméo LeBlanc, Minister of Public Works, the Government will construct new facilities for the Maritimes Forest Research Centre of the Canadian Forestry Service. These facilities, estimated to cost $22 million, will be part of the Complex which will also include the New Brunswick Department of Natural Resources, the University of New Brunswick Forestry Research Group and the Maritimes Forest Ranger School.

Order Paper Questions

CLOSED CAPTIONED PROGRAMS

Question No. 4,869—Mr. Beatty:

1. What is the policy of the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission concerning the desire of cable companies to decode closed-captioned American programs instead of being forced to substitute Canadian signals that are not closed-captioned for the hearing impaired?

2. Have efforts been made by the CRTC to encourage broadcasters to (a) produce Canadian close-captioned programming (b) purchase closed-captioned versions of foreign programs and, if so, what were such efforts?

Hon. Francis Fox (Minister of Communications): I am informed by the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission as follows:

1. The Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission requires cable licensees that have 6,000 or more subscribers to substitute for local or regional signals when requested by the local or regional broadcaster under the provision of section 19 of the Cable Television Regulations.

Two cable licensees now have authority to decode closed-captioned programming. The Commission is currently reviewing an amendment that would allow these and other cable licensees to apply for specific exemptions to the requirement to perform program substitution when lower priority signals are captioned. The Commission hopes to announce its decision on these measures in the near future.

2. This Commission has always taken the position that it is the broadcaster's responsibility to determine how they will spend their resources to serve its minority constituents. Broadcasters who are before the Commission for various reasons may be questioned on their programming efforts. Questions concerning service often arise and as part of that discussion, the subject of captioning may be raised. The subject may be raised by the Commission itself or it could be raised as part of an intervention from any interested member of the public.

The Chairman of the Commission has written each independent television broadcaster and cable company on services and programs for the disabled pointing out how important service to the hearing impaired is and, at the same time, soliciting their comments.

This subject has also been raised with some of the pay television licensees.

Mr. Fisher: Madam Speaker, I ask that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 62—GOVERNMENT POLICIES

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Mazankowski:

That this House rejects the centralizing and interventionist policies of the Government as an ideological thrust aimed at introducing socialization of the Canadian economy by the back door and without the authorization of Parliament, and a definite and present threat to the freedom of Canadians.

Madam Speaker: The Hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan).

Mr. Beatty: Madam Speaker—

Madam Speaker: I recognized the Hon. Minister of Agriculture. He got up first and I recognized him. Will the Minister defer for five minutes and we will allow the Hon. Member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe (Mr. Beatty) to answer questions?

Mr. Whelan: Yes, Madam Speaker.

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe): Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. I wish to thank the Minister of Agriculture for his courtesy. You were not in the chair, Madam Speaker, when proceedings ended at one o'clock. We ended with the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Ouellet) believing that I would not have a chance to respond to his question. He made a comment the same as one that previously landed him with a contempt of court citation, but he made that at another time.

He asked one genuine question, however. He wanted to know how I could discuss legislation for the newspaper industry which has been proposed by the Minister of State for Multiculturalism (Mr. Fleming) when the Bill has not been introduced. If the Minister had read the document entitled "Government Proposals on Freedom of the Press in relation to the Canadian Daily Newspaper Industry", which is the text of the speech given by the Minister of State for Multiculturalism on May 25, 1982, at the University of Western Ontario, he would have found that the Minister outlined all the government's proposals at that time and referred to them as Cabinet decisions. If the Minister has any doubts about any of the assertions I made about the intention of the Government, he should query his colleague who published this document.

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Speaker, I should like to address some comments on questions to the previous speaker on the subject of the Kent Commission and the Government's response through legislation and policy.

The first thing to do is acknowledge that the Government program is not at an acceptable level. This morning my colleague, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Birds Hill (Mr. Blaikie), outlined the kind of intellectual bankruptcy and basic dishonesty of the approach of the Conservative Party. The Hon. Member who just spoke did not outline what the Conservative Party would be prepared to do to face the problems of the industry. He stated no policy and no position, but just said that there are too many problems and that that is the fault of the Liberals.

I should like to ask the Hon. Member what the Conservative Party would do about corporate concentration in the newspaper and media sector. What would it be prepared to do about a small number of people controlling a large number of media outlets and controlling retail outlets that depend on those for media advertising, squeezing out other competitors and destroying a competitive system?

What is that Party prepared to do about cross-media ownership? It is fine for the Conservative Party to stand in the House and condemn the Government, but it does a tremendous disservice to the people of Canada by failing to put forward constructive alternatives.

I challenge the previous speaker to put up some alternatives by which the Canadian people would judge his Party, or at least admit that his Party is prepared to see concentration continue to the detriment of consumers and to other small businesses in Canada. What is that Party prepared to do to ensure there is a diversity of titles?

Mr. Beatty: Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to receive the challenge and to be able to respond to it. The first assertion made by the Hon. Member was to the effect that companies which had retail outlets were squeezing out retail competitors. I would ask the Hon. Member to supply justification for that statement. I think he will not be able to do so. Hon. Members would be interested if he could.

He asked about the issue of cross-media ownership. If he had followed the proceedings of the CRTC over the years, he would have known that the CRTC has always had the right and has always insisted upon the right, to question cross-media ownership. There is nothing new in these proposals that goes beyond what the CRTC was able to do before.

Finally, the Hon. Member asked what sort of positive proposals this Party has. I have made a number of proposals, including some for changes in the tax laws. An example is the case of the Blackburn holdings in London. The London Free Press is owned by a family operation. As the tax laws stand, if Mr. Blackburn were to die, his family might be forced to sell the newspaper to a chain or some other buyer and be forced to divest themselves of those holdings. This could lead to greater corporate concentration.

My criticism of the Government's proposals and of the NDP "me too" approach is that they are strictly interested in regulating a dwindling number of dailies. They have not proposed anything that would improve the climate in which newspapers would operate. For example, they do not propose changes to the tax legislation to encourage advertising, which is the lifeblood of Canada's daily newspaper industry. Second, the great issue that we should be concerned about is diversity in the media. We are concerned about the ability of Canadians to draw their opinions from a number of different sources. The best way to ensure that is to ensure diversity.

The position taken by the NDP and the Liberal Government over the years, particularly as it relates to the electronic media, has been to draw an electronic curtain along the 49th parallel and say that we should restrict competition rather than encourage it. They cannot have it both ways, Mr. Speaker.

I say that competition should be encouraged both in the electronic media and in the print media. Canadians would be far better served by that than they would by a restrictive regime that regulates a dwindling number of dailies and ensures that friends of the Government are able to pass judgment on what working journalists have said and done.

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I enter this debate today because of the things that people say, and some people may even believe what they say. The motion reads as follows:

> That this House rejects the centralizing and interventionist policies of the Government as an ideological thrust aimed at introducing socialization of the Canadian economy by the back door and without the authorization of Parliament, and a definite and present threat to the freedom of Canadians.

Crown corporations have been a way of life in Canada for many years. To suggest at this time that they are socializing our country is plain nonsense, nothing more than nonsense. Let us look at Canada. Owing to the size of this country, with its very small population and diverse regions, Canada is faced with problems that smaller or more compact countries do not have to deal with. It became obvious early in Canada's history that some services that Canadians required could not be provided equitably by private enterprise. If we relied on profit-making private business to meet all the needs of Canadians, there would be a lot of well-off people living in the Quebec-Windsor corridor and a few people scattered in pockets around the rest of the country.

With respect to the Crowsnest Pass freight rate, which Hon. Members opposite are so determined to keep us from changing, it was interesting to read in the press yesterday what the candidates for the leadership of that Party are saying about the Crowsnest Pass freight rate. I believe every one of them has said it has to be changed. I believe one of them is quoted as saying that it should be scrapped completely. I do not know what will happen to him in the leadership contest. The former Leader of that Party says he does not know enough about it to make a comment. At least, that is what he was reported in the press as saying. That sounds kind of strange to me.

That Party opposite is determined, Mr. Speaker, to keep us from changing the Crow rate. It must be changed because of our very recognition that it is not fair to ask farmers on the Prairies to carry the full cost of transporting their grain to export markets when the beneficiary of that trade is the entire population of Canada. Governments over the years have recognized their responsibility was to unite Canadians. One of the best ways to do that is to provide real opportunity for all. If private industry could not, or would not, then it was the legitimate role of government to step in. Crown corporations were the vehicles which were used. I do not believe any one of those Crown corporations even intentionally abused that power.

If Crown corporations are socializing Canada, then it is a process which has had the full blessing of the Progressive Conservative Party. The first and some of the biggest Crown corporations formed in this country were instituted by Conservative Tory Governments. For example, the Canadian Wheat Board, the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and the Canadian National Railways were all fathered by Conservative Governments. I do not believe any Hon. Members, Mr. Speaker, would seriously argue that these Crown corporations have not worked effectively for Canada. I do not hear any strong calls for their abolition or fears that they are turning Canada into a socialist country.

I can remember travelling with the previous head of Canadian Pacific Railways and the head of the CNR. We were visiting a proposed construction site between Calgary and Kamloops on the CP route and between Kamloops and Edmonton on the CN route. Some of the people on the trip said afterwards: "You know, the head of CP sounded more like he was running a Crown corporation than did the head of CN". They thought the heads of the two railroads, by their philosophy, should be interchanged because of the way they were putting forth suggestions as to what should be done in the railroad industry and what should be done for the good of Canada.

The Canadian Wheat Board, Mr. Speaker, is one of the most successful grain sales agencies in the whole world. Other countries send their officials here to study it. Farmers in other countries urge their governments to follow the Canadian pattern. You must remember the "great American grain robbery" of the 1970s when the Russians secretly bought so much United States grain that they upset the world market. That could not have happened if the United States had had a national sales agency which kept on top of what grain was sold to what country. That cost the United States farmers, Mr. Speaker, billions of dollars. What did the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture do in that so-called great free enterprise country? He moved in and put export controls on, because they were shorting the market. They were making a scarcity of grain in that country. However, the Russians "capitalized", if I can use that word, and made almost 100 per cent profit on all the grain which they bought. They moved into that system and bought it up and did it in such a refined, professional way that no one knew what they were doing until it was too late.

Crown corporations, Mr. Speaker, are not confined solely to the federal Government. Every Province has some. So they should, because every Province has the same basic problem as the Government of Canada has, that is, how to provide equal levels of service and opportunities to residents in regions with different natural resources.

I do not hear the Hon. Members opposite, Mr. Speaker, criticizing provincial Governments for socializing the country by setting up Crown corporations. In Saskatchewan there is a huge Crown corporation which looks after potash in that Province. I said to the Deputy Premier, the House Leader and the Minister of Agriculture of that Province the other day: "Are you going to sell the Saskatchewan Potash Corporation?" The answer was: "Of course not; it is making money for us." I said: "Have you got rid of any of the Crown corporations which the previous Government had?" The answer was: "Not yet". I don't know if they are going to get rid of any of them either, because they have been a good thing for that Province.

They have in Saskatchewan, for instance, a transportation system which is owned by the Province and which provides large, smooth-riding, air-conditioned buses all over those roads which are built by the Province. Is that centralizing? Is that socializing? Roads at one time, Mr. Speaker, used to be toll roads. Now they are paid for by everyone. They are paid for by the few who say: "We do not use them; why should we pay for them?" I have not heard one suggestion from the other side that the highway system should go to a toll type of system, that anyone who uses highways in Canada, whether municipal, provincial or federal, should pay a toll charge on them. I have not heard that being suggested. I have not heard that the Members opposite would go back that far in their medieval thinking. However, they have suggested it in some other ways.

I wonder if they should think also of our educational system. Maybe they call that system centralization also. I remember when I first came to this House, the Government gave $26 million to the schools of higher learning in this country. Mr. Pearson was Prime Minister at that time. He said that every young Canadian should have equal opportunity to education. He was going to fund universities and schools of higher learning for those people he described at that time, those "who may live in have-not Provinces which do not have the resources to go ahead with that type of system". Last year this Government gave $4 billion to the schools of higher learning. Are the Members opposite suggesting that that is "centralizing", when education is strictly under the Provinces? They have the control, yet at the present time we are paying over 50 per cent of all administration costs for education. Are the Members opposite suggesting that that is what we should get rid of?

Are they suggesting our church system in Canada, where everyone contributes if they want to, and everyone can attend if they want to, is "socialization" or "centralization"? Are the Members opposite suggesting our parks system in this country is "socialization" or "centralization"? Is that what Members opposite are suggesting, that we should get rid of all those and let someone in the private sector run them? Are they suggesting that our natural harbours and our man-made harbours are something which should be turned over to the private sector? Are they suggesting that Air Canada be turned over to some private system because it is a Crown Corporation and is under a Liberal Government?

Is the mover of this motion suggesting, perhaps, Mr. Speaker, that because Pacific Western Airlines is in the Province of Alberta and owned by the Province of Alberta, that that is free enterprise because it is under a Conservative Government? Is he suggesting something like that? Does it mean that Air Canada is "centralization" or "socialization" because it is owned by the federal Government and run by the federal Government for the people of Canada, but PWA, because it is in the Province of Alberta, is different?

Is the Hon. Member suggesting, for instance, when freedom of choice on the Crow rate was talked about earlier, something the same as Alberta has for the irrigation districts in Alberta? Under law in Alberta, if you do not turn over the ownership of the headworks of all the irrigation systems in Alberta, you do not share—and that is freedom of choice—in the $234 million special fund which is set aside to assist these people. Is that what Hon. Members opposite call "freedom of choice"? I have met these people. Is PFRA, for instance, "socialization" or "centralization"? These are people who are offering engineering services and so on, and they have made a tremendous contribution to western Canada. Are Hon. Members opposite suggesting that we abolish PFRA?

Mr. Mazankowski: We set it up.

Mr. Whelan: Yes, that is another one. The Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) has asked me to find more funds for the Farm Credit Corporation.

Mr. Mazankowski: Of course.

Mr. Whelan: That is a Crown Corporation. Does he want me to centralize all farm lending in Canada under the Farm Credit Corporation? Is that what he is saying? Is that more "socialization"? Is that what he means? He should say what he means.

In the Province of Alberta the Treasury Board has banks all over the Province. Is the Hon. Member suggesting that perhaps we should get into the bank business? It is probably called private enterprise if it is in Alberta; however, if you suggest it for Canada, you are becoming a very bad socialist.

Over half of the land in Alberta is owned by the state. Most of the mineral resources in Alberta are owned by the state and administered by the State. I do not understand what the Members opposite mean when they talk about "socialization" and "centralization". I can remember when the Government was told to get rid of grain elevators. So I put them up for sale. I can see that the Hon. Member for Moose Jaw (Mr. Neil) remembers it very well. Who bought them in Alberta? That great private enterprise system called the Alberta Government. That was not centralization or socialization because it was under a Conservative Government in Alberta. Therefore they call it private enterprise in Alberta. But when I had them under the Canadian Grain Commission, that was Liberal socialization. I do not understand why when it is good for one, it is not good for the other.

Take the Opposition's view on the media, for instance. How is centralizing under a huge private corporation to have the media under one control any different? When the Government suggests something to try to protect the little person in the media in some manner, the Opposition say that it is bad and that we are interfering. I do not understand how it can be said that the free enterprise system in the media system is working properly when more and more central control takes over in that fashion.

When we were talking about Canagrex in recent days, we heard a lot about how it would own farms. They made a comparison with Russia and Poland. No Russian farmer has the say that the Canadian farmer does. No Polish farmer has the say. It is wrong to make that kind of comparison because freedom of choice will be made and Canagrex cannot be involved in farm ownership. It cannot be involved in any of the things that they mentioned. It can only get involved when asked, and only in exporting.

One Hon. Member mentioned the other day that we would find cans on the shelves with Canagrex written on them. That cannot happen in Canada because Canagrex can only be involved in products for export. The Opposition called it socialism and the taking over of the last bit of free enterprise in Canada.

Those Members have heard me and know how well that I understand and appreciate agriculture in Canada. I recently met with Mr. Gorbachev here who was from the Politburo. I must say that he was entertained royally in Alberta. I appreciate their paying for part of the Bill. He met with the Premier of Alberta when he was there. The Premier of Alberta is paying $40 a tonne in subsidy on canola crushing plus $9 a tonne freight assistance. Who was he trying to sell it to? The Soviet Union. The Premier was saying what a great product it was, and I agree, but he is giving the Soviet Union $49 a tonne more than Saskatchewan or Manitoba could. He has the resource of a great pile of money which he can take out by the handful now and again. He could control the canola industry in Alberta if he continued this long enough because the other industries would be depleted both in Saskatchewan and in Manitoba.

I have direct responsibility for several Crown corporations and agencies. I assure all Hon. Members that they work well on behalf of the Canadian farmers and Canadian consumers. The Agricultural Stabilization Board and the Agricultural Products Board have used Canadian taxpayers' dollars wisely to keep the agri-food industry financially strong and viable. The Hon. Member for Essex-Kent (Mr. Daudlin), who spoke to me just before I rose, came to tell me how well the Agricultural Products Board was working with the food processing industry in Ontario in order to save it by buying its product. He was saying how it worked well with the Province of Ontario on loan assistance it had given to a canning factory and how the two Governments were accomplishing this. Does centralization or socialization mean making sure those industries stay alive? I do not think it is. I think that is what we want.

I heard one Hon. Member talking in the House recently about Koreans and using brainwashing tactics, that if you told people often enough, you wore them down and they believed it.

I have never heard any better description of what the Opposition were doing when saying what Canagrex would do to our society.

The Agricultural Products Board has had the power to buy and sell since 1952. I would ask Members to do some research and find any time when that Board has had its powers abused by any Minister, whether Liberal or Conservative, since that time. They will find that it has not been abused.

What can the Agricultural Products Board do? It can buy up surplus quantities of food production to forestal market disruption and then put it back into the system when prices are stable. We have bought grapes that have been turned into brandy. It was made from red grapes when people discontinued drinking red wine. I can tell those Members that if they want some brandy, they can even use for Sacramental wine if they wish; it is of high quality. Our rules and regulations for making brandy or any spirited beverages are much more strict than those of any other country in the world.

Let me return to the Farm Credit Corporation because that is one of my favourite topics. While Hon. Members on the other side may be as honest, I wish they would show the honesty shown by the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) when he talks about the Farm Credit Corporation. He has said that it must have more funding to look after the needs of farmers. I see his colleague, the Hon. Member for Moose Jaw nodding his head in full agreement. At one time the Farm Credit Corporation had 60 per cent of all long-term credit mortgage loans in Canada. We then asked the private sector to move in. The private sector moved in in a big way. We dropped down to 22 per cent of long-term mortgages for farmers in Canada. Then all hell broke loose. When the farmers called for long-term mortgages, what did the private lending institutions say? They told them to go to the Farm Credit Corporation. We have lists upon lists and applications upon applications.

Mr. Mazankowski: Do not take over the farms. That is what we are saying.

Mr. Whelan: When I have to go to the money market I hope to get the support from those Members to get that money for the Farm Credit Corporation. I hope they will not then say that the federal Government is again increasing its debt load and affecting its credibility in the rest of the world.

Let them be honest when they talk about socialization in the agricultural industry. With respect to my share of the federal budget, no country in the world spends as little per capita as we do on agriculture. No country in the world has as healthy an agriculture industry as we do. If those Members want to talk about socialism and communism, let them see how much money those countries pour into agriculture. They would be very pleased to have only half of the agriculture industry that we have. A member of the Russian Politburo who visited us was quite honest when we showed him our meat packing plants, our food processing plants, our dairy farms, beef farms, and grain farms. He was utterly amazed at what he saw. He said, "I heard so much about it but I had to come and see for myself."

Certainly our industry was built by agencies such as the Farm Credit Corporation, the Agricultural Products Board and the Canadian Dairy Commission. It was built by these agencies, and some people call that centralization or socialization. But they are necessary in our country. When they talk about proliferation, let me say that I could have brought Canagrex in by Order in Council. I chose the legislative route. Some farmers have said I am wrong, but I think it has been an education for many people here.

I can go on to talk about all the great things we have done to build this country and its agriculture industry, which has been the envy of such huge countries in the northern hemisphere as China and the Soviet Union as well as many smaller countries in the northern hemisphere in regions that are similar to ours. We have long cold winters and a short growing season. I find what we have been able to do in our country phenomenal.

• (1540)

I see, Mr. Speaker, that you are making motions—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. There is no difficulty if the Minister wishes to continue, but he would require the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Neil: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Minister spoke about going to the money market for funds for the Farm Credit Corporation. The Corporation did, in fact, go to Europe and borrowed money at, I believe, 12.75 per cent. For a number of years Members on this side have promoted an agri-bond concept and another concept regarding capital gains tax whereby the Farm Credit Corporation could borrow money at about half that rate. The Minister has never made any attempt, as far as we can determine, to implement that concept. If he is interested in the farmers of this country and in having cheap money available to them, why has the Minister not been trying to sell that concept to Cabinet? Would he tell us that, please?

Mr. Whelan: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member knows full well that the committee appointed to look into how the investments of banking systems should work recommended very strongly against that. They were people mostly from what we call the blue chip committee because they were from the lending institutions. There was consultation with the Government, and they did not recommend that concept. I still think it is a very good idea.

The Hon. Member if wrong when he talks about the money borrowed. We borrowed money at 11.25 per cent in Canadian funds for ten years repayable in ten years in Canadian funds. It is a very good rate of interest we were provided. None of the lending institutions at the present time will lend anything, as far as I know, over three years at a fixed interest rate. The last rate I had quoted for three years was 15.75 per cent. The Hon. Member knows very well that we have entered into an agreement with the Province in which he lives, that is, Saskatchewan. It has a loan program to assist young farmers who are starting out. That program is one whereby we lend the money to them, the Province moves in and funds are subsidized by 5 per cent. It brings the interest rate down to 8 per cent for young farmers for the first five years of the mortgage. The Province of Ontario is trying to negotiate such a program at the present time for its young farmers. Neither one of those Provinces is promoting the agri-bond, and they are Conservative Provinces. If we got the support of those Provinces, probably we would have more support in getting the program through the Government of Canada. The Hon. Member for Moose Jaw could use his influence with the Conservative Government of Saskatchewan and perhaps get it to say "We want the agri-bond system". I believe, as the Hon. Member for Moose Jaw does, that it is a good system. But I have not been successful in getting it through.

Mr. Neil: Mr. Speaker, I am disappointed the Hon. Minister has been unable to get the scheme through Parliament. He talks about listening to a committee made up of high calibre lending people, and so on. If the Minister is seriously concerned about the plight of the farmers and there is a way to make this money available without subsidization, surely he must be able to sell Cabinet on it. If he is unable to sell the system to Cabinet on his own, perhaps he would like to invite some Members from this side of the House to go with him and make representations to Cabinet.

Mr. Beatty: You will never get into Cabinet that way.

Mr. Neil: If the Minister is serious, not only will he be helping the farmer by lowering interest rates but he will also help those farmers who have spent a lifetime building up their farm assets cut back on their capital gains tax. Many farmers have spent their lifetime building up their farm assets. They have no ready cash. They look forward to the day when they can sell their farm and equipment and have the money to buy a house in the city. But by the time the Government takes its share of income tax and capital gains, there is nothing left with which the farmer can build a home.

Mr. Whelan: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member questions my sincerity about this. I have checked the records and I do not believe I saw his name or that his Party presented a brief to this committee on the very thing he is proposing today in the House. They had that opportunity They were invited to do that kind of thing. Anyone could make a presentation to the committee when the hearings were being held. I may have missed it by omission, but I am sure the Hon. Member, who speaks with such sincerity about this today, must have presented a brief.

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister. In the motion we are discussing today it suggests that the federal Government is centralizing policies and has interventionist policies. The Minister, in explaining the Government's decision, described the functions of the Dairy Commission and other marketing agencies. I understand there are a number of marketing agencies operating in the Province of Ontario. Could the Minister give me some information concerning these marketing agencies, which products are under the jurisdiction of these agencies and whether these agencies set up and operated by Conservative provincial Governments are different in any way from the agencies set up by the federal Government?

Mr. Whelan: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member asks a good question. A lot of people are under the impression that all the marketing boards in Canada come under the jurisdiction of the Minister of Agriculture. Really there are only three marketing boards as such: the Egg Marketing Board, the Canadian Chicken Marketing Board and the Turkey Marketing Board. Then we have commissions. We have the Canadian Dairy Commission and we have the Canadian Wheat Board. Those are the main ones we have dealing with products in Canada. Each Province has many marketing boards. They are very powerful. They have control over supply and control in some instances, over price. They have an array of powers.

The Hon. Member says there is not one provincial Minister who would not want marketing boards, and actually I have never heard one provincial Premier of any Party, Conservative or other—but they are practically all Conservatives in Canada at the present time—say he does not want any more. Just recently we had a meeting of the signatories to the poultry agreements that we have for national marketing in Canada. What the Minister from Ontario said is recorded. He said that he was a strong believer in supply and management as long as these marketing boards are run well. I believe in Ontario there are forty-some marketing boards that have to do with products. Actually, Ontario and British Columbia were the creators of marketing boards. I believe it was British Columbia first. It goes back to 1928, I believe, for the dairy producers in the Fraser Valley, who had the first farming board to market milk.

One of the largest marketing boards, as we know, is the Canadian Wheat Board. People were not allowed a choice when the Wheat Board was imposed upon them by a Conservative Government. It was said that in five years farmers would have a vote. The World War came along. They had an excuse for not having a vote. Farmers did not have a vote, I believe, until 1947 but then they voted about 85 per cent in favour of the Canadian Wheat Board. The Canadian Wheat Board is the largest marketing board in Canada. It has tremendous powers. It is protected against imports. You cannot import any grain under the authority of the Canadian Wheat Board unless you get a permit. That includes the Minister of Agriculture, Mr. Speaker. Even if he wants to bring in a bushel of grain for research, he has to get a permit from the Canadian Wheat Board to use that wheat in Canada.

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Speaker, I would like to pose a question to the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan). It pertains to the great job of intervention and protection of the public involvement, and it involves grain inspection in Canada. It pertains directly to agriculture and Government involvement.

It is my understanding that the Government intends to reduce the presence of meat inspectors in a variety of slaughterhouses and meat packing operations across the country and allow certain companies to undertake their own inspections under the authority of these meat inspectors even though they were not present. The responsibility for those seals would be placed in the hands of company officials. Basically, what would happen would be that the responsibility for supervision of the protection of the public and the degree of sanitation and health protection would fall on those who are to be regulated. Basically, the individuals who are to be regulated would be regulating themselves without adequate supervision and there would ultimately be a serious situation concerning public health. As I understand, there has already been a large number of violations and concerns about procedure in meat plants. In spite of this, the Minister and the Department intend to go ahead and reduce the presence of federal inspectors in those positions. Would the Minister be prepared to outline just how he can justify that kind of situation?

Mr. Whelan: Madam Speaker, we will not downgrade the meat inspection in Canada. We will not cut our staff. If we had more funds, we would probably add more staff at the present time. In Canada, we have one of the best inspection services for meat products that there is in the world. One can make a comparison. We have 541 plants in Canada which are federally inspected, which are approved for export to the United States of America. In essence, what that means is that any meat we feel is good for domestic consumption is good for export, or vice versa. Some countries just have inspection for export to meet the standard. For instance, the United States, which is a big country, only has 141 plants which will meet our inspection criteria to export meat to Canada.

I know full well what the Hon. Member is discussing, because it involves a little plan in his area where consideration is being given to withdrawing an inspector who has been there, I believe, since the 1950s. That inspector has not been withdrawn, and I do not think that he will be, because the order that I issued was that he had to stay there, and that if a service had been provided for any length of time, there was no way we could downgrade it. In no way will we be allowing a company to do its own meat inspection and then try to export the product, because with the present international trade agreements, the product would not even be accepted.

As the Hon. Member knows, there is some inspection which is run by the Provinces. At one time there were many problems, and there has been a lot of publicity, but no significant breakdown in our inspection system has ever taken place. As far as I remember, when bad meat was being sold, and this type of thing, it was all out of provincially-inspected slaughtering and meat packing plants. There was a wild rush at that time for us to provide inspectors for their meat plants with the CDA inspection stamp of approval on them. We did not have that many inspectors to do that. People recognized that it meant a pure, good product if it had the inspection stamp of approval from the CDA. If products are to be shipped across interprovincial or international borders, they must have that inspection. Some of the Provinces depend solely on the Canadian Department of Agriculture Inspection Service for their meat packing plants. Some of them have a combination of both federal and provincial inspection, and some are only provincially inspected plants, but in these cases, as far as I know, they are doing every bit as good a job as we are with the training that they are giving their people, the technicians and veterinarians on the job. There may be the odd time when we find people a little bit lacking, but if their lacks are pointed out to us, they are either fired or removed from their jobs, and that is for sure.

Mr. John Thomson (Calgary South): Madam Speaker, I listened carefully to the remarks of the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan). I guess what really amazed me more than anything else, and I was trying to figure it out, is by what convoluted type of reasoning, when he was speaking of churches, highways and our education system, he was relating them to interventionism. I couid not quite understand it. What do churches and highways have to do with interventionism? I have listened to the Minister of Agriculture for four years. I guess we must give him credit for one thing: he is a master of bafflegab. However, I have never in my life heard anything like I heard today when he tried to relate churches, highways and our education system to interventionism. That really escaped me.

I just wonder how long the Minister believes he will fool the Canadian people with that kind of reasoning and nonsense, because that is what it is, just nonsense. I do not know whether the Minister knows it or not. Maybe he has been around here for so long that he does not understand it any more. All this nonsense just comes off him like water off a duck. I do not think that the Canadian people will put up with that kind of nonsense for much longer, not any longer than it takes us to get to the next election.

Mr. Regan: Do you think?

Mr. Thomson: Canadian people have had it up to here with that kind of baloney, just baloney. If the Minister does not know this, I will not tell him, but Canadian people do not trust him. They do not trust his Government any more. Perhaps it is not so much because of interventionism. Does the Minister know why they do not trust the Government? They do not trust it because of what it let the former Minister do and how it rewarded its own at the public's expense. They do not trust it because the former Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources put one Michael Phelps on his payroll at public expense. He abused the public trust. That is why the Canadian public does not trust the Government. They do not trust it because the Minister of State for International Trade (Mr. Regan) uses public transportation for the benefit of his own family. That is why the Canadian public does not believe in the Government any more. They do not trust it and they will kick it out.

Mr. Whelan: We'll see about that.

Mr. Thomson: I listened this morning to the laughter. Maybe it will not be too long before Eugene has the happy experience of joining the ranks of the unemployed in this country. Maybe if he were among those people he would understand the importance of a $1.4 billion loss which was incurred on the public's behalf. I wonder how all of the 1.5 million unemployed Canadians feel about that kind of waste, extravagance and gross mismanagement. I would be interested in knowing just how they feel about that. What they do not know, because the Government will not tell them, is about all the other disasters which are buried every day by the Government. Canadair is only the tip of the iceberg.

I listened with interest this morning to the Minister of the Environment (Mr. Roberts). The Minister was to tell us all the good things his Government has done for Canadians. What the Minister really fails to understand is that what the Liberal Government has done over the last 15 years has been to destroy individual initiative in this country. The Minister does not have any appreciation whatsoever of that fact. It always seemed to me that the greatness of Canada was the greatness of our opportunity to go out and build, to create, to strive for something better in this life. In the last 15 years the Liberal Government has taken much of individual initiative away from Canadian people. That is why we are in this predicament today. Hon. Members on the other side of the House and those in the socialist Party to my left do not understand that that is at the core of the problem in the country today. What is individual initiative all about? That is what creates jobs. Governments do not create jobs. Governments spend money. Governments take in money with one hand and spend it with the other, and in the process about 30 per cent is lost.

• (1600)

I would like to refer to one thing which makes me so angry with the Government. When I return to my home riding of Calgary, I am saddened to see the needless devastation caused by the Government and its National Energy Program. Either it does not understand or it does not care. The Government has no idea what its National Energy Program has done to western Canada. Does it realize that there are 80 rigs running today in western Canada or how many there were before the National Energy Program was invented as a socialistic experiment of interventionism on a scale which had never been seen in the country before? Government Members ought not to be very proud of themselves. Are they proud of the 25,000 men they put out of work in the oil well drilling and servicing industry? Do they care? No, there is not a vote in western Canada. I can assure them that there will never be a vote for the Liberal Party in western Canada as long as I live. Let us remember the devastation that program has caused in western Canada. What for? Also it caused human misery. In aid of what? What has the National Energy Program accomplished? It is built upon bureaucracy. The people of Canada should know that the Government had to erect an office building to accommodate 4,000 people in EMR today. There are actually 20,500 and some odd people employed in the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources today. There are 600 employees looking over forms, deciding the level of Canadian owership, the core rating. Who cares what is the level of Canadian ownership if it is creating jobs? What is so magnificent about a company that happens to be 70 per cent Canadian owned but broke?

They have Canadianized the oil industry, but they have bankrupted Canadian companies and foreign controlled companies are prospering as they never prospered before. The Canadian part of the industry is broke and bankrupt. This is why there are 80 rigs running in Canada. The National Energy Program is so good and so magnificent that there are 80 rigs in western Canada today looking for oil and gas!

Mr. Breau: That is because the price is down, and you know it.

Mr. Thomson: The Hon. Member does not have the faintest idea what it is all about. He does not understand the industry and he does not care.

The saddest part of it is that I happen to know that the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) has stated that the National Energy Program is a disaster. The former Minister of Energy admitted in private that it is a disaster. The new Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Chrétien) admitted that it is a disaster. Do they do anything about it? No, because that would be to admit that they made a mistake. The Liberal Government does not make mistakes; it has never made a mistake! Has anyone ever heard the Liberal Government over the last 15 years admit that it made a mistake? Is Canadair not its responsibility? That $1.4 billion lost by Canadair, is it not the Government's mistake? No, it indicates that it is the fault of the management of Canadair.

If I happen to be the president of a company or on the board of directors of a company, do I not have responsibility for the operations of the company? If it loses money, do I not have a responsibility to the shareholders? The Government and the Prime Minister are telling us that they are above all that, that it does not make mistakes and that it is management which makes mistakes. They tell us that it is not their problem because they appointed a bunch of Liberal hacks to the board of directors. Also they indicate that it is not their fault that it took six years to take off the financial statements of Canadair so that Hon. Members of Parliament would know where the company was going. They think that it is not their problem. The Minister of Agriculture would not understand the fiduciary responsibility which goes with his appointment as a Member of Cabinet. It is not their responsibility, they do not make mistakes, they are above making mistakes! I suppose they are not ordinary people and are not like the rest of us. They hold themselves above the rest of us. We are just ordinary people.

Over the last 15 years—and this is why I became a Member of Parliament—the Liberal Government has deliberately and slowly strangled individual initiative in Canada. The saddest part of it all is that it cannot even see it. It is blind to it. Do Hon. Members know why they are blind to it? It is because they are committed to a concept of control and regulations. It is part of their make-up, it is a part of their physiology. They have to control and regulate people, which is the whole purpose of Liberalism.

They believe they have to interfere in the lives of people because ordinary citizens of Canada are not capable of making decisions for themselves. They think they know what is best for ordinary citizens. They decide what is best and tell them what to do. The Government thinks it knows more about the oil and gas industry than all those "crazy" oil and gas companies in western Canada. It wants to put bureaucrats in place to tell them what to do and to go out and find oil and gas. Does anyone really believe that 20,000 bureaucrats in Ottawa, some of whom are in the Petro-Canada tower, will improve the lot of Canadians by going out and finding more oil and gas? Does anyone really believe that? Hon. Members opposite believe it because it is ingrained into their system. They want to control. They want to regulate. They love it. They thrive on it. It is their daily manna.

Canadians today are wondering why we are not as productive as some other countries in the free world. Canadians ask me why there are 1.5 million unemployed. Young people leaving university today are asking why they cannot find jobs. Government Members rise here and say, "Well, it is really not our fault. There is a world-wide recession, so it is really not our fault. We do not make mistakes. It is not our responsibility."

• (1610)

I would like to ask the Minister of Agriculture where his Government has been for the last 15 years. We have not been in recession for 15 years. What has this Government done? Name one thing other than to take step after step to strangle individual initiative.

Mr. Breau: Do you believe that?

Mr. Thomson: I would not be here if I did not believe that. What do you think the Canadian Development Investment Corporation is doing? You believe that by forming this corporation with Mr. Joe Bell, the magnificent Senator Austin and Maurice Strong, it will save this country and Canadair, making it a viable operation together with de Havilland? Do you believe that this will contribute to the welfare of Canadians? Do you believe that Senator Austin, Joe Bell and Maurice Strong will do us any good? What have they accomplished in their whole lives, any one of the three of them? Zero. A great big zero. They got a law degree and that is the total sum of their contribution. In addition to their law degree, they are also Liberals, which makes them part of the elite.

If you are going to drill a hole in the ground to try to find oil and gas, you usually hire someone who knows something about doing that. You do not hire a lawyer to drill a hole in the ground; at least most sensible people do not do that.

The Liberals would probably do that because they know everything about everything. The Liberals believe, as do their partners in the NDP, that the guiding principle should be that more Government is better Government, big is beautiful, that we should have more Government, more regulation and ways to further control and redirect the lives of Canadians, telling them what they should be doing. We will see a lot more of that. It is not only the National Energy Program, but look at what the Foreign Investment Review Agency has done for us.

Most countries of the world, even the communist countries, are looking for investment capital. Most countries of the world want investment capital in order to provide jobs for their citizens and to build new industries. Not in Canada, no Sir! We want to slam the door on foreign capital.

Foreign-controlled companies that come to Canada should be good corporate citizens. However, that does not have anything to do with the money they put into this country. A dollar is a dollar in so far as creating a job is concerned. We should be creating a situation where we ensure that foreign capital behaves as a good corporate citizen, and that is all.

We need investment. This is a huge country desperately in need of capital today. There is a shortage of capital all over the world. To listen to the economic nationalists opposite, one would think we did not need any capital to create jobs for the 1.5 million unemployed Canadians.

The Government likes to intervene. It wants to control the media. It thinks there is a conspiracy among the media to tell the wrong things. It has the CBC to say what is right. We need $800 million Canadian taxpayer's money every year so that the CBC can tell us what the Liberal Government wants us to hear.

So far the Canadian newspaper industry has been privately owned. In the 50-odd years of my life, I thought the newpapers had done a reasonably fair job of recording the facts. What would concern me more about a corporate concentration in the newspaper industry would be for this Government to get its hands on it. Can you imagine the fun it would have controlling the media? Do you have any idea?

Every day each Cabinet Minister puts out a press release through his or her press secretary. Do you know how the press secretary earns his livelihood? It is by feeding the press information and news releases every day. It is a bigger propaganda machine than Herr Goebbels ever had.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): Order, please. I am sorry to interrupt the Hon. Member, but his time has expired. Perhaps he might like to seek the unanimous consent of the House to continue or, in the alternative, rely on the question and answer period. Shall I inquire whether there is unanimous consent? Is there unanimous consent to allow the Hon. Member to continue?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Blaker): There is not unanimous consent.

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the Hon. Member. In a recent issue of Business Week, an article on the Exxon Corporation stated that $4 million to $5 million was invested in an oil shale plant in Colorado and that the operation closed down before going into production because the price of oil had gone down. An article in a recent issue of Time magazine indicated that a large number of oil rigs were mothballed in the Gulf of Mexico, not working and not drilling. The United States has the most pro-business Government, a Government which believes in free enterprise, less control of business and less regulation, which it has had in 50 years, namely, the Reagan administration. That country does not have a Liberal Government or a National Energy Program, yet the energy industry in the United States is a way down from what it was a couple of years ago.

Is not the reason for that situation in the United States the reason for the similar situation in Canada, namely that two or three years ago the price of oil was expected to increase by 10 per cent or 15 per cent a year and that the price in a few years would be $70 or $80 a barrel? Is that not in fact the main reason why oil exploration and drilling has either stopped or been reduced dramatically, not just in Canada but in other countries as well, rather than the federal Government and the National Energy Program being entirely to blame?

Mr. Thomson: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member makes a good point. It is interesting that he likes to apologize for the National Energy Program on behalf of the Government. I guess the socialists really helped in a lot of ways to create the National Energy Program. It is true that there has been a fall-off in exploration activity in the United States. There are really two parts to the explanation. First, the industry was very badly overbuilt in the United States. In the period around 1977, the industry in the United States was operating almost at capacity, with 2,000 land-based drilling rigs and about 60 offshore rigs in service. That inventory of drilling equipment was very rapidly expanded as the price kept going up, to a level of something over 5,000 landbased drilling rigs in the United States. So you can see, Mr. Speaker, that it increased by 150 per cent in a period of four years. The drilling industry in the United States has returned to about the same level of exploration as was being carried out in 1977 and 1978, and there is a very, very high level of exploration activity still proceeding in the United States with about 2,200 rigs at work.

• (1620)

I would also inform the Hon. Member that I happen to know that the industry is extremely active in the Gulf of Mexico at present. The United States has only a seven year supply of natural gas reserves left and the reserves of gas in the Gulf of Mexico are very sizeable and are being explored very aggressively.

Perhaps the Hon. Member could refresh my memory as to his question if I did not answer the latter part of it completely.

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, my question was a very simple one. I asked the Hon. Member whether the drilling for conventional oil or the planning and building for the extraction of oil from shale rock in the United States or the extraction of oil from tar sands in Canada was predicated, by the industry and by the federal and Alberta Government, on the notion that the price of oil would go up 10 per cent or 15 per cent each year so that by the time the tar sands plants came onstream, the price of oil would be about $70 a barrel and would be competitive with conventional oil. That is not happening, and so I would ask the Hon. Member whether it would not be honest for him to admit that unless the price of oil will go up very substantially in the next few years, it will probably not be economically feasible for anybody, the Government of Canada, the Government of Alberta or private industry, to go ahead with tar sands or with very expensive conventional oil exploration.

Mr. Thomson: First of all, Mr. Speaker, there is a very great difference between oil sands and oil shales. Extracting oil from oil shales in the United States is twice as expensive as extracting oil from oil sands in the Athabasca area of Alberta. Not only was Exxon but a good many other companies were optimistic about making a technological breakthrough that would allow them to recover oil from oil shales at something like $50 a barrel. In fact, those companies could not make that technological breakthrough that would reduce the cost to that level, and the cost would have been something in the order of $75 a barrel.

In the case of the oil sands in Canada, I think that it is fair to say that there would have been an advanced oil sands plant today had it not been for the punitive taxation that was introduced by the National Energy Program.

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Speaker, many people in the country and in the House are faced with an interesting conundrum stemming from the immoral and dishonest approach of the Government. I could point to examples of this within the National Energy Program that really stand out. But on the other side of the coin, Mr. Speaker, is the basic dishonesty in the approach of the Conservative party to important questions dealing with the national energy policy.

I would point out that the Conservatives have failed to put one alternative on the record that would be acceptable or reasonable. The Conservatives criticize the Government without taking the responsibility of placing options before the people of the country. The Conservative Party would remove regulations and give control back to the multinational corporations. I would like to hear the Hon. Member from the Conservative Party talk about going to world oil prices and turning control back to the seven sisters in the country, which would basically put Canadian people out to hang.

Mr. Thomson: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member says that the Conservative Party does not make any positive recommendations about what it would do. A great many of my colleagues and myself have consistently said that first we would decontrol the price of domestic oil and natural gas and let it move to a market system. Second, we have said that we would scrap the PIP grants and subsidies that are given to oil and gas companies. Canada is the only country in the world in which the Government pays money for dry holes. With the savings made by not paying for dry holes, we would introduce a system of incentives to replace the PIP grant that will prompt exploration. Third, we would abandon the well head tax called the owners petroleum gas and revenue tax, a tax that is stripping all the incentive away from Canadian and foreign companies. We would take away that owners' tax that represents such a crushing burden on the industry. That tax is why there are 80 rigs working today and no new oil and gas is being found. Those are the three policy proposals that we have put forward.

Mr. Herb Breau (Gloucester): Mr. Speaker, I enjoyed listening to the speech made by the Hon. Member for Calgary South (Mr. Thomson). He speaks passionately about what he believes in and that is what Parliament is all about. I always appreciate listening to him because he brings to Parliament a knowledge of his region and the industry with which he was involved. That knowledge is of great benefit to the debate. I always enjoy hearing politicians who have had a background in business speak because I am from a family that has always been in business. I studied business administration at university and I was briefly in business full time before I entered politics. I do enjoy hearing people with initiative who have been successful.

Where I depart from the Hon. Member's views, is where he suggests policies, because he displays his Party's impatience and sometimes almost intolerance for the other point of view. He speaks as though only the business point of view counted in matters of national interest. In his Party's view, when it comes time to implement public policy on behalf of the people, unless we follow to the letter whatever the industry wants to do or whatever business wants to do, either we do not know anything about it or we are supposed to listen to the view of business.

I suspect that my hon. friend will be in the House for a few years and I hope that with the years he will temper the opinion that he expresses so eloquently on that point of view with a little more realism and a little more appreciation for complex problems. Canada is a very complex country to govern. Particularly in the last two or three years, I feel that the approach of the Conservative Party to these very important national problems—the question of the National Energy Program, the question of the Constitution and a few other questions that have been of crucial importance to the country and have been debated in the House in the last few years—has demonstrated its incapacity to grasp the complexity of the problem. It continuously comes forward with simple solutions. Mr. Speaker, simple solutions to complex problems just do not work.

Somehow I think that the Conservative Party really does appreciate this. When I look at the motion of the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski), I see that it is very skillfully drafted. In that motion, there is a dimension in terms of Canadian politics that goes beyond the issue of intervention in the economy and beyond ideology and the question of more or less Government ownership or, as his motion reads, socialization. It also goes beyond the question of centralization in one level of Government or another. I do not understand why they do not come out and say what they are expressing, only in part, and that is, some regional frustration. Some people in the Conservative Party who are spokesmen for their regional interest—and I do not fault them for that as it is their role to express that frustration—say through the Governmnent, "What you are doing to my region is wrong."

• (1630)

I do not understand why they want to mix the National Energy Program and the Constitution. I do not understand why it is not possible for them to say, in terms of industry and public policy, that we should have either more or less Government intervention in the energy sector. That is debatable, Mr. Speaker. What is the proper balance in a country like Canada on the question of how much Government intervention there should be? That is one issue.

Another issue is the regions versus the centre, one region versus another region or the centre versus one region. On the National Energy Program the Conservatives expressed a fear of socialization. But if they want to be honest, particularly those from Alberta, how can they be against Government intervention when their provincial Government, with which they do not dissociate themselves, is the most interventionist Government on energy matters in Canada? I do not want to make a judgment on that as it does not concern me that much, but the Alberta Conservative Government understands that on some of the issues it has Alberta's interests at heart and it does not deal with these problems simplistically.

When the Government of Alberta decides to buy an airline, I see that as a policy instrument, as a politicization of the economy in terms of saying it wants to have a transportation policy that will ensure the development of the economy of Alberta in the future. I do not see how Hon. Members opposite can be against having state intervention.

Hon. Members opposite talk about the disaster of the National Energy Program and the negative effects of the PGRT. They say it skims cash from the cash flow of companies. They do not say anything about the Alberta royalties that are the highest in the land, the highest of most western industrialized countries, royalties which skim the cash flow off the companies. If the Conservatives want to be honest with themselves they will realize that they have a responsibility to tell us where they stand on that issue. I can understand Members from Alberta and from the West generally expressing a regional frustration with the National Energy Program.

As a Liberal from eastern Canada I am very concerned. Even if I am not from the West and even if I do not have a background in the energy industry, I can understand that. The Hon. Member for Calgary South (Mr. Thomson) and a few other Members interjected a little while ago and demonstrated the intolerance they sometimes have for the other point of view. Apparently you are not supposed to know anything about the energy industry if you are from the East or if you are a Liberal or if you are not from the energy industry.

Mr. Thacker: It is just that you prove it sometimes.

Mr. Breau: The Hon. Member for Lethbridge-Foothills (Mr. Thacker) says it is because I prove it sometimes. Hon. Members opposite prove a lot of things sometimes too. I have never said to a Member from another region of the country that he should not have a point of view on the fishery in the Atlantic Provinces or on the forestry policy because it is an industry that is important in my constituency. I do not tell them that they should not have anything to do with the 200-mile limit or the law of the sea because they are from a land-locked Province. I do not expect that they will have spent as much time on the dossier as I have, but I do not say that they should not be able to contest what I say. The day we start saying that, we have no tolerance for the other point of view.

Conservatives must become more responsible regarding these matters. As a Liberal from eastern Canada who has been here for the 15 years that are supposed to have been so terrible for the country, I admit that there is a regional dimension to the National Energy Program. Part of the concern in this Party, leading up to the years 1979-80, was for the national interest as we perceived it. I wish that in this country and in this Parliament particularly, one could speak one's mind about the national interest without being accused of being against another region. That burns me up, Mr. Speaker. Just because I give my perspective as a New Brunswicker—and that is not a powerful Province, economically or politically—then am I not supposed to give my view of the national interest because it may turn out to be a different view from that of Members from the West? That does not lead to mature debate. We should be able to have tolerance for those who disagree with us even if we express regional frustration, or it will become impossible to govern this country. It is a very complex country to govern in any event. In a certain sense we are governing the country against every natural and geographic factor. The Conservatives should understand that.

Why are the Conservatives having a leadership convention this weekend if this country is not a complex one to govern? Their own orientation as a Party is complex. They have their own problems in trying to determine where they should go. They know very well they are not involved in a leadership convention only because of the seasonal values of the Right Hon. Member for Yellowhead (Mr. Clark), but because this country is confronted with very tough problems and choices. They have not been able to come out with a cohesive position on some matters. It is not a sin to admit that in your Party there is difficulty in coming to an orientation. If the country is simply to govern, why did the Conservative Party have a leadership problem? It is because some factions in that Party attempted to simplify the solution to those complex problems.

I have said that I admit there is a regional dimension to the National Energy Program. Should we have policy instruments that encourage more private sector involvement or instruments that encourage more federal or provincial Government involvement? Apart from that, there is the question of how a federal Government policy instrument affects the West. I can understand that westerners are going to be concerned about that. It is a legitimate question. If that is what they want to express, they should express it clearly. They cannot try to bluff their way into this issue. They play with words and say that the centralizing and interventionist policies of the Government are an ideological thrust aimed at introducing socialization of the Canadian economy by the back door. What they want to exploit is the fear, perhaps the legitimate fear, in the West—I am not the best judge of that—that perhaps all of these efforts of the federal Government are efforts at socialization or socialism. If that is what the Members opposite want to say, then they should say it clearly. However, they are trying to mix the two, the regional and the policy aspects. I say that they are dishonest when they do that, Mr. Speaker, because their own Party, when they are in power provincially in the West, in the energy sector, has been very interventionist. Members opposite do not say that that is socialism. They do not say that that is interventionism. It will be interesting to see if the new Tory Government in Saskatchewan is going to do away with all those Crown corporations. I do not believe it will, Mr. Speaker. It will make a judgment on what is best for the electors and the people of Saskatchewan.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, in my opinion, when we are dealing in the House with issues that have a regional dimension and concern the interests of one particular region in relation to the central authority, it is very important to discuss such questions in an atmosphere that encourages, mature and adult debate, in the course of which any comments that are made reflect tolerance for and patience with the views of those who come from other parts of the country.

In my speech, I would like to refer briefly to a speech made this morning, before the lunch recess, by the Member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe (Mr. Beatty), when he said that in the last 15 years, or rather, to quote exactly what he said, when the present Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) retires, we shall find that in Canada, the rights of Canadians . . . and in my question, I asked him whether I had understood correctly, and he said yes, that the rights of Canadians had become more restricted compared to what they were in 1968. I then asked him how he could say that, when this was the party that had introduced language rights, first in federal Government institutions, and then as one of the mainstays of our plan to patriate the Constitution. Anyone who rises in the House and says the rights of Canadians have been circumscribed in the past 15 years is showing his ignorance of the fact that language rights are a social, human and public right. Technically, I would not say these are fundamental rights, but I do say that it is essential that the country should have language rights of this nature.

This Government, led by the Right Hon. Prime Minister, is the one that introduced the concept of enshrining rights and freedoms and language rights in the Canadian Constitution. This proposal was opposed in the House by the Progressive Conservative Party for months, while it was not certain whether or not it would listen to what the Provinces were saying, and now an Hon. Member who is one of the major critics of this Party is rising in the House to say that the rights of Canadians were circumscribed by the Government. Either the Hon. Member is showing his complete ignorance of the situation in Canada or he is being extremely sloppy in his criticism.

Mr. Speaker, while the Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) says in his motion that the policies of the Government are a definite and present threat to the freedom of Canadians, and the Member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe is trying to say that the rights of Canadians are being circumscribed by the Government, I take great pride in saying that they are wrong and will continue to be wrong, that this is utter nonsense, and that Canadian political history will show that the period from 1965, even before the present Prime Minister came to power, until now, will be known as a period when the development of social, human, civil, political and fundamental rights, and that includes language rights, was unique in this country's history, and I would even go so far as to say that no other democracy in history can compare with the political development of Canada in this particular area.

I do not mean that the Liberals should take all the credit, but the fact remains that the Liberal Government introduced these measures, and I know that the official positions of the Progressive Conservative Party depending on who and when of the New Democratic Party and of other parties that sat in the House in previous Parliaments, were probably basically very similar.

Mr. Speaker, to say that the rights of Canadians were circumscribed during the last 15 years is superficial in the extreme or grossly partisan.

In fact, I strontly suspect, Mr. Speaker, that this morning, the intentions of the Member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe were partly partisan. If he wants the floor, it is to speak to the rights of Canadians. I have the floor now, but I do not want to take up too much of the time of the House today. I could talk about how the Progressive Conservative Government in New Brunswick shows its concern for the rights of Canadians, the rights of the New Brunswick electorate. I will not do that now, Mr. Speaker, but if Progressive Conservative Members are anxious to talk about patronage, about circumscribing the rights of individuals, I could give a few examples of the concern of a Progressive Conservative Government for the rights of Canadians.

[English]

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I always enjoy listening to the Hon. Member for Gloucester (Mr. Breau) and I appreciate the enthusiasm with which he engages in debate. He has implored all Hon. Members to exercise tolerance and understanding in the admission of mistakes. I would point out to him that, in the spirit of the environment within which the Hon. Member has made his pitch, perhaps he might want to consider the fact that the National Energy Program has been condemned by the industry. It has been condemned by Hon. Members in this House. It has been condemned by the workers who have lost their jobs. Just recently, it has been condemned by the C.D. Howe Institute, which very categorically stated that the costs clearly outweigh the benefits of the National Energy Program and that there are less costly and disruptive means which could be expected to achieve the same or even superior benefits to the economy. What is really being said, Mr. Speaker, is that the goals and objectives of the National Energy Program, the three basic goals of fairness, equitable distribution and pricing, and self-sufficiency, have not been achieved.

Would the Hon. Member not consider now, even at this late date, to urge his Cabinet colleagues to take a second look and reassess the situation before the industry is destroyed completely? The Financial Post today headlines, "Oil rigs and services are barely hanging in". I am not sure whether the Hon. Member understands this, but most of our young western Canadians, or many of them, work in that kind of service and supply industry. They are now either out of a job or working south of the border. It is very serious.

Mr. Breau: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member raises a very important question, and it is one which concerns me. I realize that the National Energy Program, being a fundamental change in the way policy was being designed in the energy area, is very controversial. I realize that. When you do something which is controversial, you are going to provoke a lot of reaction and a lot of opposition. It is true that a lot of people in the industry have criticized it. A lot of spokesmen from western Canada who are related to the energy interests have opposed it. But the Hon. Member cannot ignore the fact that with or without a National Energy Program, there was not going to be less searching for new oil and gas in Alberta and Saskatchewan in any event. We are at the stage of searching for secondary and tertiary recovery, as it is called in the industry. Whatever happened, there was to be shift away from the traditional search, which has gone on since 1945 for oil and gas in Alberta, to the so-called Canada lands. Therefore, the Hon. Member cannot ignore the fact that change was to come in any event. The Hon. Member cannot ignore, either, the fact that prices have gone down. He cannot ignore the fact that drilling has been reduced in the United States. It has been reduced all over the world. Therefore, to suggest that all of that is because of the National Energy Program is not to be totally fair.

I would ask the Hon. Member also to recognize once in a while that when the federal Government does something to help, as it did, for example, the gas industry in Alberta which has so many oil wells which are capped, and he knows why they are capped—they are capped because there are fewer markets—takes quite a risk. It took a risk when it approved the southern portion of the Alaska pipeline. He does not recognize the fact. He does not say that that was a risk we took in terms of the interest of the country as those other than themselves perceive it, as well as in Alberta's interest. He does not say that in the latest change brought about by the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Chrétien) to permit the export of gas, in any event, to the United States, we have permitted the price to be reduced. Therefore, I wish the Hon. Member would balance his claims a bit with some recognition for the things the Government has done in the energy sector.

Mr. Mazankowski: I have just one comment. I only want to point out that the shift of exploration activity from conventional areas to the offshore and frontier areas was not taken by the industry on its own. It was merely a shift as a result of a deliberate Government policy. For the information of the Hon. Member, the fact of the matter is that there are still ample conventional supplies which can be sought out. However, the fact concerning oil and gas is that the shift and emphasis has been placed on offshore, on the frontier areas, the result of which has been to see our conventional reserves depleting at the rate of 4 per cent per year.

Mr. Breau: Mr. Speaker, I do not totally disagree with the Hon. Member that the National Energy Program has had an effect on that. What I am saying to him is that there was a shift, in any event, as a result of economic forces, to the offshore and so-called Canada lands. However, he cannot ignore the fact that the Province of Nova Scotia and the Province of Newfoundland, for example, used all the political muscle they had. It is not a question of its being in the interest of the provincial Government only. They would want to persuade the federal Government to implement a policy regime as we did for the West in the late forties and fifties to permit the exploration of oil and gas of the shores of Nova Scotia and Newfoundland. Therefore, this shift came naturally, not only because of economic forces, which is part of the trend, and not only because of the actions of the federal Government, but also as a result of the natural expression of the political wish of Nova Scotia and Newfoundland that some of their money be invested off the shores of eastern Canada. The Hon. Member must admit that the shift of investment there is not totally owing to the National Energy Program or the federal Government.

Mr. Thacker: Mr. Speaker, the other point that my friend, the Hon. Member for Gloucester, does not realize is that during the 1920s, when the level of technology swept across the western plains, only very shallow gas and oil deposits could be found, where it was obvious, because there were no machines to dig it up. Then, during the forties there was another wave, and during the seventies there was still another wave. Therefore, each time more advanced technology is utilized in the western plains enormous quantities of oil and gas are found.

The Pembina oil field, which is a tight field, was found because of that technology. The Hon. Member is indicating that perhaps he does not appreciate that fact. There is much oil and gas there. Only as a comment I would like to say that it surely was not necessary, in order for the federal Government to become involved in the Canada lands and offshore, to bring in the National Energy Program which was so highly damaging to the West. It has virtually destroyed it. Why could the Government not have come up with a policy to develop these other areas without killing the conventional plains?

Mr. Breau: Mr. Speaker, I wish I had more time to answer these questions because, again, the Hon. Member forgets some facts, particularly while it is true that there is still some gas which could be found. The geological data is that there is much gas under the shales of Alberta, which has already been found and capped, and there is probably some more. However, the policy instruments which the Parliament of Canada implemented in the late forties, the fifties and the sixties, partly by the Diefenbaker Government and partly by the Liberal Governments, have provided the West with a policy and the taxation instruments which have permitted exploration there. How can he deny that other regions of the country which also have a potential for development of oil and gas should not be provided with policy instruments, too?

Mr. Mazankowski: He didn't say that at all.

Mr. Breau: This is what the National Energy Program is doing. He should not ignore, either, the fact that in the national energy policy, maybe not in the National Energy Program when announced on a certain date, provision was made for the extension of the natural gas pipeline to eastern Canada, which is an important policy instrument in the West and which permits the surplus of gas which is there in Alberta to be sold to eastern Canada. That is something that many people in my area do not like. It is competition to the advantage of the West. In this case I also think that in the national interest we should have an infrastructure to transmit the gas which is surplus in the West to eastern Canada, to divert away from the nuclear, divert away from oil generation and to try to obtain access to this very efficient, cost-wise, gas resource which comes from Alberta.

Therefore, the Hon. Member should not ignore that there are aspects of the NEP which are not negative. Concerning the Alberta interest, there are provisions in the energy policy of the Government in the area of energy which are also of great advantage to the West now and for the future. I name the southern portion of the Alaska pipeline as another one.

I would just urge these Hon. Members, at some time, to temper their partisanship and to recognize when these things are done, because some of their constituents believe that everything the Government does in the energy area is negative to the West. For the future of the country, I am just urging them to please recognize the advantages and benefits of the policies when they are beneficial to the West.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Order. Before proceeding with debate, it is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 45, to inform the House that the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment are as follows: the Hon. Member for Kindersley-Lloydminster (Mr. McKnight)—House of Commons—Canadian Bill of Rights—Absence from display within Parliament Buildings. (b) Request that Bill of Rights be displayed; the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Althouse)—Railways—Crowsnest pass rate—Railway upgrading—Prime Minister's position; the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River (Mr. Skelly)—National Defence—Request that CF-104 aircraft be banned from aerobatic demonstrations. (b) Request for documentation on accidents.

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 62—GOVERNMENT POLICIES

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Mazankowski:

That this House rejects the centralizing and interventionist policies of the Government as an ideologoical thrust aimed at introducing socialization of the Canadian economy by the back door and without the authorization of Parliament, and a definite and present threat to the freedom of Canadians.

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (York-Peel): Mr. Speaker, I hope the Hon. Member for Gloucester (Mr. Breau) does not leave the House too soon because I find it most startling to see how that interventionist stance and that type of thinking is so insensitive to the havoc being wreaked in this country to the point at which the Hon. Member, presumably in a very partisan, supportive way of his Government, stands up here in the House and says that he is proud of the Government. I can understand, for reasons of loyalty or Party discipline, that the Hon. Member maybe feels he cannot speak too openly in criticism of his Government, but it really startles me to hear the Hon. Member say that he is proud of the Government's record.

Let me state for the record the record to which he is referring. For example, in 1968, we had a period of rising inflation to the point at which it rose to 4 per cent. That was the inflation level the year the emperor first took power in this country and introduced his interventionist, socialistic policies about which I want to speak. Thanks to the direction and support of the socialists to my left calling themselves the New Democratic Party, we know that that level of inflation rose to the height of 12.5 per cent in 1981 and was 10.8 per cent last year. Is that the record that the Member for Gloucester says he is proud of, to take inflation from 4 per cent to 10.8 per cent?

With respect to real growth, when the emperor took power in 1968 it was 5.8 per cent. Last year it was negative 4.8 per cent. Is that the record that he is proud of? According to the OECD, that 4.8 per cent put this nation twenty-fourth out of 24 among the major industrialized nations on which the OECD reports. We were behind Iceland in terms of our real growth last year. For example, Turkey's real growth was 5 per cent, which is roughly what we had before the emperor took power in Canada. Turkey had that growth last year, but thanks to the Government whose record this Member is so proud of, we had a negative 4.8 per cent.

Let us look at unemployment. The unemployment rate was 4.5 per cent before the emperor seized power in Canada through misrepresentation. We now find that the unemployment rate last year was 11 per cent. There were a million and a half Canadians not given an opportunity to work in this country, especially the youth of this nation, thanks to the socialistically inspired Trudeau type of policies that have so throttled the inherent ingenuity that could be called upon to create true wealth in this country had it not been frustrated by the interventionist, socialistic tactics of the Government.

I have spoken in general terms of unemployment. Let us look at more meaningful factors. How many Canadians has the Government inflicted unemployment upon? I have mentioned the number of 1.5 million. Before the emperor took power, there were 358,000 unemployed in this country. We thought that was too high at that time. When the Hon. Member says he is proud of his Government's record, can he honestly stand up and say that his Government had no hand in it and this was a matter just like Canadair that was running out of control? Is he saying that somehow the Government should not be called to task or held responsible for that record? Will he seriously suggest that his Government's spending, which amounted to approximately $12 billion at the federal level in 1968 and is now over $80 billion, had nothing to do with those figures? A deficit that was non-existent when his Government took power is now $25 billion, which is actually over $2 billion a month of deficit financing. Would he suggest that that had nothing to do with those sad figures which I have just put on the record concerning our economic morass at the present time?

Mr. Breau: More simple messages.

Mr. Stevens: The Hon. Member says more simple messages. That is what I find so fraudulent about the socialistic approach to governing. They create the problems and the complications and then say, lo and behold, that they are now lost in the forest. They want to know how to find a way out to some kind of better prosperity, and there are no simple answers.

The truth is that I would like to suggest that there is a way to a new prosperity in Canada. It is a prosperity that will ensure that our productivity can once again be increased. It would ensure that the private sector would be more inclined to spend money on research and development perhaps to reach the point where we would spend 2 per cent of our Gross National Product on research and development. Before the private sector can get moving, we must once again inspire in it the confidence that the Government of the day will not through interventionist tactics and high taxation that basically frustrate the very thing we want to accomplish for all Canadians, that is, higher prosperity, greater real wealth and, in truth, what freedom is all about, a freedom for them to carry on their business and lives with a minimum of Government intervention.

If the Hon. Member dares, perhaps he will get up and try to rebut what I am saying. He likes to use the emperor's classic excuse for the problems with which he now finds himself confronted.

Mr. Breau: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member. I believe that the rules are very clear that when any Member of the House is referred to we must refer either to his title, such as if he is a Minister, or to his constituency. The Member has been repeatedly referring to a term, obviously referring to the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau), which I believe is against the rules.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): In the opinion of the Chair, the rules are very clear that one should not refer to another Hon. Member by his given or family name. One must refer to a Member by the name of his portfolio, office or constituency. As far as any other name which an Hon. Member wishes to call another Hon. Member, in the Chair's opinion it is parliamentary as long as it is not included in the list of unparliamentary language.

Mr. Stevens: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am sure that you and all Members of the House noted how quickly the Hon. Member associated his Prime Minister with the word "emperor". That clearly meant something to him. He almost automatically assumed that if I was referring to an emperor it was, in truth, the Prime Minister of Canada.

I am very anxious to put on the record what I feel would be some concrete policy moves on the part of the Government of the day that would lead us back to a more free and more private enterprise oriented system. In turn, it would be a system that would produce the jobs and prosperity that this Government is obviously incapable of engendering in Canada at the present time.

I say this because I noticed that, in a classic socialist debating stance, the Hon. Member for Comox-Power River (Mr. Skelly) stood up and spoke in that righteous tone that they like to take to talk about how they have listened to our criticism of the Government but were somehow unable to discern what policy moves we in the Official Opposition would make if we had an opportunity to govern this country. Every socialist has made that kind of argument to some extent. I have noticed that when the Members of the NDP feel that their ally, the present Liberal Party in power, is under attack, they are the first to rise to their defence. They try to convey the message that the issue we are talking about is a little more complicated than it is in reality.

In short, let me suggest to that Hon. Member that he might, for example, if he is looking for policy moves, consider a move in which the investment tax credit up to perhaps 10 per cent could be allowed on all investments by the private sector with respect to new investment in manufacturing and non-manufacturing activities. I would suggest that the Member might consider a 5 per cent reduction in the federal corporate income tax rate in order to give industry a somewhat better after tax profit, which is really capital to invest and begin developing our country.

I would like to suggest to the Hon. Member that he take a look at the November, 1981 budget to which presumably they had little objection. That budget changed the capital consumption on manufactured investment, which I think should have been restored to what it was. In other words, if you make an investment prior to the year's end, you could write that investment off 100 per cent. You are allowed only a 50 per cent write-off at the present time.

I would like that Hon. Member to consider that there be various research and development incentives designed to encourage the private sector to increase R and D expenditures combined with any university R and D expenditures and related expenditures in order to reach a target of 2 per cent of the nation's Gross National Product by 1990. That would be in sharp contrast to the 1.1 per cent share we are now putting into research and development in Canada, which is one of the lowest ratios of any industrialized country in the world. Over the next six years that would involve a $20.5 billion incremental. I want to emphasize that extra investment in research and development in Canada.

I would suggest the Hon. Member might take a look, speaking about energy, at a $20 billion energy investment plan to ensure that a marketable surplus exists in oil and gas by 1990. These investments would include additional exploration and development expenditures, several small scale oil sands projects that would produce heavy oil and asphalt type of tar for export markets and, finally, it would provide for the accelerated development of such fields as Hibernia and the Beaufort Sea projects. That is the type of private initiative where the Government essentially sets, if you like, the atmosphere and gives the incentives that we need in Canada in order to get us moving again. What is so encouraging, Mr. Speaker, is that if we started to take those kinds of thrusts we would be able, in the export field alone, if we simply regained the fair share of the world trade market that we used to have prior to the emperor's taking power, to increase our agricultural exports to the rest of the world by $11 billion by 1990. Once again, percentage wise, we would be exporting what we used to export to the rest of the world prior to the emperor's taking over. I would suggest that the type of energy thrusts to which I referred would enable further exports of oil and gas to the extent of, say, one hundred million barrels of oil and a comparable amount of gas which, in turn, would strengthen our dollar, lower inflation as a result of that, and which, in turn, would lower the interest rate structure to which we have become accustomed. In short, the creation of jobs would begin.

Let me be more specific. I think the next question which the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River might ask is, what would be the effect if we did those things we are talking about? Perhaps even the Member for Gloucester would like to know what his Finance Department could tell him if he asked, "Assume we did some of the things to which the Hon. Member for York-Peel (Mr. Sinclair) is referring, what would it do for Canada and the economy between now and 1990?" I think the Hon. Member would find out that it would reduce our inflation level to 4.2 per cent, and it would create 520,000 extra jobs between now and 1990. In short, the trend line on which the last budget of this Government put us was for the creation of 1.4 million jobs in Canada. As we know, that is barely enough to keep unemployment at its present level.

The program I am outlining, according to the respected Data Resources of Canada group, would create 520,000 extra jobs or would create, in contrast to the Government program of 1.4 million jobs, 1.9 million jobs and bring unemployment in this country down to 5.7 per cent by 1990.

I refer to these things only to whet the appetite of Members of this House as to the tremendous potential we have in Canada if we would clear our minds of that socialist cobweb type of thinking which has become parasitical and has basically distracted us from the creation of wealth simply through the building of more and more bureaucracy and more and more Government involvement in all of our lives.

Let me tell you about other things. What I have described would trigger a balanced budget, certainly on a current expenditure basis by 1987. It would basically take us out of any deficit by 1990 and, most important, it would mean, in sharp contrast to the about $20 million of added net debt which the Government plans between now and 1990, that we would be able to reduce that net debt by $44 billion between now and 1990.

The program to which I am referring is a program of only one that could be offered, based on private sector involvement, to give us back some prosperity, some job-creation with less inflation and more real growth. As far as I am concerned, and I would suggest that most Members in my caucus believe Canada deserves better government than it has been getting with the interventionist socialistic alliance that has ruled this country almost without interruption since 1968. It is time we discarded the worn out thinking of these Karl Marx type of people, put back into place what had built the country initially and gave us a hard rock prosperity, namely the private enterprise system built on freedom for all Canadians.

Mr. Breau: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member picked up on my words about the expression of my pride. He related that to things other than what I said. Just in case the interpretation did not come to him clearly, I was talking about the unprecedented evolution in the last 15 years with regard to the introduction of legislation and the enshrinement in the Constitution of language rights, fundamental rights and basic rights. This is what I was talking about. I would think that even the Hon. Member, sometimes as partisan as he is, would recognize that.

When the Hon. Member refers to this Government as being socialistic, interventionist and against business, I ask, how can he really say that honestly when in the last budget five changes were brought to the investment tax credit to lengthen the period in which industries could claim it from five years to 11 years in some cases? We have introduced, for example, the concept of the equity holder being able, in some circumstances, to claim the tax credit if the investor or the company cannot claim it. He knows the investment tax credit was proposed by a Liberal Government, not a Conservative Government. How can he say that this Government does not look to encourage business where it can when we brought in these five changes in the last budget to the investment tax credit? For example, this may permit Noranda Mines to obtain the equity it needs when the market improves to build a zinc reduction plant in New Brunswick. Instead of the provincial or Federal Government's doing it, we are providing a tax regime in which equity holders and the company will be able to do it. How can the Hon. Member say such things when such beneficial changes were made to the investment tax credit in the last budget?

• (1720)

Mr. Stevens: Mr. Speaker, I would like to respond to the two comments of the Hon. Member for Gloucester. First he indicated that somehow I had taken out of context his reference to being proud of the Government's record, and also he referred to such things as enshrinement of various rights. Here again I think it shows how the Hon. Member is totally insensitive to what the Government has done to the average Canadian. The average Canadian cannot eat the enshrinement of some type of paper reference in a document such as the one to which the Hon. Member referred. The average Canadian wants work. The average Canadian is denied jobs, jobs, jobs. I suggest that it is the Government's fundamental obligation to meet the right of every Canadian to a meaningful job. That is the right which the Government has taken away with its interventionist, socialistic approaches.

Then, in typical Liberal fashion, chameleonlike, he turned around and said, "How can you say that we are unfriendly with business?" It has absolutely beaten business into the ground, particularly the oil and gas industry. Then Government Members turn around and say, "Instead of hitting you 100 times, we will hit you 95 times next year. Are you not pleased that we have laid back on five?"

In short, the Government must be looked at in light of the over-all thrust of what it has done since 1968. John Turner and the present Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) cannot deny the record. That is their legacy to Canada. The Government of Canada has taken an interventionist, socialistic approach which has been demonstrated not to work by the fact that we are now ranked twenty-fourth out of 24 OECD nations. That is what I am speaking to.

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Speaker, I wish to correct and comment on some of the things the Hon. Member for York-Peel (Mr. Stevens) said. First, I said that the Conservative Party refused to put on record its policies and procedures. I note for the record that the Hon. Member for York-Peel has never been too abashed to do that. We have noted his approach to the problems in El Salvador and Central America, which I would say was in support of the governments in power there and the very nefarious activities going on.

We know that the Hon. Member for York-Peel is on the far right of the Conservative Party. He mentioned three points in terms of expanding the oil industry, but the additional expenditures would be simply the trickle down effect where we pay the companies and the wealthy and hope that it trickles through. He suspects that the freeing up of $20 billion will get things rolling, but it will simply serve to engorge multinational oil companies in Canada. Speeding up Hibernia and Beaufort Sea explorations cannot be done in the face of declining world oil prices. His proposal to export 100 million barrels of oil will simply deprive Canadians now and in the future of an opportunity of access to light crude. Basically it is an absolutely ridiculous approach to the solution of problems in Canada.

I want to admit that I was mistaken on one matter. The Hon. Member for York-Peel, in a different way than most other Members of the Conservative Party, put on the record proposals which I think would be very seriously looked at in terms of an election.

Mr. Stevens: Mr. Speaker, I would like to respond to the comments of the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River which reflect how out of touch he and the New Democratic Party are. The British have spoken today. They have given a massive vote of support for Margaret Thatcher and her Conservative policies in the United Kingdom. There is a wave in the world today in favour of conservatism and diametrically opposed to the socialistic, dogmatic type of approach which perhaps was in vogue in the 1960s. The socialistic approach is out of favour. This is reflected also by the results of today's Gallup poll that showed our friends to my left have now fallen back to a mere 16 per cent of popular support.

I understand how Members of the New Democratic Party feel. They are a little fluttery at the present time as they sense how the world is passing them by. If the Hon. Member wants to see some action in the House, if he wants to see jobs for Canadians, and if he wants to see less inflation and lower interest rates, he will hae an opportunity very shortly to allow us to form the new Government after the next election. We will put some truly free enterprise oriented policies back into vogue and allow Canadians to create some prosperity once again without a leechlike Public Service oriented Government living off their backs.

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, as I listened to the Hon. Member for York-Peel (Mr. Stevens), it sounded very familiar. It sounded like the program which the presidential candidate of the Republican Party, Mr. Reagan, proposed three years ago. The Americans, as they had the right under democracy, accepted his argument. Three years down the road and after the United States Government did the kinds of things the Hon. Member for York-Peel has been advocating, such as cutting taxes to the business community, giving greater incentives and the rest of it, Americans are still faced with over 10 per cent unemployment.

I would like to ask him a specific question. He talked about the deficit. Of course we have a large deficit. A substantial part of it was brought about by the very large increase in transfer payments which the federal Government pays to the Provinces for post-secondary education, hospital insurance and medical insurance. If there is a Conservative Government in the future of which he is a Minister—and that is a very unlikely possibility—and if it is faced with a large deficit, would it cut back on transfer payments, particularly for programs such as hospital insurance, medical insurance, old age pensions and family allowances?

Mr. Stevens: Aren't they beautiful, Mr. Speaker? They always come up with that old bogey that the only way we can get back to prosperity and reduce the deficit in the country is by cutting back their precious spending programs. The fact is that with what I outlined we would not have to cut from the real growth in federal Government expenditures one five-cent piece. All we would do is to put some faith back into the private sector and let it do the job of creating the wealth, which in turn will create the tax revenue we need to start balancing the budget.

If I could comment on one other matter, the Hon. Member referred to the program in the United States. He might be interested in a contrast between what has happened in Canada and what has happened in the United States in the last five years. The real Gross National Product in Canada went up 13 per cent, whereas in the United States it went up 19 per cent, and in every other economic aspect we did worse.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member but he can only continue with unanimous consent because his time has expired. Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

An Hon. Member: No.

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 62—GOVERNMENT POLICIES

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Mazankowski:

That this House rejects the centralizing and interventionist policies of the Government as an ideological thrust aimed at introducing socialization of the Canadian economy by the back door and without the authorization of Parliament, and a definite and present threat to the freedom of Canadians.

Hon. Jim Fleming (Minister of State (Multiculturalism)): Mr. Speaker, if I can say at the outset and if you can believe it, having listened to the Hon. Member for York-Peel (Mr. Stevens), I still get some pleasure from listening to the Hon. Member. It is one of the few consistent things in this ever-revolving world. He has not changed since he crawled on a kiddy-car some decades ago. He is still riding on the far right-wing of the highway. He has been on the gravel he first walked and talked.

It must be a nostalgic moment for the Hon. Member because tomorrow night a number of his colleagues will be facing off in the political forum of their Party for the leadership, and this time around he is not there. A Member from the NDP said a moment ago that the Hon. Member for York-Peel was on the right wing of the Party. That may be how it was seven years ago in the leadership campaign, but now he is right in the centre of the Conservative Party, far over on the right wing of the highway, about to fall off in the abyss. The Canadian people certainly will not buy that kind of right-wing extremism. Still it is great to see the Hon. Member steady on course and basically out of tune with the mainstream of the Canadian public.

Mr. Stevens: Let's try an election.

Mr. Fleming: His voice is strong, as his determination is strong. Might I also add that he made mention a moment ago of the elections in Great Britain. Remember, something has changed in Great Britain. The fact is that there are two major Opposition Parties. There are far more people opposed to the Government of Great Britain in Great Britain today than there are supporting that Government, thank goodness.

The reason why I wish to speak this afternoon is simply that I want to respond to comments made this morning by the Hon. Member for Wellington Dufferin-Simcoe (Mr. Beatty). It has been quite a while since I have had a chance to rise in this House and speak in debate because I have had few, if any opportunities to address myself to my portfolio. That may mean that I am doing everything right, and Members of the Opposition, particularly the Official Opposition, see that there is nothing to criticize. I would be delighted if that were the case. At any rate, I am glad to have a chance this afternoon to respond what I find to be absolutely incredible rhetoric put forward by the Hon. Member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe this morning.

Politics is a natural adversarial system. We stand up and each of us, depending on what Party we are in, do our very best to present in the best possible light our point of view. I must say that the Hon. Member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe did not do justice to himself, his Party, his credibility or his Party's credibility by taking the track he followed this morning. The Canadian public is fed up with hyperbole, and it was nothing but hyperbole today, a clear distortion of any of the facts involved in the Government's proposal on how to deal with concentration of ownership in the Canadian newspaper industry.

The speech this morning was a classic example of the Official Opposition throughout this Parliament: bereft of any policy of its own, full of nothing but negativisms about anybody else's suggestions. That is not very healthy for any democracy. It is an exchange of ideas so that the public can determine largely what it would best accept.

The Hon. Member for Wellington-Dufferin-Simcoe began this morning by saying that with these proposals concerning the daily newspaper industry in Canada we were threatening even the Charter of Rights and Freedoms, that our proposals were an attack on the basic freedoms of Canadians and that today there is less freedom in Canada than there was in 1968. Other Members before me outlined how ridiculous that charge is. I want to respond specifically to a couple of points, distortions or whatever that Member made this morning.

The Hon. Member said that the Government had raided a newspaper, that no other Government in history had done that. It is not a very palatable thing to have any newspaper raided. I am a former journalist. I wish to give a small reminder of the facts rather than the distortions. The Royal Canadian Mounted Police raided a newspaper. It did so because it thought there was secret information that might jeopardize the well-being of Canada. They may have been wrong, they may have been right, but it was the Royal Canadian Mounted Police which recommended and then acted on that. It is a very serious thing ever to intrude upon freedom of the press by any authority of Government, but clearly the security of the state is worth considering, rather than the kind of rhetoric of the Hon. Member, which seemed to suggest that no matter what a newspaper might do at any time to deal with that. You must have a right to deal with that and the Canadian public will judge whether you dealt with it appropriately.

The Hon. Member said that this Government had developed a propaganda war chest to serve its own purposes and to give misinformation to the public. That is ironic. That comes from a Member who was a Minister in the Clark Government, who set up a system under which, in order to decide what advertising firm would work for the Government and where the Government's advertisements would be placed, it would hire a small group of its friends and do it away from Government, away from the scrutiny of Parliament. They would decide who the advertisers would be and who in turn would get the advertisements. Therefore, that was a pretty hollow attack.

Let me get to the basic nonsense we heard about the Government's proposals on the daily newspapers in Canada and increasing concentration of ownership. The Hon. Member said it was a new assault on freedom of the press in Canada, it was legislation to regulate ownership, it would affect the ability of the press to do its job. He said that anything Government does is calculated for self-interest. He said Government will control the ability of organizations to run their newspapers.

What are we proposing? We are simply saying that at the current time in Canada in English language daily newspapers there are two very large newspaper chains that control approximately 60 per cent of all of the daily newspapers' circulation. What is freedom of the press if not our proposals to limit concentration from going any further? Surely freedom of the press is as much freedom from Government intrusion in the newsroom as freedom from monetary power, allowing people to have access to a diversity of views.

Surely competition is essential to a free press. If increasingly there are fewer and fewer owning more and more of our daily press, there is less of a challenge of accuracy in direct competition. There is less ability for senior journalists to move about in the job if what they want to tell or say is suppressed by management. There is less ability for Canadians to be sure that they are getting a diversity of view rather than a diversity of one or two publishers or owners who control most of the newspapers in the country.

What is the real threat? The real threat to freedom of the press in Canada is that money power will allow for a lack of any law and too much in the hands of too few. Were a Government not to act, that would be irresponsible. Let me add something else that I think is irresponsible.

In all the questions during Question Period and all the charges about the Government attacking the freedom of the press in Canada, never once—and this will surprise no one—did the Hon. Member from the Official Opposition suggest what he would do. Is he simply here as the "houseboy" of the publishers, or does he have a view? Does he think there should be more concentration? Do we have a free press if two companies own all the English language daily newspapers in the country? Is that what he would like? Is concentration of ownership not a problem?

It amuses me because it shows how far to the right they have gone. When every publisher or representative of the owners of daily newspapers in this country has told me over two years of consultation that concentration of ownership can be a problem—they will not say at what level but they admit it is a problem—the Official Opposition still will not admit it can be a problem or admit what is their position. Would it be a free press if they did nothing and more and more fell into the hands of fewer and fewer and there was no diversity and no competition? That is hardly responsible policy.

The next charge was that we were going to set up a press council and that it would have its first chairman and vice-chairman appointed by the Government, that it would be a convenient vehicle for Government to interfere any time it chooses, that the single greatest threat to a free press is a Government sitting in judgment of the free press, and that is what we see today with this proposal for a press council.

Let me tell you about the press council. That is all untrue. Either the Hon. Member cannot read or he has no willingness to talk about the facts. The fact is the membership of the press council, as set down in the proposed law, would have publishers' representatives and journalists' representatives in balanced numbers, in fair numbers from all of the five regions. They together would choose representatives from the general public with no conflict within the newspaper industry. None of them would be appointed. They would make the decisions and the balance of voting power would be with the public's representatives when hearing complaints. How is that Government interference in the press? It is not. To be sure, Government will not interfere but, to be sure, people have the right to vent their concerns, especially since almost all major cities in Canada, with the exception of three or four, have only one major newspaper. Those daily newspapers have a monopoly. The written word has a certain power, and I and many other Canadians and the Government think that individual Canadians and groups of Canadians deserve the right to have the ability to complain if they feel they are not being treated properly by a monopoly daily newspaper with all its power of print.

We are saying to the press that if they do not get credible press councils going, the Government will set up the framework of a council. The members of the press will determine their own workload, they will decide who the representatives will be from publishers and journalists, who are not always friendly with one another, and, as I said earlier, there will be the public's representatives holding the balance of power.

Now, Mr. Speaker, how does that illustrate the phrase, "the single greatest threat to a free press is a Government sitting in judgment of a free press"? How does that illustrate the phrase, "a convenient vehicle for Government to interfere any time it chooses"? That kind of rhetoric totally distorts the reality of the proposal and does not lead to productive debate on this focal point of Canadian democracy but makes democracy unproductive. I think that that is very irresponsible.

Once more, where is that Member who is the Party's critic? Where is that Party that, as the Official Opposition, says that it will form the next Government? Members of the Official Opposition can tell us what is wrong. They can distort and twist the facts of the matter, but they cannot tell us what their own position is.

The next charge laid by the Hon. Member was a document that indicated that advisers on the Government side said that what we want to do would be illegal, especially with reference to the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission reviewing possible newspaper purchases and start-ups by companies that are largely engaged in other businesses. We do not need a lawyer to tell us that the federal Government has the right to review anything. There may well be a question as to whether the Government has the right to impose penalties or laws because there are split jurisdictions, but the Government does have the right to review anything, and that is all that is proposed.

The Government proposes to make the point with the public that a company which is engaged largely in other areas should not reach into the newsroom so that the newsroom loses its independence by being fearful of criticizing the other areas that the parent company is involved in. Once more, that was a major concern of the Kent Commission, and I think that it is something that a lot of Canadians are worried about as well, especially when so much of the daily newspaper circulation is in the hands of so few.

The Hon. Member then went on to say that he had requested the Library of Parliament to prepare a research paper that said that there are serious doubts about the federal Government's jurisdiction. He then went to quote what those doubts were, but they all related to the Kent Commission. Indeed, that is exactly what I said when I announced the Government's proposals. With every good intention, we found those proposals either too intrusionary, appearing to be too intrusionary, or both, into the newsrooms. Government politicians should not enter the newsrooms. They have no right to be there. That is why our proposals are as limited as they are and as passive as they are. They set parameters for review or turn over to others the responsability of review with no input from us.

But we cannot have it both ways. We rejected the Kent proposals in part because of jurisdictional problems as well as the others I have just mentioned. If the Hon. Member's document says that, then he simply agrees with us. What we propose and what we will soon have in draft form is an Act that is legal as far as our lawyers are concerned and is very important to a free press in Canada.

As he wound up, the Hon. Member said that we were going to ram this through the House. The rhetoric really does get tiresome. We are going to ram it through the House? The Royal Commission met for a year and then brought forward its findings. I consulted with everybody I possibly could consult with for eight or nine months. Then we made our proposals and I have consulted on them for one year. When the proposals come to Parliament, I have indicated that I want them to be in Parliament and I want any proposals in the form of an Act. I do not want anything to be done by regulation or Order in Council because it is a sensitive area, and I want it fully vented and discussed in committee. Although I have said that publicly, the Hon. Member says that that is ramming it through the House.

Do you know what will probably happen when we have that legislation, Mr. Speaker? The Hon. Member and a handful of his friends will hold it up and hold it up on second reading and say that we are ramming it through the House, when all we are trying to do is to get it to committee so that other Canadians can discuss it. Mark my words. See if that is not what happens. Mr. Speaker, I will bet that he still does not have a policy at that time that will deal with what can be done to protect the free press from the danger that is created when too much is in the hands of too few.

Finally, the Hon. Member said that these proposals contained shades of Orwell's "1984" and were only measures to make the press beholden to Government. He said that owners of Newspapers will have to win the favour of Government. He did not tell us how that would be done, because there is no way that we suggest that that would have to be the case. We have set parameters and there is no retroactivity for those who are already beyond the 20 per cent threshold in concentration of ownership. It is the meekest, mildest, most limited package that can be imagined simply because, as a former journalist myself, I do not believe we can do anything that would appear to be intrusionary. At worst, we offer grants for better inter-regional coverage and better coverage from abroad by people knowledgeable about Canada. That is a passive intrusion, one with no judgments, one that is on a first come, first served basis if there is no bureau in place already. Nobody is obligated to take the money if he does not want to take the money.

The Hon. Member concluded that the whole nefarious proposal was an attempt by the Government to shackle the free press which he said is so important to a democracy. Well, let me say that if Members of his Party were in charge, their inaction would shackle the democracy in an area vital to a competitive free press. Their inaction would allow conglomerates perhaps to use their influence to have the press make sure only their story got out. I would like to believe that conglomerate ownerships and large companies operate largely with goodwill within Canada, but they operate for their own interest and for their own profit line.

Surely Parliament must set limits at times that will protect a democracy and allow for diversity. We have proposed a law that will allow for that diversity and that will limit competition. We have proposed a review that will encourage editorial independence. We have proposed that in any individual marketplace, there should be no cross media ownership because there must be competition if there are to be facts and accuracy and diversity. We have proposed that there should be better inter-regional coverage in Canada and better coverage of Canadian interests abroad. When so many major cities only have one daily newspaper, we have proposed that individual Canadians should have a way to grieve if they feel that that powerful instrument has not been fair to them. I do not know how anybody can argue that any of that does anything but protect a free press, and a free press really means the rights of individuals to a diversity of sources of information.

Where are Members of the Official Opposition on this policy? They are nowhere. Who are they? They are friends of big business and, apparently, the newspaper conglomerates. What are they? Apparently they are destroyers of legitimate and rational debate and policy production.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Corbin): Comments, questions? Are there any question or comments? Debate.

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, the resolution before us today is an incredible piece of chicanery. Unfortunately, the only reason it tends to stick is that there is some shred of truth to it. I would like to use the ten minutes remaining to build on some of the remarks made by the Hon. Member for Gloucester (Mr. Breau) about the performance of the Government that gives a shred of credibility and truth to resolutions such as we see before the House today.

I would like to use as an example a small community in British Columbia that suffers because of the nature of Government intervention and the lack of what I would call the effectiveness of Government. Alert Bay is a small community on an island that sits at the head of Johnstone Strait. It encompasses 2,000 people, approximately 1,000 people who live in a native community and 1,000 people who live in an adjoining community. This community hangs in a life and death balance, Mr. Speaker, and that life and death balance is influenced on almost a daily basis by the Government and how it responds or fails to respond to that community.

When we speak about intervention, we also mean interest and understanding and communication. These things do not exist in Alert Bay. The Government is 3,000 miles away. It has no interest in the community, and consequently the community has no interest in the Government.

The present Government wonders why it has no representation from western Canada. Maybe the explanation that will follow will assist it in developing appropriate intervention which supports the kind of personal and private initiative that we would like to see, the kind of intervention that enhances the independence of the community to make decisions which affect their day to day lives and, in short, gives people independence.

• (1750)

I am sorry that the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mr. Axworthy) left the Chamber, Mr. Speaker, because his Department has great influence on what happens in that community through unemployment insurance and the employment development process. Alert Bay does get some recognition, but there are tremendous problems with the delivery of unemployment insurance in the community. When you combine that with the inefficiency of the post office, Alert Bay, like many communities in rural and remote Canada, suffers tremendously. People judge that it is suffering at the hands of the Department that comes under the Minister of Employment and Immigration as well as at the hands of the Government. Tremendous difficulties are imposed upon it.

Banking is a federal responsibility and Alert Bay has no bank. It has a small credit union on which the local business community is absolutely dependent. The small businesses that are trying to survive and grow in the community are dependent on a credit union that is hanging in there by a thread. By failing to intervene in some of the problems of the credit union, that sole source of banking in the community, the federal Government puts the small businesses in the community in jeopardy. Debts are incurred in areas of federal responsibility where the credit union could be made more viable and stronger and could serve the needs of the people more effectively. I urge the Minister of State for Finance (Mr. Cosgrove) to look at the problems in the community.

Indian affairs is another area of concern. With approximately 1,000 people in the native community the Nimpkish band is struggling for economic development, for access to the forest industry, for appropriate intervention in the fishing industry, for development of their culture and the education of their children. The Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development (Mr. Munro) is a long way from Alert Bay. There are many and serious problems with employment and economic development that affect the day to day life of the native people and the opportunity for them to earn a living in order to support themselves and their children. The Government wonders why the people in that community and in all of western Canada reject that Party as a source of representation in the House.

I am pleased to see that the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans (Mr. De Bané) is in the House. The Johnstone Strait fishery is one of the most complex in western Canada, yet it is the people of Alert Bay and Sointula and the area at the head of Johnstone Strait that depend, absolutely and desperately, on income from the fishing industry. Every fish caught in Johnstone Strait by a fisherman from Alert Bay, from the Nimpkish band, from Port Hardy, from Sointula, is a ten dollar bill in those small communities. Every fish is the lifeblood of those communities. Yet the officials in the field decided to let the fish swim by and be taken elsewhere at a lower value. That put Alert Bay on the slippery skids to oblivion. There is a question of understanding that community and its dependence on that resource. The Government must understand this and extend aid to the community.

On the matter of small craft harbours, I must point out that the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans has had in his possession for seven years a request for harbour development. Alert Bay contains one of the largest fishing harbours in the area. The largest number of fishing boats on the West Coast is in that area. Seven years ago they made a request to build a fishing harbour there, but it has been ignored. As a matter of fact, harbour developments have been placed in communities that have no fishing harbour. Some of the communities that have received benefits do not even have major vessels harboured there. I suggest that this is so critical that if the fishing vessels are drained away from Alert Bay, it will kill the community. It is vitally important that the Government understand this. If that should happen, at least the people of Alert Bay should be informed. I hope the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans will take note of this and respond to it.

Another problem is transportation. There is a Coast Guard communications system which involves five or six people at a Coast Guard radio station. The Minister proposes to remove them from that community and put in a remote station which will remote to Vancouver. This is a compromise with safety. Those radio operators know the area like the back of their hand and when there is an emergency, they know who is closest and able to respond and exactly where that person is.

When this is remoted to Vancouver, the local operator there has no more detailed knowledge of the area than he has of Timbuktu. The proposal to remote that Coast Guard radio station is dangerous and it will erode the economic viability of the community. It is imperative that the Minister of Communications (Mr. Fox) have his officials talk to the people of the community about this. They should also talk to the other Government Departments involved so that there is a complete understanding not only of what is happening in the community but of how each Department affects the life, growth, hope and expectations of the people.

Also, the Department of the Solicitor General intervenes in the community without understanding it. An RCMP boat is involved in law enforcement and search and rescue. It is greatly respected in the community. It is often quite dangerous on the water with the tremendous traffic involved in the fishing industry, the ferries intersecting, the major marine routes for ocean going freighters, and the RCMP play an effective role there. In the past, the Solicitor General's office has proposed that the five officers involved be moved out of the community. That has not happened to date but it would have a bad effect if it did.

In the past, the Department of Fisheries and Oceans has attempted to remove the fisheries office where some of the most difficult fishing management decisions are made. If those officers are removed from Alert Bay, communications will break down and the economy will be eroded.

There is a desperate need for Government Departments that intervene in the community and whose goals and aspirations, we hope, are to allow the community to thrive and continue to grow, to begin to talk to each other about the nature of the community and how they can help. They should then begin to talk to the community about where it wants to go. That is absolutely imperative.

At the present time we have a Senator who roams the coast of British Columbia. Instead of establishing priorities and discussing with the people of the communities how the Government will intervene and become involved in the day to day lives of people in a meaningful way so that they can make decisions themselves to secure their future, he comes out and announces where the small craft harbour will go, by total surprise. He comes out and announces where the salmon enhancement projects will go, by total surprise to the people of the communities.

Through the intervention of Cabinet Ministers an interdepartmental committee must be set up to study the needs of the area, to consult with the people and look at ways in which the Government can work with them to determine how they can be assisted. In some cases the solution might be for the Government to keep its nose out, but in other cases there are many things that the federal Government can do to assist such communities and help the people to preserve their way of life and make it better.

If the Government is interested in developing a good relationship and not exposing itself to the hot air rhetoric of the Conservative motion, I offer them these constructive suggestions and a positive course of action that could be used in communities along the whole coast of British Columbia and in many of the remote communities of Canada.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 45 deemed to have been moved.

HOUSE OF COMMONS—CANADIAN BILL OF RIGHTS—ABSENCE FROM DISPLAY WITHIN PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS. (B) REQUEST THAT BILL OF RIGHTS BE DISPLAYED

Mr. Bill McKnight (Kindersley-Lloydminster): Mr. Speaker, I take part in the Adjournment Debate this evening in an attempt to receive a little more information from the Government on the subject of a question I asked on June 6, 1983, as reported on page 26077 of Hansard.

It was brought to my attention by several constituents when I was showing them through their Parliament Buildings, through the buildings which are an honour, a tribute, and the property of all Canadians, that the Diefenbaker Bill of Rights was not displayed. I was showing them our Library, their Library. In the past I have always made a point of pointing out in the display cases on the desk in the Library the Flag Proclamation which gave Canadians their own flag. I have also pointed out the Diefenbaker Bill of Rights and other documents in the form of statutes of historic importance to Canada and to Candians in the development of our country. To my dismay, however, I could not show them the Diefenbaker Bill of Rights which used to be displayed in either language. It was not available. I looked through the documents in the display in the Hall of Honour which has just been opened in the corridor leading to the Library. There were several documents displayed at that time, which supposedly pertained to the constitutional development of our country, the Acts that have brought us to this point in history.

I would like to enumerate some of those Acts which are in the Hall of Honour, Mr. Speaker. There is the edict creating the Sovereign Council of Quebec, 1663, the Royal Proclamation of 1763, the Quebec Act, 1774, the Constitutional Act, 1791, the Union Act, 1840. There is also the Constitution Act of 1867 which in itself is an anomaly because up until recently that Act has always been called the British North America Act. There was the Canada Act of 1982 and the Proclamation of the Constitution Act, 1982.

I asked the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) what had happened to this document, this Statute that when passed by the Parliament of Canada was to be the supreme Statute pertaining to constitutional rights of all Canadians. One of the rights which was in that Constitution Act passed under the Diefenbaker Government, commonly known as the Diefenbaker Bill of Rights, was the right of Canadian citizens to own and to hold property.

In checking to see what had happened to this historic document, I found that in 1967, Centennial Year, the then Prime Minister, Lester Pearson, wished to display to Canadians two important historic Acts. The ones he did display were the Proclamation of the Flag along with the Diefenbaker Bill of Rights, the original of which was displayed for two years, up until 1969. Then through some problems with humidity and some concern for the wellbeing of this important document it was removed. The document was replaced in the display case originally by a unilingual document, which was to be rotated, using one or other of the official languages, on a monthly basis. Shortly after that another display case was built and it was then possible to display it in both English and French. Up until this time, Mr. Speaker, I have not been able to find out, or, even receive a reply from the Government, what really has happened to this document and where it is. This document was the first Bill of Rights in recent history given to the Canadian people. It is a Statute which still remains, and was originally to be pre-eminent over all other documents.

• (1805)

Mr. Fox: Public Archives.

Mr. McKnight: Mr. Speaker, I hear something from the Minister of Communications (Mr. Fox) across the floor. He is telling me that it is in the Public Archives. I do not see the difference between the Diefenbaker Bill of Rights, in the constitutional progression of our country, and the other documents which I see displayed in the Hall of Honour.

One matter which does concern many people is the apparent attempt to rewrite or change history—not because of language but, rather, because of the political Party involved—to make it appear that the one political Party is the only Party which has progressed and brought constitutional changes to Canada.

Mr. Fox: That's besides the point.

Mr. McKnight: That is really something which most fair-minded people in Canada would find offensive. There must always be some credit given to the Diefenbaker Government and, in particular, to that honourable gentleman for developing and putting forward our first Bill of Rights. If these fears of mine are groundless, I would be only too happy to hear that.

I would also like to ask the Parliamentary Secretary when this important document will be placed on display in the Hall of Honour with other documents showing the constitutional steps we have taken. It is something which should not be missed by Canadians. It is something Canadians look for, especially those from my part of Canada who revere Mr. Diefenbaker. I do not see any reason which would stop the Government from displaying something as important to Canadians as the Diefenbaker Bill of Rights. I hope to receive a satisfactory answer.

Mr. Denis Ethier (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, to mark the patriation of the Canadian Charter the Government of the United Kingdom gave to Canada, on October 1, 1983, facsimilies of the major British documents respecting Canada's constitutional development, including the Royal Proclamation of 1763; the Quebec Act, 1774; the Constitutional Act, 1791; the Union Act, 1840; and the British North America Act, 1867. At the same time, the British Foreign Secretary, Francis Pym, also presented a special copy of the Canada Act 1982, produced on parchment.

The Speaker of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Commons decided that these documents of Canada's constitutional development should be put on display in the Hall of Honour so that thousands of Canadians who visit Parliament each year might be able to gain an even greater understanding of various stages in the evolution of Canada as a sovereign state.

They also decided that the edict creating the Sovereign Council of Quebec, 1663, which established New France as a royal Province and made provision for civil Government, should figure in the display. That original document is on loan from the Archives of France until September 5, 1983. The collection of documents of Canada's constitutional development also includes the proclamation of the Constitution Act, 1982, signed by Queen Elizabeth II. This document completed Canada's evolution as a fully sovereign state.

The collection of constitutional documents is complemented by a display of three proclamations establishing Canada's symbol of sovereignty: The Royal Proclamation of the Coat of Arms of Canada, 1921; the Proclamation of the Canadian Flag, 1965; and the Proclamation of the National Anthem, "O, Canada", 1980.

The number of documents to be included in such an exhibition is inevitably limited. The main exhibit deals only with the principle documents respecting Canada's constitutional development leading to full sovereignty, and the complementary exhibition deals only with the Canadian symbols of sovereignty. The exhibition of documents does not seek to deal with every aspect of Canada's constitutional and political evolution. For this reason, it was decided that another exhibition dealing with other aspects should be organized by the Public Archives.

I might say at this time that the Public Archives removed this document from the showcase because a signature on the document was being raised by the light reflecting in the showcase.

It should be noted that the exhibition in the Hall of Honour includes The Proclamation of the Constitution Act, 1982, which brought into force that Act which includes the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. However, the Constitution Act, 1982, itself is not included in the display.

• (1810)

The collection of constitutional documents does not include the many historic statutes of the Parliament of Canada that are of great significance for the people of Canada, such as the Official Languages Act of 1969, or indeed the Canadian Citizenship Act of 1947 or, for that matter, the Canadian Bill of Rights of 1960. The exclusion of such documents does not reflect in any way on their importance for Canadians.

RAILWAYS—CROWSNEST PASS RATE—RAILWAY UPGRADING—PRIME MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, on May 20 I asked the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) a quesiton concerning the railway upgrading and the Crowsnest pass rate. I was basically attempting to determine from the Prime Minister whether he had been very clear in his discussions with the various provincial Premiers and interest groups in the West when he asked their opinions of his proposed transportation initiatives. I asked if he had been clear as to whether he was talking about the need for railway upgrading, and what was their opinion as to the need for that activity, aside from a decision to change the historic Crowsnest rate charged to farmers. He fudged the issue somewhat in his answer.

In his answer as reported at page 25627 of Hansard, he said:

> There are two aspects, and some of my interlocutors are more interested in one aspect than in the other. For instance, it is easy to see that those who are interested in an improved transportation system would probably include a lot of Manitobans, because I understand the Minister of Transport has announced or will announce that there will be some 1,000 proper cars or so built at the Transcona plant in Winnipeg.

That was the point on which I wish to raise an interjection. The cars that are being built in Winnipeg have nothing to do with the proposed transportation Bill C-155 that was before the House. Those cars are not being built to transport grain. They will be coal cars and there is a vast difference in the design and utilization, consequently, of those cars.

The cars being built in Winnipeg are small volume cars designed to carry a very dense material like coal. They cannot be interchanged for use in grain haulage and really fall outside the proposed legislation we are being asked to discuss in the House. As well they fall outside the discussions that have been going on between various farm groups and, to some extent, the provincial Premiers.

I believe the Prime Minister's answer left us with the impression that the question of the rate and upgrading were thoroughly and inalterably intertwined. Our Party and many other people in Canada do not see that to be the case, and that view is held not only by western Canadians but by people right across the country.

We have been making the point for some time in the House that the railway's ability to move grain has not really been limited by the amount of technology that exists in the railways now. Railways have upgraded considerably and consistently. Admittedly, they have done so through intrusions into the public purse at times. However, we note that the proposed subsidies included in Bill C-155 of $651 million annually include subsidies that have existed under previous legislation. For example, there is the branch line subsidy of $278 million which is being paid now annually. I would remind the House that those subsidies are being paid to transport the grain directly from the elevator to the seaboard, and they relate to all the costs of moving grain from those branch lines directly to the seaboard. That covers closeto 30 per cent or 35 per cent of the total crop moved in the country.

I think there are some problems regarding the background reasoning for the decision that has been made. Let me point out a couple of things. The railways cannot obtain more efficiency with this rate. The rate was very profitable up until the last 15 or 20 years. There is some dispute as to whether or not it is still profitable. Many figures we have been able to obtain would indicate that the railways come very close to covering all their operating costs. The upgrading costs are being paid out of the public purse. The cost of the hopper cars is being paid out of the public purse, from farmers pockets and with provincial money.

As far as efficiency of the railways is concerned, using one format for computing efficiency, this has gone from roughly a train load average of 22 cars at the beginning of the century to a situation today when 110 cars are moved per train load. The cars today are much larger than the ones used in 1900. The efficiency ratio there is about ten times in terms of the crew and backup people necessary to maintain the trains on the tracks. About one-fifth of the crews and backup staff are now needed if you compute efficiency on a train load basis.

If you compute efficiency on a tonne mile basis, about one-fiftieth of the backup staff is needed today compared with the turn of the century. Costs are not consistent with what occurred back then.

There have been many ways of reducing costs. The compensatory rate Mr. Snavely determined is not very accurate. When you use his figures and superimpose them on the financial statement for one of the most profitable years of CPR you will find, on a train load basis, that the returns would be more than twice the actual train load mile costs.

We argue that the Prime Minister has not fully understood the problem. It is not just an economic problem, it is a social problem. It is a problem affecting the security of the country as an economic entity. It is a regional problem, not just an economic problem. It is a truly political problem of a national sense. I again call upon the Minister to split the Bill, split the two issues and deal with them as two separate issues, which they most clearly are.

Mr. Denis Ethier (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I think the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) well understands the situation. The question is whether railway upgrading and changing the Crow rate are inseparable issues. It is the Government's view that the two must go together. Theoretically, I suppose it would be possible to charge arbitrarily low freight rates for certain commodities, and then to pour taxpayers' money into upgrading whenever it is thought to be needed. But in the Government's view, it is neither sound management nor sound economics to charge freight rates that bear no relationship to the costs incurred in the transportation.

Grain is perhaps the only commodity in the country in respect of which 4025;-1 freight rate bear no relationship to transportation costs. Rail freight rates for other commodities, elevator charges, passenger fares on public transit, even public utility fees—for example, Manitoba Hydro, in a Province with an NDP Government—have been subject to periodic fee increases in an attempt to recover a reasonable proportion of the cost incurred. Unless there is a reasonable amount of revenue from each type of traffic, it becomes impossible to determine whether that traffic will grow or decrease, where it will move and, consequently, where investment for upgrading of facilities are required.

None of the above excludes Government support of grain transportation, even as a long run proposition. The Government fully recognizes the contribution of grain to Canada's exports and balance of payments. That is why grain will never have to pay the full cost of transportation. Under the present plan, it will pay about 60 per cent of the true cost by 1990-1991. If grain prices remain depressed, the "safety net" will take effect before that and grain will pay a smaller proportion of transportation costs.

The Government is convinced that some additional revenue is required from grain to allow the railways to commit themselves to the expansion needed to accommodate future growth in traffic over the next decade.

NATIONAL DEFENCE—REQUEST THAT CF-104 AIRCRAFT BE BANNED FROM AEROBATIC DEMONSTRATIONS. (B) REQUEST FOR DOCUMENTATION ON ACCIDENTS

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, I wish to elaborate on a question I asked some time ago in the House concerning the Canadian Armed Forces operation of the CF-104. Of the 239 acquired by the Canadian Armed Forces, 110 have crashed and there has been a 46 per cent failure rate. Over the last six months five pilots have been killed in CF-104 accidents, and over the term of its use approximately 33 have been killed.

When the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Lamontagne) was questioned about this in the House, he indicated that the Opposition was attempting to make a tragedy out of the most recent situation in Germany in which a clergyman and his family were killed by the crash of a CF-104, with a greater tragedy just narrowly being missed with thousands of people watching an Armed Forces public display.

There is no doubt in anyone's mind that this is an extremely dangerous aircraft. It was pointed out that some squadrons in the RAF had better flight safety records and less loss of aircraft during the second world war when the aircraft were actually involved in active combat than the CF-104. The aircraft seems to have some design problems. It is a single engine aircraft which cannot be relit after an engine failure. In West Germany the aircraft was described as a national scandal, with 252 accidents and 177 that have crashed. Also 24 have been lost in Italy. The current figures stand to be updated. Of the 1,900 manufactured, 600 have crashed. There is no doubt that this is an absolute tragedy. It is a serious situation. It is ridiculous for the Government to maintain aircraft with such a performance record.

Some of the rationalizations which have been used to justify continued usage of the aircraft are interesting. One article indicates that fighter pilots like to fly the CF-104, that it is a great honour, and that it is like the infantry soldier who knows there is risk but wants to be doing what he is doing. Unfortunately the five people who were killed on the highway in Germany did not want to happen what happened to them. Of the two persons who lost their lives in Alberta, one had a wife and four children. I am sure they do not want to be doing what they are doing today.

We in the House of Commons must ask ourselves whether this is justified. Frankly, in peacetime, astronomical losses of a dangerous aircraft such as that are completely intolerable.

Returning to the Cold Lake situation, the two aircraft that we lost did not appear to have been equipped with normal emergency locater equipment. The justification that military aircraft are exempt from carrying emergency locater transmitters is absolutely appalling on the part of the Canadian Government. Armed Forces pilots are probably the best trained and the most safety conscious pilots—beyond the shadow of a doubt. For the Canadian Government to permit the aircraft to be flown without ELTs is an extremely poor example to civilian pilots the Government is trying to convince should adhere to the law and maintain their aircraft. It is also a very poor example to set in respect of aviation safety. Unfortunately in cases of accidents where pilots survive in hostile countries, it could result their deaths. Emergency locater transmitters must be installed on all those aircraft. There must be operational changes in the aircraft. Unfortunately on the day that this matter was raised in the House the Minister indicated that there would be none and that the aircraft would continue to fly.

I submit that there must be a public investigation into the aircraft and its crashes, a search for common threads. The Minister made a commitment to make crash investigation records available indicating the variety and number of aircraft that went down, and the causes. I ask that he fulfil that commitment. The Minister must prohibit the use of those aircraft in aerial and aerobatic demonstrations. It is just too risky for the pilot to fly the aircraft at low levels, and it is too dangerous for the people watching.

Finally, the Minister must prohibit the use of the CF-104 in commercial airports. There can be no justification for flying this aircraft into heavily populated areas such as Vancouver and Winnipeg, where civilian airports are used. It is completely unjustifiable. The Minister must recognize that he cannot hide or attempt to justify these tragic accidents. We must all be very forthright and move quickly to investigate the causes. We must also act quickly to put the aircraft into very rigid operational roles in which they are known to be safe before we lose anymore pilots and before we have a repeat of the kind of tragedy we recently saw in Germany.

• (1825)

Mr. Stanley Hudecki (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member expresses several concerns in regard to the regrettable accident which occurred during an air display last month in Germany. He has questioned the operational suitability of the CF-104 in its current role in Europe, its accident record and also its continuing suitability for operations. The specific questions he has posed would take much longer to answer than the three minutes allotted to me. I will therefore just generalize and give him the highlights. Hopefully on a more personal basis and through correspondence I can give him the details.

On all of these contentions I must strongly take him to task, not only on the tone, the implications and indeed the facts that he has used in questioning the use of this aircraft, but especially on his lack of appreciation and sensitivity to the very difficult task that the pilots are called upon to perform for the security of this country. As the Minister has already pointed out in the House, we would not allow our pilots to take to the air in any aircraft if there were any questions whatsoever relating to the operational safety and soundness of the aircraft.

It has been accurately reported in the media that both the United States and the Canadian experience with this aircraft in so far as accidents rate are concerned is similar. Indeed, the same is true with regard to the accident rates of our six NATO allies who are also flying this aircraft in the European theatre. The CF-104 is a high performance military aircraft intended for use in a very hostile environment. This inevitably requires specialized training missions that simulate actual wartime conditions.

This plane is not used for aerobatics at the various exhibits. It is simply a fly-past and the impression that is left on the spectators results from the speed at which they fly and the concomitant noise they produce.

With regard to the specifics of this unfortunate accident, may I assure the Hon. Member that, as with all accidents involving Canadian Forces aircraft, we are conducting an intensive investigation into the causes. May I assure the Hon. Member that the findings of these investigations are not secret, although some of the information gathered may indeed be of a confidential nature.

I can tell the Hon. Member that during the last five years only 13 per cent of the CF-104 accidents have been caused by identified material deficiencies. Therefore, to suggest that the aircraft is not airworthy for war service is simply not true. Our pilots are among the best trained pilots in the world. They are consummate professionals. They do not shy away from the CF-104. Indeed, they look forward to serving with it. They consider the opportunity to fly this high-performance aircraft in a demanding role a privilege. It is an extremely demanding job which they carry out with the utmost of professional capability, and we are rightly proud of them. I see my time is up, Mr. Speaker.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

CANAGREX

MEASURE TO ESTABLISH

Hon. E. F. Whelan (Minister of Agriculture) moved that Bill C-85, an Act to establish a corporation called Canagrex to promote, facilitate and engage in the export of agricultural and food products from Canada, be read the third time and do pass.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to have the opportunity to speak at third reading of Bill C-85, legislation which will establish the Canadian agricultural export corporation, Canagrex. Long awaited, Canagrex will assist in the expansion of agriculture exports, particularly in the non-grain sector where in the past number of years we have experienced about a $2 billion trade deficit. Canagrex will be a catalyst to assist growth in export areas long considered the domain of some of other trading partners around the world and we will compete in a progressive—excuse the word—

Mr. Epp: Don't apologize.

Mr. Whelan: —and positive action, using all the tools that Bill C-85 provides. Canagrex will not—

Mr. Huntington: Will not be around long.

Mr. Whelan: —and I want to repeat and emphasize this point—compete with Canadians. Canagrex will, however, within the context of the legislation, create an atmosphere for competitive growth on the export markets of the world for those products we have already identified as being "soft" in our over-all trade picture.

I am very disturbed over the statements made by the Official Opposition over the past few months, and again during report stage in the House last week. Still seemingly bent on creating a "bogeyman" out of this important piece of legislation, the Official Opposition has falsely claimed that Canagrex is a move by the Government to take over the agri-food industry.

Tying its argument into its stance on Crown corporations, the Official Opposition claims we do not need another Crown corporation and that through establishment of Canagrex the free enterprise attitudes within the agri-food industry will disappear. In one breath the Official Opposition says a loud "No" to Canagrex based on its Crown corporation argument, and in the next breath the Official Opposition says you can have your Crown corporation, Mr. Minister or farmers of Canada, just so long as you remove the buy and sell powers contained in the Bill.

What are the Tories against, Mr. Speaker, Crown corporations?

Mr. Darling: That is a good question!

Mr. Whelan: Is the Official Opposition really against Crown corporations? I do not really think so when you study the history of the Tory Party. My heavens, it was the Tories who began some of the most distinguished Crown corporations in this country.

Mr. Huntington: Absolutely right.

Mr. Whelan: The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation was started by the Conservatives. The Canadian Wheat Board was started by the Conservatives and the Canadian National Railways was started by the Conservatives. The other day I heard one of the Members on the other side say: "Look at what the CN Railway has done". But he did not say: "We created it and we are sorry or we apologize for it", or anything else. He did not say that at all.

Mr. Epp: This is your last one. Go ahead.

Mr. Whelan: No, the Tories are not against Crown corporations. They are against farmers in this country having the opportunity to become active players in the export game. What they are saying is that those farmers have no business in the export market. Even if they want to, they say: "We would like to deny you that right". Then they claim they are the friends of the farmers. I am surprised. I even know some of the Hon. Members' in-laws who are not of the same political faith that I am but are strong supporters of Canagrex, and they have told me what they have told their relations. Some Tories are only interested—and I am not putting them all in the same boat, but I know what some of them have told me privately—in maintaining the status quo when it comes to agri-food export development.

It is clear to me that the Tories are only interested in serving a specific sector of the agri-food industry when they request still further amendments on the buy-sell clause.

I have said many times in the past number of months, when the all-Party standing committee concluded its hearings on Bill C-85, there was consensus on the 14 amendments, and the Tory Party's own agricultural critic, the former Minister of Agriculture, the Hon. Member for Elgin (Mr. Wise), who was on that committee, called the amendments reasonable. His words are recorded and he is a very reasonable person, of course. He realized the value of what the Bill would do, and he knows every effort was made by all Members of that committee to ensure Bill C-85 was equitable to all concerned.

He was particularly pleased to see us include the "at the request of" clause in the buy-sell portion of the Bill, and he expressed at the time that he felt it was something he could sell to his caucus. Being a reasonable person himself he figured the majority of the Conservative caucus feel the same way. Well, it appears he was not listened to, and if the Official Opposition had its way, farmers in this country would continue to lose valuable export opportunities and be made to sit on the fence.

I would point out, however, that Canadian farmers have never lost any freedom because of Crown corporations which operate under the authority of my Ministry.

Mr. Huntington: That is absolutely ridiculous.

Mr. Whelan: Mr. Speaker, I would challenge the Hon. Member to find examples of when any one of those Crown corporations was used other than to help farmers. In turn, by helping agriculture and farmers it helps the total society.

Let me refer to a few examples. There is the protection offered by the Farm Credit Corporation. All of them are asking me to expand the Farm Credit Corporation to take care of long-term farm loans and mortgages which are needed because the private sector is not properly looking after farm credit in the country. Also we have the Agricultural Stabilization Board, the Canadian Dairy Commission and prairie farm rehabilitation. Farmers are free to develop their farms under these organizations, choose their crops, improve their efficiency and become the most productive farmers in the world.

I challenge anyone to find anything that this Minister or this Government has done which has taken away any rights from the farmers of the land. We have given the farmers of the land more rights than in any other land in the entire world. Let that be a known fact.

Mr. Huntington: And more problems.

Mr. Whelan: The farmers in the United States of America do not have the same rights as our farmers. The farmers in Britain do not have the same rights as farmers here. The farmers in France do not have the same rights. The farmers in the U.S.S.R. do not have the same rights. The farmers in Poland to not have the same rights as those here. They hardly have any rights at all there. We are saying that it they want those rights they can have those rights. There is nothing "back door" about Crown corporations. They were established by Acts of Parliament and they report to Parliament, the ones for which I am responsible. No one can accuse me of bringing in Canagrex through the back door.

Mr. Taylor: You are responsible for closure.

Mr. Whelan: Canagrex could have been brought in by Order in Council, if I had wanted to do it. I chose the legislative route.

Mr. Taylor: What is the difference when you bring in closure?

Mr. Whelan: I am very happy about having chosen the legislative route.

Mr. Taylor: Are you happy about closure?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Minister of Agriculture has the floor.

Mr. Whelan: No other piece of legislation in which I have ever been involved has had as much discussion as this since I have been Minister of Agriculture. It was before the Committee, before the House, before the Senate Committee on Agriculture. I have never seen that much discussion on any other piece of legislation with which I have had anything to do.

The Act to establish the agricultural export corporation is what is before the House. Hon. Members opposite continually point out bad things about Crown corporations. They hardly ever point out what the Auditor General said about this legislation. He said in his annual report: "I am happy to see that this Crown corporation will be the first". Afterwards when I asked him why he said that, he said it was because it was the first the Auditor General could go in and review completely at any time. He said: "Mr. Whelan, it is not only a first in Canada for the federal Government but it is a first for the Provinces. There is no other free country in the world which allows that of the Auditor General and what you are going to do with Canagrex to protect the public interest". How often do they report that; how often do they say that?

Then there was an amendment brought in by the Hon. Member for Prince Albert (Mr. Hovdebo), an NDP Member. He made a suggestion which the committee and I accepted. When they talk about the powers to buy and sell, other Provinces with Crown corporations have the power to buy and sell. For instance, in Alberta they have the power to buy and sell. They said that they could not even operate with their cattle sales agency if they did not have the power to buy and sell.

Mr. Taylor: They did not bring it in by closure in Alberta.

Mr. Whelan: Certainly not this Minister—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Taylor: Did you ever hear of free speech?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The Minister of Agriculture has the floor.

Mr. Whelan: No one on this side of the House, not this Minister of Agriculture, wants to set up any Crown corporation which is not answerable.

The Auditor General investigated the Canadian Dairy Commission. I asked him to do that. I had to ask him to do that because he does not have the authority to do it unless the Minister asks him. I asked him to review the operations of the Canadian Dairy Commission. He found some fault with it. I challenge anyone on either side of the House to point to any private corporation or Crown corporation and say that it is perfect. No such thing exists, as far as that goes. Even as well as I run the ones for which I am responsible, I would not say that they are perfect because I am not perfect myself.

• (1115)

It is a cop-out for Members opposite to accuse Crown corporations of fostering socialism and to suggest that same kind of philosophical free enterprise will solve all our problems. That kind of enterprise has been nothing more than philosophical for generations. Members opposite know that as well as anyone. Otherwise Alberta would be served by a private telephone company instead of a public one, Ontario residents would buy their liquor from private dealers instead of a Government-owned liquor control board operated store, and Quebec residents would buy their electricity from private power companies instead of Hydro-Québec.

Crown corporations have been set up to deal with special needs. Why do we not recognize that? All Governments in Canada have recognized that special needs exist and that they have a responsibility as the elected representatives of the people to see that those needs are met. That is what we are doing here. Sometimes Governments have been able to provide assistance to private industry to meet the need. Where that has not been possible, the Crown corporation has proved to be an ideal way to solve the problem.

Setting up Government agencies to meet the public needs that are not being served by the private sector is not unique to Canada. Nearly every Government in the world does that; yes, even the great free enterprise Government to the south of us in the United States of America does that. Check what it has done.

Mr. Taylor: They don't bring in closure.

Mr. Whelan: They do not have to bring in closure because they have a more responsible House, with rules under which you cannot do the same things that can be done here. We never brought in closure.

Mr. Taylor: You brought in closure.

Mr. Whelan: The Member keeps using the word "closure". We brought in time allocation. Closure means just what it says—bang, closed, a one-day debate, a vote by 1 a.m. the next morning. Time allocation in the Mother of Parliaments under Her Majesty is used almost every day. They have a business committee of the House. They do that in a gentlemanly way.

If there is anything unique about Canada's Crown corporations, it is their effectiveness in carrying out their responsibilities and their accountability to Parliament. We have a proud record. Let us look at some that we have right here in this capital. Anyone who looks down the list of Crown corporations and evaluates what they have done will have to admit their effectiveness.

There is a Crown corporation which handles museums in this country. Look at the magnificent job the National Capital Commission has done in developing Ottawa, Hull and the surrounding area. The National Research Council has a worldwide reputation. You must also look at the role of the Canada Council in promoting the arts. These corporations are outside of my territory a bit, but I am well aware of them, as are Members opposite. Would they want to destroy those Crown corporations? They have the power to buy and sell the National Capital Commission. In a farm magazine I read this morning, it stated that the ploughing match will be held in this area in late September. The article brags about the green belt which the National Capital Commission has preserved around this city. That has been tremendous for this city. It is a Crown corporation which kept this belt around the city. Would Members opposite have the nerve to say to the Members of Parliament from the national capital area that they want to abolish the National Capital Commission and set up something different? I would dare them to do that.

Canagrex will enable Canada for the first time to deliver a co-ordinated approach to export marketing in this country, something that we have never had. It will provide new opportunities for exporters, the traditional trader as well as the newcomers to the export market field. What all of this means is increased dollar gains on international markets for Canada and increased job opportunities at home. Regardless of what anyone says, it means jobs. Under our agri-food strategy, we can see that in the next 15 years we will be providing 150,000 to 200,000 new jobs.

I believe that one of the most exciting aspects of the Canagrex legislation is that it will facilitate the entry of new exporters, thereby allowing for greater diversity of Canadian agri-food products on the export market. Through the creation of Canagrex, doors will open to potential exporters, big and small, which for many years have remained closed. Canada's potential in agri-food export marketing, while not unlimited, certainly has not been tapped to its fullest. We have the resources in the country to enable us really to begin to do a job in an area once considered too tough to conquer. It is a matter of knowing what our true potential really is and then setting our goals and coming up with an effort that is tough for the competition to beat.

I find it simply amazing that there is still concern that the federal Government is creating an agent that will take over the entire agri-food industry. Nothing could be further from the truth, and I repeat nothing, and one only needs to read the legislation to realize that that is not the intent of the legislation, Mr. Speaker. Its express purpose is to assist export expansion and nothing more. Canagrex will act as a facilitator to the agricultural export industry.

Some may be surprised by the people who are ready for this legislation and want to work with it.

Mr. Taylor: Then why do you have to use closure?

Mr. Whelan: We are not trying to take business away from the private trade, as some have suggested. We want private enterprise to grow and to continue to play its historical and important role in the development of Canada's export trade. If the remainder of our exports are compared with our total imports, it can be seen that there was a non-grain agricultural trade deficit of about $2 billion. Canada has the resources to do much better than that, Mr. Speaker.

The key to generating increased agri-food production is to improve market development and Canagrex will play a vital part in that development. Nowhere is Canagrex given monopoly power over any commodity. Its powers can only be used in conjunction with private trade to facilitate export. It cannot be involved, as was said here the other day, in putting little cans that say "Canagrex" on the walls of the supermarkets in Canada. Any person with common sense who reads the legislation can see that it is that plain. The amendments have been made in a way that will not allow that to happen.

Cries of a takeover conspiracy by the opponents to Bill C-85 are the most absurd cries I have ever heard.

Mr. Taylor: You deny us a right even to speak on it.

Mr. Whelan: Those opponents are selfishly trying to destruct an export mechanism that the majority of the industry has requested for years.

Members of the Official Opposition know that they have not fairly addressed a recognized problem when they criticize this legislation. The Canadian Federation of Agriculture, with its membership of over 200,000 Canadian farmers, want this Bill. It is a producers' Bill and producers have every right to be players in the agricultural export world. To deny them that right is undemocratic because Canadian farmers rely heavily on exports. They rely on exports more than any other group of farmers in the world.

Mr. Taylor: Canadian farmers do not want it.

Mr. Whelan: Upwards of 50 per cent of Canadian farmers' income comes from export while approximately 30 per cent of American farmers' income comes from export. It can be seen how important export is to farmers in the country. It can be understood why such a healthy agricultural industry has been built over a period of time within our cold, northern hemisphere climate. At one time the geographical location of Canada led many people to say that it would be impossible to develop an agricultural industry in the country. We have developed one, Mr. speaker, that is the envy of the world. Studies have shown that while as a nation we have taken positive steps in agricultural export trading over the years, there is still a need to diversify the commodities we offer on world markets. For this reason, and as a means of focusing attention on the Canadian agricultural trade effort, the Canagrex legislation is timely.

When reading Bill C-85, it can be clearly seen that Cangarex's powers to buy and sell can only be exercised in relation to its purposes, which are to promote, facilitate and engage in the export of agricultural products subject to the following limitations: Canagrex can only engage in the export of agricultural products when invited to enter into ventures jointly or in co-operation with, or at the request of, Canadian companies, co-operatives, marketing boards, associations, individuals carrying on business in Canada or contracts with foreign Governments.

Second, the power to purchase, lease or otherwise acquire and hold real property for actual use by Canagrex in the operation and management of its business does not, Mr. Speaker—and I must repeat, does not—include power to purchase, lease or otherwise acquire real property for the production of fruit, forage, grain, vegetables or other crops, the raising of cattle, poultry, sheep, swine or other livestock or the processing of any agricultural or food product. Those limitations are as clear as a bell.

Those amendments were made and the Hon. Member for Elgin said that they were reasonable. He said: "The Minister has been more flexible than I expected him to be". This is on the record. Moreover, on the criticism of Canagrex's power to enter into joint ventures with the private trade and the farm organizations—

Mr. Taylor: You know not what you do.

Mr. Whelan: You can see how democratic the Opposition is being, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Taylor: We did not bring in closure. You brought in closure, not us.

• (1125)

Mr. Whelan: We brought in time allocation. Every democratic Parliament in the world accepts time allocation. It is a good thing to deal with legislation. Hon. Members opposite want a form of anarchy.

I should like to note that a number of provincial Crown corporations, such as those in Saskatchewan, Quebec and Prince Edward Island, already have the power to buy and sell. In Alberta they have the power to buy and sell, to purchase property and do whatever they want.

Mr. Taylor: They don't bring it in by closure.

Mr. Whelan: The federal Government, under the Agricultural Products Board Act has had the power to buy and sell since 1952. I would challenge any Member in the House to find out when this Act was used by any Minister of any political stripe to harm agriculture. It has always been used to assist agriculture. We are using it in Ontario at the present time to buy up tomatoes and surplus canned products. We are putting $8 million into that program. We are using it in British Columbia and have used it practically every Province in Canada—but at their request. It was at the request of the Canadian food processors of this country that we used that power.

Mr. Taylor: But you have to be Liberal to get it.

Mr. Whelan: The federal Government has had these powers. I would challenge the Hon. Member to find any Conservative Minister who has abused the powers vested in him to administer the Agricultural Products Board Act. It has never been abused. It has never been used to hurt but always to help. Hon. Members opposite should study a little history.

Mr. Huntington: What about the national energy policy? It is just a boondoggle.

Mr. Whelan: The power to buy and sell is in keeping with standard business practices. A necessary tool of Canagrex is properly to serve the agricultural export industry.

As a point of information, Mr. Speaker, I should like to refer to what Mr. Tony Saretsky of the Alberta Canada All Breeds Association said when he appeared before the Standing Committee on Agriculture on May 12, 1982. Responding to a Committee member, the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Althouse), Mr. Saretsky said his association had the power to buy and sell. Imagine that, in Alberta, Mr. Speaker. He said he could not operate if he did not have the authority to buy and sell, that he could not work until he got that authority. Is the power to buy and sell called free enterprise when it is in Alberta and when the federal Government gives the authority to join together to buy and sell to all the Provinces that do not have the resources that Alberta has, is that socialism? Is it free enterprise when it is provincial? I do not understand that philosophy and I do not think anyone else does Mr. Speaker.

As was pointed out during that stage, what was most interesting was the fact that Mr. Saretsky indicated to the Committee that originally his association did not have the power to buy and sell. The full text of his statement may be found on page 28, Issue 67 of the Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence of the Standing Committee on Agriculture.

I might add, Mr. Speaker, that the power to buy and sell under the Canagrex legislation is not going to be directed at traditional export traders of agricultural products in this country. In fact, although Hon. Members doubt this, many Hon. Members and many farm leaders have said: "As long as Whelan remains Minister of Agriculture, we do not have to worry about the legislation." It is there to ensure that Canagrex will be able to respond to any situation which might arise.

Mr. Taylor: No other Minister of Agriculture in Canada would bring in closure.

Mr. Whelan: Canadian farmers see the wisdom of an agency that would tie together the export practices of the public and private sectors and strengthen our thrust into foreign markets. Other countries are doing it so why should the Canadian agricultural industry not have the same kind of tools that other countries have to ensure that we do not lag behind?

It is interesting to note that while Canagrex was being discussed, developed, amended and politicized, the United States increased its capacity to deal on the export market through passage of the Export Trading Act. It never had to use time allocation because it saw the need, charged ahead and did it.

Mr. Huntington: But the Members designed it, not the bureaucrats.

Mr. Whelan: President Reagan signed the Act into law on October 8, 1982, giving the American agricultural industry yet another tool to help capture agri-food markets around the world. The purpose of the new law in the United States is to stimulate U.S. exports by facilitating export trading companies, export trade associations and more export trade services in general.

In Great Britain a couple of months ago, just before Mrs. Thatcher decided to call an election, they established a law called "Food From Britain" to establish a new marketing organization whose prime function will be to help co-ordinate and promote marketing initiatives throughout Britain and the world.

For those reasons and the fact that other countries such as Israel, France, Germany and Australia all have comprehensive export trading and promotional mechanisms, it is important for Canada to act.

• (1130)

I am pleased with and proud of this legislation, Mr. Speaker, because it is what the majority of farmers in this country asked for. I am pleased because producers have had a recognized need addressed positively with this legislation. They now have the needed tool to assist expansion of agri-food products.

I am also proud, Mr. Speaker, because I know of the long and dedicated hours so many people have given to the drafting of this Bill. One person I would particularly like to pay a compliment to is Dr. Dennis Ware who, while attending a conference in Europe on behalf of the Minister of Agriculture, suffered a heart attack. Dr. Ware is a most dedicated civil servant and his team at Agri-food Canada unselfishly gave of their time and their talents to ensure that this legislation was written as equitably and as responsive as is humanly possible. I worked with Dr. Ware for months. Some of the other Hon. Members know him also. He is home in Ottawa now convalescing. There is no more dedicated person and no more serious and honest Canadian than this man, and he comes from western Canada, British Columbia. He saw the need because he understands the world situation. He was the person with whom we all worked. The former Minister of Agriculture on the other side of the House worked with him also, and he knows of what I speak.

What is currently paramount in agri-food trade application for Canada is that we do have the necessary facilitators in place to ensure Canada can do the best job possible, to work with, to assist, to facilitate. That is how Canada was built, not by—no, I will not say what I was thinking. Canagrex will be one of those facilitators, Mr. Speaker.

In a spirit of co-operation and exercising the greatest planning and care, I am very optimistic that Canadian agri-food export marketing has a bright future to look forward to. We know that by the respect we have built over a period of years around the world and by the relationship which our farmers have adopted with many, many different peoples around the world. Our farm organizations do not live under a little umbrella or under a basket. They recognize what is going on in the rest of the world. They are the ones who asked for this legislation. They are the ones who thought up this legislation. We promised this legislation in two election campaigns. It has been delayed in this House.

Mr. Taylor: They did not ask for closure.

Mr. Whelan: I am not ashamed one bit to bring in time allocation.

Mr. Taylor: You are proud of closure.

Mr. Whelan: Time allocation is something which the Mother of Parliament uses practically every week, if not every day, in the House of Commons procedures in Great Britain. It recognizes that it is an important tool to make sure that Parliament works.

Mr. Taylor: Parliament working under closure stops Parliament from working.

Mr. Whelan: Some Hon. Members here have used the word "closure", and they continue to use the word "closure", which is not accurate, Mr. Speaker. It is dishonest as far as I am concerned. After some 85 hours of debate in committee and in the House, and after the Senate holding hearings for nearly half that many hours, to say we are putting in closure is false, false, false. When we say "time allocation", in essence, what we are saying is: "The people have asked for this. The majority of them want this. It is time we quit talking about it and put it into action."

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Neil: Mr. Speaker, I have a question I would like to put to the Minister. I understand we ask questions. I have been in the House for about 11 years. During that time I have served continuously on the Agriculture Committee and I found it to be a very co-operative Committee, particularly in the earlier years. Hon. Member from all sides of the House were doing their utmost to do their best for agriculture. However, in the last two or three years, I have seen a certain stubbornness develop on the part of the Minister.

Mr. Whelan: Where is the question?

Mr. Epp: He does not have to ask a question. He is making a comment.

Mr. Neil: The Minsiter had better read the rules, Mr. Speaker. I can make both comments and ask questions, and I am coming to my question. I said that in the last two or three years I have detected a certain stubbornness on the part of the Minister in refusing to co-operate with the members of the Agriculture Committee to do what is best in the interests of the producers of Canada.

During the Committee hearings we talked about the part which Industry, Trade and Commerce plays in our export trade. We talked about the part which people in External Affairs play throughout the world in exports. We asked to have representatives from those Departments brought to that Committee for the purpose of discussing with them the effectiveness of what they were doing, in order that we could determine whether or not we needed Canagrex, whether the power should go to IT&C or External Affairs, or whether IT&C and External Affairs power should come to Canagrex. Can the Minister tell the people of this country why he refused to allow witnesses from those two Departments to appear before the Committee in order to let the Committee have the full story so that they could make a decision as to what was best for the producers of this country?

Mr. Whelan: First of all, Mr. Speaker, I do not have anything to say about the people from Industry, Trade and Commerce, External Affairs, or anyone else appearing before that committee. The Hon. Member cannot find anything in the records to show that I stopped them from coming before the Committee. He is putting something on the record here today which is just not fact. Those people are under another Ministry; they are not under the Ministry of Agriculture. This Bill is being sponsored by the Minister of Agriculture. The opportunity to question them about what they do is when that Ministry's estimates are before the committee responsible for hearing those estimates at that time.

When the Hon. Member says this Minister is stubborn, inflexible, refusing to co-operate, I ask you to consider this little Bill of 41 Sections, which has had 14 amendments, quite a few of which were put forward by the Opposition and accepted by us. The agriculture critic put those amendments before the Committee and we said they were good. The Hon. Member for Moose Jaw (Mr. Neil) is disagreeing with his official agriculture critic because the records show what the Hon. Member for Elgin said at that time. He more or less acted surprised that I did accept the amendments and so on; he went that far. He said I was being quite reasonable and responsible. Yet the Hon. Member says I am being irresponsible and stubborn.

I was chairman of the Agriculture Committee, Mr. Speaker, when it had 45 members. I ask the Hon. Member to look back and see how well it was run when it had 45 members. It was a well run committee. We got along with Members from all the Parties. When I said to the other Parliaments of the world that we had 45 members on the Agriculture Committee, they said it was unbelievable, how did I make it work? The Hon. Member for Moose Jaw did recognize it worked and that there was a feeling of co-operation and a desire to do things to help agriculture in this country.

The Hon. Member says I am responsible in the last three years for this feeling disappearing. I say to him he must share the responsibility because Hon. Members opposite are the ones who politicized Canagrex. When it was brought into the House, the official Leader of the Opposition, who can sit in the House at the present time—he was House Leader at that time—said; "We welcome this legislation because it was thought up by the Hon. Member for Elgin". I believe he said something like that; I may be a little inaccurate. I see the Hon. Member for Elgin just about ready to jump up on a point of order. However, he did say "We welcome this legislation", and the verbiage was something like "Because it was ours". The records are there, Mr. Speaker, for you to see. I am sure some of my colleagues will put on the record later word for word what was said. I believe the Hon. Member for Kent (Mr. Bossy) put on the record the interview of the Hon. Member for Elgin when he was Minister of Agriculture, or before he was Minister of Agriculture, talking about Canagrex, about what he was going to do with it and how he was going to make it work. It is all in the records, Mr. Speaker. But I am the one who is supposed to be stubborn?

I find it confusing, Mr. Speaker, to see Hon. Members opposite changing their minds. I find it confusing when I hear the Hon. Member still talking from the back benches over there, and that is probably where he will talk from for years and years, from the back bench. He refuses to recognize that in his own Province of Alberta they have Crown corporations which have the power to buy and sell.

Mr. Taylor: We did not bring them in by closure.

Mr. Whelan: The Hon. Member calls that free enterprise. They have a banking system. They have an airline system. They own half of the land and they own pretty near all of the resources. He calls that the free enterprise system. The most socialized Province in Canada is Alberta.

Mr. Taylor: We did not bring them in by closure.

Mr. Whelan: Saskatchewan is like a little bitty chicken alongside of Alberta, as far as that goes. When the Hon. Member talks about free enterprise, let him look in his own House. He was partly responsible for that at one time in Alberta, perhaps not for everything that they did when he was in the Government of Alberta, but I studied some of these things and he never once tried to squash, according to the records I have seen, a Crown corporation in Alberta. He never once tried to do that kind of thing.

Mr. Taylor: We did not bring them in by closure.

Mr. Whelan: He let them grow while he was in Alberta. The Minister of Agriculture of Alberta has a Crown corporation which can buy and sell.

• (1140)

Mr. Taylor: On a point of order, the man is telling complete lies and he should know it.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Cousineau: Withdraw!

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am sure the Hon. Member is aware that he has used an unparliamentary term and I invite him to rephrase his remarks.

Mr. Taylor: What the Member has been saying is completely untrue. Completely untrue and he knows it. He does not know a thing about Alberta when he calls it socialism.

Mr. Whelan: I rise on a question of privilege, because the Hon. Member did not withdraw what he has said.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member has withdrawn his remarks.

Mr. Whelan: No, he did not say he withdrew the remarks. He said it was completely untrue and I say what I said is true.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In the judgment of the Chair the Hon. Member has reconstructed his remarks in such a way as to be parliamentary.

Hon. John Wise (Elgin): Mr. Speaker, I am sure the House would agree we have just witnessed another spectacle of ministerial misunderstanding and misinterpretation, a great deal of ministerial political mischief, and indeed ministerial garbage. There is certainly no question about that.

If you check the record, Mr. Speaker, you will find that for the eighteenth time this session this Government is using closure to stop debate on vitally important legislation. The Minister refers to it as time allocation; that is nonsense. It is just a play on words. There is no difference between time allocation and closure. It is closure on legislation in the case of Canagrex, which could have—and I emphasize "could have"—profoundly detrimental effects on the future of the Canadian agriculture industry.

I cannot understand the Minister's logic in pushing through this legislation at this time. If he were serious about the need for this new Crown corporation, then why did he not push it through two days after he moved the closure motion on December 16? Is it because he feels opposition to the Bill has died down? That is certainly not the case. My colleagues and I continue to receive large numbers of letters and telegrams of protest which point out the weaknesses but, more importantly, the dangers of this Bill.

These problems were pointed out in the Standing Committee on Agriculture where some 20 out of the 32 groups appearing before it opposed the Bill, specifically its broad and ill-defined buy and sell powers. Agricultural groups like the Western Barley Growers said:

—excessive power given to Canagrex worries us as it may be used as a tool for income transfer to various areas of the country.

The Alberta Canola Growers Association testified:

> Our organization disagrees with the need for a federal agency to act as a principal in the sale of agriculture products. We support an organization that has the role of an agent only.

The flax growers said of Canagrex's broad buy and sell powers that it—> —presents a serious threat to the continued existence of privately or co-operatively owned businesses engaged in marketing our products.

The Palliser Wheat Growers indicated that the greatest impediment to more aggressive production and marketing programs for most prairie farm products is excessive Government regulation. These regulations, together with the associated Government bureaucracy, bear down on agriculture and interfere with the development of a strong production and marketing thrust. They say that they have seen no evidence that the trade is not well able to do an effective marketing job with those Canadian products produced at competitive world prices if the legislative environment permits that trade to function and function normally. The Alberta All Breeds Association said:

> The reality of Canagrex is that foreign Governments would have little incentive to transact business with anyone in Canada but Canagrex.

The Canadian Meat Council said:

> Our main concern with the Canagrex proposal is that it will interfere and detract from the successful accomplishments and/or duplicate existing achievements.

The western stockgrowers say that Government should legislate so that it supports the private sector and should never attempt to suppress or stifle the initiative of the businessman and the entrepreneur. The Canadian Cattlemen's Association said:

> We should walk before we run and not proceed with undue haste to create a structure that may be inappropriate to our needs. Canagrex may become a direct marketing agent in its own right and thus go far beyond the promotional, facilitating and support functions originally envisioned.

Let us travel to eastern Canada, I know the Minister of Veterans Affairs (Mr. Campbell) will be interested in what the Prince Edward Island Potato Marketing Board had to say about his colleague's Bill. They said:

> We are in agreement with the purposes of the Bill in so far as promoting and facilitating the export of seed and tablestock potatoes are concerned, but we emphatically disagree with Government agency becoming engaged in the export of Prince Edward Island seed or tablestock potatoes if "becoming engaged" includes buy and sell.

I can remember, Mr. Speaker, some time ago when this Bill was front and centre during farm meetings as one travelled across the country, having the opportunity to be in Prince Edward Island and to meet with some of these people. They told me very emphatically that there was some misinterpretation and misunderstanding with reference to what was really meant by the term "engage in". I remember their making it very clear to me that if that meant to buy and sell, then certainly to count them out. Even those agricultural organizations which testified in favour of Canagrex were concerned about the buy and sell powers. The Canadian Pork Council said:

> We believe that, unless the present marketing agencies are not responsive or not aggressive enough to apparent marketing opportunities, Canagrex should not be involved in commodity trading.

The Canadian Horticultural Council warned that any effort by Canagrex in international trade should not conflict with or work against the efforts presently underway by industry organizations. Even the Ontario Flue Cured Tobacco Marketing Board down in my part of the country, which has probably been one of the greatest supporters of the Canagrex legislation, testified that present exporters must be assured that the purpose of Canagrex is to assist, and that it will not in any way oppose or interfere with the present export activities being carried on by the Marketing Board. I challenge the Minister to stand here today and speak to that Board and the producers, as well as the Ontario Bean Producers Marketing Board and the Soy Bean Marketing Board in our part of the country, and give them an iron-clad commitment that indeed Canagrex, given the power it has, will not interfere. I challenge him to do that but I know he cannot respond.

The buy and sell powers of the legislation are too broad and ill-defined. In committee we also heard not the Department of Agriculture advisers, Mr. Speaker, but indeed the Department of Justice legal advisers admit that the legislation was loose and there was no definite commitment on the part of Canagrex to co-operate with or indeed receive approval from commodity groups and marketing boards in the selling of their product. They warned us of that.

In other words, the broad buy and sell powers of Canagrex could—and this is important to the producers and farmers in Ontario—if misused, usurp the powers of the provincial commodity marketing boards. Because Canagrex would want to be part of as many lucrative export deals as possible in order to be successful, which is a natural assumption, our traditional agricultural exporters could be cut off from marketing information available to their agents by Canagrex and other Government departments and agencies.

• (1150)

The Government brought forward an amendment in committee which would restrict Canagrex to buy and sell only in joint ventures and upon request. However, this restriction was then swept aside with the admission that a joint venture could be made with as few as one individual.

The Minister has stated that Canagrex would be a valuable tool to shore up Canadian commodity prices in the export market. However, the commodity prices would be forced down instead of up if Canagrex contracts were opened up for bidding. If they were not opened up for bidding, obviously one area of the country could be played off against the other. While I am not saying this would necessarily happen, there is that risk. As far as we are concerned, that risk cannot be taken.

I will not follow the Minister's example of taking everything that I hear and see as gospel truth, but in my travels across the country I have been told that the Minister has indicated that it would help to increase export prices because it could indeed be subsidized. I do not believe the Minister even said that and he is shaking his head negatively. However that feeling is obviously out there across the country and has surfaced at at least a dozen meetings at which I have taken questions from the floor seeking to clarify this matter. It should definitely be clarified that Canagrex, even given the sweeping powers that it now has, does not have the power to subsidize a Canadian agricultural product in the export market.

The Minister has also said that Canagrex would only use its buy and sell powers in unusual or extraordinary circumstances. But the Minister already has these powers and spoke about them earlier this morning. I refer to the powers of the Agricultural Products Board. My colleagues and I believe that by having to go to Cabinet according to the terms of the Agricultural Products Board Act, that would certainly give some type of protection with reference to the business that could be transacted by the corporation.

The only protection presently offered to those organizations fearful of Canagrex' broad buy and sell powers is the Minister's word. While I can only speak for myself, a Minister's word is pretty small comfort to me. The Minister's word that the powers would only be used in unusual circumstances is not good enough for me. I am sure that it is not good enough for the majority of Canadian farmers in this country.

During his career, which is about to come to an end, the Minister has made many, many promises. Can the House remember the promises about cheap money for farmers? Does it remember the promises about the agri-bond concept? Does it remember the promise about capital gains legislation? Does it remember the promise about a stabilization program for beef farmers in this country? The list goes on and on. However, I want to deal specifically with this Bill and utilize my time to speak on behalf of the Canadian farmers, for whom the Minister indicated, very inappropriately and inaccurately, that we did not speak.

Canadian agriculture deserves more protection than the Minister's word. Our amendments to Clause 14 and related clauses of the Bill would have provided the protection that the Canadian agri-food industry needs. The Minister has discounted our concerns and the concerns of many farm groups across the country. He said that the adoption of four or five amendments by the committee should ease our concern. Certainly we appreciate the amendments that were accepted by the Government, but these were technical amendments, in essence, and not very substantive. One amendment dealt with a language change and he had no option but to accept our other amendment because it was simply a reminder that the amendment was necessary to make Canagrex compatible with Crown corporation legislation.

Let there be no doubt that the intent of our more substantive amendments dealt specifically with the removal of powers to buy and sell and engage in joint ventures. That is the thrust of our amendments and it is unfortunate that it required about 14 or 15 amendments. We cannot be blamed for that because we did not write the Bill. The Minister's advisers wrote the Bill and in our response to make certain that these powers were removed it was necessary for us not simply to introduce one amendment to Clause 14 but to introduce a number.

Despite the Minister's promises, Canagrex could become a power unto itself. The Auditor General does not offer sufficient protection against abuses by Canagrex. He only reports on the financial accountability of Crown corporations. He does not examine whether politics interfere or have influence on commercial dealings and decisions. As well, his reports can be ignored. For example, his report questioned the benefit to the Canadian taxpayers of Petro-Canada's purchase of Petrofina, and his inability to get sufficient information from Petro-Canada gives us some idea of the shortcomings of the powers of the Auditor General and his Department.

The need for Parliament to approve Canagrex' budget does not offer sufficient protection either. Parliament can certainly ask questions about it, but bearing in mind majority Governments, these budgets always receive approval in the end.

As well, the ability of Parliament to review corporate plans does not offer sufficient protection. Canadair had a corporate plan and it cost the Canadian taxpayer some $1.5 billion. The five-year review also does not offer sufficient protection against Canagrex abuses. The review is simply that; it is a parliamentary review. It is not a sunset clause. I know that my colleague from Moose Jaw (Mr. Neil) had very vigorously pursued the opportunity to implement a real sunset clause. Of course, it was denied.

Some farm groups have urged that the board of directors of Canagrex include a majority of producers in order to protect their interests. However, there is nothing in the Bill which requires this. Instead, the board will be appointed at the discretion of Cabinet and it would therefore not be too surprising to think that political contracts rather than agricultural knowledge would be involved in the selection.

In this respect it is rather interesting to recall that the Minister is always standing in the House and on public platforms across the country saying that various organizations support him. He says that a majority of producers support him. That is nonsense. He is inaccurate. I have heard him stand in the House on a number of occasions to say that he has the complete support of the largest farm organization in Canada, meaning the Canadian Federation of Agriculture. That is not absolutely true. The fact is that the position of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture is that they are supportive of this legislation but they place a condition upon it. That condition is that the majority of the people on the board of directors be producers. Again, the Minister of Agriculture cannot stand in the House and give us that commitment. When it comes to the bottom line, he obviously does not have the complete and full support of the largest farm organization in the country, the Canadian Federation of Agriculture.

I am sure that the greatest disservice the Minister has imposed on the Canadian agricultural industry could be Canagrex. In the first clause of the Bill he has imposed the unpopular and potentially disastrous buy and sell powers. It is my opinion and indeed that of those farm organizations which particularly have had some considerable experience in the export of agricultural products in the export market that the most important part of the Bill is the need for export credits and insurance. That is what the Canadian agricultural industry needs. That is what the Canadian agricultural organizations need. They do not need the buy and sell powers; they need export credits and export insurance. That is the guts of the Bill.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

• (1200)

Mr. Wise: Mr. Speaker, I want to conclude by saying that the buy and sell powers are not needed. The agricultural groups did not urge and have not been urging—those people have been somewhat supportive—the passage of this Bill because of the buy and sell powers, not at all. They have been urging the support of this Bill on the basis of the need for export credits and insurance.

The Minister has said that the Canadian agricultural exporters have not been doing an effective job. He has claimed they have missed too many opportunities. I am going to be very honest with you, Mr. Speaker. I had some mixed feelings about the job that some of our Canadian exporters were doing; but after having provided them an opportunity to come before the committee and to hear some of the evidence and to see some of the results of some of the private exporters and some of the agricultural organizations, particularly those in western Canada, I certainly had no doubts in my mind, when I saw the results, that many of the private organizations were doing an excellent job. They could have been doing a better job, I am sure, if they had been provided the export credits and the export insurance. That is what is needed.

We do not need a Government buying and selling through a Crown corporation. We do not need this Government agency interfering with the marketplace. The Liberal Government has abundantly and clearly shown in the oil industry that it is not able to do better than, or even do a comparable job to, the private sector; yet the Minister refused to consider these arguments. They were made by all members on the committee. They were made by the majority of farm organizations which appeared before the committee.

What is the purpose of bringing witnesses before the standing committee? In my opinion and in our Party's opinion, I am certain the purpose is to talk to the people working in this specific area day in and day out. Those are the people who really know what is going on, not the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) or the agricultural critic. The committee provides an excellent opportunity to get up-to-date, accurate information on what is going on in the international field. We have done that. We got the message loud and clear; there is no question about that at all. The message almost without exception was that we did not need the buy and sell powers in Canagrex.

I stand to be corrected because this was a long time ago, but I do recall that the Canadian Cattlemen's Association, if they had had a choice, probably would have opted not to have this legislation at all. The second organization—and the Minister brags and boasts about having the largest organization supporting this Bill, which is nonsense and garbage—is the Consumers Association of Canada. That is the largest lobby organization there is in this country. The Consumers Association represents 300,000 farmers and 24 million people. That was the largest organization which made a presentation to us in committee. This organization would have preferred to have Canagrex killed and not to have surfaced at all.

What did the Minister do? He completely ignored this accurate, up-to-date information. Instead he launched and spent several thousand dollars in the preparation of a publication called "Canagrex-Responding to the Need". He tried to make the claim that he speaks on behalf of Canadian agriculture. That is absolute nonsense. He has completely ignored the input we received in committee. We did not ignore it. We got the message loud and clear. I had some doubts about how effective this corporation could be. There is no question that it is going to become a reality. The Liberals have a majority and they can do what they want.

Mr. Epp: And the Minister is.

Mr. Wise: And the Minister is doing what he wants, as my colleague from Provencher (Mr. Epp) accurately responds. We got the message. People do not want the powers of buy and sell.

Let me get back to Canagrex responding to the need. This is another example of wasteful Liberal Government spending, the spending of several thousands of dollars of taxpayers' money. In the eyes of this publication Canagrex has no problems. It is that little piece of legislation containing some 40 pages. Canagrex is equated with the salvation of agricultural products exporters. Just talk to the agricultural products exporters and see if they look upon Canagrex as being the salvation of their industry, Mr. Speaker. It even contains two—probably the only two—editorials which have appeared in support of Canagrex. I questioned the Minister through Order Paper Question No. 4,529 as to why the publication did not include any of the more than 20 editorials which had appeared at that time condemning Canagrex. The Minister responded that such editorials could not be found. He responded that none could be found.

I question the accuracy of that response. If this marks the level of his research—and I have a higher regard for his research than that—then I can understand why his cabinet colleagues do not take him seriously and why they have tried to suppress many of his initiatives.

In order to help the Minister, I would like to point out to him some of the editorials which, indeed, have been missed. Does the Minister or his officials not monitor the Saskatoon Star-Phoenix? It covers a wide agricultural area. On June 8, 1982, the Saskatoon Star-Phoenix in an editorial wrote:

> Given the breadth of opposition it's difficult to imagine who, outside of Whelan and his bureaucrats, supports the proposal.

There, Mr. Minister, is an editorial that appeared in the Star-Phoenix June 8, 1982. It is interesting to note that on July 6, 1982 someone by the name of Eugene Whelan wrote a response to this editorial indicating it was wrong.

An Hon. Member: Eugene who?

Mr. Wise: Eugene Whelan.

Mr. Kempling: Who is he?

Mr. Wise: The Minister should be concerned about someone using his name since this is one of the editorials which he claimed he had not found.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

In an editorial in the Edmonton Journal on June 4, 1982, we read:

> Given the current mistrust of state management, and of the long term plans of Ottawa bureaucrats, perhaps the correct response is to confine Canagrex to export promotion. It should prove itself capable of walking before it runs.

I could not agree more with that editorial from the Edmonton Journal.

An Hon. Member: Did Eugene Whelan write that?

Mr. Wise: I do not think the Minister wrote that editorial, Mr. Speaker.

The Minister could have missed those editorials written in the larger urban newspaper, but surely the Minister would have read the editorial of May, 1982 that appeared in the Country Guide. It reads:

> Once again Eugene Whelan has been unable to distinguish between the important and the totally insignificant. After 10 years the farm community has become accustomed to this, one can but hope, however, that cooler heads prevail and Canagrex is killed before it multiplies.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Wise: I am sure the Minister would not have missed the editorial in Agriweek which appeared in May, 1983. It reads:

> Mr. Whelan's eagerness to establish still another bureaucracy has outdistanced any effort to diagnose the real cause of our sputtering food exports. As a result, he has developed a sizeable multi-faceted organization without first defining precisely the problems to be solved. In his zeal to do something, Mr. Whelan has devised a plan based on good intentions and motherhood statements and one that reveals an astounding lack of rigorous thinking.

• (1210)

In the July editorial that appeared in Food Canada last year, it was indicated that Bill C-85 was too loosely written and too open-ended. Also it indicated that the restraints on such a federal corporation, if it must exist, should be spelled out in clear terms; otherwise Canagrex could indeed become "Canagarbage".

These are only a few editorials that appeared prior to the end of August, 1982, the date of the last editorial in the publication "Canagrex responding to the need". I am not surprised they were not included in the publication. However, I am amazed that the Minister would have the arrogance to say that he never saw any of the opposing editorials. Has he seen or read any of the more than 100 editorials and articles which condemned Canagrex? I am sure he has. If not, I would be very happy to send the Minister copies of them. I think it is important to indicate that even papers which originally—

Mr. Whelan: Some editorial writers do not know anything about agriculture.

Mr. Wise: The Minister says that some papers do not know anything about agriculture. I would disagree, but I would also be inclined to agree that many of them do, and a lot of them come from large urban areas. I would not like to make the statement the Minister made, that most farm papers do not know much about agriculture.

Mr. Whelan: I said "editorial writers".

Mr. Wise: Even papers which originally endorsed Canagrex have had second thoughts. Not only newspapers and farm papers but many farmers and farm organizations, not knowing much about it, were originally impressed with the efforts of the Government to establish a greater priority in the export of agricultural products. Everybody supports that. We support that. There is no question about that. There are many ways in which this can be done. Many farmers and their organizations support the facilitating aspect of Canagrex. My Party and I support that, there is no question about it. Many farmers and agricultural organizations support the need for export credits and export insurance.

There is no question about the fact that there is such a need out there. I support that, we support that, but it comes down to the bottom line. Some of us have doubts about the buy and sell powers. There is no question about that either. After going through committee and obtaining the information and the feelings of individuals in farm organizations, there should be no question about the message out there. They support the things about which I talked earlier. There is no question about the fact that they do not support it, including the Canadian Federation of Agriculture which placed a condition on it. Even farm papers which originally endorsed Canagrex have had second thoughts. There is a prime example. Originally Farm and Country endorsed Canagrex, although it recommended that it should be subject to a sunset clause or a sunset law. That was the position of Farm and Country at the beginning of this debate. In the interval they have had an opportunity, the same opportunity as my colleagues and I and the same opportunity as the Minister and his colleagues, to hear credible witnesses, people who are in the business, make their pitch and presentation. There should be no question about that whatsoever. Any thinking person, any person with respect for information supplied by people who know what they are talking about, should take the same position we have or the same position which Farm and Country took on January 18, 1983, at which time its editorial called upon the Minister to compromise on the buy and sell powers. After having an opportunity to look at the Bill, Farm and Country indicated that the Minister should compromise on the buy and sell powers.

Another excellent recommendation in that editorial was the suggestion that these powers should be hoisted for five years so that Canagrex could prove its worth as a promoter and facilitator. If it could prove its worth, if it could be demonstrated at the time of the parliamentary review that it needed the power to buy and sell, we would have been in a very difficult position to deny the Minister. But again the Minister ignored that common sense advice.

A short time ago I read a rural magazine wherein the Essex Federation of Agriculture asked an independent lawyer to look at the Bill.

Mr. Whelan: A good lawyer but a good Conservative too.

Mr. Wise: If he is a good Conservative, that makes his advice more valid.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Wise: I do not have the article in front of me, but the solicitor from Windsor spoke to the Essex County Federation of Agriculture and put forth the same cautions which we are putting forth today. In fact, coming from St. Thomas, an old railroad city, the solicitor recommended that the farmers of the country should take a little railroad advice. I know what he meant by that. It was a little stop, look and listen. The Minister would do well if he followed the advice we have attempted to give him over the last two years. He would do well if he followed the advice of the legal advisers of the Department of Justice. He would do well if he followed the advice of most agricultural organizations in the country. He would do well if he followed the advice of a solicitor from his own home town.

I recognize that my time is unlimited, but I wanted to use this opportunity to make our position very clear once again. I am certain that our position is very clear across the country; there is no question about that. Hon. Members on this side of the House have put a great deal of energy and effort into trying to inform farm groups in all regions of the country exactly what are the dangers of the Bill. They have done an excellent job. From reading the mail I continue to receive on a daily basis, there is no question in my mind that farmers and people in the agri-food industry know the dangers of the Bill.

I am extremely disappointed that the Minister has not taken that advice. He has represented the farm community since 1972. That is a long time. It is a very sad day for me, particularly when the message is so clear and he turns his back on the people he represents. If he would have removed the powers to buy and sell, indeed if he would have taken that position from the beginning, we would not be debating the Bill today. I am certain that with the removal of the powers to buy and sell and to engage in joint ventures, we would not be debating the Bill today. I am certain that it would be in place. In doing so, no doubt we would have been farther down the road in providing something which the Canadian agri-food industry needs to increase the exportation of agricultural commodities.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Whelan: Mr. Speaker, I want to ask the Hon. Member for Elgin (Mr. Wise) several questions. In 1979 he was interviewed by a newspaper which has some good farm reporting, the London Free Press, at which time he was asked what the top priority of his department would be. He replied:

• (1220)

Agriculture exports will be my top priority. It is a springboard from which we can with planning and effort continue to expand our export market opportunities. One tool that will be used to increase exports is the recently announced agriculture export corporation which will sell Canadian foodstuffs abroad.

That is a very good paper. I have several other questions; I will put them as quickly as I can. Members opposite continue to say that the Minister will pit one area of Canada against the other and possibly give special privileges to them by working with Canagrex. Has he considered what Alberta is doing at the present time with subsidies to the canola crushers? Also, there is a $9 a ton freight subsidy. I am sure the Hon. Member is aware that Saskatchewan and Manitoba have made representations to the federal Government asking for the same kind of assistance. They cannot afford that kind of assistance which amounts to almost $49 a ton when you add it all up. That is the assistance they are getting for those products. They are not just for export. This gives them a tremendous advantage over the other canola crushers and producers in other regions. Does he not consider that preferred action? That is Government action.

Does the Hon. Member not know what Tony Saretsky said inthe Agriculture Committee with regard to the Alberta Cattle Commission? I believe it is purebred cattle they deal in, the Canadian Breeders' Association. He said they had to have the operative power to buy and sell and they went back and got the power to buy and sell. The Canadian Federation of Agriculture is like Parliament or any other organization. It is a democratic organization. When the majority make a decision to support Canagrex or any other proposition that is put before them, that is democracy in action. Overall they represent about 200,000 people. It is true that some of their members are saying that they have certain reservations about Canagrex and this type of thing.

He challenged me to appear before other boards such as the soybean board, the white bean board, the tobacco board and my own county Federation of Agriculture. I have met them. They still are very strong supporters of Canagrex. I also met with the Canada Pork Council which is still supporting Canagrex and the authority that it has to buy and sell, et cetera.

Also he spoke about my county. I have addressed my own county Federation of Agriculture. He also spoke of a lawyer. Does he realize that when he was a student in law school we were commercial operators picking sweet corn for Green Giant? Therefore we know one another very well.

Does he also realize that the Essex County Federation of Agriculture withdrew their concerns after I addressed them? They said that was satisfactory to them as long as their Member of Parliament and Minister stated it. Is he aware of that? Is he aware that the lawyer he spoke of has been a long-time friend? In a democracy, even friends can disagree.

Mr. Wise: Mr. Speaker, the Minister began by reading, I think very accurately, a response to a comment that I had made to the report in the London Free Press. The accuracy of that report is right on. It is complete. There is no question about the fact that, when I assumed the job as Minister of Agriculture of this country, there was a very definite attempt and thrust to improve agricultural products in the export market.

There were a number of ways to do this. The first way was to give that subject a higher priority in the Department of Agriculture. We began to do that. The other way was to place greater authority and jurisdiction within the Department of Agriculture itself. The Minister knows that if you are dealing in the export market, you are not only dealing with Ag-Canada, you are dealing with Industry, Trade and Commerce, Finance and External Affairs. This becomes pretty cumbersome. You can certainly streamline this and provide greater results for Canadian agriculture if you have more of a consolidation and more of the decision making within Ag-Canada. That is one way. We were working toward that. The Minister cannot deny that; he knows it.

The second way in which we began to move was to increase the number of trade commissioners and trade officers in our embassies around the world. It is very difficult to get these people, no question about it. However, in the very brief time we did hold office we increased the number of trade commissioners and trade officers in our trade offices specifically and totally responsible for the promotion of agriculture products in foreign markets. We did achieve that.

Now, Mr. Speaker, this is where the confusion comes in. I did not deal with this in my speech because I was certain someone would ask a question about it. I refer to the area of a special agency or corporation; at that point we really did not know. Certainly a great deal of effort was made within the Department. A couple of submissions were made with respect to the establishment of an agriculture products export agency, call it what you want.

The Minister and indeed some of my colleagues in the New Democratic Party have been attempting to associate me with Canagrex as it is today. That is false. It is not true. I had never heard of "Canagrex". I did not put the name Canagrex on this Bill and the Minister knows it. The Minister can either take the credit or bear the responsibility, depending on what the future holds, for the word Canagrex and the Crown corporation Canagrex. He knows that. There is no doubt about the fact that we were working in that area. We knew that Canadian agriculture had to have an agency or some type of unit which would provide the much needed export credit which had always been denied to agricultural commodities by the Export Development Corporation. Canadian farmers do not have the benefit of the Export Development Corporation. It does not insure for food products and they also needed the benefit of export insurance.

We had no problems with that whatsoever. We were coming to the conclusion that it appeared that in an effort to provide those export credits and export insurance coverage, we could not do it within a division of Ag-Canada. It was doubtful whether we could do it at an agency level. It appeared that we would probably need a Crown corporation to provide the export credit and the export insurance.

I cannot say any more than that. The Minister knows that for me to say more would be breaking a Privy Council oath. I want him to nod positively to me now that he knows that.

Mr. Whelan: I was not referring to Privy Council.

Mr. Wise: This is important. The Minister has played political mischief with this question, as have some of my colleagues in the NDP. I am not going to go any further than that, but I will tell you one thing Mr. Speaker. Even if we had brought in Bill C-85 in its present form, even if I would have called it Canagrex, after hearing 32 witnesses before the committee and getting the telegrams, telephone calls and representations which I and other Members of my Party have received, if I sat over there I would have withdrawn months ago the power to buy and sell. I challenge him, dammit, to do the same thing.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

• (1230)

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The time for questions and answers has expired but may be continued with the unanimous consent of the House. Is there unanimous consent to extend the time for questions and answers?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Whelan: Mr. speaker, the Hon. Member for Elgin put a challenge to me and I acknowledge what he said about his oath of office as a Privy Councillor. That is fact. For instance, in The Western Producer of June 14, 1979—

Mr. Wise: Answer the question.

Mr. Whelan: I never used the word "Canagrex" today when talking about what the Hon. Member said and when I asked him the question. I said that he said it would expand our export market opportunities. As reported by the London Free Press:

> Wise has said one tool that will be used to increase export is the recently announced agricultural export corp.—

I did not use the word "Canagrex".

> —which will sell Canadian food products abroad.

On June 14, 1979, it was reported:

> The Progressive Conservative party compaigned on a pledge to concentrate on expanding markets for Canadian agricultural products and Wise says he wants to act quickly to complete efforts stated by former minister Eugene Whelan to establish an export marketing body for agriculture.

The Western Producer is one of the most widely read magazines in the farmer community.

If I were a farmer, I would not think that there was much difference of opinion between the Hon. Member for Elgin and myself at that stage of the game. That is what I would think if I was a farmer who read the most widely read magazine in the farming community.

The Hon. Member for Elgin also had some reservations. As reported by The Western Producer:

> Although Wise says his final decisions on these issues will have to await further briefings, his initial opinions put him in conflict with significant segments of the agriculture community.

That statement was presented to me. The Hon. Member made all kinds of statements and some of them have been put on the record. But when he says that he challenges me after having listened to the witnesses, I challenge him to serve the public, Mr. Speaker, as well as I have and as honestly as I have. How he interprets the witnesses who appeared before the committee in his opinion and how I interpret them is my opinion, and we have the right to our own opinions. I interpreted the results of the committee as being that the majority of people who appeared before that committee want the Canadian agricultural export corporation. Research done by my own officials, letters I have received, many of which I have not even made public, lead me to make that kind of judgment. I say, Mr. Speaker, that the majority of the agriculture producers in Canada want the Canadian agricultural export corporation. The Hon. Member has a different opinion. That is his right.

Again, I must refer to what the Hon. Member for Elgin said in committee: "You have been responsible, you have responded to our requests. It is on the records. I think I can sell this to my caucus." Then he could not sell it to his caucus. What was I to think? He said this after all of the witnesses had appeared before the committee in the final submission to the committee before its results went back to the House of Commons. What was I to think when the official agriculture critic of the Opposition said that at that time? That was before the matter had become politicized.

The brother-in-law of the Hon. Member sitting right across from me, the Hon. Member for Provencher (Mr. Epp), who is a potato producer in Manitoba, is a strong supporter of Canagrex in Manitoba. He knows the Canadian agriculture industry.

Mr. Epp: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Whelan) and I have had conversations about family members who are very dear to me. I do not think that the House of Commons is the place to raise these conversations. I say to the Hon. Minister that he knows very well that my brother-in-law agrees with some parts of Canagrex but has advised him to withdraw others. I would ask the Minister to be honest.

Mr. Whelan: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member's brother-in-law and I differ on politics, but we certainly agree on what should be done for agriculture. He has sent me letters and has made public speeches in favour of Canagrex. If he has any reservations that are contrary to my views, I am not aware of them. Any reservations that the Hon. Member's brother-in-law has have not been presented to me. I still respect the Hon. Member's brother-in-law. If he feels that I have offended him, I withdraw anything that would be offensive.

Mr. Bossy: Mr. Speaker, I reluctantly put a question to the Hon. Member for Elgin (Mr. Wise) whom I have respected for many years. I find it strange that he did not once mention the news release of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture. I would like to ask the Hon. Member whether he questions the sincerity, integrity and credibility of the President of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture when the President states in a press release of November 10, 1982:

> "Our agricultural industry desperately needs a corporation like Canagrex. It would be criminal to delay putting it in place because of petty politicking,"—

The new release goes on to say:

> Barrie stressed that the powers which would be granted to Canagrex are "not extraordinary', and rather than posing a threat to free enterprise, it would be most beneficial to smaller agricultural producer groups, which normally wouldn't be able to crack export markets.
> "Canagrex is absolutely essential if we are to fill the gaping void between our potential to produce and manufacture agricultural products for export, and our present performance,"—

This statement was made by the President of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, a strong federation, and backs up the strong pleas made by the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, and agricultural federation in Quebec and the National Farmers' Union. These are groups with strong memberships that represent farmers.

I must also ask the Hon. Member if, after having seen the embassy problem, the Petro-Canada problem and the Canagrex problem, this is a turnaround from what was stated in 1979 and what is being stated now, and whether the Opposition does not really know whether it is right to form a Canadian export corporation, as they have been very doubtful on many other things that they might have done.

Mr. Wise: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Kent (Mr. Bossy) asked a number of questions. He did refer to a long-time friend of mine, Ralph Barrie, the President of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture. I am not so sure who wrote that press release, but I think using the word "criminal" is using a little bit of overkil! and is overexaggeration. I am not so sure whether my friend Ralph Barrie would have used that word.

There is no question about the fact that the Ontario Federation of Agriculture led by Mr. Barrie has every right to put forth its views and opinions and its stand on Canagrex. I know what its position is; but on the other hand, looking at the position taken by the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, it can be seen that it is supportive of Canagrex but has attached a condition that the Minister cannot comply with. I have challenged the Minister and have invited him to make that commitment to the CFA. He cannot do that. He has had a number of opportunities to do that. He has had a year and a half to do that. Is the Minister asking me to turn my back on nine Provinces and to follow the advice of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture? Is he asking me to turn my back on 28 major national farm organizations plus all of the provincial Governments and turn instead to the Ontario Federation of Agriculture? I cannot do that.

I have talked to my constitutents in Elgin, some whom are supportive of Canagrex. Of course, all of them would feel better if it did not have the power to buy and sell. I have talked to constituents of my colleague, the Hon. Member for Kingston and the Islands (Miss MacDonald). I know of one lady, Mrs. Pyke, I believe it is, in that constituency who is very supportive of Canagrex. She would feel better if—

An Hon. Member: Just one?

Mr. Wise: Well, there are not many but I know that the Member for Kingston and the Islands does have one constituent who is in favour of it. There is no question about that. Even if I were to stand on my farm in Elgin County, Ontario, with a neighbour who is probably more supportive of Canagrex, as the agriculture critic for this Party and looking at the situation from an Ottawa point of view, I could not turn my back on all this opposition to Canagrex. I could not do that even though I may have a neighbour in southern Ontario who is supportive of it. That would be irresponsible. This is basically the same thing.

• (1240)

From a national point of view one has to listen to the advice not only from Ontario but from eastern and western Canada. I know that advice is mixed, Mr. Speaker. Then you have to decide. I have done that and I have decided in a responsible manner that the proper course of action would be to proceed without the power to buy and sell.

Personally I think the editorial in Farm and Country summed it up—give the power to buy and sell a five-month hoist, come back to Parliament in five years and if you can demonstrate you need it, that is the time to get it. But you must prove that you need the power to buy and sell.

We would not want to hamper in any way, shape or form any measure that would interfere with the process of expanding agricultural products in the export field.

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, I want to say a few words on third reading about the importance of the Bill before the House and the importance of agriculture to our economy.

When I look at the trade performance of Canada around the world, I see that in essence the trade missions of this country primarily push manufactured goods and resource products in foreign markets. The Canadian Manufacturers' Association and the resource associations of our country are very strong lobbyists and have connections with different associations around the world to push their products. I think it is therefore very important that Canadian farmers have an export agency that will push our agricultural products in the world. That exists for some commodities already. In general, the Canadian Wheat Board has been effective in selling our wheat.

I do not understand why the Conservative Party and some other people in the country are apprehensive about giving other farmers the same kind of opportunities that our grain farmers have to sell their products abroad. The legislation before the House today is voluntary; if certain producers do not like the legislation, they need not participate. If they want to sell their tomatoes or cucumbers in a different way, they can do so. They do not have to participate in Canagrex as it is not a compulsory organization.

After five years the legislation will be reviewed by Parliament and could easily be changed at that time. For those reasons I think we should give the legislation a fair chance.

At the same time, however, I wish the Minister would change a number of things in the Bill. For example, I wish he would allow the farmers of Canada to control and direct Canagrex. This point has been mentioned by the CFA. I wish he would make sure that the farmers of Canada will decide who will sit on the board of directors so that they can run the agency rather than a few bureaucrats in Ottawa doing so. They are often isolated from the reality of the real world. Perhaps that is a radical idea; perhaps it is economic democracy. It is an extension of political democracy into the economic field but I think we must go in that direction. I wish the Minister would agree.

I am afraid he is going to do what so often happens when the federal Government makes appointments to Crown corporations. A lot of old and dear friends are rewarded by being made directors. That is not the direction we want for Canagrex.

I hope the new agency will be successful. Agriculture is so important to everyone in the country.

[Translation]

These are difficult times, not only for Canada but for the whole world, from the economic point of view. We are now experiencing a world-wide recession, and not only that, we also have a lot of unemployment. Here in Canada, agriculture is one of our strongest sectors. Our producers are very good at what they do, very productive, and they need help in seeking international markets for their products. In the House today, we are considering a Bill that will provide that assistance. Mr. Speaker, our producers are faced with a great many problems. The United States and—

[English]

—the European Common Market and some other countries in the world are very protectionist about their farmers. The United States has a massive subsidy program of over $12 billion per year to support agricultural production in that country. The Europeans have a tremendous system of price support, price guarantees and subsidies for their farmers. Our grain farmers face tremendous disadvantages because of distance from ports and because other countries pay even more massive subsidies to their grain farmers than we do with the Crow rate.

We need an export agency that will find new markets for our agricultural products. I believe that is very, very important. This legislation will offer the country an opportunity to diversify in agriculture and to take some of the smaller, specialty crops that do not have much clout on the international market and find markets for them. The agency can be the vehicle that will allow the small to participate, allow the small to find a market, allow the small to grow and expand. That is very, very important. This legislation will offer an opportunity to encourage exports.

The other point is that Canagrex is not a very big agency, Mr. Speaker. If I understand correctly, the budget is $4 million per year for the next three years, so it is not going to be a large agency.

Those are some of the reasons I think it is important that Canagrex be given an opportunity. I have also been looking at who is supporting and who is opposing Canagrex. The principle is supported by the Canadian Federation of Agriculture and many of the provincial Federations of Agriculture. The Hon. Member for Elgin (Mr. Wise) mentioned that the Ontario Federation of Agriculture supports it and most provincial marketing boards also support it, as does the National Farmers Union. It is opposed by some of the more reactionary, right-wing and conservative farm organizations, such as the Palliser Wheat Growers Association and organizations of that kind.

In my riding I know that people support orderly marketing and they support the Canadian Wheat Board as being an aggressive sales agency for farmers in world markets. Most farmers want that kind of opportunity for other commodities. I repeat, Mr. Speaker, the agency is a voluntary one.

The other point is that the Standing Committee on Agriculture was persuaded to accept an amendment by the Hon. Member for Prince Albert (Mr. Hovdebo) to the effect that the Auditor General may do a comprehensive audit at any time he or she wishes. This will make Canagrex one of the most accountable Crown corporations we have in this country.

• (1250)

I believe, Mr. Speaker, that is very important because something which dismays me as an Hon. Member of this House, having been here since 1968, is that I find that federal Crown corporations in the main are not accountable to Members of Parliament. In the main, federal Crown corporations are agencies which look after themselves, which are accountable to a certain Minister or to the federal Government, and I believe that has to change. I feel that to have true parliamentary democracy Crown corporations must be accountable to this institution, to this place.

In my own Province of Saskatchewan, for example, for many, many years now we have had what is called a Crown corporations committee, a committee established by the then Premier, Tommy Douglas, in the CCF Government back in the 1940s or early 1950s. All of the annual reports of the Crown corporations must go to the Crown corporations committee. That committee has the power to call in the presidents of the Crown corporations, and other people from the Crown corporations, and grill them, cross-examine them, and quiz them on what their plans are for the future and how they have handled their work in the years which have gone by.

I feel, Mr. Speaker, that is something which this House should be doing as well, making sure that our Crown corporations are much more accountable in the future than they have been in the past. Perhaps in this piece of legislation we have taken one small step in that direction.

Something which I have already mentioned is that I believe farmers themselves should be on the board of directors. I believe that farmers themselves should choose the people who go on the board of directors of Canagrex. I believe that is very important in terms of understanding the agricultural industry. It is very important in terms of doing what the farmers of this country really want.

I feel, therefore, Mr. Speaker, with a number of reservations, that the legislation before the House is something which should, if properly administered and given a proper chance, be something positive for a lot of the small producers, something positive for a lot of producers who are producing some of the specialty crops in this country. I stress that if they do not like it, they can get out of it. It is voluntary and after five years the House of Commons will once again have an opportunity to review the legislation.

However, I feel it is very important that we give agriculture as much assistance as possible. For too long in this country, government after government has been placing its priorities, its money and its assistance in the baskets of the large company, the large manufacturers, the large resource companies, in the hope this would create a strong and vibrant Canadian economy. That has not happened. One of the sectors which has been very strong throughout all of this has been agriculture and I feel we are going to have to give them more and more assistance. The Economic Development Corporation, for example, does not assist agriculture. It assists the manufacturers. It assists the big in this country. There are many other Crown corporations such as the Canadian Commercial Corporation which will assist manufacturing, processing and resources in this country, but once again will not assist Canadian agriculture.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I appeal to the House to give this legislation a chance. I appeal to the Minister to be a lot more generous in terms of accepting amendments which Canadian farmers want, to democratize Canagrex, and to keep Canagrex as an agency which is more in touch with the ordinary Canadian producers. I believe that if he does that and is a little more co-operative, then perhaps this is an experiment which can work for each and every one of us.

This might be a very good thing, not only for our producers across Canada but also for the entire country, in years to come.

Mr. Whelan: Mr. Speaker, is the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom) aware that the Hon. Member for Elgin, when he was questioned about whether farmers would constitute the majority of the members on the board, expressed strong reservations, and said he thought perhaps it should be people who are in the export business, are knowledgeable in the export business, and so on?

Mr. Nystrom: Mr. Speaker, I was not aware of that. First of all, I certainly disagree with the Hon. Member for Elgin. I believe farmers should be running this agency. Farmers know best. I believe farmers have a lot of expertise when it comes to the export business. I must say that I am not surprised. We have had a history of Government in this country, whether Liberal or Conservative, where bureaucrats or people from private industry, people with big bucks, have attempted to control Crown corporations and all kinds of Government agencies. When the Hon. Member makes that kind of statement it is not a surprise at all to me, Mr. Speaker.

However, I feel we must now go in the other direction.We must move towards really democratizing this country, making sure that ordinary workers, farmers and consumers, ordinary people, will be able to make important economic decisions in Canada. I believe for all too long we have tended to think that the important ecnomic decisions should be made by people who have the big bucks. If you are wealthy, if you are the president of a company, all of a sudden you have tremendous credibility. Company presidents and others in this country who have alot of money, Mr. Speaker, the extreme rich and the privileged of this country, have over the years made many, many mistakes. I would trust the farmers and the ordinary workers a lot more than I would trust the corporate elite in this country. Perhaps in the next few years we will recognize that people with certain experience in the big business community are not the best thing for the ordinary citizens of Canada.

Mr. Wise: Mr. Speaker, I really rise on a point of order rather than to pose a question to my colleague, the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom), because I believe he was somewhat misled. I was having a discussion with the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister in an effort to reach some type of agreement in the reduction in time required for speakers and enable us to get more people on. I thought I heard the Minister quote an article where I said I did not want farmers on the board. That, of course, is very inaccurate. It is untrue. I said that the best thing that we could do is to make certain that on the board are those people who were the most qualified to serve on that board in the export field. So much the better if we can get those kinds of people from the farm industry. That is to say, I believe the best route to go is that the people who serve on that board should be the people most qualified to do so. There was certainly nothing in my thoughts that farmers should not be on that board. The Minister knows that.

Mr. Whelan: Speaking to the point of order, Mr. Speaker, I will send the Hon. Member the document where he was quoted. I am quoting from a document which says he does not agree with the former Government's proposal that the export agency be controlled by farmer members of the board. "He said his priority will be to have salesmen and marketing specialists on the board and any qualification as a producer will be secondary. This will run counter to the strong view of the Canadian Federatioan of Agriculture which resisted the initial proposal for an export agency until it has a commitment from Mr. Whelan that a majority of members would be farmers." I am quoting.

Mr. Wise: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, I do not know what document the Minister is quoting from, but I think perhaps it would be a good idea if he would send it across to me and I could determine its accuracy.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

PRESENCE IN GALLERY OF MARTIN BRIAN MULRONEY, LEADER OF PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVE PARTY

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Leader of the Opposition): Madam Speaker—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nielsen: Madam Speaker, I rise on the most legitimate question of privilege that the Chair will ever be privileged to hear. This is to introduce in the gallery the new Leader of the Progressive Conservative Party, Brian Mulroney, the next Prime Minister of Canada!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

Mr. André Maltais (Manicouagan): Madam Speaker, unlike the Premier of Quebec who was again being critical of one of our Members yesterday when he said that he was not a good Quebecer, I would like to extend, on behalf of the people of the North Shore, Baie Comeau, Sept-Îles and Schefferville my sincere congratulations to Mr. Mulroney and his family. I think he is a person of whom the North Shore can be proud, and what is good for the North Shore is, I believe, good for the entire country. I would like to show all Canadians that we are proud to have someone from the North Shore as Leader of one of Canada's major parties. Of course, it would be nice if he had been a Liberal, but I know Mr. Mulroney very well, and I am sure we will get along fine. Madam Speaker, I also hope he will visit Manicouagan for a round of political fencing, for instance.

[English]

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, I would like to extend on behalf of the New Democratic Party Caucus, and the Party as a whole, our sincere congratulations to Mr. Mulroney. We watched, with interest, the convention held last weekend and were as excited I suppose as everyone else at its climax and finality. We look forward to seeing him in the House of Commons.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. George Hees (Northumberland): Madam Speaker, may I ask if we can have a few words now from the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) to congratulate the new Leader of the Conservative Party?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Well, Madam Speaker, I can understand the interest of the Hon. Member. He is probably looking forward to collecting that bottle of scotch that he won betting on Brian Mulroney.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Trudeau: I can assure him that I will gladly follow his suggestion, first by saying that, as usual, the Hon. Member is a little bit late. I have already congratulated Mr. Mulroney. We entered the House of Commons Chamber together. I congratulated him most warmly, and his family and children.

I think it was a great convention that the Tory Party held. It certainly was most exciting for everyone in the country. I can only express my admiration for the winner having come through such a difficult and tumultuous convention. I congratulate the whole Tory Party for having held such an exciting event and in conformity with the democratic process.

As to Mr. Mulroney, as I say, we entered the door together this afternoon. I hope he will be entering regularly, and that his Party will soon find occasion to permit him to contest a seat so we can enjoy his presence also as a Member in the House of Commons.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Trudeau: Madam Speaker, I would not want to sit down without also adding a word of congratulations to Mr. Clark, who fought a tremendous battle. There are many differences, as one knows, between Mr. Clark and myself, but I cannot help but admire his courage, his stamina, and his dedication to the people of Canada.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

CROWN CORPORATIONS

EXAMINATION OF CANADAIR AND DE HAVILLAND SUPPLEMENTARY ESTIMATES

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Madam Speaker, by calling for the final day of supply as House business tomorrow, June 14, the Government has foreclosed Supplementary Estimates A. The Committees of this House have had precious little time to deal with these Estimates. There were no financial figures available for Canadair Limited until June 7. On that date the Committee managed to have only two meetings. Members have had virtually no opportunity to inquire into the need for that corporation to receive another $240 million.

The effect of tomorrow being an Opposition day totally prevents a realistic parliamentary inquiry into this Supplementary Estimate. The Committee has had no opportunity to look at de Havilland. The proper thing for the Government to do, if it believes in full disclosure and Parliament looking after the spending of money, is to delay the Opposition day until the week of June 27. That would be in accordance with precedent.

In the alternative, if the Government should specifically insist on an Opposition day tomorrow, it should withdraw the Estimates for Canadair and de Havilland, file new Supplementary Estimates, and allow the parliamentary process to work so that Parliament can have a chance to find out whether we should spend this money or not.

LABOUR CONDITIONS

STUDENT UNEMPLOYMENT LEVELS

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg-St. James): Madam Speaker, I want to remind this House that while the excitement of the Tory Convention dominated the news media last week, perhaps rightly so, the unemployment statistics came out as well. We must not forget amongst all this excitement that a great deal of human suffering continues in Canada. Unemployment is up since last year, and two things have been clearly indicated by these statistics. We have a very serious continuing problem of long-term unemployment, while the Government has brought in employment programs of short-term nature. Secondly, student unemployment this summer is up to an historic high. One in every five students seeking a job this summer cannot find work.

Now that the Liberal Government, in its last budget, shifted to the right in an attempt to undercut the Tory businessman style of politics, I call upon the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) to try to undercut the Tories' claim of compassion, by doing something real and immediate for students this summer.

And the Right Hon. Member for Yellowhead (Mr. Clark) having entered the Chamber, all Members rose in tribute.

And the Hon. Member for Etobicoke Centre (Mr. Wilson) having entered the Chamber:

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

And the Hon. Member for St. John's West (Mr. Crosbie) having entered the Chamber:

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

And the Hon. Member for Rosedale (Mr. Crombie) having entered the Chamber:

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

And the Hon. Member for York North (Mr. Gamble) having entered the Chamber:

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

• (1410)

Madam Speaker: I was wondering if I should evacuate all of the galleries, because people in the galleries should know that they are not allowed to demonstrate their feelings in any way.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

ISRAELI-ARAB CONFLICT—PREREQUISITES FOR NEGOTIATED SETTLEMENT

Mr. Claude-André Lachance (Rosemont): Madam Speaker, on the occasion of the official visit to Ottawa of Mayor Freije of Bethlehem and in view of the two extreme positions taken on the one hand by the Likud, which favours the Erez Yisra'el policy and on the other hand by the Palestinians, who are in favour of a secular Palestine in which Jews, Christians and Arabs would live together in the same secular state, it is perhaps a good time to emphasize the preliminary conditions for a negotiated settlement. First of all, mutual recognition of Israel by the PLO and of the PLO by Israel; second, Israel's recognition of the right of Palestinians to autonomous government on the West Bank and in the Gaza strip; third, an immediate stop to Israel's policy of establishing settlements on the West Bank; and finally, the adoption by all parties concerned of the Reagan plan as a basis for negotiations. Madam Speaker, I believe these are the only conditions under which a negotiated and peaceful settlement can be achieved for all the parties concerned.

ETHNIC AFFAIRS

BALTIC AND UKRAINIAN ECUMENICAL REMEMBRANCE SERVICE

Mr. David Kilgour (Edmonton-Strathcona): Madam Speaker, last week a large group of people held an ecumenical service at Notre Dame Basilica in Ottawa to commemorate the hiderous suffering of the Baltic-Ukrainian nations and the fiftieth anniversary of the famine in the Ukraine.

Archbishop Maxim Hermaniuk reminded us that approximately seven million human beings were murdered in the 1932-33 famine because they had dared to resist Joseph Stalin's collectivization of their farms. Their grain and vegetables were seized and, incredibly, exported to gain hard currency for the Soviet Union. In short, it was a merciless and deliberate act of genocide. The Right Rev. Bishop Vasylij of the Ukrainian Orthodox Church recounted that 1,150 priests, 30 bishops, and thousands of lay members of his church were murdered during the 1930s in Stalin's attack on religion.

It was also pointed out to those of us present that between 1941 and 1953 more than one million Balts were deported from their homelands by Soviet Communists.

The service was sponsored by the Ottawa branches of the Estonian Society, the Latvian National Federation, the Lithuanian Canadian Community and the Ukrainian Canadian Committee, supported by the Byelorussian Canadian Alliance, the Czechoslovak National Association, the Hungarian Bartock Society, the Polish Congress, and the Slovak National League.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

EXECUTION OF FORMER PRIME MINISTER OF HUNGARY—TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Madam Speaker, on June 16, 1958, the former Prime Minister of Hungary and his cabinet colleagues were executed for their role in the Hungarian Revolution of 1956. Their remains, along with those of the many others similarly put to death, were buried by the authorities in numbered graves. The location of these burial sites remains a state secret to this day.

On the eve of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the execution of Mr. Nagy and his associates, the Canadian Government should appeal to the Hungarian Regime to observe basic human decency and adhere to the principles of human rights embodied in the Helsinki Agreement's Final Act, by responding to repeated pleas for the identification of the graves and for permission to reinter the remains at a final resting place of their survivors' own choosing.

At the same time, of course, the Canadian Government should always be doing everything it can to protest and help abate the oppression and persecution of current dissidents within the Soviet Union, Eastern Europe, and the Baltic States. In particular may I remind the Government of the plight of two young women, Olha Heyko and Iryna Ratushynska, who face 12 years' imprisonment each for "anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda", and remind the Government of the need for representations to be made on their behalf.

FISHERIES

RESTRUCTURING OF EAST COAST FISHING INDUSTRY—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Elmer M. MacKay (Central Nova): Madam Speaker, I had hoped to direct my question to the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans with whom I had discussions about the Atlantic fisheries. In his absence, perhaps the Chairman of the Cabinet Committee on Economic Development, or even the Prime Minister, could indicate the latest view of the Government on the restructuring of the fleet and the refinancing of the Atlantic fishing industry.

The Prime Minister, if he chooses to answer, I am sure knows that delay in this case is the deadliest form of denial. No one connected with this industry can have any certainty of purpose, and there are widespread fears that the Government is withholding its assistance to the industry in order to force the companies into a position where they may have to be nationalized.

I am sure that the Government is aware that the problems created by such an atmosphere of uncertainty in the industry must be addressed, particularly when the press has speculated that the aid will not be given until some time in July.

Can the Prime Minister, or someone in his Cabinet, tell the House and the country whether or not the Government will address the problem quickly? Is it in fact negotiating with the provincial Governments in order to transfer the problem there in return for several hundreds of millions of dollars, so that the provincial Governments will have to deal with problems which, according to speculation, could involve the closing of some individual plants?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Madam Speaker, I would only say Amen, to the first part of the question. It is a matter which I have been following quite closely in Cabinet for some time. I think the Hon. Member is expressing the kind of distress that I have also found on this side, that the matter has taken such a long period of time to settle.

The Government's intentions were made known well before the turn of the year. The rest has been a matter of very lengthy negotiations, not amongst ourselves since the Cabinet took the position many months ago, but because we did have to see the provincial Governments. We had to see the people in the industry, and we had to meet the representatives of the fishermen themselves.

I have in mind a recent agreement that was reached between our Minister and the Newfoundland Minister of Fisheries, only to be rejected by the provincial Cabinet. Therefore we had to go back to square one and look for other ways of making improvements to the whole fishing industry in a way which, hopefully, would be conductive to co-operation between the federal and provincial Governments, the business side and the fishermen's side, meaning the unions.

I repeat that it is not for want of desire or even intent on the part of the Government; it is because the negotiating process itself is a very lengthy one, as the Hon. Member must know from experience, when trying to get provincial Governments to agree amongst themselves and then with us.

INDEPENDENT PROCESSING FIRMS

Hon. Elmer M. MacKay (Central Nova): Madam Speaker, my supplementary question is directed either to the Prime Minister of the Chairman of the Economic Development Committee, who has arrived in the Chamber. I appreciate the Prime Minister's answer. I want to bring up another specific matter of concern in the Atlantic region, namely, the fate of the small independent processors and co-ops who have provided a degree of competition and stability to the industry in the past. I am thinking of some companies of which the Minister knows, such as Connors Brothers, United Maritime Fish, Abriel Fisheries Ltd., and so on. Anyone who thinks that the entire Atlantic fishery is in crisis should realize that, out of a total of 250 fish plants in Nova Scotia, 230 have done well.

What will happen in the future to some of these small independent processors who have been absorbed by the big conglomerates and dragged into financial ruin? Can the Minister give us some indication that the position of these independents will be protected? How does he propose to do that?

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Minister of State for Economic Development and Minister of State for Science and Technology): Madam Speaker, as the Hon. Member indicated, some of the small independents have done very well indeed. I am confident that they will continue to do so within a restructured fishery. As the Prime Minister has indicated, negotiations are proceeding at this very moment, as effectively as they have been for some months.

Furthermore, as the Hon. Member knows, the matter is extremely complex. There has to be a solution which will protect all of these interests and which will make the fishery economical and viable in the long term.

CABINET COMMITTEE DECISION

Hon. Elmer M. MacKay (Central Nova): Madam Speaker, I simply want to ask the Minister to assure us that, besides the inevitable delays and negotiations that the Prime Minister has referred to, the Cabinet committee members concerned have resolved any differences of opinion that they have, and are no longer split as reports have indicated, and that there will in fact be something done before July?

• (1420)

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Minister of State for Economic Development and Minister of State for Science and Technology): Madam Speaker, I do not know what kind of split the Hon. Member is referring to. The Cabinet committee gave a firm mandate to Mr. Kirby and the negotiating team, and Mr. Kirby has been proceeding to negotiate with all the interested parties pursuant to that mandate upon which there is unanimous agreement.

LABOUR CONDITIONS

UNEMPLOYMENT IN MANUFACTURING SECTOR

Hon. Bill Jarvis (Perth): Madam Speaker, may I direct my question to the Minister of Employment and Immigration who, I believe, will share my disappointment and concern with respect to the statistics revealed by the Canadian Government's survey of the labour force for the last six months. This now shows that unhappily within the manufacturing sector companies are not rehiring employees. Knowing the figures for the last six months, will the Minister be forthright in telling us his Department's estimates for the next six months with respect to those tens of thousands of workers in the manufacturing sector? Could he give us his prognosis of their opportunity for recapturing their jobs before the end of this calendar year?

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, always the question is what is in the eye of the beholder. What we should be very careful to take note of is that this is now the sixth straight month in which there has been employment gain, and that we have created close to 200,000 additional jobs in this country over the past six months. When you examine it, the pattern is one of very strong, very active performance in the economy. What we must be careful about doing is putting our emphasis on continuing that progress and that momentum, and not to fall into the trap of the Hon. Member of trying to pull that progress back.
