PROGRESS IN STOVES.

(To the Editor of the Farmer.) SIR: - We are not going to say any thing new, but would say, every manufacturer, merchant, mechanic, or inventor is constantly experimenting in the endeavor to produce an article totally unlike all others, and to accomplish such results as will enable him to obtain the exclusive control of it. The stove manufacturer is not exempt from this rule, as the general reconstruction of beating stoves during the past few year testify : as stoves in our day have a different appearance from what they had twenty year

For the past ten years one man has given bis attention and experiments towards improving the cooking stove which has resulted Mr. Getenell will commence that will be produced.

MY TREES.

BY CHARLES G. D. ROBERTS. At evening, when the winds are still, And wide the yellowing landscape glows,
My fir-woods on the lonely hill
Are crowned with sun and loud with crows.
Their flocks throng down the open sky From far, salt flats and sedgy seas, Then dusk and dew-fall quench the cry,— So calm a home is in my trees.

At morning, when the young wind swings The green, slim tops and branches high,
Out-puffs a noisy whirl of wind,
Dispersing up the empty sky.
In this dear refuge no roof stops
The skyward pinion winnowing through,
My trees shut out the world,—their tops
