MAY BE MORE DELAY

Reported that Some of the Jurors May be Excused from Duty on Monday--Jerome Preparing State's Case with Great Thoroughness.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2--Reports that some of the jurors selected for the trial of Harry K. Thaw would be excused from duty when the court resumed its session in the case Monday morning, were in circulation again today.

It was rumored that the health of one of the men chosen is so precarious that District Attorney Jerome hesitates to proceed with the case through apprehension that the close confinement of the jury will result in his illness and cause a mistrial.

CHAPTER XI.
Mrs. Grey did not see the Manor House again before her departure for London on the Tuesday following Molly's visit to her. But on more than one side she heard expressions of enthusiastic admiration for the young lady who had come into Mr. Haines' fortune. The vicar, Mr. Swaine, spoke warmly of Molly's generosity, and of her wish to do all that was wise and possible for the well-being of the villagers.

For many things I wish she could, Mrs. Grey said; and I sometimes find myself even wishing that Mr. Drayton would overcome class prejudice, and discover that his godfather's selection of a wife for him was not so hopelessly absurd as it may appear.

Was it really necessary to come to me, and in this way?"

THURSDAY'S SLUMP IN THE MONTREAL MARKET

(Montreal Witness, Thursday.) The bottom fell completely out of the local market this morning, and great was the fall thereof of many of the prime speculative favorites. There was absolutely no support from any source, but there was a grain of satisfaction to be gathered from the fact that most of the offerings, or liquidations, or whatever it might be called, were of comparatively small amounts, and while they made a pretty substantial appearance of wholesale selling in the aggregate, did not represent anything but the overworking of stocks held by what is usually called the "small fry."

slump today was by far the biggest seen in any one session during the month. The wiping out of a number of marginal accounts was given as the chief reason, and brokers stated emphatically that the banks were largely to blame for it, because they had made no effort to relieve the old wooden tower, impel me to write you what the board of commissioners of that day did and how they then had charge of the affairs of New Brunswick contemplated doing when they created that wall.

The board of commissioners, John Ward, Isaac Woodward, Robert Crookshank and Captain Charles Hare, R. N. R. visited the site on Monday, and the erection of the wall. They stated to a number of visitors from Three Islands and my brother, the keeper of the Gannet, with their own eyes that the building should be fire-proof. This was to have been done as soon as the lantern and lighting apparatus, which were getting old and worn out, had been replaced.

(Herald, Thursday.) The local market today experienced the worst lull in many months. The month of January has been an unfavorable one for the market, but the

OLYMPIC TIMES ON THE GANNET ROCK

An Interesting Letter to John Kelley from the Late W. B. McLaughlin, Telling of the Building of Gannet Rock Light House--The Jolly Boys of the Days Gone By.

W. B. McLaughlin was appointed keeper of the South West Head Light in 1880 and retired about two years ago after almost 25 years of service. His letter was an outgrowth of the following paragraph published in a St. John paper.

The department of marine expects to expend about $100,000 this year in the improvement of lighthouses, providing new lights and signals, and in other ways securing aids to navigation. Some of this money will be spent in the Bay of Fundy district. Among the improvements to be undertaken are the light-house at Gannet Rock.

Dear Mr. Kelley--The above clipping in reference to Gannet Rock, and rumors, about here, that the government will remove the stone tower which now surmounts the old wooden tower, impel me to write you what the board of commissioners of that day did and how they then had charge of the affairs of New Brunswick contemplated doing when they created that wall.

I am now the only person living or foundation for the new tower. The contract was given to the late John Purvis and Robert Barbour of St. John. Purvis was a master builder (carpenter) and Barbour, a master stone cutter and builder. Purvis and Gray built the (new) light house in 1833 for $78,000.

JURY TO TRY HARRY THAW COMPLETED LAST NIGHT

Selection of Last Juror Made at Close of Yesterday's Session-- Court Did Not Meet Today and State Will Open Its Case Monday Morning.

New York, Feb. 1.—The Thaw jury was completed today. The selection of the twelfth juror came as a complete surprise at the end of a long and tedious day--the eighth of the trial--and immediately after this last member of the panel had been sworn in, Justice Fitzgerald ordered an adjournment of court until 10:30 o'clock Monday morning. District Attorney Jerome had been making out the indictment for the removal of one of the men now in the jury box, but who has failed to gain the consent of the defendant's counsel to a change, was still reluctant as the court adjourned today to begin the actual proceedings without a further opportunity to plead with Thaw's attorneys. At his request, therefore, Justice Fitzgerald ordered all talesmen who have not yet been examined to be in court Monday morning ready for jury service in case any are needed. Mr. Jerome then announced that if there should be no change in the situation in the meantime, the state would proceed to place all its direct testimony before the jury at the Monday session. The defense was notified by its attorneys that the jury was to be sworn on Monday afternoon.

SERIOUS CONDITIONS

The Times quotes on another page that portion of the Daily Telegraph's special New York letter which treats of financial and industrial conditions in the United States, and of President Roosevelt's annual speech at the Gridiron Club banquet. It shows, as did the article in yesterday's Times touching the railroad situation, that the elements of an upheaval in the financial and industrial world are manifesting themselves, and must be looked to by thoughtful men who have the power to alter and amend conditions. The revelations of the past year or so in high financial circles have brought into being influences and factors that are producing a new set of conditions. Between the extremes of monied oligarchy and unbridled socialism stands President Roosevelt, as the mouthpiece of a sane conservatism. Can he and those who see, as he sees, the danger, being in order out of the partial chaos of this period of industrial uncertainty and agitation? He tells the heads of the great corporations that they must mend their ways or face the anger of a people deprived of rights and disposed to wreak vengeance. Naturally Wall Street is angry at the president, since his words have a depressing effect upon stocks, and tend to stimulate into greater activity the enemies of capital. Apparently the president has grown somewhat tired of the conditions under which the treasury has to come to the rescue of Wall Street, while the big financiers go on manipulating the market for their own purposes. Perhaps a period of panic is necessary to bring about healthier conditions, but in the process many fortunes would melt away and many hopes would be destroyed.

PROFIT-SHARING

The Toronto News gives an interesting review of an English profit-sharing scheme which has proved a great success, both for the company and its employees. We quote: "Among the English companies the South Metropolitan Gas Company fairly illustrates the workings of the profit-sharing system. The Co-Partnership instituted by the South Metropolitan Gas Company is now some seventeen years old. The seventeenth distribution was in July last, and the amount divided was £43,962. According to the rules, one-half of this must go into stock and the other half is withdrawable. The employees, or co-partners, as they are called, preferred, however, to invest almost all of the funds in stock and actually so applied £41,663 of the £43,962. The stock yields 4 1/2 per cent., and the employees evidently prefer this to a cash account drawing 3 per cent. Officers and employees participating in this profit-sharing system began in 1890, after several years of some time spent in organizing the scheme. That is, after some time spent in organizing the scheme with the idea, and discussing with them the best means of carrying it into practice, the first distribution was £6,863. The scheme had and still has occasional fluctuations, arising from a variety of causes, just as the business of an industrial company fluctuates. But the growth of the co-partnership scheme may be gathered from the following:

PROHIBITION IN MAINE

An illustration of the difficulties met with in the enforcement of prohibition in a community where public sentiment is not strongly for enforcement is given in the report of the Sturgis commission in Maine. That state has had prohibition for many years, and yet so lax was the enforcement of the law that two years ago a special commission was appointed to endeavor to do what the regular officers of the law should do, but had failed to do. This commission has just reported to the legislature on its two years' work. It admits that there is still much liquor sold, and gives very good reasons for the fact, in the following paragraph: "The commission believes that the deputies did their duty faithfully and well and rendered services under conditions that times disagreeable. To them it is due what has been accomplished in the attempt of the commission to procure better enforcement of law. The commission avers that it suffered abuse, and was being opposed directly by liquor sellers and indirectly by others in ways which cannot be pinned down and labelled but are oftentimes effective; they found hostile grand juries and trial juries; they have worked both day and night when necessary and in all kinds of weather; and yet they were only seeking to enforce those laws which the people have enacted." From this commission it is very clear

THE KINDLY WORD If you have a word of cheer That may light the pathway clear Of a brother plighted here, Let him know. Show him you appreciate That would brighter make his lot. Then, I beg you, hide it not; Tilt the heavy hand of fate Lays him low. If your heart contains a thought But the love that heeds his lot. Then, I beg you, hide it not; Tilt the heavy hand of fate Lays him low. Life is hard enough at best. But the love that heeds his lot. Makes it seem a pathway blent. To our rest. And the troubles that we share. When the center is lost. Smile upon your neighbor's care As you greet. Rough and stony are the ways. Dark and dreary are our days. But another's love and praise. Is a thing that makes us glad. Wait not till your friend is dead. Ere your compliments are said. For the spirit that has fled. If it know. Does not need to speed it on. That poor praise is very dear. Love's eternal golden dawn. Is glad. But unto our brothers here. If you're any word of cheer, Call him so.

THE CLIMATIC EFFECT. An Englishman resident in Persia fell into a discussion with a neighbor there, says Napier Malcolm in his book on Persia, over the native tendency to lying. "It is all very well for a Perangi (an Englishman) to say that," replied the Persian. "But the fact is they cannot tell lies as we can. It is entirely a matter of climate." "In that case Persians ought to speak the truth," said the Englishman. "One of the ancient Greek historians declared that Persians were remarkable for their truth telling." "That is very true," said the native. "But who does not know that the climate of a country changes entirely in 2,000 years."

TO ASSIST THE IMMIGRANTS New Branch of Methodist Home Mission Work Has Been Helpful. A new and very helpful branch of Methodist Home Mission work is the care of immigrants of that denomination by the local clergy, who make it their business to meet those arriving at this port and render them any assistance that lies in their power. By an arrangement with the Methodist ministers in England, Ireland and Scotland, the names of their church members about to sail for Canada via St. John is sent to the local committee, who have in their possession a complete list of the Methodist ministers in the principal towns and cities of upper Canada and the west. As already stated the members of the local committee board the steamers on their arrival here, look up their people and on their learning where they intend to settle, place in their hands letters of introduction to their clergymen at their point of destination. In this way, Methodist immigrants are kept under the guidance of their church people, practically from the time they leave their old homes in the Canadian west. The scheme has thus far worked admirably, and, judging from present indications, will meet with even greater success in the future. There are chaplains in all the upper Canadian cities to look after this work.

A STRAIGHT TALK FROM PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT TO THE TRUST MAGNATES

He Tells Them to Their Face That For Them Reform is the Only Alternative to Annihilation—Sensational Speech at Gridiron Club Banquet.

New York, Feb. 1.—It does not take a deep student of affairs to realize that this too-quickly grown and somewhat raw big nation is shaking in the pangs of great financial and industrial changes. One does not have to accept the view that a tremendous crash is coming to appreciate the serious importance of the situation. That the president of the United States, in the presence of some hundreds of prominent officials and an unusually large representation of financiers, to their faces, that they must accept reforms or be prepared for the deluge, is but an incident, an illustration of the real situation.

That Jacob Schiff talks optimistically to the bankers of Paris is of no significance except a desire of Mr. Schiff to reassure himself and incidentally the French financiers, upon whom he unloaded large quantities of American securities last year. Mr. Schiff continued his argument to the question of money, but the present impending troubles are of much deeper import. They affect the entire industrial organization of the country.

When financiers of high standing and long experience talk as they do privately, of the fear of impending panic, they are not altogether swayed by inbred hostility to governmental methods or regulation of big corporations. They believe, and believe sincerely that the great impediment Theodore Roosevelt has given to the wheels of the government is to be removed before it works cure. They believe that the whole question has got away from Roosevelt, and that the administration will remove the barrier.

One of them said recently: "I firmly believe that we are in for a period of great depression, if not absolute crash and panic. I don't mean by this simply a decrease in the value of stocks, a mere Wall Street scare, I mean a national calamity. We have had a period of prosperity unexampled in the world's history. Conditions have shaped themselves so that there must be changes and great changes in our financial and industrial organization. The president has recognized this, and tried to deal with it. All I hope is that he won't be in the position of Samson, who pulled down the pillars of the temple. For example, the policy of twisting the railroad's tail has revealed so strongly that the value is being rapidly taken away from these hundreds of millions of dollars of securities. It is all very well to speak of a 'Wall Street flurry', but it must be remembered that Wall Street is the heart of the financial system of the nation, and if the credit of the banks is attacked, as is likely to follow, the disastrous results will be spread over the entire United States."

A most graphic and sensational illustration of the signs of the times occurred a week ago tonight. There has been some reference to it in a few of the American papers, but owing to the peculiar circumstances surrounding it, the matter has not been lightly touched upon. It occurred at the annual dinner of the Gridiron Club in Washington.

The Gridiron Club is a close organization of newspaper correspondents. Once a year it gives a dinner and the guests are invariably culled from the most distinguished men of the country. It is an invitation only, and the correspondents go, with full instructions. Send no money but write her today if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child, the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urticaria difficulties by day or night.

BETTER THAN SPANKING

Spanking does not cure children of bed-wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, Box W. 71, Windsor, Ont., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money but write her today if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child, the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urticaria difficulties by day or night.

(Toronto News.)
The public clamors for details. Is it the fault of the newspaper that the public gets what it wants? Not altogether—we must create a healthy public sentiment. When majorities repress protest, details of crime will no longer be printed. However, we must remember also the deterrent effect of the punishment which follows crime. The nauseating details only should be suppressed.

LABOR TROUBLES.
Ninth Cause.—Trouble between capital and labor. This often incites to crime men who in normal circumstances are respectable wage-earners.
The Cure.—Recognition of the brotherhood of man. Profit-sharing or some equivalent. Arbitration by which the employer can gain the co-operation of the employed in saving, and in making his firm popular. New means to have them whether they should be studied. Have women and children kept out of factories. The employment of women breaks up the home, the children run wild and become criminals. Abolish orphan asylums as New Zealand has done, and board occupants with decent working-people.

ONE-SIDED EDUCATION.
Tenth Cause.—One-sided education. Civilization advances and crime increases. Why? One strong reason is the one-sided education which the children receive in public schools, in colleges, too much intellectual, not enough heart-eduction is given.
The Cure.—Choose teachers far youth with exceeding care. Have kind, sympathetic and reasonable direction of passions. We can make the next generation—let us have a warm-hearted one, and then shall we see the decrease of crime.

IRREVERENCE.
Eleventh Cause.—Irreverence.—Flippant attitude towards the laws. There is little respect or reverence for anyone or anything.
The Cure.—Teach the young to treat with respect, to honor rules and obey the laws, to have some hope of a future life and thereby avoid falling into the pit of gross selfishness and materialism.

THE WAR SPIRIT.
Twelfth Cause.—Expensive and bloody wars and the encouragement of the state to spending-up in the hearts of millions.
The Cure.—Show that the dream of military glory is a nightmare. Express the fallacy that wars are necessary to decrease the population. Stop military drill among children which encourages the war spirit.

JUSTICE LOST IN TECHNICALITIES.
Thirteenth Cause.—Misguided lawyers and judges. Criminal law is going wrong in administration. Lawyers and judges groping their way through a fog of technicalities lose sight of the end that justice should be done though the heavens fall in the process.
The Cure.—Let the public take more interest in the judiciary. Elect only such men as have a simple eye for justice, and encourage them to have better control over crime.

NEGLECT OF CHILDREN.
Fourteenth Cause.—Neglect of children. This is the most fertile of the sources of crime. A gardener until the young are financial and social success in America. Ten thousand boys work in the coal breakers. Seven thousand five hundred children labor in glass works. Twenty thousand work in southern cotton mills. Little girls eight years old work through a twelve-hour night. These victims of industrial slavery help swell the tide of crime. We hear about men's rights and women's rights—what about the rights of the child who cannot play ball nor have games of any kind without breaking municipal law. The shop-keeper beats him, the policeman urges him on, and the unhappy child slides into foolish and vicious idling. Forced by circumstances he becomes semi-topper, six days' hard labor, for some offense in the traffic of the day is over.
The Cure.—Take children out of the factories. Reform the criminal before he is made. For the child's sake have tenements improved. Send him to school. After school have schoolhouses and yards kept open, or have recreation grounds provided where the whole families can go. The school house was built for the child—the yard is his proper playground. The child of the street is wretched—keep the child away from it. Fit up his playground with swings, teeter, and boxes, games of all kinds. Keep him occupied. Idleness leads to crime. Have good supervision. Don't allow the child to cheat, lie, smoke, steal nor swear. You will thus discipline him in his play, and by and by he will make an honest citizen. Let the play provide meals when necessary. All money spent on the child will be saved in workhouses and prisons. The child of the street in a large city, says that since supervised playgrounds were introduced the number of juvenile arrests has fallen off. Save the child, for in the child is the hope of the nation.

THE SUAM.
Third Cause.—Public indifference to the manner in which money is obtained.
The Cure.—Educate the public conscience. Don't be afraid of the muckrake. The heart of the nation is sound. Some of us have special temptations. Baby striking his nurse, because she will not give him the pretty moon shining in the nursery and money. The spoiled child of the very window, is an incipient criminal. Baby's respectable father clamoring revengefully with millions of his fellow-countrymen for an assassin murderer and one of our rulers is another criminal. Baby's mother signing for luxuries is criminally inclined. Teach the public that the man to honor is the honest man. There are such men—enough to make the nation over.

HEEDLESS.
Fifth Cause.—Alcoholic parents, malformations at birth, and defective intelligence. It is difficult to rear an exalted citizen as a creature as a baby in favorable circumstances. Imagine the horrors encompassing an infant of the lowest class.
The Cure.—Let the states maintain farms and inebriate colonies well-policed in country districts. For confirmed toppers, honorable detention with farm labor, sentence to be suspended if man will promise not to drink for a year.

LACK OF PARENTAL CONTROL.
Sixth Cause.—Lack of parental control. The Puritans made their children mind their own business. The rich are not all bad, nor yet are the poor, but many a poor man's child runs wild, scorns law and order. The spoiled child of the rich looks shrewdly from his books and his tutors, and studies the book of life as held open to him by his father. He needs in play, a frightful egotism, and a contempt for law that the possession of great wealth often engenders.
The Cure.—Govern your children. What about the good old rod? Is it not softer than a policeman's club? But you won't need a rod if you have a determined gift with the tinsel morality of humanity only strong enough to crawl and not to stand upright. You master him while he is about your knees, and you won't have any trouble when he overtops you.

VANITY.
Seventh Cause.—Vanity and love of notoriety. We all want to shine—criminals and non-criminals. In confirmed criminals a curious vanity and pride in misdeeds prevails. The man committing high crimes is an aristocrat. The petty thief is a nobody.
The Cure.—To change distorted views of life in adults is a Herculean task, yet one must try. Sentences should be indeterminate, and every prisoner should be a reformatory. Prison officials should be carefully chosen, and the prisoner should be kept in them. Gifts and calls from well-meaning but misguided visitors only add fuel to the flame of the criminal's love for notoriety. Let them get the address of the criminal's wife and children. Give them fruit, flowers and sympathy. If the criminal does not reform he should be kept imprisoned; if he does, he should on leaving prison be handed over to the class of men most likely to influence him—parole officers.

PUBLISHED DETAILS OF CRIME.
The Cure.—When a crime is committed

A Hair Dressing

If you wish a high-class hair dressing, we are sure Ayer's Hair Vigor, new improved formula, will greatly please you. It keeps the hair soft and smooth, makes it look rich and luxuriant, prevents splitting at the ends. And it keeps the scalp clean and free from dandruff. Stops falling hair, also, does not stain or change the color of the hair.

Hallifax, N. S., Feb. 1.—The funeral of Reuben E. Hart, who with G. Wilberforce Hart, of Canoe, are the executors, will be held at 3 o'clock Sunday of 97 Sydney street.

Mrs. Annie E. Collins
Mrs. Annie E. Collins died yesterday in the Mater Misericordiae Home, 97 Sydney street, after a lengthy illness. Many friends will read the news with regret. Mrs. Collins for years conducted a private hotel in St. John. She was 70 years old and the widow of Daniel Collins, who died 25 years ago. Three sons survive—Daniel B., in this city; T. John, in business in Everett (Mass.), and Fred, in business in Denver. The funeral will be at 2:30 o'clock Sunday from 97 Sydney street.

George H. Wood
George H. Wood, a former resident of West Cape (P. E. I.), died in Grand Maries (Mich.) on Jan. 29, aged fifty-eight years and eight months. Mr. Wood leaves, besides his wife, six children, one brother in northern Michigan, three brothers and one sister in Boston, and two brothers and two sisters at West Cape, which place he left thirty years ago.

At a meeting of the slaughter house commissioners yesterday the following returns of killing for the past month were handed in: John McCarty, 290 cattle, 100 sheep, eight calves; Kane & McGrath, 185 cattle, sixty-five sheep, eight calves; M. J. Collins, ten cattle, eight sheep and five calves.

Caracas, Venezuela, Jan. 28.—General Luis Mata-y-illas, the governor of Caracas, was assassinated last night by a crowd of intoxicated partisans of Vincente Gomez, the first Vice-president of the republic.

THE BLOUSE AND BERTHA STYLE

WHEN THE FROCKS REACH THE SHOULDER

Smartly simple effects for the Younger Generation — Fine Materials Developed Upon Simple Lines—Long Waisted Blouses and Short Waisted Bertas Effects—The Girl of Fourteen and Her Dancing School Toilette.

How to keep the small girl's party possessions down to the extreme of simplicity demanded by good taste and still express the required degree of dressiness and formality in the juvenile toilette is the task that many mothers and still more dressmakers find confronting them.

It is a recognized fact that the American juvenile is far and away the best-dressed youngster in the world. The Englishwoman even of title and nobility keeps her nursery brood in unbleached holland for everyday wear and stiff black velvet on with a gayly colored sash for festive occasions. Anything less festive than black velvet upon a dainty little tot can hardly be imagined, but such is the custom established and observed from one generation to another.

The Parisienne, on the other hand, errs to the extreme of dressiness, and the result is that the small French girl is merely an absurd replica of her mother's taste in grown-up gowns. Silks, satins, gauzes and everything that is displayed upon fashionable counters are employed for the small girl's party appearances; and the result is anything but pleasing to those who advocate a wholesome but dainty simplicity in the wardrobe of the coming belle. Of course, her manners are as artificial as her frock, and there is little of the delightful unconsciousness of childhood about her, but rather the self-consciousness of her clothes, her walk and the impression that her fine garments are making on everybody.

Delightfully different is the method employed by the best society in our own land. Mothers who hold prominent positions begin to train their small daughters to social life and occasions when they are still wee tots. They have their little tea parties, their birthday frocks, their dancing classes and their duties both as hostess and guest on those festive occasions are drilled into them early in life. Consequently when they are grown up and presented formally to society there is but little left for them to learn; they have absorbed it all unconsciously in the years that they have been growing up.

Several specialists in children's clothing have established themselves profitably in New York; and of these this scribe chiefted her the other day to find out what it is that the millionaire mothers of society order for their children.

"Nothing that will not wash, please," was the request of one mother whose wee laughter will one day inherit millions.

"And won't you kindly allow my little daughter to pick out a dozen frocks for herself from those models that you have already made up?" she continued. "She is six years old now, and I think it is time she began to take some interest in her clothes. You know, you can form their tastes so quickly when they are allowed their own choice."

The little tot at once announced that she wanted a red frock for every day and a blue one for church, and that she wanted a hairy cap just like Charlie's—Charlie was their chauffeur, the mother explained—and big hairy gloves. With a smile the mother turned to the dressmaker and asked to be shown some embroideries for the little one's better frocks, some good laces and piques for her little Russian blouse frocks that would be the everyday attire, and a pretty coat or two for carriage use in the afternoons. It was the effort to form little Miladi's tastes had failed.

But none the less it is important that their clothes should be chosen carefully. Children are extremely sensitive on the subject of their clothing, and their small vanity and pride in their appearance can be turned to good account in teaching them the care of the selection of their own garments.

The so-called lingerie frock is what the best makers advocate for party appearances. It may be as simple or as elaborate as the style of child—and incidentally, the mother's purse—stand. Some exquisitely hand embroidered examples from France are displayed, wherein every stitch is almost a work of art, and which deserves to be handed down, with the family laces and jewelry to generations yet unborn.

But no matter what the style chosen may be, they one and all have a slightly low neck, a short sleeve and a sash and ribbon trimmings to correspond with the ribbon that ties up their curly locks. Sashes are really unobtrusive this season, the wider widths being but rarely worn, and preference is accorded to the six or

A Dainty Party Frock

For the little girl's party frocks the best makers are displaying delightfully fine and sheer laces and cotton goods. That they are all of the washable variety goes without saying, for in the modern nursery anything that cannot be cleaned by soap and water is not acceptable. The charming little frock that is pictured herewith is in a fine Irish handkerchief linen, although a good India linen or a fine Persian lawn would develop it fully as well. The long-waisted French blouse style is adhered to, bringing the waist-line down to somewhere in the region of the hips, and a centre of twisted satin ribbon conceals the seam where the full skirt is set on. Bandings and frillings of convent embroidery are used with excellent results. The neck is cut down slightly in a square opening, the short sleeve has its full barely covering the elbow, and the fastening is effected invisibly in the centre back.

NECKLACES AND BRACELETS are so many and so numerous in both material and design that to enumerate even a tiny fraction of the many seen were a vain task. Corals seem to have been lifted from the realm of semiprecious stones into the highly precious class. One sees them set with diamonds about as often as not; and big "buttons" discs of coral are set around in a frame of diamonds to form a collar or a bracelet. Beads of cut agate, malachite, chrysoprase, turquoise or opal matrix, chalcidony and beryl are in high favor, while as for coral, one sees it in beads from the size of a pinhead up to that of a good-sized marble and mounted in innumerable ways.

THEIR LITHOGRAPHS.

Write—You can just bet that the theatrical people are not opposed to billboards.

Winks—No, they are stuck on them. When rejected.

Because it is full of wrinkles. When is a man most puffed?

THE BLOUSE AND BERTHA STYLE.

Those demitances lengths of embroidery will make up charming little frocks for the wee denizens of the nursery, and the fact that the best shops carry plain materials that match the embroideries exactly as to texture makes the task of the seamstress much easier. Never was there a mother yet who did not prefer the frilly and fluffy style of party frock for her small daughter, and the illustration will afford a practical suggestion for the making of one of the most effective of these. There is a shaped lining beneath, and on this the little bodice is bloused all around, the waistline occurring at the natural point. The skirt is shirred on in full folds, the fullness being distributed about equally all around. The full flounce that makes the bertha has a pleated Valenciennes lace whipped to the lower edge, adding much to the dressy effect, while the short, puffed sleeve is of the plain nainsook, with just a lace whipped on the lower edge, for the deep and full bertha entirely covers the sleeve.

FOR THE AFTERNOON DRIVE WITH MOTHER.

It is quite the accepted thing that the little folks are included in the afternoon drive through the park or along the boulevards, especially when no calls are to be made, and one is only to take the air, to use the old-fashioned phrase. For this the dressiest possessions of the wardrobe are donned. The large cheapest is in a fancy white silk braid, with fluffy ostrich plumes draped artistically over the left side, a shallow bandeau in front holding the shape off the face. The smart little coat is in an almost green color, the Queen of England's favorite material—upon which shirrings of Valenciennes lace headed with tiny black velvet bobes ribbon makes a charming impression. The coat is pleated to a shallow shoulde-yoke, this entirely concealed by the shirred cape effect, while the sleeve follows the modish motif of top puff and deep cuff, the latter reaching almost to the elbow.

WHEN HER FROCKS REACH THE SHOETOPS.

The girl who, while technically yet in the nursery, is nevertheless sufficiently grown to wear her frocks to about the elbowtop, offers one of the most puzzling problems that the dressmaker has to deal with. To keep her clothes simple and yet avoid the effect of childishness is what is desired. For this there is nothing more fetching than are the cotton nets that are in such vogue just now, and some Valenciennes lace for trimming will bring them up to the requisite degree of formality. A charming design is given herewith, in which an inexpensive cotton net is combined with a Valenciennes lace of marquerite design. The bodice is made with a transparent yoke, and waist and skirt are joined at the waistline by shirrings and entre deux, giving the effect of a princess robe. Deep tucks make for some weight and stability in the skirt and add much to its charm.

A COMMENDABLE SIMPLICITY INTEREST CENTRES IN TRIMMINGS

Bold Designs and Intricate Patterns—Braids and Ribbons in termingle—Spangles for Daytime Wear—Embroidered Chiffon and Cloth.

The trimming counter holds the center of interest just now, both for the woman who is fastidious about gowns and the dressmaker's shopping girl alike.

And, incidentally, it is oftentimes to the taste and selection of this same little shopping girl or shopper, as they are termed professionally, that the success of many a gown is due. In numberless establishments when her errands are given out for the day she is told that Mrs. Millions is having a rose-pink chiffon, Miss Millions, a pale blue. Mrs. Lester a pale-yellow brocade and Madame Elite a gray chiffon velvet; to bring back samples of each and trimmings for each, and to waste no time about it, either.

The saleswoman—pardon, saleslady—all know her and the class of goods that she is likely to purchase, and immediately the boxes of late arrivals in stock are opened and little Miss Shopper loses not a moment. Her eagle eye has scanned the possibilities of each card ere it is unrolled, and she has left the shop she has decided just how she would have the gown trimmed if it was ordered for her. And not once in 20 times is her taste at fault.

The fascinating trimmings that are imported from France are positively ravishing in their charm this season, and the way that everything is to be trimmed this year is enough to give the women of moderate means a chill. Not only must the gown be of perfect cut, since it is intended to define the figure more than has been the mode for the past five years, but the trimming scheme must be lavish in its scope and application if there is to be any ludo of success attaching to it at all. Heavily unadorned, when gowns are corrected, will most assuredly not out an figure at all in the fashions that are current and to come.

While the smart tailor who scans an order under a hundred-dollar bill can and does have all of the braiding done by hand right on the gown, the woman who has a visiting tailor to turn out her morning and walking frocks will be glad to find braids and passementeries all ready to apply, and in all of the modish designs that the artist braider is using, too. All sorts of set and intricate patterns are on the counter, anywhere from an inch to a half-yard in depth. Three widths and kinds of braid, at least, are necessary to the development of the average width, say some five inches, while as for the deeper ones, it is no uncommon thing to have as many as half a dozen different kind of braid, some velvet ribbon and a discreet use of hangles as well.

The buyer for a big department shop was just back the other day from a trip to the foreign markets, and she discoursed volubly and amiably on her business with the scribe.

"Oh, yes," she exclaimed, "spangles are all the go on the Continent wherever the new trimmings are concerned. We are just coming to an era of the modish elaborate trimmings that the dressmaker has known for a long time. You know that for some little time there has not been much trimming used on frocks—that is the applied trimmings, I mean. It was all hand-run tucks and a modicum of hand embroideries. Occasionally there would be a little ruffled ribbon laid on, or perhaps a few rows of velvet ribbon plain and flat, but that has been about the utmost decoration attempted.

"Now, however, in the new scheme of things there are to be trimmings and trimmings galore, and they are all going to be of the kind that can be applied by hand, and even by a clever apprentice."

"Is this going to make the price of a pretty frock any less when the dressmaker can no longer flash at one the immense amount of handwork she has put on, and wait while it costs her to have it done?" queried the scribe, hopefully.

"Well, I hardly guess that it will," smiled back the buyer. "The dressmaker, as you see, has achieved a high price for a frock, are not going to lower it any, even though the cost of production is not so much as it has been. You see, it would lower their reputation, they think, if added, with a request to twinkle in her eye, 'did you ever know anybody rejecting a little extra profit when they can make it just as well as not?'"

"Now, take the new coat sets, for example. They are all the rage abroad, and do you know that I have not seen one yet here since I came back. But once they are launched here they will go with a rush. The sets consist of a very fanciful sort of corset and tassets that go, hussar fashion, across the front of a fitted tail-made from shoulder to shoulder. There are the epaulettes, the dart braidings and the two curved pieces for the back, that are set from shoulder to waistline, or below it. Then there are the cuffs as well, and when those are all applied on velvet to match the color of the cloth—and, by the way, do you know that all of the new broadcloths are quite a little bit heavier—this stunning effect is achieved with very little trouble.

Sometimes there come sashbands and panels to match, and the way that the French people are using gold and silver threads with which to connect the strands of braid is very pretty, indeed. Those show up delightfully on the mohair gowns that make such excellent between-season costumes, and all of the delicate tints are copied in braid, so that a match is readily obtained. However, since some of the best makers are using black braids upon almost everything, and posing them upon colored silk, satin or velvet, according to the character of the gown, the question of color and color match is not so very bewildering, after all."

"But how are we going to trim the frilly and fluffy frocks?" anxiously queried the scribe. "I am going to have a very pretty, pale pink hand-down made up, and any hint as to how to trim it would be, oh, so gratefully received."

"Well, if 'tis for dinner wear you can't do better than have some of the new narrow spangled lace for the bodice, and have the skirt flounces—oh, of course, you don't have flounces on the skirt—trimmed with some of the new ribbon embroideries, having a little of these, too, on the bodice to carry out the theme—do you mind some of the ribbon lattices that come in all sorts of shades and widths, and studied with white cabochons—malachite, you know—and mock jewels. They are wearing all of those abroad on gowns for afternoon and even street wear, and I saw some very smart tailor-mades at Monte Carlo that had sleeves of the same color, but contrasting material, and liberally studded with these same malachite."

"And, if you want to be in the very first flight of fashion, have sleeves of white tulle in your pink frock. No, don't have a sleeve cap of the hand-down over it; that would spoil the effect. A little tucker of white tulle, too, will be in the picture, and if you want to use it for daylight wear just have a little guimpe of yellowish all-over lace and undergarment of the same. Then you'll have a frock that will spill Paris by its looks, even though your dressmaker may never have been nearer Europe than the steamship dock."

Fads and Fashions in Footwear

With the increased vogue of white footwear for all of the little folks the best shoemakers are displaying rubbers that come in white, in place of the usual mineral black. There are quite a few pointers to note in those lace shapes, one of which is the rubber that covers the vamp of the shoe entirely and has a strap continuation in the back. This leaves the heel free and entirely obviates the rubber slipping or slipping in wear, a feature that the old-fashioned shoer, rubber was it would want to display.

Tan shoes with uppers of cloth or suede are being the choice of the smart young girl all winter long, and there isn't a shadow of doubt that they will continue their vogue all through the spring and summer seasons. Here, too, the new rubbers make their mark, for now one orders rubbers, as a matter of course, with a certain amount of street shoes, for the maker—of course, it is understood that we are talking of the made-to-order-only kind—fits the rubbers as carefully as he does the shoe. Every tint and shade of tan and brown can be matched, so that the rubber is practically invisible in wear.

The ready-made rubber often invariably has a well-rounded toe, and on the new lasts that are to be all the mode this spring the toe is extremely pointed. Not that we are to have the toothpick toes that ruled some seasons ago; but compared with the round and blunt toe that has held sway for some time, the new lasts do seem quite pointed indeed.

While the low shoes are getting lower, it seems as though the high shoes were, on the contrary, becoming still higher. One sees smart shapes in both laced and buttoned models in which the upper is of velvet or corduroy, and carried well up the calf of the leg. When the shoe is laced there is a border of leather to take the eyelets, but in the buttoned kind—and there are three models for buttoned boots for one in laced—no hint of leather appears in the upper. Large pearl buttons, of the flat round variety, are used for fastening, and of the accepted type of shoe button one sees but very little among the new models. The new kind are harder both to fasten and to unfasten, but, nevertheless, the fact that they are the newest thing of their kind will force their acceptance on all those who pay any attention at all to appearances and the vagaries of the money bowler.

The eylet tie is on the showcase with an eyletted and openwork vamp, and caught low across the instep with a broad ribbon run through a single large eyelet on either side. Ribbons for the new ties are broader than before, and a fancy clasp is intended to retain the bowline without fuss of its coming open.

Little Flossie's Birthday Party

It was Flossie's birthday and she was full of excitement. Mamma was preparing things for a great party which would be given at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

FIND THE FOE

The soldiers in pursuit do cry, 'The enemy has fled!' But o'er the path they follow The enemy has led.

Queens of England.

By MARY GRAHAM

Marguerite of France, second queen-consort of Edward I. of England, was early embraced by the death of her royal father, Philip le Hardi, King of France.

Marguerite of France.

It is a fact worth mentioning that Marguerite of France is the first queen since the Conquest not to enjoy the honor of a coronation, but the royal exchequer was in such distress from continuous warfare that the cost of such a ceremony was not to be indulged in, however much Edward might have wished it.

The Soldier Bold

Oh, he is very, very bold; Our soldier man, he's bold; He wears a sword sheathed at his side; But the blades of steel hath he been tried.

He loves the din, the drum's beat, beat, And tramp, tramp, tramp of comrades' feet.

'Tis safe for us to think and say Of him, our soldier brave and gay, 'That he will yet a general be And lead his men to victory.'

Bricktop and the Twins Teach "Mean Hank" a Lesson.

By HELENA DAVIS.

Bricktop and the Twins were on their way to school one morning when they saw a sight that incensed them greatly. A great, overgrown fellow, commonly known as "Mean Hank," was snowballing a "second-hand" man, who, with his pack of clothing on his back, was powerless to retaliate in the way of self-protection.

"I don't see it that way," asserted Bettie, her blood boiling with rage as she beheld Mean Hank throw a snowball right in the face of the old-clothes man, who cried out with pain and put one hand over his eyes, as if they were hurt.

"Say, I want no fuss with you," said Bricktop, standing up proudly in front of the bully. "I don't approve of quarrelling and fighting—such conduct is beneath me. But I'll do both when necessary in the defense of an old person or one who is weaker than myself. Only a coward would act as you do. You are most contemptible."

"Well there's three of us," quietly spoke Bettie. "Three small people are as good—or better—than one giant."

Then, so suddenly that Bricktop was quite astonished, the Twins were beside him and his fallen foe throwing handfuls of snow into the latter's face, exclaiming as they did so: "Now, you mean fellow, take some of the medicine you were giving so freely to that poor old man. Take that, and that, and t-h-a-t!"

"Oh, you may need us," laughed Bettie, "so we'll say near. If that fellow Bricktop turned his attention to his own pleading antagonist, saying: 'Promise me you'll never torment nor plague an old person again and never bully boys your unequal in size and strength before I let you up.'"

"I don't think you'll ever dare to ever break King's hold on the bully's shoulders and get on his feet." "Now, clear out, you cowardly scoundrel!"

A little balloon Went up in the sky; Sailing and sailing Ever so high.

Then away through the air The old man did fly; Leaving the moon Alone in the sky.

The moon grew so lonely, She wept and she cried; Her heart broke at last, And then she just died.

Why is a dentist like a man swimming in a river? He is always on the outlook for bugs. When is a man's heart like a cat's stomach? When light.

CANADA NEEDS VOICE IN IMPERIAL AFFAIRS

Prof. F. C. de Sumichrast Speaks at Canadian Club on the Empire Within and Without—Had to be Patience and Forbearance Exercised—Canadians' Opportunity to Build a Nation.

(Toronto Globe, Tuesday.) Two rather notable addresses were delivered in Toronto yesterday by Professor F. C. de Sumichrast of Harvard University before the Canadian Club at the mid-day luncheon and before the Harvard Club at a banquet tendered in his honor at the National Club in the evening.

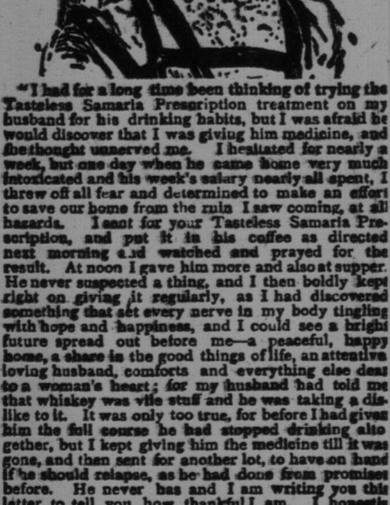

THE COMPLEX IMPERIAL QUESTION In his address before the Canadian Club the professor stated that at the present moment the empire was facing a crisis of the most serious kind. There was a problem to be solved which could not be shirked. No matter what happened, Englishmen had a habit of thinking that they could "muddle through" in some manner.

HER HUSBAND WAS A DRUNKARD

It was years ago that Mrs. Melba's voice first won her the admiration of the world. That she is almost as wise as a philosopher as she is magnificent as a singer is, however, a truth that her admirers have just commenced to discover.

Scalloped Mushrooms very white, throw the pieces sprinkled with lemon juice, into boiling water; allow them to stand two or three minutes, then spread cold water. Dry carefully and mute in hot butter three or four minutes.

THE WAY TO STAND THINGS

By Graham Hood. It was years ago that Mrs. Melba's voice first won her the admiration of the world.

There are lots of things in this life to which we are inclined to look forward with dread. It may be that we see to be compelled to hold an interview with some body who has a just cause of complaint against us, or who has the power to make things very unpleasant for us—justly or unjustly.

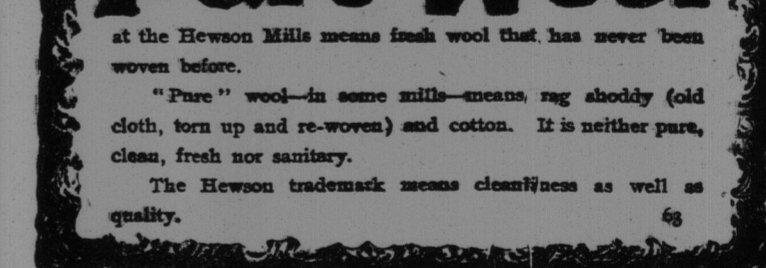

Now, under such conditions, there are just two things that may be done. We must be attended to, or we can feel slow Mrs. Melba's advice and go right out into its own track and confront it.

From all this it may be seen that we really gain nothing by refusing to follow Mrs. Melba's advice. On the other hand, if we do pay heed to it, there is one reward, at least, that is pretty certain to come to us.

Delicious Soups and Tasty Gravies

Are what every lady desires to have served at her table. But unfortunately it often happens that when prepared in the ordinary way they lack nourishment and flavor.

"Bovril" is invaluable A little "Bovril" added to a weak, tasteless soup gives it richness, strength, and a delightfully appetising flavour.

Ten-year-old Gertrude Pawcett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pawcett, 169 St. James street, west end, was badly scalded about the hips and waist yesterday afternoon, having fallen into a pail boiling water. Dr. Koney was summoned and did everything possible to relieve the little sufferer, and when last heard from she was resting fairly comfortably.

Band at races is the Queen's Rollaway programme for tonight. At the races will be held, a one-mile handicap. All the fliers will skate: Alward, Olive, Wilson, Tibson, Nixon, Hunter, Pierce, and others. Monday's papers will contain an article on graceful roller skating, taken from a book written by Prof. Waitt, the world's champion fancy roller skater, and should prove interesting to those who intend competing for the prize at the Queen's Rollaway carnival.

Among the passengers on the steamer Empress of Britain who disembarked at Halifax, was Detective Varney, of the Toronto police force, who had captured an offender in England and was bringing him back for trial. The authorities here had received a letter from the Toronto headquarters asking them to render assistance in transferring the prisoner here and Detective P. Killen boarded the big steamer with this object, but only to find that the Toronto sleuth had left the steamer at Halifax.

Last evening about fifty members of the St. Luke's Y. P. A. held an enjoyable sleigh drive to Grand Bay. The party started with two large sleighs at about eight o'clock, and arriving at Jos. Thompson's residence at half past ten, were charged of the house. The evening was spent in games, etc., and after this supper was served. The tables were looked after by Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. Waters, Mrs. Farmer and others. Much credit is due to these ladies for such a pleasant evening. The president extended to Mrs. Thompson on behalf of the association the hearty thanks of all the members present. The party arrived home about half past four this morning after an enjoyable drive.

A LETTER FROM CHIPMAN

Chipman, Jan. 31st, 1907.

To the Editor, Evening Times:

In your issue of January 24th I notice a rather strange communication among the Chipman notes. Your correspondent uses no names but as far as I know there were no other rhymed-up entertainments around here in Christmas and New Year's week except those given by C. W. Taylor. The inference drawn by me is that it is the concert held in Upper Mills school house on the evening of Dec. 29th, 1906.

Now, as we had been particularly invited by the people of Upper Mills, Salmon River, to give an entertainment, my son went out on the evening in question and gave them a two-hour concert, and judging from the pleased faces and expressions of good will, the audience were well pleased. There was no mention of giving the proceeds to any widow. As I happened to be one of the party at the entertainment I know whereof I speak.

Mr. Fidgeon's long experience and enviable reputation for making thoroughly satisfactory clothes is the best guarantee of the genuineness of his bargains offered.

The periodical happenings at F. A. Dykeman & Co.'s store are of intense interest to the women of St. John, because on every occasion they offer an opportunity for women to make one dollar do the work of two. The wrapper event advertised in today's papers is of more than usual interest.

Macaulay Bros & Co at 10.30 o'clock on Monday morning commence a great corset sale, wonderful bargains will be given in big class corsets in every new make for this season.

The Saint John Business College has very large classes this winter in both business and shorthand departments. These classes are composed mostly of students who have entered since Jan. 1st, the demand for office help being so great that comparatively few of last term students are now in attendance.

The demand for thoroughly trained bookkeepers and stenographers still continues. Many applications are already at hand for the month of entries reaching $20 and $25 per month for places to be filled right at home in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

ANOTHER POSITION

Miss Sadie M. McLaughlin has been selected by the employment bureau of the Currie Business University, Ltd., to fill the position of stenographer for John O'Regan.

$20,000 DUTY

This is a busy season at the St. John customs house. The large firms are now receiving their spring importations and the duty in many cases reaches unusual figures.

One firm alone (Manchester Robertson Allison, Limited), have entered during the last six days more than 600 packages of British and foreign dry goods, which have arrived from abroad by the various lines of winter port steamships.

The amount of duty paid by this firm on this week's arrivals aggregates something more than $20,000.
