"When I was a Boy,"
Writes Postmaster J. C. Woodson, Forest Hill, W. Va., "I had a bronchial trouble of such a persistent and stubborn character, that the doctor pronounced it incurable with ordinary medicines, and advised me to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I did so, and one bottle cured me. For the last fifteen years, I have used this preparation with good effect whenever I take and I know of numbers of people who keep it in the house all the time, not considering it safe to be without it."

A Bad Cold,
"I have been using Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my family for 30 years, with the most satisfactory results, and can cheerfully recommend it as being especially adapted to all pulmonary complaints. I have, for many years, made pulmonary and other medicines a special study, and I have come to the conclusion that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral occupies a position pre-eminently over every other medicine of the class."—Chas. Devereux, Dover, N. J.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral
Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Prompt to act, sure to cure.

POETRY.

The Baby Over the Way.

Across in my neighbor's window,
With its folds of satin and lace,
I see, with its crown of ribbons,
A baby's innocent face.
The throng in the street look upward,
And every one grave and gay,
Has a nod and a smile for the baby
In the mansion over the way.
Just here in my cottage window,
His chin in his dimpled hands,
And a patch on his faded apron,
The child that I love for a friend,
He has kept my heart from breaking
For many a weary day;
And his face is as pure and handsome
As the baby's over the way.
Sometimes when we sit together,
My grave little man of three
Says to me with the question:
"Does God up in Heaven, like me?"
And I say: "Yes, yes, my darling;
Though I almost never say 'Nay,'
As I see the nursery candles
In the mansion over the way.
And oft when I draw the stockings
From his little feet,
And loosen the clumsy garments
From his limbs, so round and sweet,
I grow too lither for singing,
My heart too heavy to pray,
As I think of the dainty raiment
Of the baby over the way."

LEGAL DECISIONS.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the Post Office—whether directed to his name or another's or whether he has subscribed or not—is responsible for the payment.
2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay up all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.
3. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the Post Office, or removing and leaving them uncollected for a prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

Their New Home.

"Second, I say we give it up; I'm played out."
The man spoken to gave no reply, but sat motionless for some minutes; then he essayed to make the edge of a ragged trouser-leg cover the space of gleaming skin between it and a broken shoe. The endeavor was futile, and he returned his contemplation of the hills across the lake. The other man threw a pebble into the water, which sang the monotonous underbreath sound of dead calm along the beach at his feet, and spoke again:
"That damned ranch could not be cleared off with less than ten thousand oxen. Wilkins has the check for it, and we're here."
Still the other man did not speak, but, as before, shifted his position.
"Second, I say! Are you gone dumb? Can't you say anything?"
"No, because the fountains of speech are dried up within me. Come home. In a silence not broken even by Garth's bitter tones, they walked along the wagon road, until, with a sudden turn to the left, they breached the hill, scorning the loggers' trail and braining their already worn-out bodies by impetuous struggles with the thick undergrowth. After half an hour's climb, Second stopped to look back at the lake below them and the purple tinged range beyond.
"Garth, that lying devil told some truths. This is as fair a spot as there is on God's earth. Give me some land that can be worked and I, for one, won't chuck it up."
"Now, you're foolish, for you know we have neither capital nor credit."
"No; but I've health and two hands and I mean to make good the living the world owes me."
By this time they had reached the place the man had spoken of as "home." It was a two-roomed "board" cabin, containing little besides the saved lengths of logs used as seats, and a few tin plates and cooking necessities. In the second room were two rough beds, like silt, and in the third a table and a layer of aromatic brush under the eaves and coarse bedding, whereon the occupants refreshed minds and bodies alike spent. In choosing their site they had had woodman craft enough to build near the one spring to be found on that sunny hillside; but at that their skill stopped. Without skill or muscle, and without money these two city-bred Englishmen were too proud to complain of their bargain. The smooth tongued land agent who met them on arrival in Vancouver had, within two days of the meeting, made them the possessors of one of the most unavailable tracks in British Columbia. On the third day, with their check in his pocket, the agent shook the dust of the town from his shoes and his place knew him no more.

The journey to the newly-acquired land was spent in alternately building castles in the air and in looking through the car windows at the quick succession of mountains and river, gorge and bushlands. The young man's color came and went fitfully as he speculated on the good thing they were going to make of it, in a year's time they would have cleared many hundreds from the timber alone, and the grapes already set ought to yield a handsome return. Second looked at him and said nothing; but his thought was too clear, and his temples too blue, for a life of steady toil. But their hand was to the plow, and even had they so desired there was no turning back. Presently, when Second's cap was pulled over his eyes, the conductor touched his shoulder, saying, "This is your place; your things are being put off."
They looked at the pile of traps, at the receding train, at the grass-grown tracks, any then they looked for a sign of human habitation. There was none. Second pulled a memorandum from his pocket.
"That brute said a fellow lived a mile down the road who would tell us all we want to know. Carry what you can and come on."
"I say," said Garth, "if we weren't weighted this would be jolly—springy turf under your boots is better than eight days in a railroad car, followed by beastly wooden sidewalks in Vancouver; never know when you are going to bow too suddenly to a board that sits up to look at you. I like this air—it feels the walls of you all the way down. How high up did that land hundred above was it? And that mountain over there must be the 7,000-foot one. Little chap, after Mount Baker and the others. But I say—the lake will be in full view when we get into that opening and I call this not half bad. But there's a house, and that must be the fellow we ought to talk to."
A few questions elicited enough in formation to send them three miles further on. "Then turn 't yer right where 't's the trees thinned, and keep right on till 't strike the clearing; there's a sort of shack there'll do you until 't can build. Me an' my boy'll give you a hand with yer things at 't track to-morra."
After a week's discomfort of body and misery of mind to Garth, and the same length of time spent in furious smoking by Second, they had put up or rather their neighbor had put up, with assistance from them, the shack designated by Second as "home," when he and Garth turned their steps inland.
The story of acres set out in grapes had proved as much a myth as the rest of the agent's specious tale, and their ranch consisted of tracks of creek-high fern-brake alternating with bush. Too poor to spend many of their remaining dollars in necessities which might be procured at the nearest town, and too proud to seek assistance from their only neighbor, they subsisted as best they might, killing what game came within reach, in season and out of season, varied by fish from the lake below.
As the months dragged wearily on Garth's cheek thinned and the blue temples were still more prominent. And then there came a time when only one ax woke the echoes of the hillside. When Second spoke to the other his tones were gentle, but the sentences were few, and he could not trust himself, and like the man, grew still more silent. But the other knew. These two needed few words, and the honily intercourse of the last four years had riveted the tie which bound them.
The portmanteaus and boxes with which, like Englishmen, they had encumbered themselves, had been laboriously transported to their dwelling. Some were still unopened. The suits of clothing were worn and the boots were old, but they would be needed next winter when their wearers went to Vancouver. To see a physician there was the one aim of Second's life, but to Garth, to whom a doctor's care meant a possible choking of death, the matter was indifferent.

As the summer days drew on, Garth left the hill to lie by the water's edge in a spot where the crows were early dried away, one arm under his head and the other hand usually holding two letters, which he seldom unfolded. In the manner common to lonely people he often talked aloud, his chief confidence being the trunk of a blasted fir. Or, sitting with his back against a boulder, he would apostrophize the highest peak across the water, lazily following with his eye the varying tints cast by sun and cloud on the range which stretched its purple length in crescent shape about the lake.
"Lucky thing, you know, that she didn't come with me. Glad I didn't write that day I meant to in Vancouver, when Beesebub told such yarns 'bout the grapes. I wonder if she remembers the plans we used to make, in which a vineyard always figured. She thought I was delicate! And that kind of a life would be the very thing! Poor little soul, I'm glad she can't see the piles of fir Second gets off the grapestry site. And to think that I'd touch her money. Just as soon as I can see a doctor and take some of his meses I'll be all right again; and then we'll make another start. This sort of thing is terrible hard on the poor old man, but he only says it develops his muscle. But then, he never does say anything. And it's awfully pretty here, you know; the dear little girl thinks there's no spot in the world like Elysian, but put a good roomy cottage, with plenty of veranda, on the sloping side of our clearing where you can see the lake and those old hills away beyond, and I'd ask nothing better. I'll have to learn how to describe scenery, and write her a regular screed. Good heavens! To think of letting her join to leave this ghastly hole in October, and when we get out of it I'll be all right. Wonder what it is I have got. Good thing there's nobody about to see my muff that hill; but here goes, anyway."
When Second returned from his chopping one evening he found Garth idly lying on the ground, and no attempt made to prepare their meal.
"Oh, I say! I'm so sorry; but up on my word I forgot all about it. By the rule that the man who works ought to eat, I certainly ought not to eat if I can't work."
"Never mind tea," said Second, shortly; "where have you been? Your shirt's damp; wet, in fact."
"Oh, I daresay," returned the other carelessly. "I got writing letters, and it was a bit trying. I suppose you'll swear if I tell you I lay down in the 'Hollow.' It must have been there I got wet, but it'll dry in a minute. Come on, and light up."
Second, always grave, grew graver, and busied himself that night in preparation of such comforts for the lad as their meager stores allowed. Next day Garth made light of his ailments, but the brightened eye and flaming cheeks spoke for themselves.
"Look here, old man, why don't you go up the hill—no need to stay bothering about me, I'm all right, and I'll finish my letters. You'll get your tea to night, never fear."
The smile which accompanied the last words made Second turn on his heel and walk off. Returning, he said: "Smale's men are coming to-day for the pile that's ready, so I'll take a day off, I shall write letters, too."
Before resuming his, Garth took from his pocket the one of newest date to read and re-read:
Elysian, Riversleigh, Berks.
"Dearest—Just a few lines to catch this mail, for your last letter just received has made me so unhappy. I do not wonder about your dismay at all. You have lost in this unlucky purchase, but do not take it so much to heart. Remember you have still something left, and I have plenty—and, oh, do remember about everything that I am here and only waiting that I can come, whenever you choose to say it. It has been quite a gay week, and when I write my long letter to-morrow, I will give you an account of everything—papa's new hunter, and a dear new red cedar pop, and of course all about Amy's wedding, the church all ferns and marguerites, and the countless too magnificent for un-spectacled eyes to look at. They have gone north for the honeymoon, and papa has lent them the 'Larches.' George had a letter by the same mail that brought yours, from Tom Secord, but he has not given it to me to read—I suppose, like yourself, he grudges so much capital gone, and I know from George's manner the letter is a melancholy one. It must be such an uncomfortable place, and I do wish you were out of it. George attended to both your commissions, and you will be getting your packages soon. I hope you will like the books, and the well parcel that is all for your very self, and to be opened, do you hear, when you are quite alone. Papa wants me to drive him in the dog cart and he has been waiting for five minutes, so good-by. And oh, do take care of yourself in that horrid place. Did you get that mixture, and are you wearing all the things your mother sent? God bless you, dearest, and bring me to you soon.

Ever yours fondly,
HELEN.

By the end of the week pneumonia had done its work, and there were few hours left until the labored breath should be spent.
"I say, old man," came the well-known words, "what's the whole—of—that thing—about passing—the—love—of women. You know—Helen—chaffed about it—the day—we left. Tell her—I—lived long—enough—to find it—true."
Secord walked slowly to the door, and then came as slowly back to his place at the other's side.
This failing voice went on. "I wish—you would—write—to them both. My mother—I mean. And—get out—of—there—before—it's—too—late."
"I'm twice as glad Helen didn't come. Can't I sit—straighter—there's—nothing in—my chest—"
A few more gasping struggles and Secord laid on the bed, all that was left of what he had loved best in the world.
Leaning on his pick, he stood a moment to look at the result of his last hour's work; then shouldered his tools, and went toward the house. On the doorstep he paused, and went back again.
"I'm out of boards, and they must be got. I can get them at Wilson's, and be back by daybreak."
Softly closing the door as he passed it, he struck into the trail, walking as if nothing but speed could elude the thoughts which pursued him. The unlocked door of the shack reached, heavy breathing guided him to where his own lay. Secord stirred him with his foot, and the man sat up.
"I want some boards. As many as I can carry. And paint. Have you any white?"
"Why, now, that's lucky," was the good natured reply, after Wilson had relieved himself of a prodigious yawn. "I was in the town last Tuesday, and saw and my boy brought back a heap of things. How's the young fellow? You don't say! By the sound of you I guess it's spiced. Here's yer paint, and I'll give 't a hand with the lumber. Bein' neighbors, it's only fair I'd see 't through 't business."
"Thanks; I will be glad of your help for a couple of miles, but you need not come all the way. Don't think I am ungrateful."
"Oh, it's all right. I know you were that set on each other."
In silence they shouldered their loads, and, still silent, parted two hours later. With his unlighted pipe in his mouth, Secord measured and sawed, fitted and hammered, until his work was done. Grimly surveying it for a moment, he turned to two boards which he made into a rude cross, and, seated on the doorstep, began to cut into the crosspiece the legend:
"Gerald Garth, of London, died August 189—, aged 36."
He stooped to pick up his pipe from the ground; the mouth piece snapped by his teeth.
"Perhaps South Kensington won't be satisfied with these decorations. Curse them! Why did they leave him here?"

Planting his cross at the western end of the hole and heavily stamping the soft earth at its base, he took the paint pot and reverently, gently, as if it were a living thing, coated it with the white paint, except where the letters were cut. Then he turned once more to the house, entered it quickly, as if afraid of his own resolution. An hour later his drawn face and bloodshot eyes stooped over a fresh-covered grave, the sun, now overhead, fast drying the new coat of paint.
The wagon road here lying along the water's edge, stretched its shadowed length each way as far as eye could reach. The sinking sun caught on its rays the spots of fleece which hung above the lake; and across and far beyond lay purple range and shining peak. Where the road curved this clearing on the side of the knoll came into full view, but the man who, with small pack slung across his shoulder, stood on through the dust, did not turn his head.
He prays "Come over"—I may not follow.
I cry "Return"—but he cannot come.

Vancouver, September 10, 189—
Dear George—After my last, you will expect to hear what I have to tell you now. Gerald died three weeks ago. I left him there. Our neighbor who is a very decent sort, has since had all belongings forwarded to me here, and I now enclose you a letter he had begun a few days before his illness; also some other letters which he always carried about with him. You must tell his mother and your sister. I find that I shall be able to reach England before the end of November, when I shall at once go to see Helen. The rest of his things I shall have with me, and if the South Kensington people want to see me, they will have to come to me.
Yours,
HELEN.

At Elysian a girl whose sapphiric eyes have taken on a graver look goes about among her poor with greater regularity than before. The evenings not devoted to her father are given to eight classes, the number of her charities has increased, and her Friendless Girls' have found a truer friend. On her bedroom table is a case containing half a dozen letters, two of them in her own handwriting, strapped together with a worn rubber band, and looking as if they had long been carried in a pocket.
And Elysian has ceased to have its meaning.
"Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown." That is why kings and queens almost invariably take their crowns off before they go to bed.

Wednesday evening, Jan. 30th, will be devoted to a public meeting in College Hall to be addressed by Rev. E. M. Kierstead, Dr. Jordan, M. P., J. B. Mills, M. P., and other gentlemen. A choice programme of music will also be rendered.

The meetings promise to be of great interest and a very large attendance is hoped for. The usual reduced fare on the D. A. R. and a reduced rate of $1 per day at the hotels has been arranged for.

S. C. PARKER, SECRETARY.

His Last Post.

The following from a late California paper refers to a brother-in-law of Mr. J. M. Toye, of this place:

Life's perilous journey is over. Captain William E. Plummer, Master Mariner, has reached the eternal haven of rest in the other world. His death which was calm and peaceful, occurred yesterday at 2:30 o'clock at his home, 2065 Maple avenue.

Few men have been better known to the travelling public in California than Captain Plummer. For twenty years he has been in the employ of the Pacific Coast Steamship Company in command of steamships plying from San Francisco to east ports. His long period of employment is the best evidence of the popularity and confidence which he enjoyed.

He was lately in command of the Yaguina, but that vessel has been laid up and his last voyage was made in the Alexander Duncan to Morse's Landing, returning home on Wednesday night week ago. Captain Plummer has been falling for some time from heart trouble. He caught cold on the last voyage completing his illness with pneumonia, the combined ailments causing his death. Only once since his return—in fact on Thursday last—did he leave his house to go to San Francisco on business. He took to bed on Monday and failed to rise.

Captain Plummer was a native of Matthews County, Va., aged 65 and is widely known in Alameda by reason of a residence of full twenty years. He left surviving a widow, a daughter by his second marriage and two children of age in San Francisco by a first matrimonial union.

He has been a member of the Masonic fraternity in Washington League of New York city but for years had not been affiliated with the order. He held membership in the Master Mariners' Benevolent Association of San Francisco and only very recently was elected one of its trustees. He was to have been installed into this office to-morrow evening and the latter announcing this fact was received while he was dying and was not opened until after his death.

The funeral will take place on Sunday afternoon at 1 o'clock from the house and the interment will be in Mountain View Cemetery.

As Others See Us.

The following is an extract from a letter written by a gentleman in England to a prominent member of the Kings Co. Agricultural Society:

With Agricultural Report for 1893, and the N. S. Fruit Growers' report for 1893 were duly received and I sent you a postal card as requested.

It is indeed very kind of you to think of me, but I assure you these reports give me valuable information as well as pleasurable reading. Any autumn I may be asked to teach the science of Agriculture for a six months session, and from that you may readily see how such practical papers on important matters in farming are of great use to me.

Whenever the Fruit Growers' report for 1893 is ready I shall be glad to get a copy of it. I have looked out for the attractive tickets for Nova Scotia apples this winter, but am sorry to say I have not seen any about. Apples are now being sold in the shops of this town from Australia. To increase my Horticultural knowledge I attended a class since Xmas, and sat for my examination last month. The teacher of this class took the silver medal of the Royal Horticultural Society last year.

If an opportunity occurs for me to visit your beautiful country this year, I shall try and come at the end of September as you suggest. Many of the names of your prominent men begin to appear familiar to me. I should especially like to have a chat with Professor Lawson. Will you please show him the letter I sent to the Canadian Gazette of Nov. 23, '93, page 170. By this post I send you a copy of the paper.

Another batch of Tenant Farmers visited Canada last year. No. 1 report, which I have read does not touch on Nova Scotia, F. E. L. or N. B. Well, they (the authors) may have sufficient reasons for passing by those provinces but to anyone who wishes well to every province, he hardly likes such historical fertile and beautiful lands to be ignored.

In your letter you say you have had a cold winter with plenty of snow. Here there has scarcely been any snow, and only one sharp spell of frost. Altogether it has been a lovely winter. March was so warm that we could do without fire, and we could sit in the house with the windows open. April and May were cold, windy and a fair amount of rain. The grass crops at the present time are grand—most abundant, so there is no fear of a hay famine this year.

I was glad to see Canada reap such honors at the World's Fair; ever her Dairying Industries. A clear proof that within the Dominion there is to be found the cattle, the climate and above all the intelligence to make the best possible use of milk. In Hoard's Dairyman of May 11th, '94, the following occurs: "The unthinking, non-reading, hap-hazard, trust-to-luck dairy farmer, is not going to have as easy a time of it the next year as New Zealand, Australia, Canada, and all Northern Europe are going to put the best brains and skill they possess into the problem of supply ing the world's market with butter and cheese. To keep up ever with the profession, the American dairy farmer must sharpen his wit and strengthen his judgment with the best knowledge he can obtain. The best reward will come to the best thinker." Very sensible remarks and in my opinion very accurate. Australia for butter, Canada for cheese, New Zealand for mutton, and Nova Scotia for apples. The man who has those four commodities lives on the best fare the earth produces.

Last year I worked up the subject of sheep husbandry and after reading English, American, Australian and New Zealand books, I thought what a nice occupation, plenty of exercise, a moderate income, may be reasonably anticipated, but when I saw the locality suitable for such an industry in Nova Scotia, and how much an acre for sheep range rental. These were points I failed to find out—and there the matter dropped.

Personal Mention.

(Contributions for this department will be gladly received.)

Mr. B. H. Armstrong was in Halifax this week.

Mr. W. T. Fiers is home spending his usual winter vacation.

Mr. H. B. Witter, a former citizen of Wolfville, was in town last week.

Mr. C. A. Patrinquin made a business trip to Moncton last week. On his return he spent Sunday in Truro and arrived home on Monday morning.

Mr. C. E. Starr, is a Nova Scotian who, after making a fortune in the United States, has decided to return to his home, and to become a fruit grower. Mr. Starr was born in Perseus, and got his wife there. He has spent seventeen years away, and for some time has been doing business in Boston. His farm in Perseus is 200 acres. One acre is attending the Horticultural School here.—Orchardist.

THE ACADIAN

WOLFVILLE, N. S., JAN. 25, 1895.

Local and Provincial

The local legislature is summoned to meet on Jan. 31st.

The meeting of the Executive Committee of the Y. M. C. A. next week promises to be of interest.

We understand that there is a hockey match in the rink at night, between the teams of St. John's and Wolfville.

W. C. Hamilton, Esq., Grand Juror, had the telephone put in his office. The company have extended the line to his office.

Mr. J. L. Franklin has just returned from a well-earned and valuable trip to the West. He has secured for himself next summer a service for the ordinary which will be held in St. Andrew's Sunday morning. It is expected that on that occasion will be Prof. Falconer, of Pictou, and Mr. J. L. Franklin.

On Sunday evening next the Women's Missionary Society will hold a meeting in the Methodist church. Rev. Mr. Harris will be the speaker. A special collection will be made for the mission work.

The members of "Lily of the Valley" Division of Port Wolfville, will visit to Wolfville Division on Wednesday evening, when a pleasant time will be spent, and a collection will be made for the benefit of the mission work.

We have received a copy of a bright little book, "The Church Home, published by Rev. A. J. Johnson. It is a very suitable present for the young people of the church. It is a very good success in his work.

A number of the young folks of Wolfville drove to Horton on Tuesday to attend the year in the Presbyterian church. On the programme were some very interesting and pleasant ones, which included Miss Randall, Miss Bessie, and Miss John Jones. There were a very suitable program of good entertainment and all went their cold.

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., JAN. 25, 1895.

Local and Provincial.

The local legislature is summoned to meet on Jan. 31st.

The meeting of the Fruit Growers next week promises to be of unusual interest.

We understand that there is to be a hockey match in the rink next Friday evening, between the teams of Wolfville and Hantsport.

W. C. Hamilton, Esq., Grand Pre, has had the telephone put in his residence. The company have extended the line to Wallbrook and Avonport.

Mr. J. L. Franklin has purchased a well-situated and valuable lot from Mr. W. W. Stone, on Main street, and is making arrangements for building a store for himself next summer.

A service for the ordination of elders will be held in St. Andrew's church next Sunday morning. It is expected that the sermon on that occasion will be preached by Prof. Falconer, of Pine Hill College, Halifax.

An arrest was made on Monday evening last by Policeman Toye. The unfortunate spent the night in jail and on Tuesday morning was up for trial before Squire Crawley and fined $1 and cost.

On Sunday evening next, 27th inst., the Women's Missionary Society of the Methodist church will hold a public meeting. Rev. Mr. Harrington, a returned missionary from Japan will give an address. A special collection will be made for mission work in China.

The members of "Lily of the Valley" Division, of Port Williams, paid a fraternal visit to Wolfville Division on Monday evening, when a pleasant time was spent. Miss Steadman, agent of the Grand Division, was present, and gave a pleasing address which added much to the enjoyment of the programme.

We have received a copy of the first number of a bright little paper entitled "Our Church Home," published by the First Baptist Church of Madison, Wis., of which Rev. A. Judson Kempton is pastor.

The many friends of Mr. Kempton here will be glad to know that he is meeting with good success in his work in his new town.

A number of the young people of Wolfville drove to Horton last Thursday evening to attend the entertainment given in the Presbyterian church at that place. On the programme, which was an excellent one, was some of Wolfville's talent, which included Miss C. A. Hardwick, Miss Rendell, Miss Ida Jones and Mr. John Jones. Prof. E. E. Faville gave a very suitable speech at the close, and good entertainment was had and was well worth their cold drive.

Wolfville was made the recipient of a call on Monday last by a native of Gaspesia, but who has of late years been in the neighboring republic. He appears in the role of a "fly bloke," and takes his time to perfection. He rehearsed his case in one of the hotels in the town, and to the amusement of the guests, he expressed an earnest desire to make some fun for the boys, but owing to the closeness of the hour, they were deprived of what would have no doubt been a rare treat. He left on Tuesday morning for Halifax, en route for the world.

For Sale.—One very superior outfit of high quality, made by Borden. Only in use a few days. Contains Mafanagin's Epsom's Salts, in bulk for the world.

The Grand Division of the S. of T. meets at Port Williams next Wednesday.

Next Wednesday, Jan. 30th, is the day named as a day of prayer for Colleges and other institutions of learning.

Our contemporary, the Hants Journal, has issued its usual list of the shipping registered and managed in Hants county.

A large quantity of apples are being shipped and the shippers are having very favorable weather this winter for the work.

The large plate of glass in Mr. T. A. Munro's shop which was broken last autumn, was set on Wednesday, without accident. Mr. D. A. Munro had charge of the work.

Mr. Buchanan, Lower Horton, slipped at her door last week and broke her leg. Mrs. Buchanan, who is wearing along in years, will probably be laid up some time. Dr. Bowles, Wolfville, is the attending physician.—Advance.

Examine the three star nursing bottle. It's perfection. No tubes to clean.

A requisition has been circulated and numerous signed during the past week, asking J. W. Bigelow, Esq., to become a candidate for the office of mayor. Mayor Bowles has declined to act again after two years service, and Mr. Bigelow will probably be elected without opposition.

The third annual meeting of the Bee Keepers' Association will be held in Wolfville on Wednesday next week beginning at 1 o'clock p. m. The secretary asks for questions to be placed in the "question box" for discussion. This meeting will be a grand opportunity for every person interested in bee keeping to learn something of the business.

The Herbin Bros., of California, athletes, boxers, scrobbats, etc., were in Wolfville this week. They are seeing the country, and are giving exhibitions in the various towns. Some of the feats performed by these gentlemen are marvellous. They intend giving an exhibition in Windsor on Saturday night. They are brothers of Mr. J. F. Herbin of this town.

The Glasgow House is the place to see the latest things in Ladies' Mantles, Jackets, Furs and Dress Goods. See adv.

Those Who Pay.

In accordance with our notice in last issue, we publish below a list of those who have paid for subscriptions during the week. While thanking those who have so favored us, we would urge upon others to do likewise:—

Rev. D. J. Fraser, $2.00; Andrew Strong, 1.00; L. F. Blankbora, 1.00; John Selfridge, 1.00; Miss Sophia Morline, 1.00; Gordon Penjamin, 1.00; R. C. Forsyth, 1.00; Rev. W. Dawson, 4.00.

The annual meeting of the Wolfville Fire Co. was held on Tuesday evening when the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—R. O. Davison; Vice Pres.—F. J. Porter; Secy.—W. Regan; Treas.—G. W. Munro.

HOSE COMPANY. Captain—J. F. Herbin; Vice Captain—F. W. Woodworth; 1st Lieut.—C. A. Patriquin; 2d Lieut.—A. E. Murphy; Marshal—A. J. Woodman.

SALVAGE CORPS. Captain—C. M. Vaughn; Vice Captain—F. P. Rockwell; 1st Lieut.—O. D. Harris.

Try a bottle of Band's Emulsion for that cough and run down feeling. It is a splendid emulsion. Very palatable, easily digested.

In memory of Bessie B. Vaughn, only daughter of John W. and Lizzie Vaughn, of Wolfville, N. S.

O where is lovely Bessie gone? I miss her smiling face, I miss her blithe and gentle form As its accustomed place.

I miss her merry little laugh, Her bright and beaming eye, Alas! that one so young and fair And beautiful must die.

I seem to see her even now, As still in death she lay; I thought that I had never seen So fair a piece of clay.

But ah, I know that bitter tears For her were vainly shed, That hearts were breaking all the while, Because the loved was dead.

Beneath the damp cold burial sod We laid her down to rest, Pale as the White Giances flower, Which lay upon her breast.

But she is happier, happier far Than mortal tongue can tell, For she hath gone with white robed saints, And angels bright to dwell.

Within her father's house on high She claims a mansion bright, Where safe from sin and death she dwells, Arrayed in robes of light.

Softly she treads the golden streets, With all the angels throng, Joining with ransomed ones to sing The new immortal song.

A little while she lingered here Beside the household hearth, But ah, too beautiful was she, Too fair and frail for earth,

And so her father caught her up To yonder blissful sphere, Where signs of sorrow never come, Nor falls the burning tear.

Then sorrowing parents look above, Where sainted Bessie stands; A crown she wears upon her head, A harp within her hands.

A little while if faithful to The help which God hath given, Ye too shall bid this world farewell, And go to live in Heaven.

L. J. F. Hantsport, N. S. Dr Higgins Resigns.

A meeting of the adherents of the Baptist church in this place was held on the 22d, to consider the resignation of their pastor, the Rev. Dr. Higgins, of which J. W. Bars was chairman.

A good many participated in the discussion, and evidenced by word and manner, a very strong affection for their pastor, who has entered upon his eleventh year of service. His kindly, christian spirit and his able pulpit ministrations have won their highest esteem.

Dr. Higgins has for some time been feeling that increasing years were unfitting him for the increasing burden of his congregation. He therefore asked to be relieved. After anxious and mature deliberation, it was resolved to accept his resignation, to take effect the first of July next, and to grant a yearly allowance of $200, as a recognition of the value of his past services. A committee was appointed to recommend another pastor, with Dr. A. W. Sawyer as chairman.

We are assured that we voice the sentiments of the community in expressing our high appreciation of the character of Dr. Higgins as a minister of the gospel. By his broad sympathies he has endeared himself to all the churches. His genial kindly manner could not but win every heart. In yielding to his conviction of duty he must have experienced some painful emotions. In this he has our hearty sympathies. We hope he may have yet many years of service for his God and country.

Mrs. Ellis begs to inform the public that she deeply regrets her inability to deliver the lectures on temperance and dress reform advertised for Tuesday and Thursday nights, but owing to the fact that an exorbitant license was demanded regardless of the fact that the lectures were free it was impossible to continue.

The Christian World and the Opium Trade.

What a strange sensation comes over the mind of the thoughtful reader, as the eye rests upon such a passage as this in the Word of our God.

Our minds rush back with lightning rapidity to the wicked and unjust war of 1840, when England forced opium upon the Chinese.

A Wonderful Story.

Can be Vouched for by Scores of Heckston People.

Terrible Condition of Mr John Irvine.

FRIENDS EXPECTED HIM TO DIE.

MEDICAL MEN DID NOT UNDERSTAND HIS CASE.

PAINE'S CHERRY COMPOUND MADE A PERMANENT CURE.

A wonderful story comes from Heckston, Ont.

Three years ago I had a severe attack of "la grippe," which left me in a very weak and debilitated condition.

The next autumn I had another attack which left me in a very bad state.

My appetite was gone, and when I would try to eat, in order to gain strength, I would find myself unable to do so.

I tried different doctors, but did not derive any benefit from their treatment.

My friends thought I was going to die, and I verily believe I would have died had I not tried your Paine's Cherry Compound.

I bought six bottles and can conscientiously say I received more benefit from it than I ever derived of any other medicine.

I have not had to use any of the Compound for months, which convinces me that the cure is permanent.

I feel my duty to let every sufferer know what Paine's Cherry Compound has done for me, and it seems impossible for me to say all I should in its favor.

My wife, who has been a sufferer for years with chronic rheumatism, was greatly benefited by the use of your medicine.

I send you this testimonial unhesitatingly.

The Love of the Beautiful.

Place a young girl under the care of a kind-hearted, graceful woman and she unconsciously to herself grows to be a graceful lady.

Place a boy in the establishment of a thorough-going, straight-forward business man, and the boy becomes a self-reliant, practical business man.

Children are susceptible creatures, and circumstances, scenes and actions always impress them.

As you influence them not by arbitrary rules, not by stern example alone, but in the thousand other ways that speak through bright scenes, soft utterance and pretty pictures, so will they grow.

Teach your children how to love the beautiful. Give them a corner in the garden for flowers, encourage them to put in shape the hanging baskets, allow them to have their favorite trees, lead them to wander in the prettiest wood lot, show them where they can best view the sunset, rouse them in the morning, but with the enthusiastic "see the beautiful sunrise," buy for them pretty pictures, and encourage them to decorate their rooms.

In order to swell its revenues the British Government in India is destroying the source of natural income by fostering crime, and tempting people to use opium.

We know that a few years ago under the sanction and control of the Government of India, about 10,000,000 pounds or 4,500 tons of such a horrible drug is grown annually in India, one-fourth of which is consumed in India itself, and the rest goes to China and other countries.

When we consider that this terrible traffic has been originated, advocated, conducted and supported by the Englishman who governs India, and by them alone, and that for their interests, we are overwhelmed and tremble when we think of how they have defeated God's object.

What will their responsibility be when they stand before the judgment bar of God, to give an account of the deeds done in the body, "for thus is the God who judgeth us?" Will it not be as God who is of Babylon, "Alas, alas that great city, that mighty city, for in one hour is thy judgment come!"

In the catalogue of things sold in her markets, gold heads the list, and the "souls of men" end it.

Matters in the last few months seem to have reached their climax, by the terrible imprisonment of Mr. Dyer and his friends in Bombay. These men have been imprisoned for the publication of matter reflecting upon the government opium agents in that city.

Loss Immodest to Vote than Waltz.

In a lecture on "The Moral Woman" in the Church of Disciples, New York the Rev. F. D. Power of Washington said he did not think, with some men, that it was immodest for women to vote.

He regretted that the all had not voted, it was not one-half so immodest to go to the polls as it was to go into a crowded ballroom with bare arms, bare neck and be hugged in the waltz.

The Sydney Bulletin supports woman suffrage because it is based on abstract justice, and says it acquiesces in it because it is inevitable, and the person who refuses to acquiesce in the inevitable is merely shaking an impotent talon at the universe.

For Biliousness—MINARD'S FAMILY PILLS.

Scraps for Odd Moments.

He—Did you find marriage a failure? She—A quadruple widow—Sometimes.

Garfield Tea is sold by all druggists.

Tommy—What is fame, pa? Pa—Neglect when you're alive and a monument when you're dead, my son.

For Spasmodic Coughs—MINARD'S HONEY BALSAM.

Conductor—How old are you, little girl? Little girl—If the company does not object I prefer to pay my fare and keep my own statistics.

That distressing disease, the piles, is speedily relieved and cured by Ayer's Pills.

Jack Spendal is pretty wild isn't he? Yes, he is pretty wild, and I am surprised that he is so, considering the frequency with which he is broke.

Have you got "the smut" in your hawk's catarrh cure clears the head like magic.

It strikes me that he has a good deal of assurance to call himself a play pianist. He must be all of 25. Guess he is; but he plays like a boy of nine.

Best iodine and vegetable alternatives make Ayer's Sarsaparilla the best blood medicine.

No matter how good the reason is, he will always look wise and pleased if anybody suggests that he was a pretty lively young fellow when he was a boy.

Use Dr. Manning's German remedy for pains and aches. It is the best painkiller you can get.

Bein' funny, said Uncle Eben, an umpin' dat er man he ter be mighty kyarful bout. Tain't so much in knowin' how ez in knowin' when.

Twenty-five cents worth of Hawker's catarrh cure may save you many dollars. It cures cold in the head instantly.

Good—I have no doubt that a proper amount of whiskey does a man good. Old Sock weeping—Of course not; but I am never able to get a proper amount.

If you do not know how good a remedy Garfield Tea really is for constipation and sick headache, send a postal card to D. Desmores & Co., 271 Queen Street.

Talk is cheap, observed the man who believes in proverbs.

Humph! replied the man who doesn't. That remark shows that you never hired a lawyer or rented a telephone.

Baldness is either hereditary or caused by sickness, mental exhaustion, wearing tight-fitting hats, and by overwork, and trouble. Hall's Restorer will prevent it.

First guest—That woman dancing with Brown is undoubtedly handsome but she has a marked lack of expression.

Second guest—I guess you never heard her express herself. She is my wife.

The season when catarrh is most troublesome is now upon us. This irritating and troublesome disease yields at once to the marvellous power of Hawker's catarrh cure, which will effect a complete cure in even the most obstinate cases.

A bicycle girl at Lepore got a present from her boss. He wrote: "By bears, I send you a pair of bloomers. If you'll wear them to-night at church I'll consider it as proof of your affection for me. She faints. The bloomers were roses.

The Children's Enemy.

Scrofula often shows itself in early life and is characterized by swellings, abscesses, skin diseases, etc. Consumption is scrofula of the lungs. In these cases of scrofula Scott's Emulsion is unquestionably the most reliable medicine.

Penner—moderately—the editor of the Hasting Hammer may be fond of poking fun at others, but there is one thing sure.

Boggs—And what's that? Penner—He doesn't know how to take a joke himself. The infernal old duffer persists in returning all I sent him.

Take Notice.

During the year the space devoted to advertising MINARD'S LINIMENT will contain expressions of no uncertain sound from people who speak from personal experience to the merits of this best of Household Remedies.

A delegation of players from the company visited the manager. We have come, sir, said the spokesman, to ask you on behalf of ourselves, that portion of the part played by Mr Jackson be cut out. What portion is that? Where he wants to borrow $5 from the disguised duke. What's the objection to it? A very serious one, he replies. He has no money.

That Sluggish Feeling.

Rev. D. L. Joselyn, Crystal City, Mass.—"I found real benefit from your medicine, R. D. C., in saving me from that sluggish feeling caused by my food not properly digesting. I consider it a very valuable medicine to all under like conditions to myself. I have heard of R. D. C. working some marvellous cures among acquaintances, and have recommended it favourably many times."

Marvellous cures are indeed effected by R. D. C. Every man, woman and child throughout Canada, who suffer from any form of indigestion, should test its merits.
