Ruled BY Destiny!

CHAPTER IV. "I ALWAYS HATED YOU."

CARLISLE! Lord Bruce Norman stood with his hat in his hand, his eyes fixed on Floris's face, his own almost stern with the shock of surprise the name had caused him.

As for Floris, she tried to meet the intent gaze with a calm, steadfast regard, but her eyes drooped, and her face grew flushed.

"Why, yes! And why not? What is the matter with you both?" demanded Lady Pendleton, volubly.

"You look as if you had seen a ghost, Bruce, and you, Miss Carlisle, as if you had been caught doing something especially naughty!"

Lord Norman was one of the first to recover.

With a grim smile he took his eyes off the beautiful, downcast face, and turned them to his cousin with a kind of pitying amazement.

"Don't be alarmed, Betty," he said, quietly; "I didn't know that I had caught the name rightly. I think I will go now," and he gave her his hand, his eyes wandering again to Floris's face, pale and proud once more.

"Now mind, Bruce!" exclaimed Lady Pendleton, clinging to his hand and covering a yawn with her fan at the same time. "You are to come to-morrow, and help us with your valuable suggestions about the fancy fair costumes; isn't he, my dear?"

"I will not promise," he said, abruptly. "Good-night."

He held his hat in his hand, looking to see if Floris would extend her hand, but she merely inclined her head, and with a very low but stern bow he left them together.

Lady Pendleton drooped into a chair with a little laugh and looked at the door through which he had passed.

"Dear Bruce! Isn't he handsome, my dear? Not doltish, you know—hate your pretty men—but right down handsome."

"Why do you call him Bruce—and not Lord Norman?" asked Floris, almost abruptly.

"Because we always called him Bruce while his father was alive, and can't get out of the way now, my dear," said Lady Pendleton. "We used to be playmates. I was always a favorite of his. Perhaps—" she sighed, then laughed. "But he was so poor and Sir Edward was so pressing. You've no idea what a good fellow my husband is, my dear!"

"Quickly—the very best in the world!"

And now, good-night. Shall I come up to show you your room?" But Floris would not permit this, and assuring her ladyship that she could find the way by herself, went to her own room.

When she fell asleep, after hours of wakefulness, it was but to dream that Lord Bruce stood before her, the fatal sheet of paper in his hand, the dark eyes fixed reproachfully upon her.

Lord Norman descended the steps, and stood for a moment looking absently out at the quiet street, but when a cab pulled up, he shook his head, and strode off with the air of a man too restless to sit quiet. He passed out into Park Lane and down beside the railings, and crossed the road into Oxford street.

Then he paused, half resolved to go to his club, but turned westward instead, and reaching a quiet street beyond the marble arch, palatial in size, was divided into sets of chambers.

Ascending to his own suite, he opened the door with his key, and entered a luxuriantly decorated and furnished sitting-room.

The rays of the lamp, standing on the sandal-wood table, fell upon Persian hangings and Pex china, on delicately-inlaid Chippendale chairs, and tapestry-covered lounges.

For some time he walked to and fro, his brows knit, his dark eyes flashing with the intensity of his thoughts; then he drew the sheet of notepaper from his pocket, and held it over the lamp, as if he had suddenly arrived at some decision. But as the paper began to curl and turn brown with the heat he drew it away.

"No, I cannot! What is the good of burning it when the girl's face, and her voice, and the very turn of her head, possess and haunt me! How beautiful she is! How beautiful!"

With a sigh he turned out the lamp and went into the next room. It was the dressing-room, between the sitting-room and bedchamber, and was dimly lit by a shaded lamp, held in the hands of a Venus Aphrodite.

There was a couch and a couple of chairs, besides the inevitable bath, and Lord Norman was taking off his coat, when suddenly from the couch there rose a man.

Lord Norman started, and stood perfectly motionless. With a yawn the man stretched himself and stood upright, and, in doing so, presented, in form and feature, an almost perfect copy of Lord Norman himself.

Excepting that the earl was in evening dress and the man in a well worn suit of serge, the resemblance in figure was almost complete.

Lord Norman did not start, but stood as if turned to stone. The awakened man yawned, and stared vacantly for a moment, then, rubbing his eyes, exclaimed:

"Is that you, Bruce?"

"Raymond!" exclaimed Lord Norman, sternly. "What brings you here? Why have you come?"

The man called Raymond laughed out loud.

"That means a long story; and you hate long stories, don't you? You always did! I've come from Australia. Why have I come? Because I'd nowhere else to go! Where should I go, but to my old friend, Bruce Norman?" and the visitor smiled with ineffable satisfaction, as if he had answered the question completely.

"How did you make your way in here?" Norman asked.

"I told your man—capital valet you've got, Bruce—that I was your brother, and, convinced by the likeness that I spoke the truth, he let me in!"

"Listen to me, Raymond," said Lord

Oh, How I Itched!

What long nerve-racking days of constant torture—what sleepless nights of terrible agony—itch-itch-itch—CONSTANT ITCH! until it seemed that I must TEAR OFF MY VERY SKIN—then—INSTANT RELIEF—my skin cooled, soothed and healed!

The very first drops of D. D. D. Prescription for Eczema, the wonderful new skin discovery, stopped that awful itch instantly; yes, the very moment D. D. D. touched the burning skin, the torture ceased. A single bottle proves it.

Norman, regarding him gravely, and almost sternly; "if any one were told that I found you lying here in one of my rooms at midnight, they would conclude that, as you are no relation of mine, there was some tie of friendship or interest between us, would they not? Beyond the fact that we were schoolfellows, that we spent some foolish youthful days together, and that you are said to resemble me, what claim have you upon me?"

"None at all!" responded the other, after a moment's pause. "Did I ever say that I had?"

"Acts speak more plainly than words sometimes. Why are you here in my rooms at midnight?"

"For the best of all possible reasons, my dear Bruce! Because I haven't anywhere else to go. I'd go to a hotel if I could, but I haven't a penny. Of course, if I am unwelcome I will go. I don't need to be told twice. You are looking well—and yet slightly worried; that comes of being a noble, you see! Now, if you were simple Oscar Raymond, you would look as careless as I do. Good-night," and he took up his hat, a soft felt, much the worse for wear, and moved toward the door.

"Wait," said Lord Norman, following him. "I am sorry that I spoke harshly to you; but when I saw you so unexpectedly, I remembered one or two similar visits that you had paid me in the old days; I could not forget that I had given you a large sum of money to enable you to leave the country, and—"

"I ought to have stopped there," Raymond finished for him. "So I ought. But, upon my word, Bruce, five years of stone-breaking is sufficient for any man—"

Lord Norman looked at the white hands significantly.

"When I say stone-breaking, of course I speak figuratively. If I haven't been stone-breaking, I have been doing things equally unpleasant."

"Well, I will give you some money," said Lord Norman. "I don't ask you to leave England again, but I do trust that your visits to me will be few and far between."

As he spoke—not unpleasantly, but with a grave smile—he went to a cabinet, and, unlocking a drawer, took out some money, and without counting it laid it on the table.

Raymond's dark eyes gleamed for a moment in a peculiar fashion, which transformed his handsome face into anything but a pleasant one; then, with a sudden laugh, he took up the money and dropped it into his coat pocket.

"Thanks!"

As he did so his sleeve knocked down an ivory box, and a pack of cards fell out. While he was filling the glass with wine, Raymond's eyes were fixed on the cards, and the same gleam which had shone in them before now lit them up.

Slowly he drank the wine and set the glass down, then he stooped and picked up the cards, and in an absent kind of way, began to shuffle them.

"Do you remember the cards we used to have, Bruce?"

almost as good as I did. It is some months since I touched a card." He glanced at the clock, and turned his face, with a smile of peculiar winningness, half playful, half-mournful, to Lord Norman's.

"Bruce, let us have one game! Just for auld lang syne! Humor the returned wanderer upon whom you have lavished your gold—by trying to win it back again!" and he laughed a soft, musical laugh that few would have been able to withstand.

The game proceeded, Raymond chatted and Lord Bruce replying now and again in indifferent monosyllables; and the luck, which had smiled on the earl from the beginning, remained faithful until one solitary sovereign stood beside Raymond's elbow.

"The last!" he exclaimed. "Let us see whether it will follow the others, or call them back!"

Strange to say, the luck seemed to change, and game after game fell to Raymond. His face grew flushed, his eyes sparkled. A pile of gold and notes stood on the spot where the solitary sovereign had stood, and Lord Norman, with a smile, rose to fetch some more money from the cabinet.

As he did so he happened to glance in the small mirror over the mantel, and saw something that made him turn crimson and then pale and stern.

He said nothing, however, but brought some notes and gold from the cabinet and returned to his seat.

"Bruce," he said, "this must be our last game! What do you say now, double or quits?"

Lord Norman nodded, and with a dexterous movement Raymond swept his pile of money into the middle of the table.

"Double or quits!" he said! "By Heavens, if I win this I will swear never to play another game—until the next opportunity!" and he laughed.

"Are you ready? It is your deal! Now I mean to play my very best."

"Just so," said Lord Bruce, "but before we begin, hadn't we better see whether all the kings are in the pack!" and very quietly, but with terrible strength, he seized Raymond's arm, forced it up, and took the king of diamonds from his sleeve.

There was a moment's awful silence, as the two men looked into each other's eyes; like the reflection of one face, so alike were they in features, but fearfully unlike in expression.

My Limbs Would Twitch
And Waken Me—Unable to Rest or Sleep, I Walked the Floor in Nervous State—When Specialists Failed I Found a Cure.

This is the kind of cure that has set Windsor people thinking and talking about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. The action of this food cure is so radically different to the usual treatments for the ailment that everybody wants to try it. Gradually and certainly it nourished the starved nerves back to health and vigor and the benefits obtained are both thorough and lasting.

Mrs. M. Smithson, 27 Arthur street, Windsor, Ont., writes: "I was suffering from nervous breakdown, which was caused by a shock when my brother died in the adjoining house. My nerves were in such a state that, after going to bed I could not get my nerves quieted down sufficiently to go to sleep. I used to get up and walk around the room, or go downstairs. Even when I would be dropping off to sleep my limbs would twitch and waken me. I used to have cold, nervous, night sweats, sometimes would become unconscious and lie that way for quite a little while. I was always cold and it seemed impossible for me to get warm or keep warm. When on the street I would see two or three objects at once, and did not want any person to speak to me or bother me. Any little noise irritated and annoyed me very much. I had consulted specialists and tried many remedies during this time, but could not gain relief. At last I tried Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and before long could see that this treatment was proving of benefit. I am now feeling so much better that I can go out on the street without any difficulty, can go across the river and go about the same as usual. I sleep well at night, and am feeling more like myself every day. I am pleased to be able to write you to tell you how much good the Nerve Food has done me. It has strengthened and built up my whole system. I am recommending it to everybody I find suffering from nervousness of any kind."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.75, at all dealers, or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

WAR SUMMARY.

There has been no let up in the offensive of American and French troops against the Germans in the region northwest of Chateau Thierry, where in the past two days, severe defeats have been inflicted on the enemy and American marines have won great praise for their valiant fighting. Battering shoulder to shoulder over a front of six miles from Vimay, which lies just to the northwest of Veully-la-Poterie, to Boursches, the Americans and French have captured the towns of Veully-la-Poterie and Boursches, and also made progress along the front. Previously Troops of had fallen into the hands of the Americans. The losses to the enemy thus far are said to have been extremely heavy and the ground they have lost is considered of high strategic value inasmuch as it is on that part of the battle front through which the Germans had hoped to crush their way forward and attain an open road to Paris. The casualties of the enemy were particularly severe during the street fighting in Boursches where the Americans pushed him back step by step. Hard held on the other sectors from Soissons to Chateau Thierry the Germans after very heavy bombardments have essayed attacks on the Marne front near Rheims. These attacks were all stopped and the enemy had to accept defeat. A French attack on Bligny resulted in that village falling into their hands in its entirety. The remainder of the battle front there is still slight activity aside from bombardments and patrol encounters.

VILLAGE CAPTURED.

PARIS, June 7. The French and American troops operating against the Germans northwest of Chateau Thierry during today's fighting made additional gains of ground and took the villages of Veully, La Poterie and Boursches according to the French report issued this evening.

Censorship of the Press.

THE NEW REGULATIONS.

This morning we received official notification that Mr. John R. Goodison, M.H.A., for Carbonear, had been appointed Acting Press Censor by the Government. According to the circular "Not for publication" which accompanies the copy of the commission of appointment, any and all writings on certain matters in connection with the war, which are detailed in the circular, must first be submitted to Mr. Goodison in order that his sanction may be given. Mr. H. Y. Mott, who has been doing the press censorship is now assistant to Mr. Goodison. The "Daily News" aptly points out that no mention is made regarding the office hour of the new department, a rather important matter to a morning paper. Up to the present, editors were allowed a certain discretion in publishing matter relative to the war, the army, the navy, and shipping. Now that privilege has been taken away and the whole press of the island is at the mercy of the censor. How harshly this will bear on the newspapers published in the outports, is only realizable to the editors of these papers. Personally we think that the drastic action now taken will fall short of the effect it is intended to have. The "good judgment and sense" of the censor is now to be the only guide for newspaper men and if in this "good sense and judgment" the censorial approval is withheld, and all the time used in its preparation goes for naught.

We respectfully, but firmly protest against this imposition of Prussian methods on a free and democratic community. No editor, no newspaper, will be guilty of permitting the publication of any matter which will give information or be of service to the enemy, but the determination implied in the circular under review is to muzzle honest criticism and make the press a mere automaton, moved only at the pleasure of the censor. The measures that the press must not discuss without the approval of the censor, are: Conscription, The Local Loan, The Regiment, The Conduct of Affairs in connection with Army and Navy matters, and Shipping. We have no idea where all this is going to end. So far as the freedom of the press is concerned, it does not exist, and is but a myth in this Dominion at any rate. It is being bludgeoned into servile submission to autocracy and the velvet glove of politeness only serves to conceal the iron hand of tyranny.

We would wish to congratulate the new censor on his appointment, which perhaps has been made to cover a disappointment, but we cannot compliment him on the acceptance of the office. The moves on our political chess board are becoming altogether too obvious. The game is being played clumsily and lacks the delicate finesse of the professional. We can assure the censor that so far as the Telegram is concerned, "there will be as little inconsequence as possible" in enforcing the Rules and Regulations which have been enumerated.

Buy Victory Bonds.

The announcement that next week the Minister of Finance is to open the Victory Loan Campaign, and for that purpose will place on the market a local bond issue, should be pleasing intelligence to all Newfoundlanders. For the first time in our history, the Government is testing the financial generosity and patriotism of our people by offering them the opportunity of becoming shareholders in a local loan. And it will ill become us as a prosperous and prospering community, if we fall in taking up, individually as much of this loan as our means will afford. That this investment will offer good returns, we feel quite sure. That it will be perfectly safe, with all Newfoundland as its security, we believe we can guarantee. To apprehension need exist in the minds of people who are inclined to purchase, regarding the safety of their money, as such a loan as proposed must be a first lien upon the revenues of the Dominion, until the repayable period terminates. The interest will be either six or six and one-half per centum, and if the bonds are purchasable at a discount for immediate payment the realisable interest will be augmented. Of that we are not, to-day, in a position to make any pronouncement, but when the prospectus is issued, we shall lay before our readers all the information obtainable.

The cabled news of a few days ago stating that already three million dollars of this loan had been taken up by a firm of Canadian financiers, should be a proof of its popularity with outside investors, and deducing from this huge purchase that it is a good thing, we should exert ourselves in the direction of convincing our neighbours that it is their duty to buy Victory Bonds and help win the war. We can better demonstrate this by first buying ourselves. Then we can show that we are practising what we preach. It will be remembered that the Telegram first suggested to the Government the wisdom of the step they are now taking. In our issue of April 17th we showed that a Newfoundland Victory Loan was quite feasible and that it was poor financing to go outside to borrow money when there was so much lying on deposit in the various Savings Banks, earning but three per cent per annum. We have congratulated the Government on accepting our suggestion and now declare our intention of supporting the raising of the Loan, and doing all that we possibly can to assist in making it successful, providing always that there are no objectionable features, and the business of floating and canvassing done in every way outside political influences, and without political bias. We believe that once the people are satisfied that the investment is good, and the security as we have already stated, there will be no hesitation on their part to put their savings into NEWFOUNDLAND'S VICTORY LOAN.

The War Week By Week.

By Observer.

If last week-end was an anxious one for the Allies, they have every cause for satisfaction in the position presented by this and in the events that have occurred in the interval. The third great drive of the German has been definitely checked; it made no sensible headway, in fact, during the past week. From one point of view, this rapid stemming of so tremendous an attack—for by comparison with the offensive of March it has been rapid indeed—is most significant and encouraging. If the most the enemy can achieve, after weeks of the most elaborate preparation, was to be limited in its success to what it has already achieved, and that it has come to an end. Some critics even say that the storming of the Chemin des Dames and the subsequent advance between Soissons and Reims was a success unexpected by the German command, who immediately and characteristically by exploiting for all they were worth, just as was the case in April before Lille; intended as a diversion, they say, the attack was made a major operation and pursued by means of the rapid concentration of troops which the enemy's fine railway system and interior position allow, with the utmost power.

Notes and Comments

Buy Victory Bonds.

The difference between 3 per cent. from the Banks and 6½ per cent. from Victory Bonds, is 3½ per cent., or more than double.

You help defeat the Hun by the use of the silver bullet. Just as much as the men at the front are doing it by means of the nickel bullet. Then do your part.

Nearly every time a man invents a good thing some other fellow is sure to come along and make a fortune out of it.

Every little bit helps. Since the price of manufactured cigarettes has been raised, a lot of young men in this town are rolling their own, but not many of them can do it with one hand yet.

We would hate to have the woodpecker minds of some of the people who complain about what is not published in the papers. If these folk were turned loose in the woods, they would bore for worms and ignore the beauties of the foliage.—Vancouver Daily Sun.

The appearance of German submarines in American waters should put every fisherman along our coast on the alert. Everyone of them should be on guard, keeping a sharp lookout for enemy craft, and every suspicious circumstance should immediately be reported to the authorities here. We cannot afford to take any chances. BUY VICTORY BONDS.

The "Star."

The Advocate yesterday, editorially accords its gracious permission to the Star to resume publication, and announces that it (Advocate) does not wish to embarrass any publication in this way (what way?) unnecessarily. The point at issue appears to be the right of the Supreme Court to interpret the Act, under which the Star was suppressed to mean that it shall not bear unjustly on certain rights, and permit persecution. No more or less and the decision was in favor of the Star. Concerning the statement that the Star has "undertaken not to republish the articles upon which the Government's act was based," we are informed that the "Star" gave no assurance whatever of this nature, and that further, no pledge or promise regarding the future attitude of that paper has been made.

Owing to the necessity of having to tune up some of the machinery the "Star" will not issue to-day, but will be out as usual on Monday.

The War Week By Week.

By Observer.

That reason a limited offensive by the Allies in the near future is likely enough. The effect, if it were successful, in disarranging the Germans' own offensive plans and the moral effect of a retreat of any dimensions on their part would be very great.

Tridium Closes.

Yesterday, the festival of the Sacred Heart, was observed with great solemnity in the Catholic Churches of the city. During the day there was solemn Exposition of the Most Blessed Sacrament and throngs of devout faithful attended from the hour of the early Masses until at night, when the Tridium came to a close. At the Cathedral last evening His Grace Archbishop Roche delivered an impressive and touching sermon on the feast. He expressed the great satisfaction he felt at the devotion of the people to the Sacred Heart, as evidenced by the large congregation present, and by the members who had that day approached the Holy Table. Then taking as his text Christ's words in the Gospel according to St. Matthew, "Come to me all you that labour and are burdened and I will refresh you," (Cap. XI, 28), he spoke feelingly to the people of one of the great attributes of the Sacred Heart: Our Divine Saviour is ever ready out of the fullness of His compassionate Heart to pour consolation and solace on the afflicted. During His life on earth His aim was to succour and relieve the distressed; the beautiful and touching scene of the raising to life of the widow's son of Nain was one instance; that of the raising of Lazarus another, when "Jesus wept." The Jews therefore said, "Behold how He loved him."

WEATHER UNFAVORABLE.—The weather conditions on Cape St. Mary's grounds have been unfavorable during the present month. Fish, however, are fairly plentiful and when it is possible to get on the grounds good catches are accounted for. Over 250 boats are engaged fishing in that vicinity.

BADLY DAMAGED.—The steamer which went ashore at Fort at Fort on Wednesday morning and was refloated, was found to be damaged to a greater extent than was at first thought. Holds Nos. 1 and 2 are filled with water while other parts of the ship are only kept free by pumping. Diver Glynn who is now at the scene had a look over the ship this morning.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—I would be obliged if you would publish in your esteemed paper report from Captain Wilfred Pippy, Royal Nfld. Regiment, as I feel that the kindly interest and splendid treatment accorded our boys, by good friends in New York, will be greatly appreciated by the general public. Yours faithfully,
W. F. RENDELL,
Lieut.-Colonel, Chief Staff Officer, to Minister of Militia.

St. John's, Nfld., June 8th, 1918.

As the officer commanding the first draft of the Royal Nfld. Regiment, I desire to bring to your notice the warmest of welcomes we received unofficially, from Newfoundlanders and others during our week's stay. From the moment of our landing motor cars were offered us, in which to see the City and its beauties. As individuals and sometimes as a party we visited the theatres and cabarets as guests of New Yorkers, who made our visit an exceptionally pleasant one. Not a day but that something was arranged, and finally when leaving we had to cancel engagements ahead.

Mr. W. C. Job loaned his own motor car and another to us for two days the second day the entire party to Coney Island, and then to the theater in the evening. Mr. Hubert Watson of the Royal Bank, Mr. Chas. Bowring, Mr. Clifford of Brooklyn, Mr. Robert H. Martin, Mr. J. L. Clarke, Mrs. Robert D. Blackman of New York, Messrs. J. Williams and J. Baird of St. John's, and Mrs. Fred. Butler of Brooklyn, all were responsible for making our stay enjoyable and one that will not soon be forgotten by us all.

It is my duty also to mention that the Management of the Prince George Hotel, gave the draft special rates for rooms and meals considerably below the current prices, as did also Henderson's restaurant at Coney Island, where we had luncheon one day. Dr. E. L. Barrett, dentist, Prince George Hotel, who did dental work for some of the men, refused payment, and also did Dr. Royal (Whitman), who first examined Pte. Mowbray, who is in New York, in hospital. At Halifax, before leaving Overseas, Messrs. Morton & Thompson, Hardware Stores, Barrington Street, were kind enough to send some games to the men at Chain Lake Camp. I have the honor to be,

Obituary.

WILLIAM WHITE.

Yesterday evening, at 6 o'clock, there passed away at his residence, South Side, a well known member of the community in the person of Mr. William White, son of the late Hon. Edward White. He was for many years a member of the Customs staff as 1st Landing Wailer, and retired from active service about twenty years ago through ill health, which he bore with patient fortitude. Mr. White was known as a man of sterling qualities and was keenly interested in all matters of public importance. He was a member of the Executive Committee of the Official Board in previous years. His wife predeceased him about 13 years ago. The surviving members of the family are: Mrs. C. H. Hutchings, Mrs. E. G. Hunter, Misses Isabel and Jessie White, Mrs. (Rev.) Pike (Alberta), Mrs. Donald Butler, Mr. Wm. White, and Mrs. (Clotilda) Co.; Messrs. Edward, Ernest and Frank, the latter of whom is in training with the Canadian forces. To the bereaved relatives the Telegram extends sincere sympathy.

Where Are We?

The appended official communication has been received from the Department of the Colonial Secretary, and a similar document has been sent other newspapers.

8th June, 1918.

Sir,—I have the honour to acquaint you that, under the provisions of the Regulations dated October 5th, 1915, made under the War Measures Act, 1914, John R. Goodison, Esq., M.H.A., has been appointed Acting Censor of the writings, copies or matter printed, or the publications issued at all printing houses, printing establishments or works in this Dominion. I have the honour to be,

Your obedient servant, W. W. HALFYARD, Colonial Secretary.

Clean the Post Office.

Sir,—Now that the fine weather has arrived I think it would be a good idea to give the Post Office a general cleaning up. I mean that portion of it that the public use. The windows are very dirty, and the floors are two or three professional window cleaners in the city, the contract of cleaning the windows should be given them immediately. The floor needs a thorough scrubbing and the walls need cleaning also. And while they are at the job it would not be amiss to give the letter boxes a cleaning also, I mean the glass fronts. The desks, too, would not be injured if they received a good washing and it would not be time wasted if the ink bottles received a dash of warm water and soap. The pens on the desks have seen the best of their days and are of no further use. A half dozen new ones would not be out of place. Trusting that these matters will be attended to once, I remain,

Yours etc., June 6th, 1918. CITIZEN.

Slayer of 500 Germans Here

ON HIS WAY BACK TO "BLIGHTY."

NEWFOUNDLANDER TRAPPED ALONE BY STORM FORCE, USED MACHINE GUN TILL WOUNDED. Ten Newfoundland soldiers, heroes of the Somme, Arras, Cambrai and Gallipoli, all bearing marks of the Hun's savagery, arrived in this city yesterday on their way back to blighty. Their presence at the Prince George Hotel was made known to the Red Cross and arrangements were hastily made to provide for their appearance in the huge pageant in Fifth avenue to-day.

Like their brother heroes, the Anzacs, Blue Devils and Canadians, who have reached this city in the last six months, these Newfoundlanders hesitate to tell their individual heroism. They are full of praise for the "other fellow," but make light of their own adventures in which they received wounds which have incapacitated them for life.

Among the group is Private Israel Bannister, of the Royal Newfoundland Regiment, of the Twenty-fourth Division, who is said to have slaughtered five hundred Germans with a machine gun in the defense of Menen during the battle of Arras in April, 1917. He was severely wounded in action and taken prisoner. After spending ten months in German camps, during which time he was subjected to all manner of brutality, he was traded with other wounded prisoners last Christmas and reached France by way of Switzerland.

According to the stories told by Private Bannister's comrades, the single-handed man and a Lewis machine gun in the face of a charge of German storm troops, killing the majority of them and putting the others to rout. In this action his company suffered very heavy losses, there being only twelve out of 300 men accounted for after the action.

"They got me by a flanking movement of three divisions," explained Private Bannister. "I was in a shell hole and they tried to rout me with artillery fire, but all the shots fell short. I saw where their battery was located, about sixteen hundred yards distant. I raised my gun and let fire. I think I got everybody in that battery, because the gun went out of action. The prisoners got busy with the whiz-bangs and shrapnel, which put me out of business.

"The stretcher bearers took me to a dressing station where after five hours my wounds were dressed and bound up with paper bandages. Then they took me to a base hospital further back. I did not receive the second dressing until fourteen days later."

Private Bannister declares the food served prisoners is unpalatable. He says if it were not for the food sent by the Red Cross through Switzerland all the prisoners would starve to death. The soup which was served was composed of plain hot water and a few pieces of ordinary bread, flavoured with a little salt.

He made two attempts to escape, but on both occasions was recaptured. The first time he was confined in a small steam room, ten feet below the ground, for ten days without food. There were six other men in the room with him, but three of them died before the sentence was up.

Sergeant Stewart Dewling, of the Medical Corps, who received the military medal for removing wounded under fire, is another soldier whom the heroes praise highly. He was wounded and favorably known among the decorations while lying on a bed in a base hospital. Sergeant Dewling was shot in the leg and his left arm was badly cut.

The other heroes in the group include Second Lieutenant L. S. Field, a Newfoundlander; Private L. Constantine, Private F. W. Dart, Private J. A. Coulton, Private J. Pennell, Private L. M. Pennell and Private S. Reid. Capt. Wilfred Pippy, a veteran of three battle fronts, is commander of the increment.

(The Sergeant Dewling referred to in the above article is a son of Joseph Dewling, of Trinity, and nephew of Thomas Dewling, of the Harbor Master's Department, this port.—Editor Telegram.)

Slayer of 500 Germans Here

ON HIS WAY BACK TO "BLIGHTY."

NEWFOUNDLANDER TRAPPED ALONE BY STORM FORCE, USED MACHINE GUN TILL WOUNDED. Ten Newfoundland soldiers, heroes of the Somme, Arras, Cambrai and Gallipoli, all bearing marks of the Hun's savagery, arrived in this city yesterday on their way back to blighty. Their presence at the Prince George Hotel was made known to the Red Cross and arrangements were hastily made to provide for their appearance in the huge pageant in Fifth avenue to-day.

Like their brother heroes, the Anzacs, Blue Devils and Canadians, who have reached this city in the last six months, these Newfoundlanders hesitate to tell their individual heroism. They are full of praise for the "other fellow," but make light of their own adventures in which they received wounds which have incapacitated them for life.

Among the group is Private Israel Bannister, of the Royal Newfoundland Regiment, of the Twenty-fourth Division, who is said to have slaughtered five hundred Germans with a machine gun in the defense of Menen during the battle of Arras in April, 1917. He was severely wounded in action and taken prisoner. After spending ten months in German camps, during which time he was subjected to all manner of brutality, he was traded with other wounded prisoners last Christmas and reached France by way of Switzerland.

According to the stories told by Private Bannister's comrades, the single-handed man and a Lewis machine gun in the face of a charge of German storm troops, killing the majority of them and putting the others to rout. In this action his company suffered very heavy losses, there being only twelve out of 300 men accounted for after the action.

"They got me by a flanking movement of three divisions," explained Private Bannister. "I was in a shell hole and they tried to rout me with artillery fire, but all the shots fell short. I saw where their battery was located, about sixteen hundred yards distant. I raised my gun and let fire. I think I got everybody in that battery, because the gun went out of action. The prisoners got busy with the whiz-bangs and shrapnel, which put me out of business.

"The stretcher bearers took me to a dressing station where after five hours my wounds were dressed and bound up with paper bandages. Then they took me to a base hospital further back. I did not receive the second dressing until fourteen days later."

Private Bannister declares the food served prisoners is unpalatable. He says if it were not for the food sent by the Red Cross through Switzerland all the prisoners would starve to death. The soup which was served was composed of plain hot water and a few pieces of ordinary bread, flavoured with a little salt.

He made two attempts to escape, but on both occasions was recaptured. The first time he was confined in a small steam room, ten feet below the ground, for ten days without food. There were six other men in the room with him, but three of them died before the sentence was up.

Sergeant Stewart Dewling, of the Medical Corps, who received the military medal for removing wounded under fire, is another soldier whom the heroes praise highly. He was wounded and favorably known among the decorations while lying on a bed in a base hospital. Sergeant Dewling was shot in the leg and his left arm was badly cut.

The other heroes in the group include Second Lieutenant L. S. Field, a Newfoundlander; Private L. Constantine, Private F. W. Dart, Private J. A. Coulton, Private J. Pennell, Private L. M. Pennell and Private S. Reid. Capt. Wilfred Pippy, a veteran of three battle fronts, is commander of the increment.

Your Boys and Girls.

If going on a short journey with the baby it is better to prepare the feedings for the whole trip at home. You can sterilize the milk for this purpose as follows: Stand the filled bottles in a kettle over the fire and let the water boil for about an hour and a half. After boiling, the bottles should be gradually cooled and then made as cold as possible by standing them in a pail of cracked ice.

A good portable ice box for such a journey may be made at home as follows: Use two covered tin pails, one an inch or two smaller than the other, so it may stand inside the larger pail. Fill the space between the two with sawdust, put the bottles with cracked ice in the inner pail and cover both tightly, making a canvas or flannel cover for the whole. To warm the bottle for the baby you should carry an enameled ware pitcher or which the train porter will fill with warm water and you can set the bottle in that until warm enough for feeding.

When you want Sausages, why—get ELLIS'; they're the best. Instead they assign one reason or another. THE NEW VISION. This is the vision we're coming to see. That manhood is splendid wherever it be. This is the goal they are reaching out there. Face to face with the specter of death and the grave; A brotherhood built upon all that is fair. An equality founded on all that is brave. Slowly the shallow distinctions depart. Man shall be known by the throbs in his heart. He that was scorned by the proud men of old. By the side of the great shall be welcome to stand. The men of the future shall know but one fold. The men of America, serve but one land. Proud men are learning great wisdom out there. From the red book of strife, from its hope and despair. The souls of the mighty are changing to-day. And the souls of the humble are flung open wide. The dust of the ages is passing away. As freedom's defenders meet war, side by side.

THE USE OF PERFUMES.

The modern woman does not indulge in perfumes. If she uses it at all it is done so delicately as to be a mere breath that is of such a quality as not to grow heavy and stale after contact with the air. Oftentimes she retains the desired effect by scattering her favorite scent in her lingerie drawer, in her hat box, among her furs or by spraying of the hair. Of late, for the first time in centuries the dressing table has been embellished by all sorts of rare bottles of toilet waters and perfumes. These bottles are the best of sculptors art in the way of being closely engraved.

While human beings do not have the sense of smell developed to the point of animals, yet the human race has always been very susceptible to odors. While in the early modern centuries the use of perfumes declined to a mere means of disguising bodily uncleanness, among the earliest records of the ancients the powers of delicate scents were set down. Perfumes were thoroughly understood and incense was used very much like that used in some churches to-day. Not only did the ancient Greeks and Egyptians use delicious body perfumes but they chewed scented gums to sweeten the breath. The Crusaders brought back Arabian perfumes to their wives and sweethearts, among the best known of which was musk which the Chinese had used for centuries before.

Everyday Etiquette.

"Which is proper, to take cheese from the plate with your fingers or with your fork?" inquired Janet of her mother. "You should never use a fork to take cheese from the plate. A cheese knife should always be placed on the plate with cream or other accompaniments of course, you use this in serving yourself. Hard cheese is usually cut before it is served and then is taken with the fingers," answered her mother. A turban of straw makes a most satisfactory service hat. Silks with printed designs are more artistic than ever. Severe top-coats are one of fashion's features this season. Fasten your belt in the back with a double knot with loops.

SACRIFICES. Still, still we bank in gilded ease, and soothe ourselves with fine cigars, and fill ourselves with costly cheese, and chow around in motor cars. We put fine raiment on our backs, we buy silk shirts of gorgeous price; we haven't yet got down to tacks, we haven't made a sacrifice. We read stern tales from o'er the sea, which tell of Britain's battered line, and buy up seven bonds or three, where we should call for forty-nine. We haven't helped our Uncle Same so much it's worth while to relate; we eat brown bread, well spread with jam, and think we're doing something great. We waste enough each passing day, because we do not use our domes) to drive the wolves of want away from fifty thousand soldiers' homes. We waste our coin on princely duds when simpler rags would do as well, we blow our change for smokes and suds, and gawds too numerous to tell. Of sacrifice we're talking large while on our padded course we romp, like Cleopatra on her barge, in luxury and idle pomp. Our loyalty is all a fake unless we show we have some steam; oh, let us prod ourselves awake, and do the things of which we dream!

The Challenge of the Times.

In all Allied countries this is felt to be a time of extreme trial to the faith and courage of the people. War weariness is one of the most patent symptoms of the day and there is danger lest the nations leagued against the great military despotism which seeks to fasten itself upon the world should become so weary of the strife as to consent to such a compromise peace as would largely render vain all the sacrifice of life and treasure which they have made for liberty.

Helping Salmon Over a Hurdle.

In getting to fresh water to spawn the salmon performs feats which, in spite of the frequency with which we read about them, are almost unbelievable. Low waterfalls are carried in a single leap, and the fish will actually swim up a fall ten or fifteen feet high, choosing for this stunt the place where the volume of the fall is heaviest, and going up with a rush of flying fins. But just as the result of bringing an irresistible force in play against an immovable obstacle depends upon the degree of irresistibility and immovability, so the salmon, with all his power, once in a while finds an obstruction against which he cannot make head.

Thus, in 1913, a railroad that was being constructed along the Fraser River in British Columbia had choked the stream with a mass of blasted rock, half closing the river and making the channel very narrow and extremely swift for quite a distance. The salmon found this quite a different proposition from the mere scaling of a short waterfall, and were quite unable to go up the chute thus formed. A serious situation was threatened, since if the fish could not get up the river they would not spawn, while if they did not spawn there would be no young salmon of 1913 to come back at maturity in 1917, and perpetuate the race in their own birthplace. A year of no salmon in such an important fishing ground as the Fraser River would have been a disaster indeed.

Accordingly the Dominion Fisheries Department rushed a large force of men to the scene, and made strenuous efforts to clear the river. Before this could be done, however, the fish returned to the attack and again attempted to run the rapids. Fearing that after this second failure they would not make a third effort, the workers adopted a novel expedient. They built a temporary flume around the obstruction, and by using long-handled nets they ladled the fish out of the lower waters and dropped them into this flume, in which they could swim in quiet water past the blockade and out into the upper section of the stream. In this way, while nothing like all the salmon were enabled to reach the spawning grounds, enough did so to save the situation and make 1917 merely a light year, rather than a total failure. —Scientific American.

Anniversary of Fire.

To-morrow, Sunday, June 9th, is the 72nd anniversary which devastated St. John's in 1846. The conflagration which started in the shop of Hamlin the Cabinet maker at 8 o'clock a.m. on Thursday, had its origin in the overboiling of a glue pot. It raged all day and by nightfall it had destroyed the city. Sir John Harvey (Governor) Major Robe, Colonel Low and the military forces were untiring in their efforts to check the flames. The loss of property included 59 large warehouses but fortunately the loss of life was inconsiderable, being but three—one artilleryman and two civilians. Thousands were ruined but a hopeful determined spirit prevailed and St. John's once more arose from its ashes.

Manners at Mess.

Despite the War There is Little Change in Naval Dining Customs on Our Warships. (By John Blunt.)

Nothing puzzles a new-comer so much as the custom of the senior Service. There are laws, written and unwritten, which are inexorable. We beside the culprit who innocently breaks any of them! The etiquette of a military mess is not in the least the same as that around which a naval officers' mess is conducted. The first thing a colonel who came aboard the my ship the other day asked me was whether he was supposed to stay all through the dinner, as he had to get away early. I told him what he might do in that connection, and incidentally mention a few other customs, at which he was amazed. I told him, for instance, that it would be as well if he refrained from inquiring after my wife—or any other lady—at table, at any rate until after the King's health had been drunk; that also until after the King's health had been drunk, it would never do to make a wagger or leave the table without the express permission of the president.

Drinking Toasts in Water.

My friend the colonel was much surprised to find that a dinner in a naval officers' mess in war-time is a very formal affair. The president—a senior officer—sits at the head of the table, with a vice-president opposite. Punctually to time he raps the table with his polished hammer and says very informally, "For what we are about to receive, thank God," whereupon the dozens of orderlies—generally Marines—who have been waiting for the signal hand round the dishes, the president, of course, being served first, and the vice-president next.

Officers nowadays are rationed, but there is, comparatively speaking, plenty, and three courses are the minimum (a second helping, however, is permitted from the same dish). Sugar, too, abounds. An important item for some of us! The King's health is drunk before dessert, after the grace "For what we have received, thank God." Then the table is cleared, all tumbler—even if full—being removed, too.

Dessert-glasses having been served, three, sometimes four, bottles of wine are placed in front of the president. Around each is a silver label—say, madra, port, sherry, marsala. The president starts the ball rolling, first by methodically removing the stopper of each bottle and laying them in order side by side. Then he slides the bottle round with the sun—i.e., from right to left. Not everybody, of course, helps himself from these decanters, it being permissible by order of the King to drink the Royal toast with water, or an empty glass. On the last ship I was in practically everybody drank the toast in wine; on my present ship hardly anybody does.

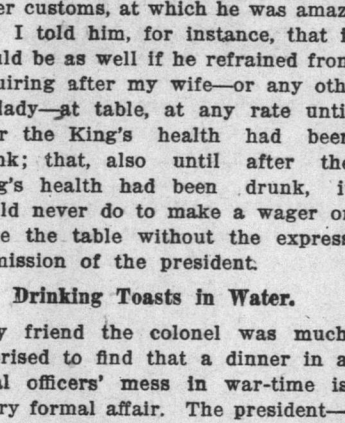

"Every time somebody made the glass ring on the ship I used to command," an officer told me, "a seaman sure enough fell overboard." That was why they called out "Hull!" In doing so they were transferring the bad luck to our enemies! Usually somebody called out "Have a poor sailor!" and the ringing of the glass, plate, or bowl is at once stopped by placing a finger on it.

Nowadays so many novices abound in the Navy that many of the old and revered customs are falling into decay. If they are not actually taboo, the "pukka" sailor regrets this, and is inclined to look forward to the time when the old customs will come into their own again. Speaking as one of the novices, however, let me say that most of those I have met have eas-

Afternoon dresses are all made of light materials.

Tortured for Nearly Two Years.

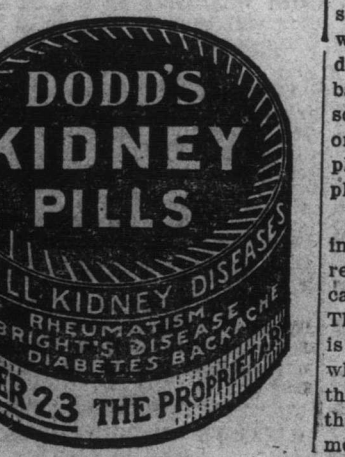

MRS. PLANTE FOUND RELIEF IN DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS. She Tells How They Helped Her Kidney Disease and Made a New Woman of Her.

St. Florence, Que., June 7th.—(Special).—"Two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills made a new person of me." The speaker is Madame M. L. Plante, of this place, and her numerous friends here fully verify her statement.

"For nearly two years," Mrs. Plante continues, "Kidney disease tortured me. I heard of Dodd's Kidney Pills and made up my mind to try them, and to my surprise they did me good almost at once. Two boxes cured me completely. I recommend them to all my friends." Mrs. Plante is only one of many who have had a similar experience. They were weak and run-down, and sick all over. Dodd's Kidney Pills helped them. How? Simply by curing the kidneys. The diseased kidneys were the cause of all the trouble. They were failing to strain the impurities out of the blood, and the result was disease all over the body. Dodd's Kidney Pills helped the kidneys, the impurities were strained out of the blood. The result was pure blood and good health all over the body. The cause of the disease had been removed.

DIFFERENCE IN PRICE.—Salmon are selling at 10 and 12 cents a pound in the nearby outports, but strange to say they double in value by the time they reach the city. It's no matter how the pondulum swings, it is sure to hit hard the St. John's householders.

Councillor Tait Makes a Move.

As a result of a visit to all the shops and stores on New Gower Street by Councillor (Dr.) J. S. The Sanitary Inspectors have been given instructions to carry out the law to the fullest extent.
