THE POTATO DISEASE.—Although so much has been said on this subject, still, from the fact that every successive year the disease resumes its destructive ravages—there appears as yet to have been no adequate remedy or preventive can be universally relied on; and until a thorough remedy as their own judgment, or the result of experiments may suggest. In the course of our reading we have met with the following directions, “derived from practical experience,” which are well deserving of attention:—1. Let all early potatoes that are ripe be immediately taken up. 2. Examine the stalks of all others every day. 3. Whenever you find any stalk diseased put your feet one on each side and pull it up, leaving the potatoes in the ground—do not cut the stalk off, but pull it up by its roots. 4. Then tread down and harden the ground over the potatoes, and trench it up. 5. Burn the diseased stalks; do not on any account leave them on the ground. 6. All the potatoes should remain in the ground and be dug up only as wanted, for when the disease has once made its appearance exposure to the air is found to increase it.

We subjoin another method, suggested by the correspondent of a Philadelphia paper. He writes—The cause of the malady, is now pretty well ascertained to originate in atmospheric influences. Wherever the tops of the potatoe have been cut off, the crop has been saved. The plan is, when the vine attains a height of six or eight inches, to cut off about half an inch, so as to make it sprout or branch out, and repeat the operation upon the new branches. The vine is thus made to maintain a vigorous growth, which effectually resists the disease.

HOW TO ENLARGE VEGETABLES.—A vast increase of food may be obtained by managing judiciously, and systematically carrying out for some time the principle of increase. Take for instance, a pea. Plant it in a very rich ground, allow it to bear the first year, say half a dozen only, remove all others and save the largest single pea of these. At the next year, and retain of the produce three pods only, sow the largest one the following year, and retain one pod, again select the best, and the next year the sort will by this have trebled its size and Exciting Sympathy.—Wot, Charley, my rum 'un, said a street vocalist to a friend in a smock frock and woollen nightcap, whom he had just met, Wot do you mean by that ere dress? You havn't,—no, it can't be; I ain't going to think so meanly of you—you havn't took to work, surely? Work! said the friend, evidently stung to the soul by the base insinuation, do you take me for a ass? No, sir, I have not took to work, neither is my intention sick. Then Wot's that 'ere short smock frock and nightcap for? Wot for? Why, to excite sympathy, as they calls it. I'm a doin' the Henglish hoperative turned out of France, and it's one as pays uncommon well.

Boarding-house Wooing.—A love-sick swain, desirous to indicate the extent and character of his love for the empress of his heart, cried out—Ah! Miss Brown, Miss Brown, my affection for you is as strong as—as—as—the butter they gave me for dinner! She was satisfied, as she boarded at the same house. The bargain was struck, and they were married.

Taint like.—A certain lawyer had his portrait taken in his favorite attitude—standing with one hand in his pocket. His friends and clients all went to see it, and everybody exclaimed, 'Oh, how like him! it is the very picture of him! An old farmer only dissented—'Taint—no it ain't, responded the farmer. Don't you see he has got his hand in his own pocket? 'Twould be as like again if he had it in somebody else's.

Good.—You are from the country, are you not, sir? said a dandy clerk in a Book Store to a homely dressed Quaker who had given him some little trouble. Yes. Well, here's an essay on the rearing of calves. That, replied friend —, as he turned to leave the store, thee had better present to thy mother.

Quite a Flood.—A lady in a paroxysm of grief was said to have shed torrents of tears. Why is a dog moving without feet like perpetual motion? Because he goes without paws (pause.)

We have often found it a difficult matter to preserve beef steak wet and tender for any length of time after procuring it in market, the ordinary method of salting is sure, more or less, to harden it, and render it less palatable. Speaking of this matter not long since to my friend of ours, she remarked that she had heard it said that beef enveloped in corn meal would keep for a considerable length of time without salt. We, on hearing this, determined to try the experiment. So we purchased a fine piece of steak, and after cutting it into pieces of the weight of two or three pounds, instead of applying each piece was completely enveloped in corn meal, and packed with a sufficient quantity of meal between the pieces to prevent them coming immediately in contact with each other. In this condition it was permitted to remain till it was prepared for the table. On the sixth day after it was slaughtered, the last of it was served up, and pronounced by those who partook of it to be in every respect more delicious than it was the day we procured it. Why is a solar eclipse like a woman beating her boy? Because it is a hiding of the son.

Sympathy.—A good deacon making an official visit to a dying neighbour who was a very churlish and universally unpopular man, put the usual question—Are you willing to go, my friend?

Oh, yes, said the sick man, I am.

Well, said the simple-minded deacon, I am glad you are, for all the members are willing.

Anecdote of Goldsmith.—It is related of Goldsmith, whose charity often exceeded his means, that once having visited a poor woman, whose sickness he plainly perceived was caused by an empty cupboard, he sent her a pillbox containing ten guineas, bearing the inscription, "To be taken as occasion may require."

Out of—The New Haven Chronicle says the words out of are the worst in the language, when one is out of patience and out of money. He says, his wife tells him she is out of sugar one day, out of coffee the next, and usually out of spirits. The words, we think, are very good words, and decidedly the best in language, when one is out of debt, out of trouble, out of jail. If a man has a smoky house and a scolding wife, out of doors is no bad place.

Witty Apology.—A physician calling one day on a gentleman who had been sorely afflicted with gout, found, to his surprise, the disease gone, and the gentleman rejoicing in his recovery over a bottle of wine. Come along, doctor, exclaimed the valetudinarian, you are just in time to taste this bottle of Madeira; it is the first of a pipe that has just been bronched. Ah! replied the doctor, these pipes of Madeira will never do; they are the cause of all your sufferings. Well, then, rejoined the incurable, fill up your glass, for now that we have found out the cause, the sooner we get rid of it the better.

Aldermanic Simplicity.—At a city feast the other day, one of the company was expatiating on the blessings of Providence. Aye, said an Epicurean alderman, smacking his lips, it is a blessed place, sure enough; we all get our turtle from it.

Black Bull—At a free black settlement in Africa, a police ordinance was lately issued, by which it is forbidden that any person should publicly worship alligators, thunder, or other reptiles, or they will be subject to a penalty not exceeding ten shilling.

An Inclined Plane.—Anybody wishing to know the full force of this expression must not as follows:—Let him, in the first place, make fact for the information of those who may not already be informed as to what is here stated, knowing at the same time that one simple fact is worth a dozen theories."

CONSOLING.—An old fisherman in one of the western settlements of this Province, after returning from an unsuccessful voyage to the Labrador, was asked how he made out? "Well, (said he,) I didn't catch such a dreadful sight of fish, but I learnt some beautiful songs."

SELFISHNESS.—Selfishness has no soul. It is a heart of stone encased in iron. Selfishness cannot see the miseries of the world—it can-love to a young lady, marry her, and have a numerous family. On the sixth anniversary of the wedding day—and it ought to be a sweltering hot one,—let him obtain a good sized child's cart, into which let him put his (say) four olive branches. Then let him tug them at a quick walking pace up Highgate Hill. By the time he gets to the top, he will have a vivid idea of an inclined plane, and the difficulties which it presents to the engineer.—Comic Bradshaw.

Making a 'V.'—A story is told of an auctioneer who was provokingly annoyed while in the exercise of his profession, by the ludicrous bids of a fellow, whose sole object seemed to be to make sport for the buyers, rather than himself to buy. At length enraged beyond endurance, the knight of the ivory-headed hammer, looking round the room for a champion to avenge his wrongs, fixed his eyes upon a biped of huge dimensions, a very monarch in strength, and cried out:

Marlow, what shall I give you to put that fellow out?

"I'll take one five dollar bill.

Done, done you shall have it.

Assuming the ferocious, knitting his brows, spreading his nostrils like a lion's and putting on the wolf all over his head and shoulders, old Marlow strode to the aggressor, and seizing the terrified wretch by the collar, said to him in a whisper that was heard all over the room—

My good frin, you go out with me, I give you half the money?

Done, done, says the fellow.

Hurrah! hurrah! shouted the audience.

The auctioneer had the good sense to join in the laugh, and coolly forked out the V.

Fire and Water.—Those who wish to test the relation between fire and water may easily do so by the following cheap and simple process:—Put some water into a bottle, and also some iron filings; in a short time the iron will separate the water into its two elements, by attracting the oxygen to itself, and setting free the hydrogen. As this latter escapes from the bottle through a small tube fixed in the cork, it will take fire, if a candle or match be applied to the escaping gas. Thus fire may be produced from water. If a little sulphuric acid be added to the water, this will cause the hydrogen to form with rapidity, and tend to the more complete success of the experiment.

Owner Wanted.—The following curious notice appeared in the shop window of a hair dresser in the neighborhood of Dean-street, Soho:—"Notice, if the gentleman who left his mustachios here for alteration, about two years ago, does not call in a few days and redeem them, they will be sold by public auction to defray the expenses of warehouse room, &c.

Public Men must have public minds as well as public salaries, or they will serve their private ends at the public cost.

CURE FOR DYSENTERY.—A medical journal states that loaf sugar pounded very fine, and mixed with salad oil to the consistency of paste, a teaspoonful, piled up, to be taken every two hours and a half is a certain remedy for dysentery. Two doses will generally cure.

Leg of Mutton Story.—An obscure inn at a small village in England was visited by a travelling agent, whose business tact was only excelled by his gastronomic propensities. Upon entering he enquired of the landlord what he could have for dinner; when his host informed him that a leg of mutton was ready to be dressed. That being his favourite joint, he ordered it to be served up, and was very soon after engaged in discussing its merits. Having finished his repast, the servant, who entered in obedience to his summons, stared with no little amazement on finding that nothing but a wreck of bones had been left to be removed from the table, and the landlord, on entering the room and noticing his strange attitude, said—"John what do you mean by standing here with your eyes and mouth wide open; why don't you attend to your duty and carry these things into the kitchen?" but John, without paying any regard to his master's orders, gave vent to his astonishment by exclaiming "I zay measter, I'll be hanged if there beant a man wot has eaten a wul leg o' mutton!"—He was, however prevented from offering any comments by the landlord's peremptory order to attend to his duties and hold his tongue; and the guest having paid for his dinner, took his departure.—About a year after this incident the traveller was again in the act of passing thro' the village, and on arriving opposite the Inn, could not withstand the temptation to enter. On making the usual inquiry, he had the gratification of learning that his favourite joint was in a forward state of preparation for the table; and desiring it to be placed before him with as little delay as possible, he stepped into the dining room, and began to amuse himself by inspecting the ornaments that adorned the room. Among these were a number of bones suspended over the mantelpiece by a string, with an inscription attached, which he proceeded to read, as follows:—"These are the bones of a leg of mutton consumed by one individual at one meal"; and feeling satisfied that he would not be identified, resolved to make but a spare dinner. But alas for human resolves! the attractions were too powerful and his appetite too keen to allow him to carry out his determination, and the savoury joint soon shared the fate of its predecessor. When the meal was concluded, our hero hesitated before ringing for the waiter, at a loss what to do; and after alternately eyeing the bones over the mantelpiece, and those he had just dismantled of their muscles and sinews, he pulled out a handkerchief, and muttering—"You shall not add an additional ornament to your mantelpiece, this time, old fellow, to gratify the curiosity of your visitors, at my expense," wrapped the bones carefully up, put them into his pocket, and rung for the waiter. John soon made his appearance, and after satisfying himself as to the state of the table,

USE OF LIME IN PLANTING TREES.—On this head we can give a useful hint from the experience of Darnaway. One hundred and fifty trees have, within the last two or three years, been planted there without a single instance of loss, and this has been achieved by a very simple process, which merits the name and the honours of a discovery. It is merely putting a small quantity of lime in the hole in which the plant is laid. About four bushels of lime will suffice for an acre: it is thoroughly mixed and incorporated with the mould, before the lime is inserted. The effect of the lime is to push on the growth of the plant in its first and most precarious stage: new fibres begin to form and ramify from the tap-root, and not only is the growth of the plant secured, but it is advanced in a double ratio, compared with the ordinary system where no lime is used. The plants are thriving stea pushed out of the room in utter consternation, and bellowing as he approached the landlord—"I zay measter, hang me, if here beant a man wot beat t'other man hollow; for he has eaten a wul leg o' mutton—bones and all!"

My Boots—A good story is told in a New York paper, of an actor who had announced a benefit performance, and after making the necessary exertions to secure a good house, was at a loss what to do for a decent pair of boots to grace his appearance. He however found a friend in a brother actor who offered the loan of his boots, but accompanied him in proceeding to the theatre.—The evening was damp, and they had some distance to walk; and while passing through a rough and populous part of the city, the owner of the boots frequently expressed his anxiety to his companion something after this fashion "Take care how you step on them stones with my boots. If you go into that puddle of water, you will injure my boots. Keep out of the mud with my boots." The wearer of the boots was at length induced to express the mortification such remarks occasioned; when a mutual friend proposed that he should return the boots, and accept the loan of his, which he gladly acceded to. He had not, however, proceeded far, when the owner pointed out a macademised part of the road, exclaiming, "There, walk through these sharp stones if you like, I don't care where you go with my boots. There is a puddle, wade through that with my boots. You won't find me to grumble; for you may go anywhere you please, and do whatever you like with my boots."

Where he came from.—A sailor dropped out of the maintop of a man of war, and, after, in some degree, breaking his fall by catching at the rigging, fell on the lieutenant's head, and knocked him down on the quarter deck. The sailor jumped as did the lieutenant—"You rascal," said the lieutenant, "where did you come from?" "From the north of Ireland, please your honor," said the sailor.

Very Rich.—A man being asked how old he was, replied, "I am in health;" and being asked how rich he was, said "I'm not in debt."

Hot and Cold.—Burke once remarked to Garrick that all bitter things were hot. "Διο," said Garrick, "what do you think of bitter cold weather?"

Very Queer.—It is said that in Arkansas a three-story house means a pig sty on the floor, fleas in the bed, and a row of fowls roosting on a stick above.

Hair Shooting.—A gentleman on a circuit relating to Lord Norbury some extravagant feat in shooting, mentioned that he had shot thirty-three hares before breakfast. "Thirty-three hares!" exclaimed his lordship; "then, sir, you must have been firing at a wig!"

Very Severe.—A young lady became so much dissatisfied with a person to whom she was and vigorously in the most exposed parts of the forest; and, the dangerous period of their existence being over, there seems no doubt that they will continue to assert and maintain their superiority of growth over their brethren of the forest.—Inverness Courier.

PRESERVATION OF WATER AT SEA.—Powdered oxide of maganese, mixed with the water in the proportion of one-half parts of the former CURE FOR HARD TIMES.—Cheat the doctor by being temperate; cheat the lawyer by keeping out of debt; and cheat the demagogue of whatever party, by voting for honest men.

engaged to be married, that she dismissed him. In revenge he threatened to publish her letters to him. "Very well," replied the lady, "I have no reason to be ashamed of any part of my letters except the address."

Look out, Jack.—The Bangor Whig says:—"A Yankee in Boston has set up a one horse thrashing machine for the convenience of parents and guardians having unruly children. He'll lick an urchin like thunder for fourpence. Small lickings done for a cent each, and the most entire satisfaction warranted."

Laughter—No man who has once heartily and wholly laughed can be altogether irreclaimably bad.—How much lies in laughter—the cipher key wherewith we decipher the whole man! Some men wear an everlasting barren simper; in the smile of others lies a cold glitter, as of ice; the fewest are able to laugh what can be called laughing, but only sniff, and titter, and snigger from the throat outwards, or at best produce some whiffling husky cachination as if they were laughing through wool; of none such comes good. The man who cannot laugh is not only fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoils, but his whole life is already a treason and a stratagem.—T. Carlyle.

Washing Day.—At a party in modern Athens, one of the guests observed her son Charles eating rather more voraciously than the law of even northern etiquette allowed. She watched for an opportunity, and gave him one of those significant looks which only mothers and sisters can command; but instead of stopping Charles, he said to his mamma, "Oh, ye needna look and nod for me to stop. Ye ken this was washing day, and I gat no dinner."

Sleep-Proof.—Judge Jones, once sitting in banco, interrupted the interminable long speech of a barrister upon a very dry subject, with the sly inuendo: "If you think you will put me to sleep like my three learned brethren beside me, you are mistaken."

Marvellous Escape.—A Dutchman was relating his marvellous escape from drowning, when thirteen of his companions were lost by the upsetting of a boat, and he alone was saved. And how did you escape their fate? asked one of his hearers. "I tid not go in de poat, was the Dutchman's placid answer."

Love Squib.—A short man became attached to a very tall woman, and somebody said that he had fallen in love with her. Do you call it falling in love? said the old bachelor, "it is more like climbing up to it."

Dentistry.—Oh! exclaimed a poor sufferer to a dentist, that is the second wrong tooth you've pulled out! Very sorry, sir, said the blundering operator, but as there was only three when I began, I'm sure to be right the next time.

Hair Colouring.—A person advertises a hair colouring which he warrants to dye instantaneously in the course of a few minutes.

Prevarication.—Mrs. Grimes, lend me your TEMPERANCE.—I asked the man about the Temperance, and whether he was a temperance man? He replied by pulling a medal out of his waistcoat pocket, saying that he always carried it about with him for fear of temptation. He said that he took the pledge two years ago, before which time, as he confessed, he had been a sad sinner in the way of drink. "I used to take," said he, "from eighteen to twenty glasses of whiskey a day; I was always at the drink. I'd be often up tub. Can't do it—the hoops are off—it's full of suds—besides I never had one—I washes in a barrel, and wants to use it myself—besides I've lent it to a neighbor who hasn't returned it.

Sympathetic.—A few weeks ago, a tender-hearted chap, half seas over, expressed to his fellows his deep sympathy with one of our worthy citizens who had recently lost his wife. It is too bad, Bill, said he, you don't know how sorry I feel for him. Well, I don't know, said the other very measuredly, I don't know about that, there's many a man who'd be glad enough to swap with him now.

Experience.—A young man advertises for a place as salesman, and says he has had a great deal of experience, having been discharged from seven different stores within a year.

One of the Cheshire fraternity, supposing himself wiser than ordinary, commenced teasing the poor Welshman; saying, Why are you Welsh folk allowed to speak twice, and we only once? O, quoth the Welshman, the reason is quite plain—you Englishmen are such blockheads, that you must be spoken to twice before you will understand. The Welshman proceeded, permit me, sir, now to ask you one question. What is the reason that your beard is white, when your hair has preserved its original color? The sage acknowledged his ignorance. Well, said the Welshman, the reason is, that your chinbone has been exercised much more than your brains. Sympathy.—Are you not afraid your wife will get married again when you die? I hope she may, as there will be one man in the world who will know how to pity me. Etiquette.—A lady who was a strict observer of etiquette, being unable to go to church one Sunday, sent her card. Conundrums.—Why is a widow like a broken glass? Ans. Because she wants re-pairing. Why is a young woman like a due bill? Ans. Because she ought to be settled off as soon as she comes to maturity. Why is the fly one of the tallest insects? D'ye give it up? Because he stands six feet without shoes or stockings. What dose of medicine does a man like when his daughter is naughty? Don't you know? Why, he takes an elixir! (he takes and he licks her.) Why is a lady walking in front of a gentleman like the latest news? Because she is in advance of the male! Pleasant Address.—There is a school-mistress in New South Wales, whose letters are thus addressed—Miss Love, Harmony-house, Pleasant Valley, town of Concord, near Kissing Point. Dew.—Why, uncle Dewlitt, how dew you dew? Dew come in, and rest a little while, dew; how dew's aunt Hannah dew? and what is she dewing now, and dew tell us all about the news. Come, dew set up to the table, and dew as we dew; dew help yourself, and dew talk some, and dew not make me dew all the talking for I shan't dew it. Now dew say something, dew.

An Awkward Man.—It is not unusual in life to see an awkward fellow making a false step. He attempts to recover himself, and makes another; the second is followed by a third, and down he comes. Here is an anecdote as an illustration of successive awkward positions:—A gentleman said to Lord North, Pray, my Lord, who is that ugly woman sitting there? That is my youngest sister, said his Lordship. Oh! said the gentleman, I don't mean her, I mean the next.

That is my eldest sister, replied his Lordship. I protest, cried the gentleman, I don't mean her, but the third. That is my wife, said Lord North. The devil! cried the gentleman. You may well say that, said Lord North, for she is as ugly as one. But, Sir console yourself; we are the ugliest family in England.

Good Reason.—Bill said Bob, why is that tree called a weeping willow? 'Cause one of the sneaking dratted things grew near our school-house and supplied the master with the sticks that did all the boy's licking.

Reasons for Playing the Fool.—A certain facetious gentleman, being asked by an honorable lounger why he so often played the fool, replied, For the same reason that you do, out of want; you play the fool for want of wit, and I for want of money.

Bankruptcy.—Sambo, what your opinion on dat bankrupt law. Tink him fast rate, Pompey. I imply for de application mine-self Just explain him principles. Why, you see he now; jest lend me dat half a dollar you got for whitewashing. (Pompey hands him the money, and Sambo deliberately puts it into his pocket.) Dere, den now I owes de shoemaker tree shilling, and you half a dollar, besides the grocer's bill; now, dis half dollar is all de property I got; I divides him according to de debts. Pompey.—I take dat half dollar back. Sambo (with amazement).—Do you tink dis child green? I am a bankrupt, you gets your share with the oder creditors.

Intemperance and Honour.—A poor fellow, who had spent hundreds of dollars at the bar of a certain groggery, being one day feint and feeble, and out of change, asked the landlord to trust him with a glass of liquor. No, was the surly reply. I never make a practice of doing such things. The poor fellow turned to a gentleman, who was sitting by, and whom he had known in his better days, saying, Sir, will you lend me sixpence? Certainly was the reply. The landlord with alacrity placed the decanter and glass before him. He took a pretty good horn, and having swallowed it and re-atmosphere is getting warmer, and the sun's rays exert their counteracting influence; if watered in the evening the roots are chilled and the plant checked in its growth. The darkened surface—that very condition which makes the soil throw off its heat more readily during the night—causes it to imbibe the heat of the sun's rays by day with increased facility, so that you thus have the greatest amount of the fertilizing agencies of heat and moisture for the growth of plants. placed the glass with evident satisfaction, he turned to the man who had lent him the sixpence, and said—Here, Sir, is the sixpence I owe you; I make it a point, degraded as I am, always to pay borrowed money, before I pay my grog bill!

Literature Analyzed.—Poetry, says somebody, is the flower of literature; prose is the corn, potatoes, and meat; satire is the aquafortis; wit is the spice and pepper; love-letters are the honey and sugar; dunning letters are the emetics; letters containing remittances are apple-dumplings.

Taking his time for it.—At one of our city hotels, a bill of fare was handed to a respectable looking old gentleman from the country, as he was taking his seat at the dinner table. He deliberately put on his spectacles, and glancing his eyes over its contents, folded it up and put it into his pocket, at the same time apologetically remarking to the waiter, that he had'nt time to read it then but would look over it after dinner.

Poetry and Provisions.—Have you the Lays of the last minstrel, said a city Miss addressing a young man who stood behind the counter of a country store, not many miles from Worcester. No we haven't any of them kind said the obliging clerk but we have good fresh hen's eggs that we can warrant were laid no longer than last week. This is equal to enquiring for Hogg's tales.

Use of Books.—Sterne used to say, The most accomplished way of using books is to serve them as most people do lords—learn their titles, and then brag of their acquaintance.

Checkmated.—Walter Scott tells a story of a Scotch Judge, who got beaten at chess at every circuit by a country friend whom he was in the habit of visiting. At length his clever entertainer was unluckily convicted of forgery, and it fell to the Judge's lot to pronounce sentence on him, which he did with the usual formalities, and then added the words, And now, Donald, my man, I think I've checkmated thee for once!

Dun Him.—The phrase Dun him is said to have originated on the success of a bailiff named John Dun, who lived at Lincoln, in the time of Henry VII., and who was so successful in recovering debts, that when any one was backward in paying, it became a common question—Why do you not Dun him.

Intemperate Temperance.—At a tea-drinking match at East Challow, Berks, a short time since, between some six or eight females, for a prize, the victor drank twenty-nine, and four others twenty-five full-sized cups in half an hour.

A bit of True Philosophy.—How beautiful is the saying that we should always hope for the best, and be prepared for the worst? For our own parts, we never enter a grocer's to get our weekly ounce-and-a-half of seven shilling mixed tea without being animated by the ad-

Wisdom and Wealth.—"How is it," said a purse-proud fellow to a scholar, "do you see men of letters at the house of the rich and but seldom the rich at the houses of the learned?" "It is," replied the other, "because the wise know the value of wealth, but the wealthy are ignorant of the value of wisdom."

Rustic Courtship.—As a rustic merry making Roger was seated facing Patty, charmed of her beauty and stung by the arrow of the little god, he only ventured a passion in sly looks and touching Patty's toe with his foot under the table. Patty, either fearful that the purity of her hose might be soiled, or determined to let the youth express a passion which he seemed so warmly to feel, at length exclaimed with spirit—"If you like me why don't you tell me so, but don't dirty my stockings."

Enlightened Cobbler.—At a sale of books which took place at Liverpool lately, a man who had "Drew's Essay on the Soul" knocked down to him, gravely asked the auctioneer if he had any more works on shoemaking?

EPIGRAM.

Jack, eating rotten cheese, did say,
"Like Sampson, I my thousands slay;"
"I vow," quoth Roger, "so you do,
And with the self-same weapon too."

Counsellor Lamb, an old man, when Lord Erskine was in the height of his reputation, was a man of timid manners and nervous disposition, and usually prefaced his pleadings with an apology to that effect, and on one occasion, when opposed in some cause to Erskine, he happened to remark that "he felt himself growing more and more timid, as he grew older." "No wonder," replied the witty but relentless barrister, "every one knows the older a lamb grows the more sheepish he becomes."

Xtravaganza Xtraordinary.—Charles X, king of France, was xtravagantly xtrolled, but is exceedingly xecrated. He xhibited xtraordinary xcellence in xigency; he was xemplary in xternals, but xtrinsic on xamination; he was xtatic under xhortation, xtreme in excitement, and xtraordinary in xttempore xpresses; he was xpatriated for his xcesses, and to xpate his xtravagance, xisted and xpired in xile.

Just Alike.—A scorpion, when he finds himself enclosed and no way left to escape, will turn his tail round and sting himself through the head; and it is remarkable that this is the only animal in the creation, man excepted, that can be made to commit suicide.

Legal Tender.—A spinster went to a well-known lawyer, and engaged him to manage a suit for her, in which she claimed a legacy, to which her right was disputed. The suit was lost, and the poor maiden said to her lawyer, "How can I ever repay you for all the trouble you for the benefit of the public; and, if you please, for inserting your widely-circulated paper. I am, sir, your obedient servant.

Which you have taken on my account? I have nothing to give you but my heart." My clerk takes the fees,—go to him," said the lawyer, gruffly.
 Why is a Barrister's profession not only legal but religious?—Because it involves a knowledge of law, and a love of the profits (prophets.)
 Sicks.—A conceited traveller, being asked if he had seen the "Bridge of Sighs," Venice, replied that "there was no bridge of any size in the whole city."
 Why is Louis Philippe's nose like the loss of his French estates? Because it is a large fore feature, (forfeiture.)
 Why is a blacksmith the most likely person in trade to be corrupted?—Because he is surrounded by vices and old files.
 Bare Quification.—A young English traveller contracted, in Valencia, a love affair with a pretty gipsy girl. The mother wished that he should marry her at once; but the Englishman declared that he was not rich enough to keep a wife. "What," said the gipsy, laughing, "not rich enough in the land of guineas? With so renowned a thief as my daughter, you will, in a year, be a millionaire."

Unproductive Class.—Those members of society who do not labour in any manner, or whose labour may well be dispensed with, as contributing little or nothing to the gratification of those human wants in which it is innocent and desirable to indulge.
Too Plain.—A lady who rouged very highly inquired of a gentleman, under the plea of indisposition, how he thought she looked. I really cannot tell, madam, he replied, except you uncover your face.
Down East Evidence.—A witness called to give testimony in a court Down East about a lost shirt, came to the point very abruptly as follows: Mother said, that Sal said, that Polly said, that Bob told her that he see a man, that see a man, that seed a feller run through the street with a red striped flannel, of a white color, all checker, checker—and cur gals won't lie! for the old woman licked em a hundred times for lying!
Are a man and his wife both one? asked the wife of a certain red-eyed gentleman who in a state of stupefaction, was holding his aching head with both hands. Yes, I suppose so, was the reply. Well, then, said she, I came home drunk last night, and ought to be ashamed of myself. This backhanded rebuke from a long suffering but affectionate wife, effectually cured him of his brutish propensity.
Turning the Tables.—Counsellor Lee, being engaged in examining one Mary Pritchard, began with—Well, Mary, if I may credit what I hear, I may venture to address you by the name of Black Moll. Faith, may you, master lawyer, said she, for I am always called so by the blackguards.
Long Face.—A gentleman having a remark-horns upon the head of early manhood. He may waste fortune in squanderings—time and talents on trifles, or in listlessness and idleness. How many a giant has been frittered away in pursuit of the shining objects of low ambition! How often do we see powers perishing for lack of thought—shrivelling into insignificance for want of diligence to feed upon, which use might have polished to the highest brilliancy, and exercise would have made equal to achieving the ably long visage, overheard a lad say to another as he passed them, that gentleman's face is longer than his life. Struck with the singularity of the observation, he returned and requested an explanation. Sir, said the boy, I read at school that man's life is but a span, and I am sure your face is double the length.

Why is going to dinner like being buried? Because it is going to grub!

Why are Chartist leaders like bees? Because the result of their labour is to be deposited in cells.

Slander and Flattery.—Diogenes, being asked of what beast the bite was most dangerous, answered, Of wild beasts, that of a slanderer; of tame, that of a flatterer.

of it—the most industrious improve upon their use of it. It comes to us in brief minutes to shew us that present application is the sole duty required of us; yet these so weave in and make up our days and years, that misimprovement of the present is always at the expense of the future. One of the hours each day wasted on trifles or in idleness, saved, and daily devoted to improvement, is enough to make an ignorant man wise in ten years—to provide the luxury of intelligence to a mind torpid from lack of thought—to brighten up and strengthen faculties perishing with rust—to make life a fruitful field, and death a harvester of glorious deeds.

present of it to the public, intimating, at the same time, that it consisted of white oxide of antimony (argentine flowers, as it used to be called by the old chemists,) and that it had many advantages as an excellent body paint, superior to white lead and much cheaper, inasmuch as antimony might be obtained in abundance for about £10 a ton, while lead costs £24 10s. He also pointed out its greater permanency of color, and its capability of being spread over a much larger surface than an equal weight of white lead. Indeed it is not only lighter, but may be made more subtle; and it was its superiority in these and other respects that led us to regard it as a likely substitute for lead. It is rather singular, too, that the old chemists called antimony their lead; maintaining that, in some of its properties, it bore a near affinity to lead.—Builder.

Chronological Summary.

1845—Jan. 1.—Hugh Hartshorne, Esq. appointed by his Excellency Marshall of the Court of Vice Admiralty, in the place of Stephen W. Deblois, Esq., deceased. The Wesleyans of the city gave a feast, in the Old Methodist Chapel, to the children of their Sabbath Schools. 24th.—Died at Halifax, Mr George Charker—better known as Dad Charker—who for many years held the situation of Town Crier. He was one of the most remarkable characters of the day, possessing an originality of wit with great kindness of heart. He was also a man of very retentive memory. The Press at the period of his death passed the highest encomiums upon his memory. 30.—The Provincial Legislature opened by the Lieut. Governor, Lord Falkland, who delivered an address to both branches of the Assembly.

Feb. 6th.—A great public Meeting was held at Mason Hall, at which resolutions were passed, condemning the manner in which the grand and special juries for town and country were drawn, and adopting effective measures to have the grievance redressed. 12.—A highly exciting debate was commenced in the House of Assembly, which was continued for thirteen days, upon the official correspondence between the Lieut. Governor and the Right Hon. the Secretary for the Colonies, respecting the differences which existed between political parties in the country at that period. Resolutions moved by the Liberals in the House, who were in the minority, condemning the statements made in the Despatches sent to England, were lost by a majority of four.

18th.—A Bill was presented to the Assembly for the incorporation of a Company for building a bridge across the harbour of Halifax. 25th.—The 46th Regt. of Foot, from Barbadoes, under the command of Major McLean, landed at the Queen's wharf. A simultaneous temperance meeting was held at Mason Hall, and passed off with great eclat.

March 17th.—Died, the Rev. James Knowlan, an exemplary clergyman of the Wesleyan Methodist Church. 27th.—Great temperance bazaar held in the city, by which £160 was realized.

April 8th.—Resolution moved and negatived in the Assembly, censuring Sir Rupert D George, then Provincial Secretary, touching his communication with the Colonial Secretary, respecting the Register Bill passed the previous session—the result of which communication was the withholding of the royal assent. 14th.—The Provincial Parliament prorogued after a session of unusual length and extraordinary interest. A silver speaking trumpet presented to Wm. Caldwell, Esq. by the Union Engine Company as a token of respect and esteem.

May 10th.—The removal of C. W. Wallace, Esq., Provincial Treasurer, from office, occurred this month, and commissioners were ap-

The opening of a mine in Dartmouth, said to be iron, was commenced this month; but after considerable labour and expense in working the mine, the project was abandoned.

Nov. 8.—A meeting was held at Mason Hall relative to the projected Railroad from Halifax to Quebec, which was largely attended. Resolutions favourable to the object were passed and a provisional committee appointed to carry out the important undertaking. 15th.—Samuel Fairbanks, Esq., appointed by Lord Falkland, the Lieut. Medical Examiner, R. S. BLACK, M. D.

Office 210 Hollis Street, Halifax,
OPPOSITE THE JERUSALEM WAREHOUSE.

THE GREAT BENEFIT OF LIFE ASSURANCE to all Classes of Persons, and especially to those beginning the world with small means, is daily becoming of greater importance, and as it becomes better understood will no doubt be much more generally attended to. Nothing is so uncertain as the life of a single individual, and it is a sense of this insecurity that has given rise to Life Assurance Societies. No prudent man of property neglects to make his Will while in health—the Christian merchant does not often neglect to insure his ships or cargoes, or his house and stores, then why should it be thought improper for any man to make provision for his Family after he is gone, by becoming a Stockholder in a Life Insurance Society?—which he may do, by Insuring his Life,—by which his Family may, (should he be suddenly removed from them) reap a much greater benefit than they could possibly do were he to invest the same sum for their benefit in any other way. Persons in the rural districts and particularly young married men, are particularly invited to attend to it while in health. The above Society offers as great inducements as any other kindred association—their Rates being rather under the others, and the Share of Profits in which the Assured may participate being greater, Viz.: 90 per cent. of the whole. Pamphlets containing the Rates and every information, and all Blanks, furnished by the Agent. The Medical Examiner's Fee, in all cases, paid by the Company.
DANIEL STARR, Agent.
