TWO POWERFUL PLEAS BY EMINENT COUNSEL!

For and Against the Conviction of Gerald Sifton on the Terrible Charge of Murdering His Father.

Mr. Johnston Makes a Bitter Attack on the Witnesses for the Crown and the Mordens in Particular --- Mr. Riddell's Able and Dispassionate Review of the Evidence.

attention in the court room yesterday while one counsel pleaded, in eloquent words, for a man's life and the opposing counsel marshaled the evidence against the same man, will have it to say that they have heard two addresses to a jury which will be known in legal annals as forensic efforts worthy indeed of the men who made them. Interested as were the auditors, the addresses could not have had for them one tittle the momentous import that they had for the pale-faced man who sat in the corner of the dock, with his gaze intently fixed either on the jury or counsel. Not ess concerned than he was the blackgarbed little woman who sat as close to her husband as the intervening form of Detective Ward would allow. Upon the effect of those addresses on the jury depended largely the question whether Gerald Sifton would walk forth today a free man; whether he would go back to his cell with the dread sound of "Dead, dead, dead, and may God have mercy upon your soul!" ringing in his ears; or, perchance, whether a disagreement would send him back with the wait of weary months and the heartbreaking strain of another trial before him.

In the performance of his task, Mr. Johnston did not confine himself to his eloquent and pathetic plea for the prisoner. He showed himself also a aster of their presumable allies. There were not contain a fresh epithet for the 'Morden gang," or one of its mem-

Mr. Riddell's address was a calm resume of the important points of evidence, together with a pointing out of such discrepancies and improbabilities in the defense as he wished especially to bring to the notice of the jury.

It was 3:05 p.m. when Mr. Johnston rose to address the jury. He began in his usual quiet manner, but ere long his delivery grew more fiery, his form shook, and his hands and arms were subpoenaed to attend the spring as-occupied with gestures as eloquent as sizes this year, but not the previous in the barn, so as to look like suicide. shook, and his hands and arms were his words. His voice, at first so low that fall assizes. it could not be heard in the back of the room, swelled out so that its echoes reached the corridors downstairs, where a disappointed crowd vainly sought to cajole the obdurate constables into allowing them to ascend the stairs.

Mrs. Gerald Sifton sat on the bench parallel with the dock. On one side of her was Detective Ward, guarding the prisoner in the dock, while on her other side sat her aunt and uncle, Miss Minnie and John J. Sifton, sister and brother respectively of the dead man. Mrs. Sifton was visibly affected throughout the address, and at many of Mr. Johnston's references her face went down on Miss Sifton's shoulders and she sob-

SIFTON CASE GOES TO JURY!

Mr. Justice McMahon Takes Two Hours in Delivering Charge.

Impresses the Twelve Good Men and True With the Awfulness of Their Responsibility and Makes a Careful Review of All Evidence.

The court room was filled when I his aunt, Miss Minnie Sifton, and Mrs. Judge McMahon entered this morning at 10:10 o'clock. Gerald Sifton was brought in by Constables Ward and Paisley, and took his seat in the dock for what will probably be the last time as a prisoner on trial for his life. On the bench to the right of the dock were seated the prisoner's wife, his uncles John J. and Alley Sifton, Gerald Sifton's mother and brother. After the opening formalities, and after the sheriff had given strict orders that during the address the doors at the south side of the room be kept strictly closed, Judge Mc-Mahon turned his chair sideways, so that he faced the jury, and began his charge in a quiet, but clear and distinct voice, which could be plainly heard at the back of the room. In the course of the charge he said: Gentlemen of the jury,-The charge against the prisoner is that the deceased, Joseph H. Sifton, came to his death by violence, and that violence which caused his death was inflicted by the hands of the prisoner. Now this charge being one of a serious crime, and the supposed participation n it having been discussed largely through the press, I must ask you to eliminate from your minds everything you have heard or read in relation to this alleged murder. You came here under obligation to take your first and only impressions from the witnesses, upon either side.

You are to receive with the closest scrutiny every bit of the evidence that is being given. You are doing your duty between the crown, which is the community at large, and the prisoner at the bar, who is on trial for his life. Because a witness gets in the box and makes a statement it is not a necessary consequence that is not a necessary consequence that of both James and Martin Morden.

You are to believe all or any of the Then facts on which counsel for the statements that he or she made. dealing with the evidence, take into consideration the surrounding circumstances and the attitude of one party to another, or several parties toward each other. This is the best way of reaching a proper view as to

In speaking of the responsibility which rests upon you in dealing with the evidence, and the responsibility thrown upon you by the law, remember you cannot shirk it if you wanted to, and you should not endeavor to shirk it if you could because the proper administration of the law is one of the great and chief elements for the safety, benefit and welfare of society. You as a jury in this case are the guardians of the law and society, and they look to you to do your duty. Something has been said by counsel of consequences. Neither you nor I have anything to do with that. The man who premeditates the murder and commits it is a man of crime. Perhaps he does not seriously consider the consequences, because he always hopes to evade justice, but if the arms of the law reach him for any offense he commits, he knows what the consequences will be. You find the fact, whatever it may be, and when you find that fact your consciences will be free from the obligations, and that is all the country can expect from you. What is said in this case is that the prisoner had a motive for the doing away with his father. It is true that some of the most serious crimes have been committed without any motive, but in the generality of cases, crimes of a serious character have always a mo-What is urged on behalf crown is that the prisoner, if he did this crime, only conceived the crime the night before. There was some evidence of a character which would go to show that perhaps the crime was contemplated at an earlier date, but that evidence was excluded. What is put before you as a motive is that this infortunate man who lost his life on the following morning, was about to marry, and that if he did marry it would hurt the position of the prisoner financially. He was an heir-at-law of his father; he was the beneficiary under the will which his father had made. Starting with the night in question, it is said the prisoner went about the country, offering to this man and the other, money, in order that they might become participants in the crime which he contemplated. If you believe the evidence, on the Friday night he became aware, through John McFarlane, that head, and if you don't it will be all mary was going to be married to his up with you." Herbert said that for Mary was going to be married to his father, and asked her if it was true, and she said it was; and she left the prisoner's house that night to go to her mother. She went with her affi-anced husband, the prisoner's father. The mother endeavored to dissuade her from marrying this old man because of his age, and the youth of the daughter. The daughter told her that it must be, for the reason assigned here, that whether she was pregnant or not, he felt in a measure in honor bound to marry her, and he therefore had agreed to marry her on the following day.

If you believe the evidence, the prisoner went on that night to the houses

If this be true, it will throw a different light on much that is dark. If James Morden be believable, prisoner went to his house on the Friday er reached his house that night the prisoner called Morden aside and told him he had something confidential to tell him. Morden's statement is that Sifton were to be married and a stop must be put to it. Gerald offered Morold man on the road and club him. the police court charge arose out of a much better for James Morden, if he colored man threatening him on the thought the prisoner contemplated such the authorities. He should have considered then and there the result of that crime, and he should have told the prisoner, "I am going to inform on you." That would have been the proper

Taking it, as perhaps you will take it, that he (the prisoner) came into London, six or seven miles from his home, what witness thought an axe on his on a wheel, you can judge when he would reach his home. Rev. Mr. Cooper was at the house until about 12 o'clock at night, and he had not re-turned then. Perhaps it would be somewhere about an hour later he would reach home. His wife says he went to bed. She cannot tell when it was, but he was out early in the morning, according to the evidence, because he was milking before breakfast, and was in before 7 o'clock, to prepare the butter to be taken into London Walter Herbert had been there for some time. He was employed on the farm, and was in the habit of milking the cows in company with the boy Rog-ers. Herbert says that while he was milking the cows, the prisoner came to him and made him an offer, because of the intended marriage of his father to Mary McFarlane, he was going to put up a hay-fork track in the barn, and intended tumbling him out from the top of the barn. That was the proposition made to Herbert according to his story. If he would be a witness for Gerald that it was an accident he would give Herbert $1,000.

Mrs. Sifton, wife of prisoner, says she was with him assisting in the milking, and the boy Rogers says he was there. Rogers says that no communication took place, as far as he knew, between prisoner and Herbert in relation to that, but he did hear the prisoner say, "Either of you two boys must go with me to my father's, and it doesn't matter which of you goes." Is that statement true? If it is, then Herbert's cannot likewise be true, unless the prisoner made the statement first and had communication afterwards with Herbert. Then comes the part that is difficult to account for. Herbert and prisoner go in company to the house of the deceased, and, according to Mary Mc-

Marlane, tell him they have come to help with the hay track. He calls from upstairs that he was not going to work that day. They tell him to ome and show them where to put it. He does so, and is found dying twenty minutes afterwards. Did Joseph Sifton fall from the barn? If he did, then Herbert's story that he struck him can have no foundation.

Now as to whether Herbert struck Joseph Sifton on the head or not. Herbert didn't explain that he was going. according to his theory, to be a participant in the crime, because he believed that the idea in the prisoner's mind was, when Joseph Sifton got up to the top of the barn to precipitate him from there, and so call it an accident. But Herbert says that when Joseph Sifton was coming to the barn, the prisoner said to him, "Now, when fear of the consequences regarding the directions of the prisoner, he did inflict the blow on the right side of the head of the deceased. If you believe that, then all the theories as to how the man died are of no avail, because in that way the initial step in the death of Joseph Sifton was taken by the striking of that blow. Herbert says that he struck him as he was coming up; he said he struck him a blow that stunned him. It is said by the medical men that if Herbert struck him as he said it would have broken the ear, but no such injury appears. Then, says Herbert, prisoner [Continued on page 5.]

THE BATTLES OF LIFE

Demand Nerve Force, Energy, of Health!

What use has the world for men and tion. women who have not courage enough to face the battles of life? Every day ing discouraged and despondent be-cause they lack the nerve force which is absolutely necessary to health and piration. strength, and which supplies energy and ambition to body and mind. It is not too much to attribute nine-tenths of the sufferings of humanity to waning nerve power, the vital principle of life itself.

Is it any wonder that the heart's action grows weak and irregular, the digestion poor, the liver and kidneys sluggish and inactive, when the vital force stored up in the nerves is con-sumed or wasted by disease, worry or over-exertion of the mental and physical powers? We are living too far States. State powers: We are fiving to late $418 00 from nature's rules, burning the candle 740 00 at both ends and wasting nerve force 480 00 without thought of how it is to be replenished. The effects are carefully overlooked until prostration, nervous collapse or insanity overcomes us and renders restoration next to impossible. In his immense practice in the United States, the very home of nervous diseases, Dr. A. W. Chase studied the cause of these ailments which are silowly sapping millions of young men and women of the vital spark of life and energy. The result of his tireless investigation and experiment was the giving to the world of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, the most marvelous nerve restorative that man has ever known. so slow as to be scarcely perceptible.

There is no use of talking about old methods of treatment being as good as this new system of Dr. Chase. Facts prove beyond a shadow of a doubt the surprising upbuilding effect of this great food cure. By making note of your weight from time to time while taking it, you can observe the gradual upbuilding influence of this treatment. a kind providence may restore to you perhaps more than you lost. If, however, by the verdict of a jury a man is sent from the court room to the gallows, he is launched from the earthly tribunal to the tribunal of the great white throne. If there be a mistake made no power can rectify that mistake, and eternity itself is too short to remedy the error that has been done. No wonder men approach a task of this kind with hesitancy, and no wonder the law has said "you shall find a man guilty only when the evidence brings conviction beyond all doubt."

If the leading medical men of the country on both sides express great doubt as to the facts that have been sworn to before you, if such men have reasonable doubts as to the conditions which are found after death and the story that is told before death, and if, in addition to that, you find many of these men saying that the story of the killing narrated by Herbert are wholly incredible, surely you and I might reasonably be expected to have doubts of a very serious character in regard to the same matter.

has been produced here, the medical men have told you, one and all, that if you take Herbert's statement as a the thing is impossible. medical men for the defense say that if you even modify Herbert's story as to the blows by half, they do not find the conditions which the story would lead them to expect. If that he so, we must look at this evidence pretty carefully before we say this man is guilty. If a man is to be tried upon that which the public speak of, if a man is to be sentenced to death because the newspapers give their version of it, then you may abolish trial by jurytrial in the courts of law. There is no object in having his lordship upon the bench; there is no object in calling twelve men to pronounce upon their solemn oath what the result of that evidence is; there is no occasion for my learned friend and myself, unless we are trying the man upon the evidence that is sworn to and upon that alone. A man may be guilty, may be innocent, but you could not pronounce upon his guilt or his innocence except upon the facts set before you. The moment we depart from the dence we depart from that which we are sworn to do. Let your answer to the indictment be "yea, yea," or "nay, nay." as it strikes your mind. Every man in this jury has a right to his own convictions. from me to seek by any false appeal to you to change those convictions, if they have honestly come home to your

Look upon the record of this case, and wherever you find a hand of suspicion, wherever you find the trail of the serpent, wherever you find treacherous conduct, unmanly actions, vindictiveness, and a feeling unworthy one who claims the name of man, wherever you find that, you find written underneath the name "Morden." When you look again upon that skull, the record of these transactions, wherever you find mention of money or compensation, underneath you find the name "Morden." When you look upon the same record and find a man who has not the manliness to stand up for the woman who assents to be his wife, the man who hears his betrothed slandered, and raises not the voice, not the hand against the traducer, there you find underneath the man Morden.

Look again upon that record. When you find a man who plays the friend to Gerald Sifton, a man to whom Gerald Sifton was kind and perhaps gave him a home when he had no other home to go to, when you find the man who, in order to be safe, as he calls it, stands in with the Mordens, a man who has been here for a year two months after pleading guilty, and who goes into the box here and tells you an incredible story, the man who was taken to the dark chamber of iniquity in Edgar Morden's house, the man who, figuratively speaking, enters into the very pit of hell, and un-

When you look to find the man so low, so debased, that he gives a wouldbe murderer his brother's adress, with the idea of helping him to commit the anxious to keep the secret from his sister and cousin; the man who follows up, according to his story, the tempting trail of the bribe; the man who says nothing to warn the prospective victim: the man who goes to the alleged

Look, now, at the poor miserable, unfortunate remnant of humanity, the man upon whom drink has seized with a terrible grasp; the man who has sunk below the level of his manhood, who is now groveling among the beasts and the things that crawl-the man Jacob Burgess-whose friends have to lock him up to keep him sober. professes, as an entire stranger, to give evidence of the so-called admission.

Let me say no harsh word against est sinner and the greatest wrong-doer is the man who has gone; the man, 60 years of age, seducing a girl, and then desiring to marry her, and under what circumstances! Her troth plighted to out, groping in the dark, reaching out inhalers in common use are very little, another man, to whom she says not one for suspicious circumstances. We see if any, better than the old-fashioned word; Martin Morden, with no money, no property; Joseph Sifton, a wealthy

It may be that a jury of this country would take that evidence and say, "We not only believe it, but we are willing to hang a man upon the strength of it." Let me ask you how one of you twelve men would like to be placed upon trial for your life upon, such evidence as that. Take away the evidence that carries with it its own answer-falsehood -and I ask you if there is any evidence on which to send a man to the hangman's rope. If you believe Herbert and the Mordens, the road to the gallows is a short and easy one.

THE ALLEGED MOTIVE.

Before dealing with the general facts of the case, let us look at the motive provided by the crown, that of Joseph Sirton's marriage to Mary McFarlane. The crown did not have to prove a motive, because a murder is assumed to be a willful, felonious and malicious act. The crown, however, has brought a motive you. The crown counsel, in his open-death because of a jury's verdict, the matter is past recall. You may have drawn in 1889, by Edmund Meredith, K.C., and by him the contents are litigation and lose your property, but kept entirely confidential. We have no evidence connecting Gerald with a knowledge of this will, except that of Martin Morden, given to fill the gap, after being seen by Detective Murray and asked if he did not remember conversing with Gerald about the old will. Once you get vindictive-ness on the part of a witness, you have no limits to the evidence which he will give. Does Gerald Sifton go around drawing up forged wills to try and get more than his father had left him? No. He leaves such for Edgar Morden to do. We have no evidence that he knew of Morden's will or if it was in existence at the time of the accident. When was that will brought into existence, and when was it determined in the mind of the arch plotter, Edgar Morden, that the will would be forthcoming? At that moment you get the dishonest hand, the hand that makes evidence, the hand of Edgar Morden. You get the terrible threats, the conferences in the dark corners, the stealthy examinations, the concealing The medical evidence for the crown of Herbert for three hours in the dark chamber of iniquity at Morden's.

You have heard that Gerald Sifton had an interest in the death of his father. Of course he had, but so might you, so might I, so might every If we take the cold-blooded view of financial advantages, there is perhaps not a person in this room who has not some interest in the death of a loved one.

Because a man marries his second or third wife, is no reason why he forgets the child of his early married life. There was no reason for Gerald Sifton to fear that he would be cut off without a cent because his father was marrying a young woman. That could not be a motive for the crime.

The crown says that Gerald Sifton killed his father to prevent the mar-riage with Mary McFarlane. If you look at the evidence after stripping it of all that is furnished by the Mordens, you find Gerald doing exactly as you or I would have done. He knew that Martin Morden was engaged to Mary McFarlane. He knew that it was an unseemly thing that an old man like his father should marry a girl so much younger than himself. What more natural than that Gerald should say, "I will stop this mar-riage?" He goes to James Morden, gets Martin's address, and goes to see him. Nothing unreal or improbable in this evidence. Leave out the Mordens, and that man in the dock would be at home with his wife, treating her always kindly, as she says, instead of occupying a felon's position. If these Mordens are of the stamp of men who can be approached openly and asked to commit murder, and they don't resent the proposition, their evidence is not worth the breath it takes to give it in. If I go to you men and ask your aid to murder my father, asking one of you to smash his brains out, another to choke him, another to poison him, what would you do or You'd give me up to the law. you'd warn my victim, or you would say I was insane, and should be con-If you dickered with me, if you talked over the commission of the crime, you'd feel afterward that you had murder in your hearts, even if your hands were not stained blood. Put such a man in the box, and what jury would believe him? I ask you to remember that.

No verdict that you return here can give back life to the cold clay for fourteen months has rested in the churchyard at St. Johns. Any punishout to Gerald Walter Herbert cannot bring back Joseph Sifton to life. All you can do is to take this man's life in exchange for the one taken.

THE FATEFUL JUNE 30. I ask you now to look at what occurs on the morning of Saturday, June 30. Men are early on the scene of the accident. Decker, led by Walter Herbert, goes up through the trap door and walks across the hay to the lower opening, from which he jumps down. This ten minutes after the scene so coolly and deliberately described Herbert. What does Decker see? No blood on ladder, no blood on the hay, no signs of a struggle. We hear of no blood on Decker's boots or trousers. though if there had been you would have heard. Decker finds the body lying under the upper hole, with the head bleeding; Decker sees, too, three boards knocked off one split the number of boards corresponding with the architect's report. Herbert says five boards were knocked off. Decker sees the condition of things, and hears the account of its happening. Sinker, McNeil, and others do the same. They accept it as an accident, for the ac count appeals to their reason, and coincides with the condition they find. No one sees any blood on Herbert or on the hay, around the hole. NO ONE HAS ANY SUSPICION. The hand of the skillful forger is not yet apparent, and the putrefying influence of the Morden grip is not yet apparent. The man is carried to the house. The doctor finds there is no hope for him. He dies. The doctor grants a death certificate on the grounds of accidental death.

Why did Morden and the high constable take these two women to Burns' Hotel? If their business was innocent why not take them to McLoud's office, to the sheriff's office, to Mary's mother's, to Morden's house, to any place, rather than where they went? There could be only one meaning for that visit. Why is McLoud the only lets is because being used internally

We have a will here, over a beam, and down to the ground. over a beam, and down to the ground, and not a speck of blood on either of the two men who did all this. They tell the story of an accident to half a dozen people, and all the details agree. No suspicions anywhere until the infectious hands of the Morden gang > the account to be given of the accident The crime was to be committed in various ways. One was to smash the old man with a club, one was to poison him and another to choke him. Herbert's story is that Joseph Sifton came up the trap-door and was struck as he came up. How did they know he was coming that way. There is evidence that he came in by the hay-rack, and not by the trap at all. When were the details of the story arranged so that each could tell of the old man's anger at the split board, his going up with new boots on; his plunge from the height? Surely this story was not arranged in the few minutes between Joseph Sifton's leaving his house, and Walter Herbert's announcement of the accident. In those minutes, according to Herbert, they were battering the head with an axe, carrying the body across the mow, throwing it out, rearranging it, and battering it some more. How did they get their story so exact and reasonable? Herbert does not tell. He only tells that he did not go to murder at all, only as the perjurer who was to be a false witness as to the circum-

> asks you to hang Gerald Sift in.
> Why is Edgar Morden not here? He is the man who forged the will to use as a lever upon Gerald Sifton. He is the man who went before the grand jury and on whose evidence largely Gerald Sifton. Why is he not called? Is it because the moral putrefaction of the man would taint and damn the holiest cause? This man stands proven in the records of this court a forger and perjurer, yet he is allowed to stalk around, a free man, for months and months. Is there a jury in Canada, who, on the evidence of such a man, would convict a fellow-

Let us look calmly at the evidence. Gerald Sifton, instead of putting a full-page advertisement in The London Advertiser or Free Press, reading, "Wanted-Man to commit mur-der: remuneration $1,000," does the next best thing and starts peddling the job around the country. He goes to James Morden's. Nothing secret about it. It is Morden, not the prospective murderer, who tries to keep it quiet. But does Morden try to persuade the murderer? No: him Martin's coat and gives him Martin's address, and goes to bed with no thought of warning Joseph Sifton of his danger.

Follow Gerald Sifton to Martin Morden's and what do you find? Martin does not resent the imputations cast upon his betrothed or the request for aid in committing a murder. He listens calmly to the proposition of murder, hears his affianced wife described as little better than a harlot, and then he too goes back to his couch. On his way to this man Gerald meets the policeman, tells him his name and what he wants. Is this the view his proposed tool in committing murder? After the death of Joseph Sifton, James Morden has susp borrows Gerald's rifle, buys chicken feed, treats him as a neighbor, in fact, James does not say, "Gerald, you kill-(Continued on page 4.)

The use of inhalers and the application of salves, washes and powders to the nose and throat to cure catarrh is no more reasonable than to rub the back to cure kidney disease. SECURE

By their ANTI-BILIOUS properties they stimulate the liver in the secretion of the bile and its discharge through the biliary ducts. These Pills, in doses of from two to four, will quickly regulate the action of the liver and free the patient from these disorders. One or two of Radway's Pills taken daily by those subject to bilious pains and torpidity of the liver will keep the system regular and secure healthy digestion.

I find that your Fills do me more good than all the medicine I have taken and the Springs combined. "Respectfully, W. JAMES." "Harqua Haia, Yuma County, Arizona." "Your Radway's Fills have worked wonderfully in my family. My children, when sick, have received instantaneous and complete relief by their use. Sudden coids, sore throat, I find I can quickly cure by the use of your Ready Relief and Fills. They should not be wanting in any well-kept home. "That doubly serves what helps you once.' Yours truly, DR. H. E. SCHNEIDER." "My Hudson street, Hoboken, N.J., and Times Building, New York."

"For years I have been troubled with rheumatism and dyspepsia, and came to the conclusion to try your pills. I immediately found great relief from their use. I feel like a new man since I commenced taking them, and would not now be without them. The drowsy, sleepy feeling I used to have has entirely disappeared. The dyspepsia has left me, and my rheumatism is gone entirely. I am satisfied if anyone so afflicted will give Radway's Fills a trial they will surely cure them, for I believe it all comes from the system being out of order—the liver not doing its work."

Men Like Kelvin.

We hear very much now about "applied science" and practical teaching in "technical schools," and it is well for us to remember that this is by no means a new thing. We are informed that Britishers are now falling behind, and even If that dreadful statement were true, and we fell out of the race, the world race. The name of Lord Kelvin does not suggest very much the idea of falling behind. He is a great university teacher, and if the passenger on ocean liners keeps his eyes open, he may see signs that the great professor is also a practical workman. Lord Kelvin gave an oration at the recent jubilee of Glasgow University, and the subject of it was James Watt. He said: "It is fitting that the University of Glasgow in this celebration of its ninth jubilee. should recollect with pride the privilege it happily exercised a hundred and forty-five years ago of lending a helping hand, and extending the beneficent solace of personal friendly intercourse of professors of mathematics, philosophy and classical literature, and giving a workshop within its walls, to a young man of no university education. struggling to commence earning a livelihood as a mathematical-instrument maker, in whom they discovered something of the genius, destined for such tablished her reputation of pre-emingreat things in future." Lord Kelvin ence in the production of certain then proceeded to sketch the life of breeds of cattle and other live stock. James Watt with all its toils, struggles | Manitoba, though her years of plenty and successes. Here is an instructive may be somewhat intermittent, is a quotation. These words are spoken by the boy's aunt: "James Watt, I never ing concerning what New Ontario has saw such an idle boy. Take a book or in store. Nor is the Dominion behind employ yourself usefully. critic little knew how much was involved in this thoughtful idleness. After dealing with the details of the life of James Watt, Lord Kelvin adds: "I do not know if any university in the world ever had a tradesman's workshop and saleshop within its walls, even for the making and selling of mathematical instruments, prior to 1757. But whether the University of Glasgow is or is not usage in this respect. I believe it is certainly unique in being the first British university-perhaps the first university in the world-to have an en-

University has many things to be proud of, and not the least is the help that it gave to James Watt' in his early struggle. While the British race

Owing to various drawbacks, the industry, agriculture, in Britain has suffered considerably within recent years. Perhaps one of the chief reasons for the decline is the fact that Britain has made increasing demands on foreign markets for her food supply. A prominent feature disclosed by the official returns of the Board of Agriculture is the steady shrinkage of the area devoted to wheat, a result doubtless due to low prices, which make it difficult to grow wheat at a profit. Twenty-five years ago the wheat area in Britain was nearly double what it is today. There seems to be a steadly contraction in the wheat fields of Britain, with no indication of a permanent increase at any time in the near future. The London Times becomes solicitous over the British agricultural aspect. It says: "The day may come-though at present it seems far distant-when the great wheat-producing regions beyond the sea will require more of their own grain for the consumption of their growing populations and will have less to spare for us. Or the day might come to the discredit of British statesmanship, and the ruin of the British Emwhen our fleet would be no longer able to guarantee the security of our commerce, and we should be forced to depend to a greater degree than at present upon our own internal resources for the support of the people of these islands. Neither of these contingencies. perhaps, need enter into present calculations. But they are not inconceivable; and the mere thought of them gives a serious aspect to the evidence which points to a steady decline in our power of producing for ourselves the first necessity of life, our daily bread."

The agricultural capacity of the food producing regions, and especially that of the Dominion of Canada, has experienced a comparatively steady exof a recognized principle that use develops and disuse destroys or causes

The same decline is to be seen in live stock, with the exception of agricultural horses and cattle over 2 years old. Swine stand at the lowest figure since the year 1893; there is also to be seen a serious diminution in young cattle. the number of sheep. Since the year 1868 be a doubt.

the number has decreased about five millions, which means a smaller meat supply for a growing population.

Rural Britain has also had to face a scarcity of agricultural labor. The exodus from country to town and city is nearly as conspicuous in the motherland as on this side of the ocean. The effete stock of the industrial population of the large towns is being continually recruited from the farms. Though not the best for the agricultural situation of any country, it is certainly a good thing for the towns and cities, both in America and in Europe, that the standard of urban population should be maintained in a high degree by an intermixture of men, "with thews and constitutions developed not in reeking slums, but in the free, fresh air of the fields and daily contact with the soil."

Our Possibilities.

Within the memory of men comparatively young, Manitoba and the wildernesses, with here and there the trading posts of the Hudson Bay

Perhaps in no other part of the world is to be found such remarkable advancement in so short a time. Winnipeg, which as Fort Garry three decades ago, was scarcely more than a struggling settlement, ranks today among the five or six most important cities of the Dominion. The virgin soil, which only 30 years ago brought a vegetation that was born to blush unseen, now produces such an abundance of grain as to be justly entitled to recognition as the granary of the continent.

Upon comparing accounts of conditions 30 years ago with what may be seen at present, the Duke and Duchess of York, in visiting the Canadian Northwest, will doubtless be agreeably impressed with the progress that part of the empire has made. And yet Canada is only on the threshold of the fulfillment of great expectations. The results of the awards on our live stock exhibit at the Pan-American Exposition have all but esland rich in possibilities, to say nothin regard to mineral wealth. The resources that lie hidden awaiting only to be exhumed cannot be adequately estimated. So far as the foundation for material advancement is concerned, there is no room for the pessimist. In the natural element, in brawn and brain, even Canadians are by no means deficient. The only extra requisites for the consummation of our Christianity.

[Boston Herald.] Senator Hay, in his address at the opening of the Unitarian Conference in Saratoga, called attention to the remarkable unanimity of the recognition of President McKinley's character and habit as representative of the true Christian life. "Men of all Christian sects," he said, "are taking this occasion to declare what it is that makes the true Christian, what sort of example men ought to imitate and what entitles them to the favor of God. We hear nothing of Athanasian creeds, or the five points of Calvinism, or Unitarian statements of faith, or church covenants, or decrees of councils; but Catholic and Protestant, and Calvinist and Presbyterian, and Universalist and Unitarian, and Methodist and Episcopalian, speaking by their most trusted representatives and their highest au-thorities, declare that this man's life was Christian, and that this man's pansion, giving us here an illustration faith was Christianity." That is a just statement of what the nation has lately witnessed. There never has been a more universal acknowledgment that a pure and upright life is the essential proof of acceptable Christian faith, independent of creed or confession, than the comment on President McKinley since his death. We have observed no lament anywhere that he did not belong to another sect than the one to which he did belong, no intimation that a serious diminution in young cattle. he was a heretic regarding whose fu-But the greatest falling off has been in ture, if Christianity be true, there can ed your father, and I could hang you." Why? Because his is not the hand that pulls the strings, the skilled hand that manufactures fatal evidence. He goes to tell to Gerald about the latter's threats to shoot him. Does he mention them? No. He comes to this court and tells four or five points not touched on in his evidence at the preliminary examination. What has refreshed his evidence in the mean-

THE BUTTER-PAPER WILL. After all this the butter-paper will touch of the hand of the skilled assassin, Edgar Morden. The attempts at blackmail and extortion follow. But they ask too much. Edgar Morden appears to want a 50-acre farm out of the deal. Gerald, curious to know the contents of the will, and wishing perhaps to prevent a scandal, is willing to pay a reasonable sum for the will, but he resents Morden's attempt at blackmail. The Mordens, their scheme a failure, may at least have revenge, so Gerald's arrest follows. Now as to Dr. McNeil's statements Gerald, seeing his father suffering as he thinks, asks if it would not be best to put him out of misery. Not an unknown thing in the experience of a stant, painless death better than lingering misery for a loved one. With a dying, limp body lying there, how could strychnine be administered so that it could operate on the body? If this were the case, Joseph Sifton was killed by poison; no evidence is given to prove it, and it is the evidence alone that we must deal with. When a man confesses to a murder, there must be some powerful motive. In this case, it is threats and promises from the maker of evidence Edgar Morden. Here is Herbert still in jail, practically free from punishment, twelve months after pleading guilty to the charge of murder, and this because the crown has used him as physician, that one should think ina witness. HERBERT'S CONFESSION. Remember how that confession was made. The uncle, Brock, takes Herbert to Morden's house, and he is left in a dark room for four or five hours, while Edgar Morden and High Constable McLoud talk below. What are they talking of all that time? Why is not Edgar Morden here that the defense may cross-examine him on that point? Are they deliberating as to what story Herbert should tell to fit in with the evidence they can produce? Why is Herbert not brought to the office of the sheriff or the crown attorney? Finally he is brought down at 2 a.m., tells his story to the high constable and is driven home. Is it on evidence such as this that you will send Gerald Sifton, degraded and dishonored, back to a murderer's cell, forth to a murderer's death, down to a murderer's grave in unconsecrated ground, without a feeling of pity for the little woman you see sitting be- false to him. She was about to marry side that dock.

To Mr. Hellmuth, Herbert tells the family way to him. Her proper place story of the accident. The legal gentle- is with that man. If it had been the man, on seeing the alleged confession in the press, withdraws from Herbert's defense. Yet Herbert earnestly aspossibilities are time, patience, more defense. Yet Herbert earnestly as- have been taunted sures him that the confession is a false to take a tainted one and the story of the accident a true one.

Taking the medical evidence, there is not a single doctor to take his story and credit it, even allowing for exag-geration. The skull tells the true story, so Herbert's account is false. Ordinary common sense must show that the skull's condition proclaims Herhert's story a fabrication

Two respectable working men are put in the box to give evidence that Joseph Sifton entered the barn on the fatal morning by climbing on the hayrack and through the open door. The crown seeks to cast aspersions on their reputations in order that the Morden gang may have their story upheld. These men saw Joseph Sifton on the morning of the tragedy. Both swear that Joseph Sifton had an axe on his shoulder, and that he entered the barn by the hayrack and open door, described by Bathurst, a crown witness. Why did they not call Mary McFarlane and Walter Herbert to disprove that Grimshaw and Going were past the house that morning?

THE DOCTORS' VIEWS. All the doctors agree that Herbert's story is wholly incredible. All the impacts they find on the skull are three. and from what they cannot positively say. If Edgar Morden has any that would be expected after the axe interest in the matter. James Morden had been used to strike repeated has absolutely nothing. Edgar, who blows on Joseph Sifton's head. Where was acting as he said, under the direcis the blood around the trap door or the injuries to deceased's nose, forehead or chin, if Herbert's story be true? The crown say that sand should be found in the hair after a fall of 24 feet. So it should, after a fall of eight feet, contended the defense. Mr. Johnston began to explain the abrasions over the mastoids. The judge interposed with the remark that he thought undue attention had been paid the abrasions. Mr. agreed, and passed on, after briefly telling the jury that an experiment showed that with the head in a position to produce the abrasions as claimed by the crown, the feet would necessarily be off the ladder.

IN CONCLUSION. In concluding, Mr. Johnston said: "I need not tell you that the question for you to decide is one of the gravest importance. You have to decide it upon evidence which I take is unexampled in the history of criminal trials in this country. When you yourself come to your last hour-and may it be many years before that happens-when you yourself are lying upon your own death beds, with the loving hands and the tender touch of mother, wife or daughter about you, with the genuine tears of sorrow in their eyes, waiting for the moment when you shall pass from time into eternity, let your judgment in this will be no harder by what you do to-So when you come to pass from this life to another, when you feel upon you the cold and clammy hand of your burden will not be rendered heavier by any remembrance that you have done Gerald Sifton any injustice. If you render a verdict of although you have nothing to do with the consequences, remember the extreme and once the fatal line has been passed, once the trap has been drawn, once the man drops from his last place on earth on the gallows, this case and all connected with it are past and you and I will perhaps have to bear as best we may the burden of that during the rest of our lives." It was about 6:10 p.m. when Mr. Johnston finished his address. During ! ronto, One.

The will was then in the possession of Crown Attorney Magee, who could not think of selling it and violating his duty. There was no possibility at that time of any money being made out of the will. Vill you please wipe that out of your minds.

Two men say they saw that man go to the barn with an axe on his shoulder. You are to be the judges of their reliability.
Gerald told Mrs. McFarlane that "If they are not married now, I will put it so that they will not be married to-day." What does that mean? You saw Mrs. McFarlane? Was she telling the truth, or was she lying? I think more than ever that the law was wise when it did not allow the wife to give evidence either for or against the husband. The woman's nature is such (and, thank God for it) that she will forgive and will do anything for the man she loves.

SIFTON'S VISIT TO HERBERT. Is there any possible doubt that Sif-ton came to Herbert that morning and got him to go with him, knowing that something awful was going to happen to Joseph Sifton, his father' There has been something said about the way Gerald handled the Was it left-handed or righthanded? You all know men who are right-handed and left-handed in others. Anythese wav. one sees could have been dealt by a person handling the axe either with the right or left hand.

Some doctors say the blood would spurt, but most say it might or might Some say that blood may or may not be found. Joseph Sifton is thrown out on his head. What accounts for the two pools of blood, eighteen inc apart? A man couldn't fall, making a pool of blood, and then move eighteen inches and make another pool of blood. After that man came down and was lying on the ground, he was moved and put in another position, so Herbert says. If the man was killed by a fall, how can you account for the two pools of blood?

JOSEPH SIFTON'S WOUNDS. As to the violence of the blows. We bring before you the foremost doctors | couch he was not suffering. Gerald of Toronto, and they tell you the wounds on the head are not compatible with a fall, but are consistent with blows. Taking all the medical testimony, we have grades of opinion ranging all the way from those who say the injuries could not be caused by a fall to two or three who could not conceive how they could be done by an axe. Between these two are those who agree that they might be done by either. The crown doctors said that taking the evidence of Herbert, in the light of his gestures describing the blows, the injuries found were perfectly consistent therewith. These are no such blows as "killing" blows. The man who was killing with the intent of explaining the death by accident would be careful to allow no signs of the weapons used to appear. All the doctors for the defense Take out the violence, and we have consistent with Herbert's injuries Dr. John Caven, for the destory." fense, said that the fracture on the side was not caused by the same impact which caused the wounds, and if thes be so, then the theory of a fall is disproved Is it not true that one of the doctors

The hay in the barn was not near as high as at the present time. Would anyone in his senses climb up to the beam, carrying the axe, to knock off the boards? I ask you, gentlemen, is

HERBERT'S CONFESSION. Why would Herbert make his confession at all if it was not true? I most emphatically deny that any pressure, direct or indirect, was brought to bear upon Herbert to obtain a confession. The first confession was first made to one Brock, a prosperous farmer in no possible way connected with the dens. It was Brock who brought Herbert to Morden's house, where he met High Constable McLoud, and made the confession to him. Counsel for the defense asked why Morden was not put in the box that he might be cross-examined as to what happened during the four or five hours on the night of Herbert's confession. Counsel had High Constable McLoud in the box, and did not ask him. Why Because counsel for the defense dared

Herbert and Gerald Sifton are the only two persons who know, outside of the Great Judge who knows all, what happened that morning at the barn. If they had struck together, what evidence could have been produced that it was not an accident? Herbert did not place himself within the power of the law until long after there was a chance of any money being made by anybody out of the case. The matter was then n the hands of Detective Murray Would any offer of money induce Her bert to plead guilty to such a crime What, then, would induce a man to so plead guilty if he were not moved by the consciousness of guilt?

James Morden is sneered at because he was afraid that Gerald would shoo him. Were there no grounds for his Gerald said to Mary McFarlane that he had a revolver for Edgar Moren if he tried to do anything to him. If one Morden, why not the other? THE POISON THEORY.

Work of Dodd's Kidney Pills Progres sing Rapidly in the Territories. Blairmore, Alberta, N. W. T., Sept. 0.—Special.—Dodd's Kidney Pills are the most useful and widely used medicine in the Northwest. They have produced more genuine results than any other remedy ever introduced here. They cure the common ailments, which can nearly all be traced to the kidneys, from a pimple to Bright's Disease. Walter H. A. Noble, of this place, is an example. His face was covered with pimples. He, of course, tried all sorts of remedies, but until he took Dodd's Kidney Pills for Backache the pimples remained. His blood was impure. The kidneys were not straining it.

On using Dodd's Kidney Pills for Backache, as everybody does in this district, the Backache not only left him, but the Pimples disappeared also, proving the cause of both complaints was the same—Kidney Disease.

SIFTON GASE GOES TO JURY.

him by the coat and hit him on the side of the ear.

There have been many theories as to what would be the effect of the blow-inflicted according to Herbert's state ments. One and all of the medical men say that if the blows were of the force and delivered in the manner de-scribed by Herbert, the skull would not be in the condition in which it was found at the post-mortem examination. The head would be battered in. Herbert speaks of every blow being struck with the side of the axe. If a man intended to cause immediate death and had an axe as an instrument to take a man's life, he would have struck him with the bole or the sharp edge. A man who is going to set up a theory of accident as causing death would think of striking a man either with and heard what he had to say. It is for you to say whether the statement is credible, or unbelievable.

Mr. Hellmuth was in the box and he Mr. Hellmuth was in the box and he said that he went to the prisoner's cell on July 26. It is important to bear in mind the dates. Mr. Hellmuth was there upon July 26 at the instance of the prisoner. If he did strike so and had no motive for striking, but did because of the command of the prisoner, then the prisoner is guilty. Herbert, he says, made a statement to him that he was innocent of the charge. The next morning there appeared in one of the daily papers here an alleged confession of Herbert's, which Mr. Hellmuth saw. Mr. Hellmuth at once went to him to ascertain what his attitude was, and he said to Mr. Hellmuth, "The statement I made to you yesterday was true, no matter what else is said." Just here we must pause and con-sider the attitude of the Mordens in this case. Edgar Morden, who is a cousin to James and Martin Morden, said that on the night prior to the death of Joseph Sifton, he (Sifton) was at Morden's house, and made a will, and according to the evidence allowed here, Edgar Morden admitted that he drew it. A civil jury found that it was a forged will, and although the question of that will was a collateral matter, as far as the guilt or innocence of this prisoner was concerned, it had nothing to do with it whatever. It showed that the Mordens, after a certain time, had conspired together to induce an offer by this prisoner for a will which at least Edgar Morden knew was a forgery.

James and Martin Morden heard of this will through Edgar Morden, commissioning them to approach the prisby him for the delivering up of the will or for its destruction. Martin Morden did try to get an offer, and at one time the prisoner did make an offer. He was willing to give $1,000 to be divided among them.

Herbert says that in pleading guilty he was acting on his own account. It would be impossible to believe a man who would say he was guilty of this offense if he were not, and when the only sentence that could be passed upon him would be one of death. No one would plead guilty to such a crime as that if he was not, unless some offer was made to him by those who are al-leged to have been the conspirators in this case. He says no offer was ever made. His uncle came to see him or July 25. When he went to Edgar Morden's house he told them he intended to carry out the intention he afterward expressed to Mr. Meredith. If you think Herbert guilty, then the strongest possible case is made out against the prisoner. If you believe Herbert's story untrue, then ask yourselves the question whether there is any other evidence upon which the crown can possibly ask for conviction. They rely upon that alone, and it is for you to say whether it is true or not. According to Herbert, when these blows had been inflicted by the prisoner, they threw the old man out the opening at the west side, and then went out and struck him three or four blows at the instance of the prisoner, to insure his death. There were two pools of blood found, one 18 inches from the other. Herbert says in order to give an air of accident to the killing, he was told to bring the bricks, which he placed near the head.

Mary McFarlane became solicitous as to the safety of the old man. She goes out and finds him lying injured. He is taken to the house, and the doctor sum-moned by Gerald. The doctor says he believes that Gerald was sincere in his sorrow at the bedside. One cannot understand why the order was given that the prisoner should not be left alone with his father. Prisoner could not accelerate the death except by the administration of poison. But the medical men say the sufferer could not swallow poison, and the analyst says no poison was found in the stomach. The doctor says the prisoner asked him if his father was suffering. The doctor replied that he was not. Then prisoner asked the doctor if he could not give something to relieve him, and then spoke of strychnia, and said, "If money is any object—" when the doctor stopped him. It is incomprehensible that the prisoner should make this offer. people do incomprehensible Yet doctor. There was only the suggestion. The doctor said in the box that he believed the death due to accident, yet did not believe so shortly after the accident, owing to rumors heard. The doctor spoke of an inquest to prisoner, and he replied, "Certainly,

Rev. Mr. Cooper says the prisoner to him and spoke came death certificate, and having threatened hold inquest in order to vent scandal and disgrace, he gave the doctor $1,000 in notes. Why should prisoner go to Rev. Mr. Cooper and tell this story? This is another of almost unaccountable circumstances in connection with the case. The only inference to be drawn is that Sifton entertained an apprehension of an inquest being held and the discovery of the conditions in the body would compromise him. After death and burial reports were circulated which were compromising to prisoner. Mrs. McFarlane says he came to her and asked her to say nothing of his remark to her that he would fix it so Joseph Sifton would not be married. According to Martin Morden's story, prisoner had said he could do it with a bottle of strychnine if not with the hav fork. What the threat, if any, made before Mrs. McFarlane?

In one of the interviews which Gerald Siften had with Dr. McNeil in the latter's house, prisoner told the doctor of the Morden will. The doctor says that on July 22 or 23, prisoner said he intended to offer Morden $500 for the The doctor suggested care and advised him to be sue for the will. Just to sum up in a word or two Walter Herbert is an accomplice, and although a jury may convict on evidence of an accomplice alone, the judge warns the jury that on the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice it is unsafe to convict, because, "Always the Best of Everything for the Least Money."

when a man gets in the box to clear himself, it is easy to shift guilt to shoulders other than his own. Therefore, there should be corroborative evidence in important particulars. Let us see what corroborative evidence we have. The fact that the prisoner went to James Morden and Martin Morden on the Friday night, and the statements made to Dr. McNeil, may afford and perhaps should afford corroborative evidence. I did not intend to deal with the medical evidence as to how this injury which caused the death of Joseph Sifton could be brought about. Most of the medical evidence was to this effect, that if the blows described by Herbert were inflicted as he says, then the skull tells a different tale. They tell you that the theory of the fall is more consistent with the condition of the skull than the story told by Herbert. That evidence is no consequence, and may be eliminated altogether from this inquiry. If Herbert struck that blow.

it was at the hand of the prisoner at the bar. Now, gentlemen of the jury, if you have any doubt in your mind as to guilt of the prisoner at the bar, he is entitled to the benefit of that doubt. Do not let it be a doubt, conjured up in your minds for the purpose of relieving the prisoner of the responsibility of the crime. If the evidence reaches you in such a way that you have no doubt in your minds as to his guilt—find that fact and your duty is done.

If you, on the other hand, from the character that has been given to Herbert, you think that he ought not to be believed, notwithstanding that Herbert has pleaded guilty to the charge, then say the prisoner at the bar is not Asked as to any objections they had to offer before the jury retired, Mr. Johnston said:

"I thought your lordship was going to mention to the jury that Dr. McNeil denies ever having received anything?" "Gentlemen of the jury," judge, "I have had my attention very properly directed to an omission. It will be fairly in your recollection that this story that the prisoner told to Rev. Mr. Cooper was about the notes. Dr. McNeil denies that he ever received a note or anything else." CASE GIVEN TO THE JURY. The case went to the jury at 11:45. The prisoner was not removed from the court at once, but remained in the dock until the noon adjournment. He bore with wonderful composure the or-deal of sitting under the eyes of the crowded court room while in an upper chamber twelve men weighed his life in the balance. Mrs. Sifton sat with bowed head all through the weary time

"DISCOURAGING"

Is the Word Descriptive of the Situation in South Africa, Though the Enemy Lost Heavily at Moedwill.

London, Oct. 3 .- "For months past, | known leader. Kemp's scouts picked up we have been told," says the Daily foreigners. The Boers have taken us at our word, and the results are certainly not en-

The chorus of dissatisfaction with the inertia of the government is daily gathering force. Winston Churchill, Botha's forces. It has reached Vryheid. M.P., speaking last night at Oldham, described the situation in South Africa as "serious and disquieting." He said the war could not be ended by proclamations or threats, but only by vigorous military operations.

ON THE DEFENSIVE. The Daily Mail, the Standard and the Daily Chronicle comment upon the fact the huge British army is seemingly only able to remain on the defensive. It is believed that the government at last recognizes the necessity of meeting the renewed Boer activity. Preparations are being made to replace Lord Kitchener's exhausted men by fresh drafts. An order has been issued rendering it impossible to obtain discharge by purchase from any of the army reserves, sections of which are being prepared for mobilization.

KITCHENER'S PROTEST. Lord Kitchener has sent home fresh batch of Imperial Yeomanry suffering from organic diseases unfitting them for life on the veldt, together with a strong protest against the waste of public time and money in enlisting such men.

SITUATION SERIOUS. There is further evidence of the seriousness of the situation in Cape Colony. The Cape premier, Sir Gordon Sprigg, has gone to Johannesburg to meet Lord Kitchener, probably on the subject of declaring martial law in Cape ports.

MOEDWILL. Moedwill, the scene of the attack by Commandant De Larey on Col. Kekwich's camps, is 75 miles west of Pretoria and 15 west of Rustenburg. As the wounded were being brought back to Rustenburg, it looks as though Moedwill, which is close to the Magatos Pass in the Magaliesberg range has been abandoned.

ENEMY 1,000 STRONG. The Boer reverse at Moedwill occurred Sept. 29. The Boers are reported to have been 1,996 strong. Lord Kitchener, in his dispatch, says the British repelled the atack with great vigor. After the close of the fighting Colonel Kekewich was slightly wounded in two places. He says that all ranks behaved extremely well. The wounded were taken to Rustenburg, half-way between Pretoria and Mafe-

PLUMER'S LOSS. The casualty list shows that in the fighting at Caledon River last Friday. Col. Plumer lost two officers killed and ten men killed and wounded. LORD KITCHENER'S LATEST

London, Oct. 2.—The war office has re-ceived the following dispatch from Lord Kitchener, dated Pretoria, today: "Delarey's night attack on the camp of Kekewich (who commanded the garrison at Kimberley during the siege) at Moedwill was pressed by the enemy, who were 1,000 strong, with great vigor. After two hours of close fighting the enemy was driven off. Our casualties, I regret to say, were severe. Of the officers one was killed and one so dangerously wounded that he has since died; eleven were severely wounded and three slightly. Of our men 31 were killed, 6 dangerously wounded, 42 severely wounded, and 28 slightly. The wounded have arrived at Rustenburg, and are being well cared for. Forty more remain to be accounted for. No details have been received.
"Col. Kekewich, who was slightly wounded twice, reports that all the ranks behaved extremely well. "The reports of the enemy's heavy loss at Itala and Prospect are confirmed. Two hundred and fifty Boers were killed and A later dispatch from Kitchener says that the two Royal Artillery guns which were captured by the Boers at Vlakfontein have been recovered A TRAITOR SHOT. Pretoria, Oct. 2.-Dr. Brocksman, who was lately convicted of treason, was shot this morning. Brocksman was a former partner of Dr. Krause, ex-gov-ernor of Johannesburg, recently arrested in London. Further arrests on treason charges have been made at Johannes-burg. Among the accused are Geologist Draper and Mine Manager Osterloh.

Greek Proprietor of Local Shoe Shine Parlor Figures in Interesting Romance.

Panage ke Lambrina Karapanagiotin, a young woman from Tripolis, Greece, passed through London a week ago yesterday on her way to Grand Rapids, where she became last Sunday the bride of Peter Smerlief, the Greek proprietor of a shoe - shining establishment here. They were married in company had offered $400 in settle- ment here. They were married in ment, which was refused. The case Grand Rapids last Sunday by a priest of the Greek Church, who came from Chicago Saturday evening to perform the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of "Ierean" Jimes Karapanagiotin, a priest of the Greek Church at Tripolis. The bride comes, in fact, from a family of priests for her grandfather on her father's side is now an active priest of the Greek Church at the age of 87 years.

The brother of Miss Karapanagiotin is a resident of Toronto. A few weeks ago he left for Paris and there met the bride, who had been taken there from Tripolis by her father. With her brother she returned to Toronto a fortnight ago, and then went on to Grand Rapids, arriving there last Wednesday. A peculiar circumstance in connection with the wedding is that the bride and groom had not seen each other until they met in Grand Rapids last Wednesday. The engagement had been arranged between the Smerliefs and the father of the bride by correspondence, and they had made an exchange of photographs. The photograph that was sent from Tripolis by father of Miss Karapanagiotin was the Cupid's dart that pierced the heart of Peter Smerlief, and made possible the wedding of last Sunday. Smerlief and his bride are residing in Grand Ra-

Speakers' Sore Throat Troubles. From experience public speakers and singers know how useless and sickening are cough mixtures, lozenges and sargles for an irritable or sore throat, and state that the most satisfactory remedy is Catarrhozone, the advantage of which is that it reaches every portion of the respiratory organs, and acts directly and quickly on the affected parts. The fragrant vapor of Catarrhozone is inhaled, and its healing, soothing influence is felt immediately. It relieves congestion and inflammation, heals sore, irritated spots, kills germ life, and absolutely prevents catarrh or bronchitis. Sir Thomas Lipton was out early, and rubbed his hands with glee when he came on deck on the Erin. "This what we want," he said. "If it blows we will have a good race. The Shamrack should do well today. Morgan says the Columbia wants wind, but so do we. If the breeze keeps up we will have a fair test of the two boats." And at that hour it looked as if his desire for "six inches of water on the Shamrock's lee rail," was to be fulfilled.

At 9:25 the wind was still holding fresh and steady, the official gauge at Sandy Hook giving the velocity at 24 miles an hour. Should it hold there was every prospect that the race would be sailed in less than 3½ hours. Following is the story of the race by

WYOMING YOUTH PUT OUT GAS WITH WATER

At a Chicago Hotel and Came Near Effecting His Own Quietus

Chicago, Oct. 3.-Robert McCauslan didn't use the thumbscrew to turn out the gas in his room at the Le Grand Hotel. He blew 30 cubic feet of Canadian breath at it. It dodged to one side and said, "Come again." He climbed upon a chair and expectorated down upon the saucy blaze. It sputtered back at him like a thing at bay. He hung his shee over it until his room smelled like a tannery. It wouldn't be "shooed" out. Then he tossed g whole basin of water on it and it surrendered. McCauslin crawled into bed with Elsie laughed; and Lord Hammond, who was by this time in a very good temper, joined in loudly. Just then the library door swung back, and there swept into the room the tall, slenger, graceful Pauline Bracegirdle.

Pauline Bracegirdle.

"How long has she been listening at the door, I wonder?" thought Lord Hammond. "And how much has she heard?" Pauline still looked ill and pale, but her dress was perfect. It was along, flowing gown of black velvet, with a high ruffle around her siender throat—a ribbon of palest blue fastened by a brooch of pearis; there was also a ribbon of pale blue confining the flaxen platts which

He had liked to think the other fellows were "guils," and that she had admitted him behind those other scenes where she posed to society as an enthusiast after the kind of Sarah Siddons. Besides all this there was the element

Besides all this there was the element of danger in the fierce jealousy of the unfortunate Paul Lafonte, who, Lord Hammond felt, would not have hesitated to run a stiletto into any man for whose sake Pauline abandoned him.

Altogether, this secret flirtation with liss Bracegirdle had filled up vacant hours delightfully until this curly-headed.

hours delightfully, until this curly-headed school girl had come to spend the holidays at Charteris.
"Yes, he never looked at me as he is looking at her new," said Miss Brace-girdle to herself.

She was on tiptoe, apparently seeking some book which she could not find. Elsie glanced towards her, and her bright eyes flashed. Lord Hammond saw the glance and wondered at it. No suspicion that Miss Bracegirdle would dare to complain of his first tipont. that Miss Bracegirdie would dare to complain of his firtation with Elsie to the countess entered his head. He fancied he knew a great deal about the fair sex, but in reality he had only the most su-perficial acquaintance with feminine dubook you want, Miss Bracegirdle?" he asked, presently.

She turned round and shot a glance at him from between he half-closed lids; the blue gleaming of the bautiful eyes might have meant anything from merri-might have meant anything from merriment to murder.

"I shall have to search for it, my lord. Perhaps you will help me?"

"No, by George," returned the young lord, rudely. "I'm going for a walk with a lot of people. We shall hunt tomorrow."

"Oh, yes! and I hope you will give me a good mount. You know I learned to ride at the Paris riding school."

"And Lafonte," said Lord Hammond; he shall have a mount, too. I declare it is an awful shame to see the poor boy you say you shall marry chained to my mother's betdoir every day, writing rubishing letters, while you go all over the ishing letters, while you go all over the country from morning until night. I wouldn't stand it if I were in his place."

Pauline's face grew hot and crimson with annoyance. Was not the game utterly and completely lost? Had not this remarkable young lord told her—or as good as told her—to confine her society to the man whom she professed to be about to marry, and not to inflict it upon him?

about to marry, and not to infilet it upon him?

It was so, in fact, for that week, at least; Lord Hammond was thoroughly tired of her. But Payline's daring was stupendous, her will was iron, her ambition was of the "vasiting sort;" and, besides all this, she leved Lord Hammond. She hastily took down a book from the shelf—some book, any book—she did not know which—and she went from the room smiling a hard smile, pretending to laugh, but there was in her heart a deep resolve—Elsie Csrew should leave the house within the week!

Elsie, attired in walking costume, set out with a joyous young party, who had resolved, as the day was so bitterly cold, to warm themselves for once by exercise. In that rich house, where carriage drives could be had any hour for the ordering, it became a pleasing novelty for the young and strong to walk now and then; thus a large, gay company set off in twos and three.

Lord Hammond devoted himself to Elsie in an open manner. Lady Marjorie, with her infatuated ensign, looked on and laughed.

"Hammond will devote himself to the very person you fancy he might care the least for," she said, apologetically, to Ellen Littlewood, who watched the pair with a scew!

"Hammond falls in love every week: it's the least use to take any notice of him." continued Marjori it's the least use to take any notice of him," continued Marjori.

Ellen Littlewood constant herself with the curate; and Lady Ro awood, for the time, monopolized the apparently devoted attention of Basil Byrne. Little Miss Ferrers led Paul Lafonte by the hand, chattering to him in French, and telling him tales about what she and her brothers did when they were in the Black Forest last year. Paul's great eyes shone; he liked children, he liked walking in the frost-bound English lanes. The child Conny amused him. Pauline had sent word to him that she was too ill to see

That girl will tell the countess that, and word to him that she was too ill to see him or anyone.

While the open-air party walked on brisk, loud, cheerful, through the lanes, Pauline sat close to her fire in her own room; the door was locked, and she was writing a long explanatory letter in French; now and anon she would pause and look at the fire; sometimes she spoke aloud.

CHAPTER ZVI.

"I have thought of everything," said Pauline to herself, "of all ways of getting this Elsie out of the house. If one could kill her! Oh! but one can't. No, no; those things are done in novels, but in real life itsis no more to be done than it is to upset a government with a party cry, or burn a house like this about their ears. I have acted like an idiot in telling that old woman that I overheard her som in the red room making love to that girl, and making up stories of what she had not said. I thought she would have had her out of the house within twenty-four hours without telling him indeed, I know she never mentioned these things to him; that she would these things to him; that she would the him think that she ever listened to tales about him; but I did not imagine that she would tell that girl. I though that, and she would tell that girl. I though that, and how in the world was I to know that the wretched girl was in the red room and heard flammond making love to me?

That girl will tell the countess that, and the countess, ind nil that she would then below to tell him; but I did not imagine that she would the management, and how do I know that we ever then the countess, ind then he will blage out and tell him; but she must be got rid of! Any man can produce a total eclipse of the sun, so far as he himself is concerned, by holding a dollar close to his eye. The total eclipse of health is often produced in much the same way, by letting the dollar shut out from view all other things and interests.

A great many people pay for wealth with health and admit at last that they have made a poor bargain. In the chase of the dollar people are too eager to take time to eat regularly or choose proper food, the stomach becomes disordered or diseased, the food eaten ceases to nourish, and physical breakdown comes. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition and so enables the strengthening of the body, in the only way by which strength can be obtained, by food properly digested and perfectly assimilated. Episcopal Conference at San Francisco-500 Clergymen and 2,500 Laymen Will Attend.

San Francisco, Sept. 2.-The triennial convention of Episcopal bishops. clergy and laity was inaugurated at 7:30 a.m., with the celebration of the Holy Communion in the local Episcopal Churches. At 11 a.m. the convention was formally opened at Trinity Church. Seventy-five bishops assembled in the guild room of the church and put on their robes. They then formed in procession and marched up will say that Phillippe Boissonneault, Bush street to the main entrance of the church, continuing up the center aisle. The procession was headed by Rev. F. W. Clampett, rector of Trinity Church. The choir sang the processional hymn, while the bishops moved along, and the introit of the service was intoned. Communion followed the preparatory prayers, and the religious offices concluded with the re-cessional. The convocation service was preached by Bishop Morris, of Oregon, the senior attending bishop. Prominent among the delegates are J. Pierpont Morgan, Bishop Potter and a party of eastern bishops and laymen, the guests of Mr. Morgan. The convention promises to be the most notable since the original convention, 112 years ago. Among questions to be considered are the final acceptance of the constitution drafted by the convention at Washington in 1898, the special report on the canon of marriage and divorce, as understood

ELEVEN YEARS A CLOSE PRISONER

Story of a Quebec Man's Trial and His Long Unearned Punishment.

His Recent Marvelous Escape by the Aid of Dodd's Kidney Pills - His Gratitude to the Help That Saved Him-Six Boxes Completely Restored Him to Health.

St. Patrice, Lotbiniere, Quebec, Oct. 2.—Special.—A sad story of unjust imprisonment is that told by Phillippe Boissonneault, of this place. His case was worse than that of the ordinary prisoner, for his bonds were those of pain and disease. For eleven years they held him, a hopeless victim, chained, tortured, a slave to Kidney Disease.

Who is there in the world that thinks man was intended to suffer, that he merits his fate, that he deserves the afflictions disease put on were put here to be happy, to be healthy, and free from pain. Nobody will say that Phillippe Poi him? Surely, no one hinks that. of St. Patrice, deserved his long punishment, and nobody but will rejoice to learn that through the aid of a wonderful medicine Dodd's Kidney Pills-he has escaped.

Dodd's Kidney Pills, the remedy that proved such a boon, have made a reputation all over the world in curing of diseases of and arising from Kidneys. Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Backache, Bladder and Urinary Troubles, Women's Disorders, Dropsy, Nervous-ness and Blood Impurities all come within the scope of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and Dodd's Kidney Pills have testimovals for the cure of all of them. Phillippe Boissonneault's case was the common form of Kidney Dis-

"For eleven years I have suffered untold agony with Backache which crippled me as though I were barred and shackled. I dwindled in weight to a mere shadow. I have taken all by the Episcopal Church, and the sorts of remedies, nothing doing me any good. I read in Dodd's Almanac what was recommended for the Kidneys. I decided to try them and sent for six boxes, though without confidence, but today I am completely cured and thank Dodd's Kidney Pills

-The condition of Miss Elizabeth L. Scates, the Middlesex lady whose skull was fractured in a collision with a wheelman Tuesday night in Detroit, was some better last night and the Harper Hospital authorities believe that she may recover.

-Mr. A. M. Hunt, of Scottsville, held a sale of his farm stock on Tuesday, which was one of the most successful sales held in Westminster township in years. A very large crowd attended and the prices realized were exceptionally good. Fat hogs brought $12 25 each. A brood sow sold for $40. Firteen cows averaged $41. Horses brought very favorable prices. The sale total-ed over $1,800. The residents of Westminster lose one of their most enthusiastic workers in Mr. Hunt, who is probably known better than any other farmer in the township through his successful work in the auctioneer business. As a farmer, Mr. Hunt has been enterprising, adopting all the many inventions brought out in aid of farm work. In leaving Scottsville and Lambeth, the residents will miss him. Society, church or concert work was great pleasure for him, and he was assisted n many cases by Mrs. Hunt. Mr. Hunt takes up his residence in South London at 21 Edward street, where he has built a modern house. He will continue his auctioneer work, but has rented his farm. A SPUR LINE.

AN IMPROVED SERVICE. The L. E. and D. R. R. have increased the efficiency of their traveling service by the addition of new passenger coaches. A noteworthy feature in connection with the improvements is the new Pullman palace day car, which thence to Richmond by way of Dufgreatly increases the comfort of tra- ferin avenue; the suggestion that Mr. vel. The windows of the new coach Simeon Mason, who was engineer on are nearly square, thus affording a better view of the country along the prince of Wales toured Canada, be presented to the duke; and the line; and in addition to the ordinary dark-colored blinds, they are handsomely draped with damask curtains. The effect of the whole interior is very pleasing. At each end are compartments in which are comfortably upholstered seats, where a quiet chat or a smoke may be enjoyed. There is also a smoking-car attached, which, being at one time a regular passenger coach, possesses what is unusual for a smoker—seats upholstered in plush. The new coach is furnished with the patent Gould vestibule. The L. E. and D. R. R. Company, as the instance cited goes to prove, are making every effort to meet the demands of the traveling public, and a ride over the road in one of cessary to show how successful the company have been in this respect. With the completion and improvement of the new portion between Ridgetown and St. Thomas, the usefulness of the oad has been materially extended, and the traveling public may depend upon a literal carrying out of the new time-table, which came into effect on the 1st of October. St. Thomas, Ont., Oct. 3.—Dr. Truman W. Duncombe, one of the most prominent physicians in St. Thomas, dropped dead in his office about ten o'clock last night. For the past few weeks the doctor had been complaintened for incomplaintened to be a serious ing of feeling unwell, but no serious results were anticipated. He had been attending to his duties all day, and about 10 o'clock went downstairs to go to bed. He came downstairs to the lad in charge of the office and asked for his keys. As soon as the doctor asked for them he said, "Oh, my heart," and fell ever to the floor. Doctors were and fell over to the floor. Doctors were hurriedly summoned, but it was impossible to do anything to relieve him. Death was due to heart trouble. Dr. Duncombe had resided in St. Thomas for 18 years, coming here from Waterford. He was a prominent Liberal, and was well known throughout the All Mission was held at the residence western section of Ontario. TORONTO DAY

At the Pan-American—A New Canadian Flag Floats Near the Temple of Music.

Buffalo, Oct. 3. — Today — Toronto Day, Nebraska Day and Floral Day—is filled as full of special events,crowding closely upon each hour, as was last Saturday (Railroad Day). Nebraska took possession of the Temple of Music at 11 o'clock this morning, and a goodly crowd listened to the sweet voices of her daughters and the silver-tongued eloquence of her sons.

From the flagstaff in the West Esplanade, almost directly in front of the Temple of Music, there floated to-day a bright new Canadian flag. Torontonians have arranged no special programme, but will meet in the Temple of Music this afternoon and hold impressive exercises. Music will be given by the 74th Regiment Band.
The great floral parade at 3 o'clock will be a spectacular feature. Tonight the fireworks will be of a special carnival nature. Among the new and novel devices will be pictures of the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall in lines of fire 'Neptune and His Charlot," "Pat and His Earrow" and "The Prize Fight," the latter especially being a new design of Pain's living fireworks. The "Spirit of Niagara" will also be shown in fire.

wife came to board with us. We already had Miss G., who was at that time thin and yellow and considerably out of health. The first morning the new boarders came to the table as guests, the young lady remarked as she set her cup down, 'This is coffee!' while the doctor added, 'Not at all like the poor requested to have a regiment at the coffee they have been giving us at the station and a band in the station hotel. I smiled behind my napkin and asked if either of them ever used Postum Food Coffee. The doctor said he had tasted it, but it was weak, miserable stuff. Miss G. had heard of it and wished she could try it. "I said nothing, but at the end of three months, when Miss G. was ready to leave us for a new field of labor, said: 'I have been giving you Postum Food Coffee all the time you have been here.' 'What, is that coffee, Postum?' she said. I remarked that I had noticed with great pleasure, he artists with the party, and, according daily gain in health, and now that she was leaving us after only three months at our table, she had rosy senting to each a copy of "Illustrated London"; and to recommend to the city council that after this occasion, it cheeks and a plump figure, which was all the argument anyone needed to procure suitable robes of office for the prove the fact that she had been well cared for, and the reason for her gain The following matters were left to in health was the use of Postum be considered again in committee: The Food Coffee, for no other change had names of those to be presented to the been made of any account, in her John Carling, Mr. C.
