CANADIAN ILLUSTRATED NEWS.

Montreal, Saturday, March 24th, 1877.

FISH CULTURE IN CANADA.

We desire to call the special attention of our readers to the double-page picture in the present number illustrative of the successful efforts which are being made to preserve and propagate the fish resources of the Dominion. There is probably no country in the world so favored as Canada, in the quality, quantity and variety of its fish, and with proper management it ought to be made a vast channel of revenue and wealth.

Table listing fish products and quantities: Salmon eggs (1,500,000), Whitefish eggs (150,000), California Salmon eggs (10,000), Sandwich (Ont.) Whitefish eggs (8,000,000).

Table listing fish products and quantities: Tadousac (Que.) Salmon eggs (1,000,000), Sea-trout eggs (30,000), California Salmon eggs (5,000), Gaspé (Que.) Salmon eggs (920,000), Restigouche (Que.) Salmon eggs (720,000), Miramichi (N. B.) Salmon eggs (640,000), Bedford (N. S.) Salmon (1,000,000).

These are all in thriving condition. The percentage of loss on the eggs deposited after impregnation has been exceedingly small. It is confidently hoped that this large stock of ova will be hatched out with a loss not exceeding seven per cent on the whole deposit.

OWING to circumstances which we could not control, we found ourselves at the very last moment obliged to postpone till next week the portrait of Mr. WILLIAM SMITH, Deputy Minister of Marine and Fisheries, whose place was naturally with the other gentlemen who preside over the fish interests of the Dominion.

EXCEPTION has been taken to the costumes of nuns which appeared in our illustration of the Toronto Skating Rink last week. We regret that it should be so, but we can assure our friends that there was not the slightest disrespect intended, either on our part, nor on the part of those who sent us the original from Toronto.

THEY know how to do things in Europe, and no wonder art flourishes. GÉROME, the great French painter, has lately been visiting Naples, and before his departure received the honor of a farewell breakfast from the Neapolitan artists.

VARIOUS projects have been proposed to shorten the dreaded voyage between Europe and America. One plan contemplates a railway across Newfoundland, connecting with swift steamers, which would make the trip from that island to Valentia Bay, Ireland, in three days.

A LONDON paper says: "The latest eccentricity, next to the new yellow color, invaluable to dark beauties and fatal to fair ones, is American beef. Dinners are arranged for the purpose of tasting it; luncheons are improvised in order to ex-patiate on its merits. Deities of kitchens are appeased by presents, to sacrifice the claims of the family butcher, and housewives undertake omnibus journeys to the ice cold stores in Cannon street, valiantly bringing home sirloins in baskets, to the horror of conductors and the annoyance of fellow-passengers."

SCHLIEHMANN is again in trouble. Prof. HELBIG, at the meeting of the Corresponding Institute of Archaeology in Rome, examined the discoveries in the Acropolis of Mycenae, and pronounced them untenable.

PILGRIMAGES are the order of the day. French and Irish Canadians are getting ready to go to visit the Pope, and the famous Cook is about to start with a party of Sunday-school teachers and others on a two months' "Biblical education tour" to the Holy Land.

It is rumored as being not improbable that the Prince of Wales will send his sons to the Britannia for a course of training, rather than to a public school. The elder one will ultimately enter the army, but the younger is likely to remain in the navy.

During the past few weeks the New York Herald has been telegraphing the predictions of the bureau with respect to storms in Europe, and they have been verified. Here is a chance for VENDOR.

ESSENCE OF ENGLISH PARLIAMENT.

THE LORDS—THE BEETLE—THE CATTLE PLAGUE—ADJOURNMENT—LEADERS.

In the House of Lords, on the 22nd ult., the Premier was taken to task by Earl Granville and Lord Rosebery with regard to the statement made by him in his speech of Tuesday as to the dates of the atrocities in Bulgaria, and the delay in communicating the facts to the Government.

Lord Beaconsfield admitted he might have been inaccurate as to the precise dates as he spoke from memory, but maintained his general statements and that the inefficiency of the Consular service in the East was due to the abolition by his predecessors of many of the minor consulates.

Some of the noble Lords were anxious to know how the Colorado beetle was progressing, and if there was any likelihood of its visiting England. Lord Carnarvon replied that he was keeping a sharp look out on the movements of that troublesome insect, and had urged the Canadian Government to take precautions not to export any to England along with their potatoes.

Enquiries were also made as to the cattle plague which is exciting some alarm, it being now prevalent in Ireland as well as England.

Stringent regulations have been made prohibiting exportation from all countries where the disease has made its appearance, and it was hoped that the success attending the exportation of fresh meat from America and Canada would tend to the extinction of the trade of live cattle.

In the House of Commons on Thursday last, there was a smart breeze with reference to the adjourned debate on the Eastern question.

Some of the members, who had motions on the papers, declined to postpone them unless the Opposition would formally challenge the action of the Government. This Lord Hartington refused to do, and after a good deal of discussion and cross-firing the adjourned debate on this burning question has been again adjourned sine die.

In the course of the discussion a good deal of amusement was caused by Mr. Mitchell Henry referring to the "Leaders of the Opposition"—the plural of the hon. gentleman called forth loud laughter and cries of "which leader" from the Ministerial benches, and the laughter was redoubled when he said in a bewildered manner that he recognized no less than three "leaders" on his own side of the House.

Mr. Trevelyan's bill to extend the principle of open competition to appointments in the Foreign Office and the diplomatic service, was thrown out on a division by 159 votes against 112.

Other proceedings have been devoid of any special interest. W. H. F.

LONDON, 1st March, 1877.

OUR ILLUSTRATIONS.

The greater part of the descriptive matter connected with our illustrations this week will be found in another column.

EMERSON.—Emerson is situated on the bank of the Red River of the North, in the Province of Manitoba, and from its position is destined to become one of the most important towns in the Province of Manitoba. The International Boundary Line separates it from the State of Minnesota, while immediately on the opposite bank of the river is the Territory of Dakota.

THE WHITE HOUSE.—A view of this historical building is of particular interest at the present time. The edifice is unpretentious and would be almost unimposing but for its Grecian portico, but its chief merit is the association which it suggests with the principal men of the United States.

THE PARIS EXHIBITION.—With their usual artistic taste and instinct of symmetry, the French have already partitioned out the divisions which each nation is to occupy at the approaching International Exhibition, and the buildings devised are in direct accord with the historical architecture of each country.

THE OTTOMAN GRAND COUNCIL.—We are altogether too much disposed, either through ignorance or prejudice, to belittle the Turkish race. The accompanying picture is inserted principally to show our readers what manner of men dispose of the destinies of the Turkish Empire. In physique they will compare with the best races, while their political sagacity is best displayed in the present position of Europe.

NEWSPAPER CORRESPONDENTS AT CONSTANTINOPLE.—M. Galleggi is the special correspondent of the London Times. He is an Italian by birth and took part in the events of 1848. He is a writer of recognized authority. Mr. George Augustus Sala is the special correspondent of the London Telegraph. He needs no introduction to our readers. As a mere newspaper man he may fairly claim to have no superior anywhere. Mr. Campbell Clarke is the regular correspondent of the London Telegraph at Paris. He was sent on a special mission to Constantinople during the sittings of the Conference. He is well known in the literary and artistic circles of Paris.

ARTISTIC.

It is stated that Mr. Britton Riviere, besides his rendering of the legend of St. Patrick returning home with a young fawn in his arms, will contribute to the next exhibition of the Royal Academy a picture the subject of which is the Scriptural story of Lazarus and the dogs.

A NEW Trojan horse has been found at Corca, near Verona, in the armory of Count Ludovico de Medici. This enormous wooden steed was said to be a jointer. When cutting it to pieces the latter found in its stomach a treasure of gold, silver, and jewels representing a value of 200,000 lire.

AMONG the buildings recently exhibited at Pompeii is a drinking saloon, with its tables and other appurtenances. The pictures frescoed upon the walls represent tavern scenes. Men are drinking and gambling at tables; others are seated upon wooden benches against the walls, and others are standing in conversation.

M. D'AMORE, the sculptor, has just completed a bust of Miss Clara Morris, which is of superlative excellence. It will soon be placed on exhibition in the studio of M. Sarony, the celebrated photographer. It is really a noble work of art, and we trust will be reproduced for the benefit of the public. The face is admirably executed, and the expression is beautifully rendered. The "American Rachel" appears to singular advantage in this artistic work, which shows improvement even on the young artist's fine Columbus, so much admired at the Centennial Exhibition.

It is proposed to erect a statue to Arago in Paris. The wonder is that the great astronomer and non-resistance Republican has never yet been so glorified. He was so respected by the Second Empire that Napoleon III. exempted him from taking the oath of allegiance—the sole functionary thus exempted. The peculiarity of Arago's lessons lay in his bringing home the truths of astronomy to minds totally unacquainted with mathematics. He was decorated with all the important orders of Europe, yet such was his democratic, and perhaps philosophic, disdain for these distinctions, that he never wore any of them; he said "they were toys only suited for white niggers."

BEFORE THE FOOTLIGHTS.

Want of space prevented us, last week, from noticing the great concert of Messrs. Prume and Lavallée. But it was of such excellence that we must endeavour to do justice to it in the present issue. We have heard Mr. Prume almost as often as he has played in this city, but we believe we can say that he never appeared to greater advantage than last Friday week. Banishing distraction and the strain of the nerves by closing one's eyes is a capital way of enjoying and critically appreciating a musical performance. As tried when Mr. Prume executed the concerto of Max Bruch, the effect was singularly impressive. There was no hall, no gaslight, no man, no fiddle, but only a voice, a wave of modulation which took possession of the whole being. The sounds of the accompanying instruments were discerned indeed, but only faintly and indirectly—not distinct from, but blended with and lifting the part of the violin. The whole revealed the artistic construction of the music by the author, and its perfect interpretation by the virtuoso. At other stages of the evening, M. Prume maintained the standard which he had set for himself at the beginning. M. Lavallée was stimulated to unusual exertion in Weber's concerto (op. 79), and executed its four numbers with magisterial power and precision. He is a most conscientious artist, clearly bent upon satisfying his audience to the utmost. And his efforts were received with enthusiastic applause. Later he gave an example of his versatility by executing a sweet melody from Dupont, the Saltarello of Duprato, and a grand march from Schumann. Madame Prume was in full stroug voice. She delivered the Cavatina "Qui la voce," from I Puritani, with intelligent shadings. In the second part, she introduced a novelty to us in the "Chanson du Mysoli," from Felicien David's Perle du Brésil. Mr. H. Lamothe is not precisely a natural tenor, but he manages his voice with skill, and his clear phrasing indicates the excellence of Madame Petitpas' schooling. Mr. J. Hone, violin, Mr. C. Reichling, alto, Mr. A. Wills, cello, and Mr. G. Leclere, double bass, contributed much to the entertainment of the evening. This concert gave us a foretaste of the pleasure in store for us when Gounod's Jeanne d'Arc, now rehearsing under the direction of Messrs. Prume and Lavallée, will be presented at the Academy of Music in May. With such leaders at the head of a grand orchestra and full choruses, we shall doubtless have a noble rendering of a noble work. And we have no doubt that Madame Prume will do full justice to the romantic figure of the great warrior-maid.

OLD CLO.—It is reported that a dealer in second-hand clothes living in the Quartier Latin in Paris has hit upon a somewhat ingenious idea for disposing of the garments which are too old-fashioned or two dilapidated to fetch anything like a good price. Attached to the various articles hanging outside his shop are modestly written cards containing announcements like the following:—"Pair of trousers worn by M. Guizot on his arrival in Paris"—"Overcoat belonging to M. Littré before he became celebrated"—"Dressing-gown formerly belonging to Alexandre Dumas"—"Vest worn by M. Thiers when President of the Republic." It is perhaps needless to state that these interesting relics are rapidly bought and proudly worn by the economical students, notwithstanding the scepticism of some of the purchasers. "Would you have me believe," said a young artist one day, as he inspected a velveteen coat, "that this belonged to Victor Hugo? Plainly it is too small for him."—"Do you think," replied the unabashed dealer, "that Victor Hugo would ever have sold so good a coat if he could have worn it with any degree of comfort?" And the bargain was struck.
