OTHER SIMCOE NEWS

Mural Decorations at the High School

(From our own Correspondent)
Simcoe, May 4.—The Simcoe Women's Institute held its annual meeting at the office of the mix-up which occurred yesterday, resulting in Dover items appearing as if from Simcoe and vice versa.

Mrs. Tomlinson in conclusion affirmed her faith in Canadian womanhood and felt sure that they would do their part in the present crisis. Simcoonians, among whom Mrs. Tomlinson is very popular, and a recognized leader of unusual and varied talent, are concerned that the lecturer may be known as "Mrs. Tomlinson, of Simcoe," throughout her tour.

Convention of Women's Institute

Here on June 20th.

The annual meeting of the Simcoe Women's Institute was held in the school room of the Baptist church yesterday afternoon. There were about fifty members present. The following executive was elected:—Pres., Mrs. Geo. Williamson; 1st. V. Pres., Miss P. Matthews; 2nd. V. Pres., Mrs. R. E. Ganton; Sec., Miss Annie Miller; Directors, Mesdames McCurley, Craiso, Geo. Potts, A. R. DeCov, L. Sharp, Alex. Wallace, R. Edmonds, H. P. Cook; Look-out Committee, Misses Dutton and Johnson; Press reporter, Mrs. R. Simpson; District Director, Mrs. Street; Auditors, Mesdames Pettit and Griffin. The Treasurer's Report.

Ladies' Aid Remembered.

Moved by Mrs. W. C. McCol, seconded by Mrs. Chas. Witherspoon that $23.00 be voted to the Children's shelter.—Carried.

There was considerable expression of opinion that the County Council should provide a shelter and that all women's institutes should assist this work financially.

Citizenship Among Children.

The question of supervision of amusements in the park was up for discussion and it was suggested that the young people should have more home instruction regarding the use and care of such public property and regarding manners in such public places.

The District Women's Institute will hold the annual convention here on June 20th. Dr. Ross McDonald, local Institute Guild, will be the chief outside speaker. The address will be on "How to Make the Institute attractive for Girls."

Will Knock the Hotels.

Notwithstanding the fact that intoxicants have been tabooed from the hotels, the Institute has arranged to billet all delegates.

Prophet Honoured At Home.

Mrs. W. B. Tomlinson, for years a prominent member of the local organization, was given grand rounds on rising to deliver her "maiden" speech since her recent appointment as travelling lecturer under the Dept. of Agriculture. Mrs. Tomlinson speaks with evident personal interest in, and knowledge of her subject.

ject. Her statements were demonstrated and emphasized by amusing statistics. By way of introduction, the necessity for economy, conservation and production throughout all lands, was emphasized and progress in other lands touched upon by way of illustration. At home in Canada, each individual should endeavour to grow enough to feed himself on the home for other necessary articles of diet. Simcoe's membership entitles the local institute to six votes at the coming convention, and the following were appointed:—Mr. Rowley, Mrs. R. Simpson, Mrs. H. P. Cook, Mrs. Roberts, Miss Johnson and—

The address proper on poultry raising and the products of the industry, was ably compiled and delivered in a clear and acceptable manner.

The proceedings were interspersed with musical numbers from Mrs. Tomlinson, Miss Haddock, Miss Helen Perry and Miss Wilcox.

The retiring president received an address of appreciation and a hand-painted china vase in recognition of her four years service in the chair.

Another Convention.
The annual Sunday School convention of the Norfolk Rural Deanery, will be held here on Tuesday next in the afternoon. The chapter will meet at 10.30 a.m. for devotion and at 11 for business.

There will be a missionary service in the evening.

Lt.-Col. W. A. McCrimmon was in town yesterday for the purpose of inspecting the local H.S. cadet corps. He found the equipment in good order, but the majority of the boys out on the farm. Instructor Case stated that to his knowledge over 20 former members of the corps had enlisted for overseas. The Colonel furnished the information that the district had recruited over 10,000 such.

Periodically for the past two years the pseudo humorist Gagsby of "Saturday Night" or some other luminous dilates on the matter of Colonel and Lt.-Colonels, real ones and shams. Of the shams there are in Canada two kinds, those attached to the department of militia and those attached to some particular unit.

There are very few in Canada. The December militia list contains a special list of names of 60 honorary Colonels, all attached, and of 84 honorary Lt.-Colonels, all attached. The honorary title, if attached to a regiment or battalion, terminates if the unit of attachment is broken up or disbanded.

For Lt.-Col. is often given a former officer for years in recognition of past services. If the titles were used only by those strictly entitled to use them, Gagsby and his tribe would have less to worry about. We frequently call as Lt.-Col. a Colonel; in reality it is equal to calling a lieutenant a captain and even this may pass—but there's little excuse for an officer assuming the ascendancy himself, especially when his conventional right to even the lower title has ceased. Yet truly, as we have read somewhere recently, there are fewer honorary colonels and honorary lieutenant-colonels than many would have us think. And yet, we'll always have Lt. Col. Atkinson and Col. Aiken, for auld lang syne.

If any one questions the educational value of art and penmanship in developing the aesthetic taste and a love for the literature of the masters, he has only to visit the corridors of the Simcoe high school, as the writer did to-day on the occasion of Cadet Inspector McCrimmon's visit. Had it not been that the Inspector was a former acquaintance, we should have missed one of the opportunities of our life; for in some thirty-nine years, spent for the most part in school or college, we never saw a better illustration of the absolute inability of modern young Canada to appreciate its opportunities or to recognize the great heritage into which it has fallen.

While we have not the suggestion of criticism for the principal or staff of the school, and while we realize the unpleasantness of the task, we shall not even this once shrink what has appealed to us as a duty because it is unpleasant. And because of the fact that Simcoe is about to throw open the doors of a new substantial, commodious and beautiful but not gaudy school, it is time now to protest that the senaphore to be put up lest the walls of this new building may, at times, draw chalk marks from school to home along brick wall or fence, but when students get to the high school stage, more is expected, and more sometimes obtained. In the case in point, the girls, are strangely the worst offenders.

Teachers in our secondary schools are surely not to be blamed for the culture and culture which results in such an exhibition. This open reference is made as a plea for the preservation of the walls of the new schools. A few dollars in calking, painting, and painting will obliterate the injury to the high school walls.

Mr. W. L. Innes, left for the east this afternoon on important business.

It was put up strongly to the writer to-day that the present sewage extension should not be gone on with till after the war, that the men were needed on the farms to sow and reap, and that the work could have stood over. Our rejoinder was that the work complained of was much more necessary than that on the new bowling green at the golf links—of which club our friend was a member—that had kept so many men so occupied when they might better have been digging widows' and absent soldiers' gardens, and our friend agreed. The conversation turned to the present need for help locally. Dominion Canners are paying good wages and absolutely cannot get men. Many farmers hesitated to sow peas lest they should not be able to draw them in when ready. The situation is such that there must be co-operation among Norfolk farmers, in this district at least, if the best returns are to be obtained. Our widespread rural telephone system and the auto are going to prove their worth as time savers during the summer, if properly used.

Verdict Accidental Death.
The inquest into the death of little Orm England, was concluded last evening. Some fifteen witnesses in error. The following have been called in our account of the tragedy, also that though both the boys tottering, the children had not been warned. HULL GOES DRY BY LARGE VOTE

Majority of Over 1,000 Defeats the Open Bar

Ottawa, May 4.—By the overwhelming majority of 1,181, prohibition was carried in Hull yesterday. The total vote cast was 3,793, one of the largest in the history of the city. There were 2,487 votes polled by the temperance followers. The liquor interests arranged the ballot, next year, owing to a technicality in delaying to advertise the polling. On April 20 the voting was commenced, and it is alleged that the liquor interests arranged the ballot, so that May 1 would pass with the hotel licenses still in force, and they would be assured of at least another year's business. According to the system of voting, if half an hour passed without a vote, the polls were automatically closed. This half-hour came at 12.30 yesterday afternoon. It was near midnight when the count was completed.

Look for Immediate Effect.
Seven hotels and three liquor shops will be cut off. Although licenses have been granted for the year commencing May 1, 1917, supporters of prohibition believe that the Quebec Provincial Government, in view of the overwhelming vote, and the conditions that exist as regards Hull and its proximity to the capital of the Dominion, will immediately rescind the licenses and grant immediate prohibition.

At 11 p.m. the river a few miles went dry May 1, so that yesterday's vote wipes liquor from the environs of the capital.

Matter Given Some Attention at Meeting of Parks Board Last Evening

A short, brisk and business like meeting of the Board of Park Commissioners was held at the city hall last night, when Messrs. E. Good, chairman, Frank Cockshutt, P. Grobb, J. C. Waller and Wm. Glover were present. The most important matter dealt with was that involving the board's relations with the Lake Erie & Northern Railway. It will be remembered that some time ago, the Dominion Railway Board gave judgment ordering the railway to construct a subway to the site of the boat-house, and also to place the boat-house, which had been previously dislodged, on a secure foundation. The railway company placed the structure on a decidedly insecure foundation, so that the spring flood of 1916 carried it away and down the river, through the negligence of the company. Mr. Frank Cockshutt, chairman of the grounds committee, reported that he had yesterday afternoon interviewed Mr. Martin L. Todd, manager of the railway, and could obtain no satisfaction. Mr. Todd refusing to acknowledge the railway's responsibility for the loss of the boat-house. They are willing to build the subway in accordance with the Railway Com. Mr. Cockshutt has the fact, that this step is considered by the railway. Mr. Cockshutt has now written to the chief engineer of the C. P. R. railway, reviewing the case, and asking for a statement of his attitude.

The commercial committee of the Board of Trade evidently concur with the opinion of Sanitary Inspector William Glover, concerning the necessity of cleaning up the rear of the business properties along Water street. A communication was received by the Board asking their cooperation. The merchant have already been approached by the commercial committee who have pointed out that the street presents a very unsightly appearance to visitors arriving in the city on the B. and H. railway. A resolution covering the communication was passed referring the matter to the grounds committee with instructions to take action (1) by urging the city council to improve the grade and (2) by the board planting the street with trees and otherwise making the canal bank more presentable.

The report of the grounds committee dealing with the matter is to be made at Mohawk Park this spring; was submitted by Mr. Frank Cockshutt.

The Grounds Committee beg to recommend:

1. That a concrete building for ladies convenience at Mohawk Park be constructed with septic tank and that the contract be awarded A. J. Cromar at $520.00 and that the contract for plumbing for same be awarded W. Tipper and Son at $250 and 25 cents per foot for water pipe, and that the work be proceeded with immediately.
2. That a lighting system be installed at Mohawk Park, work of installing to be done by the Hydro Commission under the following arrangement: All material furnished at cost. Labor at 10 per cent. added to cost and that the work be proceeded with immediately under the charge of the grounds committee.

Frank Cockshutt, Chairman of Grounds Committee.

THE COURIER
Sworn Daily Circulation on Dec. 31st, 1916-4,892.

Published by The Brantford Courier Limited, every afternoon, at Dalhousie Street, Brantford, Canada. Subscription rate: By carrier, $4 a year; by mail to British possessions and the United States, $5 per annum.

Friday, May 4th, 1917.

THE SITUATION
Over a range of eighteen miles the British have resumed a vigorous offensive on the Western front. Important enemy positions were taken at two points. Sir Douglas Haig in his official report relates that the enemy have again employed large reserves of men and guns and delivered counter attacks practically along the whole battle front, without result and at the expense of heavy losses.

The Canadians once more had a noted share in the achievements recorded. They captured the village of Fresnoy. The infantry followed closely behind a fierce artillery fire and reached the enemy's dugouts before he could emerge, later completing their success in house to house fighting. They also advanced a distance of two miles.

Col. Repington, the well known military expert as the result of a visit to the Arras battlefields, makes the estimate that 6,000,000 Germans are still in the field. In this regard it may be recalled that the Courier has more than once pointed out that depreciation of her man power was met to a large extent by the fact that 600,000 youths become available for military service each year, or over one and a half millions since the war began.

Right Hon. Walter Long, Colonial Secretary, has issued a statement regarding the Imperial War Conference. He states that many matters have been discussed of too confidential a nature for publication but it is definitely announced that the Overseas Dominions and India are in future to have a voice in relation to foreign policy.

WHERE THE BLAME RESTS
The Railway situation is one of the legacies of the Laurier Government. That administration petted and fostered the Canadian Northern and gave it public monies without proper safeguards, until it had become so large that toppling over would have meant a public disaster. In addition a mint of money had been placed in the venture by British investors, largely because of Laurierite bolstering, and a collapse would have meant a black eye for Canadian credit in the Old World. This was the state of affairs with reference to the enterprise under discussion when Sir Robert Borden and his colleagues attained power some six years ago.

expensive piece of work and mainly rendered necessary by Laurierite shortsightedness.

MR. COCKSHUTT'S COURSE
Mr. W. P. Cockshutt, M.P., did not take any new attitude, as far as he was concerned, in the course he advocated yesterday in the Dominion House with reference to food matters.

In March, of 1915, he delivered a notable speech in the Commons on the same subject, a full report of which was given by the Courier at the time.

He emphasized the fact, during the address in question, that he was not after the farmer but the food speculator, and said among other things: "It may be said that I represent a few manufacturers. I repudiate that before it is said. I am here by the votes of the workmen of the City of Brantford. I am here to represent the interests of these men, and not the miller, or the speculator, or the man who endeavors to corner the food of the people."

"What I have said in regard to breadstuffs, applies in a smaller measure to all kinds of products, to cereals and all of those items of daily use that go upon the table of the workman. They all require consideration at the present time. I am bringing to the attention of the House, and the country, a question that demands their very best consideration, and whether hon. gentlemen agree with me or not, I ask them to discuss the question free from any political bias or anything of that kind, because I have no thought of that in my own mind. I ask simply that the question be viewed upon its merits."

What Mr. Cockshutt said in 1915 he voiced again yesterday. The Toronto Globe says that he endorses the Liberal view. The facts are that they have come part way towards a doubtful endorsement of his attitude.

SOCIALIST CONFERENCE
By Courier Leased Wire. Copenhagen, via London, May 4.—The German Socialists have sent an imposing delegation to the international conference at Stockholm. Philip Scheidemann and Ebert Mueller represent the party executive and Deputies David, Noske and Gradnauer the Reichstag delegation.

MONEY TROUBLES.
By Courier Leased Wire. Copenhagen, via London, May 4.—The German treasury has been forced to drastic measures to cope with the hoarding of small coins, by which a large proportion of petty change has disappeared from circulation. A representative of the treasury has announced in the reichstag that the government is contemplating retiring from currency the present silver and nickel coins, leaving the hoarders only almost worthless metal. The issue of fifty pfennig bills is also being considered.

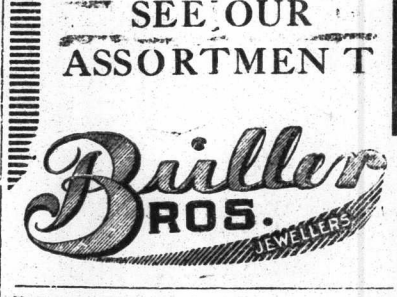

BRAVERY IN RESCUE.
By Courier Leased Wire. Paris, May 4.—A Marseilles despatch to The Mail says that the patrol ships which went to the rescue of the torpedoed transport Arcarian showed great heroism and determination in saving the victims of the submarine. Both officers and men leaped overboard and held up drowned soldiers. One patrol saved 236 men in an hour and a half.

Why is man and woman, half the time, feeling nervous, despondent, worried; some days headachy, dull and unstrung; some days really incapacitated by illness.

After an inspection of the site company with the chairman of board of works of the city and the city engineer, the building and grounds committee recommended the purchase of the premises 197, 199, 295 and 297 William street as an addition to Alexandra school, owing to the deteriorating wall and fences between school and the other premises.

The committee has secured upon the property and recommended that the city council provide for the purchase by a bylaw authorizing debentures. In this connection it was suggested that the council lay the passing of the bylaw to the board might require into the of replacing the sanitary conveniences at Victoria school. Although greeting the necessity of expending large sum upon these matters, committee considered them highly essential.

The sum of $50 was granted improving the grounds of Ryer school.

ROUTINE SESSION
BOARD OF EDUCATION

Properties Adjoining Alexandra School to be Purchased for Repairs

The greater portion of last evening's session of the Board of Education was consumed in the delivery of reports by a number of members and officials upon the annual session of the Educational Association held some time ago in Toronto. The purchase of the lots adjoining Alexandra school as a means of providing repairs to the premises was discussed upon.

At the motion of Mr. Andrews, seconded by Dr. Elliott, the minutes of the last meeting were taken as read and approved.

The board approved of the Public School Cadets' shooting for the Dominion marksmen medals, and acknowledged with thanks the donation of books to the schools by Dr. Williamson for essay writing on "Gardening as a Means of Thrift."

Finance Committee.
The finance committee in its report recommended the payment of a weekly list of accounts.

Alexandra School.
At the motion of the chairman of the site, in company with the chairman of the board of works of the city council and the city engineer, the building and grounds committee recommended the purchase of the premises at 187, 199, 295 and 299 Wellington street as an addition to Alexandra school, owing to the decay of the remaining wall and fences between the school and the other premises.

The committee has secured options upon the property and recommended that the city council provide funds for the purchase by a bylaw authorizing debentures. In this connection it was suggested that the council delay the passing of the bylaw until the board might enquire into the cost of replacing the sanitary conveniences at Victoria school. Although regretting the necessity of expending a large sum upon these matters, the committee considered them highly essential.

The sum of $50 was granted for improving the grounds of Ryerson school.

The tender of the Waterous Engine Works Co. was awarded the contract for the erection of a smoke stack at the Collegiate Institute.

Educational Association.
Mr. A. Coulbeck reported upon the annual convention of the Ontario Educational Association which he attended in Toronto recently. He considered music as a subject which should be given more attention in public schools. Mr. A. K. Bunnell addressed a few words upon the subject of the convention this evening upon the discussion of the Adolescent Act there.

Mr. W. Burt commented upon the discussion which took place upon the High School system prevalent through the province, as well as upon the wide range of subjects taught in the High Schools of Ontario. Mr. Burt expressed the opinion that under the present circumstances the best work could not be obtained from pupils. A deputation is to appear before the Minister of Education in this regard.

Mr. Kilmer endorsed the remarks of Mr. Burt, stating that feeling was much the same with regard to the wide range of subjects in the public school. Considerable attention had been given to the physical welfare of the child, while another question of moment was that of providing accommodation for the rapid increase in population. A resolution was passed of holding two sessions each day, one in the morning from 8.30 to 12.30 and one in the afternoon from 1.30 to 5.30, pupils attending only one session daily. A general feeling existed for a more prominent place for the study of agriculture upon the school curricula.

Those present were: Dr. Gamble, chairman; Dr. Marquis, Dr. Elliott, Messrs. Andrews, Miller, Coulbeck and Lahey, Principal Burt of the Collegiate Institute, and Public School Inspector Kilmer.

LOCAL NEWS ITEMS

IN BELGIUM. Mrs. Jackson has received a cable from her husband, Capt. A. W. Jackson, that he is with the 7th Canadian Railway Construction Corps in Belgium.

CHILDREN'S AID. A meeting of the executive of the Children's Aid Society was held yesterday morning in the sheriff's office at the Court House. The usual business was transacted.

HIGH COURT. The date for the next sitting of the High Court has been set for May 15th. His Honor Judge Clute will preside. One case only has been entered for hearing up to date.

CADET INSPECTION. The annual inspection of the public school cadets of the city will take place this afternoon of next week in Recreation Park.

STREET IMPROVEMENTS. Work was commenced this week in street improvement in Grand View street under the direction of Mr. George Unger who was recently appointed roads superintendent.

TENNIS TROUBLES. It was expected that the outdoor tennis courts of the Y.M.C.A., which are located adjacent to the building would be opened for use this week. The unfavorable weather conditions have rendered this impossible. The court is in a state of mud and work cannot progress until the ground has dried out.

POLICEMEN'S PAY. While discussing the situation now confronting the local police department, one prominent citizen remarked that there was no better paid class of men in the city than the policemen, and that while some members of the force might think that a change to some other form of occupation would be advantageous, he personally was of the opinion that they were receiving remuneration in proportion to their services.

WOUNDED. Pte. George Anderson of Oshweken is reported in the official casualty list this morning as wounded. He is nephew of Mrs. James Burnham, South street, and went overseas with the 114th battalion.

FINANCE COMMITTEE. A meeting of the finance committee of the city council, will be held to-night at eight o'clock.

TALENT TEA. A very successful talent tea, both as regards the number of persons present, the programme and the proceeds, was held in the school room of St. Jude's church yesterday afternoon by the East ward branch of the Kith and Kin Association. Home-made cooking was readily disposed of to eager purchasers, and tea was served. The Rev. C. E. Jenkins addressed a few words to the ladies, and a solo was sweetly sung by Miss Elsie Senn.

FLOUR GOES UP. The spring drive of the general high cost of living continues unabated, and this time another advance of fifty cents per hundred pounds was announced in all grades of flour. One local grocer was the victim of a strange and unprofitable coincidence. He was endeavoring to make telephone connections, and when he had finally succeeded after some time, he was notified that within the past few minutes that the increase had been made.

FARMERS' SECTION. The Weekly Sun, an independent publication issued in Toronto, in commenting on the recent action of the local Board of Trade, is incorporating into its membership a farmers' section, says "The Brantford Board of Trade has decided to form a 'farmers' section' to 'bring producer and consumer closer together,' etc. When this move was suggested at Hamilton it was received with much suspicion by local farmers. Whatever the aims, it hardly seems that, without a change of spirit on the part of city interests, much can be accomplished. At Brantford, for instance, commercial travellers, 260 strong, have been added to the Board. The average commercial traveller's opinion of the average farmer is much to the latter's disparagement. It is quite possible that the dark shadow of famine looming up ahead will scare and is learning city interests into a due consideration for the industry of farming. If, also, the repeated statement that 'farming is the backbone of the country,' may become something more than warm atmosphere.

VICTORIAN NURSES. The Victorian Order of Nurses held their regular meeting on Wednesday morning, May 2nd. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Cockshutt, Mrs. Nelles presided. Reports were given on the general work by Miss Stuart. Miss Carter reported on the Child Welfare and Social Service work.

A donation of infants' clothing and a warm comforter had been received from the Jewel Mission Circle of the Mount Pleasant Methodist Church. This gift of useful articles was much appreciated. Extracts were read from the report of the annual meeting of Ottawa and it was noted with regret, that Miss Mackenzie, Chief Superintendent of the Order, had resigned. The following is a report of the general work: Number of cases nursed, 68; average daily hour on duty 9 1/2; nursing visits during the month 233; child welfare work; number of cases 15; average daily hours on duty, 6 1/2. Nursing visits during the month, 54.

CIVIC RECEPTION

An enthusiastic civic reception and welcome was accorded Sgt. W. H. Lane, 343 Dalhousie St., last evening when he returned to his home after two years of absence, most of which time he has spent in the trenches. There was a large crowd present, and stirring addresses were given by the Rev. C. E. Jenkins and A. J. S. Dowling, after which the returned hero was escorted to his home in triumph.

EMPLOYMENT OPEN. Another request for returned soldiers was made to Secretary George Macdonald of the Soldiers' Aid Commission this morning by a local munitions manufacturer, who desires this class of men for inspectors, and other light work. It was impossible to take advantage of the offer however, as all the local returned men who are strong enough, have been supplied with employment.

SKAMEN GONE. There was a goodly-sized deputation at the Grand Trunk station yesterday afternoon to bid farewell to Petty Officer George Holmes who has been recruiting here for over a month, and Seaman Thomas McConnell and Charles Collins, who left to report for duty on the flagship Niobe at Halifax harbor. A number of members of the Women's Patriotic League were present and made a presentation to each of the departing men.

SAILOR RE-ENLISTS. Just prior to his departure for Toronto and Halifax yesterday, Petty Officer Holmes signed up Seaman Mann, who for a number of years has been a member of the Royal Navy and who recently received his discharge but was anxious to return again to his accustomed duties.

SOLDIERS RETURNED. Privates A. C. Lark, 132 Dalhousie street, and A. W. Two, 280 Dalhousie street, and Lance Corp. E. Sheppard, 37 Webling street, who returned to the city yesterday afternoon invalided back from overseas, were met at the Grand Trunk depot at four o'clock, by a strong delegation from the Soldiers' Aid Commission and taken to their homes.

Y. M. C. A. WORK. An informal luncheon and meeting of Y.M.C.A. directors and other prominent citizens was held last evening with the purpose of meeting Dr. John Brown Jr., Associate National Secretary, with reference to the work of the Y.M.C.A. overseas and elsewhere. Matters relative to the work were discussed at some length and a pleasant hour spent at the gathering.

COUNTY ROADS. The work of inspecting the roads involved in the county good roads system which commenced yesterday, was continued today. Government Inspector W. Huber of the Provincial Department of Highways accompanied by the warden, the engineer and the roads superintendent and the members of the road and bridges committee participating in the tour. Yesterday morning the party went to Oakland, while in the afternoon the township of South Dumfries was visited. This morning Burford was the objective.

CLASS ENTERTAINED. A pleasant social gathering was held in the lecture room of Wellington St. Church on Wednesday afternoon, when the toys of the cradle club department, accompanied by their mothers, were entertained by the officers and friends of the Sunday school. The pastor, Rev. Dr. Henderson, presided, and a short program was given. Mr. W. G. Ranter, the superintendent of the school spoke briefly, referring suitably to the work, and a practical talk to mothers was made by Miss Carter of the children's welfare department of the local branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses. Beautiful solos were sweetly rendered by Little Anna McCann and Mrs. Dr. Cooper. Features of the afternoon were the baptism of one of the children, and the presentation of certificates of promotion to several of the little folk who are entering the beginners class. Refreshments were served and some time spent in social intercourse. A large measure of success which this department of the Sunday school has achieved, has been due to the unstinting service given so unsparsingly by Miss Tutt, the superintendent of the cradle club department.

PROPERTY SALE. A property deal of considerable importance was transacted here yesterday afternoon, the effects of which will be decidedly beneficial to the city, both as regards increased hotel accommodation and increased manufacturing facilities. That portion of the King estate lying between Market, Durham and George streets was disposed of to the Brantford Computing Scale Company, the Kitchen Overall Company, and the Spittal Hotel to Mr. Alex. Paterson. It is understood that the hotel property will be renovated and opened shortly. The Kitchen Overall company obtained a frontage of one hundred and fifteen feet on Durham street, facing the Grand Trunk tracks, and extending one hundred and thirty-two feet along George street. The Scale Company secured eighty feet frontage on Durham street.

KILLED IN ACTION. The Rev. Angus, 139 Nelson street, has received word that her son, Pte. Andrew Angus, was killed in action on April 14 last, while serving at the front with a Scottish regiment. He was 29 years of age, and has two brothers at the front, who went overseas from this city with the 126th Battalion.

SALTS IS FINE FOR KIDNEYS, QUIT MEAT

Flush the Kidneys at once When Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers. The Meat Forms Uric Acid. No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or the urine is cloudy or thick, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any drug store or pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. Fanciful salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush kidneys and to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending the uric acid troubles. It is not a diuretic. It is a purifier and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

Obituary MRS. KIPPAX. The death occurred this morning of Mrs. Kippax, beloved wife of Mr. George Kippax, Dufferin Ave. She was the eldest and only surviving daughter of the late Mr. Ignatius Cockshutt, and had been a resident of the city all her life. Her marriage took place 36 years ago, and until fading health compelled her to retire she was an active member of the Parrington church and did ardent work in connection with the Y.M.C.A. Her death was particularly mourned by her husband, Mr. George Kippax, and other kindred institutions. Her benefactions were many and her sweet nature found expression in continuous deeds of kindness.

Y.W.C.A. CONCERT SUCCESSFUL

Girls' Physical Classes Gave Most Pleasing Program Last Night

Of a light and merry nature was the concert given in Victoria Hall last night by the physical classes of the Y.W.C.A. The numbers on the programme were uniformly excellent, being of a very high standard indeed. The drills and dances were of a high order, and were accomplished with no confusion whatever. The numbers of a lighter character were interspersed with patriotic selections, the last three numbers, "The Emergency Corps" by the senior evening class, "The Nursing Sisters" by the older girls, and the "Fireside Workers" by the intermediate and little girls, representing women's share in the enterprising programme, in which the enterprising calibre of the various items was a creditable reflection on the able physical instructor, Miss Edith Johnson. Cottle, who has trained the girls in the different classes in a most competent manner. The pianist for the evening was Miss Desisle Johnson, whose work in this connection was splendid.

The young ladies' evening classes are divided into Junior and Senior, the former being composed of those who have been in attendance for one year, and the latter consisting of members of two years or more standing. There are three divisions in the school girls' classes, the very little girls ranging from approximately five to nine years, the intermediate grading from about ten to twelve years, and the older girls between twelve and fifteen years.

The programme. It was hard to distinguish between any of the numbers on the programme, all being uniformly excellent and well received. Should any distinction be made, the last three items, which illustrated women at war, were particularly good. The programme in detail was: "The Best Old Flag on Earth, all members; Folk Dances, Little Girls; Club swinging, Senior Evening Class; Rose Dance, Intermediate Girls; Dumbbells, Junior Evening Class; "Poppies," Senior Evening Class; Gymnastic games, older girls; (1) Club hushie, (2) Jumping the shot bar; Wands, Intermediate Girls; Gymnastic Drill, little girls; "Buttercups," Schottische, Junior Evening Class; "Emergency Corps," Senior Evening Class; "Nursing Sisters," older girls; "Fireside Workers," Intermediate and little girls; God Save the King.

BELGIAN'S VON BISS

Pathetic Description of human Cruelty Ruled Belgium Said of Von Biss

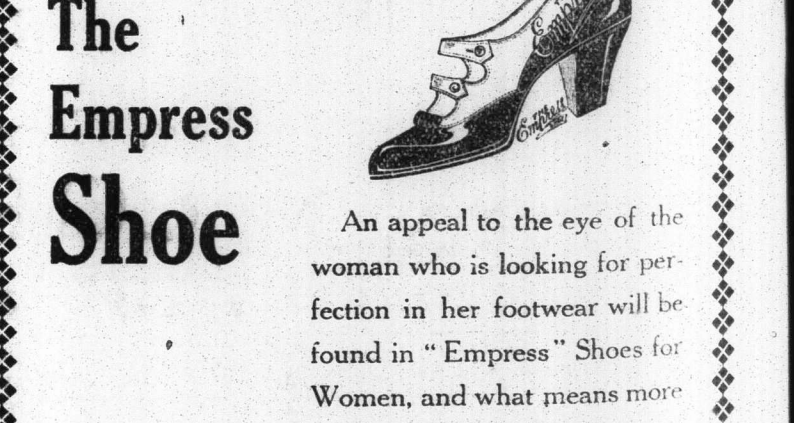

Nothing appeared in the paper of the day towards the end of the month, but he began the department of the able-bodied men in the Belgian army. He was forced to work in the mines, and his life of it.

I was in Antwerp in the month of June's terrible work was done. I issued that all able-bodied men of military age were to be sent to the front for deployment. They were to be sent of pell-mell, and the trucks like cattle and sent to the camps of slaves. In the month of June, and most, and Jenappe, and the trucks rounded up at the rate of one to 1,200 a day. Von Biss was his glory.

And now I want the reader to see the company men in imagination to a werp, in which place the blood of Belgium was quenched during earlier stages of the operation. Let me try and conjure up the scene. It is Monday morning. A distant mist is falling as we take up our position outside the railway station of the young women. One of the young women is the victim of Von Biss's vengeance, are sobbing loudly. Their cries of anguish pierce the murky morning air. The eyes of the younger women are drawn and set. With a dull sob, their hearts they realize that not as futile as lamentations. Scarcely a word is spoken. The women are being spoken.

BELGIAN'S SWEETHEART STOLEN BY VON BISSING, BLUEBEARD OF BELGIUM

Pathetic Description Given by an Eye Witness of the Inhuman Cruelty of the Teuton Brute Who Formerly Ruled Belgium; Though Dead Nothing Good Can be Said of Von Bissing

Correspondent in Montreal (Standard)

appealed with greater than the awful of women and girls. And the end of last year when the deportation of the men in Belgium to unparts of Germany, there to work in slavery, he had

Antwerp when Von Bissing's work began. He him in the decree he had that all able-bodied men were to prepare themselves for the coming of the Hun. He was called upon to in the morning. A drizzling rain fell, and the men were packed like cattle, and treated like slaves. In Tournai, Ghent and Mons, Quievrain, St. Ghilles and Louvain, men were being up at the rate of from 800 to 1,000 a day. Von Bissing was in

in the husband's soul. A red mist slowly winds its way out of the station. From the closed trucks the now silent spectators bear, as the train passes, the doleful voices of resolute young braves braced in the strains of the Brabanconnes. Von Bissing bears it with the rest of us. "Blast these Belgians," he grits out. "But I'll break them yet."

Three days later I was at Ghent. The Bluebeard had been informed that here the Belgian populace were giving a great deal of trouble. So he hit her hard hurried.

"Curse these swine," he said to me, viciously. "They seem to have no fear. I should like to crush them all—every one under my own heel. I hate them. Don't you hate them too?"

"Your Excellency ought to be aware that my position precludes me from passing an opinion," I said heatedly. "I have my own thoughts, and I keep them to myself."

"Ah," he said, with a cunning smile. "I can see by your manner that you do not approve of my treatment of these brutes? Is that so?"

"Since you have asked the question, Excellency," I replied, "I will answer it not as an official but as a man."

"Do. You should like you to," he sneered. Other people's opinions of one are always interesting.

"You are beyond insult!" I said.

"Then, your Excellency," I said

The central figure is that of Riffeman Andrew Angus, who has been killed in action. His two brothers went overseas with the 125th.

And now I want the reader to accompany me in imagination to Antwerp in which place the Bluebeard of Belgium was quartered during the earlier stages of the deportations. Let us go and conjure up the scene in the morning. A drizzling rain is falling as we take up our position outside the railway station. Old folk, broken in the battle of life, are to be the victims of Von Bissing's savagery, are sobbing bitterly. Their cries of anguish rise on the empty morning air. The faces of the younger women are white, and their eyes are staring. They are like laments. Scared, pale, and hungry children herd together, frightened, in droves. In the eyes of a young man, a stalwart young fellow is hugging his wife of his own accord. In her arms the woman holds her two-months old baby. The man is raining kisses on her face.

"Come along! Let go, woman!" shouts a soldier in German.

The woman does not understand the language, but she comprehends the gesture. With the tenacity of despair she clings on.

"Let me go, loved one; it must be so," murmurs the husband gently.

Still the woman retains her hold. For the moment she is demented with grief. The soldier, with an oath catches her by the hand, a piercing scream rises above the din. The stream rushes all the sleeping devils trade. Every convention has been violated. The rules of civilized warfare have been outraged. But Von Bissing cares not. He is occupied in gloating over the agony of the men being driven by blows, kicks and curses to the station.

A Song of Triumph
Ten minutes later the long train which their Hun conquerors had sentenced them.

"The bold swimmers," said the Cardinal, "had to run the gauntlet of motor boats armed with machine guns. They were discovered and fired on in the dark. Some never reached the shore, but others escaped."

The deportations were not necessary. For in some of the districts through which I have travelled the blue cards informing a man that he had to report himself for deportation under a penalty of being deprived of civic rights for three years and by a fine of 10,000 marks ($2,900) were followed by the intimation that on payment of a ransom of $250 the sentence of deportation would be reversed.

Even while the lovers were talking in the pretty little garden of David's parents at Eckeren a posse of German soldiers, the worst for stick and pipe for any mischief, came along. David had made a mistake in the time he was to report himself, and they had come to fetch him.

The girl clung to her beloved, her heart torn in two at the thought of parting.

"Enough of this!" cried one of the Hunns. "Get some wine, girl, and let us be gone. Time presses."

Worse Than Death
He had to exert all his brute strength to tear her arms away, but at length he succeeded, while David stood like a statue, fearing not for himself, but for the safety of the girl. This thought alone kept his hands from clutching the throat of the German bully. As the girl disappeared to fetch the wine, knowing it would be suicidal to refuse, David recalled a conversation he had had with his sweetheart a few minutes prior to the arrival of the soldiers.

"Here is a revolver," he had said, placing a small but powerful weapon in her hand. "There are worse things than death. If the worst comes to the worst, do not hesitate to kill yourself rather than face dishonor."

"I promise David," murmured the girl, concealing the weapon.

The soldiers drank the wine the girl brought, and David's heart gave a great throb of joy as they took him away, without molesting her.

Josefette was a brave girl. Clenching her white teeth she forced back the bitter tears of anguish which rose to her eyes, and made for her own home. She had found out by careful inquiries that the train on which David was to travel was to call at Saint Vliet and Starbroeck on the morrow to take up at these places the contingents of men going into slavery.

Her heart yearned for her lover. Why should she not be near him. Now that David was gone, Eckeren had lost all its attractions. In less than an hour she had cut off her wealth of beautiful hair. No tear fell from her eyes as she gazed at the golden tresses lying on the floor.

She was beyond such feminine weakness. She had become a woman with a desperate purpose. She clothed herself in a suit belonging to a cousin, who was already at the front, grimed her face, placed a fig under her tongue to alter the tone of her voice, pulled a cap well down over her eyes.

Going to a shed she took out her cousin's motor bicycle, and at top speed rode to Saint Vliet. She was in time. The next day she was among the number of men who boarded the train on which David was travelling.

Fortune favored her. By deft manoeuvring she managed to work her way through the crowd to her lover's side and whispered to him the joyful tidings that she was there. His being thrilled. But he was fearing lest her identity should be discovered.

Discovered
She endured all the hardships of that terrible journey with splendid fortitude, but when the train reached the South Station at Antwerp the news went round that the Governor-General was coming to inwith studied deliberation. "I think you are the most damnable coward and tyrant and the most unspcakable scoundrel that God ever allowed to crawl on this earth!"

"Sir, you are insolent!" he cried angrily. His face flushing a dull brick red. "One more remark of that kind, and my soldier shall place you under arrest. You insult me!"

"Look here Bissing," I said, purposely dropping the "Excellency" to add sting to my words; "you can cut out all your threats. I happen to be one of the few men in Belgium who do not care a damn for you. And you know it in spite of your bluff. I have seen sights by your side in the last few days. I never want to see again. You have looked on gloriating while babies have been butchered, women slaughtered, men kicked, beaten, and tortured; and you have chuckled while the women of Belgium have gone mad with grief at losing their loved ones. Yet you accuse me of insulting you. Why, you are beyond all insult."

Von Bissing stretched out a hand as if to caress my shoulder.

"There is no necessity of you and me to quarrel," he said. "These things must be. I have to cleanse Belgium. Duty forces me to act as I do."

"Bissing," I said quietly, "you are a liar."

"Come, come," he said, "you must not say such things. Shake hands and forget that this conversation has taken place. Come and split a bottle of wine."

"Go to the devil!" I said coldly, ignoring the outstretched hand. And turning on my heel I walked deliberately away.

The Bluebeard was seething with rage. If he could have killed, I should have been a dead man.

I admit I was wrong in view of my official position, in passing an opinion, and more so in using the strong language. I have narrowly quoted in order to give the reader an exact impression of what took place. But the sights I had seen had made my blood boil, and I could not help myself. Besides, I was safe in the knowledge that neither Von Bissing nor any of his Hunns dared lay a finger on me. They could only punish me by acts of treachery, and I had sojournd too long in strange places of the earth not to be fully prepared for any underhand movement.

"We Go to Death"
Later, as I made my way to the spot where the trains were being piling to steam, I saw the station carrying their load of slaves. I saw von Bissing again. The women had broken all bounds. They invaded the railway line, and with their hands and feet could the crowd of desperate creatures be removed, but the brutal Hun soldiers found a way.

They found their bayonets, pricking the clutching hands, and even piercing the thin clothing of these worse-than-widows. A score of women and five babies were slain in cold blood. Von Bissing was having a field day!

As I made my way along the railway line that leads to Germany, I saw red-eyed women searching for scraps of paper which the train was being carried off into slavery threw out of the trucks into which they were herded like cattle. I saw several of the documents, but we shall never work for the German tyrant. On another scrap of paper I saw "Our farewell to Belgium. We go to death, but not to slavery."

Among the stricken crowds priests moved, administering words of comfort. I saw my old and trusted friend, Cardinal Mercier, who exerted all his influence with von Bissing to stop the deportations but in vain. With tears in his eyes the Cardinal told me how several bold spirits from Antwerp had swum across the Scheldt in the black of the night to escape the doom of slavery in Germany to spect the deportees.

Josefette was ordered to stand forward. Von Bissing placed his hand under her chin and tilted her lovely face upward.

"A woman, by Himmel!" he said. "And a deuced pretty one at that! That hair will soon grow again. Little one, and then you will grace my nest. And I will take care of you petite."

In a blindfold, the terrible meaning behind Von Bissing's sinister words came to David and his beloved.

"Spare her! Oh, spare her!" cried David in the agony of his soul. "She is my sweetheart. She is all I have in the world."

Von Bissing slipped his arm round the girl's shoulders. "She is mine now," he said.

David went mad. With a cry he sprang towards Von Bissing, regardless of the consequences.

But the soldiers surrounding the monster were too quick for him.

But the girl was true to that promise which she had made to her lover. When Von Bissing arrived he learnt, with furious disappointment, that Josefette had died by her own hand.

PUSHING PUBLICITY
The International League has been the fact that publicity is one of its chief assets towards the coming season a success. The visiting club mails to the press of the city they are going to visit the list of all their players. In the visiting order, and remarks about the players. For instance, in the Toronto despatch is the interesting fact that all the men are in good condition with the exception of Bentz, who has a sore arm, and Thompson, who has just recovered from "the flu". The Baltimore batting order is: Truesdale, 2b; Shannon, 3b; Barber, c.f.; Lamar, 1b; McAvoy, p. Washop, p. Sherman, Bentz, and Thormahlen are the other players, while Fewster is substitute pitcher.

OTHER SUGGESTIONS.
The information bureau is appreciated by the scribes, especially on the first appearance of a star in the season. There are always changes from the year before, and the fans are unfamiliar with the names of the players. An improvement could be made if announcements were last season. For instance, Truesdale was with the Leafs last season, with Minneapolis, Art Bessie with Columbus, Williams with Washington, and Warhop with the New York Americans.

RAN TO THIRD.
A recent suggestion for changes in the playing rules, of which none is required, is that a batter have the option of running to first or third base when he hits. It is an absurd suggestion, of course, but the thing has happened, not through choice, but because of slight confusion in the upper story. There was an instance of it once which instanced that he doth breed a habit in a man. John K. Tener tells the story. Law Dickerson, outfielder for the Pirates in the long ago, had at his disposal both left handed, and left handed pitchers in those times were scarce. Batters seldom faced them, and some batters, including Dickerson, had not any idea of what they looked like. One day he faced one, however, and was bewildered. His notes suggested that he turn around and bat right handed. He did so, grounded toward the left instead of the right, as he generally did when batting left handed, and so fared was the habit of turning from the side of the plate on which he stood be dashed to third base.

STARS OF YESTERDAY
Four of the greatest stars who ever played the national game at any one time, and who began the game as active players, were missing from the ranks of the participants in major league circles when the championship season opened. They were that nonpareil pair of pitchers, Christy Mathewson and Cy Young, and those kings of infielders, John H. Wagner and Napoleon Lajoie. In addition to these men, who will live long in the annals of the game as having no superiors among contemporaries, and surely the peers of any products of the diamond since the establishment of the sport, a fifth may be passing. The great "Miser" Brown and the peerless Mathewson really severed their connection with the game last year. One has passed never to return, while the other is yet to prove his ability in a managerial capacity. The angular and grotesque Wagner evidently has quit the game, although he has yet to speak authoritatively on that point. The easy and graceful Lajoie has drifted to and from more where he will end his career as play-manager. And now it is said in Boston that John J. Evers is through as a player. He did not play the first game of the season with the Braves, although he was in the lineup last Saturday. Evers has been more or less incapacitated for the last two years, and several times has announced his determination to quit the game. It is asserted that one of his arms is shorter than the other, a condition that is attributed to a nervous affliction. Evers has been more or less an "outcast" on all except his home field, yet his finesse as a player and his indomitable spirit have invariably won the admiration of every fan. Baseball stars are constantly appearing before the public, but it is conceivable that it will be a long time before four heroes of such great prowess and superior skill as Wagner, Lajoie, Brown and Mathewson will arise again in the baseball firmament.

MONEYED MEN

It has often been remarked that the ball player of the present day is much more independent than the diamond athlete of the past. The reason is not shrouded in mystery. It is simply that the 1917 player knows how to handle his money. In the old days he used to squander it foolishly and constantly was in debt to his club or his friends. Today the ball player exercises the greatest care with his pay cheque. The result is he owns dividend-paying stocks and bonds, holds first-class mortgages, is a farmer, or, like Daubert, a business man. All the time he is playing baseball he is feathering his nest, putting aside something for the rainy day that comes to every diamond athlete, for his career at best is short—eight years being the average, according to statistics, of a player in the big leagues. It is the fact that he amasses money which makes him independent. It explains why he approaches the magnate cold and deliberate, and tells him that unless he gets what he believes as just compensation he will quit the game. It shows why a magnate treats a player with the greatest respect, and does not blatantly bowl him out as in the bygone days when the club owner assumed a you may knock at my door but you can't come in attitude.

Music and Drama

Pauline Frederick is getting her Red Cross training early at the Famous Players studio. She is playing a nurse in her next Paramount picture, "Her Better Self," which is now in the course of production under the direction of Robert Vignola. By the time she has finished the hospital episodes in the production, Miss Frederick expects to be a full-fledged nurse. MUTINOUS MONKEY
James Kirkwood, Mary Miles Minter's director, saw an organ grinder with a monkey in the streets of Santa Barbara the other day and decided he would put the pair in the cabaret scene of "A Dream or Two Ago." The monkey behaved beautifully until the cafe diners began throwing confetti. He seemed to take their actions as a personal affront, and grew very indignant and excited. At length he grabbed a decanter from a nearby table and threw it at Mr. Kirkwood, bit a piece out of the property boy and was tearing Mary's dancing dress to shreds when peace was restored by throwing a tablecloth over him. The poor organ grinder was quite as indignant as his monkey, and went off in a huff. Kirkwood says that he will choose his extras with greater care in the future.

SIDELIGHTS ON THE STAGE AND SCREEN

Patrons of the Brant Theatre who witness the week-end bill there are assured of two hours and a half of the heartiest and finest entertainment ever offered by any amusement house in this city, for the management of the Brant have once more been successful in providing a full bill of high class offerings such as those for which the theatre has won its name. Jack Pickford, not the least of a talented family, in his latest feature production "The Dummy" depicts probably his best screen role, a part of strong dramatic opportunity as well as comedy tendencies. The picture is a gripping detective story of the tensest and most absorbing nature, and the plot is bound to hold the interest and attention of all to the last moment. The fifth episode of the stirring serial "Patric" which preaches the gospel of preparedness, depicts the noted Irene Vernon Castle in some of her most exciting adventures, the scenes depicting the wreck of an airplane and the subsequent destruction of practically an entire island are exceptionally fine. Another film of the deepest interest to Brantfordites is a News Weekly portraying the departure of the 215th from the city, the street scenes being most clear and realistic. A great hit is scored by Stickey's comedy circus, a vaudeville offering of unusual merit introducing some wonderfully trained animals including probably the smallest dog upon the stage. Eldridge, Barlow and Eldridge present a clever comedy skit "The Law" replete with clean merriment and laughs. Music and drama.

"A DAUGHTER OF THE GODS"
In "A Daughter of the Gods" William Fox's $1,000,000 picture beautiful to be seen at the Rex, May 10, 11 and 12, there is much to please the children as well as grown folk, for in the making its creator considered the little ones, knowing that which pleased the youngsters must also appeal to the parents.

In one of the big scenes, the country of the Gnomes, a fairy-like population of their mythical kind, is shown with all the faithfulness of detail that marks elsewhere in this famous picture the master hand of Fox. It is an enchanted setting for Annette Kellermann, the "most perfect woman in the world."

Amid tropical foliage and under a raging mountain torrent can be seen the little creatures who play so important part in this last work in filmed story. To create the effect of the mountain stream, Mr. Fox found it necessary to divert a river from its course, but never departed either as to the gigantic nature of the task or the cost attendant upon the same, he sent to New York for a company of the best engineers to be had.

This one item represented the outlay of a small fortune and gives a small idea to what extremes Mr. Fox went to make "A Daughter of the Gods" the scenic sensation of the century.

Engineers and navel and military representatives of the British Government at Kingston, Jamaica, visited the location several times and expressed their surprise at the under-taking which, to a man, they described as one of the most remarkable pieces of engineering ever attempted by an individual.

ANTIQUE ORGAN
John H. Collins, Metro-Rolle director, has what he considers the most valuable "prop" ever used in a motion picture play and it only cost him $12.41 express charges. It is an organ more than 200 years old, which has been in one family since 1766. Mr. Collins, seeking an antique organ for use in a production, told his troubles to a friend who said he could get just what was wanted. The organ is a solid block of oak about three feet high and four and one-half feet long. The keyboard is set in and there are no stops and only a single small pedal. It has been in the same family for generations.

A MARVEL IN MEXICO
Slim Summerville, one of the heroes of "Villa of the Movies" is considerably over six feet tall, and only an inch or so wide. Mexicans, even the tallest of them, scarce reached to his coat pocket. During the trip made by the "Villa of the Movies" company into Mexico, Slim was trailed by throngs of the little yellow men. His tight pants excited their admiration and nothing tickled them so much as to watch him gently sit down while wearing them. Slim was nicknamed "Tamale" by the soldiers, but the señoritas politely described him as "panatela." As a matter of fact they do roll cigars in Mexico, just about the same size and shape as the Keystone slat.

Horsemen Ran Amuck

By Courier Leased Wire.
Montreal, May 3.—Evidence given before Judge Lanctot in the case of William French, Thomas Morgan and C. Hyland, of Portland, Maine, horsemen, accused of having been drunk on the Steamer Cassandora late in the speed of the ship while in the war zone, thereby endangering the ship and those on board, showed that Captain Brown had his work cut out in getting the ship to Montreal safely. The captain said that not only the three men named were drunk, but also that a number of others were drunk and incapable of work. Five of the firemen became incapacitated through the use of liquor. One of the witnesses said as soon as the ship docked an officer got on deck and wagged his head up and down, yelling:

"I am a horse, I am a horse," and "Put a halter on him."
A charge of theft of whiskey from the ship's stores was also lodged against Morgan and Hyland. Morgan complained because thirty-one other horsemen who were on the ship had not been prosecuted with him, because they were also drunk, he claimed. These men were shipped back to the United States.

The growth of shipping on the Pacific coast of Canada is further evidenced by the coming of another new ship, the Osaka Shosen Kaisha freighter Burma Maru.

IRISH ENRAGED BY HUN ATROCITIES

Outrages Committed Against Women Rouse Bitter Enmity

By An Irish Officer
Dublin, May 3.—Towards the close of the South African war I was in a certain part of Ireland that proudly boasted of being "the most rebel county in the country" and all the sympathy of the inhabitants was frankly given to "the poor little Boers fighting the big bully England."

"Shure, it's like them cursed Sasenach," said a fiercely patriotic old farmer to me one day. "Tramping on a little nation just as they've done to poor old Ireland. Bu, they're wrong if they think they've conquered us. We'll show them the contrary some day. And he continued to inveigh against England's tyranny and spoke openly of a lurid revenge to come.

"What would happen," I asked him, "if a foreign army, the German for instance, landed in Ireland to help you against the English?" He turned on me fiercely.

"Why, we'd be hell out of them for interfering! What business is it of theirs?" I smiled to myself and wondered if any born man out of Ireland would ever understand us. The English never will and where they fall, how can any foreigner succeed in grasping the truth that into our family quarrel we permit no outsider to intrude.

Irish Attitude Has Changed
But more than this is needed to explain the change of the hearts of the Irish since the beginning of the war. Then many of us said, "It is not our war." Yet at any time had Cassandora landed in Ireland at the head of German troops, his bitterest opponents in the field would have been those who now sympathize so heartily with what they call "a martyred patriot." They would have resented the outsiders.

But now the sight of a Prussian soldier would send the wildest Irish rebel instantly at his throat. Not even the most rabid Sinn Féin would range himself, if he were wily given the chance, under the banner of the army that ravaged Belgium and France and murdered babies and outraged women. In those crimes lies the secret of the change of Irish hearts.

To no nation in the world does its religion appeal more than to Catholic Ireland. To no man on God's earth does the purity of woman mean more than to the Irishman. And the tales of desecrated churches and slaughtered priests, the horrible revelations of the violations of the British Empire tents, the sand of Irishmen who in peace were as rebel as my old farmer.

See that Irish peasant passing the chapel in his village? Watch how he doffs his battered hat and crosses himself in reverence to the Sacred Presence in the Holy Sacrament on the altar in the dim interior. Look at him standing at the street corner, a black-robed nun goes by to nurse the sick or shepherds her little flock of poorly-dressed children across the road. Off comes the hat again.

"God be with you, sister," he says respectfully. And the nun nods to him with a little smile of kindness; for she is truly the sister of all of us in our land.

Think that that man felt, what thousands of us like him in Ireland felt, when we heard of the German outrages on holy women like her.

At first few could bring themselves to believe that the horrible tales could believe that white men could be worse than wild beasts. I know it; for I was in Dublin when this stories came in from Belgium. I spoke of them to officers of the National Volunteers—men who had enrolled themselves to fight Ulster and England too, if she backed up "The Black North."

"These tales are lies," said one. "They must be lies. I don't know much about the Germans; but they are civilized men, aren't they? They are not black savages, are they? These stories," added another. "Germany is their enemy. But they go too far when they spread tales like these that no one could believe about any European nation."

Nun's Report Convincing
Both these men are fighting for the Empire now. For when, from Belgium and France, Irish nuns came back to their native land and told of other nuns sacrificed to the brutal lust of drunken German beasts, they put forward and proved categorically the known destroyers of ordered outrages, and bitter conviction entered every man's heart.

Then we Irish Catholics who have clung through the centuries in womanly abode, knew on which side alone we could fight. The "rebel" forgot his sentimental grievances and his sentimental indignation. He began to wonder what they were, after all. Of the Germans hitherto he had scarcely ever heard. But now he knew that the nation of bull and men, of desecrators of God's holy ranks of the Irish Guards, of the churches.

Then he and his followers filled the Mustangs, the Dakotas, the Connaught Rangers. He went into battle singing the rebel song, "God Save Ireland." But he sang it by the side of English troops and bared his bayonet against German hearts.

Who could doubt us? How could it be otherwise? To us Irish Catholics there could be only one possible attitude towards the known destroyers of Catholic treasures, the murder of priests, the profaner of Catholic churches. We could not be false to our history, to our faith.

Our Irish sisters had brought us from Flanders the cherished flag of the Irish Brigade. Long years ago it had flown in battle beside the banner of the nation of bull and men that had sheltered our exiles, and now called to us to save. Could we refuse her?

Catholic Belgium lay bleeding under the feet of German butchers. Could we do aught but spring to her aid?

And all but a few of Ireland are with us to-day. A handful of misguided fanatics beguiled a couple of thousand ignorant peasants and poverty-stricken working men from the slums of Dublin into a mad revolt lately. But that not in the early dark hour of England's need.

It came at the end of all danger of defeat for her and her allies had long since passed. Yet the Germans quote it as proof of Ireland's sympathy towards the nation of bull and men of the hundreds of thousands of Irish from Ireland, from Canada, from Australia, from all the world over, who have taken to the banner of the Sasenach to fight against the kindly nation that only wishes "to free enslaved Ireland?" Are they "pathetic German?"

Who, believe that, if the Kaiser's soldiers set foot in Ireland, we Catholic Irish would welcome them? No; rather, as my old rebel farmer said, "We'd bate hell out of them."

DRINK A GLASS OF REAL HOT WATER BEFORE BREAKFAST.
Says we will both look and feel clean, sweet and fresh and avoid illness.

Sanitary science has of late made rapid strides with results that are of untold blessing to humanity. The latest application of its untiring research is the recommendation that it is as necessary to attend to internal sanitation of the drainage system of the human body as it is to the drains of the house.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste sour and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating, it cleans out all the sour fermentations, gasses, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the phosphated hot water is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatism, stiffness; others who have sickly skins, blood disorders and sallow complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

Mayor at War With Council

By Courier Leased Wire.
Quebec, May 3.—Quebec's mayor is openly at war with his city council. He has vetoed to-day the city budget as it was passed at the last meeting of the council. For at least four years, the finances of Quebec city have been rather under par and the climax had been reached. Mayor Lavigneur says, and he stated that if the present gait of expenditure was kept by the Council, the city will face a deficit of close to half a million dollars next June.

At the last sitting of the council the Mayor asked the Aldermen to vote down a number of proposed raises in the salaries of civic employees, but his warnings were unheeded. The Aldermen, some of them, voted to raise the salaries and to make up for the shortage of money, cut down the annual budget from $1,600,000 to $1,550,000. This the Mayor said was not sufficient so he vetoed the budget to-day. The idea is to have all salaries above $1,200 remain unaltered and save on extra help at the city hall.

Vancouver has again figured prominently in the casualty lists and official notification was received of the wounding of Lieut.-Col. Elmer Jones, D. S. O.

LABOR PROBLEM IN FARM PRODUCTION

Larger Fields and Bigger Machines Suggested as a Factor in Solution

The cry for more food might well be answered by the farmer by a demand for more machinery, and many people other than farmers might devote more of their attention to business that is a good deal in their own line—that is, manufacture of farm machinery—with better results than can be secured through their endeavors to assist by their personal efforts in the farmer's field. A potato planting machine would do more for a farmer than any four men when it comes to getting acreage into this crop; a binder would be of more use in a grain field than a dozen green hands; a riding cultivator would replace four or five men with hoes, in almost any hood crop, and a good small tractor would reduce the number of teamsters necessary for plowing and harrowing by half at any rate.

The men could be used, too, in eliminating waste at harvest time. The saving of every atom of the crop grown in any year plus a willingness on the part of the market to do their best with all grades of produce in the present crisis would result in a fair sufficiency of foodstuffs for the inhabitants of this country.

Sufficient food to meet the demand in this country is not all that is necessary at the present time, so an increased acreage of the staples, especially grain and potatoes, should be planted, so that there will be plenty of these for export purposes. The armies as well as the civilians of the allied nations now require much of Canada's crops for their maintenance and the demand will no doubt continue to increase until long after the war is over, and the failure to meet this demand would result in disaster to the makers of it, and ultimately almost equal disaster to those who fail to fill the demands.

A whole-hearted response to the call that has gone out for cooperation of town and country in endeavoring to overcome the food shortage would result splendidly if made by every person according to his ability; that is, if each person declaring a decided interest in the undertaking would make a sacrifice worth while. The poor man with nothing but the work of his hands to offer will deserve all credit if he volunteers to assist in farm work at the right season, though many such can be better employed under directions of those who can (if they will) give work to such men in the making of machinery that would be of far greater use to the farmer than their individual efforts with hand tools.

The present condition of many adjacent farms in Ontario at the present moment is such that an economy in working them might be effected if several were made into one by the removal of the fence.

Men from the city willing to work at farm work for a week, or two, could be employed in taking down the fences and storing them for future use.

THINNING, CULTIVATING, WATERING AND TRANSPLANTING IN GARDENS

Hints for the Back Yard Gardener in Some of the Important Points That Will Confront Him in the Campaign for Increased Production

The backyard gardener must not attempt to grow immense quantities of vegetables from a small plot. He must require a fair amount of growing space just as human beings do.

The most efficient and handy tool for cultivation is the common hoe. A wide and a narrow bladed hoe will be found best.

Watering It is possible to water vegetable crops over abundantly. Some soils and some crops require more watering than others so great care must be used in applying water in the backyard garden.

must be applied gently. Force will wash out the seeds, flatten the soil, expose the roots to the sun's rays and thus cause wilting or dying of the plant.

Transplanting The city dweller will find it a good practice to buy plants of many of the sorts of vegetables and transplant them into his garden.

Cultivation should be carried on persistently to kill the weeds and to allow air into the soil, and to keep the surface of the soil in a somewhat rough condition rather than a solid firm state.

Laying a Cable Under Fire Single Handed

All in the Day's Work, Said the Veteran Sapper, Who, One of His Companions Thought, Was Sure of the D. C. M.

London, May 4.—The little party of signal sappers ran their cable barrow down alongside the trench, paying out the wire as they went. They cursed softly as the barrow rattled over the stones, raising what seemed to them an awful racket. Orders were for absolute silence as the attack they were to follow-up depended on surprise for its success.

Nothing broke the silence of the night but their own labored breathing—the going was heavy and the barrow very weighty—or an occasional whispered order from the corporal in charge. The cable team passed over a little footbridge crossing the trenches, leaving the barrow with its drum some little distance along a narrow track; then they came back to wait by the bridge for one of the attacking brigades that were to extend the line to the north and left of the position held at the moment by the British troops.

The signal party consisted of two operators carrying telegraph instruments of the "Vibrator" type, and six other men who were to lay the cable, two of the men, "linemen," being responsible for its maintenance. Only two of the party had rifles, for actual fighting is not a cable team's job.

Crack! and light is on. Suddenly the stillness was shattered by a sharp "crack" and the velvet dark was punctured by flashes. Enemy star shells burst in the sky. The first crack of a rifle was followed by a ripple of scattered firing that gradually swelled into a continuous rattle, and above it all came the sound of cheering. The attack had started on the nearer left.

The little cable team was now in the midst of a shower of rifle bullets, and as they started to run back to the trench to take cover while they waited for the infantry to come up, the rifle fire was punctuated by the staccato of a machine-gun. The sappers knew that so far, the British troops on the higher ground had not fired a shot—they could tell as much from the sound—and they knew also that the first lines of enemy trenches had to be taken with the bayonet. The enemy turned a machine-gun on the little foot-bridge as they reached the trench.

Enemy Comes in Fours. The infantry came along in fours, forming two deep to pass over the bridge, and take the narrow track that lay at the foot of the rising ground. They walked into the hail of lead, and, though man after man dropped silently, they did not falter. The "signals" followed with the barrow, laying the wire in the track of their brigade. The going was easier on the beaten track, and a big sapper, who at a pinch could lay the cable drum, weighing over a hundredweight, on his back, and run with it, and was useful on the rear handles of the barrow to steady it over rough ground, took the heavy vibrator from a slightly-built telegraphist, to carry it. The hail of bullets was as heavy as ever, and one could hear the tapping of the machine guns.

The sapper felt for a moment a sinking feeling in his stomach and thought that he could guard his head. He hoisted the heavy telegraph instrument on to his shoulder nearest the enemy, and plodded on silently. Then he thought struck him; if the instrument DID stop a bullet, the chances were that it would be put out of commission, and the safety of the brigade depended a good deal on communication being quickly established. It wouldn't do, he thought, and he brought the instrument down to his knees, carrying it like a gladstone bag.

Missed its Way. The infantry had passed ahead travelling more quickly than could the cable team, who were occupied in laying the line. Parties of enemy prisoners began to emerge from the darkness, the bayonets of the guarding soldiers gleaming faintly. Up above them the cheering came in gusts, and now and then, the enemy star shells broke over the trench, throwing the trees and bushes into sharp silhouette.

Then the cable team missed its way. Headquarters, on being spoken to over the wire, could not tell the exact whereabouts of the brigade and the heavy sapper volunteered to find it.

The sapper set off on his errand marking his way, mentally, as he went. He met a party of infantry moving up to the hills, and asked for the whereabouts of the brigade. The soldier he spoke to, a tall, thin, saturnine Australian, gave no reply. The sapper asked again.

"Who are you?" said the Australian, suspiciously. "What's the password?" "This was the first the sapper had heard of a password."

"I don't know any password," said he, "but you don't know where the brigade is, say so!"

The Australian shot back the bolt of his rifle. "Who the hell are you asking questions of your own?" "Don't mess about with that rifle," said the sapper. "I'm a division signaller, here's my badge, and if you like to come along, I'll show you my cable barrow, too, you blankety blank, long drink of misery, you!"

"That's all right," breathed the colonel, "no blankety Blanche could cuss like that! I don't know where your brigade is, but this is So-and-So."

"Right!" said the sapper. "That's good enough," and as he trotted on, his reitows, he murmured to himself, "I don't believe there IS a password. Theoretical blither!"

Found Headquarters. From the information received, the cable team knew that their brigade was some distance further out on the road, and presently by turning up to the high ground, they found the Brigade Headquarters snugly settled in a little valley. Communication being established, for some time, the sappers dug themselves in and slept in their clothes without blankets, until the early morning, when their hands shook the sappers from their dreamless sleep just as dawn was breaking. They were to lay a cable to a given point and meet the enemy team laying from Division Headquarters. The lines were to be joined, and thus a lot of time would be saved in duplicating the telegraph connection. As they set off in the pale light, dead men lay all about their path, enemy soldiers mostly, testifying to the severity of last night's fighting. The greater part of the way was fairly under cover, but at the last there were about 150 to 200 yards where the path crossed an open space. This space was subjected, for no apparent reason, to heavy shrapnel fire, and the sappers could see, as well, rifle bullets ripping the dry soil. Obviously, they could not take the barrow over this ground without heavy casualties or, perhaps, the destruction of the barrow.

HOW UNCLE SAM'S DAUGHTER IS "SHOWING THE FLAG"

GREAT MAJORITY OF EVERY DAY ILLS DUE TO OVEREATING

Dr. William Brady, Health Expert, Says Light Eating Means Long Life

MIDDLE AGE CRITICAL Weak Heart Shown to be Due to Bad Teeth

"More people die in Ontario every year as a result of immoderate eating than of immoderate drinking," was the statement credited to Dr. C. J. Hastings, public health officer of Toronto, in an address recently. Dr. William Brady, health expert, and the author of "How to Keep Well," speaking in Brooklyn bore out the truth of this assertion when he declared that "an unduly great majority of everyday ill, stomach troubles, rheumatism and so forth, are the result of overeating."

Dr. Brady spoke to an immense audience in the auditorium of the Brooklyn Eagle office. He said: "I just want to say a few things about middle age. That is the time of life we all reach sooner or later. The fortieth year introduces the most dangerous period and the most fatal period of life. The death rate among babies and the young, and even among the aged, has been declining through the efforts of the public health workers, improved sanitation and improved food. The death rate in the middle aged from 40 to 50 years, has steadily increased during the past two or three generations. Why? Because the people do not understand the danger of middle age. The average effort to teach the individual to keep well. There are however a few organized efforts, in a very small way, to instruct the individual.

"Middle age is fatal because of certain diseases which seem to attack at middle age. The United States mortality tables teach us that the most frequent causes of death in tuberculosis, second in cancer, and then heart disease, Bright's disease and apoplexy. While there has been an effort to instruct the public on cancer, there is no effort being made to instruct men on the other enemies of middle age.

Man as Old as His Arteries—Overeating Doesn't Make One Strong. "It is an old saying that a man is as old as his arteries and a woman as old as she looks." It is arterial degeneration which manifests itself in apoplexy or failure of the heart, gradually falling of circulation or Bright's disease. The arteries grow hard, blood pressure rises above the normal limit.

"What causes this? I think if you sit down in most any restaurant and observe people eating, you will find that the average man above middle life stows away a meal big enough for a team of horses. The average man thinks that the more he eats the stronger he will be. Every ounce of food more than the body requires to maintain the normal weight is an excess and a burden to the arteries.

"In the earliest stages of many diseases the first danger sign is increasing weight. A slight increase of weight, say 5 per cent in young people is considered a favorable sign. It seems to be a protection against tuberculosis, which is a disease of young adults. When we pass 30 or 35 there's good reason to be alarmed, for increasing weight is one of the signs of increasing blood pressure and the breakdown which will bring Bright's disease, heart failure and apoplexy.

Eat Less, First Point in Prolongation of Life. "The first point in the prolongation of life is to eat less. Very few of us eat little enough. Most everybody eats more than is required to maintain life. I presume that if the amount of food were to eat the right amount of food there would not be a great deal of use for doctors, because an unduly great majority of everyday ill, stomach troubles, rheumatism and so forth, are the result of overeating, day after day, year after year.

GIRLS' ONE-PIECE DRESS. By Anabel Worthington.

A clever new way of introducing fullness is the prominent feature of this smart one-piece dress for the school girl, No. 8232. The fronts are gathered at the shoulders and again under the pockets, producing the soft effect shown in the sketch. The pockets are stitched right over the shoulders. A large, girlish-looking sailor collar of white is an effective trimming, which is emphasized by a bright silk tie. The dress fastens all the way down the centre front. A combination of materials makes a stunning belt, as suggested in the front view, though a plain patent leather belt is always in good taste. Sleeves in two different styles are given, the long ones having a deep cuff to match the collar.

The one-piece dress pattern is cut in five sizes—8, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. The 8-year size requires 2 1/2 yards 27-inch, 2 3/4 yards 26-inch, 2 1/2 yards 44-inch, with 3/8 yard 36-inch contrasting material for collar and cuffs and 3/8 yard 36-inch silk for tie and belt.

THIS A FEAT TO FIT FEET

Avoid Foot Troubles

By wearing properly fitting Shoes

It is a mistake to try to crowd a No. 9 foot into a No. 7 shoe. On the other hand if a shoe is too large it will produce corns and bunions just as surely as will a tight shoe. It is essential that a shoe be just the right fit if you wish to avoid foot troubles. If however, you have bad feet, produced by wearing ill-fitting shoes, then we are at your service with all the known appliances for such ills. Tell your foot troubles to us. We are here every day, and we consider it our business to know.

Wear shoes from the "better" shoe store—shoes that put the EE's in FEET.

THIS WOMAN TO THIS MAN

From Thursday's Daily. In order to insure the truth of this message, and to make it more effective, he motored into Toronto, sent off a long telegram to his cipher. Returning, he had a conversation with Charlington, Butler, and Char, the latter conversation which left the first grave and subdued. Later they got in the car again though it rained with rain, and was late at night.

Between twelve and one, the Knight, strolling toward the station, the automobile returned, stopped in the blaze of the party for the motor to slow down. "Is it all right?" he inquired. "It's all right," he answered somewhat sullenly, yet with a faint reluctant respect. "Nothing happened here Monday night."

"God!" he muttered, "it's all right," he answered somewhat sullenly, yet with a faint reluctant respect. "Nothing happened here Monday night."

Perhaps it had been partly fault. She was handsome, young years ago, but she had not old man, jealous and suspicious knowing that his money had the beautiful wild creature who it was at Brantford, and she had found her out in an angry, partly volitional, partly sane and partly passionate. He turned her out, but she had not a penny, and she had not a cent concerned in the intrigue, but tested—had been flush of money, enough to get away with, just then to lend her a thousand dollars, enough to get away with, it had been called a loan, but back, and never did get it.

In California and had been very successful, a success she looked up in New York, and she gladly made herself useful in ways "Don" and those he "with."

One way was to find out the her and worth of her rich jewels, and where they were, and their realizing they were not. And she had the first. And she had the Monarchic was not by any means the first that she had been valuable in diverting suspicion, throwing it upon the wrong party. Knight had consulted her, and she had flattered her from the time. Now he told himself that but paid for his thoughtlessness, had taken Madalena for a machine rather than as a woman, and though he now owed to her loss of his happiness, that had been undeserved, and as pressed it to himself walking wet paths at midnight, he had to lose it anyhow.

He would frighten Madalena that she would never dare to trick again, and he would understand that because of what had done their partnership had to an end once and forever, wise she should feel herself from him.

Bad he might be, and was, knew; but he didn't think it his make-up, somehow, to go back to a woman.

He did not go back to the after his short talk with Char after he had heard the stable strike four. It was easier to see things clearly out of than in his room adjoining the key's—that closed room, for to him now, where she was plying, and surely having him for the long nightmare days he just lived through, it had not full for much deliberate thought and he wanted to think of the future; how to begin again, and to keep the woman who had so strangely come to mean more to him than anything else had meant—more, he knew that thing else could mean.

He found himself repeating words he remembered best marriage service, not bitterly had repented them to himself at night, but yearningly, dimly

From Thursday's Daily. In order to insure the coming of a message, and to make it realistic, he motored into Torquay and sent a long telegram, partly in code. Returning, he had a conversation with Charrington, the driver, and Char, the chauffeur, a conversation which left the brothers groggy and subdued. Later Char went to the car again, though it poured with rain, and was gone until late at night.

Between twelve and one o'clock Char, strolling toward the garage, heard the automobile return, and stepped in the blaze of the acetylene light to see it stop.

"Is all right?" he inquired. "All right," Char answered promptly and sullenly, yet with a certain reluctant respect. "Nothing will happen here Monday night."

"And?" his master answered, and Char, the thought of Madelena's name, which would be the subject of the prophecy which would be fulfilled. It was not a pleasant one, yet as he had said to Annesley, he planned no revenge against the ladies—the woman whose name had stealthily scratched.

"For instance, he would not have to tell her how, as a boy in Chicago, he had learned to make strange use of those clever nervous hands of his, which she had lovingly praised as 'sensitive and artistic.' He could almost see the girl shudder and grow pale at hearing how proud he had been at sixteen of being admitted to friendship with a 'swell' who was as fascinating as any 'Raffles' of fiction; how it had amused the fellow to teach him a few tricks of the trade, without disturbing the balance of the pile."

It would gain him no credit in Annesley's eyes if he should assure her that, though he knew how—none better—he had somehow never cared to put his skill in practice, but had always preferred leaving that part of the industry to others. No excuse could help him with her, and the way he had known she would follow in his view of the matter, the eccentric friend and employer with whose interests he had been associated more or less since his twenty-first year.

How disgusting would seem to Anita the inside history of the Monarchic episode, upon which he had rather prided himself until love for her had begun making subtle changes in his view of life? He and old Paul Van Vreck had laughed together at the patent lock on which the agent depended—a lock invented by the reputed member of the firm, and followed by a second invention, even more clever; a little instrument designed to open a door in spite of it.

There had been the drug, too, which, leaving no odor behind, had the same effect as chloroform, and "took" even more quickly. Paul Van Vreck had read of certain experiments made by a professor of chemistry in Jena, had gone to Germany to see the man, had bought the formula which had not yet proved itself entirely successful, had added an ingredient on his own account, and triumphed.

These parts of the complicated and well fitting scheme had seemed deliciously amusing to Knight in those days; that Van Vreck should use his secret skill against his own brothers and nephews in the business he had made; that the great expert should add to his fortune by stealing from his own firm, or rather, from the great insurance company who would repay their losses; that in such ways, with such money, could add treasures to his famous collection, practically at no expense to himself, and have besides the exquisite pleasure of laughing in his sleeve at the work.

It had all added zest to the work. And Knight had been pleased with some of the small inventions of his own, praised by Van Vreck; a smart hiding place in the heel of a boot, almost impossible to detect, and almost equally convenient and invisible on board the great passenger steamer, and Madelena and their two assistants, among the other passengers on board the big ship, had voluntarily consented to be searched for the missing jewels. And he had laughed sneeringly at the credulity of those who had believed in Madelena's trumped up vision "of the small fair man," the lighted life preserver dropped into the sea at

As he wandered from one winter-saddened garden after another—the Italian garden, the Dutch garden, the rose garden—he searched his soul, asking if how much more he should have to tell the girl about his past. In a kind of desperate resignation he persuaded himself that there was nothing he would not be willing to tell her now, if it were to her good, and if she wished to hear.

But something within him said that she would wish to hear no more. Knowing what she knew, she would think more than enough. She would doubtless refuse to listen to him, even if she felt curiosity. She would doubtless refuse to listen if he volunteered a further confession. He was instinctively sure of his ground there, and in his bitterness of spirit there was a faint gleam of comfort: certain details of his degradation (she would never care if that) might be kept decently hidden.

A "RAILINETTE" DRESS

A special feature about this costume is the deep flat belt adorned with tassels. It is a model most typical of the moment with its straight up-and-down line and emphatic simplicity.

night, and the yacht which sent out a boat to pick it up. For that other vision her crystal had supplied after the robbery in Portman Square, he was not responsible; but it was he who had suggested the "pictures" for her to see on shipboard.

He hated the recollections now. Even Annesley herself could not think it more contemptible than he did.

Still worse was the remembrance of Mrs. Ellsworth's latch-key, the keeping of which had been accidental at first. Afterwards he had regarded its possession as a gift from Providence. The way to Ruthven Smith's house was made clear by it; and better still, through it the dragon could be punished for years.

Even then he had the grace to be ashamed of himself for his dishonesty, though not for his dishonesty, as quickly and deftly the diamond cut the glass faces of the cabinets directly opposite the miniatures and the Buddha meant to enrich Paul Van Vreck's secret collection. He had been kind to hurry his unsuspecting wife away, and let the eager pair of "tourists" crowding on his heels finish the work he had begun.

It seemed to Knight, as his thoughts travelled heavily along the path of "tourists" crowding on his heels, that no other woman but just this Annesley Grayle, this fragile white rose that had freely given him his sweetness, could have turned him from the vow of vengeance for his parents' fate, which as a boy he had sworn against the world. Day by day, week by week, month by month the fragrance of the white rose had so changed him that looking back at himself as he had been, he saw a stranger.

Good Night Stories

By Blanche Silvers

The Black Fairies Little Bobby sat on the gate post and watched the people going by. Something black went step by step behind the folks as they walked up the street. A dog ran out, and Bob, by hopped off the post. Yes, sure enough, there ran the black something right on the heels of the little dog, and Bobby ran into the house.

"Mother what is the black thing that follows every one down the street?" he asked, and mother said she thought maybe it was a fairy. "But, mother, dogs don't have fairies chasing them, do they?" he asked.

"I guess they must be fairies. Run and play, dear; please don't bother me just now," said mother, and Bobby went out.

In front of him on the walk was the little Black Fairy, and he stepped the little Black Fairy stepped with him. "That sure is funny. If I could I'd step right on it," said Bobby, but as he turned he glanced over his shoulder and a little Black Fairy was following him, and he ran as fast as he could into the house.

"Mother can you see anything back of me?" he asked, and mother shook her head. "No, dear, not a thing," she answered, and Bobby looked around. "Well he came in with me, for I saw him running right behind me," said Bobby.

He hunted under the table and chairs, but the little Black Fairy was nowhere in sight and Bobby ran outside and looked all around. Why, there it was in front of him, and he stood very still for fear it might run away again.

"Mother, come quick," he cried, and mother, thinking something had happened, came running from the house. "Here it is!" cried Bobby. "Then he turned in astonishment, for a great, big Black Fairy ran in front of him."

"No, there it is in front of you," he exclaimed pointing to the ground and mother laughed. "Why, dear, that is simply a shadow. When you walk in a bright light of any kind you come between it and the ground, leaving the shadow on the other side of you. Because the light cannot get through it it casts your shadow on the ground instead."

"See the peach tree and the dark spot on the grass under it with the patches of yellow scattered over it. The sun casts a shadow of the tree on the grass, the leaves on the tree are not thick enough to keep out all the light and little rays of sunlight seep through and make the yellow spots."

"My shadow is in front of me, because I am going away from the sun; yours is behind you, because you face the sun," explained mother. "That's all right, Bobby, but you see through the garden, puzzled by the shadow fairy. Sometimes it ran in front of him, sometimes behind him, then it hid itself. But when mother called him at noon he was right on the shadow as he ran into the house."

BANISH PIMPLES AND ERUPTIONS

In The Spring Most People Need a Tonic Medicine. One of the surest signs that the blood is out of order is the pimples, unsightly eruptions and eczema that come frequently with the change from winter to spring. There is none that the long indoor life of winter has had its effect upon the blood, and that a tonic medicine is needed to put it right. Indeed there are few people who do not need a tonic at this season. Bad blood does not merely show itself in disgusting eruptions. To this same condition is due attacks of rheumatism and lumbago; the sharp stabbing pains of sciatica and neuralgia, poor appetite and a desire to avoid exertion. You cannot cure these troubles by the use of purgative medicines — you need a tonic, and a tonic only, and among all medicines there is none that drives out impurities, stimulates every organ and brings a feeling of new health and energy to weak, tired, ailing men, women and children. If you are out of sorts give this medicine a trial and see how quickly it will restore the appetite, revive drooping spirits, and fill your veins with new health-giving blood. You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.
