Now the Months Have Sped On

But that was six months ago. The rhythm long ago went out of the machine. So also the zip and the swing of the men; the big guns tugged up by their motors began to get in mud at places yet to get into action and do serious damage to the Belgian towns and monuments; the advancing columns of mechanical precision began to turn aside and to take to trenches; they were checked on the way to Paris; their new lines and new tactios came into operation; more men took to more trenches, and the big guns fired thousands and thousands of tons of ammunition. Things were changing and munition. Things were changing and contrary to expectations!

The Turks assumed the offensive the River Tehoruk district on March but were thrown back. The Russins captured an entire battery of the rise guns.

The allies began to appear in numbers and so act on a plan; a line of allies seemed to shape up wherever a line of invaders was found; more and more they all took to trenches; serious engagements occurred; thousands and thousands of men were moved down; delays occurred, the transport motors and big guns were getting stuck in the mud; bad roads came along; rivers began to swell; it was difficult to cross them, at times impossible to eross them. The best of the German generals were sent to the east. The kalser was rushing from the east to the west and back again in his flying express trains and in his high speed motors.

Two Campaigns and Two Hold-Ups

Two campaigns were raging, reverses were being met; two sets of bad weather and swollen streams; two great lots of were being met; two sets of bad weather and swollen streams; two great lots of prisoners to deal with. And the Sea Called

The German navy was bewildered. It didn't quite know what to do, but it was not doing much. Most of it was havened where it could do little and lose less. And the aircraft and the undersea boats were a source of anxiety; everything called more and more for generalship, for cam-paign planning, for keeping the machine in action, if not in rhythm. SHORNCLIFFE Camp, Eng., March 13.—In recent severe fighting along the Canadian front, with infantry and artillery operating, the Canadians have done exceptionally well. An officer who has just returned from the base in France states that two brigades were in a heavy action and attacked several companies of Prussians, whom they repulsed. It is reported that the Canadians were in a bayonet charge, but I cannot confirm this.

According to official figures, the Canadians suffered 34 casualties, including 15 killed, three who died of wounds and 16 wounded. The censor does not allow me to cable names.

the meantime Thaw was remanded to the Tombs.

The closing proceedings of court were enlivened by a personal encounter between John Lanyon, a private detective, in the employ of the attorney-general's office, and Sheriff Griff-hagen, of New York County. Lanyon resented this sheriff's orden barring him from the court room as a private individual, and after a dispute, it is said, struck the sheriff in the face.

This occurred while Justice Page was still on the bench, and as the jury was filing out of the room after having listened to the court stenographer's reading of portions of Thaw's testimony.

Detective Arrested.

Justice Page ordered Lanyon arrested, and he was locked up in contempt of court.

The verdict was reached quickly after the reading of that portion of Thaw's testimony which concerned his intent in escaping from Matteawan, as to whether he intended to commit a crime or thought that he was within his right, his own views as to his sanity and his assumption of all claim for the alleged conspiracy, exonerating the other four defendants. Upon advice of counsel, Thaw declined to comment on the verdict. His aged mother said she was "intensely pleased."

After the jury had been discharged Lanyon was brought into court. He apologized to Justice Page and to Sheriff Griffhagen and was released.

As soon as a Jull, prosaic week strikes the legislature the fancy of the members lighty tur s to thoughts' of adjournment. Those from the concession lines and rural districts begin to figure on their apring crops; those in town or city ridings snatch a few moments to conjure up visions of holidays at the seaside, or trips to the northern lakes. So uninteresting were some of the periods of the week that speculation on the possibilities of closing by Easter was hatched in the smoking rooms, and today same are convinced that the war session will conclude by that time. There is orily one reliable method, however, by which to gauge the length of a session, and that is the public accounts committee. When this august body runs low in material-proragation is in sight.

One of the most interesting studies in this connection during the next few weeks will be the breaking-in of the new chairman. T. Herb. Lennox of North York. The storms which have broken in this committee of late years established the reputation of Hon. G. The law states plainly that "No Public Laundry Work shall be done in a room used for Cooking or Preparing Meals." This law was enacted to prevent Chinese Laundrymen from living their domestic life among their work. A place where food is prepared and cooked gets dirty very quickly, as every housewife knows, and soon develops danger-

Do you care to leave it to Chinese Laundrymen to keep things "top side" in their kitchens? The SANITARY AUTHORITIES did not care to take the risk, so they passed their law. How much the Chinamen have done to obey it, you can imagine for yourself when you grasp the FACT that in the average Chinese Laundry the separate diningsign of a chair or other furniture—tightly-sealed windows, accumulated dust of months thick over the table, floor, everywhere—it is nothing more than a crude attempt to evade washing are heated (the only stove on the premises) can be seen pots and water for kettles and sugar, bread, rice, etc., and a confusion of culinary untidiness any clean housekeeper would not tolerate. Canadian Laundries obey the law to the letter. Why way?

Enclose Coupon (Signed) with a Trial Parcel or Mail Coupon to 186 Parliament Street

The Chinaman as an individual should receive IMPARTIAL CONSIDERA-TION, and the Public should have the privilege of seeing what the INSIDE of his laundry is like. Sign the coupon, and your name will be added to the petition that will go before the Municipal Government of Toronto, asking for a law that will compel every laundry in the city to allow Public Inspection of the Entire Area where the work is done.

LONDON, March 14.-At Harbor entrances and at other strategic points around the British Isles the admiralty aptability." has set miles of submarine traps to catch German underwater craft engaged in blockading England, Report has it that three submarines were caught during the first ten days of the blockade, but confirmation is lacking. Fishermen's Nets.

The traps set for submarines are not unlike gill nets used by fishermen. Malleable iron frames, 10 feet square, three frames joined, are sunk to a depth of 30 feet, suspended from immense buoys. The submarine is blind thing under water, steering by chart and compass. Entering one of these frames, its sides are causing the lower frame to buckle upward, catching the propellor. Thus held, the craft is in the position of a fish floundering in a net, and its oc-cupants are doomed. From time to time British sailors visit the buoys and inspect the frames, even the redoubtable W. J. Wylie were much as a flesherman would look af. ter his set lines.

NE of the very most interesting of the season's lectures at the Women's Art Association was held on Wednesday afternoon at the new galleries. Jarvis street, when Dr. Esther Van Deman, who is perhaps the foremost archaeologist on the continent and who has spent many years in the study of archaeology in the Roman Forum, spoke. The latter was the subject of her masterly address, in which she took her hearers in fancy to wander among the ancient ruins, over remnants of stone pavement placed by Augustus, and by the remains of what were once stately rosters and monument to Caesar. Clear lantern slides added delightfully realistic touches to the enthralling word picture. Before and after the lecture the visitors enjoyed looking over the four "one-man exhibits" which were on view. One of these was a group of characterful sketches from various spots in Europe and Canada, by Mrs. J. S. Ligman; a number of marines by Mr W. M. Cutts, and several foreign studies by Mrs. Gertrude Spurr Cutts and a group of attractive studies by Miss Kathleen Munn, who has recently returned from studying in Philadelphia. These charming small exhibits are a grout addition to the galleries.

choes From Parliament Hill

BY TOM KING

OTTAWA, March 13.—(Special.)— Election talk is about the only talk you hear to-day on Parliament Hill. No one pretends to know the mind of the Prime Minister, who is said to be in the situation of the viltage pastor who received a call from a city church. His little girl being asked what her father intended to do replied:

"That's My Corn"

What a Confession!

Something hits a shoe. There's a flash of pain, and the victim "My corn," pared and coddled for years, perhaps. It's as need-less as dirty hands.

A Blue-jay plaster, applied in a jiffy, would end that pain instantly. And the B&B wax that's in it would terminate the corn in two days.

dity church. His little girl being asked what her father intended to do replied:

"Pa is still praying for light, but Ma is packing up the furniture."

So the gossips say here that while the first minister is thinking it over his colleagues and followers are preparing for an early election.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier sounded the keynote of the Liberal campaign in his speech last Wednesday and yesterday A. K. Maclean, of Haifrax, moved to have all the army contract scandals referred to the Public Accounts Committee. The committee will look into the purchase of the submarines on the Pacific coast, the purchase of motor trucks, binoculars and medical suppression. Sir Rodolphe Forget talks about an election in May, but the Knight of Charlevoix and Montmorency is always confident, He laughs at the idea of a landslide for Laurier in the Province of Quebec...

S IR WILFRID was in great form last Wednesday when he presented his party's case against the government. His amendment conthe government. His amendment con-demning the budget and especially the impairment of the British preference, formally dissolved the party truce and next week for the first time this ses-sion the house will divide upon a want-of-confidence motion. The Lib-eral leader declared that the opposi-tion were strictly within their rights in criticizing the way in which the government proposed to increase the revenue, and the way in which the money already appropriated had been expended. The Liberals were not there, the said, to silently register the decrees expended. The Liberals were not there, he said, to sliently register the decrees of the government. The opposition must consider itself as deputed to guard against any wasting of the nation's manhood or treasure. He did not complain that the opposition leaders had not been called to the councils of the government, as had been done in England, but the government having conducted the war and prepared the budget entirely upon their own responsibility must not now complain responsibility must not now complain if he and his followers, representing nearly half the people of Canada. called them to account.

Sir Wilfrid gilded somewhat ginger-ly over the general tariff changes, but seized upon the issue presented by the increase in duties upon British imports. He was careful to avoid the word "preference"; he planted himself upon the proposition that a 5 per centincrease in the customs tariff threw up additional barriers against British trade. Canada was, therefore, joining with Germany in destroying British commerce, altho it was upon British commerce that the result of the war

Canadian Government. Is this what we had reason to expect? Is this the policy which my hon friends ought to have adopted under such circumstances as those with which we are now confronted? When the policy of decreasing the duties on British goods was adopted in 1897, it was adopted as a bond of union as well as an economic measure, and everybody will agree that it has been reasonably successful. It has increased our trade with Great Britain in such a way as we never expected it would; it has more than doubled our imports; it has more than quadrupled our exports;

I would remind them that four years ago, when we wanted, not to let well enough alone, but to make well enough better than it was, when we wanted to improve our trade relations with our neighbors in the United States, one of the arguments of our opponents was that freer trade with the United States meant the prevention of freer trade with Great Britain.

I would remind them that there are only two countries with which we trade to any great extent, Great Britain and the United States; and I call the attention of the house to the strange conduct of the victorious party who four years ago would not let us sell to the United States and who this year will not let us buy from Great Britain.

But these are war times, and it is not the occasion to discuss economic problems. Great Britain is at war, Canada is at war, and when Great Britain is at war, and when Canada is at war, to attempt to curtail the trade between Canada and Great Britain is not a Canadian idea; it is at best a German conception.

INANCE Minister White made a speech in reply, which carried the war into Africa. The house stood aghast at the terrible burden of debt we had inherited from the Laurier government. $125,000,000 had to be found by the finance minister almost at once to meet commitments of reckless railway legislation. The Laurier speech he denounced as "demagogic," and contended that the new budget increased instead of diminished the British preference. He spoke with great force and energy, and the Conservatives have never been in better humor since George E. Foster delivered his memorable speech on the naval aid bill in 1912.

Mr. White opened strong, grew naval aid bill in 1912.

Mr. White opened strong, grew stronger, and could have made a garrison finish by six o'clock. He was, perhaps, a little fatigued, but it was unnecessary that the prime minister suggested he should conclude his speech at the evening sitting, and Mr. Speaker, therefore, left the chair a little ahead of the usual time, at which the bouse recesses for dinner

W HAT happened between a quar-ter to six, and eight o'clock can only be surmised, but Mr.
White made almost a new and somewhat different speech. He reviewed at length Sir Wilfrid's attitude on the at length Sir Wilfrid's attitude on the naval defence question, and all but charged that something like remorse prompted the Liberal leader's solicitude for the British preference. He announced with authority that the government stood ready to appeal for a fresh mandate from the people. The "provocative peroration," of which the Liberals complained, and which they at the time interpreted as threatening an appeal to the country, is thus reported: ported: My right hon, friend has suggested

My right hon, friend has suggested my motive in increasing the preferential rate. I wonder if it would be out of order if I suggested his motive in movin his amendment. I may be wrong, but I have a very clear idea as to what I think the right hon, gentleman's motive is in introducing his amendment. Let me ask my right hon-friend if there is anything upon his heart, or his conscience, that induces him to move this amendment. I would ask my right hon, friend to take the drama of Macbeth and refer to the sleep-walking scene in the fifth take the drama of Macbeth and refer to the sleep-walking scene in the fifth act, in which Lady Macbeth, looking upon the hand that has slain King Duncan, says: "All the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten that little hand." and understand. They desire this government to carry on this war with all its heart and all its soul and all its strength. This is what we propose to do. This we conceive to be our mandate from the people of Canada. If the right honorable the leader of the opposition doubts whether we have this mandate, let him say so. My right honorable friend may rely upon it that we shall not fall to take all necessary measures to ensure that Canada continues with the will of its people to carry out its whole duty to itself and the empire.

THESE two speeches are the beginning of a party struggle and an early appeal to the people.

Mr. White's speech was not intended to please the Liberals, and it did not please them. They say it was over long and that the pronoun "I" was persistently conspicuous, Dr. Neeley of Humboldt said that it occurred four hundred times but that is not so bad after all for a four hour's speech. The argument that the British preference increased rather than diminished is technically correct but the reply is obvious. One can easily imagine a obvious. One can easily imagine a tariff wall sufficiently high to prohibit British and American imports alike. Mr. Glass, Middlesex, made a bitter defence of the increase in the tariff against Britain by pointing out that the tax on raw material entitled the manufacturer to a compensatory increase in the duty upon the manu-in the naval defence of the emparate of the may and the latter of the may are the naval question.

In conclusion, I desire to make a somewhat deliberate statement, I say it with great respect, I say it is without any imputation except upon his statemanship, certainly not upon his statemanship certainly not upon his statemanship certainly not upon his statemanship certainly not upon his statemanship. Augmented Preparations.

Visitors who come to Atlantic City their or after Lent of 1915 will find sugmented preparations for their reception. All the big piers are open and offering their varied amusements for nominal prices. Oreste Vessella, impressario and composer, is once more in charge of the Steel Pier Band and Orchestra, so well known to those who came here in former years. The Milion Dollar Pier, with its dancing and other pastimes; the Garden Pier, which houses a theatre and other attactions, are all ready for the reception of those who seek relaxation. Managers of Boardwalk playhouses have announced booking of plays with secial merit and every big hotel offers musical entertainment of high merit for patrons and their friends.

Improved Golf Course.

To those who seek outdoor sport the Country Chub with its splendid golf course of 18 holes offers an attraction especially seductive with the bleaking up of winter. Thousands of deliars have been spent during the winter in making the big course better and in conserving turf ready for the early spring golfers. Roads surrounding the resort are smooth and dry and tempt the motorist to trips through pretty villages and country of along the strand in constant sight and hearing of the breakers. Two new roads, one leading directly to the bridge which connects with Ocean City and the resorts of the lower coast, are under construction, and the present wide boulevard to the mainland is to be resurfaced for a fine auto speedway and drive. Yachts of the popular linet fleet are being placed in commission both for salling and fishing.

Taken altogether Atlantic City offers to those seeking a spring outing the greatest aggregation of advantages of any resort place in the country. No matter whether health or pleasure or a combination of the two is the object of the visitor, the resort stands ready to meet the desire. The daily program of pastime both indoors and out is as complete as can be made and the entire power of the resort is behind the effort to cater to the comfort and well being of those who enter the city's portals.

BERLIN, via London, March 13 11.20 p.m.-In naval circles it is declared IS SOUGHT BY POLICE. that a searching investigation will be instituted into the report that the British admiralty intends to withhold the customary honorable imprisonment conditions from German submarine crews made captives, and that if Great Britain places such Germans under special restrictions, retaliatory measures may be adopted.

The navy officials say the investigation will not be made thru diplomatic channels, but decline to specify how their information will be gleaned. They claim that should Great Britain take the action she contemplates this will not affect the submarine war-plans in the slightest particular, nor have any influence on the spirit of the

"FOOLISH OPTIMISM"

Alleges Facts Are Withheld-Slackness of People May Prolong War.

LONDON, March 13.—Lord Selborne, in a letter to The Times on Foolish Optimism," protests that the Press Bureau "consistently slurs over bad news and exaggerates good news." in Flanders amounting to 200, 300 or 400 men, or even to half the battalion. These casualties took place in February, January, or December, but who can recollect that at the time he received any impression of such loss by the news published?

"The fact is that these casualties have usually occurred when we have lost a trench or line of trenches and the men holding them have been killed or made prisoners. A day or two after this had happened we were probably told that the trench which had been lost had been brilliantly recaptured, but we had never been told previously that we had lost the trench and were never told at the time what the loss of the trench and its recapture had cost us.

Germans Hold Their Own.

"The naked facts of the situation are that notwithstanding the magnificent courage of the soldiers of the allied armies, the Germans are holding very nearly the same ground in France and Belgium as they held four months ago, and that the Germans and Austrians together have been able to hold their own in the eastern field of war against the spiendid endurance of the Russian army.

"The silent pressure of the fleet has no doubt caused much inconvenience to the German people, but there is no more likelihood of Germany than of the allies being starved into early submission.

"My own belief is that at the very submission.

"My own belief is that at the very best there are many months of cruel war before us, and that we have need of every effort which every civilian in the United Kingdom can make as well as of every effort of the seamen in the fleet and that by far the greatest danger which now confronts us is, lest slackness in the United Kingdom from whatever cause arising, should prolong the war many months beyond the time at which it could otherwise be finished."

CAIRO, Mch. 18.—The battlefield or the eastern bank of the Suez Canal yielded evidence of yet another in stance in which Germans and Turks, too, at the instigation of their taskmasters, violated the rules of civilized warfare. After the fight a large quantity of ammunition fell into the hands of the British, nearly the whole of it being for rifles and revolvers. These cartridges are all dum-dums. The revolver cartridges have flat leaden noses and four slits in the body of each bullet. On the base of both kinds of cartridges are the letters D.W.M., indicating that they were manufactured by Deutsche Waffen Und Munition Fabriken, a large German concern which manufactures Mauser rifles and ammunition. I shall only point out one more belief, which is pictured about where her knees would come. It is the sun-god in his boat, which sails over the world by day and under the world by night. Fortunate ones accompany him on this journey. The great river upon which the sun-god sailed thru-the underworld was barred by massive gates which he alone had power to open with magic words. The picture gives him in the act of passing thru one of these gates. As he passed the blessed dead were arrayed on his right hand, the wicked on the left; he saluted both and uttered the words of power which continued the happiness of one, and the misery of the other.

A scarab, or sacred beetle, is seen painted on the head of the mummy case. Judging by the myriads of scarabs found in the tombs its influence must have been much sought after by ancient Egyptians. A remarkable peculiarity exists in the extremity of the bedy and so far from each other as to give an extraordinary appearance when walking. The scarab, having a flat under-surface, was chosen for seals and other inscriptions. There are three classes of scarab inscriptions, the funeral, the ornamental, and the historical.

Further information may be had from the works of Maspero, Flinders Petrle, Balkie, Tyndale, and other writers on Egyptology, most of which are in the public library. Tyndale's book, "Below the Cataracts," is particularly interesting because he describes the excavations at Hatshepshuf's temple-tomb and the making of the casts which he afterwards colored. In another letter reference will be made to the exhibits from China and Jupan, referring particularly to the fascinating collection of Chinese porcelains.

Living Conditions in Toronto

The Bureau of Municipal Research is gathering statistics that furnish accurate information about the cost of living in Toronto. The facts prove that during the last five years the cost of living in this city has increased to such an extent that families whose earnings are from $15 to $25 per week are practically unable to obtain sufficient wholesome food to keep their children properly nourished. There is no margin for safety in the present scale of wages in comparison with the cost of food, rent, and other necessities.

Already quite a handsome sum has been subscribed to the fund, including donations from members of the parks board, board of control and many other civic employes, and promises of more have been received by Mayor Walters. A committee, composed of the leading business men of the city has been formed to look after the fund and the soldiers will be well looked after. It is estimated that nearly $5,000 can be raised, which will be used to purchase necessary supplies and comforts for the soldiers while they age in training or on the battle field.

It was at first thought that the fund would be used only to aid the members of Lleut.-Col. McLaren's regiment, which will leave with the third contingent, but those behind the scheme have made it plain that every soldier leaving Hamilton will benefit.

Those who left with the 12th Regiment have already received comforts from a fund raised among the soldiers remaining in the city. MORALITY CLEAN-UP IN HAMILTON NOW

Grocers' Association of this city passed a resolution at its regular monthly meeting, held this week, urging the government to either appoint a food commission or adopt some methods of controlling the wheat markets and deciding the prices of foodstuffs. Many imembers of the association are of the opinion that there is sufficient wheat and other commodities produced in Canada in one year to feed the people of the Dominion for at least three years. Owing to the sudden increase in the price of wheat and other foodstuffs when war was declared the association is strongly in favor of having the government control the prices of food, and in this way to prevent any sudden rise in the price caused by speculation is a crime and places hard-

Laborites May Decide to Throw in Their Lot With the Liberals

VANCOUVER, B.C., March 13.-There is still no definite information when the provincial election will be held since the first date was discarded but it is expected the premier will make an announcement in a day of two.

There will be a meeting of the parliamentary committee of the trades and labor council next week, which will decide whether the Labor Party will enter candidates. The probabil-ity is that the Laborites will throw in their lot with the Liberals, the ever if that occurs there will doubtless be some Socialist candidates

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR.

The advancement of Knights Templarism in Canada was beautifully exemplified at the Temple Building last night, it being the occasion of the official visit of the provincial grand prior. Dr. G. M. Hermiston to Geoffrey de St. Aldemar Preceptory.

A unique feature of the meeting was the escort of over 65 fully uniformed Sir Knights from Cyrene Preceptory, No. 29, Toronto, who accompanied Rt. Em. Sir Kt. Hermiston. This is the largest number of uniformed Sir Knights that any Canadian preceptory has been able to muster on one occasion. After an exemplification of the Orders of the Templo the Sir Knights adjourned to the banquet room, where a very inspiring entertainment of speech and song was listened to. Rev. A. P. Brace of Gerrard Street Methodist Church favored the meeting with an address.

Be Hard at Work Next Week in Hamilton Special to The Toronto World.

HAMILTON, March 13 -The military authorities are working hard in an effort to have the preparations for the third contingent regiment which will be mobllized here completed as quickly as possible. The bunks have been erected in the old drill hall, and it has been decided the old drill hall, and it has been decided to erect three large tents in the court between the two armories, to be used as a dining room for the men. Arrangements have been made whereby the officers will be quartered in The Towers, the Tuckett homestead, at the corner of King and Queen streets. It is expected that everything will be in readiness for the regiment some time early next week, and the authorities here believe that before the end of the month the various units of the regiment will be located here and be hard at training.

In the Wake of the News by RING W. LARDNER

Bill to Steve

(Copyright, 1915: By Ring W. Lardner.)

CHICAGO, March 7.—Steve. Well Steve now your old pals a married man and no more of the bright lights for mine eh Steve untill I get out on 1 of the reglar trips this comeing season without the Mrs a long and then may be Ill get a chanct to run a round a little only of corse I wont go a round where theys girls because it wouldent be no fun because I all ready got the best girl in the u. s. and dont want no other.

Well Steve I and the Mrs just got back from Milwaukee today and thats where we was since Wed. when we got married and we had some time up to Milwaukee and the Mrs wanted we should stay up there a wile longer but I had to hurry back here to Chi because Bresnahans libel to want me to go south any minut and over look the young fellows on the club. Well Steve it looks pretty good for me now dont it Steve because Bresnahans let Leach & Sweeney and chas. Smith out and of corse I aint no pitcher or 2 base man so I dont care weather Smith and Sweeney is let out or not but him leting them out shows that hes the right kind of a mgr. and aint going to fool a round with no old mans team but is going to give the young fellows a chanct and it looks like you would see me out there in that old centre field this yr. Steve and if he ever gives me a chanct out there-they wont be no chanct for no body else to come a long and get the job a way from me unlest pres. Thomas is a frade may be the bleechers will catch on fire on acct. of me burning up the ground.

Well Steve I and the Mrs is stoping down to a hotel down town and we will be here untill the club starts south and that will be only a few days now wile Im writing the Mrs has went out to see her old man & she wanted I should go a long but I told her I was kind of tired & the real reason I dident go a long Steve is because 1 & the Mrs has been to gather study for 3 days and wear going to be to gather the rest of our life so when a man gets a chanct to brake a way for a few minuts he should ought to take it.

Well old pal I wisht you could of been here for the wedding and evry body says it was the prettest wedding that ever came off in Chi & 2 of the news papers sent there pitcher takers out and I & the Mrs. had our pitchers tooken & put in the papers with our glad close on & Im sending you 1 of the papers & I & the Mrs bet. us bought 40 papers and they stuck us the reglar price 40 cts. for the 40 papers tho they couldent of never had our pitchers in if we hadent says yes. Well Steve the wedding went off all O. K. only Gussy was a little nervus but I kept a hold of her and dident leave her brake down or faint or nothing but I wasent scared a bit only my nees shook a little but my voice was O. K. & when the preist says did you want this here lady or dident you I bet you could of herd me say Sure clear down to Michigan lake. I had to stick a ring on her finger & they told me to get just a plane gold band but I seen 1 with a little blue jewl in it that looked pretter so I got her that 1 and stuck it on her finger & then we was man & womman & then the Mrs old man give us a big spred only of corse he dident give it to us but all as he did was pay for it & hired a catter to come in & cook up some thing & we had beer & wine to wash it down with & some of the boys there you would of thot was dying for some thing to eat & drink the way they throwed it in to them the cheap burns & Id like to see how much theyd of ett & drank if theyd of been paying for it. & they was all going to kiss the bride but I says nix on that stuff & shovved them a way & they knowed enough to not monky when I told them or Id of busted there jaw for them. I guess I can tend to that part of it eh Steve with out no out side help & when I want help III put a peace in the papers. & when we was threw eating & drinking the old man hired a taxi to take I & the Mrs to the trane & they wasent none of the gang knowed where was was going but 1 of the boys says he bet I wasent going very far unlest I knowest the pres. of the R. R. co. & I says your not going very far your self are you and he dident have no come back. Well Steve Gussy was afrade evry body on the trane would know we was married but I told her to shut up & leave me do all the talking & we got a way with it good Steve but I pertended like I dident hardly know who Gussy was but may be just some girl I just knowed a little and just hapened to set down by her & people kept nugging each other & looking at us but that was because they probly reckonized me on acct. of my pitcher being in the paper and seeing me out to the ball pk. so offen & the boys & girls had throwed rice all over us when we left the house & it kept falling out of our close & hare all the wile & I was afrade may be that would put the peop! on the trane wise but I got a round that by saying evry little wile so as they could hear me that I had a bag of rice in my pocket that I was takeing to a frend in Milwaukee & the bag must of busted in my pocket & onct Gussy tride to go to sleep with her head on my solder but I shovved her a way before many of them seen her.

2 of the news papers sent there pitcher takers out and I & th

Well Steve I guess we seen evry pitcher show they was to be seen in Milwaukee & we would of drank the town out of beer to only they make it up there & it would take more then I man to drink them dry tho I guess I can hold as much as the next man & not never show it only now Im laying off of it a little on acct.

of the B. B. seasons geting clost. Well Steve we will be starting south in a few days now & of corse that will be our real wedding trip & a girls pretty lucky to get 2 wedding trips 1 up north and 1 down south eli Steve. &

FARRELL MAY CHANGE MIND ABOUT THE FEDS

If Frank Farrell intends to back a Fed club in New York it is because he feels he was forced out, as he was not strong for the Feds around Christmas. At that time he said that he had it from both Hal Chase and Russ Ford that Benny Kauff could not hit any better than 240 against American League pitching and ridiculed the Feds' major league pretensions. "The tip off on the Feds is McKeehnie," Farrell said at the time. "He was a 300 hitter in the Feds and with my team he couldn't hit .150."

JACK TRESIDDER LOWERS RECORD FOR THE GALLOP

Clips Off Three-fifths of Second in Three Hundred Yard Dash at Central Y.M. C.A. Meet

STANDING BROAD JUMP

John Fitzgerald Again Turns in Good Performance -Bill Marshall Best High

Central Y.M.C.A. athletics Friday night brought out the usual fine group of men. The outstanding features of the events were the 300 yards by Jack Tresidder, in which he lowered the record for this event by 3-5 seconds, his time being 89 2-5 secs; the running high jump, in which Bill Marshall again cleared 5 ft. in., and the standing broad jump by John Fitzgerald, in which he did 10 ft.

in Charley Kelley did exceptionally well in the 120-yd. potato race, as did Walter Jackson in the 60-yd. potato race. The men are all working hard for the international hexathlon, to be conducted on or before the 21st of March. Teams are entered in this contest from all the leading associations on the continent, and it is expected to be the biggest affair yet attempted along this line. Summary of events is as follows:

120-yard potato race—1, C. Kelley; 2, W. Jackson; 3, H. Riddell.
Standing broad jump—I. John Fitzgerald; 2, N. McLachlan; 3, A. C. Macey. Shot put—1, W. Marshall; 2, H. Cooke; 3, John Fitzgerald; 3, W. Marshall; 2, H. Cooke; 3, John Fitzgerald; 3, W. bout with Willard early in April. Johnson is not tying himself down with training for the match, and spends considerable of his time at the race track in Havana, where he is a frequent visitor. The bookmakers at the track are said to have contributed $5,000 to Johnson's bankroll, which is pretty near as profitable as boxing. Photo shows him at the course clubhouse.

Roseberry in Favor Of Racing During War With Germany

The Times Advocates Suppression of Big Meets-Stewards Jockey Club to Decide on Tuesday-Lord Roberts Was Opposed to All Sport During War

LONDON, March 13.—The question whether horse racing meets ought to be suppressed during the war is being warmly discussed in press and public. The Times, in an editorial advocates the suspension of the Ascot and Epsom meets, at least, but Lord Roseberry has written protesting against such a move, arguing that horses are invaluable to the future of the army and that in case racing ceases thorobreds will disappear because no man can afford to keep blooded stock for the mere pleasure of looking at them in the stable.

The ex-premier further points out that all thru the French revolution and the Napoleonic wars the Epsom and Ascot races were held regularly, and adds: "Our forefathers did not regard it as an offense to witness horse races while at war."

The stewards of the Jockey Club, who, it is understood, favor the continuance of racing, have called a meeting for March 16 to consider the whole question in the light of the full expression of public opinion on the matter that is now expected.

Lady Eileen Roberts, daughter of the late Lord Roberts, has written The Times stating that her father was deeply of the opinion that there should be no race or football meetings while the nation was engaged in a life and death struggle.

I guess the Mrs aint got no regrets a bout marrying me or if she has she dont say nothing a bout it.

Well old pal your present aint showed up yet & I guess you made up your mind to not send nothing & its all right Steve & dont worry a bout it because we got a hole lot fine presents with out no more & I will write & tell you all a bout them when I get district council for March 26, at the time to find out my self what they are. The story hour in the library is becoming more and more popular and the way the juvenile listeners crowd around the reader and listen intently to every word gives abundant proof of its success.

Morse St. Recreation Centre.

Last Friday evening the senior girls of Morse Street Recreation Centre enjoyed a much anticipated social evening. Careful preparations had been made, and everything went off as planned. Some new sames were played, and all kinds of fun turned up at the right moment. The spirit of "Old King Cole" was felt from the beginning to the end even until the "eats" went around and the last sons was sung. Final, a tired but happy gathering of girls took their way home.

One of the most popular hours for the afternoon girls of Morse Street Recreation Centre has become the hour for singing games. The different games used are too numerous to mention, but the music, the movement, the simplicity and real fun of these games all combine to make one of the happiest hours of all those spent at this play centre.

The following boys of Morse Street Recreation Centre have distinguished themselves in playground activities during the past week: Jack Stevenson and Allan Haag won the doubles in carrom, while William Taylor won the singles. Lee Talbot came first and William Taylor second, in the week's checker games. Norman Wallace did very well in the athletic events at East Riverdale Wednesday night.

classes on Monday and Thursday, and the senior classes showing a good attendance on their nights. Outside of the regular gymnasium work indoor baseball is the popular attraction. Baseball is the popular attraction. Baseball leagues have been organized for the boys, and teams are entered in all divisions of the City Playground League so that every fellow who has a bent toward baseball has here an opportunity to have his desire satisfied.

The inter-centre checker tournament is a new departure for the playgrounds and if the boys are taking to the idea in the other playgrounds as enthusiastically as they are at Moss Park. the success of the venture is already assured. The local tournament will be held on April 5 and 6, and the winners at that time will represent Moss Park against the boys from the other centres.

East Riverdale Recreation Centre.

The East Riverdale Centre held their monthly athletic meet on Wednesday. There were 22 contestants, with a very large number of enthusiastic onlookers.

The winners were: In Senior A. W. Richardson and F. Cheesman; in Senior B. W. Smith; in Intermediate A. Haacke and T. Martin; in Juvenile, E. Leaver. The work of the above boys was above the average, and from their performances the prospects for a splendid showing from the centre are good.

J. Break and A. Solman played their final baseball game for the championship, the former team winning, 33-21.

C. Elwood and W. Break played off for the checker championship, with the result that C. Elwood won by two games. The intermediate hockey team have yearly balanced team.

The girls of this centre are very enthusiastic over their work, and are busy practising folk dancing for their festival. In basketball, the improvement is remarkable, as was shown in their game against the St. Andrews team. Full-time score was 10-10, with St. Andrews winning out. The juniors girls are not doing so well, but are very much interestical.

In the senior class, great interest is being taken in the watasce did very well in the athletic events at East Riverdale Wednesday night.

Since marbles are not only a luxury but also a necessity about this time of the year for boys, a marble tourney is in proress at Monse Street Recreation Centre and the old expressions, dear to the heart of every boy, of "toe the line," "knuckle down" are very common indeed.

A litterary contest is being planned at this centre in connection with our library. It will consist of the best orally recited story or incident and is open to boys at years of age, to boys 12 and under and to boys 14 and under.

The Wednesday Night Intermediate Club of Morse St. Recreation Centre is busying itself in various ways. Some of the boys are taking an interest in wresting. A number entered the athletic events at East Riverdale recently. Others are devoting their time to a checker tourney. An indoor basebail team has been organized and is on the road to success. The boys are also planning to take part in the coming concert at Morse Street School.

Moss Park Recreation Centre.

The unparalleled success of the winter work at the various city Playground recreation centres is a matter of constraint of the tremendous activity of Moss Park being worthy of special notice.

The boys there are feeling pretty chesty just now over the fact that the enrolment at that centre has passed the thousand mark, giving them first place numerically among boys organizations in the British Empire. Starting the enrolment late in November it has grown with amazing rapidity till at the end of the third month the membership stood at 1006, a high record of 335 a month. And

LEADING TEAMS IN FINAL FOR TROPHY

The Federals and Strollers, who have each a series to their credit in the Central Handicap League, are again in the hunt for the final series. The Brunswicks, who were nosed out in the first and second series, and Bohemians, who made a bold bid for the second, are the other two teams who appear to be the contenders for the final chase for the O'Connor Trophy. The Brunswicks were handed a rude joit when Bohemians took them into camp for a double victory. The Hartmann stars gave away 75 pins a game, and, with the Bohs displaying their best form, they romped home with an easy victory in the first two games. They couldn't stand prosperity, and put in a low count in their third attempt. The Brunswicks put in their poorest count of the season, Fred Wilkes being the only star to show any class, totaling 644. Al Robinsan led the victors, with 620, Deadman being next.

The Federals kept in first place by disposing of Blackhalls in easy fashion. The "outlaws" gave away 36 pins, but, with the boys all going in good form, had no trouble in blaiming the victory.

With three Strollers rolling over the 600 mark, they had no trouble in disposing of Flwler's Colts, with 40 pins handican. Croft and Glendenning contributed 633, and King 604. Dr. Fowler was best for the losers, with 569. Blackhall and Norris' Lambs met in a postponed game. The Lambs gave away 62 pins, but the allev must have been moved in the middle game, which they lost, the book boys winning with an 820 count. The lightweight anchor for the Lambs was the big noise, with 589.

The Cafeterias won the odd game from Matthews, Ltd. The "unrch boys" are showing improvement with every game and should give a good account of themselves before the season closes.

Yankee Star Twirler Has Good Chance to Lead the American—Training Rules Must Be Strictly Observed.

By W. A. Collins.

NEW YORK, March 18.—If Ray Caldwell attends to business he may lead the American League pitchers this year. The Yankees' star boxman, who left the team early last August, stood eighth in the official pitching records, being outpointed in percentage of earned runs' per game by Leon-was the equal of Walter Johnson. Caldwell is at Hot Springs, well satisfied with the hew contract he has signed with the Yankees. He has promised to keep in first-class condition all season. He has a high regard for Mahager Donovan, and is eager to prove that he is the best pitcher in the American League. Caldwell is a big, good natured fellow, who cannot be "ridden." He is too sensitive, and must be handled with gloves. Chance ruled him with an iron hand last year, and thereby made a serious error. Caldwell, under new conditions, has the chance of a lifetime to become the king of pitchers.

How the Painter, Emil Sant, Has Depicted "The Return from Emmaus," When the Two Disciples Were Joined by the Risen Jesus.

A Remarkable Picture by a Famous Painter, and Its Bearing on a Profoundly Significant Incident in the Christian Tragedy.

E days following the crucifixion of Christ have an interest that has drawn the reverent study of the church and the keenest analysis of psychologists for hundreds of years. The visible, tangible manifestation of Jesus after the discovery of the empty sepulchre is understood as a part of the belief of all Christian sects. Science has peered into the records in an effort to explain this lifghly significant incident in the wonderful drama of Jesus's life and death. Art, following the divergent views as to the actual occurrences, pictures the resurrection in Christ on the Sea, by Harland.

This painting, called "The Return from Emmaus," is, however, based on a record that is unequivocal. Luke is the only Bible writer who speaks of the Emmaus journey of the two disciples.

Though this record says that at first the disciples' "eyes were holden that they should not know him," the risen Jesus afterward "sat at meat with them," and "their eyes were opened and they knew him." It was when they recognized him that he "vanished out of their sight." The picture may thus be taken as seeking to interpret that great, dramatic moment in which the two men felt rather than saw the presence of the Man of Galilee who had died on the Cross. Surely the realm of art, rich as it is in symbolism and sentiment, contains few interpretations more vivid than this sincere, stately and aspiring painting. In the midst of the impressive prelude to Easter the picture acquires additional impressiveness. It represents that prophetic aftermath of the memorable forty days and the grim and terrible ordeal of the Cross. To Christianity it represents

T is a matter of history that over s hundred years ago the Napeleonic wars caused a great deal of poverty in Germany generally and in Prussia particularly. So great was the outcry for help of all kinds, that not only was all the available money subscribed, but the women parted with their jewels and ornaments to cola into money and gold reserve for the national need. To-day the German women are gain parting with their fewelry, but it is certain that the from awelry evolved to meet the love of the orname t can not compare with the curious delicacy of the pieces received in exchange a century ago.

The pieces are without a flaw and are singular, not only for their delicacy, but for strength and rigidity. The necklet is marvellously light in weight, but is absolutely rigid in every way. It is an interesting example of the skill of the early ironworkers of a country that to-day scems only noted for massive siege pieces. The morning, altho it was late September, was perfectly fine and warm. The cattle in the park which surrounded the house were already gathered under the trees. In the far distance, the stubble fields stretched like patches of gold to ridges of pinetopped hills, and beyond to the distant sea. The New Yorker glanced almost indifferently at the one sight which to a stranger is perhaps the most impressive in the new world. Twentyfive stories below, the cable cars clanging and clashing their way thru the narrowest streets seemed like little fireflies, children's toys pulled by an invisible string of fire. Farther afield, the flare of the city painted the murky sky: The line of the river scintillated with rising and falling stars. The tall buildings stabbed the blackness, fingers of fire. Here, midway to the clouds, was another world, a world of luxury, of brilliant toilettes, of light laughter, the popping of corks, the joy of living.

The Likes O' Us

I T was the General Officer Commanding, riding down the Mall. on the Arab with the perky tail, and he condescended to explain some of the mysteries of his profession. But the point on which he dwelt most pompously was the ease with which the Private Thomas Atkins could be "handled," as he called it. "Only feed him and give him a little work to do and you can do anything with him," said the General Officer Commanding. "There's no refinement about Tommy, you know; and one is very like another. They've all the same ideas and traditions and prejudices. They're all hig children. Fancy any man in his senses shooting about these hills." There was the report of a shotgun in the valley. "I suppose they've hit a dog. Happy as the day is long when they're out shooting dogs. Just like a big child is Tommy." He touched up his horse and cantered away. There was a sound of angry voices down the Fillside.

No, nor-yet do anythin'. If I was to—Ah! you would, would you? There!" Some one had evidently sat down with a thud, and was swearing nobly. I slid over the edge of the khud, down thru the leng grass, and fetched up, after the manner of a sledge, with my feet in the broad of the back of Gunner Barnsbas in the Mountain Battery, my friend, the very strong man. He was sitting on a man—a khaki-colored volcano of blasplemy—and was preparing to smoke. My sudden arrival threw him off his balance for a moment. Then, readjusting his chair, he bade, me good day.

"Im an' me 'ave bin 'avin' an arg'-nent," said Gunner Barnabas placidly. "I' was going for to half kill an' 'eave 'im into the bushes 'ers, but, seein' that you 'ave come, sir, and very welcome when you do come. we will 'ave a court martial instead Shacklook, are you willin? The volcano, who had been swearing uninterruptedly thru this oration, expressed a desire, in general and particular terms, to see Gunser Barnabas in Torment and the "civilian" on 'the next gridiron.

Private Shacklock was a tow haired, scrofulous boy of about 'two and twenty. His nose was bleeding profusely, and the live air attested that he had been drinking quite as much as was good for him He lay, stomach down, on a little level spot on, the hillside; for Gunner Barnabas was sitting between his shoulder blades, and his was not, a weight to wriggle under. Private Shacklock could barely draw breath to swear, but be did the best that in him lay. "Amen," said Gunner Barnabas not, and the clinks you've ben chucked into like a bay bundle perhaps, Private Shacklock, you will stop. You are a-makin' of 'im siek." Private Shacklook said that he was pleased to hear it, and would have continued his speech, but his breath suddenly went from him, and the unfinished curse died out in a gasp. Gunner Barnabas had put upo noe He had evidently He dropped his you go," said Gunner Barnabas. He had evidently been deeply moved by something. He dropped his head between his fists and looked steadily at me.

"I met this child 'ere," said he, "at Deelally — a fishback recruity as ever was. I knowed 'im at Deelally, and I give 'im a latherin' at Deelally all for to keep 'im straight, 'e bein' such as wants a latherin' an knowin' nothin' o' the ways o' this country. I goes out with 'im butterfly huntin', and, as you see 'ere, a-sl-ootin'. The gun betwirt us." I saw then what I had overlooked before, a company fowling plece lying among some boulders far down the hill. Gunner Barnabas continued: "I should ha' seen where 'e had a-bin to get that drink inside o' 'im. Presently 'e misses summat. 'You're a bloomin' fool,' sez I. 'If that had been a Paythan, now!' I sez. 'Damn you'r Paythans, an' you, too,' sez 'e. 'I strook it.' 'You did not,' I sez. 'I saw the bark fly.' Stick to your bloomin' popguns.' sez 'e, 'an' don't talk to a better man than you.' I laughed there, knowin' what I was an' what 'e was. 'You laugh'' sez he. 'I laugh,' i sez, 'Shack-look, and for what should I not laugh?' soy I. "Then go an' laugh in hell,' sez 'e, 'for I'll 'ave none of your laughin'.' With that 'e brings up the gun yonder and looses off, and I stretches 'im there, and guv him a little to keep 'im quiet, and puts 'im under, an' while little to keep 'im quiet, and puts 'im under, an' while I was thinkin' what nex', you comes down the 'ill an' finds us as we was." The private was the Gunner's prey-I knew that the affair had fallen as the Gunner had said, for my friend is constitutionally incapable of lying—and if recognized that in his hands lay the boy's fate.

"What do you think?" said Gunner Barnabas, after a silence broken only by the convulcive breathing of the boy he was sitting on. "I think nothing," I said.

"He didn't go at me, He's your property." Then an idea occurred to me. "Hand him over to his own company. They'll school him half dead." "Got own company. They if sender finith finit dead. Got no comp'ny," said Gunner Barnabas. "'E's a convalessint draft—all sixes an' sevens. "Thrash him yoursel, then," I Gunner Barnabas looked at the man and smiled; and then caught up an arm, as a mother takes up the dimpled arm of a child, and ran the and shirt up to the elbow. he said. It was a pitiful arm, lean and muscleless. "Can you mill a man with an arm like that—such as Twould like to mill him, an' such as he deserves? I tell you, sir, an' I am not smokin' (swaggering), as you see—I could take that man—sodger 'e is, Lord 'elo 'im',—an' twis' off 'is arms and 'is legs as if 'e was a naked crab.

Before I could realize what was going to happen Gunner Barnabas rose up, stooped, and taking wretched Private Shacklock by two points of grasp, heaved him up above his heat. The boy kicked once or twice and then was still. He was very white-He dropped Private Shacklock on the ground and sat upon him as before. The world's weaklings are all discontented in this particular way. They curse the rising sun and spill their sourness along the highways. The second form of discontent bears a sweeter name--Aspiration. It has no moan in it, no belittling of today's opportunity, no infidelity to difficult duty, no hankering to run away from the plough. It is constant and constructive. It does not knock down; it builds up. It breeds growth and onwardness. It is a spur in the flank and a star in the sky. Its passion is to be and become. "D'ye expect us to talk about buttercups and daisies, then?" said Dallston.
"No, but there's some sort of medium between those and sudden death."
"There isn't. I haven't seen a daisy for seven years, and now I want to die," said Reven plunging inxuriously into his peg.
"I knew a Johnnie on the frontier once who did," began Dallston meditatively.
"Half a minute. Bearer, cherut lao! Tobacco soothes the nerves when a man is expecting to hear a whacker. We know what your frontier stories are, Martha."

Dallston had once, in a misguided moment, taken part of Martha in the burlesque of "Faust." and the nickname stuck.

"Tign't a whacker, it's a fact. He told me so himself."

"They always do, Martha. I've noticed that before. But what did he tell you?"

"He told me that he had died."

"Was that all? Explain htm."

"It was this way. The man went down with a bad go of fever and was off his head. About the second day it struck him in the middle of the night."

"Steady the Buffs! Martha, you aren't an Irishman vat."

"Never mind. It's too hot to put it correctly. In the middle of the night he woke up quite caim, and it struck him that it would be a good thing to die—just as it might ha' struck him that it would be a good thing to put ice on his head. He lay on his bed and thought it over, and the more he thought about it the better sort of bundobust it seemed to be. He was quite calm, you know, and he said that he could have sworn that he had no fever on him."

"Well, what happened?"

"Oh he got up and loaded his revolver.— he remembers all this—and let fly, with the muzzle to his temple. The thing didn't go off, so he turned it up and found he'd forgot to load one chamber."

"Better stop the tale there. We can guess what's coming."

"Hang it! It's a true yarn. Well, he jammed the thing to his head again, and it missed fire, and he said that he felt ready to cry with rage, he was so disgusted. So he took it by the muzzle and hit himself on the head with it."

"Good man! Didn't it go off then?"

"No, but the blow knocked him silly, and he thought he was dead. He was awfully pleased, for he had been fiddling over the show for nearly half ah hour. He dropped down and died. When he got his wits again he was shaking with the fever worse than ever, but he had sense enough to go and knock up the doctor and give himself into his charge as a lunatic. Then he went clean off his head till the fever worse out." fever wore out.' "That's a good story," said Revel critically. "I didn't think you had it in you at this season of the

"I can believe it," said the man they called Saveloy. "Fever makes one do all sorts of queer things.
I suppose your friend was mad with it when he discovered it would be so healthy to die."
"S'pose so. The fever must have been so bad that he felt all right—some way that man who is nearly mad with drink gets to look sober. Well, anyhow, there was a man who died."
"Did he tell you what it felt like?"

"He said that he was awfully happy until his fever came back and shook him up. Then he was sick with fear. I don't wonder. He'd had rather a nar-"That's nothing," said Saveloy. "I know a man

Anyhow, it was when I was on the Utamamula Canal headworks, and I was chumming with a man called Stovey. You've never met him because he belongs to the Bombay side, and if he isn't really dead by this he ought to be somewhere there now. He was a pukka sweep, and I hated him. We divided the canal ungalow between us, and we kept strictly to our own side of the buildings" "Hold on! I call. What was Stovey to look

He was so coated with dirt that I don't believe the fever could have got at him. He just began to go mad."

"Cheerful! What were the symptoms." "Well, his naturally vile temper grow infamous.
It was really unsafe to speak to him, and he always seemed anxious to murder a coolie or two. With me, of course, he restrained himself a little, but he sulked like a bear for days and days together. I thought it was mean work spying into another man's very plans, but when I saw what was on the paper I gave old Jeewun Singh a rupee. It was a beautiful little breech pin. The one ideaed idiot had gone to Martini! I never dreamt of such persistence. 'Tel me when the lohar gives it to the Sahib,' I said, and I felt more comfiger it is should have known when the new breech pin was made. The brute came in to dinner with a dashed confident, triumphant air, as if he'd done me in the eye at last; and all thru dinner he was fiddling in his waisicoat pocket. He went to bed early, went, too, and listened like a woman. I must have been shivering in my pyjamas for about two hour before my friend went for the dismantled Martini He could not get the breech pin to fit at irrst. He rummaged about and then I heard a file go. Thus seemed to make too muchnoi se to suit his fancy, she opened the door and went out into the compound and I heard him, about fifty yards off, filing in the dark at that breech pin as if he had been possessed Well, he was, you know. Then he came back to the light, cursing me for keeping him out of his rea and the peace of Abraham's bosom. As soon as heard him taking up the Martini I ran round to his door and tried to enter gayly, as the stage directions say. "Lend me your gun, old man, if you're awake, I said. "There's a howling big brute of a pariah in my room and I want to get a shot at it." I pretende not to notice that he was standing over the gun, bu just pranced up and caught hold of it. Not One Ex-Convict Has Gone Back to Old Life

In the Ford sociological department, which had charge of the man making, there are records of more than 500 men who were put to work in the factory solely because they needed the them from ways of evil into ways of good. But what is more remarkable, there is no record of a single man among them who had to be dropped because he returned to the kind of life he formerly lived. Among them in various prisons for crimes ranging from murder to petty theft; the terms ranged from thirty-four years behind the bars to a few months. Most of these ex-convicts are counted among the best and most faithful workmen in the departments and in the labor to which they are assigned.
The sociological department employs a force of cighty men, all under the supervision of John R. Lee, who is assisted, as he puts it, by every man in the factory, from Mr. Ford to the humblest worker about the shops. Forty of these men are inspectors; the remainder are subordinate executives, stenographers and clerks. The direct cost of the sociological department approximates $9,000 a month.

Think of an ex-convict being employed as a watchman where opportunities for evil are manifold. There is one watchman in the factory drawing his $5 a day for every working day in the year who spent thirty-four years in the Jackson. Mich., prison. He was sent up for life for murder, but was pardoned less than a year ago. At one time his conduct as a convict was so reprehensible that he was condemned to solitary confinement in the dark cell for the long period of thirteen.

"Fine," was the answer. "The coat cost $300 and the pins are worth at least $150 each. But what I'd rather do is to shake hands with the man who did the job."

"No," said the saloon keeper, "I couldn't stand for a pinch when I gave my word that nothing would happen to him."

"A pinch!" exclaimed the official. "I don't want to have him pinched. I want to give him a job. He can make more money in a year working for us than he can by committing burglaries; and there won't be any danger of a cell for the long period of thirteen and there won't be any

Look at the pictures of the belies, of Queen Victoria or the Empress Eugenie and you will come to the conclusion that history truly repeats itself. We are in the injust of car times and we are frocked in the nodest, ample fashions of other days. The crinoline has come to stay-for while-but this tashion is only for youthful tigures. Fashion has also countenanced the evening gown of the more dignified and elegant classic lines, and we find any quantity of landsome models fashioned of elabrate satins and silks ornamented with crystal beads, silver embroidery flowers or lace. Well, Macdougal. He as lived in New York for some years, and you will ubtless find this a great advantage, Ella."

Ella glanced over her shoulder at the two serrants who were standing discreetly in the backrounds. Her eyes rested upon the pale, expresionless face of the man who during the last few years had enjoyed her father's absolute confidence. For a moment a queer sense of apprehension troubled ber. Was it true, she wondered, that she did not like the man? She banished the thought almost as soon as it was conceived.

"Father," she cried, "you are too good to me! It is all too wonderful. I shall be afraid to wear them."

Lord Ashleigh smiled reassuringly. "My dear," he said, "you will be quite safe. 1 should advise you to keep them, as a rule in the strong box which you will doubtless find in the hotel to which you are going. For once she saw something besides the perfect automaton. His eyes, instead of being fixed at the back of his master's chair, were simply riveted upon the stones. A queer little feeling of uneasiness disturbed Ella for the moment. It passed, however, as in glancing away her attention was once more attracted by the sparkle of the jewels upon

"Our love to you, dear," he said. . "Take care of the jewels, but take more care of yourself. Your mother and I will come to New York as soon as we can. In the meantime, don't forget us amidst the hosts of your new friend and the joy of your new life."

"Thank you, dear, ever so much, for your delightful dinner," she exclaimed, "and for bringing me home. As for the music, well, I can't talk about it. I am just going upstairs into my room to sit and think."

The car rolled off. Ella, a large umbrella held over her head by the doorkeeper, stepped up the little strip of drugget which led into the softlywarmed hall of the Leland. Behind her came her maid, Lenora, and Macdougal, who had been riding on the box with the chauffeur. He paused for a moment to wipe the snow from his clothes as Ella crossed the ball to the left. Lenora turned toward him. He whispered something in her ear.

For a moment she shook. Then she turned away and followed her mistress upstairs.

Arrived in her apartment, Elia threw herself with a little sigh of content into a big easy-charbefore the fire and gave herself up for a few moments to reverie-

The maid hurried in from the next room. Ella pointed to the door.

"Lenora, look outside. See if anyone is on that landing. I fancied that the door opened."

Lenora crossed the room and tried the handle.

Then she turned towards her mistress in triumph.
"It is locked, my lady," she reported.
"Go down and ask Macdougal to come up. I am going to have this thing explained." Something of her mistress' agitation seemed to the become communicated to Lenora.

She walked quickly to the back part of the hotel and ascended to the wing in which the servants quarters were situated. Here she made her way along a corridor until she reached Macdougal's room. She knocked, and knocked again. There was no answer. She iried the door and found it was locked. Then she returned to the lift and descended once more to the floor upon which her mis-tress' apartments were situated. She opened the door of the saite without knocking and turned at nce to the sitting-room. "I am sorry, my lady---" she began.

Then she stopped short. The lift boy, who had a little trouble with his starting apparatus and had not as yet descended, heard the scream which broke from her lips, and a fireman in an adjacent corridor came running up almost at the same moment. Lenora was on her knees by her mistress' side. Ella was still lying in the easy-chair in which she had been seated, but her head was thrown back in an unnatural fashion. There was a red mark just across her throat.

Lonora shrieked "She's fainted! And the diamonds—the diamonds have gone!"

A doctor, hurriedly summoned, had just completed a hasty examination when a police inspector, followed by a detective entered.

THERE seemed to be nothing at all original in the methods pursued by the great criminologist when confronted with this tableau of death and robbery. "There will be little difficulty about that," he said calmly. "If you are quite ready, Miss Lenora. Is that your name?"

"Lenora is my name, sir," the girl replied.

They descended in the lift together and Quest handed the girl into his car. They drove quickly thru the silent streets.
In a few minutes Lenora was installed in an

In a few minutes Lenora was installed in an easy chair in Quest's sitting-room.

"Lean back and make yourself comfortable," Quest invited, as he took a chair opposite to her.

"I must just look thru these papers."

"She's a subject, Laura—I'm sure of it! Now

"She's a subject, Laura—I'm sure of it! Now for our great experiment!"

They watched Lenora intently.
"Lenora." Quest said, slowly and firmly, "your mind is full of one subject. You see your mistress in her chair by the fireside. She is toying with her diamonds. Look again. She lies there dead! Who was it entered the room, Lenora? Look! Look: Gaze into that mirror. What do you see there?"

The girls eyes had opened. They were fixed now upon the mirror—distended, full of unholy, things.

"Try harder. Lenora." he muttered, his own breath laboring. "It is there in your brain! Look!"

For a single second the smooth surface of the mirror was obscured. A room crept dimly like a picture into being, a fire upon the hearth, a girl leaning back in her chair. A door in the background opened. A man stole out. He crept nearer to the girl—his eyes fixed upon the diamonds, a thin, silken cord twisted round, his wrist. Suddenly she saw him—too late! His hand was upon her lips, his face seemed to start almost from the mirror—then blackness!

Lenora opened her eyes. She was still in the easy-chair before the fire.

"Mr. Quest!" she faltered.

He looked up from some letters, which he had been studying, "Try harder, Lenora." he muttered, his own

"Not that I know of," Quest assured her. "As a matter of fact, I was called down stairs to see one of my men soon after we got here."

"Can I go now!" she asked.

"Certainly," Quest replied. "To tell you the truth, I find that I shall not need to ask you those questions, after all. A messenger from the police station has been here. He says they have come to the conclusion that a very well-known gang of New York criminals are in this thing. We know how to track them down all right."

The girl drove off. Quest watched the car disappear around the corner. Then he turned slowly and made preparations for his adventure.

"Number 700, New York," he muttered, half an hour later, as he left his house. "Beyond Fourteenth street—a tough neighborhood."

He hesitated for a moment, feeling the articles is his everyest property in one a small in his evercoat pocket—a revolver in one, a small piece of hard substance in the other. Then he stepped into his car, which had just returned.

"Where did you leave the young lady?" he

"In Broadway, sir. She left me and boarded a cross-town car" Quest nodded approvingly.
"No finesse," he sighed.

CHAPTER V.

ANFORD QUEST was naturally a person unaffected by presentiments or nervous fears of any sort, yet, having advanced a couple of yards along the hallway of the house which he had just entered without difficulty, he came to a standstill, oppressed with the sense of impending danger.

"Anyone here?" he asked, raising his voice.

There was no direct response, yet from some-where upstairs he heard the half-smothered cry of where upstairs he heard the half-smothered cry of a woman. He gripped his revolver in his fingers. He took a quick step forward. The floor gave way beneath him. He was falling into blackness.

The fall itself was scarcely a dozen feet. He picked himself up, his shoulder bruised, his head swimming a little. Suddenly a gleam of light shone down. A trap-door above his head was slid shone down A day-door above his face of an electric torch shone upon his face, a man's voice addressed him.
"Not-the great Sanford Quest?" This surely cannot be the greatest detective in the world walking so easily into the spider's web!" Any chance of getting out?" Quest asked lacom-

"None!" was the bitter reply. "You've done enough mischief. You're there to rot!"

"Why this animus against me, my friend Macdougal?" Quest demanded, "You and I have never come up against one another before. I didn't like the life you ied in New York ten years ago, or your friends, but you've suffered nothing thru me."

"If I let you go," once more came the man's your." I know yeary wall in what chair I aball. voice. "I know very well in what chair I shall be sitting before a month has passed. I am James Macdougal, Mr. Sanford Quest, and I have got the Ashleigh diamonds, and I have settled an old grudge, if not of my own, of one greater than you. That's all. A pleasant night to you!"

The door went down with a bang.

Quest felt in his overcoat pocket and drew out the small, hard pellet. He gripped it in his fingers, stood as nearly as possible underneath the spot from which he had ben projected, coolly swung his sliding door. The explosion which followed shook the very ground under his feet. For minutes after-wards everything around him seemed to rock. Then Sanford Quest emerged, dusty and unhurt, and touched a constable on his arm. "Arrest me," he ordered. "I am Sanford Quest.

"Arrest me," he ordered, "I am Sanford Quest.

I must be taken at once to headquarters."

They found a cab without much difficulty. It was five o'clock when they reached the central police station. Inspector French happened to be just going off duty. He recognized Quest with a little exclamation.

"Got your man to bring me here," Quest explained, "so as to get away from the mob."

"Say, you've been in trouble!" the inspector remarked, leading the way into his room.

"Bit of an explosion, that's all." Quest replied.
"I shall be all right when you've lent me a clothes-

"The Ashleigh diamonds eh?" the inspector

"The Ashleigh diamonds, eh?" the inspector asked eagerly.

"I shall have them at nine o'clock this morning." Sanford Quest promised, "and hand you over the murderer somewhere around midnight."

Quest slept for a couple of hours, had a bath and made a leisurely toilet. At a quarter to nine he sat down to breakfast in his rooms.

"At nine o'clock." he told his servant, "a young lady will call. Bring her up."

The door was suddenly opened. Lenora walked in. Quest glanced in surprise at the clock.

"My fault!" he exclaimed. "We are slow. Good-morning. Miss Lenora:"

She came straight to the table. She laid a little packet upon the table. Quest opened it coolly. The Ashleigh diamonds flashed up at him. He led Lenora to a chair and rang the bell.

"Prepare a bedroom upstairs," he ordered. "Ask Miss Roche to come here. Laura." he added, as his secretary entered, "will you look after this young lady?"

A few minutes later Inspector French was announced. Quest nodded in friendly manner.

"Some coffee, inspector?"

"It rather have those diamonds!"

Quest threw them lightly across the table. The inspector whistled.

"And now. French. will you be here, please, af midnight with three men, armed?"

"Here?" the inspector repeated.

Quest nodded.

"Our friend." he said, "is going to be madenough to walk into hell, even, when he finds out what he thinks has happened."

"It wasn't any of Jimmy's lot?"

Sanford Quest shook his head.

"French." he said, "keep mum, but it was the elderly family retainer, Macdougal. I felt restless about him. He has lost the girl—he was married to her, by the bye—and the jewels. No fear of his slipping away. I shall have him here at the time I told you."

"Vouve a way of your own of doing these things, Mr. Quest." the inspector wandited.

"You've a way of your own of doing these things, Mr. Quest," the inspector admitted grudgingly.
"Mostly lucky," Quest replied. "Take a cigar, and so long, inspector. They want me to talk to and so long, inspector. They want me to talk to Chicago on another little piece of business."

It was at a few minutes before midnight when Quest parted the curtains of a room on the ground floor of his house in Georgia square, and looked out into the snow-white street. Then he turned around and addressed the figure lying as the asleep upon the sofa by the fire.

the sofa by the fire.

"Lenora," he said, "I am going out. Stay here, if you please, until I return."

He left the room. For a few moments there was a profound silence. Then a white face was pressed against the window. There was a crash of glass. A man, covered with snow, sprang into the apartment. He moved swiftly to the sofa, and something black and ugly swayed in his hand.

"So you've deceived me have you?" he panted.

black and ugly swayed in his hand.

"So you've deceived me, have you?" he panted. "Handed over the jewels chucked me, and given me the double cross! Anything to say?"

Macdougal leaned forward, his white face distorted with passion. The life-preserver bent and quivered behind him cut the air with a swish and crashed full upon the head.

The man staggered back. The weapon fell from his fingers. For a moment he was paralyzed. There was no blood upon his hand, no cry—silence inhuman, unnatural! He looked again. Then the lights flashed out all around him. There were two detectives in the doorway, their revolvers covering him—Sanford Quest, with Lenora in the background. In the sudden illumination Macdougel's horror turned almost to hysterical rage. He had wasted his fury upon a dummy!

"Take him, men." Quest ordered, "Hands up, Macdougal. Your number's up."

The handcuffs were upon him before the could move,

"What about the young weman?" the inspectors.

What about the young woman?" the inspector

Lenora stood in an attitude of despair, her head downcast. She had turned a little away from Macdougal. Her hands were outstretched. It was as the she were expecting the handcuffs.

"You can let her alone," Sanford Quest said quietly. "A wife cannot give evidence against her husband, and besides, I need her, She is going to work for me," Macdougal was already at the door, between the two detectives. He swung around.

"You are a wonderful man, Mr. Sanford Quest," he said. "Make the most of your triumph. Your time is nearly up, there is one coming whose wit and cunning, science and skill are all-conquering. He will brush you away, Sanford Quest. like a fly. Wait a few weeks."

"You interest ma." Quest murmured. "Tell me some more about this great master?"

"I shall tell you nothing." Macdougal replied. "You will hear nothing, you will know nothing. Suddenly you will find yourself opposed. You will struggle—and then the end. It is certain."

They led him away. Only Lenora remained. sobbing. Quest went up to her.

"You've had a rough time, Lenora," he said, with strange gentleness. "Perhaps the brighter days To Be Continued Next Sunday.

STAMP STICKING OR PEACEFUL PEOPLE

By JAMES P. HAVERSON.

sound of the stampers is heard in the Behold the War Stamps are upon

Now and henceforth War Stamps are to be fixed to all checks, receipts, railway tickets, and upon the stamp which we have heretofore put upon letters and postcards must now be affixed yet another stamp, for it is War time. Thus far has stamping gone. How much further it will go before we have busted the taiser, who can tell? The possibilities are infinite and the prospect pestifferous. Think what it means when having fished out the nickles from the baby's bank, you go to the landlord to pay the rent. Before you can get a receipt from that grasping hyena, you must have a stamp put upon it. Where are you to go for the stamp? Will additional postage pillars be erected upon the corner, a sort of glorified goverament slot machine, at which the stamps may be procured and the receipt received? Be sure the landlord will require the rent, stamps or no stamps, receipt or no receipt. What will you do if some day in an excess of patriotic zeal, the conductor, already always critical in such matters, requires, in addition to the elaborate and accurate punching of your transfer, that it be stamped with a War Stamp? This is not yet upon the program, but who can say that it will not be, and what is the unfortunate passenger to do? Wartime pockets are poor and protests with conductors are vain. Such a case may never arise, but it is well to be prepared for

It is fitting and just that those ponderous plutocrats possessed of bank accounts, should have to put stamps upon the checks, which are the emblems of their pride, but will it become part of the dunning letter, in the old familiar tones, that a check be enclosed by return mail. that the injunction be included that you put a stamp upon it? Surely this would be adding insult to injury. One bank account at least, will be secure from the hand of the stamper. This is the old reliable First National Bank, the silk sock safety deposit vault. This, as heretofore, will be immune from taxing measures, controlled and controllable only by the personal possesser. The stamping of checks will, we cannot doubt it, lead to the keeping of cash in homes and should thus prove a boon to burglars. But fancy, if you can, and it should not be hard, the patriotic housebreaker, who, the he comes secretly and in the dead of night, should scorn to steal cash, jewelry or plate upon which the stamp of patriotism has not been set.

What of the dogs? Will War Stamps take the place of tags, and if this should be, will the dogs approve? Where will the stamps be affixed and by wnom? Imagine yourself in the position of the unfortunate stamper, who is called upon to affix the government seal upon Mulligan's bull pup. Perhaps upon the program of dog-stamping the safest and sanest would be the stamping of hot dogs, but even. these are deadly. Were they of the German variety, who could object? Two stamps should surely be affixed to sausages of this sort.

The possibilities of the stamp propaganda are infinite. Perhaps, by personal and private negotiation with the hen, it could be arranged to have her stamp her eggs as laid. Doubtless, if this were done, the rage of the cold storage Moloch would be incurred, more especially if such stamps were dated. No longer could the far-flung fake of fine, fresh eggs

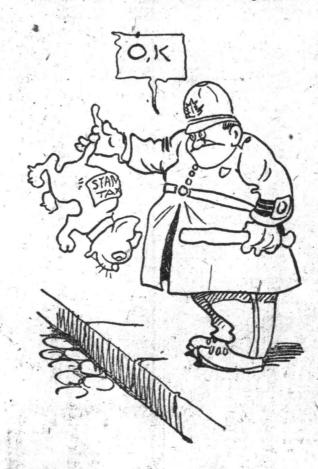

A place where War Stamps might be well sed would be upon the product of the Much punk poetry might thus be prevented, for poets are known to be poor and poorer now than ever. Perhaps the stamper would be intimidated by the fear that Mr. Poet should lampoon him in reprisal. Would not such fears prove groundless? Suppose the poet wrote:-

"These stampers are a pesky lot-They should have brains, but they have not."

What would it profit him if he had not the wherewithal to put the stamp upon it and the product of his poisoned pen were doomed to die

The clothes we wear, the cash we spend, even the breath we breath may come to have to have a stamp upon it before we be permitted to use it. This wild idea if breath-stamping belongs to Skuce. In the pictures which he has put upon this page, you will perceive that of the unfortunate citizen bearing upon his back a strange device in the nature of the gas meter of a cursed memory, by which Skuce proposes that the air we breathe should be measured and stamped. I do not believe that any such measure could ever be made effective, and mention it only to show the silliness of Skuce.

Suppose the stork should start a-stamping! Think what it would mean to have the gates of Life given over to the hand of the stamper so that every blue-eyed baby that butted into this vale of tears should require a stamp before being admitted to the fraternity of mortals.

And what if stamps were stuck on kisses! Young ladies might wear them on their cheeks. They would look no worse than vanity spots and see what a chance each girl would have to estimate her neighbor's popularity. Some salamanders would be totally obscured. They would look, perhaps, much like the over-travelled suitcase of bygone European tours. Imagine the jealous husband carefully counting the stamps upon the cheeks of his faithful spouse as he left her in the morning, and then returning, weary from his work, setting out to count them again before sitting down to his hash and fried potatoes. What a world of explanation would be required by each additional stamp! ' It has not come to this as yet, but who can tell that it will not, and then be an your stamps will find you out.

Why should not stamps be set on mirrors? Every peep at the looking-glass should mean a stamp and thus a proper check might be placed upon vanity. If one look too often, the mirror would eventually be utterly obscured. Priscills in arranging her toilet would then, we hope, look no oftener than she need and thus for once, perhaps, Priscilla would be prompt.

Stamps have already been stamped on beer, then why are they not also set upon the Slush Sundaes and Lemon Freezes of the soda fountain? It don't seem fair.

Stamps might be set upon theatre tickets, but not, oh surely not, upon the hired dress taits of impecunious Johns!

A nice problem could be worked out from the stamps which should be set upon the hauls of every same we play at poker. It might be arranged that stamps need only be placed on hands of "jacks or better." That would be liberal. There are, we fear, however, some straight-laced folks who would demand a stamp upon a "bobtailed flush." The possibilities are infinite. Work it out for yourself. Then take the children in the street. They just suggested it, and as the photographer refused to struggle with it, they are Skuce's pictures, perhaps the last he will ever draw without stamps upon them, for surely such should be stamped. We believe in stamps and stamping, but there is moderation in all things and stamping must stop somewhere. Surely it would be fateful to the very scheme for which stamps were set, should some one seek to set a stamp upon the shirts which Sister Susle, smiling, sews for soldiers.

Perhaps nothing need be done at present, but think it over or the stamps will get you if you don't watch out.

FIGHTING IN FLOODED TRENCHES---GUARDING SKY FRONTIERS

According to many recent reports from the front, very little infantry movement has been possible these last few weeks owing to the incessant rains, which have converted the ground in front of the trenches into a quagmire. The condition of things is almost past belief. By dint of constant pumping, life in the trenches is just tolerable. In front are high parapets made up with sand-bags, and in the trenches are several shelters of corrugated iron. Matters can be further improved by covering the ground with brushwood and straw to absorb as much water as possible, and by braziers in which coke fires burn. For keeping rifles dry the box-like arrangement shown is now being used. Rubber boots are naturally in demand. DRAWN BY F. MATANIA FOR THE SPHERE AND THE TORONTO SUNDAY WORLD

Story Told for First Time Relates How Airship Struck Tree and Forward Part Had to Be Cut Away.

NINETY MILES LIKE A SEVERED WORM

STORY of what the Zeppelin is really capable of is told in Everybody's Magazine, and for the first time it is said:

On the night of May 29, 1909, Zeppelin, accompanied by eight men sterted from Friedrichshafen on a northerly flight which was to depend on his ship's endurance. All that night her engines drove at full speed gainst a heavy wind. By morning above Nuremberg, so much fuel had burned that the lightened craft fought to rise; but she was successfully held down to a definite level by her fins. Over Saxony, her gas-lift, which had now become enormous, was oversome in the teeth of a strong wind by advancing her with bow depressed like a glant kite, assisted by her fins and the downward thrust of the trongelers.

That night, when they reached Bitterfield, four hundred miles from home. Berlin was within easy dishome. Berlin was within easy distance. But to continue to the German capital would have defeated the count's ambition—a round trip. So he turned his ship in the air and headed for home. The day's losses of gas had left space in the hull to permit the hydrogen to expand, so, without losing any of her support the airship easily ascended to a mile height, where she rushed thru the darkness, before the wind, at a speed of fifty miles an hour. of fifty miles an hour.

at 7 a. m. the count found that he had fuel left to run both motors eight more hours. Overconfidence suggested more hours. Overconfidence suggested a detour from the straight course. Another wind set in from the east and the ship advanced so slowly that a landing had to be made to replents: the After thirty-six hours in the air, all on board were exhausted. Another was to be continued to the straight of the st chor was to be cast in a quiet valley. A hill blocked its entrance. In descending, the airship's bow was pointed low ahead and thus shut off the helmsman's lookout. As the ship skimmed one this hill a pear tree suddenly slat up right in its course. Then, for the first time in the air, the kind of accident happened that has so often occurred on the water; the tired belmsman blundered—bluntered belmsman blundered bluntered blunt Sighing as his hand brushed his chin, he gazed ruefully at the wreck and murmured: "What shall I do now?" His fingers scraped or thirty-six hours' growth of beard.

Afterward, this shipwrecked commander ordered all damaged portions of the airship cut away. Even the forward motor, its shafts and propellers, were removed. The Word as a Shield

That the word of God is a shield to them that put their trust in Him, has been proved in a literal and physical sense, as well as in the spiritual meaning. The following cases are cited in the Record of the National Bible Society of Scotland:

The testament here shown was given to Private Charles Wilson, a reservist of the Highland Light Infantry, when he was called up on 5th August, and was carried by him in his left breast funic pocket. It was struck by a buliet at the battle of the Alsne, and saved his life. It was left by Wilson, along with his clothes, at a base hospital in France, when he was taken on being later wounded in his right shoulder by shrapnell. An officer into whose hands it fell was good enough to forward it to him with a note:—"As it seems to have been struck with a bullet, doubtless you would like to let the giver knew that struck by a bullet at the battle of the would like to let the giver know that Jerome is exalted by a special letter you have recovered it." A chaplain, writing from the 12th General Hospital, Rouen, says:-"I have seen some of your Gospels pierced by bullets, which were therey prevented from penetrating lung heart. I always use this to illustrate how the shield of Faith wards off the fiery darks of the wicked."
In the Glasgow Herald, David describing a visit to the soldiers' nospital. Paris, tells of a wounded man who showed him his pocket testament. "There was a scar torn right across the cover. This book was in his left breast pocket, A bullet struck it and glanced off, striking him on the neck. Here again he had luck, ecause instead of entering the neck it had merely cut a track about three inches long which was already healing. He said he would never part with that little book as long as he lived."

The other illustration shows how the life of A. G. Perkins of the First Lincolns was saved by his Bible, a gift from his mother. The book was carried in his breast pocket, and a shrapnel builet nearly pierced it-

One morning six fine Arab horses wandered, apparently quite accidentally, between the French and German lines. The enemy were careful not to fire on them, preferring to capture the animals when they got near enough to their trenches. The second German line did not dare to fire for fear of shooting their own men in the uncertain light, and the Germans wavered. At this moment the French infantrymen arrived to support their dusky comrades. THE Ontario Government nouncement a few days ago no more student fire-ran would be sent to the north woods a further evidence of a retrenth policy in times of financial stress, peared as a news item of title proncern. In university halls, however was received with a sense of keep peared as a news item of little public concern. In university halls, however, it was received with a sense of keen disappointment. More than one college man saw his chances of a summer's employment go glimmering. The inevitable which had been feared so long was at last realized, and a season of job hunting stretched as an unpleasant prospect at the close of examinations. Vacation periods often play quite as important a part in some men's lives as their hours of recognized toll. Their play times literally prove to be real paytimes, and without them certain objects and ambitions would be unattainable. In a very practical sense is this true of the university student. Out of the average four years of his higher educational training approximately a year and a quarter are allotted for vacation purposes, and were the opportunity of making money, thus provided, suddenly removed from the curriculum, the list of yearly graduates would decrease alarmingly. The education of more students than the world dreams of depends on a holiday enables.

The fire ranger is in several The fire ranger is in several ware a distinctive figure in academic life. Amid the host of types and personalities met with in student centres the very term has always arqueed more than passing interest. There is a multiplicity of reason for this.

For one thing, the position until quite recently has always been regarded as the peculiar property of the college man. It is easily the ambitton of every male student who enters a course, whether arts, science or medicine to become at some period in his existence a ranger. There is something wonderfully attractive about the life. Freshmen hear seniors telling of adventures on northern rivers; of splendid fish captured, and in the first year their blood is fired to taste these pleasures at first hand.

Money the Big Appeal

certain difficul Money the Big Appeal The idea appeals undoubtedly cause of the love of nature which cause of the love of nature which list latent in every breast. The thought of cool rivers and lakes, and the glamor of the north take strong hold upon a man in the spring of the year when he is doubled above a maze of questions in a cooped-up, stuffy examination hall. The proximity of a four month breathing spell in the woods has a somewhat demoralizing effect on such an occasion. A more welcome change could hardly be guessed. But in casting about to find reasons which account for the strong sons which account for the strong sons which account for the strong stro are said to be raclass distinctions. there is no aloo other. involved an additionally impelling attraction. To the majority this appears perhaps most strongly of all.

It must be confessed that in the past the term "fire ranger" has often been synonymous for a minimum of work and a maximum of pay, and it is not strange that the idea of government positions as sinecures should have penetrated college halls. The ranger has always been paid well for his services, and it is true that in the nast his duties have not been onerous. In former days the remuneration was two dollars a day, with government board and transportation supplied. The restrictions placed on him were comparatively elastic.

Such a prospect looked bright to the cessor. In addition to the doubling of his responsibility his expenses have been greatly increased, and his liberty has been curtailed.

He is now made to feel that he is holding down a man's job, an expert's position and not playing at becoming a rejuvenation of a courier du bois. The arrival of the student often provided a butt for the wit of the lumber-jack, and the experienced woodman long professed to sniff with scorn at the academic atmosphere of his presence in the wilds, but occasions showed him worthy of his position.

The spirit of industry, which has entered the towns of newer Ontario is visible in the ranger's camp. Radiating downward from the chief the desire is apparent to do more than the regulations downward.

In the past some had objected that it was not the hard-working class of students who sought the positior. They suggested that it was rather those who looked for the entoyment of an easy summer where labor was scarce and money was plenty. At all times there was only an element of truth in this. ENLAND'S WOMEN PLL BE READY TO SURPRISE RAIDERS niling Earnestly, Obeying Strict Rules of Discipline, Women's Army Is Rapidby Becoming a Most Formidable Force.

LADY JELLICOE TELLS OF GREAT MOVEMENT

This article, written by Lady jelicoe in London, for The Sunday world, shows how "The Women's Army" is prepared to meet raids by sea or sky. Lady Jellicoe is a moving spirit in many such woman's movements.

T IS the hour when in a thousand of the Marylcbone Elementary School mandescent lights flare upon its litthe library, upon the glass cupboards ("Section of the library, upon the glass cupboards filed with odds and ends, and labelled Charge! filed with odds and thus, and thouse felence," upon the school honors ward, and the "List of Old Boys Who ferved in South Africa 1899-1902," upon the Union Jack, which sticks out er the head of the charwoman busy with broom and duster. Yes, she says, this is where the women are about to drill. She does not find it odd that women should be about to drill. She has accepted them bout to dril. She has accepted them be seriously as they have accepted var: "Fine gurls," they are Presenty they flock upstairs, some of them the plain hat, coat, skirt, and gaiters which is the uniform of the Wo-men's Volunteer Reserve. It is not men's Volunteer Reserve. It is not khaki—at the moment kahki is in too great demand elsewhere—but the frieze dres of the girl-soldiers and the gabordine of their women officers give the same smart military effect. Because the same smart military effect. t costs nearly three sovereigns this uniform, to many of the recruits, presents a certain difficulty. Every girl who is eager to volunteer has not three sovereigns to spend, even the she may pay by instalments. So the reserve intended to supply the uniform free to those who show themselves efficient; and, partly to appeal for funds to-wards this and other objects, a great public meeting presided over by Lord Meath is to be held in the Shaftesbury Theatre.

All of the women soldiers are not typists. Many are shop assistants; at least one big London store is raising a company of its own. Many, again, are teachers. In short, wherever women work one may find a member of the Women's Volunteer Reserve. Rightly or wrongly, working women are said to be rather jealous of their class distinctions. Here, it is certain, are said to be rather jealous of their class distinctions. Here, it is certain, there is no aloofness one from the other. The reserve is wonderful as a war movement, but it means to be still more wonderful as a movement in peace-time. It has begun in a common effort to face a common peril, and it means to live on as a rallying ground which will attract women from everywhere and span the tiny social difference. It is good the Paris article. "A bullet from the enemy stretches on the bullets whistle about our ears. At least ten mitrailleuses are vomiting fire upon us. Then the German stry a ruse. They cause their bugles to sound the French 'retreat,' but they lack the trick of the tongue. It only redoubles our fury. where, and snap the tiny social differences between them.

Do You Feel a Spring Poem Coming On?

THAT feeling of "I don't just know what I want to do, but I don't want to do anything" is not spring fever; it is the spring poetry

Just as a sort of relief to the spring-stricken man and womankind among its readers The Sunday World is going to run a spring poem contest, and as an extra inducement to stir you from the poemish feeling, will give rewards for the best verse.

Your poem may be serious, it may be in the lighter vein; the only rules are that it must be verse and about spring. Five dollars for the best poem, three dollars for the next, two dollars for the third best

We may publish some of the poems next Sunday or the Sunday following, or we may hold them all to the final close of the contest, Sunday, April 4th. But all poems must be in this month.

Anie Laurie.

My DEAR, dear girl, your letter rings true in every sentence, and I am sorry that you have so unhappy a problem to face. The young man you love has been honest with you and that means everything, doesn't it? If I were you I would not make myself unhappy by spending any more time with him than with any other friend. Remember that he is not the only young man in the world whom you could love. Perhaps he would realize that he loves you even more than the other girl if you give him a chance to miss you. Try that, my dear. Men always like to do the pursuing. DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am engaged to a young man who lives on a farm some distance from the one where I live. At the time of our engagement I thought I loved him, but now, sometimes. I am not sure. He is a good fellow in a great many ways, but gets sore over the least little thing. For instance, if I tease him about another girl he is quite angry, and if I go out with another young man he does not like it. I do not keep company with any other young man; those I go out with are just old chums of mine. Do you think I should keep my engagement with him, or would man a farm some distance. DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: should keep my engagement with him, or would you advise me to break it?

I am sixteen years old. Is it all right for me to skate with a young man wene I go to the rink? I do not go very often, but wene I do go I skate with some young men if they ask me. F I WERE the young man to whom you are engaged I would not let you break the engagement—I would break it! From your letter I am sure that he is much more sensible than you are. You have no right to go out with any other man than the one to whom you are engaged. I don't blame him the slightest for getting angry with you—you show P. S.: How old should you be to keep company with a young DEAR O. B.: "To keep company with a young man," I you certainly should be old enough to spell "when" correctly. Any strl who spells when "wene" should be keeping company with her books. Forget the boys for a while.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I have a girl friend who seems to be very popular with the boys. This is the result of very obvious flirting on her part. When she is not around the boys seem to think I'm followed. I'm jolly and a good sport, but when she comes around I am shouldered into the background and am lucky if I get any attention at all

"Buddle."

OU are very wise not to flirt and lose your self respect. The boys like that sort of a girl to while away the time with, but when it comes to the girl that they wish to make their wife, you will find that it is the quiet girl they choose and not the girl who flirts. Way down at the bottom the boys have no real respect for the girl that is always flirting. Keep the girl for your friend if you wish, but do not allow her ways to influence you into flirting.

must surely have established yourself in a favorable light in the young man's eyes and I can see no reason why you should not correspond with him. You will learn gradually from his letters something about him, and before the matter becomes too serious you can make inquiries from someone in the town where he lives and if time proves him to be what you think him, you may have made a good friend, and the mere fact that you were not formally introduced is not, in this case, serious.

Weak, Wasting away, and Digestive WASTED TO A SKELETON "Nerves" and Bowel Trouble

> Mrs. Lewis. of 14 Lyon street. Vernon street, Bolton, Lancs., England, says:-"Dr. Cassell's Tablets saved my baby's life when he had been given up, and I was just waiting for the end. He was a fine baby when born, but very soon he was taken with bowel weakness, and began to waste away. The food he had either returned or set up severe diarrhoea,

"Gladys began to ail when she was only two years old, and steadily grew worse, though we did all we could think of to get her well. She was very peevish, and cried dreadfully. Sometimes she would scream for no reason at all that we could discover, and nothing would pacify her. She was just a little bundle of nerves. Her appetite was very poor, and naturally she got quite thin and weak, and her little cheeks fell in dreadfully. Indeed, she hardly ate anything, and seemed just wasting away. We tried a lot of different things that did no good at all. Then we had advice and treatment for Gladys, but that, too, was of very little use. We were told she was suffering from nervous breakdown and enlarged liver. After that we took her to an institution, where for nine months she was treated as an out-patient. Perhaps she was a little better for a time, but was soon as ill as ever. Next we took her to Ireland for three which caused the poor little thing terrible pain. He cried a lot, and his sleep was very disturbed. He would wake up suddenly with violent attacks of sickness, and evidently in great pain, and I was at my wits' end to know what to do. Poor baby had wasted until he was only a frame of bones, and he looked almost as though he would fall to pleces, he was so appallingly thin. We could count every rib. every bone of his backbone.

"Of course, I tried everything I could think of, and also took baby to an institution, but no sort of treatment did any good at all. By this time he was so far spent that we were waiting for the end. Once I was told that he could not live till Monday—that was on a Saturday. But in the end we got Dr. Cassell's Tablets, and the improvement was immediate. The diarrhoea and sickness ceased, and from that time my child never looked back. Now at thirteen months, he is a fine, big healthy baby. He has cut five teeth, and is just a picture of health." was soon as ill as ever. Next we her to Ireland for three months. that seemed to help her. But ost at once she relapsed into the old

FEMINISM AND WAR

BY H. GOMOT. (From Le Petit Journal).

HE best cultivated earth is not immune from noxious weeds and tares. It is the same with nations. Unhealthy ideas permeate them at the moment of their greatest prosperity. Dangerous ideas, too, in that they are masked under the name of liberalism and progress.

There is no nobler ideal than that of is there anything more unfortunate than the practical result of this same ideal. It has gone so far as to repuditarism, to assert the superiority of the peace. But the first bugle call, the first appeal to the heart of the people, dispelled this madness, and when it was undestood that France was in danger every citizen able to carry arms ru-marked these last years. They have wished to individualize themselves and dear to them, that of "living their own life." We have seen at close range this evil which we call feminism. Fortunately the epidemic has claimed few victims here, for the vast majority of French women will always remain devoted to the home and to the laws of the family.

An unprejudiced mind might, on the other hand contemplate the many advantages woman has achieved in modern society. Rigntly enough she has been given easy access to all the arts has been admitted into the industrial and the comercial world and even allowed to hold certain public offices. What does she still want? The right to vote and to take part in govern-ment administration. And there were certain radical women who insisted that their intelligence had been insulted because these same rights had been confined to the stronger sex. Their revolt was not discreet and peaceful minds were perturbed by their writings and their lectures. This was all before the war. the name suffragists in England and feminists in France they thought to revolutionize a world which was not ready for their ideas. But the tempest passed and their claims melted away as snow when the sun beats down up-Who recalls these days either the theories or the acts of those English suffragists who so often resorted to crime, or of French feminists who bore ridicule courageously? A great task has been offered these idlers, a task for which woman is truly born. They have understood quickly, too, that their role was to console the unortunate, not to harangue at the clubs; to dress wounds, not to lead

With what enthusiasm they taken up this new duty! What they desire is to reenter the ranks, to walk with those who have voluntarily remained true to old traditions.

T will be indeed a wonderful book to write, the golden book of women and the war, and every day is adding a new page, more moving, more splendid than the one which went be fore. But when the strife is past when the days are calm again, role will not have been played out.

Another storm wind may spring up. Old grudges may attempt to wrest new life from their dead ashes. Bitter dissent and intolerance will endeavor to reign anew. And a noble task will await you, women of France. After having been the nurse of physical ills of mankind you will deserve the great

A man I know could use a stenographer a few hours a day while his own mographer is gone. The girl who wants a job can write on the typewriter, it she can't spell. She never learned. And so she can't do that.

And she can't sweep, and she couldn't do a day's washing if her life dended on it, and she can't darn a sock to save her soul, and she never made bed right in her life, and if she went to sew the braid on the bottom of her makirt she'd get it on wrong as sure as fate.

Now what in the world was that girl's mother thinking of when she mined that girl out into the world, as helpless as a blind cripple?

Hundreds Like Her

The girl's mother was poor, and she knew that the girl would probably be or, but no millionaire's daughter was ever brought up to a more useless, bless life than that girl.

Now what do You think of a mother like that?

Oh. I knew the mother. I've known hundreds of them just like her, and so a you.

Mother does the work while daughter learns to dance, and then some day, an daughter has to do something besides dance, she wonders what on earth mother was thinking of all the time. And I wonder too. I wonder and

One thing I know, and better than all else on earth, I know it. My little girl is going to learn how to make her own living some way, somehow. And, besides that, she's going to learn to sew, and to cook, and to sweep, and to bake, and to add, and to spell, and to make her own hats, and sew the buttons on her own shoes, and hang up her own dresses in her own closet, and sew a braid on the bottom of her skirt without going into debt to the tailor to do it for her.

What About You?

this evening." said Bob very gravely Sunday evening when we were settled by ourselves in the library by the fire-

"I'm prepared for the worst. Go to "Tm prepared for the worst. Go to it, young Luchinvar." I retorted.
"Then tell me this. Where shall we go for our honeymoon? Considering that our wedding is only a few weeks off, I believe it would be quite judici-ous to know in advance where we are soing for our wedding trip. Also I consider you rather an abnormal young woman for not having brought up the subject yourself before this."

A funny thought struck me then. I remember now that one of the first things I thought of when we became things I thought of when we became engaged was where to go for our honeymoon. And I had a dozen places planhed. New York, the Exposition, Bermuda, camping in Algonquin Park, and about every place I'd ever wanted to go to, and hadn't visited. But just as soon as I had immersed myself in the practical sides of housekeeping the little frivolities that had seemed to me to be the most interesting side of marto be the most interesting side of mar-

We haven't seen each other for more than a few hours each week for the last six months.

"If a wedding journey is for the purpose of getting the newly married people away from loving friends and relatives, we're accomplishing that beautifully by living several towns away from them. And if it's for the purpose of introducing novelty in the way of a journey, let's postpone it until the novelty of being together has worn off and we need a trip outside to prevent us from getting bored with each other! I move that we begin our life together n our own little apartment, and not in any honeymooney resort, and let's take our wedding journey every year here-after on the anniversary of the happy

'Done!" agreed Bob. "If you change your mind about it within the next few weeks all you need to do is to say so, and I'll make use of the 78 timetables and schedules that are on my desk in the office collected for the sole course. Mrs. Newlywed Says:--

"Pve heard of Eddy's Indurated Fibreware. What's the difference between fibre and woodenware?"
"Fibreware is made from compressed fibre, baked at extreme heat. All in one solid piece, it cannot warp or fall apart. No chance of splinters. Wears much longer, looks better, and is light to carry. The latter point you should always take into consideration," concludes Mrs. Wiscondals.

in my opinion, no girl whose com-plexion is fair and who values the texture of her skin should go out of doors without first preparing the skin to Two Complexion Aids.

If cold cream agrees with your skin it becomes a simple matter to prevent tan. You have only to coat the skin with cold cream, dust it with a harmless face powder and wear a chiffon or lace veil loosely about the face.

This is an excellent cold cream for this purpose:

Rose water4 ounces Spermaceti ounce White wax1 ounce This coating should be removed as soon as you come in doors. To do this properly the face should be washed with a saturated solution of borax which will cut the grease and cleanse the pores. Follow the application of the borax by a cleansing bath of clear water as the former has a tendency to dry the skin. A final wiping with an astringent lotion should follow. The becomes pathologically aware or his heighbors, his competitor's, his rival's, his enemy's shortcomings, yet remains wholly convinced of his own pure motives and eternal virtue. Few men know themselves, while many professors, experts, authorities and other conspicuously prominent gentlemen in all walks of life have a moonstruck madness. about their own value and an utter contempt for that of another.

Most of these illusions are the result of that Ali Baba's cave of jewels and dross called memory. Memory is both the prisoner and the warder of a man's outlook. The memory of the just is blessed, but where is there such a person? The memory of most human creatures is cursed by delusions, dreams, reveries hopes, hatreds, wishes, disappointments and aspirations. Show me any one who is able clearly to separate a recollected event from its encompassing mixtures of visions and I will show you either an angel, a new-born babe, or a superman. There are none such.

While memory holds a seat in the distracted globe of living stuff, the motion picture takes place side by side with reality. A rough, round globe of the proper color, seen for an instant, will be sworn to in court and under eath as an orange. A shot heard half an hour after a nearby murder will cling to memory's tablets as an event simultaneous with the moment assigned to the catastrophe.

ory's tablets as an event simultaneous with the moment assigned to the catastrophe.

Infants and young children have the most accurate memories. No matter how virtuous, honest and sincere a man or woman may be, the older they grow the less reliable in general will their memory be. Emotions, beliefs, visions illusions, desires, pictures and dreams all become intimately and almost indissolubly intertwined with what actually happened at another place and instant.

Psychological laboratory experiments have of late been directed more and more toward an analysis and understanding of memory. Most persons realize that there are more elements to memory than mere recollection. The power to recognize a previously experienced thing is always much more simple than to recall something at will. To recognize, to recollect and to recall are each understood when you think of your own native language.

You speak and use—that is, to recollect and apply appropriately—only a few thousand words. Your conversation is made up of a limited list of plain words. Yet you read your newspaper and understand—that is to say, your memory "recognizes"—tens of thousands of words and their meanings, which you never recall in the practice of conversation.

An Amazing Experiment.

Mr. Garry C. Myers, an eminent student of psychology, has just unravelled.

An Amazing Experiment.

Mr. Garry C. Myers, an eminent student of psychology, has just unravelled another one of these tangled skeins of the intellect in his researches upon recognition and recall as related to human remembrances as subjects of his investigation. Mr. Myers used 234 high school students as subjects. A number of words were spoken to them as if for a spelling test, and half an hour later the two hundred subjects were asked to recall the words. After a lanse of three months they were again surprised by a request for a second recall. After the answers were made—two minutes only being allowed for this—the words were called out again and mixed with twice as many other words, and the students were asked to recognize them.

To the surprise of Mr. Myers not one of the 284 brilliant students could recall six of the words, and one-fifth of them could recall none. Yet 283 of the 234—all but one—recognized nearly all the words, and more boys recognized all of the words than did the girls.

Mr. Myers concludes from his experiments that the capacity of the memory to recall. There is no relationship in any one person's memory between his power to recall and his speed and power of recognition. These two functions, seem to be separate and distinct. Training, exercise and experience must be directed separately for each.

The longer the interval which elapses between an event and its subsequent multiplies more rapidly, however, for recall than for recognition.

The strength of the memory to recall is greatest where new of occurrences can be associated or linked up with something memory is in the habit of recalling. An emotional accompanionen

Vernon Rudolf, one of the best of our local planists, upon the invitation of his master, W. O. Forsyth, gave a recital in the assembly hall of the Central Y. M. C. A. last Saturday evening. His playing of the Bach Prelude, and Fugue in F sharp major, was brilliant and inspiring, and the Schumann Romance. Moszkowski's concert study "In Autumn," Grieg's Nocturne, Op. 54; Leschetizky's Octave Intermezzo, the Liszt Rhapsody, No. 13; and five Chopin pleces gave abundant evicence of his versatility, and were fine examples of advanced plano playing wherein rapidity execution, glittering technic and soulful expression were outstanding. Most enthusiastic appliause after each number testified to the unlimited admiration and pleasure of the audience. Ruby Brock, the popular soprano, sang an aria from "Il Trovatore" and songs by Cadman, Hahn and Arditi, being splendidly accompanied by Harvey Robb.

FILLS MASSEY HALL

Accuracy of Execution, Beauty of Tone and Fine Musical Expression Dominant.

It must have been a great gratification to H. M. Fletcher and his chorus to have Massey Hall filled to its capacity last Tuesday evening, on the schubert Choir. The rehearsals thruout the long winter months have been trying and tedicus, but their reward to the company and tedicus, but their reward to the company and tedicus, but their reward tags.

trying and tedious, but their reward came when an audience of nearly three thousand people showed by its hearty and enthusiastic applause that their work had not been in vain. In fact the concert on the whole might be termed an achievement, so far has the chorus developed along the lines of beauty of tone, sureness of attack, accuracy of execution and graceful gradations of power. Mr. Fletcher's work is entirely free from ostentation or show, being confined to the more carnest and vital qualities that tend toward permanent technical and artistic equipment of the chorus as a unit. Fine musical feeling and a A series of five comme urit Fine musical feeling and a sober reflective attitude flavored all the work, and the result was most the work, and the result was most satisfying. Agnes Adie, pupil of Atherton, will give her third annual recital at Foresters' Hall on Thursday evening. On Monday night at the Toronto Conservatory of Music, Paul Wells once more proved himself to be not only a pianist of uncommon quality March 25. Miss Adie has made great progress during the past twelve nonths, and her appearance this year is looked forward to with more than usual interest.

The program of folk songs arranged by Mrs. H. M. Blight for the Women's Musical Club on March 4 proved suf-ficiently attractive to fill the concert hall of the Toronto Conservatory of Music. Joy Denton, the charming Music. Joy Denton, the charming young soprano who has just recently returned from Europe, sang "The Nightingale," "Cecelia" and "My Love's An Arbutus," being examples of Russian, French and Irish folk songs; Hope Morgan gave a group of nine songs including old French and English, Norwegian, French-Canadian and Manx; Russell G. McLean gave two old English and two old Irish songs, and Mrs. Millet-Low, Mrs. W. T. Merry, Redferne Hollinshead and Mr. McLean sang the "Belle Figlia" musical intensity that made his performance a most thrilling one. His tone, too, was beautiful, warm, and opulent, his trills and runs dazzled and sparkled like sun-lit crystal, and his ability to color and vary his touch seemed to have no limit. In the Dance Fantasies, eight short pieces played en suite, Mr. Wells made himself known as a composer of distinction, his style being both stimulating and delightful. The large audience demonstrated its emphatic appreciation and admiration of his creative work by recalling him again and again after his brilliant and effective playing of the suite, Nine Chopin etudes with obligato accompaniments Mr. McLean sang the "Belle Figlia." from "Rigoletto." A trio for piano, violin and 'cello was very well played by Mrs. Gordon Jennings and the Misses Coatsworth and Winslow.

Zusman Caplan, violinist, was heard at his best last Saturday evening when he played at a concert in the Labor Temple. His numbers were the Gluck Melodie, Kreisler's Variations, and the etudes with obligate accompaniments for strings and flute, also arranged by Alma B. The Ford building was turned over entirely to the exhibitors, and lent it self admirably to the purposes of a motor show. The track on the roof is of concrete, and was used for outdoor demonstratins. When a visitor expressed a desire to experience the riding qualities of a car, and to see the machine in operation, car, visitor and chauffeur were whisked to the roof in a specially constructed lift-The prospect was then given a ride around the aerial concrete track, and was able to see a complete test and demonstration. A way out of the difficulty—the difficulty of obtaining sufficient transport drivers—would probably be found, according to one London newspaper, if women were to take the place of those chauffeurs who are now driving private automobiles. Already in London there are a large number of ladies driving cars, and the appearance of the female taxi-driver is not likely to be long delayed. It is to be hoped, this paper says, that the Commissioner of Police will grant the necessary licenses, as patriotism demands that every man possible should be free to give bis services to the needs of the country.

With this week's production, which will be the last chance to see this excellent organization, Raiph Cummings presents the charming leading woman, Elsie Rizer, in what is promised to be a perfect production of the great French society drama, "Frou, Frou." There are few actresses indeed who can handle the difficult role of Gilbert in this celebrated play, most of them shy at it because the great Bernhardt made such a success of the character, and are afraid of being criticized for trying to do it, but Mr. Cummings has assured Miss Rizer that she is quite competent to play the part, and has everything in her own nature that is required in the part, and as he has made other leading women play it, to be exact, only two of them, she has accepted his

"Bought and Paid For"

HERE has been a great deal of interest manifested in the forthcoming engagement of George Broadhurst's starring drama-comed of married life, "Bought and Paid For," which played for one solid year at William A. Brady's famous Playhouse in New York, and which will be seen here for the first time at less than dollar-fifty prices, at the Grand Opera House this week. The plot deals with Robert Stafford, a handsome young self-made millionaire, and a man of domineering will, who woos Virginia Blaine, a pretty telephone operator at a fashionable hotel, while transacting business over dong-dis-tance. He invites her and her sister, Fanny, and Fanny's intended husband, Jimmy Gilley, a self-conceited shipping clerk, with superfluous ideas, to visit his palatial home. While showing her all the treasures of his bachlor quarters, he proposes, and altho as yet she does not love him, she is nated, after spending an evening at he opera, and disgusts his wife by his insinuations and by forcing his attentions upon her. In this frenzy he neans of making her his wife and establishing her in his home. The next day she agrees to a reconciliation if he will forever forswear drink. This he refuses to do, on the ground that he will not be dictated to. His wife leaves him and goes to the home of her sister, taking a position as a sales lady, at the paltry salary of $7 a week. Brother-in-law Gilley has also come down in the world thru the estrangement of Stafford and his wife informs his sister-in-law that by her quixotry she has absolutely ruined the Grand Duke Boris, of Russia, now at the front. IRENE FRANKLYN HARKS BACK AGES TO TALK RAGTIME Charming Comedienne Is an Expert on Syncopation-Says it Was Born Two Centuries Age.

RENE Franklyn, the charming singthis week, has some unique and orig-inal ideas of the stage—as it appears inal ideas of the stage—as it appears to those who watch the performers from the front of the house. And Miss Franklyn is not a bit backward in tearing away that veil of mystery, that beautiful cloud of unreality that surrounds the fairles of the footlights. In an interview with The Sunday World she discussed these things very frankly:

world she discussed these things very frankly:

"The public has a way of judging by externals," she replied, "and if you ask me, my candid opinion is that the crub-lady has a much easier time of it. You mustn't judge by externals. Just consider that a prima donna must sing whether she feels like it or not. Even if she has a dying mother, a tick father and sister and brother, if the has a cold, she must not disappoint her audience. She can't explain that things are not as they ought to be and that she'd like to be excused; she must go on and be judged. Remember, that the scrub-lady has only her mistress to satisfy, and no mistress is as exacting as that ruthless and unbending taskmaster, the audience that has paid its money."

Oh! Miss Franklyn could discourse learnedly upon music and in a manner that might be a surprise to some of the pedagogs! It is true that she is appearing in a merry whirly-whirly entertainment of light character, but mention that to her and she'll talk about syncopation and ragtime in a manner that would give you the vertigo.

"Syncopation was the stock-in-trade"

"Syncopation was the stock-in-trade of most of the great composers," she avows. "It is a striking feature of Hungarian music and it will be found in most of the old sailors' chanties. Only the mediocre performer and composer have no use for it. Why, folk that think rastime is new and that it originated in America are a few centuries behind the times. Read Spitta's 'Life of Bach' and you'll find that Vicaldi, who died in 1743, is credited with having been the father of syncopation and that it was popular in his day. Bach imitated it—but it was in use long before Bach's day. Schumann was a ragtimist—and. be-"Syncopation was the stock-in-trad Schumann was a ragtimist—and, be-tween you and me, you'll find that Beethoven and Brahns did not neglect syncopation, despite all the talk to the

Loew's Winter Garden

THE keynote of "Young Romance," the noted play by Wm. C. DeMille, which Jesse L. Lasky will offer at Loew's Winter Garden in picturized form, with Edith Tallaferro as the star, is originality. It is a love story of to-day—not such a love story as happens in every household or every book, but a romance altogether unique

The two leading characters of this which happily combines whim-elements and incidents of adventure, are Nellie Noland and Tom Nellie works at the notions Clancy. Nellie works at the notions counter of a big department store, and Tom is in the hardware department of the same establishment. But both of their souls are filled with ambitions and aspirations not to be downed by even the routine of such existence. Nellie has saved a whole hundred dol-lars and, in a fit of June madness, decides to spend it all for one week of glorious pretense at a Maine summer resort, assuming the role of a lady of fashion and tasting for once the joys of wealth. Tom is impressed with the same newspaper story which has caught Nellie's eye and he goes to the same resort, posing as a rich young man from Newbort.

The two young people meet each other, each believing the other belong to an entirely different sphere of life, and the succeeding events make it possible for Tom to become a hero in the eyes of the girl by rescuing her from a desolate island. They fall in love, but an understanding is impos-sible because they both are unwilling to confess that they are not what they seem. They both return to the store, and that very day Tom is transferred to the counter directly opposite where Nellie deals in notions. Thus, they meet for the first time in their rightful surroundings and Cupid wins. Edith Taliaferro appears as Nellie, and Tom Forman as Tom. Other leading roles are assumed by Florence Dagmar, Violet Drew, Mrs. Lewis Mc-Cord, Frederick Wilson, Ernest Gar-cia, Marshall Mackay, Harry de Vere, Parke Jones Charles Wells, Miss Abril and Miss White.

Hill, as a French detective; Jean Schuler, as a stuttering colonel; when with a dictagraph in their office, overhears their schemes, but is herself caught them with a dictagraph at her ear Jean Schuler, as a stuttering colonel; Frank W. Martin, in a straight role, are all cast to good advantage. Dolly Sweet, the magnetic little soubrette, heads the cast of feminine beauty. Of the many features the all-star olio of novelties stand out in the perform-ance as the real treat, during the ac-tion of the olio, Dolly Sweet will introduce songs never heard in this city before; Mr. Billy Inman and Mr. Frank L. Wakefield will present their comedy sketch, "A Square Deal"; this act is one of the big features, consist-ing of comedy and pathos mingled to-gether in such a manner that one minute the audience is doubled with laughter only to find tears trinkling down their cheeks the next. Schuler, Hill and Martin, the highest salaried singing trio in burlesque, will offer character singing that is bound to be a treat. The sensational feature will be the "Girlie" number, in which the "Girl in Red," the "Girl in Gray," the "Girl in Wihte," and the "Girl in Blue," will be introduced.

OLLOWING closely along the lines of the more recent musical comedy successes, "The Beauty Parade," comes to the Gayety Theatre. By reason of its brightness, tunefulness, and cleanliness, this attraction makes a special claim to recognition from burlesque theatregoers. The plot of the average entertainment of this type is never presumed to amount to very much, and up to a certain point in that respect, "The Beauty Parade," does not differ from the rest. However, while comedy and pretty musical numbers are given first and the most important consideration, there is nevertheless, a "book" of a certain denevertheless, a "book" of a certain degree of consistency, and which is adhered to as closely as possible. "Five Hundred Dolars Reward," the two-act musical burletta presented by "The Beauty Parade" Company, may not be quite as uproarious in its humor as some of the other pieces to be seen at the Gayety during the season, but it so well cast, and the action is so certain and rapid that no fault can consistently be found. Fourteen charming musical numbers effectually drown any inconsequential bits that may fail to please in a flood of golden melodies. As is fitting, a number of the best of these fall to Miss Hilda-garde Stone, the charming prima donna, whose voice and attractiveness contribute largely to the excellence of the production. The chorus, too, is a joy to behold. They are all new sprites who have not yet fallen vic-tims to that feeling of inertia that seems to grasp the average chorus girl after a few seasons "in the business."
George F. Hayes and Ambark
(Bumpsy) All are the principal comedians. Joe Phillips, a juvenile fun-ster, and M. A. Curran and Chas. Tyson, also contribute to the honor. Mr. Wm. Meehan is the "straight" man, and the Misses Ruth Barbour and Lillian Brooks are accorded important parts. Miss Lilla Brennan in the dual capacity of an ingenue-soubrette, plays with spirit, dresses beautifully, and ENEROUS and varied will be the bill for each half of this week at the Strand Theatre. For Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday the feature photo-play will be the tense and thrilling patriotic drama, "On His Majesty's Service," featuring Jane Gail in the leading role. This drama is one of German espionage, and the The vehicle used to display their typist, a smart, shrewd girl, who are instructed by the heads of their by them with a dictagraph at her ear They first chloroform and then abduc her, meaning to make away with her, but they are followed by a secret sergives him, he arrives at the rallway bridge in time to save the train. The sples pay the penalty of their crimes. During the first half of the week, tool an excruciatingly funny Vitagraph comedy, "A Man of Parts," with Wally Van as "Eb," will be presented. This comedy is one with an irresisti-ble appeal to all who have ever had anything to do with an amateur dra-matic society. Owing to jealousies the members of one of these organizations fail to turn up on the night of their annual play. And "Eb" and another have to do the whole thing on their own, playing between them their own, playing between them all the parts in a full cast. It is a close call, but "Eb" proves himself a real genius, and the play makes a big hit. A delightful Essanay drama, "A Romance of the Night" "A Romance of the Night," and one of the funniest of the Lubin comedies, entitled "It All Depends," will complete the first half of the week's bill. For Thursday, Friday and Saturday the feature photo-play will be one which every person who owns. o works in a factory, or industrial plant in Toronto ought to see—ought to see and lay to heart. It is called "The Locked Door," a play with a purpose —and that purpose is fire prevention. It is so thrilling that it makes an inradicable impression on the mind of every intelligent person who sees i One factory is modern in every way with every precaution taken against fire. The other factory is a place where danger to the workers is al-ways present. The place catches fire. In a thrilling scene, the girl workers imprisoned behind "The Locked Door" are seen fighting blindly to get away from the flames. AST Sunday I announced that my next article, p lished today, would be devoted to a discussi Canadian motion-picture authors. As this is t an elaborate story of especial interest to Canadians, who at this time vitally interested in anything all-Canadian at this time vitally interested in anything all-Canadian, have ben obliged to postpone my writing upon this subject this week because of lack of time in collecting all necessary material with which this article will deal. It is too important a subject to deal gently with and too much credit is due these Canadians for e-ceptional ability in writing photo plays that catch the public fancy. When one realize that in far-away England the products of the brains of the Dominion are now being shown to thousands of loya Britons a feeling of pride must fill the hearts of all Canadians. So this is the reason for my taking another weel noroly the neccessary data for a proper presentation of the dians. So this is the reason for my taking another week to secure more thoroly the neccessary data for a proper presentation of this subject. I trust my readers will, therefore, pardon my writing upon another matter, leaving the Canadian authors for my next contribution. An Unusual Event

An unusual event is taking place in New York City at the present time, so unusual in fact that I consider it of importance for lengthy mention here At the Liberty Theatre, on 42nd street, in the American metropolis, there is a photoplay feature being presented to enthusiastic audiences which has set a new standard for all screen productions. It is everything that the producers have claimed for it. It is stupendous, colossal, ambitious. Over 18,000 people were employed in its making and nearly 140,000 feet of negative film used in photographing the story. Over six months' time was found necessary for its proper taking and an entire city was built so that adequate settings could be secured. The police of Los Angeles, near which city all the scenes were made, prohibited the exhibition of this photoplay on the ground that it was too sensational and might cause race riots or something akin to such a condition. Now in New York it is creating more talk than any American feature has ever secured.

Two Dollars for Orchestra Se ats

Such a success is this new photoplay that its managers have made the price of admission $2 for an orchestra chair, and what is more to the point the picture devotees are paying this price without a murmur. Imagine that! A theatre that until a year ago housed only stars and plays of the first magnitude now charging and receiving for a picture on the screen the same figure that theatre, absolute fact. Only once before in the history of moving pictures has any such a price been asked and that was for the Durbar spectacle. For this release $1.50 was the price for a few rows in the orchestra, which was later reduced the price of the part of the price of the price for a few rows in the orchestra, which was later reduced the price of the price for a few rows in the orchestra, which was later reduced the price of the price of the price for a few rows in the orchestra, which was later reduced the price of the p An Extraordinary Occasion

Something out of the ordinary must cause such a situation. That something is found in the person of David W. Griffiths. He is the man who made such a thing possible. He succeeded when others failed. This wizard of the photoplay already has done work to uplift the picture drama than any other man in this field of amusement. The tutor of Mary Pickford and other clever artists; the man who first introduced what is now known as the "close-up" has once again proven his right to be acclaimed the foremost producer of moving pictures. And no one is more pleased than the writer. I have seen him directing picture-making when he was the mainstay of the Biograph Company. I know how careful he is regarding detail; to what lengths he would go to secure an effect that other directors would pass by with only a passing thought. He is the Belasco of the movies and I can pay him no greater compliment than to compare him to the theatrical producer to which I owe so much, and for whom I have such a profound admiration. The Birth of Nations'

The name of this photoplay is "The Birth of Nations." It is founded on the Rev. Mr. Thomas A. Dixon's widely-read story, "The Clansman" But it goes beyond Mr. Dixon's story. It begins with the Indians, and proceeds thru the slave period. This story was first secured by the Kinemacoler Company for moving-picture purposes, but a disagreement between that company and the author caused the contract to be declared void. Mr. Griffiths had faith in presents it to the public at the highest prices ever asked for a photoplay. He was allowed to use his own discretion as to expenditures and the fact that he took about 140,000 feet of negative and then culled it to 12,000 feet, is proof The Languest Feature Plan. The Longest Feature Play

This play is the longest feature film ever presented in this country. Its twelve reels are brimful of action. "Cabiria," another sensation, given in eight reels in this country, was shown as twelve in Europe. Four reels were eliminated when this photoplay was presented in New York because the management claimed no audience would sit thrue a feature. eliminated when this photopiay was presented in New York because the management claimed no audience would sit thru a feature of such a length. Griffiths has proven the fallacy of this idea. His masterpiece is playing to crowded houses and his venture marks a new epoch in the feature business of the world. The moving-picture industry can well be proud of this genius.

The Disobedient Girl.

One day Mary's mother said that she could go to her aunts. It was raining that day and her mother told can her not to wear her Sunday hat, but she would not listen. So she put her Sunday hat an Just as she was going around a corner her hat blew into a puddle, so she went home, and too had to stay at home for being diso- go bedient.

--- ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS AND GOOD, KIND, DEAR DOG MUTT --JOHN PRETENDS HE IS A GHOST AND WHAT HAPPENS.

The laundry EAG stood by the door; John said to Tom: "Now see! I'll fit right in that laundry bag, As nicely as can be.

"And when cook passes by the door, I'll holler out: "Hee! Hee!" She'll think it is a ghost for sure; She'll never know it's me."

Tom said to John: "Don't do it, Kid, You know that's doing bad;" John said: "Give SOMEONE ELSE advice, You really make ME sad."

Well! John crawled in the bag, he did; And dear; What happens now? Why! Off he goes to sleep some way, He really can't tell how.

Then by and bye the Laundry Man, Knocks at the door-then; say! He sees the bag and says: "How! Fline! BLIG laundry here today."

Then off he trots with bag on back, But worst of all my dear; He's DEAF; yes, deaf as any post, And John he cannot hear.

Poor Johnny struggles, screams and kicks, And howls: "Who's got me? WHO? The next time that I crawl in here, I'll stay outside, boo! hoo!"

Then off he trots with bag on back, But worst of all, my dear He's DEAF, yes, deaf as any post,

The Chinaman, you know, Heard "FIVE CENTS MORE" and round he whirled 'Twas odd but it was so.

Look at Mutt's SMILING FACE button tied to his Poor Pa comes racing down the road; He takes a breath and cries:

"It's BOYS, not shirts, within that bag, Please look! Where are your eyes?" Well! Mutt, good dog, was there of course, And great was his distress; He showed more brains than Pa or all,

I really must confess. For when he saw John's cat-like plight, He just ran back you see. And grabbed two collars from the shelf,

As quick as quick could be. Then out again; Oh me! Oh my! To see him run my dear, And hear him howl: "Wait; FOUR CENTS

Two collars yet are here." Well! Conts make $-then-say! Look!

The Chinaman you know Heard "FIVE CENTS MORE," and round he whirled.

Twas odd but it was so.

Mutt handed him the collars then; The bag was opened-My! THE GHOST crawled out, while Pa ran up-Good, kind, dear, sympathetic, dog Mutt says: "Please don't write any more." C. A. MACPHIE.

The World Window

Records of German Crime

If the various reports issued by the Belgian Commission, appointed to investigate the charges of barbarity and brutality laid against the German invaders prepared the public mind to believe almost any story of cruelty and outrage that published recently by the corresponding French Commission contains an even more ghastly and shameful record. German newspapers resent the title of "Modern Huns" bestowed on the German armies and never grow tired of praising German "Kultur" and announcing that world dominion is theirs by right of superior intellectual, moral and social development. They laud, too, the German type of Christianity as presenting within itself the living embodiment of the precepts and teaching of its divine founder. In this German writers are only following in the footsteps of the Kaiser who also never grows weary of proclaiming his close alliance with the deity, his dependence on divine protection and his consciousness of a divine mission on divine protection and his consciousness of a divine mission. Yet the neutral world has been confronted with the spectacle of the armies of this nation and of this man violating every possible principle of Christianity and of law divine and human. For the most hideous of the horrors described by the commissions are not the work of individual degenerates, but were perpetrated in pursuance of a deliberate policy of "frightfulness."

That is the supreme tragedy of these plain, unvarnished and restrained chronicles of murder, arson, pillage and crimes too terrible to be detailed. The narrative compiled by the French Commission is a simple and circumstantial statement of facts as given on oath by the witnesses examined and includes the sworn testimony. It carries conviction of the truth of the occurrences described by the witnesses, but no effort is made to inflame public sentiment by appeals to human emotion. In brief, the report is an arraignment of the German armies for behaving to the civilian population of the conquered districts with a studied savagery amenable to no restraint if only a reign of absolute terrorism could be imposed. What good the Kaiser and his satellites hope to gain from a policy of this kind is difficult to understand. It is certainly the worst of all foundations on which to build a new German province filled with Belgians and Frenchmen who are to be given the superior blessing of German Government and inculcated in the benefits of German "Kultur." It is only the policy of a people mad with the lust of do-minion and infatuated with the notion of their super-humanity to a degree that makes them a law unto themselves and judges in their own cause. Such a people in the twentieth century are an anachronism, a menace to civilization for whom anything but crushing defeat is impossible if humanity is to survive.

Terrorism a Studied Policy

Not only have men of military age been murdered without trial of any kind but the same fate has been extended to men, women and children. It has been lone, too, not merely with cold-blooded indifference, but in many instances in a manner indicating what can only be called a devilish delight in the job. So general, so numerous and so similar in character have been the lawless excesses of the German troops even when under the immediate command of their officers, even their higher officers, that it is quite impossible to accept the theory of their unpremeditated occurrence. What renders it more certain that they were acts of deliberate policy is the fact that they happened in their most frightful form in the first stage of the war. When the German burglars broke into the Belgian homeland and stumbled over the door mat, the Kaiser and his war staff were determined to achieve a swift and decisive victory over the French army then only in process of mobilization. For that purpose, it was essential to preserve their lines of communication intact and they conceived that inviolability could most easily and readily be obtained by breaking the spirit of the civilian population. To that resolution was later added the fury coming from bitter disappointment. The heroism of the Belgians saved France, but it roused the ire of the Huns and made their vicarious sacrifice still harder to be borne.

Dr. Parker's

Not for the first time has the Kaiser preached this doctrine of terrorism. He did it at the time of the joint expedition to China in 1900 when the old dowager empress organized a campaign of ex-

Sentences termination against missionaries and foreign residents. At that time he stirred up the redoubtable Dr. Joseph Parker of the City Temple, London, who on Sunday, July 29, of that year, made the following striking statements supplied to The Canadian American of Chicago, by a ministerial correspondent: "I read in the newspapers yesterday something which I cannot believe. I refer to the speech reported to have been delivered by the German Emperor. He invoked the name of God and spoke, as it were in the name of Christ and His religion and yet, in the midst of his speech, he said, speaking of the Chinese—'Give no quarter, take no prisoners, so use your weapons that no Chinaman for a thousand years will dare to beard a German.' * * * I do not halt in my ministry to make any remarks upon the merely military part of the program, but when that program is associated with the name of God and with the name of Jesus Christ, I do iong to send word to the Chinese that the spirit of the Gospel is: 'Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves, pray for them that despitefully use you and persecute you.' I cannot allow the Lord's great, sweet name to be profaned without making at least a feeble personal protest."

Terrorism Only a

The Kaiser did make that speech and he has whetted its edge by the conduct of his troops in the occupied districts of Belgium and France. There, too, the command was given to his soldiers: "So use your weapons that no Belgian or Frenchman for a thousand years will dare to beard a German." His order was only too faithfully obeyed, but the spirit of the Belgian, the spirit of the Frenchman remains unbroken. They have dared to beard the German soldier and the day will surely come when he will be driven from the fair lands he has devastated and laid waste. Retribution will follow for these most cruel wrongs, but it will not be the retribution of the Hun. It must however, be so drastic and severe that no German, Kaiser, King or soldier, will ever again dare to wage war with the unbridled ferocity of a savage. The Kaiser is yet down on these once fair regions, "having great wrath because he knoweth he hath but a short time." He is still trying his rule of terrorism on the sea, and wild was the joy of his people when the high admiral issued his edict of destruction without warning and without mercy to the crews of peaceful merchantmen. In that the Kaiser will fail; has already failed, just as he has failed to make the Belgian and the Frenchmen crouch beneath his scourge. Nor will the Briton, at home or

THE BLOOD OF THE MAPLE

Will the U.S. Government Buy the Western Pacific?

Another United States railroad has gone into the hands of a receiver. This latest system to suffer from the operations of a so-called master of finance is the Western Pacific, an enterprise that owed its origination to the late George Gould, whose dream of establishing another transcontinental line had never chance to be realized. Looking back over the history of the later United States railroads, it records many instances of schemes entered upon without regard to either existing conditions or future prospects. Yet their initiators posed and were generally accepted at the time as typical examples of the American spirit and as the owners of shrewd and practical business minds. Now they, or rather their relics, remain as monuments of egotism and folly.

In the leading editorial of a recent issue, The Financial World of New York and Chicago remarks that with Gould, the predominating thought appears to have been first to raise the money, without consideration for any of the accepted tenets of conservatism and let the future take care of itself. The Western Pacific has ended in the same fiasco which has attended all the properties with which Gould was associated simply because they were based on unsound systems of finance. This particular undertaking started with a first mortgage debt of $50,000,-000 to which succeeded $25,000,000 of second mortgage bonds. These sums represented over $80,000 per mile of debt upon a road running thru a territory that could not carry it and the earnings show that it will require years before its resources and products suffice to support the mountain of debt under which the road

This did not represent the whole of Gould's financing. He controlled the Denver and Rio Grande railroad and yoked it up with the Western Pacific to the extent of guaranteeing the interest and principal of the first mortgage bonds. The Denver also holds the second mortgage issue, none of which, fortunately for the investing public, has been placed on the market. As the Western Pacific has never been in a position to pay the interest on the first mortgage bonds, the Denver and Rio Grande has had to make up the deficiency and it is semi-officially announced that Gould's ill-starred venture has cost the guaranteeing company more than $40,-000,000 in cold cash for which it has not received a penny of what can be considered profit or any advantage. The result is that the value of the Denver's guarantee to the holders of the first mortgage Western Pacific bonds is worth practically nothing at all.

These being the circumstances, The New York American comes out with the suggestion that the United States Government should become the purchaser of the Western Pacific road. It thinks the government could get the property for about one-third of its indebtedness and onethird of its actual cost. The American contends that the way to get government ownership of railroads is for the government to own a railroad. Able to borrow money at a low rate of interest, the government could speedily build the feeders that are needed to bring prosperity to the Western Pacific and the road in the hands of the States would be a safeguard to the Pacific Coast, that has so long stumbled under the burden of railroad monopoly. Will President Wilson take advantage of this opportunity? He has been urging the public ownership of steamers-why not of railroads?

World Concern of the Mediterranean

Not even the first great drive of the German armies thru Belgium and Northern France, the capture of Brussels and the fall of Antwerp have so held the attention of the world as the operations now in progress in the Dardanelles. The significance of the place held by Constantinople was not at first fully recognized. Only when the forts began to yield to the powerful guns brought to bear by the allied fleet and the mine sweepers came into play did the full import of the expedition dawn upon the nations. That the Dardanelles could not be forced had long been the supposition and the Russian armies were still too distant to compel consideration of the consequences attending the occupation of Constantinople. When it suddenly became an early possibility it set the world guessing.

No sea on earth equals the Mediterranean in historic importance. Its shores are dotted with the relics of bygone civilizations whose impress remains with the most advanced nations of today. Egypt, hoary with the story of six thousand years; Palestine, the cradle of the Christian religion; Greece, mother of arts and eloquence-Rome, the Empire that carried its law and its engineering skill into every quarter of the known world. All these and the later empires, kingdoms, and republics that crowd the story of the Mediterranean are of the deepest interest to the human race. Even the British Isles are intimately concerned with the great inland sea and today they are the arbiters of its

Unity of the British Empire

Now that Canadians are in the trenches on the western front of the European war and their names appear in the casualty lists that are awaited with so much anxiety, the people of the Dominion will more immediately realize their place and responsibilities in and towards the British Empire. Not the United Kingdom alone, but every British Dominion and dependency is closely involved in the issue of the war. Success for the allied arms means the continued free development of an aggregation of nations and peoples, loosely and for convenience sake, called an Empire, but which is in reality an association standing together, not thru the compulsion of force, but because of a conviction and an instinct that within its confines peace and freedom can be found.

British peoples have nothing to regret in that they have become participators in this greatest and most momentous of world wars. Men of the Empire have rushed to the colors from the seven seas. The unity, the enthusiasm, the self-sacrifice that have sprung into being provide a living inspiration to the world.

CRUSTS AND CRUMB By Albert Ernest Stafford

HERE is only one passage in the friends without question Bible, I think, which directly and unequivocally warrants anyand unequivocally warrants anyone in the internal use of alcoholic liquors, but I never hear it quoted by those who subject themselves to the influences of the poison. The passage to spend large sums to have in mind is in the Gospel of St. Mark, xvi., 17, 18: "These signs shall follow them that believe; In My name shall they cast out Jevils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up sempents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." The authenticity of the passage has been disputed by the textual critics, but Mr. Ivan Panin, with his septenary not be allowed to numerical test, which shows the Greek text to be constructed on an intricate and incontestable system, our boasted British liberty whereby the very letters, and all the is to become of the exempts. words form part of an elaborate whole fre so that not even a letter can be detached from the rest without breaking the symmetry of the arithmetical regenuineness. Those who have Greek texts Mr. Panin uses Westcott and Hort, I believe may sit down and count for themselves. I have not had time to do much in corroboration of Mr. Panin, but I counted the words and letters in the Lord's Prayer, and they certainly respond to the system, the Greek version containing 68 words, 9 by 7, and 315 letters, or 7 by by 5. If the system works in the 16th chapter of Mark the higher critics have a new problem on their hands. It must at once be admitted that only supernatural literary ability could onstruct a series of books, such as those of which the New Testament consists, in which all the words and all the letters, and not only these, but the important substantives, and the septenary relation to each other. Let anyone who thinks the task simple sit down and write a passage in Eng. lish which shall contain 68 words and 315 letters and he will have some conception of the difficulty, even the he and now that the first died down his friends he may not attain any very exalted literary excellence in sense or style. Our of liberty an English version is inaccurate and am- | the biguous in many ways. Take, for example, the passage I have quoted. They shall lay hands on the sick and they shall recover." Is this a guarantee of immunity from contagious disease, or is it a promise of the power to heal? Who shall recover, the passage I have quoted guestion is where are we going stop if we limit British freedom this fashion? The temperary having the right to poison themsels at will. Is this right to disappear if the right to burn down one's hor or to beat one's wife to death? The the person laying on hands or the are grave questions. dogmatic contentions rest on as ambiguous and trivial readings of the English version. The Greek, with its inflexions, makes it clear that the believer shall have power to heal. The believer also shall have power to drink poison and receive no harm, and to take up serpents without fear of their fangs. Alcohol is a poison, a deadly thing to drink, Either the people who drink it are not true believers, or the promise is vain. They do not drink the deadly thing without harm, and after they have drunk a certain amount they show no disposition to handle serpents with equanimity.

Am quite prepared to believe, and I do believe that when people have attained a certain stage of development, they attain such a measure of control over the physical body that they can directly influence the organs and the blood to reject without injury any toxic element introduced into the system. I believe, however, that this involves a mental antagonism towards the element so introduced, so that the neutralizing forces of the body would be set in operation. Hence the constructions are their use. They point out that the big business firms (really in order to get more vork out of their hands), insist on temperance their use. neutralizing forces of the body would steel-true, and his eye is not so clear. It seems as if there was a general conspiracy to deprive the poor man or his beer. They even go so far as to say that if he left his beer alone he would not be poor. They declare that the whole community would be rich and prosperates and covered it. be set in operation. Hence the poison would not be introduced voluntarily. A toxic substance is a poisonous substance. An intoxicant is therefore a poison, but people do not understand and prosperous and contented if so much money were not wasted and so the English language definitely, and much good grain destroyed in makfew realize that when they drink an ing these poisonous or intoxicating drinks. They say that the change in Russia since the sale of one kind of intoxicant they are drinking a poison, and that there should be a red label on the bottle, and it should have a three-cornered shape with a rough and lumpy surface so that it could be recognized in the dark and not taken by mistake. I am sure there are by mistake. I am sure there are were prohibited the result would be many worthy people who manufacture the same in Canada. They say also and sell intoxicants who do not realize that in the course of national evoluthat intoxicant is a Latinized term to tion the race or people who will give describe a poison, and that they are up the use of alcoholic poisons will describe a poison, and that they are so outstrip others in intelligence, inthe community. The Latin word for lead the world. Great stress is being poison comes from a similar Greek laid by them on national wigor and one, toxos, which meant a poisoned which means national vigor and arrow, a deadly thing indeed, as show that a man who takes posson poison is to drink. But suppose we do regularly catches disease more understand that intoxicating drinks and dies more quickly. They say he are poisonous drinks, has one not a has no chance at all in typhoid right to take poisonous drinks if he just issued a warning in his health wishes, and has he not a right to bulletin about the fatal effects of inoffer them to his friends if he wants toxicants. All this tends to create the to do so? The big question of free opinion that it is quite justifiable to will is raised in this consideration. Interfere with the liberty of the sub-Have I not a right to poison myself ject and to step a man drnking inif I desire? Have I not a right to texticating liquor; and that it is the poison my friends if I desire and they poison my friends if I desire and they do not object? Britons never will be alot of people see are selfish; and that the people who make and sell poison think more of people who drink and not the people are seinsn; and that the people who make and sell poison think more of their pockets than their patriotism; and that the nation that does not their freedom in danger if this immemorial right to poison one's friends or oneself is in any way curtailed. Our brewers and distillers and hotel keepers are often denounced by tem-perance cranks, but when this na-tional view of the liberty of the sub-ject is taken it is clear that these eliminate such a wasteful expensive, diseaseful and poisonous habit must fall behind. But of course if one is ject is taken it is clear that these men are standing as the bulwarks of freedom. It is they who have preserved our right to poison ourselves and our
