Diseases it is no equal.

BEWARE OF AMERICAN COUNTERFEITS

I most respectfully take leave to call the attention of the Public generally to the fact, that certain Houses in New York are sending to many parts of the globe SPURIOUS IMITATIONS of my Pills and Ointment. These frauds bear on their labels some address in New York.

I do not allow my medicines to be fold in any part of the United States.
I have no Agents there. My Medicines are only made by me, at 533 Oxford Street London.

In the books of directions affixed to the spurious make is a caution, warning the Public against being deceived by counterfeits. Do not be misled by this audacious trick, as they are the dupes of their pretence to denounce.

These counterfeits are purchased by unprincipled Vendors at one half the price of my Pills and Ointment, and resold to you as my genuine medicines.

I most earnestly appeal to that sense of justice which I feel sure I may venture upon asking from all honorable persons, to assist me, and the Public, as far as may lie in their power, in denouncing this shameful Fraud.

Each Pot and Box of the Genuine Medicines bears the British Government Stamp, with the words "HOLLO-WAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT, LONDON" engraved thereon. On the label is the address, 533, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, where alone they are manufactured.
Holloway's Pills and Ointment bearing any other address are counterfeits.

The Trade Marks of these Medicines are registered in Ottawa. Hence, any one throughout the British Possessions, who may keep the American Counterfeits for sale, will be prosecuted.

NEWS PER MAIL.

RUSSIA AND CHINA.

The London Advertiser, in commenting on the Russo-Chinese difficulty, observes:—The news of a Russian defeat on the Chinese border by the troops of his Celestial Majesty the Brother of the Sun, is more than confirmed by the Indian telegrams published this morning.
The news is very serious in many points of view. One can hardly regard with equanimity the descent upon even the semi-civilization of Central Asia of new Mongol Tartar hordes, now, as we know, well armed, though we do not know how well they are provided with ammunition. Then it is difficult to see how Russia, invaded in Asia, can fail to endeavour to retaliate on the Pacific, where she has a strong squadron, and her blockade of Chinese ports to speak of nothing more, would have a very serious effect upon the commerce of England and the other Western Powers with the tea or treaty ports. But, on the other hand China will give Russia quite enough to do, unless peace is speedily made between them, to prevent the sons of the Czar from intriguing much more across Oxus. Apart entirely from the antiagonism which necessarily prevails between England and Russia in Mid-Asia, the Government of the Czar is so completely in the wrong in the contention which led to the present conflict that it is impossible to wish for its success against China.

The Manchester Guardian says:— The prohibition of the export of grain from Russia will be a serious matter for Germany, where the rye crops are especially poor. Under the circumstances it seems likely that Germany this year will be, notwithstanding the grain duties, an important customer for American super-grain. A St Petersburg despatch to the Daily News says: "As a consequence of the defective harvest prospects the question is discussed of forbidding the export of wheat, partially if the reports of deficiency are confirmed in South Russia and a general restriction if the deficiency extends to other parts of the country." The Goals publish an article based on returns sent by the Governor of forty-eight provinces of European Russia, showing that the total deficit of grain is compared with an average crop will amount to 6,761,340 quarters, and says in view of the poor harvest it is considered impossible to export the usual average of 4,000,000 quarters without suffering an insufficiency for home consumption.

SIR GARNET WOLSELEY ON THE STATE OF THE ARMY.

At the annual dinner of the Newpaper Press Fund at Willis's Rooms, London, E. C. under the presidency of the Duke of Manchester, Sir Garnet Wolseley made some strong and startling remarks on the present state of the army. He declared that the press alone can bring useful light to bear upon the dark parts of one militar system not in unison with the spirit of the age or with modern military science, and in appealing to public writers for support to reform military abuses, he said:

You alone have sufficient power to enable us to correct and reform what we believe to be wrong and to remove from the path of progress those great boulders, prejudice and superstition which now impede the way. You alone can enable us to put new wheels to the military coach which by its creaking tells us of its presented dangerous condition, and which is only with difficulty maintained in an upright position at all. I refer to this situation because I feel that if the army is really to be the efficient instrument that it was many years ago, under our great captain, great changes and reforms are needed, and that those changes must not be of a retrograde character.

Coming from so great a military authority, such a warning as to the need of the re-organization of our army will strike the country almost as such as when the great Duke of Wellington, in a letter addressed to General Burgoyne, declared that the undefended state of the English coast invited an invasion from a French army, the landing of which and its march on the metropolis we were re-tally prepared successfully to impede or effectually to resist. The public also will gather from Sir Garnet Wolseley's allusions that the necessary army reform is like to meet an obstinate resistance.

Sir Charles Gavan Duffy proposed "The House of Parliament," and, alluding to the complaint that the press did not receive proper acknowledgement at the hands of the State, pointed out that at this moment a journalist was Prime Minister of New Zealand, and in past times journalists had held similar positions in New South Wales, Victoria, New Zealand, and Canada, whilst the late head of the English Government might fairly be subscribed as men of letters.

A clockmaker of Copenhagen, named Louis Soenderberg, who for some time has had charge of that city's electric timekeepers, has just invented an ingenuous appliance which obviates the necessity of winding up the regulator from which the clocks in question take their time. By a mechanical contrivance which periodically cuts off the steam of electric fluid emanating from the battery, and brings an electro-magnet to bear upon the relaxed spring in such sort as to renew its tension instantaneously, perpetual motion is practically imparted to the works of the regulator —that is to say, as long as the batteries connected with it are kept properly supplied with acids. The discoverer of this important improvement has satisfied himself, by six months successful experiments in his own workshops that his system works faultlessly, and has applied for permission to adapt it to the electric clocks set up by the municipality in different parts of the Danish capital. Electricity, under Mr. Soenderberg's compulsion, is destined not only to make the Copenhagen clocks go, but to wind them up, with never-ending recurrence, until the "crack of doom."

Early on Monday morning a few of the Orange leaders and a following of twenty-five or thirty proceeded in two and three to the vaults of Mount Royal Cemetery, with the object of finally burying Thomas Lett Hackett, killed during riot on the 12th July, 1877. When the coffin was opened in order that the remains might be identified as that of the deceased, it was found that the face was so decomposed and discolored as to place it beyond recognition. This, however, did not matter, as the keeper averred it was the same as was placed there on the 16th of July, 1877, and there could be no mistake. There was no clergyman present. The brethren put on their regula-and the coffin with its contents was routed to the grave and lowered into it.
Brother David Grant and John Hamilton made speeches suitable to the occasion condemning the shooting of Hackett, gave the usual dose of civil and religious liberty, and the whole affair was over in a short time. The next proceeding was the laying of a corner stone for the exposed exhumation, after which the brethren departed in two and threes as they came, taking off their regula before they left the cemetery.

THE PROPER EMBLEM.

We hear that some put crapes on the doors of our public buildings on the Dominion Day. We can hardly call this a practical joke, for it has by far too serious a significance to be considered in any sense popular. Crapes on the door of our Provincial Building represents the feeling of sorrow for their lost independence entertained by a very large majority of the inhabitants of this Province. No Prince Edward Islanders out of ten feel that Mr. Brecken, whether he meant it or not, told the truth when he said from his place in Parliament that it was a calamity that ever Prince Edward Island entered the Dominion.

Even old confederates are grievously disappointed at the results of Confederation.
They are forced to admit that that year y all the evils predicted by the anti-confederates have come upon the Province. The debt of the Dominion has been paid to the interest of the Maritime Provinces in the fiscal policy of the Dominion. A high protective tariff has been forced upon them and their foreign trade has been debilitated and, desig, eily crippled. Inter-provincial trade is less more than a name. Their Public Works are starved in order to increase the power of the Government in the far west. They have been deprived of their fisheries and when they asked for a fair share of the compensation that has been given for them they were ridiculed and in-ulted. The prosperity which was not yet appeared, and there is no indication as the national spirit which was to have invigorated Canadians as soon as the North American Provinces were united in one body politic. The hopes of those who were converted by the glory argument to favor confederation have been sadly disappointed. Canada is no nearer being a nation—has no higher aspirations—no more self-reliance—than it had twenty years ago. Its rulers are mere time servers and place hunters, whose only object is to keep, by hook or by crook, the power they have gained.

Every year's experience goes to convince us that the Union of the Provinces has been so to speak, a pure mechanical union. There has been no fusion of interests, and there exists among them no active principle of co-operation. The bond that holds them together has been stretched to its utmost tension and it may snap at any moment. We do not believe that any competent and unprejudiced observer can honestly affirm that confederation has been so far a success.
On the contrary he will be forced to the conclusion that its results have been hitherto very different from that its friends and advocates hoped or expected and that there is at present very little prospect of their hopes and expectations being ever realized.

IN MALE ATTIRE.

A very interesting story is told in the following special despatch from Toronto, under date of the 15th, to the Cincinnati Gazette:

A strange and yet not altogether uncommon phase of life was revealed to-day at the Union depot. Officer Sullivan had occasion to be at the depot when the morning Lake Shore train arrived, and was informed by Detective Kovagah that a woman disguised as a man was in one of the coaches. Proceeding to the car indicated Sullivan found a figure clothed in a black suit, straw hat and new box-toed shoes, reclining on a seat.
It wore a mass of curly hair at the back of the head and a small black moustache.
The officer at once recognized in the figure before him a woman, and a very fair looking one at that. She recognized the officer as quickly as he did her, and when he laid his hand upon her shoulder she said she knew what was wanted and would go with him. She was taken to the Central Station, where in answer to inquiries, she told the following story:

"My name is Kate Bench. I live in Grand Island Nebraska, with my husband, Frederick Bench. We have been married nine years, but he is so closefisted, stingy and cruel, that I have left him twice in my clothes, and he has bought me each time. Finally, about four months ago, I went to work for some neighbors, who advised me to buy a man's suit and leave disguised in that way, so I got enough money to buy these clothes, and, last Wednesday I left.
I changed my clothes at the house of a friend, three miles from home, and did not sleep until I got to Chicago.
There I thought I saw my husband in the depot, so I walked to Englewood, where I was all night. The way they detected me was between Chicago and here, I mother lives in White Canada but I am going to Buffalo to see a sister, for I know my brothers would whip my husband if he comes for me. I met Fred in Ontario. But he claimed a homestead of 150 acres about eight miles from the railroad, in Grand Island, Nebraska.
We lived happily the first two or three years. I had two children, but they are both dead. I hope they will let me go east, for I can never live with him again."

The story was told with frequent bursts of tears, and her face was covered with her hands during its recital. She was detained in the sergeant's room without a charge being preferred, awaiting the captain's pleasure (Capt. Scott says there is nothing to hold the woman for).

It is surprising to see some of the Ontario papers particularly the Toronto Globe, accusing Hanlan of selling or "throwing" the late boat race at Providence, and stating that he might have won easily had he chosen to do so. This is rather ungrateful after the many victories and aquatic glory that Hanlan has won for a Province that never before produced an oarsman fit to row against a third-class man. They should also remember that Hanlan's greatest match has yet to come off—that, namely with that Australian oarsman in next November.

In no country in the world is racing, in all its phases, enthusiastically fostered as in Australia. Trickett will be backed by his countrymen with barrels filled with gold. Had the Toronto oarsman won the Providence race, the betting would certainly not have turned out quite so remunerative as it will now that he has come in behind. Hanlan still maintains that his "stitch" was a bona fide one, and incapacitated him from rowing.
Providing that this "stitch," if "stitch" it was, will not come back when he is measuring blades with the Australian oarsman, it may prove a lucky one for Hanlan and his backers, and prove the old adage, that "a stitch in time saves nine." However, the Torontoians ought to know Hanlan's character much better than outsiders and should be the best to judge as to whether he has sold the race or not.

John H. Shoemberger, of Pittsburgh, where he is sometimes called the "Iron King," was married Miss Alice E. Taylor, of New York, on Tuesday evening last.
Mr. Shoemberger ranks among the richest men in the state Pennsylvania. His wedding gift to his bride was a check for $1,000,000. He is one of the three sons of Peter Shoemberger, a pioneer in the Pennsylvania iron industry, who, half a century ago, owned more furnaces and one beds than any other man in the State.
Of course, Mr. Shoemberger is no longer a young man. The bride is the daughter of Miss M. L. and the late Alexander Taylor, of Cardenas, Cuba, whose por-tunes were damaged during the surrender ten years ago. Mr. Shoemberger is President of the old Exchange Bank of Pittsburgh, an institution so ably managed that it now has a surplus of about $2,000,000, which it hardly knows what to do with. He is one of the most com-persons laymen and liberal givers in the Episcopal Church of this country. It is said that he once subscribed $100,000 towards the building of a single church.

London July 14, 1880. Last week a timber raft with forty persons on board was dashed to pieces in the rapids of the River Danieper and all perished.

The World says it is rumored that the Prince of Wales will make a tour of Australia, visiting the Melbourne Exhibition.

The annual report of Irish local Government Board states that although there has been exceptional distress no case of death from starvation has occurred.

It is stated that the representatives of the Welsh constituencies in the House of Commons are about to combine for the formation of a distinctively Welsh Parliamentary party.

A Geneva despatch to Daily News reports great alarm in Western Switzerland, owing to the appearance of the phylloxera in several parts of the canton of Vaud.

News has been received from the west coast of Africa that trade has been greatly interfered with by the withdrawal from circulation on the Gold coast of all American dollars. The Governor has gone to Lagos to try to settle the difficulty.

A despatch to the Daily News from Berlin states that the intended separation of the national liberals will not take place, the leaders of the Left Section being against separation.

The French Jesuits have requested permission of Spain to establish a penitentiary colony in the island of Fernando Po. The request is receiving the consideration of the government.

The capture of Arica by the Chileans is considered a death blow to the hopes of Peru, but President Pirola still urges war to the bitter end, and taking the most energetic measures.

Letters received at Gibraltar from Morocco report that the imperial troops pursued the rebels to the mountains, where the latter, being reinforced, turned on their pursuers and completely routed them. The rebels captured the camp of the imperial commander-in-chief and were destroying the crops near Albasar.

A Paris despatch says: "An official decree has been published granting full remission of sentence to all individuals convicted of participation in the insurrection of 1870-71, and subsequent insurrectionary movements." The Standard's Paris despatch says it is calculated only nine persons will be excluded from the amnesty, but they will get a free pardon.

The villa of Theodore Mommsen, the distinguished German professor and antiquarian, at Charlottenberg, a suburb of Berlin, has been burned down. Professor Mommsen was severely injured. A very valuable collection of scientific and historical works, &c., collected with great trouble and expense from all over the world, was destroyed, and the loss is irreparable. Forty thousand volumes were lost by the fire which destroyed the library of Professor Mommsen.

A despatch from Bucharest to the Times says: "Lieutenant Francis V. Greene, of the Engineer Corps of the United States Army, who has the American military attaché with the Grand Duke Nicholas during the late Russo-Turkish war, and author of the work entitled 'The Russian Army and its late Campaign in Turkey,' has been decorated with the Order of the Star of Roumania."

News has been received at Constantinople that the English steamer Khalifat, belonging to the Euphrates, had been attacked by Arabs, who maintained a fusillade for an hour, but did not succeed in boarding the steamer. The quarter master and one passenger were killed, and the captain was wounded. The Turkish authorities at Bagdad have proceeded to investigate the outrage, which was wholly unprovoked.

A Pera despatch to the Dai Telegraph in connection with the fall of Osman Pasha, late Turkish Minister of War, says 2,000 soldiers at the Tchataldja lines whose time of service had expired clamored to be disbanded and threw down their arms. Amid a great uproar they started for Pera, intended to demand their arrears of pay but were met by a strong force and conducted to the barracks, where they are confined. This occurrence, together with other disquieting matters, having reached the ear of the Sultan, it is believed induced him to dismiss Osman Pasha. The London correspondence of the Edinburgh Scotsman says: "At the annual dinner of the Golden Club on Saturday night last, J. W. Garrett, President of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, related a hitherto unpublished anecdote, which excited great interest. He stated that on the termination of the civil war in the United States Mr. Richard Cobden wrote to him and urged forcibly that the federal government should adopt a magnanimous policy toward the southern leaders. The letter was read at a meeting of the American Cabinet and produced so great an impression that it turned the scale in favour of clemency."

ATLANTIC CITY N. J., July 19. Mrs. Nesmith, wife of Lieut. Nesmith, of the army with Bessie, daughter of J. B. Fanshawe, and another little girl, Helen Denison, were drowned here today while bathing.

WASHINGTON, July 19. The President of the Board of Health Memphis states there is no yellow fever nor anything resembling it in Memphis.

PITTSBURGH, PENN., July 19. Jesus Hoffman a German shoemaker, shot his wife and baby this evening, instantly killing the baby and fatally wounding his wife. He was immediately arrested and there was strong talk of lynching, but the police safely conveyed him to the country prison at Wilkesbarre.

New York, July 20. A fire, involving a loss $300,000, occurred last night in a block fronting on First Avenue between Twenty-Ninth and Thirtieth Streets, owned by Herman Kohler a brewer. The property was occupied by several firms. The building was four stories high.

New York, July 21. The steamer Dessouk, with Cleopatra's obelisk on board is still at quarantine. The steamer broke one of her shafts during the voyage, which delayed her arrival. The obelisk is in perfect condition. The Dessouk will anchor to-day off Hoboken and be open to visitors.

New York, July 20. Stephen Dewitt was killed and J. Freely and M. Morion fatally injured by being thrown from a carriage last evening.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 20. Gen. Skobeloff's mother left here on the 16th in a carriage for Ichirapan with money and medical supplies for the hospital. She was attacked when half way by armed men and killed, and a servant and steward dangerously wounded. Considerable money stolen. A Russian captain named Mussol, who committed the crime, has been captured. When arrested he shot himself, and is not expected to recover. The steward and coachman have since died.

The Free Press to-day says: "We are authorized to state that Princess Louise finds herself compelled to follow the medical advice she has received, prescribing complete rest in order to gain her strength, which has been affected by injuries sustained from the accident which occurred last winter when going to the Senate Chamber to hold a reception. By Order of her medical advisers the Princess will proceed to Europe next month to visit one of the German watering places and afterwards go for a time to England."

A Forty Days Fast has been undertaken in New York by Dr. H. S. Tanner, and is now in progress. On Tuesday last, at noon, he had completed his seventh day of existence without food. On Monday at noon he expressed himself as feeling much more comfortable than on Saturday, and as that the crisis of his experiment had been passed. From this time on he expects to feel little inconvenience from his fasting, and he says he has no doubt he will succeed in his task. His eyes look hollow and sleepy, and the lines which appear on his once smooth face are deepening daily, but otherwise he appears as he did before beginning the fast. His pulse, though variable, is said by the doctor to be strong and healthy. His voice is clear and strong. His tongue is slightly coated, but thus far the offensive smell known to medical men as the "starvation odor" has not been encountered. The doctor talks rationally and intelligently, though at times irritably, and there is no sign yet of weakening of his reason.

FASTED 39 DAYS AND DIED.—PETERSBURG, PA., July 12, 1880.—The "starvation" experiment of Dr. Tanner against time was called up reminiscence from Paris, Washington county, this state, which is well authenticated. In 1840 F. Ford, aged about 23 years, lived without food or water for 39 days. He was taken ill and was unable to swallow either solids or liquids. All the physicians in the country round were called in, but they were unable to afford even the slightest relief. On the evening of the 39 days he took his sister's hand in his, and remarked that she should not have to watch with him much longer, that he felt no worse than for several days past, but that no man had ever fasted 40 days but our saviour, and no man ever would. He died that evening, leaving a request that a post-mortem be held for the benefit of science, as he did not want others to suffer as he had done. The examination made, and the physicians found the entrance through to the stomach closed up by a fungus growth and it would have been impossible to relieve him by an operation.

American papers publish a report from the captain of a Gloucester ship which was prevented from reaching the Greenland fisheries by immense quantities of ice encountered off the Straits of Belle Isle. It is stated that the ice blockade extends down to 32nd degree of latitude and with thousands of icebergs of every size and size. The New York Herald says that it seems almost certain that the present iceberg season will last all summer, and it will be unsafe for commanders of ships to relax their vigilance in any part of the Arctic current, or its southerly project on, while they are running north of the fortieth parallel. As there is a great scarcity of ice this season, the idea of capturing one of these bergs and towing it into New York might deserve consideration.

The Season in P. E. Island.—The farming prospects in P. E. Island this season are of most encouraging character, and so far as the bounties of Providence can counterbalance the evils of unjust legislation the Islander has no reason to complain. It is believed that the hay crop will be the largest ever cut in the Island. The wheat crop look well, and a larger acreage is under cultivation than ever before. The prospect is excellent for a heavy yield. About the usual quantity of oats was sown and the fields are thriving excellent y. Owing to the increased cultivation of wheat and the somewhat unprofitable character of the potato trade last year a less quantity of potatoes was planted than last season, but the fields that were planted present a most thrifty appearance. Barley and other crops usual. Reports from all parts of the Island state that as a whole the farming prospects were never better, the evidence of a prolific crop never more assuring.

A Toronto despatch of the 7th says that Benett, the murderer of Hon. Geo. Brown, was asked by his counsel to sign a petition which was prepared asking for the commutation of his sentence, but refused, saying he preferred death, even on the scaffold, to imprisonment for life.

THE CARBONEAR HERALD

Honest Labor—our noblest heritage.

CARBONEAR, JULY 29.

It appears that those persons engaged in the Railway Survey have of late been subjected to considerable annoyance from some of our Bay folks through whose lands the line of survey passes, and that the whole project is growing to be looked upon in many quarters as a "bete noir," an "egregious swindle," with the old hackneyed purpose of "running the country into Confederation." Now we have implicit faith in the honor of the Commissioners. "They are wise and honorable," but still we are at a loss to know why the survey was not commenced at Carbonear instead of Harbor Grace. We are inclined to look on the enterprise with a favorable eye, and would suggest to those who may have been misled by the Carberus of the Telegram or any other "dynamite teachings" to demand from the Commissioners or their agents a valid assurance of compensation for all lands to be taken, for crops injured, and for every other damage sustained and not to use physical force unless in case of necessity. We would like to see the "gentlemen of the survey" at work in our vicinity where they need have no fear of molestation from owners of land, that is, if they behave themselves, which we believe they would, for they are "all, all honorable men."—Com.

We observe with much pleasure that recently work was resumed of the Catholic College, Harbor Grace. It is expected that that magnificent building now approaching completion will be finished in September next, and business will commence there as soon as the necessary arrangements are perfected. We understand that a staff of professors will be employed, fully qualified to undertake the important duties of that institution and that nothing will be left undone to render it in every way a success. We congratulate the Catholic people of Harbor Grace as well as those of the country generally on the prospect that is now before them of having an institution in which their children can receive a Superior education that will qualify them to attain those positions to which they are entitled in their native land. Too long has the work of providing superior education for the Catholics of this country been neglected; too long have large sums of money been voted for this service without conferring any corresponding benefit on the people. But they have now the prospect before them that in the near future they will have a school in which their children will receive an education suited to their positions and that he no longer taunted with being "hewers of wood and drawers of water" in their own country.—Com.

THE FRENCH REVOLUTION, AN ESSAY, By W. R.

Having in my last paper given some of the principal causes that led to this great revolution. I shall now proceed to give some of the details of it, and endeavor to trace it through some of the stages of its bloody course. When the States—general assembled in 1789, the King laid before them certain measures, having for their object the amelioration of the financial condition of the country. But the majority of the members of that Assembly refused to comply with the wishes of their Sovereign. Having taken this bold step, they withdrew and set themselves to work to frame a new constitution for France. The efforts of this illegal enactment soon began to manifest themselves. They issued an edict for the confiscation of ecclesiastical property and to compel the bishops and priests to take an oath that would be entirely incompatible with their duties as ministers of Christ. But it must be admitted in justice to the French bishops and clergy that very few of them consented to take the oath. The majority of them preferred exile and death rather than submit to those conditions and compromise the duties of their sacred office. Many of them for their fidelity were compelled to abandon their country and seek protection on the hospitable shores of Italy, England, Ireland and North America. The nobility of the land were not treated better than the clergy and lower orders. Many of them were forced to leave their country and take refuge in foreign land for the purpose of avoiding the tyranny of their oppressors and to return with force sufficient to chastise the enemies of their country.

But the storm now burst forth in all its fury. These wicked men under the successive names of "National Constituent," and "Legislative Assembly" and "National Convention," now set to work to undermine the throne itself. They could not rest content whilst there was anything to impede the carrying out of their wicked designs. They knew that whilst the King occupied the throne there would be some check on them. Hence we must not be surprised to find them setting themselves to work, first to degrade the office of King and then to do away with it altogether. They knew well the mild and pacific disposition of Louis. They saw that he was opposed to the shedding of human blood even in his own defence. Hence they took advantage of these qualities to lessen his prerogatives. The men who were now most powerful in the capital, Marat, Danton and Robespierre left nothing undone to ruin the unfortunate monarch. By means of the clamours and violence of an infuriated multitude they succeeded in getting the King and his family into their hands.

This event sealed the fate of Louis. He was brought before a tribunal composed of men of iniquitous characters. In vain did the virtuous King endeavor to plead his innocence. His words had no effect on those who thirsted for the blood of their Sovereign. The most powerful advocates endeavoured to defend him from the false charges that were brought against him. But truth and eloquence availed nothing with these cruel men. They decided his death and they were determined that no obstacle would prevent them from accomplishing their designs. He was condemned to death and on the 21st of January 1793 met his fate with the greatness of a christian prince and the constancy of a martyr.

Intemperance in drinking, produces intoxication, makes man contemptible, corrupts the blood, clouds the brain, weakens the body, disfigures the face, causes disgrace and quarrelling, ends in delirium and often in suicide. Intemperance in mental or physical relations is wrong and dangerous and to be avoided. It makes our domestic relations unpleasant, injures us in business, lowers the intellect, degrades our minds, weakens our bodies, and leads to shame ruin and death. Above all, the excess in the use of strong drink is to be deplored and avoided. Of all forms of intemperance it is the most dangerous. "It weakens the brain, it spoils the memory, it hastens on age and willful poverty, it throws thy better part, making thy name To foes a laughter, to thy friends a shame. 'Tis virtue's poison, and the bane of trust, The match of wrath."—Randolph.

Comparison between the deeds of the past and the present, proves in most instances the great advance in Christianity; civilization and refinement. It proves a narrow mind to constantly refer to the past as possessing superiority over the present. Even in the remote ages this idea of looking back prevailed. We must look to the past for examples and warnings, but living in the present, should keep before our minds all the progress we make. History teaches us that; Every age had its noble examples worthy of imitation, but also that glaring faults of the past are overcome by the light of reason in the present. Improvements in public life prove that we are wiser and better in national matters. Laws are founded more upon principle than upon tyrannical power. National progress is world-wide. As individuals advance, they influence also the countries in which they live. The world has never made one step backward. Compare "the hand and steam plough," "the needle and sewing machine," "the stage coach and locomotive, &c." world. In some minor matters old people may tell you that the world has degenerated, quoting the days of their youth or the events of the past, but the contrary is proved by investigation in history, scientific research, and the light of common reason. If we have lost simplicity, we have gained wisdom; if we have lost some arts that are dead for ever, we gained in proportion those that are more useful and more widely diffused.—Com.

Precautions necessary for swimmers.—Moderation in the length of time they stay in the water.—Allowing some time to pass after eating; it endangers life to swim after a hearty meal. Before eating is safer than after. Avoid plunging into water when over heated by violent exercise, or even by the temperature of the air. It is a useful precaution to wet the head and wrists before plunging into the water. Avoiding the heat of the day. Early morning and towards sunset in summer are the safest times for swimming.

An accident resulting in the death of Mr. Wm. Pack, occurred at Bay Roberts on Sunday last. We understand that while crossing the harbor a sudden squall upset the boat, and before assistance could reach, the poor fellow was drowned. He was grandfather of the late R. Pack, Esq., formerly merchant of this town.

We understand that Captain Halpin of the Cable expedition is expected in Harbor Grace to-day, as the guest of R. S. Munn, Esq., and that the laying of the Cable from Placatia to Cape Breton is about completed.

We are indebted to a friend for Labrador news received from St. John's yesterday stating that boats at Battle Harbor averaged about 50 qts and some 300. The average from that to Wolfton being also very fair, below the latter place the coast is considerably blocked by ice in many places up to date of steamer's visit, which was about the 21st inst.

The first Cricket match of the season, took place between the Lunenburg and Harbor Grace Cricket Clubs, on Monday last at Puck's Farm grounds. The Harbor Gracians were Robert Maddock, Esq., left Saturday last on a trip to French Shore in Schooner Ada.

We regret being unable to report any improvement in the fishery in Conception Bay since last advised.

A Telegram was received here from Dublin on Saturday last which will be heard of with exceeding regret throughout the community. It announced the death of Miss Jane Scott, sister of Lady Glover, caused by falling from a balcony in Kingstown. No further particulars were given. The melancholy accident has awakened in town a feeling of deep sympathy with Lady Glover and the lamented deceased's other sister, Miss Scott, at present on a visit here.—Nfldr.

A little misunderstanding we believe took place yesterday morning between the fair ones of Fox Trap and the Railway Surveyors. The cause of the trouble, we believe, was the necessity of the part of the Surveyors to enter upon certain fields, &c., for the purpose of marking or staking the ground and thereby completing their survey. The ladies however had put their faces against the railway ab initio, and no amount of persuasion on the part of their husbands, (who by the bye are in favour of it,) and the Surveyors, could prevail upon them to allow the latter to perform their duties in peace. His worship Judge Prowse took his departure for the scene in the afternoon, and spent, no doubt, a pleasant hour or two with the advocates of "woman's rights."—Chronicle.

Between nine and ten o'clock last evening, while the Hon. James J. Rogerson was driving to his country residence, the horse collided with another driven by a man named Roche. The shaft of Mr. Rogerson's carriage entered the breast of Roche's horse, inflicting a wound from the effects of which the animal died, in a few moments. The collision took place near the Gas House, River Head.

TELEGRAPHIC.

HARFAX, July 26. The relief committees in Ireland have nearly completed their work. All the crops are good. An eruption of Vesuvius and an earth quake at Naples occurred yesterday. An anti-British rising of the tribes under Ayob Khan is reported to have taken place near Candahar. The Powers are preparing for a naval demonstration to compel Turkey to concede the Greek boundary. It is said that Russia and China have re-opened negotiations. Mr. Gladstone's budget had a narrow escape from a combination of Conservatives and brewers.

July 27. Lord Roseberry has been nominated Rector of Edinburgh University by the Liberals and Mr. Christian by the Conservatives. The Mormon missionaries have been expelled by the German Government. Mr. Southern is very ill. Affairs in Afghanistan are looking hopeless. Abdul Rahman Khan is gaining strength every hour. The Communist demonstration in Paris proved a failure. Cattle disease is prevalent in Picton, Nova Scotia. It is attributed to exposure and semi-tarvation during the winter.

July 28. Irish relief bill passed 2nd reading House of Lords. Compensation bill goes to House of Lords in charge of Earl Granville. The Times urges rejection bill. Earl Grey leader opposition. Eugenie returned from Africa. Heavy rain damaged English crops. Reported that the Queen addressed autographic letter to Sultan imploring him accede to the wishes of powers. Harfington gave a hopeful account of Afghan affairs, highly commending Abdul Rahman.

The Sailor's Return.

The village clock had struck the hour Which open'd the school-room door, And forth they sailed one by one, The children of the poor.

With laughter now they ran, they play'd, Rich in their youth and health, That blessing which God freely gives, But none can buy with wealth.

A sunburnt sailor watched their sport, His heart was full of joy, He thought to spy amongst that group His own beloved boy.

Three years had pass'd since he had left, His wife and only child, And now he hoped to see them soon, His heart beat fast and wild.

"Come near me, little lad," said he, "And sit down by my side;" And then he ask'd for news of those He'd thought of far and wide

But short and bitter were the words That young boy had to tell; No longer wife or child can watch For him they loved so well.

He ask'd to see the humble grave Where now his dear ones lay, Then bade the wondering boy depart That he alone might stay.

Oh! who can paint the human heart? What tongue its throbs portay? God save us all from grief like this, So let us ever pray.

The pale moon rose; he knelt and pray'd For grace to bear his lot; Then when the morning streak'd the sky He left the sacred spot.

Years flew apace; a ship went down— They said that all were lost, And many sailor's manly forms Upon the beach were toss'd.

They buried them, Old England's sons, With almost loving care; But one there was grasp'd in his hand Two locks of silky hair.

They wept, those rough yet kindly hearts, To think of his sad fate, Who ne'er on earth should see again The forms he loved so late.

They said it was a dreadful death, And yet 'twas God's decree; In mercy he had sent him rest, His lost ones he might see.

The Stolen Interview OR HOW WILL IT END

Continued.

"Here is pa, Hugh," announced Elinor, as she advanced towards her husband.

Poor Hugh, instead of coming to meet Mr. Vincent, drew back without taking the proffered hand.

"Why what's the matter, my dear fellow?" inquired the old gentleman, kindly; "you're not looking well, Nell never told me you were indisposed."

At this Elinor looked at her husband and noticing his strange manner and pallid face, went up to him, and would have put her hand on his shoulder, but he shook her off with a shudder and turned to her father.

"I am glad you are come Mr. Vincent," he said, "but glad from a very different cause to any you imagine. Six months ago when you gave your daughter to me, I vowed to love and cherish her. Heaven only knows how truly I have kept that vow. In thought, in word, in deed, I have been faithful to her; but let her ask her own heart if she has been so to me. Don't interrupt me," he added seeing the old gentleman make an impatient movement; "hear me patiently and know that I neither judge harshly nor hastily."

He paused a moment while his listeners gazed on him with astonishment. "I so trusted my wife," he continued "that I never permitted myself to doubt her, even when I saw a letter inviting her to an interview with a man of whom I knew nothing. I believed in her though she was seen out at night after she had dismissed me from her presence on pretence of illness, and though I picked up this handkerchief upon the spot which was selected for the interview in the letter I should perhaps never have doubted her had I not this morning seen her meet some man, evidently by appointment to whom she gave a packet, and with whom she had apparently a perfect understanding."

Again Mr. Vincent was about to interrupt, and Hugh stopped him.

"One moment more and I have done," said he. "My wife must have had one of two motives for meeting this man. She must have been influenced by either love or fear. If the former, you cannot suppose that I can feel my home our safe in her keeping; nor is it much safer in her hands if she fears this person, for what can the secret be, except disgraceful, which can make a woman thus deceive her husband? Under these circumstances, Mr. Vincent, you will understand that your daughter can no longer hold her place as my wife, and therefore I am glad that you are here to take her back under your protection, now that I feel my home must shelter her no more."

The poor old father felt quite bewildered; at first he was only impatient, but as Hugh gravely proceeded with his charge, and Elinor sunk into a chair and hid her face into her hands he became sorely perplexed. His daughter's manner looked guilty; and yet how could he think this wrong of his darling child, whose distinguished characteristic had always been her bright open innocence?

"Elinor," said the old man, at last "For Heaven's sake explain all this for it surely must admit of explanation. I am certain you can never have done anything to disgrace yourself, your husband, your father, and all who love you."

"Yes," added Hugh eagerly, "in mercy explain away these things, if you can, and, on my bended knees, I will bless you for it. Oh, my darling, he continued passionately his calmness quite giving way, "pray speak some words of comfort, for never did my heart cling to you more than now, when I have tried to nerve it to say farewell."

"Hugh, you have cruelly wronged me in thinking I could wrong you," said Elinor, in a voice choked with tears.

"Then, Nell, explain all about these meetings," urged her father; "that will be the best way to prove your innocence, my dear."

She turned her face from both her auditors as she began to speak.

"The story is not entirely new to you papa," she said, "but as the explanation is due to Hugh, I will begin at the beginning."

She paused for a moment as if to collect her thoughts and then went on.

"When my poor mother died, I was but eight years old, and my father, thinking I could not do without a woman's care, begged of my Aunt Morton to come and take charge of me. Her husband was in India at the time and she was left at his estate in Ireland, with her only child, a little girl a year older than myself. She came and I grew very fond of her and also my cousin Agnes, so that when after the lapse of a year my aunt's husband returned from India, and of course wanted his wife at her own home, I fretted so much that my father consented that I should go and live with them. I was very happy in my Irish home, for in spite of the distance, my father came very often to see me, and never left without requesting that I should have whatever I might wish for."

"I was thus potted and indulged until I was fifteen years of age, when Mr. Morton took Agnes and me to a county ball, which was to be a very grand affair, and of which he was one of the stewards. Agnes and I were almost mad about it, and when the evening came we went fully prepared to be pleased with all we saw. My cousin's first partner was a tall, dark young man, who made himself agreeable in a way that was very flattering to a girl of sixteen years on her first appearance in public, and in the course of the evening Agnes whispered to me that he was a delightful partner. Just then her father came up and said rather sternly, 'Agnes, for the future you will please to dance with none one but those I introduce to you. Your last partner was not the sort of a person I approve of your dancing with.'"

"This, of course, made Agnes think all the more of the young gentleman, and as he asked again several times, she always softened her refusals by a short but pleasant conversation with him."

"When he reached home our romantic heads could think of nothing but the tall dark gentleman whom Mr. Morton disliked. The affair had an air of romance which pleased us both, and especially me."

"It is quite like 'Romeo and Juliet' said I, to Agnes; 'you have evidently taken a fancy for each other, and your father is the disagreeable Capulet who seems inclined to prevent the course of true love from running smooth.'"
