JUMPED 80 FEET

St. Thomas Youth Sprang off a Train in the Dark—Arm and Legs Broken and May Die.

St. Thomas, July 3.—In the darkness of last night's thunderstorm, a 17-year-old lad who was riding on a Lake Erie & D. R. R. freight train from Pinafore Park to the city jumped from the top of the car to escape the brakeman while crossing a high bridge, and alighted 80 feet below the track in Kettle Creek ravine, breaking his arms and both legs. In the darkness he thought the train was on solid ground. The boy lay for an hour in the pelting rain and was unconscious when found. His recovery is doubtful.

Claude, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph McCubbin, Bedford street, died last night from pneumonia. The little fellow was sick for only four days. The death is particularly sad as his twin sister died only last Saturday evening. Mr. and Mrs. McCubbin have the sincere sympathy of a large circle of friends in their double bereavement. The funeral will take place this afternoon at the Maple Leaf Cemetery. Rev. Mr. George will officiate.

"CORONATION CONTINGENT"

Entertained by the Lord Mayor Laurier's Plans—Colonial Commercial Agencies.

London, July 3.—The members of the Canadian coronation contingent left London this morning for Liverpool, where they embark on the Allan Liner Tunisian in the afternoon for Montreal. The adjutant-general conveyed to the troops the entire satisfaction of Her Majesty the Queen, H. R. H. the Prince of Wales and the Commander-in-Chief, Lord Roberts, at the appearance and cordial bearing of the men on all occasions. An account of the review was reported to His Majesty the King, who also desired to make known to his loyal colonial troops that from his sick room he heard with gratification the expressions of welcome from his people to their loyal comrades. The departure of the Canadians is a disappointment to the general British public, who have seen far too little of them. The return of the troops is explained by the business engagements of many members of the contingent. The soldiers were accorded an enthusiastic reception at Liverpool this afternoon, and were entertained at luncheon by the Lord Mayor in the Town Hall. At six o'clock this evening the Tunisian pulled out into the Mersey with the Canadian coronation contingent on board, homeward bound.

THE CANADIAN PREMIER.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier will probably visit Paris before returning to Canada. He has been invited to a banquet tendered by French politicians, and this invitation he may accept. The Temps, of Paris, predicts the failure of the Imperial conference. It regards as dangerous the experiment of a Zollverein, a federation or even a permanent council.

COMMERCIAL AGENTS.

New Zealand has determined to appoint commercial agents in Britain and other parts of Europe and also in South Africa. The opinion prevails among Canadians here that Canadian appointments should not be politicians or men selected on account of political pull, but experienced business men, thoroughly posted on all branches of Canadian industry.

ANGLO-CANADIAN NOTES.

Lieut. Turner, who was thrown from his horse at the Queen's review had a narrow escape, but is now recovered and sails on the Tunisian tomorrow.

The Canadian mounted men were much chagrined because so few of them are allowed to appear on horseback.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier was invited to Baroness Burdett-Coutt's garden party today.

The leading theatres are arranging special performances in honor of the Premier. George Alexander the actor-manager, is entertaining them on Saturday with Paolo Francesca.

Sir Frederick Borden is spending the day in bed suffering from fatigue. It is generally believed that Hon. Mr. Felling has been offered and declined knighthood in recognition of his share in the Canadian preferential tariff.

After the close of the Colonial Premier's conference in London, says the Paris correspondent of the Times, a banquet will be given in Paris by French politicians to Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

DR. G. T. MCKEOUGH REPLIES TO THE PLANET.

Lucid and Logical Statement Concerning Expenditures and Estimates—Aldermen Accused of Hysterics and Grandstand Plays—Comparative Record of Rates.

PRINCIPALS MAY SECURE INCREASED SALARIES.

Cowan's Comment on McKeough School Condemned—Payne School Property Sold for $1,400 to Mr. Tillson—Trustee Cornish Vigorously Opposes the Transaction.

Judging from the feeling as shown by the speeches made at the School Board meeting last night, the Trustees have no more love for the Aldermen than the Aldermen have for the Trustees.

The whole trouble has arisen over the high tax rate this year, and the School Board estimates, which are $2,000 more than last year. The Council can't see why the School are not able to keep down their expenditures, and the Board contend that they have figured it down to as small a sum as possible. Then, also, some of the Aldermen took occasion to score the Board.

The members of the Board were more than a little annoyed at the remarks made, and took occasion to express their views on the matter. During the meeting Dr. McKeough said:—

"From the report of the last Council proceedings one would almost believe that certain members of that body have gone into hysterics, but I believe that those who read it have realized that it is only a bluster and a case of grandstand methods and spectacular gallery proclivities. They are certainly not sincere in their remarks or they would have criticised the expenditure in detail, and enquired into the reason of this expenditure. They have abused us for selling property, which, if it were not sold, would raise our estimates $2,000 more. They do not seem to have any courage enough to assume the responsibility of what I believe to be an unavoidably high tax rate. They dealt with the matter in rather a contemptible and abusive manner, and seemed to be looking for shelter, as it were."

"On the other hand, The Planet came out the same day with an able, judicious and argumentative editorial on the city finances. Of course, it scored the Board, but we are not ashamed of honest criticism. I have been told that the Banner had something in about it the day after, but I have not read it. I do not regret my vote on the sale of the Queen street property. I did it conscientiously and I believe we made a good sale. There is not another man in Chatham who would give as much money for that property, and we need the money very much. The building is useless except as a storeroom. There is not a more unsanitary building in Chatham. All of the measles, smallpox, etc., that occurred in South Chatham have been attributed to that school."

"It would possibly have been more judicious if we had advertised the property for sale; but if we had we would have lost the sale with Gray's. Three months ago we got a valuation on the property and advertised it, and we had no offer for it."

"We have made three sales of property. The one for $200 was criticised very severely by the Council. After selling it the Council collected $108 back taxes, which we paid to avoid a law suit. That is one little item in our estimates. And I may say that had we given away that site ten years ago we would have been $150 ahead."

REPLIES TO THE PLANET.

The Planet asked some pertinent questions in its editorial on Wednesday, and as I am the only representative of the Finance committee here, I will endeavor to answer them. The first was—Why are the estimates this year $2,000 more than last? Well, it is the old story. In 1900 the estimates were $13,600; in 1901, $12,000, and this year, $14,000. Last year the estimates were too small. In saying this I wish to cast no reflections on Mr. Johnston, the chairman of the committee that year. He was one of the most valued members on our

"I have very little to say, still as the mover of the motion to sell this property to the Gray's for $2,000, I feel like the Doctor in not having the remarks of the Aldermen go unchallenged. It is all very well for the Councilors to make grandstand plays. Mr. Cowan said that no doubt the $2,000 would be used to improve the sanitary condition of McKeough school. If Ald. Cowan would take the trouble to visit the school instead of making foolish remarks he would soon see how much the improvement is necessary. I wonder that the Health Board has not condemned it long ago. I do not approve of any such talk from the members of the Council. We are quite able to run our own business. There are just as many good, intelligent men in the School Board as there are in the Council. The Mayor said that the people would have to look around next year for men for the School Board. I am not ashamed of my vote on this question."

Mr. Paxton—I am sorry I was not here when this matter for disposing of the property came up. I was accused of being afraid to come. If I had been here I would surely have voted for it.

The meeting last night was called for the purpose of passing by-laws. The members present were Messrs. Bensen, chairman; Robertson, McKeough, Paxton, Cornish, Heyward and McCorvie.

A by-law was read for the sale of

FRIDAY, JULY 4.

DR. McKEOUGH'S STATEMENT.

As was to have been anticipated, the members of the Public School Board did not permit the comments of certain of the City Council at their recent meeting to pass unchallenged.

To the charge of unwarranted extravagance, preferred by the aldermen, Dr. Geo. T. McKeough, representing the Finance Committee of the Board, made an extensive and lucid response last evening.

Dr. McKeough had several kind things to say concerning the comments—both critical and complimentary—of this journal upon the issue. His references are appreciated by The Planet. And, without indulging in the emptiness of a mutual admiration interchange, it must be pointed out that Dr. McKeough's straightforward, explicit and logical statement concerning the finances and expenditures of the Board will carry weight and inspire confidence.

It is evident, from the prompt and thoughtful manner in which the questions suggested by this journal were met and answered, that the School Board is prepared to court any examination of their financial details by the ratepayers, even to the minutest details. It is equally evident that all the expenditures have been made by the trustees, to the best of their ability, with the view to properly advancing the local educational interests and, at the same time, safe-guarding the pockets of the people.

Whatever may be said concerning the sale of the Queen street school and site, it certainly appears that there was no justification for the somewhat bitter attack in undefined generalities upon the Board's expenditure and the attempt to hold the trustees responsible for the record. In response thereto, Dr. McKeough produced facts and figures and submitted them in a frank and businesslike way. They are entitled to a careful perusal by the ratepayers.

The comparative statement with the school rates in other towns and cities goes to show that the Chatham Board's financing has been conducted in a manner alike enterprising and economical. As has been already pointed out, The Planet believes with many other ratepayers—notwithstanding the straightforward and argumentative defence of Dr. McKeough—that a mistake was made in the hurried sacrifice sale of the location alluded to. But that has nothing whatever to do with the conduct of the expenditures, which, the explanation last night would show, has been careful, economical, judicious and businesslike—calculated to earn appreciation and confidence from the public.

A TRUE PATRIOTISM

In his declaration of the Conservative policy in our attitude towards the mother land, Mr. R. L. Borden said: "I suppose that while we settle these matters ourselves, it would be no harm to discuss them at least with the mother country. I for one will always maintain the utmost rights of Canadians to their own self-government. I will always maintain that Canada must settle for herself what her contribution towards the defence of the Empire shall be; but I do not think that it necessarily follows from that, that Canada should slay the mother country in the face when the mother country proposes in a courteous manner to discuss this subject with her. I say that I believe in dealing with the defence of the Empire in a straightforward way. I do not believe in dealing with it by adopting a preferential tariff which will shut up mills in Canada and give increased profits and outputs to some men in Yorkshire. That is not the way to contribute to the defence of the Empire. We may have our differences about this matter; but we can settle them in our own way, according to the principles of constitutional Government that prevail in this country, and every man in Canada is perfectly entitled to express his views on the matter either in Parliament or outside of it. But when we once settle the question to our own satisfaction, let us approach the mother country in regard to it in a courteous manner; and if we do propose to contribute to the defence of the Empire, let us do it in a straightforward, manly way, and not, as is suggested on the other side of the House, by granting a preference and ruining our own industries, because we have not contributed our proper share towards the defence of the Empire."

"TOO BAD."

While it has often been said that a portion of the United States press rejoices in anything that can be construed as damaging or derogatory to Great Britain, it is gratifying to notice that when anything particularly sorrowful strikes the British nation a feeling of sympathy is shown in almost every case. The illness of the King has produced expressions of sympathy from all quarters of the civilized world, and especially in the neighboring Republic, The Brooklyn Eagle contributes this tribute of sympathy in a well written editorial:

A profound scholar and an unskilled laborer was told here at the same time of the stroke of the King. Both instantly said, "Too bad!" The words summed up all the editorials, all the telegrams, and all the prayers which the fact has drawn out. The universal pity spoke in these words. Beyond them, expression was art.

Plus horror and indignation, the same was the case when Lincoln, Garfield, McKinley, Carnot, the Emperor of Austria, the Czar and Humbert were assassinated: "Too bad," the sorrow of it, the shock of it, the reversal of hope, the shut off from usefulness and life and love, "Too bad!"

In the case of the King this was especially so. He had patiently waited for the call of duty for sixty years. He had far more than half that time assumed many of the ceremonial and social obligations of the Queen. A man among men, he had lived in the public eye, with all of the restrictions and none of the powers of royalty on him.

He mounted the throne with the respect and admiration of the people and he magnified his obligation and intention, as a constitutional King, to follow in the footsteps of his illustrious mother. At the end of the year of more than conventional mourning, he was ready to be crowned as his predecessors had been, to put upon his reign the stamp of dignity and splendor, amid the world's salutation, that had been put on theirs. In almost the very act of coronation, for which spectacle and celebration had been prepared on a scale surpassing precedent, he was stretched under the surgeon's knife, to save, if might be, his life at all. The pity of it, the irony of it "Too bad!"

Still, there is a fine side to it all. The sorrow of a people is more distinguished than their exclamations. Death or disease, before the King was stricken, more than once had made his household a partner in his empire, with every household in his empire, and on Tuesday pain made him more than a King, made him a brother of all his people. In exclamations there may be thrift, fawning or hyperbole. In tears there is none. Under the wand of sorrow even enmity converts to sympathy and hate to tenderness transmutes. Tragedy is the case of peasant or prince, or in hut or palace, is a factor that makes for humanity and works toward love. The King of England as a sufferer may be said to have won a tribute from mankind; that, like mercy, becomes the throne monarch better than his crown.

THE LITTLE MINSTREL.

His hands are soiled, his throat is hoarse, His face is streaked with dirt and thin, And many a slip is in the air He plays upon his violin; A sadness dwells within his eyes, And scowls are ragged on his feet, And scowls are ragged on his feet, The little minstrel in the street. There by the curb he plays away Where flakes float past and winds blow chill, And maybe, as the critics say, He lacks the tortured artist's skill— But now and then a little strain Played faultlessly and soft and sweet Floats up from where he stands out there, The little minstrel in the street. Say, ragged little minstrel, why Must people listen but to hear The false note, ever passing by The strain that rises soft and clear Oh, it were well with us if we Might in our own ways sound the sweet And faultless notes as oft as he— The little minstrel in the street. —S. E. Kiser.

CHATHAM TOWNSHIP COUNCIL.

The council of the Township of Chatham met at the Robinson Hall in the town of Wallaceburg on Tuesday, the 17th day of June, 1902, to consider the engineer's report on the Brown drain in Running Creek, and the transacting of general business pursuant to adjournment and the notice in that behalf.

The members were all present and the minutes of the last meeting were read and approved of and signed by the clerk.

A large number of the ratepayers on the Running Creek were present and the engineer's report on the construction of a drain in said creek was read, also a letter from the manager of the Chatham Dredging Co. offering to do all the work for $4,000. A great deal of discussion was indulged in regarding the matter. It was finally decided that the work be abandoned and a written request signed by a large majority of the petitioners to that effect was presented to the council; also that their names be written down from the petition.

General business was then proceeded with.

A petition was read from ratepayers in the vicinity of Brown's church, stating the road between the boundary between lot No. A and 1 in the north gore is in a bad condition, and asking that the travelled portion of the said road be improved and widened; also that the bridge over Running Creek, near the said point be put in a safe condition. An agreement was made with Mr. James Baurin to move his house in order to widen the said road. The same was written and signed by Mr. Daurin and the clerk, and accepted by the council.

Councillor Wm. George submitted a report to the effect that he met and consulted with the ratepayers of school section No. 17 with the view of opening a road between lots 18 and 19 from the River north; Mr. Booth offers to give the land for a road two rods wide from the River to the 3rd concession in lieu of the Dredge ditch in Otter Creek, which will cost about $100. The section offers to construct a suitable fence on each side of the road.

Report adopted, but no action taken.

Henry Winter was present and submitted a surveyor's plan of part of lot 11 in the 1st concession west of the River, which has been purchased by the Wallaceburg Sugar Company and has been subdivided into building lots by them, and asking the consent of the council that the streets in the said survey be 56 feet instead of 66 feet wide.

Moved by Tompkins and Tompkins, that the assent of this Council is hereby given to have the streets in a surveyed plan made into subdivisions for building purposes, made by H. Winters, Esq., O. L. S., of the part of lot 11, Con. 1, west of the River Sydney, to be 56 feet wide, as is already scribbled in a plan herein submitted.—Carried.

Moved by Tompkins and George, that the request of the Chatham Mill Co. to have Chaterine street, in Taylor's survey, closed up, be complied with, and the clerk is hereby instructed to attend to the necessary statutory proceeding in connection with the matter, the posting of notices, preparing of by-law, etc.—Carried.

Moved by George and Wickens, that the reserve consult with Mr. Matthew Wilson and procure his written opinion in regard to the best mode of raising the township's portion for the construction of a draw steel bridge

HANDICAPPED.

The man who started to run a race in chains and fetters would be visibly handicapped. No one would expect him to succeed. The man who runs the race of life when his digestive and nutritive organs are diseased is equally handicapped.

In the one case his strength is over-weighted, in the other it is under-weighted. Success demands above all else a sound stomach.

Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures all diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition.

When this is done food is perfectly digested and assimilated and the body receives strength in the only way in which strength can be given—by the nutrition derived from digested and assimilated food.

"The praise I would like to give your 'Golden Medical Discovery' I cannot utter in words or describe with pen," writes James H. Ambrose, Esq., of 1235 1/2 Street, Huntington, N. Y.

"I was taken with what our physicians here said was indigestion, and I got the best relief here and found no relief. I wrote you and I did so, and you then advised me to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I took three bottles and I felt so good that I stopped eating. I have no symptoms of gastric trouble or indigestion now."

Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." There is nothing "just as good."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, sent free on receipt of stamps addressed to the publisher, and mailed only. Send 31 one-cent stamps for the book in paper covers, or 50 stamps for the cloth-bound volume. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

across the river at Tupperville.—Carried.

Moved by Tompkins and Tompkins, that the by-law confirming the appointment of John Cormode as commissioner of the 4th Con. drain be finally passed, and all by-laws or parts of by-laws inconsistent with the same are hereby repealed.—Carried.

Moved by Wickens and George, that the clerk advertise in the Toronto Globe and Mail and Empire newspapers for tenders for a steel bridge at Tupperville, said tenders to be received not later than the 10th day of July at 12 o'clock a. m.—Carried.

Moved by Tompkins and George, that persons who provided polling booths for Ontario elections be paid $1 each.—Carried.

A number of accounts were ordered to be paid. A. McARTHUR, Clerk.

RALEIGH COUNCIL.

The above council met pursuant to adjournment, on the 27th day of June, 1902, with all members present.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

A notice was received from Lewis & C. A. Williams and heirs to take possession of the land for the construction of a bridge over the Raleigh Plains drain, at the 3rd con. road, north of the 18th and 19th side road across lots 18, 17 and 16 in the 5th con. to the 4th concession road, thence westerly to the government drain.

A petition was received from H. and Jas. Stover to repair the Towl drain, from the 9th Con. road to the Moody drain.

A petition was received from A. Reams and others to change the boundaries of S. S. No. 1, Raleigh and Tilbury, but was received too late to be acted upon this year.

The account of the fence viewers, $9 re the line fence between F. Hughson and C. Williamson, was ordered paid and charged to lands.

Wheeler De Clude informed the council that the sidewalk along the Burns drain was almost impassable and needed leveling down at once. Also that the road to the beach at Burns side road was in need of some repairs.

Mr. Yott of Merlin, complained of not having any outlet for the water of property, the tile drain on the north side of Aberdeen St., is apparently blocked up and wanted it opened or an outlet across the street to the drain on the south side.

Wm. Simpson, one of the directors, of the Radial Road Co., addressed the council and asked for an extension of time for beginning and completing the road through Raleigh to comply with the extension granted by the

BARN BURNED

Wednesday night the barns of Geo. Arnold, near Louisville, were struck by lightning and burned. Two hundred bushels of oats, two tons of hay, implements and 200 bushels of corn were burned. The lightning also struck the stable and although it shattered the building, didn't either hurt the horses or set the building on fire. Although the stable was only fifteen feet from the barn, it was not burned. The direction of the wind and the wailing of the neighbors saved the building. The loss is $1,000.

CREEK AND RIVER THAMES EACH CLAIMED A LIFE

Two Young Men Meet With Death by Drowning—A Sad Day's Record—The Particulars.

An exceedingly sad drowning accident occurred last night about four miles down the river, a young man named Whalen being the victim.

The unfortunate young man came from Leamington yesterday morning to work for Robert Huff, down the river, Raleigh. He worked all day yesterday and in the evening he went to the river with Fred Peel and some other young boys to have a bath.

Unfortunately he could not swim and a strong six mile current was running at the time. He ventured out a little too far and got beyond his depth. He cried for help and young Peel seeing his dangerous position, swam out to him and caught him by the arm. Whalen, with the instinct of a drowning man, caught young Peel around the waist and they both disappeared below the surface of the water, Peel struggling to free himself from the other's grasp. After they had been under the water a few seconds Peel came up alone gasping for breath, and with considerable difficulty reached the shore.

Whalen, however, did not come up again. Efforts were immediately made to locate the body, but they were all fruitless.

At ten o'clock this morning Robert Smith, of Dover, passed along the river and was informed that the body has not yet been found. At that time they were fishing for the unfortunate man with a seine.

ANOTHER DEATH

John Franklin, a mason, who works with contractor Milton, who is putting up a building for R. Taylor up the Creek, went in bathing yesterday afternoon and was drowned. Franklin was an expert swimmer and had crossed the creek several times; on the last trip he called for help and instantly sank. The body was recovered about two hours later. The deceased was from Marine City and was a nephew of Will Robinson, of Botany.

STREET ROW

At Least it is Over a Change in Street Sidewalk—Judge and Mayor Mingle.

That Stanley avenue sidewalk still continues to cause trouble.

It seems that Stanley avenue, from Ninth St. east to the track, some 200 feet or more, does not follow the original survey. It encroaches 38 feet on Victoria Park and gives 38 feet to the old cemetery. Judge Bell had built his house facing the street as at present located. Some of the aldermen saw a chance to straighten out this street while the new cement walk is being put down. At the same time it was felt that Judge Bell could be annoyed considerably, as his walks all led to the sidewalk on the present street.

The Mayor considered the scheme for straightening the street a good one and the city solicitor was consulted. He advised that the street be left as at present located. The land that would be taken from the cemetery was worth nothing, and, if the road was changed it would run over the graves in the burying ground.

Added to this was the fact that Fred F. Quinn, the citizen most interested, and the people interested in the graves in the cemetery, all opposed the proposed change.

The city council made the change if they wanted to, by passing a by-law, although for forty years the road had been diverted from the original survey. In addition to this, the 38 feet would lose nothing by leaving the street as it was. At present, Judge Bell's residence has a command of the street, but if the proposed change were made it wouldn't.

It is said that the Mayor and Judge said things to each other about the proposal to straighten the street.

the Queen St. property to the Gray Co. for $2,000.

Mr. Cornish had heard that Mr. Gray objected to the stores being taken out of the school, and asked concerning it. He was assured, however, that there was nothing in the by-law including stores in the sale. Still he was not satisfied on that point. "They should not get anything not included in the sale, even 25 cents' worth," he declared.

Another by-law was also read, offering the Payne school property for sale, SUBJECT TO FITS.

"Had we not better deal with one by-law at a time," put in Mr. Paxton. "Some of the Council would have a fit if we passed two by-laws at once."

The first by-law was then put through its readings and finally passed.

OFFERS $1,400.

Mr. Heyward then brought up an offer from L. E. Tillson for the purchase of the Payne school property for $1,400.

MR. CORNISH'S PET.

Mr. Heyward—I think it is hardly fair to give out Mr. Tillson's offer and give a chance for other people to make him pay more for it. You all know that Payne school is a pet of Mr. Cornish's, as he promised his electorate that he would re-open the school. I don't think it is a good location for a school and I don't think we could get a better offer. Mr. Cornish told me himself that he would take $1,500 for it.

Mr. Cornish—No, I did not; I beg your pardon.

Mr. Heyward—In three years from now we would have to get $1,700 for it to equal our present bargain. I see no use in holding it, and it suits Mr. Tillson exactly. The whole place will soon be eaten up in taxes.

THE SLEEPY COUNCIL.

Mr. Cornish was also in favor of accepting the offer.

"We are men of action," he said. "This isn't the City Council.—Laughter. They are half asleep, but I suppose they can't help it."

Mr. Cornish—Last meeting night we had an offer of $1,250, to-night $1,400. Possibly if we wait until the next meeting night we will get $50 more. This, I claim is new matter and requires a notice of motion.

Mr. Heyward—This is not new matter.

Mr. Cornish—Yes, it is.

The chairman, however, held that if a majority of the Board wished to dispose of the property they could do so. The motion was put, dispersed with the rules of order, and carried.

Mr. Cornish called for the yeas and nays.

Yeas—McCorvie, Heyward, Paxton, Robertson and McKeough.

Mr. Paxton's motion accepting Mr. Tillson's offer of $1,400 was then put and carried. Mr. Cornish only voting against it.

CHAPTER XXIII.

It was not usual, in the early part of the present century, for wives to oppose their wishes, or those of their husbands, especially when they were men of property and character in the community; still less was it permissible for a daughter to question the authority of her father. But Love has been a rebel in all ages. The conventions of society have never been able to bind the limbs of the shy and sturdy rogue. Rosa Bruyn was by nature the very pattern of a dutiful daughter. She shrank with a reluctance amounting to anguish from the thought of placing herself in open rebellion to her father's wishes; but there appeared no other alternative save to surrender herself an unwilling victim to a hateful marriage.

Her anguish and conflict of mind caused her to grow paler and sadder of demeanor, but her strong physical nature was not of a kind to bend speedily to trouble, however overwhelming it might be. The anxiety of her mother for her was much increased. The tender-hearted matron at last began to read the secret of her daughter's absorbing love for the errant heir of Rolff House. She was drawn into deeper sympathy with her feelings; and the anguish and suffering on one side and the tender condolence on the other at last broke down the vestige of a barrier to perfect confidence that had existed between them. Rosa confessed to her mother all her hopes and doubts and sorrows, and earnestly sought her advice as to the course she should pursue. It was but meagre comfort the good matron could give.

"It is a decision, my dear child," she said, "that must rest with your own heart. I am from now on, for your happiness is so dear to me that I should I unhappily direct you wrongly, I could never forgive myself. It is easy to see how, from your father's point of view, your marriage with Ralph should appear very desirable. He seems to be a pleasant young man, and his keenness, good character and steadiness are naturally qualities that appeal to the favor of a man like your father. Besides, he will be quite rich; and the fact of Rolff House being likely to be his inheritance is another thing in his favor. Since you were a little girl, your father has talked of your being one day mistress of Rolff House, and of seeing it restored to its old dignity. Although he never liked Claude, this hope induced him to look favorably upon his attentions to you. Had Claude remained home, and settled down as heir to the estate left him, all would have been well. But his strange departure, and the stranger results that have followed, by which the Saybrooks seem to have become the owners of nearly all his property, have greatly embittered your father's feelings toward him. He seems to regard the idea of your marriage with him as a thing to be prevented at all hazards. For my part, although I had always liked Claude, and believed in his truth and sincerity, I must confess his hurried desire to get away as soon as his aunt was dead, his strange sacrifices to raise money, his unaccountable letter—all have shaken my former faith in him. I trust that every suspicion against him may be removed; but you know, my dear child, that this is a world of temptation, in which the noblest and best sometimes fail; and we can fully trust no one.

"I know Claude's faults," replied Rosa. "I know that he was ambitious and reckless of the opinions of those he did not care for; but I would stake my life on his truth and goodness. I, too, have believed as you, my dear child," said the mother; "but you must remember that Claude's very generosity and carelessness of the world's criticism would be the quality that would expose him to the most temptation when cast upon his own resources out in the world."

Rosa was silent. She could see the soundness of her mother's reasoning. It was but an echo of the fear that had always lain at her own heart. And yet—yet she still clung to her faith in her lover, she knew not why; perhaps, as the drawing man clings to a straw, because it was the only hope left of safety to her perishing dream of happiness. Although it cost her greatly to have her mother's full confidence once more, Rosa could profit nothing by her counsel. She was left still to her own unaided resolution to make the decision so important to her future weal or woe. On the morning after her conversation with her mother, Rosa, full of an anguish and undecision, arrayed herself for a walk in the open air, hoping the clear, bright day, the fresh breeze, the songs of the birds, and the cheerful aspect of Nature, would revive the intense strain of her feelings, and enable her to think and decide more clearly. She bent her steps almost unconsciously down the road and into the lane that led to the old woods where she had taken leave of Claude. She was suddenly impelled with an irresistible desire to visit the spot where they had parted. She wandered down into the wood, and soon was seated in the place where she had listened to his last words. She remained a long time, giving herself up to sad reflections, and each moment feeling her resolution grow stronger to dare and endure everything before she would break the faith she had here pledged to remain true to him forever.

After awhile, she arose and walked on, following the path that wound in the direction of Rolff House. Suddenly she came on the figure of a man, seated on a rock by the path, and partially concealed by a large tree. She stopped and uttered a little cry, when he turned his head and she saw that it was Carl Crum.

The old fellow arose and greeted her with outstretched palms, in which she placed both her own hands. "Well-a-day!" he exclaimed, "who would have thought to meet you here, rosebud? But I am glad to see you taking the good medicine of air and sunshine, although, judging from your pale cheeks, you do not take enough of it. Ah, I love to see the cheeks of the young rose, and their eyes orient with happiness. You do not appear happy, Rosa.

"I am not happy," replied Rosa, feeling all reserve depart in the presence of the old man's pleasant face and kindly smile. "I am very, very unhappy."

"And no doubt I can guess the reason therefor," replied old Carl, shaking his grizzled head. "I hear it reported that you are to marry Ralph Saybrook. Ah, it grieves me to hear so. I am no judge of human nature if that young man is not as cold and heartless a villain as ever ground the faces of the poor or murdered woman by slow degrees. No, no, he is no mate for you, rosebud, and I need not ask to know that you can never give him your heart."

"There is no promise—no engagement," replied Rosa, anxious to clear herself from the implied rebuke of the old man's words; "but, alas, my father urges me to accept him, and it is only by a sacrifice of filial duty that I can escape a fate I shudder to think of."

These sad words aroused old Carl's sympathy as well as curiosity, and, determined to fathom what he already conceived to be a plot of his hated enemy, he gradually and skillfully drew from Rosa the whole story of the scheme to force Ralph Saybrook on her favor as a suitor.

"So, so," muttered the old man, after he had learned every detail of the matter, "they would force you to marry your father's enemy, and they are to fit up Rolff House as a bridal present, eh? Now, by all the good angels, that scheme should never prosper. Let me advise you, rosebud. I am old enough to be a little wise, and in this matter I feel so deep a sympathy for you that I long to help you, and I think I have a plan in my head that will do it. I can see that you shrink from disobeying your father, although the thought of marriage with Ralph is as repugnant to you as can be. Well, as I understand it, that old fox has caught you with a promise that he will fit up Rolff House for you and Ralph when you are married. Perhaps he means to, but there may be difficulties in the way that will prevent it. Ah, he's a crafty villain; but we will be crafty too. Now, rosebud, mark me. You go back home, and tell your father that you have made up your mind, and that you will marry Ralph on one condition. Let that condition be that the wedding shall not take place till Rolff House is repaired and restored to its former grandeur. Now, don't look astonished; trust an old man who would give his life for you, and would rather see you dead than married to Ralph Saybrook. My word for it, they will never go far in the work of repairing and restoring Rolff House. Strange things have happened in the old house; and stranger things may yet come to pass. The popular belief is that it is haunted. Of course, this is silly; yet there is a mystery about the house, and my word for it, it will never be repaired and restored save by the rightful heir. At least, the plan I propose would give you time, and relieve you for awhile from the strain of anxiety that is undermining your health; and so far it would be good. It will take a long time to repair Rolff House, and much may happen in the meantime. I feel assured we can trust the future. The good Lord will help us. He always helps those who put their trust in him. Do as I counsel, rosebud, and if all does not turn out well, we shall at least have time to arrange new plans."

The hearty exclamation with which the old man entered into the subject of her ready advice, were very grateful to Rosa. He seemed for the moment a good angel sent to comfort and help her. His advice appeared to her wise and shrewd; but she hesitated to use any deception toward her father. Old Carl, however, used his best endeavors to convince her that some craft was necessary to meet the crafty schemes of the lawyer, and urged his plan so confidently that she was at last fully convinced that if she gave her promise as advised she would most probably never be called upon to fulfill it.

And so, her spirits much restored, and deeply resolving the subject in her mind, she returned home. Her father was sitting in his accustomed chair on the stoop as she entered the yard smoking his pipe. Rosa did not seek to avoid him, as she might have done, had she not had old Carl's plan in her mind. On the contrary, she boldly approached him, and, stopping beside his chair, placed her hand on his shoulder. The old man looked up, and was evidently puzzled a moment by her bright and cheerful look.

"Eh, been walking?" he said, enquiringly. "It has done you good. Where have you been?"

"Down through the woods, and over toward Rolff House, father," was the reply.

"Well, what was there to see there?" he asked, half suspiciously.

"Her sudden resort to cheerfulness was evidently puzzling to him.

"There was much to be seen," she replied, keeping in mind the carrying out of old Carl's advice. "For one thing, there was Rolff House. I must decide, you know, whether I will like it for my future home."

"Eh?—so, so; to be sure, to be sure," he replied, a surprised smile stealing over his face. "It's very proper you should do so. But you'll be sure to like it when it is all fixed up again. Ah, it was a grand place once, Rosa."

"So you have to build it, father," she replied; "and I have made up my mind that if it is fully restored to its ancient dignity I would like to be mistress of it."

"These words had a decidedly enlightening effect on the old farmer. He looked at his daughter again, as if he was not quite sure he was not deceived in what he had heard; but the glance seemed to reassure him.

"I am glad to hear you say so," he replied, cheerfully. "I've always said you'd wake up yet and know what is best for you. Any girl might be proud to be mistress of Rolff House. When it is fixed up again, Ralph and you can live there like king and queen."

"But there's one thing, father," Rosa made haste to say. "I have never been satisfied that Mr. Saybrook has a good title to the house. It seems so strange that Claude should make it over to him. There may be some deception about it. I hope you will allow me to refuse to marry Ralph till the house is fully repaired and restored, and the title is made perfectly clear."

"To be sure I will," replied the bluff old fellow. "No need to advise me about that. We must have a written agreement, and they must carry everything out to the letter. I'll see to that. Yes, yes, by my dander, we'll have that all straight. Never shall you leave this house, little girl, till there's a place fit for a queen to put you in."

"I have one more favor to ask, father," said Rosa.

"Well, out with it," replied the old man, now in the best of humor.

"Do not wish Ralph to be anything more to me than he is now till after Rolff House is fully repaired. Something might happen, you know."

"Of course, of course—that shall be as you wish," answered the old man. "It's always well to be careful. Keep him off; yes, yes—'twill hurry up matters. Ah, you're a shrewd little girl; that's my girl, now."

Bending over and imprinting a kiss on her cheek, Rosa turned and went in the house, anxious not to commit herself any further in the implied consent to marry Ralph Saybrook.

BRITISH BUTCHERS.

Fully Alive to the Question of Admitting Canadian Meat Cattle.

At a meeting of the National Federation of Butchers, held recently at Manchester, England, Mr. Charles E. Pearson, the expert in dealing with the subject of free importation of Canadian cattle to England, said when this class of cattle was first introduced into that country, some years ago, it met a long felt want. The beasts were well-grown, full of condition, and plenty of bone, and when fattened for the market, were exactly what traders desired to purchase. Moreover, their introduction had the effect of reducing the price of store cattle from £2 or £3 per head. For some time past he had been more or less in communication with the different men interested in this particular line of the trade, and they said to him: "You butchers have only one object in view and that is to reduce the price of meat." He admitted the fact that was their aim. They said they used every effort, and strain every nerve to effect reduction in the price. They were anxious to feed the public well with a plentiful supply of good meat. He thought their introduction had the effect of bearing upon the Government, and secure the free importation of Canadian cattle to England, they would not only benefit themselves, but also their colonial brethren who the Government could not be forgetful of the way the Canadian troops had served in South Africa, and he thought the present was a good opportunity for trying to have the embargo on cattle from Canada. What they must first do was to prove to Mr. Hanbury, the Minister of Agriculture, that there was no disease among cattle in Great Britain, and that there had not been for years, and that there was an urgent need in England for this class of cattle.

Mr. E. A. Tootle of Birkenhead said that recently he was in conversation with an American shipper, whom he questioned as to the prospect of the importation of Canadian cattle into England. His reply was emphatically answered, "Yes, if they will let Canadians come to England, there will be a lot of Americans coming over also." He asked him what foundation he had for such a statement, and the reply was that the boundaries dividing the two countries in the cattle-raising districts were so undefined that it would be easy for large numbers of American cattle to cross into Canada, and be there shipped to England. On the other hand a toll had to be paid on Canadian cattle before they could pass through the States.

Other gentlemen having spoken, the following resolution was passed unanimously: "This meeting is emphatically of opinion that, owing to the present and prospective short supplies of beef, the Government should now permit the South American cattle to be imported into this country, under the same conditions as those from the United States, and further, that the Government should take the legislative measures necessary to remove the present embargo on Canadian store cattle."

A Strange Interview. It was at his aunt's house, as Lord Dufferin a thousand times recounted, that Lord Melbourne met Disraeli for the first time. These were early days and Disraeli, bursting with ambition, had been unsuccessful in his attempt to enter Parliament. After listening to his expression of disappointment, Lord Melbourne said good naturedly, "Well, now, tell me, what do you want to be?" "I want to be Prime Minister," was the reply. Lord Melbourne, who did not expect that time the Premier himself, replied with an excessive seriousness: "No chance of that in our time. Nobody can compete with Stanley when Lord Grey gives up." So went on with repeated insistence the man who was to be Prime Minister in a few months, addressing him who was to hold the same rank in thirty-five years.—London Chronicle.

Mr. Barton's Way. The Premier of Australia feels the need of an organ. Before leaving to represent the Commonwealth at the coronation, Mr. Barton has taken the initiative in the founding of a third morning newspaper in Sydney. His first Federal tariff is avowedly protective, but Sydney, his residential city, is the stronghold of free trade. The Sydney morning papers—The Herald and The Daily Telegraph—preach the gospel of Richard Cobden. The Prime Minister of the Commonwealth summoned a meeting of home protectionists, presided over them, harangued them and concluded by moving that it was "absolutely essential to establish forthwith a daily morning newspaper in the interests of the Federal policy."

Carlisle's Method of Work. Speaking of his method of work, Carlisle said he had found the little wooden pegs which washerwomen employ to fasten clothes to a line highly convenient for keeping together bits of notes and agenda on the same special point. It was his habit to paste on a screen in his work-room engraved portraits, and he would be glad to have the people he was then writing about. It kept the image of the man steadily in view and one might have a clear image of him in the mind before it was in the least possible to make him be seen by the reader.

A Marshal's Retort. The Marshal de Bassompierre was employed by Henry IV. on several embassies. He once told the King that when he went as ambassador to Spain he rode into Madrid on the most beautiful mule he had ever seen, who had been sent by the Spanish monarch for his special use. "Ha ha! What a comical sight!" laughed out the boisterous king. "An ass upon a mule!" he became bald very young, I believe,—Yonkers Statesman.

Good Security.

"Mister, do you lend money here?" asked an earnest young voice at the office door.

The lawyer turned away from his desk, confronted a clear-eyed, poorly dressed lad of twelve years, and studied him keenly for a minute. "Sometimes we do on good security," he said, gravely. The little fellow explained that he had a chance, "to buy out a boy that's cryin' papers." He had half the money required, but needed to borrow the other fifteen cents. "What security can you offer?" asked the lawyer. The boy's brown hand sought his pocket, and drew out a paper, carefully folded in a bit of calico. It was a cheaply printed pledge against the use of intoxicating liquor and tobacco, as respectfully as if it had been the deed to a farm, the lawyer examined it, accepted it, and handed over the required sum. A friend who had watched the transaction with silent amusement, laughed as the young borrower departed.

"You think that I know nothing about him," smiled the lawyer. "I know that he came manfully, in what he supposed to be a business way, and tried to negotiate a loan instead of begging the money. I agree that he has been under good influences, or he would not have signed that pledge; and that he does not hold it lightly, or he would not have cared for it so carefully. I agree with him that one who keeps himself from such things has a character to offer as a security."

Spelled His Day. I heard Jan MacLaren, the Scottish novelist, tell a story at St. Andrew's of the winter banquet given by the Scotchman was very ill. At last the doctor told her she could not live. The husband went to her to say goodbye. She asked him if she had not been a good wife to him. "Well, you've been var'ry economical." "Jammie, before I go, I've a favor to ask of ye. Will ye promise to grant it?" "I'll see, I'll see, lassie, when ye've asked."

London Town Talk. Seventeen in every 100 English doctors live in London. London's winter temperature averages 37 degrees, and its summer 62 degrees. London postmen, it is reported, intend petitioning the Government for a lighter summer uniform. The St. James' Gazette, will retire from the public service at the end of the year, and that should be come about before June he will not wait for the coronation before resigning office. London is in a predicament. With almost 200 vacancies in her public schools, only 21 teachers have applied for the positions. The board will thus be forced to increase the extremely poor salaries paid at present.

Over the Washboud. A very hot iron should never be used for flannels or woollens. Calicoes, gingham and chintzes should be ironed on the wrong side and only on the wrong side. Arrowroot tied in a thick cotton rag and boiled with limes and cottons imparts an odor to them that is pleasing. To make hard water soft use one ounce of lime, slaked to a thin cream to every 40 gallons of water. Stir it in, and allow it to settle for 12 hours. The lime will absorb the carbonate dioxide which held the hardness in solution, and it will thus fall to the bottom, leaving the water soft.

Mrs. Slaughter's sensible Sayings. Obtrusive silence or whispering in a sick-room is disturbing to the nerves. No unforgiving woman can hope for much happiness in this world of imperfect human beings. There is wonderful wisdom in dealing with conditions as they are when we cannot have them as we wish. To put on an appearance of indifference, when in reality we are indifferent, is to cultivate deceit, and fatally to mar your character. It is a sign of weakness rather than of strength to bear a grudge, and the noisiest scolding on earth are they who are quickest to forgive a wrong.—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Best Way. An English officer, exceedingly unpopular with the men, was coming home one evening, when he slipped and fell into deep water. He was rescued with difficulty by a private in his regiment. The officer was profuse in his expressions of gratitude, and asked his preserver how he could reward him. "The best way," said the soldier, "is to say nothing about it." "But why?" said the officer in amazement. "Because," was the blunt reply, "if the other fellows knew I pulled you out, they'd chuck me in."

Pat His Own Feet in It. May (indignantly)—"I didn't care; I think Harry Esterleigh is downright mean." Marie—"Why, May?" May—"Well, he wrote me from Fenny, saying he had shot a crocodile seven feet long, and that when he shot another, he would have a pair of slippers made for me. I'll never speak to him again."

She May Have Helped. Patience—And did you say her husband wore his hair long? Patriotic—No; he became bald very young, I believe,—Yonkers Statesman.

The popular view of the relation of the blood to human character and conduct is marked in many a familiar expression. We speak of there being "bad blood" between people at enmity, of "blue blood" as indicating ancestry, of "black blood" as describing a treacherous nature, and in many another phrase mark our belief that in the mental, moral and physical man, "the blood is the life." The one basis of a healthful, happy and useful life is pure blood. With the blood pure, disease has no permanent lodging place in the system. For this reason the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery rids the body of diseases which have their origin in impurity of the blood. It absolutely purifies the blood, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter, increasing the action of the blood-making glands, and building up the body by supplying the blood in quantity and quality such as is essential to a condition of health. It cures ninety-eight people out of every hundred who give it a fair trial.

A Record Catch Which Should Prove of Interest to the Commissioners.

To-day's London Free Press publishes the following from the New York Sunday Telegraph: - The middle of this week, "Dolly Varden" having closed at the Herald Square Theatre, Mr. F. C. Whitney, the proprietor and manager of that organization, goes to Detroit, where he will join his father, Mr. C. J. Whitney, and they will go to Long Point, Canada, for two weeks' fishing.

Long Point, Ont., July 18, 1901. To Whom it May Concern: - This is to testify that Mr. F. C. Whitney, of New York, caught with a single hook and line, between the hours of 5 a. m. and 7 p. m., on Wednesday, July 17, 1901, off Long Point, 132 (one hundred and thirty-two) black bass, the largest of which weighed 4 1/2 (four and a-half) pounds and the smallest 2 1/8 (two and one-eighth) pounds.

CRICKET

ANOTHER DEFEAT.

On account of the soggy condition of the grounds, play in yesterday's cricket match between Chatham and the Gordon McKay's did not start until about 2.30 in the afternoon.

Sam Mercer and F. J. Dowlsley went to bat first and Sam scored the first run of the game on a pretty cut. They had been in about five minutes and were getting almost settled when Sam's wicket went down before one of Bunch's foolers.

Things looked bad now, three of the best wickets down for six runs. Richards came next to bat and was just getting set when he knocked a ball to W. McMillan at slip; he fumbled the ball into the air and it was caught by his brother, who was playing behind him.

Wallace and W. McMillan went down in two consecutive balls by Aitken. Miller went in to bowl in place of Kenny, but was unable to locate the wickets. Kenny replaced him again and took his only wicket, that of Stratly.
