At The Federal Capital.

The two most notable Parliamentary events of the week ending September 27th, were the government caucus, on Thursday the 25th, and the culmination of the debate on Mr. McKenzie's motion, regarding alleged manipulation of soldiers' votes in the election of 1917. The caucus of Thursday was memorable in many respects. It was very largely attended, and was characterized by perfect unanimity and splendid enthusiasm. The Prime Minister, Sir Robert Borden, who had been ill for about four weeks, came to the caucus although still very far from well, in order that he might, before leaving the city to take a necessary rest, lay before his colleagues and supporters a statement of policy, which the government are expected to pursue during the remainder of present parliament. The program presented by the Prime Minister is most comprehensive, and such as should, and must appeal to all citizens of Canada desirous of contributing, in the utmost degree, to the up-building and reconstruction of our country necessitated by the late war. The policy propounded by the Prime Minister was unanimously accepted by all in attendance at the caucus. Later it will be crystallized into a platform, and in due time, made public. The reception accorded the Prime Minister on his appearance in the caucus room, after his serious illness, was amazingly enthusiastic and sympathetic. The Prime Minister himself was deeply moved by the devotion and affection manifested towards him by his followers in both houses of parliament. So well satisfied were those assembled, with the Prime Minister's declaration of policy, that there was no disposition on the part of the rank and file to enter into any discussion. They simply asked for some expressions of opinion from other members of the cabinet. In this connection, excellent addresses were delivered by Sir George Foster, Mr. Sifton, Mr. Bowell and others. It is extremely doubtful if at any time, a ministerial caucus has aroused so much genuine enthusiasm, and hearty felt devotion and loyalty to its leader, as was manifested on this occasion towards the Right Hon. Sir Robert Borden. On the day following the caucus, the Prime Minister left the capital for the south, for a long rest, in the hope of completely recuperating his strength and energies, so serious ly impaired by his desorption duty on behalf of Canada. It is the earnest hope of all that before the next session of parliament shall arrive, the Prime Minister shall have completely regained his health and energies so as to continue to guide the ship of state in this serious and onerous time for Canada. The other memorable event in the House of Commons already referred to, namely, the final stage of the discussion of Mr. McKenzie's resolution, attacking the Hon. Mr. Meighen came on Thursday night, or rather, the early hours of Friday morning. The debate was resumed at a comparatively early hour on Thursday evening, and continued through all the hours of the night, until the division was taken at 2.30 Friday morning. It is safe to state that rarely, if ever, so much excitement attended the last stages of any debate in the House of Commons. After several speakers, on both sides of the house, had taken part in the discussion, Mr. McKenzie, the leader of the opposition rose, in the exercise of his right, to close the debate. After he had been speaking a short time, he introduced what he declared was the original of the telegram, alleged to have been sent by Mr. Meighen. He flaunted it before the House, with a great flourish of trumpets, in the midst of a wild hurrah from his followers. Immediately Mr. Meighen was on his feet, and asked to be shown the document. It was reluctantly passed over to him, and after he had scanned it, he unhesitatingly declared that it was not written by him, nor signed by him, nor initialed by him. In emphatic terms he declared that the alleged telegram was a forgery. This transferred the enthusiasm and applause from the opposition side of the chamber to the government side, and for some time it was very difficult for Mr. Speaker to maintain even a semblance of order. Mr. Meighen demanded that he be allowed to make a statement. This, Mr. McKenzie refused to permit. According to the rules of the House, no member can interrupt the one who has the floor, without the permission of the latter. Mr. McKenzie, evidently feeling the weakness of his position and the untenable ground which he essayed to hold, availed himself of his privilege, and would not allow Mr. Meighen to make any statement. The meaning and intent of these tactics were not lost on the members of the house. It was abundantly evident that Mr. McKenzie and his friends had forged the document, they claimed to be the original of the telegram, concerning which the whole discussion took place. Finding that their contemptible tactics were appreciated at their proper value, they availed themselves of whatever advantages the rules of the House afforded them to prevent any refutation of their most reprehensible conduct. It would be difficult to describe what took place in the chamber for the next quarter of an hour, or so. From the government side, demands were loudly made that Mr. Meighen be allowed to make his explanation, while from the opposition side, pandemonium itself would appear to have been let loose, and all manner of necessary noises were indulged in, in order to prevent any explanation coming from the government side. In this crisis, Mr. Speaker had more than his hands full. He was on his feet most of the time endeavoring to maintain some semblance of order, but he really had a most difficult task. Finally, order was restored sufficiently to have a division called. Mr. Speaker put his motion, and the members were called in. During the interval, awaiting the arrival of members from the lobbies, the scenes in the chamber were quite lively. Shouts of songs from either side of the chamber were indulged in, according as the spirit moved. Finally the division was taken, and the motion of Mr. McKenzie was defeated on a strictly party division. There was not a very large vote, as a good many members had gone away within a day or two previously, but when the division was taken, there was no mistaking where the line was drawn. It was strictly and absolutely government and opposition.

After the motion had been voted down, Hon. Mr. Doherty, who was leading the House, rose and demanded that the alleged telegram produced by Mr. McKenzie should be filed with the Clerk of the House, as it was the property of parliament once it had been made use of and exhibited in the debate. Here again confusion worse confounded broke out. The dread which seized the members of the opposition, at the bare possibility of this forged document becoming a matter of record, drove them, in a moment of madness, about every man of the opposition side of the house was on his feet at the same time, all shouting, gesticulating, and protesting that the document had not been tabled, and should not become a matter of record. Hon. Mr. Doherty persevered in his argument that, in his opinion, the telegram had been placed on the table of the House. After a quarter of an hour of most exciting disorder, Mr. Speaker, after consulting the proper authorities, ruled that it was not necessary that the document should be placed in the keeping of the Clerk of the House. Thus ended this debate, initiated from the most contemptible of motives, and concluded amidst undignified scenes, which indicated beyond the possibility of doubt the false, untenable and vicious motives by which the opposition were actuated in precipitating the matter upon the House. It was quite plain that Mr. McKenzie and his friends felt they had undertaken a most vicious and unscrupulous attack, and had miserably failed in their endeavor to carry it through. Of late, indeed, in parliamentary proceedings, as far as the House of Commons is concerned, have been largely transferred from the chamber to the committee-rooms. Two very important bills have been referred to special parliamentary committees, for discussion and examination, before being brought in parliament. These refer to the Civil Service Classification and to the amendment of the Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment. Each of the bills were referred to a special parliamentary committee of twenty members, and in the committee's consideration of these measures, numerous witnesses have been summoned and have given evidence. Members of the different soldiers' organizations have appeared before their committees in great numbers and from all parts of the Dominion. Most extraordinary evidence, discussions and orations have played their part before the committees. Whatever may be the decision of the Government relative to this bill, there is no doubt whatever that it was a good thing that the opportunity was afforded to these witnesses before the committee. The same may be said of the civil service reclassification bill. Members of all branches of the Civil Service have been before the committee and have given their views from every possible point of view relative to what they would desire to have brought about. Of course, it may be readily understood that it would be absolutely out of the question to expect that even a small part of the varied desires and expressions of opinion might be incorporated in the completed legislation. It is a most interesting and important question.

Ottawa, Oct. 14—Advisors received here today from Hot Springs, Virginia, indicate that improvement in Sir Robert Borden's health is slow but satisfactory. After battling for several days off Cape Race in a hurricane, during which the deckload of lumber was washed overboard, the British schooner Helene, Halifax for Queenstown, arrived in Halifax Saturday night. During the storm the captain's leg was broken. As he was the only navigator, he directed from his bunk the working of his ship until port. Upon arrival he was taken to a hospital, where his leg was amputated. A very interesting event took place at St. Peter's Church, St. Peter's Bay, on Wednesday morning, October 8th, when Miss Sophia Jane McInnis, daughter of Mrs. J. G. McInnis of St. Peter's, was united in marriage to Mr. John Francis McInnis of the same place. The bridesmaid was Miss Clotilda McInnis, sister of the bride, and the groomsmen were Mr. R. J. McInnis, brother of the groom, Rev. Father McAulay, officiated. Their many friends extend best wishes to the happy young couple. Mr. Ernest McInnis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Pius McInnis, St. Peter's Bay, who returned from overseas a short time ago, leaves this week for New Glasgow, N.S., where he will resume his former duties as telegraph operator of the C.N.R. Railway. Mr. McInnis gained some valuable and extensive experience in his line while attached to the army signal corps, and this should naturally impart rapid promotion for him in the service. He has the best wishes of his many friends for continued success in his work. The dwelling house of the late Archibald Campbell, pitched some time ago by Mr. Augustus Ahearn, situated at Killalee, Greenmount, was totally destroyed by fire in the early hours of the 7th inst. The building, at some distance from its nearest neighbors, has been undisturbed for some time, and the first indication of fire was seen by neighbors when the walls were falling in and the building was totally destroyed. From the circumstances, the fire was the result of an accident. As the building was uninsured, there is a heavy loss to Mr. Ahearn. The annual services for the dead were held at the Catholic Cemetery. It was largely attended. The League of the Cross Band played a large parade of the members of that society and the Knights of Columbus from St. Dunstan's Cathedral to the cemetery, where His Lordship Bishop O'Leary officiated, assisted by several of the clergy. The Des O'Riendus, the Libera and the Miserere Mel were sung, and prayers were offered for the repose of the departed members of the congregation. His Lordship delivered a discourse appropriate to the occasion. The S.S. Canadian Adventurer, a large new steamer recently launched by His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales at the Aulic, will be in the harbor about November twenty to load full cargo of produce, etc., under deck and cattle and sheep on deck for St. John's, Newfoundland direct. The Canadian Adventurer is owned by the Canadian Government, Marine Ltd., and it is no doubt will at all times to inspection, upon mean much for the future transportation facilities for this port. The bill to amend the Royal Northwest Mounted Police Act provides that the Governor General may, by Commission, appoint a Commissioner of Police, who shall be called the Commissioner of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, and may also appoint a Financial Controller of the same. If the present Controller of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police is appointed, the Financial Controller shall have while holding office the rank and salary of a Deputy Head of a Department. It is understood that Mr. A. E. McLean will hold that position.

Princes of the West

I shall not say good-bye to Western Canada, but all reverent. The Prince of Wales closed his tour of Western Canada at Winnipeg with these words at the end of a luncheon at which he entertained two hundred and fifty guests from all parts of the west. In his simple speech the Prince expressed his affection for Western Canada and its people, his admiration for the spirit of the law, and his determination to come again when the circumstances should permit. Simplicity and earnestness were the keynote of his words, and when he said that his guests broke out in a great roar of applause and encouragement. Automobile and Train Collide Quebec, Oct. 14—An accident will be held by Coroner Jolicoeur into the death of William Jean de Bonin, Mass., who while driving a motor car, collided with a freight train at the crossing of the Montreal highway near Lorette. De Bonin, who had his skull crushed in and his brain knocked out, died instantly, but he also suffered cranial fractures in addition to bodily injuries, lived for fifteen minutes without regaining consciousness. A search of the clothing of the deceased showed that Jean was formerly a resident of St. Anthonis in the county of Temiscouata, and carried a military exemption certificate, besides a considerable sum of money. De Bonin had a number of receipts for dues paid to the fraternal order of Eagles, and his address was 222 Centre Street, Nashua, N.H. Engineer Belger of the freight train states that he blew his whistle as usual, when approaching the crossing, and that the car struck the side of his engine in the centre, at a good rate of speed. It is presumed that the unfortunate men, both of whom were about thirty years of age, did not hear the whistle, or were ignorant of the crossing, unless the brake was out of order and refused to act.

St. Michael, Archangel.

Yet it lingers—brave to lingers Round a form of beauty rare.

Under the altar, mid the shadows, Sword in hand, he ever stands;

In his armour, glorious, warlike, He who marshaled angel bands;

Waged that first terrific battle, For Jehovah fought and won—

Stood amid the faithful legions, Victor o'er the Shining One.

On his brow is triumph throned, For God's champion well doth know

Nevermore through countless aeons Shall uprise that fallen foe.

In the darkness transept kneeling, As I gaze, I breathe a prayer,

While the shadows fold me close—ly, While the sunbeam dieth there.

In the stress of deadly conflict Give me of your courage high:

Teach me, first and greatest hero! When to struggle, when to fly.

The Monk's Reparation.

The Countess accordingly a few nights later took up her position, as before, in the little room close to the passage where she had heard the steps.

She had not long to wait. The hour struck twelve, and, as on the former occasion, the steps were distinctly audible passing down the gallery.

The lady arose and followed the sound, proceeding down the stairs, through the hall and corridor, and out into the ruins of the old church.

When she arrived in the centre of the church, the sound ceased, and presently she saw the form of the monk standing before her.

Pains in the Back

...the medicine without benefit. ...I tried to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. After the first bottle I felt so much better that I ordered the second and six bottles later my new woman. When my little girl was a boy, she could not keep anything on her stomach, and we gave her Hood's Sarsaparilla which cured her." Mrs. Thomas L. W. Wallisburg, Ont.

Hood's Sarsaparilla cures kidney and liver troubles, leavens the blood, and builds up the whole system.

The next morning after breakfast she ordered the carriage, and drove to the cure of the parish, who lived in the village which stood of prettily against the wooded hill about half a mile from the chateau.

"Is Monsieur l'Abbe at home?" she inquired of the maid who answered the door.

"Yes, Madame. Will you please step in?"

The Countess had not long to wait. The cure, a venerable-looking old man, with long white hair, and unshaven though kindly face, soon made his appearance on the threshold.

After greeting him, the Countess at once turned to the subject that was uppermost in her mind.

"Will you kindly offer two Masses," she said, "as soon as possible for a particular intention? It is a very urgent matter."

"Certainly," replied the cure smiling. "I will say them this week without fail. Will that do?"

"Yes, many thanks!" And can you tell me there is any one in the village very ill?"

The cure turned a penetrating look of inquiry on the Countess and after a pause said:

"Well, there is Marie Duval; she has been ailing some time, but it is nothing serious. Then there is poor old Paul; he is feeble certainly. But no, I know of no one who is very seriously ill."

The Countess, much disappointed with the results of her inquiry, thanked the cure, wished him good-morning and returned to her carriage.

Doubts now thronged into her mind. Had she been the victim of her own suspicions? Was she labouring under some extraordinary delusion? Was there no apparition at all? But it was impossible to think that she had been mistaken; and if the apparition were real, it was incredible that it could have misled her.

There was yet the convent. Perhaps the Sisters might know of some one; they were constantly among the poor and the sick. The case may be so recent that it has not yet come to the knowledge of the cure. Comforted by these reflections, she gave orders to the coachman to drive to the convent, a pleasantly situated house a little way outside the village, on the road to C.

The Countess was scarcely clear of the village when she met two of the Sisters, who made signs that they wished to speak to her.

"Madame," began one of them, when the carriage pulled up, "there is such a sad case for the exercise of your charity! There is a poor woman, just beyond the village, on the N. road, in a state of utter destitution and neglect. I fear she is dying, and she will not see the cure nor anyone."

The Countess, much relieved, thanked the Sisters, and at once directed the coachman to drive to the place indicated. After difficulty, the cottage, or rather hovel, was found. She picked her way through the dirt and walked in. When her eyes grew accustomed to the darkness, she distinguished in the farther corner of the room a huddled-looking woman lying on straw, and covered with rags, and evidently in a dying condition. The filth of the room was beyond description; the stench was sickening. The window had not been open for days, and the poor creature was fast becoming a prey to the elements.

Cramps in Stomach

...the course of the day, and with so little warning as an attack of cramps in the stomach. These are very painful and when you are seized in this way, you are all doubled up, you want a remedy you are sure will give you relief, and give it quickly too.

You don't want some untried medicine that might only help you. You want Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. Every one who has ever used it knows that a dose or two will give instant relief.

Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is one of those remedies that should be in every house, as no one knows just when some member of the family may be attacked with diarrhoea, dysentery, cholera, cramps, colic or some other bowel complaint.

Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry has been on the market for the past 74 years. It is a cure for the new and untried remedies. Refuse substitutes. They may be dangerous.

Price 50c at all druggists. Put up only by The T. Milburn Co. Limited, Toronto, Ont.

The Countess addressed a few kindly words to the dying woman, offering to nurse her and take care of her, but she scowled back, evidently resenting the intrusion. Presently her feeling found expression in a volley of oaths and foul abuse, to which, however, the Countess paid no heed, but busied herself in letting in fresh air, tidying up the room, and reducing things to something like order. Having done all she could, she made her way home, having promised before leaving to return again shortly with food and medical aid.

For more than a fortnight the Countess daily waited on the sick woman, and nursed her with unvarying patience and charity, receiving in return nothing but abuse and foul language, so that the good lady wondered how if would all end. All her kindly attention seemed to make but little impression. The woman was evidently sinking, rapidly. Would she last out the twenty-one days? Would her heart yield to the invitations of grief before the end came? The charity of the Countess at length led its reward. As the days passed there was a marked improvement in the demeanour of the dying woman. Her expression softened, her foul language ceased to flow, a look even of gratitude would flit across her wasted features.

At last the Countess ventured to speak to the dying woman of her soul and its needs, of the account she must give to God, of his just judgments and of his boundless mercy. The words fell upon prepared soil. Repentance came; the cure was sent for; with many tears the dying woman made her peace with God; and on the twenty-first day, as the apparition foretold, she breathed forth her soul to God, in the arms of her devoted nurse.

Announcement

For the information of our many patrons, in both town and country, we deem it necessary to announce that the Coal Business, successfully carried on in the past by the late Mr. Charles Lyons, will be continued by the Estate, under the old firm name of C. Lyons & Co.

By maintaining a high standard of service and by courteous and honest treatment of the public, this firm has, for a period of more than a quarter of a century, enjoyed a large and ever-increasing patronage; and in announcing our intention of carrying on, we desire, most earnestly, to give expression to our appreciation thereof. We are deeply grateful to the firm's many patrons for their constant manifestation of confidence in it in the past, and we assure them that if they favor us with a similar evidence of their good-will in the future there shall be no economy of effort on our part to make our intercourse both pleasant and profitable to them.

As we possess almost unlimited facilities for supplying the coal trade, and as we are desirous of extending our already large business, we respectfully invite the patronage of new customers; and if we succeed in thus increasing our present operation, we guarantee that we shall be indefatigable in our endeavor to justify the confidence of our new friends.

We again thank our patrons for their past generous patronage, and respectfully solicit a renewal of their esteemed custom.

Canadian National Railways

OPERATING ONE HOUR EARLIER

Important Daylight Saving Change of Time at a.m. Sunday, March 30, 1919

All clocks and watches used in operation of Canadian National Railway will at 2 a.m. Sunday, March 30th, be advanced one hour. To prevent serious confusion and inconvenience to the public the attention of all concerned is directed to the following conditions resulting from the important change of time:

If cities, towns, villages and other municipal bodies do not change their local time to correspond with the new Railway time, all concerned should keep in mind that while trains continue to leave Railway Stations on present schedule, such schedule will be operated one hour ahead of present local time. Therefore any municipality where local time is not changed to correspond with the new Railway time, passengers must reach Railway Station ONE HOUR EARLIER than shown in current folders and public time posters.

Where municipal time is changed to correspond with the new Railway time, passengers will not experience difficulty growing out of the change.
