THE FORT.

By the pleasant fire they sat one night,
Husband and wife alone,
And they talked of the changes they had seen,
And how the years had flown;
Of the sons, now scattered far and near,
And the daughters wooed and wed,
"We're only two in the house once more, Oh, Mary, my wife!" he said.

When we were alone forty years ago,
So young, and happy, and poor,
There wasn't a prettier girl than you,
Nor a better one I am sure,
I promised you then I'd make you rich,
If you'd only share my life;
I'm worth a million pounds to-day!
A million of money, dear wife!"

"How much am I worth?" she smilingly asked,
He looked in her tender face;
He looked in her eyes, then closed his own,
And thought for a little space,
"You are worth the life I've spent with
you,
You are worth its richest joys;
You are worth more gold than can be told—
You are worth my girls and boys."

"You are worth the years that are yet to come;
You are worth the world to me;
Oh, Mary, there is not gold enough
To say what you are worth to me!"
"Well, dear, I was worth the world to
you
More than forty years ago;
A million is but a bagatelle
To the whole wide world you know!"

"So then, we have never been poor at all;
Now isn't it nice to know
That you were a million millionaire
More than forty years ago?
We were happy then, we are happy now,
So tell me the difference, Frank?"
"It isn't much," he said, with a smile,
"I've gathered a million from the pile,
And I tucked it up in a bank."

Long before the steamer left the levee and began her upward journey, it was evident that I had won this young man's confidence. He at least showed a preference for my companionship above that of any of the other passengers, and we talked much together.

We both had a feeling of relief when at last we saw the pestilence-stricken city sinking behind us, all unconscious as we were that in fleeing from it we were but going into greater danger.
For, unknown to us in the cabin, ship-fever was among the emigrants on the lower deck, and this affording a sure and easy foothold for cholera, Death was soon doing his work.

Unconscious of the danger beneath us, it was not until the second morning after leaving New Orleans that our attention was drawn to a row of rough boxes, of ominous shape, on the forward part of the lower deck. Then we perceived that five dead bodies were waiting for burial.

There were white faces and eager inquiries then, and it became quickly known to every one that the pestilence was with us.

In the afternoon of that same day,
Death entered the cabin, and marked for his first victim a hale and hearty Tennessee cotton-planter, who occupied the next room forward to me and my new acquaintance. The man seemed well and hearty at noon, but was attacked soon after, and died early that night.

I learned of his illness upon going for something to my room, but was so shocked that, forgetting my errand, I went back and rejoined my room-mate, who sat holding his little boy, in conversation with two other young men, both of whom occupied the same room with the sick man. These fellows showed very plainly to me, at least, that they belonged to the fraternity then so numerous on the Western waters. Upon my mentioning what I had learned they seemed startled and frightened, as did my room-mate also. "Is that so?" one of them exclaimed.
"Jim, we'll have to get out of that!"
"Our plunder's in there," said the other. "Go bring it out, Bill, won't
you?"

"Not if I know myself! If he has got the cholera, those goods will stay there for all me."
"Well, let 'em stay then—till he gets well. I won't be long, I reckon. But he don't look like a man 'twould go off easy. I say, friends," and he looked at me and my room-mate with a sickly smile, "suppose we have a quiet game while the cholera's going on, just to pass away the time?"

They had before invited us to play, but although my friend was himself a gambler, we had both declined. I asked him if he knew the fellows, but he said no, they were strangers to him.

"I don't doubt but that I could fleece them nicely," he added, "if I chose to. But as I told you, I'm going out of the business."

Seemingly a little disappointed, the two left us, but when I again entered the cabin, not long after, I saw that they had persuaded others to play with them, and that money was staked on the game. They all became so absorbed in the game that they evidently forgot that Death stood near, and even when word came that the cotton-planter was dead, the two professionals were still eager to go on.

This was just after the great chandeliers had been lighted, and they were filling the long saloon with their brilliance, trying to outstare, it seemed to me, the hideous look of Death. Neither the glare nor the scene was in accord with my own feelings, and going out forward, I sat down in the more subdued and welcome light of the stars, so far above all this earthly turmoil. I was quickly followed by my room-mate, who had by the hand his little boy. Sitting down beside me, he took the little fellow in his lap, and there we sat, long into the night, conversing lowly, the child quietly sleeping on his father's breast.

Having retired, I soon fell asleep, and did not wake till the return of daylight. And then I was aroused by sad sounds,—plaintive moans, coming from the little boy, who was in the berth under mine.

His father, I found, was already asleep, and seeing that I was awake, he said,—
"O Mr. —, Louis—Louis—I fear
he is going to be taken too!"

The poor man's grief seemed too great for utterance. Springing from my berth, I saw that his child was really in a frightful condition. The father himself had but just awakened, and he was filled with terror as well as grief. The little fellow spoke to us in a half-conscious way, accompanying almost every word with a plaintive moan.

Hastening on my clothes, I went out to notify the clerk of the boat and obtain the attendance of the two physicians who chanced to be on board; and then I went back, to wait with the father for their coming.

The little sufferer brightened up for a few moments as we sat there. "I'm better now, papa," he said. "Let me kiss you, papa. I don't want you to feel bad."

I never witnessed a more touching scene than that which followed. For the few moments that the child seemed better he lay with both his little hands clapped in his father's, his loving eyes fixed steadily on the parent's face.
"It's too bad, isn't it, papa? But I'm better now," he said. "I'll be well in a little while."

"We can do nothing," said one of the doctors lowly to me. And then, leaving some medicine with me, and telling me how to administer it, they both went silently away.

The scene that followed was too painful for me to try to describe, and I will not attempt it. In only two short hours more, the spirit of the little sufferer had passed away—and it almost seemed as if it had been at once enfolded in the mother's waiting arms. For, just at the last, the little fellow had opened his lips with a joyful cry, "O mother! mother!" and stretched out his own little arms as if to meet her.

During the greater part of the afternoon I sat near the stricken father, and at times I endeavored to turn his mind to objects that were passing, and to say something cheerful. The two "professionals," whom I have before spoken of, also came and joined us, and after expressing a few words of sympathy, in their hypocritical way, they again invited us to join them in a game of cards.

"Do you think I would play with you now?" asked the agonized man, with a withering look at the one he questioned.

"I only asked you as a friend, of course," was the reply. "This cholera is a bad deal at best, but it will never do to give up to it in this way, for that will make it worse. We must try to bluff it; that's the way to keep clear of it, and I don't know of anything better than cards for that."

"Well, I'm not ready to play yet.
Perhaps I'll try my luck with you tonight, though. You'll oblige me by leaving me alone now."

"They went away, saying that they hoped he would feel like taking a hand with them in the evening, and almost as soon as they were gone, he said to me,—
"I would like, Mr. —, to give you the address of my father and mother, in Cincinnati. They're not very well off, and if the cholera should happen to take me, too, I would like that what money I have should get to them, in some way. I wish, Mr. —, that if I should die and you shouldn't, you'd don't—don't—mean he is dead?"

"The cholera—I suppose you have heard of the cholera—how it is raging in New Orleans?"
"Yes—yes—but you said he was coming home! You said he was coming home! O sir, tell us all! Tell us all!
He was our dear boy—all we had—our dear, dear boy! O Henry! Henry!
I can't be that you are dead? Do you really mean, sir, that Henry is dead?"
I had to tell them that he was dead, but I could not tell them more. I hope God will forgive me if I did wrong in keeping it from them, but I could not tell them—how he had died, and how his last hour had been spent.
How he had "gone out of the business," but only in the shadow of life's last hour.

The passion of life is strong in death.
And—Afterward?
Here, do you mean? Yes, the end of evil passions is followed by sad scenes here. And—Afterward?

WOLFVILLE, N. S., JAN. 27, 1886

HAND GRENADE FIRE EXTINGUISHERS.

It is very easy by means of the modern newspaper to "boom" a proprietary article and make it temporarily popular...

The Scientific American says, "It seems to us that some one might do his fellow citizens a good turn by telling the truth about the fire-extinguishing hand grenades which they are popularly supposed to contain, and we have yet to hear of any who possess more virtue than liberality in a bottle of salt and water or of alum solution while the disadvantage of their employment are considerable."

If the grenades contained nothing but water in a convenient shape, there would be no great objection to them but the mystery of the ingredients which fill them give them a false value in the eyes of the ignorant...

We give these extracts in the interests of public enlightenment, and if any of our growers are carrying a stock of these grenades they must accept philosophically their depreciation in value remembering that private advantage must always give place to the public weal.

AN EXAMPLE OF NOVA SCOTIAN ENTERPRISE ABROAD.

We are all more or less interested in those who go out from among us to seek their fortunes in other lands...

We clip the following from the Ontario Record, a weekly paper published in San Bernardino Co., California. It speaks for itself.

"Any mention of Ontario's industries would be incomplete without a reference to the well-known nursery of D. A. Shaw. Mr Shaw came here two years ago from Los Angeles, where he had been in the nursery business for some years."

COUNCIL MEETING.

We decided this year instead of giving the proceedings of the council as the business was done to wait until the session was over and then condense the minutes and put it in as readable a form as possible.

Herring have struck in large quantities at Portuguese Cove, Lunenburg Co., and the fishermen at that locality are doing well, codfish also are plentiful, but owing to the weather little can be done at catching them.

SUNDAY SERVICES.—Owing to the extremely bad weather and roads the church on Sunday were not largely attended. Rev. Mr. McMillan preached, as previously announced, in the Presbyterian Church and gave an excellent discourse.

The people of Richibucto, N. B., are excited over the strange fact that there has been no noticeable rise nor fall in the tides in that harbor, which usually rise and fall four feet. The same is said to be true of other places. The like was never known before.

On Friday evening last a very pleasant time was led at the rink. For the first time of the season the rink was illuminated by the electric light which made all the day. The ice was well covered and in excellent condition and skaters and spectators appeared to enjoy themselves immensely.

Mr. W. H. Marshall, agent for the London Rubber Stamp Co., of Halifax, is at present at the Acadia Hotel, where he will receive orders for all kinds of Rubber Stamps, Dates, Linen markers, etc. This is an excellent opportunity for those who wish to obtain any of these very convenient articles. The night was a beautiful one, and at the appointed time a large number had assembled and others arrived during the evening. A choice program of vocal and instrumental music, reading, &c. was rendered in an excellent manner. Miss Halliburton and Miss May Brown, of this place, taking a prominent place. At the close of the program refreshments were served and this as well as the literary exercises seemed to be well enjoyed by all. A sale of fancy and useful articles was then had, after which the entertainment was brought to a close, ending one of the pleasant events of the season.

SQUIBS. BY AN OLD PHILOSOPHER. Music has charms, so has the skating rink Friday night. Education is a great thing, but dude pants is poor stuff in the winter time. Ants don't make much noise, but 22 boys playing cricket make enough for all kinds.

CORRESPONDENCE

(We do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions of our correspondents)

DEAR ACADIAN.—Feeling that the writer of the article entitled "Greedy Halifax" has not fully considered the matter whereof he complains, and desiring that as some of Temperance there should not be, in the management of our order, anything to cause discord, I take the liberty of offering a few explanations.

Of the Grand Officers for the present year, only two represent Halifax, the Grand Scribe being a member of Truro Division. The representation by committees is as follows:—Halifax, 2; Hants, 2; Pictou, 2; Colchester, 1; Cape Breton, 1. While it is to be regretted that the western portion of our Province is not more largely represented, I think it is not due to any desire of the Halifax members to monopolize the offices. The functions of the G. S. and G. T. require them to reside in Halifax, where the chief business of the order is transacted. Now a word about committees. I can assure my brother that there is not a desire on the part of the city members to occupy so prominent a position on the different committees, and yet the appointments are made as a matter of expedience, in order that the transaction of our business may be facilitated. Were the principal committees not within easy call of the G. Scribe, much of the business requiring speedy despatch would be seriously delayed. Take any of the following committees, viz:—Agency, Appeals, Audit and Finance, Charters, Credentials and Printing. Would your correspondent, or any brother at a distance from the city be in a position to attend the meetings of these committees, which by reason of their duties, are frequent. If not it would be unwise for such appointments to be made. Having myself served three years on one of these committees, I can form some idea of the inconvenience that members at a distance would experience if they undertook to discharge their duties faithfully, and by non-performance of duty the interests of our order would suffer. Apologizing for occupying so much of your space, I am yours truly, "YEAH BOY."

To C. R. Hill, Esq. Dear Sir,—I have accepted your challenge to trot "Scientific Clanky" a smart "Allie Clay" for the sum of $200 aside, to be trotted at Bedford as you requested, on Feb. 23d. You have offered $100 against $200 if I would trot at Bedford. I do not ask odds. I have left with John W. Wallace, barrister, $200 and hereby request you to deposit same amount; will meet you at his office, Wolfville, on Saturday, the 23d, at 3 o'clock, p.m. In your last letter you censured me as being devoid of all pluck. I mean business; come to the front; put up or stop blowing about the speed of "Allie Clay." J. I. BROWN, Wolfville, N. S.

The Little Sweethearts

This beautiful picture of which we have heard so much is without doubt far superior to the ordinary premium chromos. In fact it will pay all who receive the "Little Sweetheart" to take it at once to Rockwell & Co's and have it framed, as they are in a position to frame these pictures at from 10 to 20 percent less than any other firm in the County.

You may ask Why?

1st.—We import our mouldings and fittings direct from the manufacturers. 2d.—We have framed more pictures in the past year than any other firm in this County, "and five times as many as those who merely dabble in the business," therefore we use more stock and are thereby able to import in large quantities, thereby getting extra discounts. This also shows that our prices are right or we would not be patronised so largely. 3d.—We have every facility for making frames, and therefore can do the work cheaper than most others.

Our Frames are all made by first-class workmen who have had long experience in the business, therefore customers will find our work more durable than that done by Amateurs who put frames up from a saw in a rough manner. Now if you have any pictures to frame don't fail to give us a call, and we will show you our work and give any further information required.

CANADA'S COMIC JOURNAL

Great Improvements For 1886.

The aim of Grip is to set forth, in an impartial and independent manner, the passing events of Canadian political and social life. Its cartoons speak more definitely and more pleasingly than whole columns of editorial. In this pungent, easily appreciable, and artistic style of presenting a subject, the whole situation is revealed at a glance. The success of Grip shows how well this fact is appreciated—its cartoons on the passing political events of the country being even more eagerly sought after than the classic and humorous letter-press of the paper, though the latter is equal to that of any similar publication of the continent. The publishers of Grip are making extensive improvements for 1886. The old cover is to be discarded, and the journal will hereafter comprise 12 pages, as has been the case since its first issue. The paper, every number being so artistically executed as to compare favorably with the best papers of the kind published on the continent. The ads. will be compressed and more systematically arranged; while similar improvements will be made as to the letter-press. A new and handsome design will adorn the title-page; while the cartoons will certainly not suffer from extensive improvements in the artistic department. The price of Grip will hereafter be $3 a year, which is lower than that of any paper of its kind in America, most of them selling for $5. Single numbers of Grip will be 12 cents. Twice a year, at Midsummer and Christmas, a beautiful special number will be issued, the number of pages being increased, and pleasing features introduced, particulars of which will be given in preceding issues. These numbers will be presented to subscribers without extra charge.

THE BAGGAGE-MAN.

With many a curie the trunk I pitch, With many a about an ally;

"DUN GONE"

'I reckon he's dun bin called fur, sah,' said the old man as he came around to the grocery.

"Somebody dying?" asked a man who was passing.

"Who is it?" "Jupiter, sah—my dog Jupiter. Mebbe ye wouldn't mind gwine aroun' dar wid me? It's lonely like to be wid anybody dyin'."

"The old man's voice proved that he was deeply moved, and the pedestrian went with him. Around the corner and a half a block up the street they turned into a yard, and there lay the old dog on the grass, eyes half closed and breathing heavily.

"He's mos' gone—mos' gone!" whispered the old man as he knelt on the ground and softly smoothed the body.

"How long have you had him?" "Dat—dat's what makes it hurt me so! I rized him up since de time he wasn't bigger'n my fist. It's gwine on twenty y'ars since dis dog stepped foot in my cabin. Jupiter, does ye hear ole marse talkin' to ye? Does ye know I'ze right yere beside ye?"

"Twenty years is a long time," said the pedestrian.

"Yes, a long, long time," whispered the old man. "An' dis' er Jupiter has mixed in wid all my joys an' sorrows—all my good luck an' bad. He's seen de time when he had plenty, an' he's de time when he had neither food nor fish. Jupiter, open yer eyes once an' look at me! I'ze right yere! I wouldn't leave ye fur all de gold in de hull world!"

"How does your wife take it?" asked the visitor.

"Deed, sah, but—but!" The old man broke down at that, tears raining down his cheeks and his throat filling up, and it was a long minute before he resumed:

"She's dead! Died five y'ars ago! Jupiter an' me was all alone in de house wid her when she closed her eyes. I not dar a chokin' of her hands an' sighin'."

and sobbed out: "Dun gone away from me, an' de ole man an' left to watch in de darkness alone!"—Detroit Free Press.

THE PRETTY BABY.

"Isn't he a pretty baby, John? See, just look at him!" and the mother holds up the tiny creature to papa, who kisses and fondles him lovingly.

"Yes, Kate, he is a pretty baby, but was a pretty baby, too, you remember."

"Yes, Tom was a pretty baby—everybody said so," and she glances across the room at a sunny-faced 4-year old, "but Willie is not like Tom. Willie's hair is light and his eyes," looking wistfully into the baby's face, "are dark, and so deep, that when I look in them I am almost afraid, they have such a far away light, they seem to see something we cannot."

"Oh, nonsense! don't think that. He'll grow up to be a fine fellow. But, Kate, I wouldn't think so much about that, he's a dear, good, little fellow, but I wouldn't wring him, it's not right."

"As if I could help it," the mother says, reproachfully, pressing the slight form closer and looking into the dark eyes yearningly.

A month passed away, and one day they stand beside a small, white casket within which the pretty baby is sleeping. Ah, the mother's eyes were sharp, and when friends said, "what beautiful bright eyes he has," she saw the far away look and knew it as the light that was never on land or sea.

"Oh, John, John!" she moaned, "I knew he wasn't long for this world. I could see it in his eyes. Oh, my pretty baby!"

"Yes, dear, you were right," says papa, and there was a quiver in the firm voice; "if it had pleased God to have left him with us we would have cared for him the best we could, but we must give him up, for it is His will, and He knows what is best for us."

"Yes, I know it," and she stoops and cuts a tiny wisp of hair from the baby's head. "Oh, John, you said I worshipped him. I did, oh, I did, and God forgive me, I can't be sorry for it now, he was such a dear, pretty baby."

Years passed on. Other babies were born. They are all pretty babies, every one who sees them say that, but some are like the baby with the far away look. As they grow up they love to gather around mother's chair, and she never tires telling of the dark-eyed baby who went to live with God. And, when with childish curiosity they open the Bible to look at the pictures, and find between the leaves a tiny wisp of hair tied with a white satin ribbon, they touch it reverently and whisper beneath their breath: "The pretty baby."

Years still pass on. The children grow to be sturdy men and women, and as the mother watches them she sometimes thinks, "If he had lived he would have been such a beautiful man," and then she smiles and is glad that in Heaven there is no time, and no matter how the others may change he is still the pretty baby.

One day they gathered around her bed, and looking in each other's face mournfully whisper:

"She is dying." She stretches her thin hand toward the table on which the old Bible rests, and they say:

night. Victory was his reward, and today he triumphantly declares that at the end of 21 years that farmer had 1873 head of cattle.

The various answers sent in vary. In fact they differ. They range all the way from 64 to 11,046. The man who said it was sixty-four sent a postal later saying he had forgot the old cow. That merely shows the intense interest the old cow has excited. The popular feeling is well expressed in the brief comment attached to the biggest answer, "Kill that cow man, he spoils my sleep." It is even whispered by the elect that a chosen band of diameters started for Connecticut yesterday. The conundrum editor has subscribed liberally toward paying their expenses. And says he will shoot on the spot any man who ever says anything to him about a cow again.

VENUS ANCHORED OVER CHICAGO. One night about two weeks ago an excited individual burst into Sablin's hardware store.

"Say," he gasped, nervously, "Have you seen the new electric light?" "What electric light?"

"The one anchored over Chicago by a balloon. You can see it just as plainly as you can the lights down the avenue. Most wonderful thing I ever saw, by George! They say the balloon is suspended two miles above the city."

"Your phenomenal is probably some star near the horizon," suggested one of the gentlemen present.

"Get out!" retorted the excited man, indignantly. "I'll bet you the drinks for the crowd it's no such thing. Don't wish to, eh? Probably not. Don't you s'pose I know an electric light when I see one?"

No one knows how the contagion spread but it did, and some of our best citizens who have led exemplary lives in the past, and were old enough to know better, anyhow, caught it.

When Venus plays a return engagement over Chicago, she will not be greeted as large an audience from the city by as heretofore.—Lantern Republican.

We caution our readers to beware of diphtheria, pneumonia, influenza, bronchitis, congestion of the lungs, coughs and colds at this season of the year. Get a bottle of Johnson's Anodyne Liniment and keep it ready for instant use. It may save your life. It has saved thousands.

Sheridan's Cavalry condition powders will positively prevent all ordinary diseases common to horses, cattle, sheep, hogs, and fowl besides constantly improving them. Beware of the large 25c packs; they are worthless.

Weymouth, Sept. 14, 1885.

DR. NORTON'S Dear Sir,—For twenty-five years I have been afflicted with Salt Rheum, and last Summer my head and part of my body was one fearful sore.

My husband employed at different times three doctors, which failed to do me any good. In August 1884 I commenced taking your Dr. O. W. Norton's Burdock Blood Purifier, and after taking three bottles, an entirely cured, as I have not the least symptoms of it since. The Blood Purifier has also cured Capt Brooks of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint.

Yours truly, Mrs. John Grant

Peter Frost, Esq., of Little River, Digby Neck, was sick a long time with Liver, Kidney and Nerve Disease. He is now well by using Norton's Burdock Blood Purifier.

As Raymond's son was sick and confined to the house for over three months with Rheumatism and Kidney Troubles. He was attended by a doctor, and tried many remedies but obtained no relief until he used Norton's Burdock Blood Purifier, which cured him.

John Layton of Mount Denson, was sick with Scarcina for five weeks, when his doctor gave him up. He is now quite well by using Norton's Magic Liniment and Dr. O. W. Norton's Burdock Blood Purifier.

There is no medicine known to the medical fraternity that has cured so many of Liver, Kidney Blood and Nerve Diseases as the medicines that compose Norton's Burdock Blood Purifier. Sold by most of the dealers in medicines throughout the county, and by G. V. Rand, Druggist, Wolfville at $1.00 per large bottle. June 26, '85.—1 yr
