A pound of tea at one and three,
And a pot of raspberry jam,
Two new laid eggs, a dozen peas,
And a pound of rashers of ham.

I'll say it over all the way,
And then I'm sure not to forget,
For if chance to bring things wrong,
My mother gets in such a pet.

A pound of tea at one and three,
And a pot of raspberry jam,
Two new laid eggs, a dozen peas,
And a pound of rashers of ham.

There, in the hay, the children play,
They're having such jolly fun,
I'd go there too, that's what I'll do,
As soon as my errands are done.

A pound of tea at one and three,
A pot of new laid jam,
Two new laid eggs, a dozen peas,
And a pound of rashers of ham.

There's Teddy White flying his kite,
He thinks himself grand, I declare,
I'd like to try to make it fly, up sky high,
Ever so much higher.

Than the old church spire,
And then—but there—

A pound of three and one at tea,
A pot of new laid jam,
Two dozen eggs, some raspberry peas,
And a pound of rashers of ham.

Now here's the shop, outside I'll stop,
And run my orders through again;
I haven't forgot, no, ne'er a jot—
It shows I'm pretty cute, that's plain.

Aspound of three at one and tea,
A dozen of raspberry jam,
A pot of eggs, with a dozen peas,
And a rasher of new laid jam.

STORY.

DOUGLAS.

A June evening; one of those lovely summer evenings when all nature seemed to speak of peace and rest, and the rising moon peeps over the tree tops. Far away, behind the western hills, the sky was radiant still, with the after glow of a beautiful sunset. But the pale pink and golden tints were momentarily decreasing before the deepening shades of advancing night, and already one or two faint stars had appeared. The exquisite beauty of the scene would have served to attract the attention of almost any one; but it was quite ignored by two young people who stood in a sweet, old-fashioned rose garden, apparently lost to everything but their own engrossing conversation. The girl, for her quick temper and jealous doubts and fears, had noticed that her fiancée was, in her estimation, quite unnecessarily polite to Miss Burton, and had discovered them more than once in earnest conversation; and the very day of the scene just recorded above, she had come upon them suddenly in the conservatory and had seen the young Lieutenant giving a note to the companion. This occurrence would hardly have made such an impression on her mind, had not Miss Burton's blushing face and confused manner aroused her suspicions. Douglas, too, had appeared somewhat embarrassed at the time and had considered herself quite justified in demanding an explanation from him that evening, which, to her great annoyance, was gravely but firmly declined. She had then taxed him with a secret flirtation with Miss Burton, which was stoutly denied.

"I assure you, my dearest, it is nothing of that sort," the young man had protested, earnestly. "I am not able to explain matters to you, much as I would like to, but if you would only trust me—" He could get no further for at this point his aggrieved lady-love had burst into angry tears, and the conversation ended as has been described.

The day following her quarrel with her fiancée, if it can be called a quarrel when one of the parties concerned loses their temper, and the other remains for the most part silent and reproachful, Blanche Vernon awoke feeling more unhappy than she had ever felt before in all her short, careless life. Pleading a headache, she breakfasted, or made a pretence of doing so, in her own room. Already, after a sleepless, wretched night, she repented her anger of the previous evening, though she hardly liked to confess it to herself. Her pride was not easily overcome, and most of the morning was passed in pacing up and down her pretty boudoir, while a mental struggle raged in her impulsive heart. She glanced once or twice longingly towards her little desk, where ink, pen

"Spare me any more assurance. I, for one, will be delighted at your departure after what has occurred," she said, coldly.

"Blanche!" That was all he said; but, oh! what a world of reproach and regret he put into that little name! For an instant she faltered, as it rang out clearly on the evening air. Then a sudden memory brought the crimson flush back to her face. Shuddering, her shoulders again, without another word or look she turned away, and left him there—alone.

Blanche Vernon was the only child of the Squire of Heathdale, a charming village in one of the southern counties. She was young, lovely and an heiress to boot, and had been engaged to Douglas Campbell since the previous winter. He was a good-looking young Lieutenant in the Navy, and being well endowed with this world's goods, besides belonging to a good old Scotch family, was considered a fit mate for the "belle of the county."

They were to have been married on his return from his next voyage, but a little note and a whispered conversation had altered the course of events. Blanche, being an only child, and motherless, had been provided with a companion, in the shape of Miss Ida Burton, a pretty, fair-haired girl, a year or two her senior. The spoiled beauty, who was self-willed and petulant to a degree, as pretty girls with hosts of admirers and everything they desire apt to be, loved Douglas Campbell devotedly and was not a little jealous where he was concerned. Not that she had the slightest cause to be so, for she was all in all to him, and a more ardent lover could not have been found. But the fact of his being a great favorite with the fair sex had a good deal to do perhaps with the "green-eyed monster" who at times took possession of Blanche. Douglas had a chivalrous manner, which, coupled with his boyish handsome appearance, made him very attractive to most women. Of this Blanche was fully aware, and as he was stopping at the Vernon's, and the only other girl he met there daily was the pretty companion, she had become the object of the heiress' suspicions. The latter who was often rendered miserable by her quick temper and jealous doubts and fears, had noticed that her fiancée was, in her estimation, quite unnecessarily polite to Miss Burton, and had discovered them more than once in earnest conversation; and the very day of the scene just recorded above, she had come upon them suddenly in the conservatory and had seen the young Lieutenant giving a note to the companion. This occurrence would hardly have made such an impression on her mind, had not Miss Burton's blushing face and confused manner aroused her suspicions. Douglas, too, had appeared somewhat embarrassed at the time and had considered herself quite justified in demanding an explanation from him that evening, which, to her great annoyance, was gravely but firmly declined. She had then taxed him with a secret flirtation with Miss Burton, which was stoutly denied.

"I assure you, my dearest, it is nothing of that sort," the young man had protested, earnestly. "I am not able to explain matters to you, much as I would like to, but if you would only trust me—" He could get no further for at this point his aggrieved lady-love had burst into angry tears, and the conversation ended as has been described.

and paper were invitingly arranged. She even sat down and began "Dearest Doug—" and then sprang to her feet, flushed hotly as a knock was heard at the door.

"He has come to plead with me; to explain before he goes," she thought, and experienced a feeling of bitter disappointment when her companion appeared.

"I hope your head is better; can I do anything for you?" she enquired, looking nervously at the tall young lady in the white morning-gown, who regarded her with stormy bright eyes.

"No, thanks," returned Blanche, in a tone that conveyed to the startled Miss Burton that her room was better than her company. She withdrew, accordingly, and once more the beauty was left alone. The sight of her companion's timid, half-frightened face had brought back all her suspicions. Throwing herself on a lounge, she burst into a passion of tears.

"That girl looked afraid of me. No wonder, when she has made all this mischief between my darling and me," she sobbed, quite forgetting her own part in the transaction. "Oh, Douglas! Douglas!" and then followed more doubts and fears, till utterly worn out by her great grief, she fell asleep. And so the long summer day crept on. That very day, while Blanche sobbed herself to sleep, leaving the little repentant note she had begun, unfinished, Douglas Campbell joined his ship, the Victory, and that evening sailed away from old England. As he watched the land slowly recede in the distance, there was a shadow on his boyish face, and his heart was weighed down by the greatest sorrow it had ever known.

"Poor Campbell. His father's death is announced here," observed the squire a few days later, looking up from his Times. He, his daughter and the companion were lingering over the breakfast table and the two girls glanced up quickly as he spoke. "He and Ernest will come in for a goodly inheritance now," continued Mr Vernon, who as yet knew nothing of his daughter's "break" with her lover. She, on her part was quick to notice the eager excited expression on Miss Burton's face, as she listened to the squire, and drew her conclusions accordingly. Poor Blanche had put in a far from happy time since that eventful interview in the rose garden. When she realized that Douglas had really gone, that every hour so many more miles of blue water were being put between them, her grief was intense. Her doubts and fears shrank into insignificance before the overwhelming fact that repentance came too late. He was gone. No tender reconciliation, no "make-up" such as she had longed for in spite of her anger, could now take place till—be returned. And perhaps by that time he would have ceased to care for her; would not wish to renew their old relations towards each other. At this thought, the girl shivered. "Oh, why did I not trust him? Why was I so hasty?" was her constant cry. Never, in all her life, had she suffered as she did now, and the sting lay in the thought that it was all her own fault. Remorse is one of the most terrible of human ills, and the "beautiful Miss Vernon" experienced it to the full now. And she felt it more keenly than ever, when, a few mornings after old Mr Campbell's death appeared in the paper, Miss Burton's place at the table was vacant, and the following letter was handed to her:—

"DEAR MISS VERNON.—I wonder what you will think when I inform you that I am married and have been so for the last six weeks. I am on my way to join my husband now, and this will explain my absence. I met Mr Ernest Campbell when we were in town last, if you recollect. We—well, to put matters shortly, we became very fond of each other, and as his regiment was ordered out to India, he induced me to become his wife before he left England, unknown to anyone except his brother. Old Mr Campbell was ill at the time, and Ernest thought it best to keep him in ignorance concerning our marriage. Of course, he made Lieut. Campbell promise not to betray us, and I assure you I do not know what we would have done without him. He was so kind, and considerate, though I could see he did not approve of our marriage. But it was too late to object when the ceremony was over, and he was not taken into dear Ernest's confidence till then. I often wonder how he managed to keep our secret from you. He wished so much to tell you, but Ernest feared you would be so shocked you would refuse to see me with you, or rather, Mr Vernon would, so he made his brother promise not to enlighten you. One day you came in just as Lieut. Campbell was giving me a note Ernest sent me under cover, and I was so afraid everything would come out. Now all necessity for secrecy is at an end, and I will finish this hasty letter by thanking you deeply for all your kindness to me, and hope you will be as happy as Lieut. Campbell's wife as I am as

IDA CAMPBELL.

What were Blanche's feelings as she read these lines, which had evidently been hurriedly written? Ernest Campbell was Douglas's own brother. He had always been a wild harum-scarum sort of a fellow, continually getting into scrapes, and now he had capped the climax by marrying a penniless nobody, Blanche thought, contemptuously. Ida Burton was a very nice girl as a companion, but old Mr Campbell would certainly have cut Ernest off with a shilling had he known of his marriage. Blanche could imagine Douglas's surprise when the secret was confided to him. She determined to cast pride to the winds, the pride which had caused her so much unhappiness; to write him a letter that would convince him of her sorrow, her repentance. How her cheeks burned, and how often she dashed the tears from her eyes as she wrote. It was a sad, loving letter; a letter that would have moved the hardest heart, such a pitiful, tear-stained epistle. And when it had gone, the girl settled down to long weary days of waiting, days she never forgot.

A week or two later Blanche stood in a brilliantly lighted drawing-room in a fashionable West End mansion. Thinking a change would benefit her, her father had brought her to town a few days after her letter was despatched, and the beautiful heiress was, as usual, surrounded by a crowd of admirers. A "musical" was in progress, and the large room was crowded to excess. As the girl stood there in her rich satin gown, waving her fan slowly to and fro, a smile parted her red lips, who among the gay throng guessed at the passionate longing and regret which filled her heart, and which almost served to break down her self-possession at times? As she rested her large, bright eyes on her companion's face, he little thought how bored she was by his conversation and how she longed to be away from that gay scene. She was thinking, as she always was now, of a young, eager face, a pair of pleading blue eyes, and suddenly she started and the color flew to her face, for the name of the object of her thoughts was ringing through the room. Someone was singing. She could not see who, for the piano was hidden from her view by the crowd, but it was some one with a sweet, pathetic voice which brought the tears to Blanche's longing eyes. It was only an old, old song; one that she used to sing to herself in the dear old days, which seemed so long ago now. But never had it affected her as it did at that moment.

Could you come back to me, Douglas, Douglas,

In the old likeness that I knew?
I would be so faithful, so loving, Douglas,
Douglas, Douglas, tender and true.

As in a dream the girl listened to the refrain. Had the singer a Douglas too, she wondered, that she sang so feelingly, as if she felt every word. A strange hush had fallen over the room, for no one wished to lose a word of the old song. Blanche grasped her fan so tightly that the delicate handle snapped as she listened. The lights the bright scene faded away. Once she was with him, could hear the voice she loved, see the handsome young face, meet the glance of the laughing eyes which had looked so wistful when she last saw them. The eyes which haunted her night and day.

Oh, Douglas! Douglas! She came back to the present with a start, to hear the clapping of gloved hands, the murmur of congratulations which rewarded the sweet singer. The young man, whose conversation had bored her a few minutes before a Mr Wilmont, was startled by the pallor of her face, and offered to conduct her to the conservatory where it was cooler. Blanche accepted his offer readily, and sent him off for an ice, anxious to have a few minutes alone in which to recover herself. Throwing herself on a low seat she gave herself up to her reflections.

"He will get my letter in a little while. What will he think when he reads it," she wondered. "Ah!" and as she remembered her last cruel words to him, she shivered as though with cold. "Oh, Douglas! never a scornful word would grieve you," she murmured, forcing back the tears from her eyes, and a brief prayer rose from her heart, as she thought of the Douglas in the song. Suppose anything should happen to—but she put the dreadful thought resolutely from her, and even managed to summon up a smile to greet her cavalier when he returned with the ice.

"Awfully sorry to be so long, Miss Vernon," he began, and then she noticed how grave his face had become.

"What—what is the matter?" she exclaimed, rising hastily, a vague feeling of undefined terror taking possession of her. She had only met the young man that evening, but she knew something out of the common must have occurred, to bring that serious look over his youthful countenance.

"I've just heard something awfully sad," he replied, gravely. "News has just arrived of the loss of the Victory, which sailed last week, don't you know? Every soul on board has perished, except two blue jackets, who were picked up by a passing ship to tell the tale."

Was the singer repeating her song, or was it a dream voice which Blanche heard in the dimly lighted conservatory? Oh, to call back the days that are not! Mine eyes were blinded, your words are few. Do you know the truth now up in Heaven, Douglas? Douglas, Douglas, tender and true.

No! not exactly that, but Shades of all kinds for hanging on people's windows to keep the sun, moon, dust, flies, frost, inquisitive gazers, in fact a shade that is useful for many purposes.

A well dressed window is a sign of refinement to passers, and a source of satisfaction to those within the house. You say, "It is all very well to talk about pretty furnishings, but it takes lots of money to buy them!" Well if you buy these things in some places we will agree with you, but if you buy from us we can fit you out so cheap, for instance:

- 1 Sett Curtains, $1.00
1 Dado Shade, .80
1 Curtain Pole, .65
$2.45.

Who would be without these improvements when they can be had at such a trifling cost, besides the convenience, no rolling up shades on a stick and punching the cloth full of holes, till it looks like a milk strainer.

Curtain Poles!

All lengths, for Bay Windows, Screens, &c. A novel feature in these is the Link Joists, so that a pole can be fitted around the curve of a Bay Window, thereby having the recess of the window in the room.

Don't forget, we will put these shades on your windows free of charge, and will guarantee our Rollers to stand. We sell no trashy goods.

Splendid assortment of Curtains in white and colors. We are the pioneers in the shade business in this town and intend to sell cheaper than anyone, notwithstanding the solicitations of other dealers to put our prices up.

THE ACADIAN

WOLFVILLE, N. S., MAY 16, 1890.

Local and Provincial.

Big Egg.—We were shown by Master Avard Davison the other day an egg laid by one of his Pekin ducks which measured 8 1/2 inches by 7 inches.

Apple Blossoms.—Master Frank Heles, of this place, handed in to us on Tuesday a pretty bunch of apple blossoms,—the first we have seen this season.

Improvement.—Mr R. W. Storrs is turning up the hedge on the place occupied by Mrs Quinn and is making quite an improvement in the appearance of the street.

For Boston.—The steamer Halifax continues to take large numbers of passengers for Boston. She sails every Wednesday morning. See advertisement in another column.

Five Laying.—The contractors for the water works have begun operations on the streets and have already got a considerable length of pipe laid. We will soon have the pipe laid through the town now.

Minard's Liment cures Colds, etc.

The 24th.—The Queen's Birthday, coming this year on Saturday, we are requested to state that the majority of the merchants of Wolfville have decided to close their stores instead on the following day (Monday).

Hammocks at the Wolfville Book Store.

Choice Butter.—We have always on hand Choice Butter, made by the best makers in Kings Co. We can supply our customers with any quantity either Prints, Rolls or Tubs for 20 cents per pound. CALDWELL, CAMBERS & Co.

Show Case, 6x2 1/2 ft., for sale. A Bargain. R. PRAT.

MUST BE STOPPED.—We notice quite an amount of noise and rowdiness about our streets in the evening during the past few weeks. This is something out of the ordinary for Wolfville, and steps should be taken at once to put a stop to it.

500 Hackmatack Posts, for sale low 3/2. WALTER BROWN.

ENTERTAINMENT.—We advise all who can to attend the entertainment to be given in College Hall this evening by Miss Mamie Fitch, assisted by local talent. We have seen the programme and feel sure that all who attend will be richly repaid.

"Champion" Creamers, the best in the world only $1.50 at. S. R. SLEEP'S.

SCHOOL COMMISSIONERS' MEETING.—The Annual Meeting of the Boards of school commissioners will be held in the Court House as follows:—At Kentville May 20th inst.; Windsor, 23d; Gore, 11th, prox. Hour of meeting, 10 a. m. COLIN W. ROSCOE, Clerk.

The trouting season is here, get your shoes at Borden's, Wolfville, 21ns.

A BAKERY.—We are glad to learn that a much needed industry is about to be started in Wolfville. Mrs Roberts is about starting a bakery in the building occupied by Mr Johnson Bishop. She has this week put in an expensive baker and intends, we believe, to run a first class bakery in this town. We bespeak for her the support and patronage of our people.

50 cent Ladies Low Cut Shoe at Borden's is a bargain.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONCERT.—A most successful Sunday School Concert was held in the church, Avonport, Sunday evening, the 11th. It was the third anniversary of the Sunday school, which is a union school, and was a grand Sunday school concert, as most of the exercises, including the fine music, was given by the scholars, including some of the very small ones. The record of the school, as given by the worthy superintendent, J. B. Newcombe, showed that a grand work has been and is being done and the Union Sunday School in Avonport is no longer an experiment. Addresses were given at the close by Warden Curry, of Horton Landing, Messrs Pines and Caldwell, of Wolfville, and the Rev. Mr Cooney.

TAKE NOTICE.—If your razor is dull take it to J. M. Shaw's Barbers Shop and he will put it in first-class order for the small sum of 15c. 10.

Local and Provincial.

CHANGE OF BUSINESS.—Mr F. J. Porter is removing his business to the store next this office, recently occupied by him.

FISHING.—Our fishermen have been busy during the past week and we hear of some good catches of trout being taken.

DUCKS EGGS.—Master Avard Davison can furnish any who want them with Pekin Duck's Eggs for hatching at reasonable rates.

STORM.—On Thursday morning we were visited by quite a tempest of thunder, lightning and rain,—the first of season. The rains of the past week have given the grass a fine start.

MOVING.—The usual spring moving is going on in Wolfville. Mr J. P. Godfrey has removed to Mrs Cowan's house and the dwelling he vacated is occupied by Mr J. M. Shaw. Mr E. D. Bishop has leased the property of Mr John O. Pines and removed there.

50 cent Ladies Slippers at Borden's wear like iron.

HORSE RACE.—The race at the Kentville track on Wednesday, between Mr C. R. Bill's horse "Gladstone," and "Frenchman," owned by Mr L. D. Windsor, of Halifax, resulted in the former being distanced. The stakes were $1,000. Good time is said to have been made by both horses.

Trunks are Cheap at Borden's Wolfville.

BUILDING.—Mr Edward Paine has begun the erection of a dwelling on the Gaspereau road, a little south of the residence of J. B. Davison, Esq. The cellar is now being excavated. Mr F. W. Woodworth has the contract, and the house will be the same style, we believe, as the one he recently sold to Mr Duncanson.

Wire Fencing, for sale low, by WALTER BROWN.

WANTED.—A regular correspondent for this paper in each of the various villages of this county, who will send us all items of interest in connection with their immediate neighborhood. Give us the facts, if you have not the leisure to put them in proper form, and we will arrange them. The ACADIAN will be sent free of charge to persons disposed to try their hand.

50 Casks Greenhead Lime just received at S. R. SLEEP'S.

How is it.—Hain't somebody enough enterprise to start a movement to have some more shade-trees planted along our streets? A few dollars expended in that way just now would improve the appearance of our town greatly. Those who own property should be up to the times in this matter. A few improvements in the appearance of a town sometimes makes property boom.

Johnson's Quick Drying Floor Paints, for sale by WALTER BROWN.

"Fancies of Boyhood" is the title of a neatly gotten up volume of poems which has just been published by the author, Mr Edward Blackadder, of this place, through the courtesy of whom we have received a copy. It contains a very nice collection of poems, which, from a hasty perusal, we should pronounce very well written. We expect before many years to see its author occupying a high place among poets, and bringing honor upon his native town. So far as we can learn, Mr Blackadder is the first Wolfville boy who has ever issued a volume of poems, and the people of Wolfville in particular should give the "Fancies of Boyhood" a generous welcome. We may say the book reflects the greatest credit upon its author.

Don't fail to see those beautiful Dadoed Blinds at the Wolfville Book Store.

TO BE CLOSED.—As a result of the Scott Act people enforcing the law in Fredrickton, the proprietors of the two leading hotels have sentences of three months each in jail awaiting them when they place themselves within the reach of the officers of the law. Mr Coleman, of the Barker House, is out of town and of the Barker House, Mr Edwards, of not likely to return. Mr Edwards, the Queen, who has been ill, was expected to give himself up on Friday and go to jail. The proprietors of both these hotels have agreed to close their houses on and after Monday until first August, and possibly they will remain closed for the entire summer. Where will summer tourists put up?—St John Sun.

Grand Division, S. of T.

The second quarterly session of the Grand Division, S. of T. N. S., met according to notice with the Woleley Division, No. 491, at Granville Ferry, on Tuesday, May 6th, at 3 p. m. The grand officers present were R. T. Murray, of Halifax, G. W. P.; Richard Craig, of Truro, G. W. A.; Rev. A. W. Nicholson, of Liverpool, G. S., and H. A. Taylor, of Halifax, G. T. A goodly number of representatives attended, the following counties being represented, viz, Halifax, Colchester, Hants, Kings, Annapolis, Digby, Yarmouth, Shelburne and Lunenburg, there being 38 representatives from 17 Divisions. The reports of the Grand Officers showed the order in a flourishing condition—ahead of this time last year. They reported 319 Divisions, with a membership of 16,978, and 6,000 children in Bands of Hope. The financial report was also satisfactory. More work is being done in juvenile organizations than formerly.

A public meeting was held in the evening, which was fairly well attended considering the state of the weather. W. W. Mills, P. G. W. A., occupied the chair. The chief speakers were Rev. W. H. Richan, from Digby, Rev. A. W. Nicholson, G. S., Richard Craig, G. W. A., ex-Mayor of Truro, an old veteran having just reached his 70th birthday, and has been 43 years engaged in temperance work. W. A. Taylor, another veteran, gave a reading on home-made honey and its consequences, which convulsed the audience with laughter. George H. McKinlay, of Halifax, spoke on Band of Hope work in which he is engaged. W. S. Saunders, also of Halifax, also made a few remarks. Choice selections of music were rendered in a pleasing manner by the choir at intervals. The following prominent gentlemen were on the platform, but time would not permit of their speaking—Captain Bowman Corning, of Yarmouth; John Heeman and W. J. Gates, of Halifax; L. W. Elliott, of Clarence; William V. Vroom, of Clementsport, and others.

On Wednesday morning the business of Grand Division was again taken up and rushed through before noon. Possibly the minds of some of the representatives were two deeply burdened with the duties of citizenship to enter into long discussions on questions of moral reform.—Bridgetown Monitor.

THE WOODEN INDIAN.

How He is Carved out of Pine in Defiance of Nature.

A Maker of Carriage Tolls Tells the Secrets of His Trade--Spindlers, Rather Than Fidelity to Nature, His Object--A Neglected Art.

"There, Pop, I've got all done but the top. What color shall I paint that?" The spectacled wood-carver looked from the bit of cardboard that he was coloring and said, in answer to his son's interruption; "Paint the head red, Jimmy." Jimmy, a lad of thirteen, with symptoms of incipient painter's colic, was devoting his best energies and the last fifteen minutes before the close of the day to the decoration of a wooden square in colors whose brilliancy and variety would have shamed the splendors of the first rainbow.

"Your business might be called artistic," he continued, "but there isn't much more to it. You see, when I was a young apprentice I had the honor of making two fine ship figureheads. They represented parties standing full length, with scrolls in their hands. I don't know who the parties was and I don't know the names of the ships, but I was proud of the job. That sort of business, though, dropped off the map long ago. The American people is economical to the detriment of art, and our business isn't appreciated as it ought to be. I do little or nothing now but make Indian dolls and other carvings with sentiments such as them."

The carver spoke with the air of a man who had been a maker of dolls for many years. He had turned in whole tribes, and fashioned with small regard for the truth of nature, the figures of the Indians of the Northwest. He had made dolls of the Indians of the Northwest, and fashioned with small regard for the truth of nature, the figures of the Indians of the Northwest.

"A takes from six to sixteen days to make one of these figures," said the master of the shop, taking up the thread of his discourse. "The figures are made in three or four days and painted in three more. The big, complicated figures, with tomahawks and warping tomahawks and beaded moccasins, take a week or more. The small figures, which are made in three or four days, are made in three or four days. The small figures, which are made in three or four days, are made in three or four days.

"When a man moves to a new place he sometimes gets a few Indian dolls. He takes the old one off his hands and sells it for a small dollar. We use to make negroes from '49 to '60, but later they got unpopular. Then the Indians got in and the Gremlin had a dog; but mostly they trade raw steady on Indians. Going Well, you may say that business is dull, though it might be better. The public doesn't appreciate our art as it used to."

THREE GREAT MUSICIANS.

The Great Financial Struggles of Beethoven, Schubert and Mozart. In the cemetery at Währing, a suburb of Vienna, three tombs have long lain close together, inscribed with the names of Beethoven, Schubert and Mozart. The cemetery, destroyed and long ago the remains of the three great musicians were removed and reinterred with all suitable honor in the central cemetery of the city. The same will be done with Schubert's remains, and his native country will strive by manifestations of its reverence to wipe out the memory of his neglected life and unrequited death.

SILVER FOR BABIES.

Extravagant Exaggerations of All Kinds Decried for the Silver for Babies.

You can't have a fashionable christening at home without a baptismal bowl, says the New York World. If you don't mind playing jackal, the family rector will take great pleasure in having one of the altar basins, or if not too nice to strain a point the caterer can be levered on for a large wine-cup, a small punch-bowl or a silver-tile of quaint design in which to christenize the new heir. But economy of no object and Mammon subjected the bowl is considered the most desirable. The most desirable is a silver-tile of quaint design in which to christenize the new heir.

"Thirty-two ocean steamers, aggregating 61,354 tons, arrived at Halifax from foreign ports during the month of April. The Rev. Geo. H. Thayer, of Bourton, says: 'By the way, and Wife over our lives to SHILOH'S CONSUMPTION CURE.' Sold by George V. Rand.
