Board of Governors' Report on University Federation Submitted to Special Session of Convention in Moncton—Dr. Paterson Presents the Case.

(Canadian Press Correspondence.) Moncton, N. B., April 11.—The board of governors of Acadia University recommended to a special session of the United Baptist Convention in the First Baptist Church here today that "the convention continue to develop Acadia, Wolfville." The report concluded by stating:

"In view of these and other considerations, your board recommends that the convention continue to develop Acadia at Wolfville, and that it authorize the board to take such steps as are consistent with a sound financial policy to enable Acadia to make her future contribution to education even more worthy than that of her past."

Rev. Dr. C. W. Rose, formerly Amherst, president of more than 200 delegates were present.

Dr. Rose in his opening remarks said: "We should reach no decision today but what will be beneficial to the uplift of all our people."

Advocates Independence. The report of the board of governors was read by Dr. Patterson, president of Acadia University. He outlined the proposed plan of federation. He advocated the independence of Acadia because, he contended, federation would mean a decrease in the number of university students, increased costs of education, and an appreciable loss to higher education on account of the loss of the territory contiguous to the place in which the university is located.

The reason for this is obvious. Many will attend a nearby institution to which their attention is called, because of its proximity, or to which they incline because of sentimentality. Not less valid because they are sentimental—who will not seek a university farther afield, when they have entered a college and are enjoying the benefits of higher education, who would never have entered a college had not the financial contribution of their parents to Acadia first quickened their interest in it.

Acadia at Halifax would not be likely to attract many of the students now attracted to Wolfville. Your board is also of the opinion that the participation of Acadia in the scheme of federation would result in an early increase in the cost of education to the individual student, and that this, in turn, would result in a further decrease in the student body.

The amount required for the maintenance of a central university is estimated by the conference at $450,000, which not more than $175,000 would be available from student fees. Assuming a liberal grant from the Provincial Government, the University would still face a considerable annual deficit.

"Adequate endowment, a well planned course, provide for this, but in view of the buildings needed, estimated by the conference to cost at the outset $1,000,000, it is only reasonable to expect that this deficit would continue for many years.

Uniformity of Curricula. "Your board is also of the opinion that the uniformity of curricula implied in the basis of federation will mean an appreciable loss to higher education. It will be noted by a reference to the report of the conference that the one of the colleges shall be free to have a curriculum different from that set by the university for all the colleges. In all work done by the colleges, except in theology, must be in harmony with the standards and in preparation for the examinations of the central university. Such an arrangement sets up one ideal of education, builds a wall around it and excludes other ideals.

"Nor is it merely that a rigid uniformity would result. Your board believes that a university, free from a centralized control, yet doing work of an equal grade, greatly to be desired. Experiments can then be freely made, theories tested and standards set. Moreover, a strong yet friendly competition would mean stimulus to higher standards in a central university.

"The report of the Carnegie Foundation states that Acadia, with its long continuous history, its superior library facilities, the balance in its departments of instruction and its primary extensive and apparently excellent courses in education, is in a somewhat different class from the other outlying institutions. If such a differentiation of type and such a freedom from centralized control on the part of some institution is desirable, it is clear to your board that Acadia, by virtue of its record, its equipment, its standards, and the strength of its student body and its faculty, is well fitted to maintain a distinctive type of work."

Boston, April 11.—In the absence of their own pastor, more than 800 of the congregation of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Belmont, which was strung with radio aerials and amplifiers, listened in on Sunday night to the services at the Park street church of Boston.

After enjoying the organ recital, the members of the church, when they incline because of sentimentality, not less valid because they are sentimental—who will not seek a university farther afield, when they have entered a college and are enjoying the benefits of higher education, who would never have entered a college had not the financial contribution of their parents to Acadia first quickened their interest in it.

COMMISSIONER THORNTON

Commissioner Thornton, by his wife at City Hall yesterday, presented the Civic Power Commission from going on with its work. His vote was cast in opposition to that of his four colleagues, and in defiance of the three times expressed will of the citizens of St. John. He might easily have voted for the bond issue required in connection with the hydro sub-station without committing himself to a civic distribution system, but decided to put himself squarely across the path of progress.

His excuse was of the flimsiest sort. Certain equipment must be provided at the sub-station. A part of it can be used by the New Brunswick Electric Power Commission, which would otherwise be compelled to duplicate a portion of that required by the city. This duplication would be a needless waste of money. Therefore the New Brunswick Commission offered to pay a proportion of the cost of the city's equipment. The proportion was arrived at by the engineers and was approved by both Provincial and City Commissions, should at least assume it had sufficient intelligence to deal with so simple a matter.

Word came from New York yesterday that the Federal Light and Traction Company would be pleased to take over the distribution of the Musquash current on the terms proposed by the self-constituted citizens' committee of five or six—should we say ten? The people will not consent to pay tribute to the Power Company for distributing what they can themselves distribute without the element of profit for a private corporation entering the case at all, and without jeopardizing their interests for all time to come by letting the company regain control of the light and power situation. Any such deal as is proposed would set the seal of civic approval on that capitalization of $5,100,000. Never forget that—what the people have been fighting for these half a dozen years.

Halifax Chronicle:—An error in transmission made it appear that the British Independent Labor Party Conference had defeated a prohibition resolution by a vote of 283 to 182. The vote was 182 to 122, which goes to show that the drink traffic is not so strong as all in the ranks of labor.

The Marriage Game

The Snappiest of Pastimes As Played to a Decision Every Day By Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Hutton

Her Play—It's too bad that Edison or somebody hasn't invented a device to attach to wives so their husbands may be aware of what they are doing every minute of the day. Oh, you needn't grin like that; you are as bad as all other husbands. You seem actually to lose weight when I am away from home for half an hour without your previous knowledge of precisely where I am going and what I am doing.

His Counter-Play—Nonsense! That is just your woman's way of putting a husband on the conditions. She is the best known and justly popular of the feminine arts and sciences. As a matter of fact, no husband cares a boot where his wife goes about—she finds that out later on when the bill comes in. No man cares what his wife does with her spare time just so long as he knows that a lot of foolish expense isn't being piled up for him to pay.

Her Play—How impossible he is today! She wins! (Copyright John F. Dille Co.)

T. DARCY MCGEE FORETOLD

Last Monday was the anniversary of the assassination in Ottawa of Thomas D'Arcy McGee. W. S. Moore has given The Ottawa Journal the following verses which he composed for the Montreal Gazette fifty-three years ago, and in which McGee expressed a strange prophecy of his fate.

In the time of my boyhood I had a strange feeling That we were to die in the noon of my day; Not quietly into the silent grave stealing, But torn, like a blasted oak, sudden away.

That 'e'en in the hour when enjoyment was keenest, My lamp should quench suddenly, hissing in gloom, That 'e'en as my honors were freshest, A bright should rush over and scatter their bloom.

My triumphs I viewed from the least to the brightest, As gay flowers plucked from the garden, when I looked for the skeleton lurking beneath.

O, friend of my heart! if that doom shall fall on me, And you shouldst live on to remember my love, Come and let me toomb where the turf lies upon me, And list to the even-wind mourning above.

Remember how freely the heart that to others Was dark as the tempest-dawn frowning above, Burst open to thine with the seal of a brother's, And showed all its hues in the light of thy love.

"THIS FINE OLD WORLD."

(Ottawa Journal.) The history of mankind stretches back over tens of thousands of years, but we are continually being reminded of the wonders of the world in which we live, or even of the forces which sustain human life. Year by year the surprising story is being unfolded chapter by chapter, and we are just beginning to realize the marvels which have lain concealed so long.

"This fine old world of ours is but a child. Yet the go-cart. Patience! give it time. To learn its limbs; there is a hand that guides." In succeeding years physical science has looked on the world with a new eye, and a new vision of the grandeur of the purpose which lay behind the Creation. The scientist has been blind to the deep significance of his words, that

On one day this week, in the daily press of the world, the story of a romance which surrounds us, and of the hope that lies before us, was published. The story of the year, the Toronto medical man, who, by a discovery of insulin, has brought hope to the millions of diabetics; the second, a cable from Europe, told of a discovery that may cure the dread disease of cancer.

SEES MYSTERY IN CARNARVON'S DEATH La Presse, Montreal, referring to the death of Carnarvon, writes: "Hazard? Perhaps. It is not hazard but to enter in a large measure, the centre of a sand-blast where for the last forty centuries, the winds of fate have been swirling. It is a mystery which has been scrutinized by so many eyes—sands which have been sifted for centuries by the winds of fate."

GRIM MEMORIES OF HALIFAX COMMON (Occasional in Halifax Recorder.) The Common had been the place of execution for soldiers sentenced to death for breaches of military law. Some had been shot there for desertion, and some hanged for mutiny and desertion. Eternally, it has been tended to death for the above crimes, and had been left by the Duke of Kent for his departure, for execution, which was carried into effect under his orders a few days after he left our shores.

"HOME SWEET HOME." The exercises also will mark the centenary of the creation of the John Howard Payne memorial monument in the park.

Young Boswell Interviews Lord Robert Cecil

(New York Tribune.) Because he has outdistanced British champion of the League of Nations, he is the league delegate for the self-governing Dominion of the Union of South Africa; he is the third son of the Earl Marquis of Salisbury; he was educated at Eton and at University College, Oxford; he has been Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, Assistant Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs during the war; he has come to America to popularize the League of Nations.

Lord Robert Cecil confessed that he had nothing new to say to Young Boswell, as they drove up Park avenue, after a public luncheon. He slouched in one corner of the car, in a Lincolnshire guinea, with furrows in his face, deep set gray eyes, which occasionally flashed into intense and a prominent aquiline nose. He wore a flat, black hat and a dark coat. Lord Robert Cecil, who has nothing new to say which I haven't said or shall say while I am here, but I think there are two conceptions of the league which run into one another very much. One is the idea that the league is a bringing together of nations, not by coercion, but peacefully around a table. The only way to settle a strike is to bring the strikers together around a table and settle the difficulty amicably.

She passed the open door into the waiting room, where sat two or three patient and silent figures, and went back to the kitchen. Minnie, the elderly servant, sat by the table reading, amid the odor of roasting chickens; outside the door on the kitchen porch was the freezer containing the "mancer" ice-cream. An orderly Sunday peace was in the air, a gesture of homely comfort, order and security.
Minnie got up.
"I'll unpin your veil for you," she offered, obligingly. "You've got time to lie down about ten minutes. Mrs. Morgan said she'd got to have her ears treated."
"I hope she doesn't sit and talk for an hour."
"She'll talk, all right." Minnie observed, her mouth full of pins. "She'd be talking to me yet if I'd stood there. She's got her nerve, too, that woman."
"I don't like to hear you speak so of the patients who come to the house, Minnie."
"Well, I don't like their asking me questions about the family, either," said Minnie, truculently. "She wanted to know who was Doctor Dick's mother. Said she had had a woman here from Wyoming, and she thought she'd know his people."
Mrs. Crosby stood very still.
"I think she should bring her questions to the family," she said, after a moment.

Kellogg's Bran is Guaranteed to give relief BECAUSE IT IS ALL BRAN!

Relief from constipation, whether it be mild or chronic, will follow the regular, every-day eating of Kellogg's Bran. We have thousands of letters from former sufferers who tell us that the natural "bulk-action" of this wonderful cereal product has given relief where they have not known for years. We guarantee that Kellogg's Bran will free the system from constipation because it is ALL BRAN—not a composition in which bran is added. If constipation is to be permanently relieved, you must eat ALL BRAN—that's why your physician will recommend Kellogg's Bran for constipation.
Constipation creates toxic conditions which poison the blood and every organ of the body. It slows you down mentally and physically, and creates sick headaches, nausea, bloating, pimples—finally, in many cases, leading to Bright's disease, diabetes and other dread diseases. You must fight constipation with Kellogg's Bran regularly if you want health!
You'll say Kellogg's Bran is really delicious—it has a nut-like flavor that appeals to the most fastidious appetite. It's a cereal, sprinkled on hot or cold cereals or cooked with hot cereals, allowing two tablespoonsful of bran for each serving. Be certain to eat at least two tablespoonsful each day; as much with each meal in chronic cases. Kellogg's Bran is served by leading hotels, clubs and restaurants in individual packages. It is sold by all grocers.

Lucy's arm through his, and held her hand. She seemed very small and frail beside him.
"Some day," he said, "a strong wind will come along and carry of Mrs. Lucy Crosby, and the Doctors Livingstone will be obliged to rest scrupulously, and search for her at various elevations."
Doctor David sat down and picked up the old-fashioned carving knife.
"Get the clubs!" he implored.
Dick looked almost stricken.
"Oh, I forgot them, David," he said guiltily. "Jim Wheeler went to look them up and I'll go back after dinner. I'm awfully sorry."
It was some time later during the meal that Dick, whose thoughts had been elsewhere, looked up from his plate and turning to David in surprise, "I'd like to cut office hours on Wednesday night, David. I've asked Elizabeth Wheeler to go into town to the theatre."
"What about the baby at the Homer place?"
"You're evading the real issue, David, aren't you?"
"Perhaps I am," he admitted. "I'd better talk to him. If he's got any ideas that he shouldn't I'd better talk to him. That's nonsense."
"I don't mean that, exactly." Lucy perched. "I mean, won't he want a good many things cleared up before he marries? Isn't he likely to want to go back to Toronto?"
Some of the ruddy color left Doctor David's face. He stood still, staring at her.
"You know he meant to go three years ago, but the war came, and—"
"Her uncle traded," he said. "He's even now easily recall those days when Dick was drilling on the golf links, and 'flying' period of separation."
"If he does go back—"
"Donaldson is dead," David broke in. "Maggie Donaldson is still living."
"What if she is? She's loyal to the core in the first place. In the second, she's criminally liable. As liable as I am."
Lucy winced at the word. There followed a long silence, which she broke rather timidly.
"There is one thing, David, I ought to know. I've never liked to ask before. What has become of the Carlyle girl?"
"She left the stage. There was a sort of general conviction that she was implicated and I don't know Lucy. Sometimes I think she was right. He might read something about her coming back, some months ago, in 'The Valley'. That was the thing she was playing in the spring before it happened. He turned on her. 'Don't get that in your head. That's gone, with the rest.' I wonder, sometimes."
"I know it."
"Outside, the slamming of an automobile door announced Dick's return, and almost immediately Minnie rang the old-fashioned gong that hung in the lower hall. Mrs. Crosby got up and placed a leaf of lettuce between the bars of the bird cage.
"Dinner time, Caruso," she said absently. Caruso was the name Dick had given the bird. And to David: "She must be in her thirties now."
"Probably." Then his anger and anxiety burst out. "What difference can it make about her? About Donaldson's wife? About any hang-over from that rotten time? They're gone, all of them. He's here. He's safe and happy. He's strong and fine. That's enough."
In the low hall Dick was taking off his overcoat.
"Smells like chicken, Minnie," he said, into the dining-room.
"Chicken and biscuits, Mr. Dick."
"Hi, up there!" he called lustily. "Come and feed a starving man. I'm going to muffle the doorbell!"
He stood smiling up at them. Very tidy in his Sunday suit, very boyish, for all his thirty-two years. His face, smilingly tender as he watched them, was strong rather than handsome, quietly dependable and faintly humorous.
"In the language of our great ally," he said, "Madame et Monsieur, le diner est servi."
In his eyes there was not only tenderness, but a somewhat emphasized affection, as though he meant to demonstrate, not only to them but to himself, that this new thing that had come to him did not touch their old relationship. For the new thing had come. He was still slightly dazed with the knowledge of it, and considerably anxious. Because he had just taken a glance at himself in the mirror of the walnut hot-rack, and he had seen nothing there particularly to inspire—well, to inspire what he wanted to inspire.
At the foot of the stairs he drew

"Not one until Sunday. I'll leave my seat number at the box office anyhow, so that will be all right."
"What are you going to see Dick?" Mrs. Crosby asked gently. "Will you have some dumplings?"
"I will, but David shouldn't. Too much starch. Why, it's called 'The Valley', think. An actress named Carlyle, Beverly Carlyle, is starring in it, and seems to be quite a success." He ate on, his mind not on his food, but back in the white house on Palmer Lane, and a girl, Lucy Crosby, fork in hand, stared at him, and then glanced at David.
But David did not look up from his plate.
The Wheeler house was good, modern and commonplace. Walter Wheeler and his wife were like the house. Just as here and there among the furniture there was a fine thing, an antique high-boy, a Sheraton sideboard or some old cut glass, so they had, with a certain mediocrity, their own outstanding virtues. They liked music, believed in the home as the unit of the nation, and devoted their lives to their children.
For many years their lives had centered about the children. For years they had held anxious convalescent whooping cough, about small early deaths, obedience, later about Sunday tennis. They stood united to protect the children against disease, trouble and eternally.
Now that the children were no longer children, they were sometimes lonely and still apprehensive. They always feared motor-car accidents, and Walter Wheeler had withstood the appeals of Jim for a car for a half-dozen years. They feared trains for them, and unhappy marriages, and hid their fears from each other. Their nightly prayers were "to keep them safe and happy."
But they saw life reaching out and taking them, one by one. They saw them still as children, but as children determined to bear their own burdens, live their own lives. Jim stayed out late sometimes, and considered his manhood in question if interrogated. Nina was married and out of the home, but there loomed before them the possibility of maternity and its dangers for her. There remained only Elizabeth, and on her they lavished the care and attention which was formerly divided among the three.
It was their intention and determination that she should never know trouble. She was tenderer than the others, more docile and gentle. They saw her, not as a healthy, normal girl, but as something fragile and very precious. Nina was very different from Elizabeth.

bit. They had always worried about Nina, although they had never put their anxiety to each other. Nina had always overrun her dress allowance, although she had never failed to be sweetly penitent about it, and Nina had always placed an undue emphasis on things. Her bedroom before her marriage was cluttered with odds and ends: Nina sleep, while she went about her household duties. She had aged rather and her determined smile had grown a little fixed.

Like dynamite, cathartics destroy

MEDICAL science is emphatic on this point. "Probably one of the most frequent causes of constipation" as one well-known physician declares, "is the indiscriminate use of cathartics."
Here is the reason: although cathartics give temporary relief, they do it by nervous irritation, and require larger and larger doses in order to blast their way through. Little by little the muscles of the intestines (which should expel by their own action the "waste" that is clogging your system) grow weak with lack of exercise, and finally unable to act at all.
The only real remedy for constipation lies in building up these muscles—in gently encouraging them to act for themselves.
Restoring thousands of sufferers to perfect normal health
That is why so many physicians and hospital are prescribing Fleischmann's Yeast today. Every cake of Fleischmann's fresh yeast consists of millions of tiny living plants which soften and increase the bulk of the waste matter. This greater bulk gently encourages the intestinal muscles to act, and at the same time strengthens them by offering just the resistance they need.
Every such action gives these intestinal muscles normal, natural exercise (something that violent cathartics can never do) and so gradually trains them back to a strong, healthy, active state.
Hundreds of thousands of men and women are finding in Fleischmann's Yeast the key to freedom from all the evils of constipation. They are learning that a body freed from poisons means such health and vigor as they have never known.
Fleischmann's Yeast, like any other food, must be eaten regularly to secure results.
Eat at least two or three cakes a day—plain, or dissolved in water, milk or fruit juices—preferably half an hour before a meal or the last thing at night. If you eat it plain, follow with a glass of water. Get several cakes at a time—they will keep several days in a cool, dry place. Be sure you get Fleischmann's Yeast! All grocers have it!

What this does for the muscles of your arm, Fleischmann's Yeast does for the muscles of your intestines—giving them natural, healthy exercise.

"A vigor and strength unknown for years"
"I have been subject to constipation for the past fifteen years" writes a Western business man. "After having tried many remedies with no results, I began taking Fleischmann's Yeast three times a day. Within a few months I have been relieved of this trouble and now feel a vigor and strength unknown to me for years."

Practical Hints Concerning Wireless in All Its Branches.

Our Cause of Noises.
Much of the howling and squealing in the receivers is often caused by the unskilled operator of the set turning the knob which controls the regenerative action so far that the detector tube starts to oscillate, and oscillations are produced which combine with the incoming signal, with the result that unpleasant sounds are created.

The Variable Condenser.
Make sure that there is no lost motion between the shaft and the bearings when selecting a variable condenser. See that provisions have been made for panel mounting. Treat a condenser for short circuits, by connecting the filament lighting battery across the two binding posts on the condenser, and then rotate the movable plates. Sparks will indicate when and where the plates touch.

The Regenerative Set.
When operating a regenerative receiver, a succession of clicks, a squeal or rattle indicates that too much regeneration is being used. This sound is caused by starting and stopping of the oscillations at regular intervals. The grid gradually acquires a negative charge when the oscillations first start, but as the grid becomes more negative the oscillations finally die out. The grid and grid condenser then discharge through the grid leak.

Importance of Little Things.
Loose connections, poor insulation, poor ground, poor joints in wires, worn insulation, wires crossing, and many other small matters may put a set completely out of operation.

Battery Circuits.
A cell is a single unit used as a source of electrical energy, while a battery is two or more cells connected together in any of three ways. The three methods of connecting cells together

A Real 50-Horsepower Motor and the Stuff to Go With It—$1785!

Never was a car like Jewett for performance! It eats hills. Goes 2 miles or 60 in high—all the range you want. The husky Jewett Six motor has 249 cubic inches piston displacement, that's why. And you know that piston displacement is what puts performance in a car. High-pressure oiling system forcing 2 gallons of oil a minute to all main and connecting-rod bearings, means smooth running and long life.

Behind this tremendous power is "the stuff that goes with it." Every part is rugged, rigid and heavy enough to do anything you want, with never a comeback or whimper. Chassis is the finest of its size. Judge its strength by Jewett's weight, 2805 pounds. Two hundred pounds more than any car its size! The frame staunch and sturdy is six inches deep. Four big cross-braces make it stout as a bridge. No fabric universal joints in a Jewett. They're all steel, with oil sealed in for a year's use.

And the axles are all Paige-Timken. Ball-bearing steering spindles in the front axle give finger-touch steering ease. The new Paige-type clutch, too, makes a hit with women. Jump your foot off. You can't jerk the car nor stall the motor. And for easy shifting—well, you can change from high to second at 30 miles per hour. That's real handling ease to match Jewett's fifty horsepower. And for comfort—this husky car rides and drives like a Six!

Let us show you this stoutest best-built Six you can buy for $1785! See Jewett before deciding.

are in "series," in "parallel" and in a combination of these two ways known as the "series multiple" or "series parallel" connection. The way in which the cells are connected in any particular circuit depends upon the voltage or current desired for operating the apparatus in the circuit.

Radio Insulation.
The most widely-used insulating material for radio panels, tubes, and other insulating parts is a laminated substance built of paper or fabric which has been thoroughly impregnated with phenol condensation products.

A Two-Stage Amplifier.
It costs between $100 and $175 to make two-stage audio frequency amplifier. This depends upon the grade of material and instruments used. Under average conditions, if properly installed, it will cover 200 miles.

Testing for Open Circuits.
The windings of the amplifying transformers may be tested for open circuits by means of a telephone and a single dry cell. The absence of a click or a very faint click or breaking the circuit corrects negative charge to the grid.

Battery Connections.
When connecting batteries to other radio units, trouble may be avoided by connecting the wires to the battery last, and then just touch the last wire before making permanent connection. There is always a possibility of having the wires connected wrong.

For the Notebook.
The price of most sets do not include batteries, tubes or headsets. Ordinary sound travels much faster through solids than through the air. The purpose of a "C" battery is to provide the correct negative charge to the grid.

It is estimated that the sun's rays absorb 70 per cent. of the air strength from the radio waves. A variometer has two coils connected in series, while a variometer is two coils independent of one another.

With an indoor aerial, the fact that the doors and windows are closed is no hindrance to radi waves entering the home. Efficient operation of a radio receiving or transmitting set depends upon the proper adjustments of inductance and capacity. A variocoupler should be used when making a crystal set, because this unit can be employed when changing the set over to a vacuum tube outfit.

RADIOGRAMS.
More than 100 patents have been issued on vacuum tubes and vacuum tube circuits. A fifty-four-part house, just being completed in St. Louis, Mo., has a radio set installed in each apartment.

Every owner of a radio set in Canada is required to have a license. The rate for a receiving station is $1 a year. The humane jail life, a radio set has been installed in the Algeheiny County Jail in Pittsburg, Pa., where a programme will be given nightly to the prisoners.

Among those who have passed the examinations is Douglas Hamilton.

PUT MORE TEETH IN THE MAINE LIQUOR LAWS

Many Bills Introduced and Several of Measures Received Final Passage.

August, April 11.—Seventeen bills relating to the enforcement of the prohibitory law were introduced during the session of the eighty-first legislature, and if these eight were reported out by the committee on temperance.

Several of these measures were intended to put additional teeth into the prohibition legislation already upon the books, and for two or three days a succession of drastic bills led somebody to remark that what Volstead forgot the Maine lawmakers were supplying.

In reporting out different acts, however, the temperance committee endeavored to take favorable action on those which made the statutes of the state conform more closely to federal legislation rather than to encourage radical laws of this nature, according to a statement by one of the prominent members of this body.

One of the most drastic of the bills, that providing that the buyer of liquor should be held equally guilty with the seller, received an adverse report, and another, providing that it shall be a crime for a person to have liquor in his possession in a public place, was finally referred to the next legislature after it had been submitted to a committee of conference subsequent to disagreeing action of the two Houses.

The bill making all liquor containing one-half of one per cent. of alcohol intoxicating was passed by both Houses and signed by the Governor, and another measure that went through was that forbidding the sale of flavored extracts and syrups as beverages. This act conforms to the provisions of the Volstead law.

The legislature also passed a bill defining more clearly the right of the owner of an automobile used for the illegal transportation of liquor to recover the car upon proof that it was used for such a purpose without his knowledge or consent, and another providing that cider seized by officials shall be converted into vinegar.

Till another bill passed forbids the giving of bail after it has been defaulted, and then the lawmakers put through one making it impossible to reduce the amount of recognition in a liquor case after it is once given.

One of the bills passed reduced the amount of fine for the illegal manufacture of liquors from $1,000 to $500.

RADIO CLUB REORGANIZED.
A reorganization meeting of the Radio Club was held last night in the Board of Trade rooms with about forty members present. Officers for the ensuing year were elected and plans for the club's activities were discussed. Frank Thorne, who was elected secretary-treasurer of the new club, offered to equip a laboratory in a new hall for experimental purposes. J. M. Coulton, radio inspector for the Maritime Provinces, was present and gave an interesting talk on radio matters. It was decided to commence a drive for a bigger membership and to this end each one present last night promised to bring one other with him at the next meeting. The officers elected were: Honorary president, Dr. A. E. Macaulay; president, H. B. Wetmore; vice-president, C. F. Logan; secretary-treasurer, Frank Thorne.

RED WINE WAS IN SAUSAGE SKIN
New York, April 11.—The latest scheme of the bootlegging gentry has been pin-pointed by a prohibition agent. Agent Van Tassel walked into the butcher shop of Joseph Carnesi, on the lower east side late yesterday and remarked that he was thirsty. Carnesi produced a big, fat-appearing sausage, threw it on the scales so that other customers might see, and called out $1.95. Van Tassel pushed a pin into the skin and in a moment he looked as if he were the man who won the war. He was smeared with red. He took one swig to make sure it was "red ink," the favorite cast side wine. Then he showed his star. Carnesi went to jail.

ROB TELEPHONE PAY CAR NEAR HEAVY TRAFFIC

Get $20,764 in Roxbury Job and $1,500 in a Cambridge Office.

Half Hour Apart—Laid to Same Gang—Men Show Amazing Daring in Both Thefts—$5,000 Reward is Offered.

Boston, April 10.—President M. B. Jones of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company has offered a reward of $5,000 for information leading to arrest and conviction of the bandits who held up Peter A. Gaddis, paymaster, and robbed him of $20,764, the weekly payroll of the company's construction force at the Alerton street plant.

Not a clue has come to light as to the identity of the robbers, and no one has come forward as an eyewitness to the robbery, although it occurred early in the afternoon near a heavy line of traffic at Massachusetts avenue and Lansdowne street, Roxbury, not far beyond the City Hospital on the route to the South Shore.

The hold-up followed by half an hour an equally daring robbery in the office of the American Optical Company at 150 Broadway, Cambridge. Three bandits robbed the paymaster there of $1,500 and escaped toward Boston in a large touring car of the same make said to have figured in the Roxbury hold-up.

Police searching Greater Boston and surrounding districts for traces of the yeags, are accordingly working on the theory that the same gang did both jobs, as the interval between the thefts furthermore coincides with the time needed to drive between the two points.

So great was the surprise of the victims in each case and so quietly did the robbers carry out their operations that they attracted no attention and easily eluded pursuit, leaving behind only the vaguest impressions of their appearance. Efforts to identify the men as members of the gang associated with Frank Gray, now under indictment for store hold-ups in Cambridge and Somerville, have thus far failed.

It was about 1:30 o'clock when Gaddis turned off Massachusetts avenue into Lansdowne street, riding in a Ford run-about driven by Stillman A. Hardy of 48 Josephine avenue, Somerville, a cable foreman of the telephone company. The money was in a black leather bag on the floor of the machine between the two men.

Many machines were going both to and from Boston along Massachusetts avenue, but they were moving rapidly, as traffic there is nearly all through-travel. Coal yards, gasometers, fields and an occasional manufacturing plant border the highway, so that in consequence few persons were on the street.

Just after Hardy had made the turn off the main stream of traffic, two men stepped rapidly from the curbing on either side, and jumped onto the running board. With revolvers they covered the two men in the car, ordering them in a quiet tone to stick up their hands and keep them up.

Gaddis reached for a revolver which he carried in the outside pocket of his overcoat, but the robber on his side of the car grasped his wrist, wrenched the weapon from him and passed it to his confederate. Meanwhile one of the yeagmen stopped the Ford by pulling out the switch key. He took it with him, thus preventing immediate pursuit in the runabout. With one man covering both Gaddis and Hardy the other grabbed the money bag. The pair then ran back to Massachusetts avenue, turning the corner toward Boston.

In answer to a telephone call by Gaddis to the Dudley street station, Special Officers Higgins and Wall hurried to Lansdowne street with a squad of men. The victims of the robbery told the police they thought the bandit car was a Willis-St. Claire, and its first two numbers were either 89 or 98. The robbers, they said, were from twenty-five to thirty years old, of medium height and weight, one of ment engineer, who was in the next office. The latter seized his hat and coat, called a Mr. Stratton, who had a revolver in his pocket, and the two entered Lancaster's machine. They had only a general idea of the appearance of the bandit car, but saw far ahead a machine which looked like it.

They followed it over the Cambridge bridge, along Charles and Beacon streets, through Arlington to Boylston street. They believe it continued out Huntington avenue, but since they had been delayed by traffic and since they were not sure of the identity, they gave up the chase and returned to Cambridge.

The police learned that the number taken by Beers was that of the car of R. S. Steinhilber of 401 Commonwealth avenue, Boston, which was stolen from in front of his house a week ago last night. It is a Willis-St. Claire of recent make. This car would fit the general descriptions given by the observers.

The man who entered the office wore a gray cap, brown winter overcoat, was under 24, weighed about 135 pounds and had a smooth face and light complexion. He spoke without an accent and was rather nervous. His companion who waited at the wheel of the car was of the same type.

The St. George Club, who are staging the meet, said that there should be plenty of entries even if these men did not appear. Among the number will be Bruce Winchester, who has been showing fine form in the featherweight class.

DANISH DISCOVERY. Two Chemists Report Finding of New Element. London, March 23.—(By Mail)—Two Danish chemists, Messrs. D. I. Borch and C. H. Sorensen, describe their discovery of a new chemical element, to which they have given the name Hafnium, after Hafnia (Copenhagen). Their investigations, of which a full technical account is promised, were made by examination of the X-ray spectra of extractions from the rare element zirconium, in some samples of which they infer one per cent. of hafnium to be present. They hope to be able to isolate the new element and examine its chemical properties. The naming of an element before it has been isolated is in accordance with precedent. Helium, for example, in 1868 was suspected and named from lines in the solar spectrum, but it was first isolated by the late Sir William Ramsay in 1895. The method of investigation by X-rays is a more certain; Moseley, the young British physicist, whose death was one of the greatest losses of the war, not only invented it, but was able to arrange the known elements in an orderly series by means of it. The position in Moseley's series is known as the atomic number, and a large amount of converging evidence seems to limit the existence of the atomic species or elements to 92. Of these, the greater number from 1, hydrogen, to 82, uranium, are known, and, since Moseley laid the way, some missing numbers have been filled in. Numbers 48, 61, 75, 85, and 87 are still missing. Hafnium, the Danish discovery, is assigned to 72. But there is already a claimant for this place. This was detected by Dauvillier, also by X-ray spectroscopy, was reported to the French Academy of Sciences last year, after which it was identified by another French chemist, Urbain, with an element which he had named celtium. Like hafnium, celtium has not yet been isolated.

CARUSO SHATTERED GLASS BY MATCHING VIBRATIONS. Anecdote Is Told in Giving Outline of New Treatment for Disease. London, March 18.—(By Mail)—Caruso was able, after tapping a wine glass to determine its note to sing that same note, and shatter the glass into a thousand pieces. The vibration of Caruso's note exactly neutralized the vibration rate of the glass, and so the latter ceased to exist as a wine glass. This anecdote is told in "The Westminster Gazette" by Dr. Albert Abrams in illustration of his new principle neutralizing the vibrations of a patient's disease by a vibration of the same rate produced by an instrument called the "oscilloclast". A terminal of the instrument, worked by an ordinary electric light current, is placed over the site of the disease, and the correct vibration sent into the patient for "half an hour daily or longer till the "vibration rate" of the disease is abolished. No pain or sensation is caused, and the treatment can be applied during sleep. Dr. Abrams has also discovered certain substances of different colors to be possessed of the same vibration rates as some diseases, and he paints these colors on the skin over the site of the disease.

Prisoner Released After Thirty-six Years Confinement; Bewildered by Traffic.

London, March 18.—(By mail)—A man whose association with the world of every-day life ceased thirty-six years ago has just been released from prison, notes The London Daily Express. He lives in the world of yesterday. His twilight existence has lasted sixteen years longer than Rip Van Winkle's, and his sudden descent into the maelstrom of modern life is more violent. He was sentenced thirty-six years ago to be detained at "Her Majesty's pleasure."

"His mind is wonderfully quick," said Brigadier Peden, head of the Salvation Army social work in Lancashire, "but traffic and women's dress bewilder him. He is so afraid of the speed of modern motor vehicles and tramway cars that he is almost afraid to venture into the street."

When this Rip Van Winkle left the world behind him there were no gramophones, the telephone was in its infancy, X-rays, the cinema, wireless and aeroplanes were not yet invented, the poles were still undiscovered and the Great War was but a hazy dream of mad war lords.

Chemist Tells of Work to Eradicate Tuberculosis Germ

Yale Professor Reveals Results of Experiments to Aid Physicians, Biologists by Analysis of Organism.

New Haven, Conn., April 11.—Outstanding among the papers read at the group meetings of the American Chemical Society last week was one dealing with chemical research work on tuberculosis bacilli at Yale. The paper was read by E. B. Brown, holder of the National Tuberculosis Association Fellowship at Yale. The work represents the joining of hands of the chemist with the bacteriologist, the biologist, the physician and the pharmacologist.

They also determined something of the nature of the protein bodies that are present. There exists in tuberculosis germs what is known as "nucleic acid," a substance made up of phosphoric acid, sugar and several nitrogen compounds. Professors Brown and Johnson have broken down this nucleic acid and find that the sugar and pyrimidines in it are of animal origin.

As the investigations proceed the chemist will be able to tell the physician and the biologist more and more about the structure and composition of the germ which they are attacking. With a knowledge of the fundamental chemistry of the organism they will look for substances that will combine with some of its components and at the same time will not be toxic. The next step will be the testing of the substances on animals, and the results, it is hoped, will cast light on the method of curing the disease. Biological chemists feel that this work is a great step forward in stamping out tuberculosis.
