MUNICIPAL COUNCIL HOLDS LAST SESSION

South Saanich Councillors Revise Lists and Clean Up Business

Last night's meeting was the last to be held by the present council of the municipality of South Saanich.

Prior to the meeting, however, the board of revision comprising the reeve and councillors sat and considered the voters lists.

In the case of the last named legal difficulties which should have been proved interesting, Mr. Merriman is the owner of 100 acres of land in the municipality in which he has been a resident for several years.

At the conclusion of the revision of the lists the board resolved itself into the regular council meeting.

The report of the medical health officer, Dr. Nelson, for the past year stated that the health of the municipality has been exceptionally good and free from infectious diseases.

The committee appointed to investigate the complaint of J. Saul, reported water overflowing his land, reported that Mr. Saul has a just ground for complaint but that there appears no way to overcome the difficulty except through the Watercourses and Drainage Act, and the committee recommended to the next council the framing of a bylaw along the lines of the said act as such would be in the best interests of the municipality.

Municipal Constable Russell's report for December showed road tax collected $140; peddlers licenses $15.

ANGLICAN CONFERENCE IN LONDON IN JUNE

Arrangements for Meeting of Representatives of Every Diocese in World

It may be said without exaggeration that interest is being felt throughout the whole world in the meeting of the Pan-Anglican congress which is to be held in London next June.

All the arrangements have been made, and the meetings will be held in the Albert hall in London during the last week in June.

During his stay at Dunbar the Sir David Francis Wiggate, has been carrying out experiments with a view of obtaining a type of motor car suitable for use in the Egyptian desert.

The car, which has wheels of exceptional dimensions, was first taken over a stretch of very heavy sand, into which it sank from nine inches to two inches, and it got along well at a speed of about 20 miles an hour.

In the third test the car again became imbedded in a sand bed, but was also got out. On the whole the tests were considered satisfactory, as the conditions were much more severe than would be experienced in Egypt.

PREMIER AND MEMBER ACCLAIMED IN ISLANDS

Correspondent on Recent Trip of Richard McBride and A. E. McPhillips

A correspondent from the Islands writes the Colonist regarding the recent trip of Hon. Richard McBride and A. E. McPhillips, K.C., M.P.P., as follows:

"The head of the provincial government, together with his local lieutenant, A. E. McPhillips, has recently been going the rounds of the Islands district with the old formula in his mouth 'Any Complaints?'"

"Well, there isn't much to complain of and that a fact, has been the least enthusiastic response met with, whilst at Mayne Island the chairman was welcomed by nature a Liberal, and said so, went so far as to recommend to the electors the necessity of considering that were the duties of the good represented to the representatives since there was so little left to criticize in the conduct of our member elect."

"At Spring Bay which was Mr. McPhillips' stronghold, he was spoken of as one who was almost fatherly in his care of those whose spokesman he is, and from end to end of the riding, the sight of the slight figure in dripping garments which clung to him like bathing dress, walking stubbornly over the heavy country roads to make a personal inspection of them, aroused general enthusiasm."

"There is only one question which men ask in the district: 'Can he keep it?' The answer is almost unanimous, 'riding which was for a long time represented, and for a long time represented only by an absentee, that its present members should come to see for himself, bringing with him his leader, that he too might be convinced of the proper need.'"

"The growth of the district is most marked. At Sidney we used to note a dead lumber mill and such houses as there are we knew as well as Mount Schonan."

"Possibly in the near future even this one disease of our countryside may be cured by electricity. The growth on all sides and nowhere more so than at the charming little schoolhouse where the good taste of the school mistress and the interest of many men in their own school has resulted in the prettiest school interior in British Columbia. Speaking from rather a wide experience of the schoolhouses of British Columbia, we cannot refrain from commenting on the striking improvements in their appearance and upkeep. Is this not due to the new system under which the schools are more dependent than they used to be upon those who use them."

"But for enthusiasm Salt Spring has no rival. She won't allow a woman to rival, and she will never pretend to do so if she does not, but under all her chaff there is a strong and generous loyalty to those she counts as friends, and if anyone really wants a difficult job he had better try to cut out McPhillips in Ganges."

Everywhere the premier was acclaimed as one who had courage in the indication of a strong policy and had justified his courage by his success while the confidence of the people is now that which comes from deeds accomplished instead of things promised. To comfort our opponents, I will sum up in a sentence. The Islands district is hopelessly, incurably, everlastingly Conservative."

PROFITS FROM ALFALFA

Here is what one farmer—Rude Asper—did with thirteen acres of alfalfa on the D. F. Dock farm. The thirteen acres averaged five bushels to the acre, or a total of 65 bushels. This he sold at $8 a bushel, or $520. Besides this, he sold the hay for $50, realizing $370 of thirteen acres. In itself this is remarkable, but when it is remembered that this was done by Rude Asper, who admits that he is the poorest farmer in Osborne county, it is little less than miraculous.

SCHMITZ WINS ON HIS APPEAL Higher Court Sets Aside Conviction in French Restaurant Case

NO OFFENCE COMMITTED

Decision Also Benefits Ruef, Who May Give Slip to Prosecution

San Francisco, Jan. 9.—The District Court of Appeals handed down a decision setting aside the judgment in the case of former Mayor E. Schmitz convicted of extortion in the French restaurant case. Abe Ruef, also benefited by the ruling of the upper court, according to its decision, he pleaded guilty to act that was no offense against the laws of the State.

After discussing the point, the court reversed the judgment against Schmitz on the ground that no crime had been committed. The decision was handed down in the case of Ruef, who pleaded guilty to extorting money from the French restaurants. It is therefore equally null and void.

The decision wipes out the French restaurant case, and the pending charges of extortion against Schmitz and Ruef must be dismissed. Both are now entitled to their money, and they obtain the necessary bondsman they can remain at liberty until such time as the jury finds them guilty on one of the public offences.

Schmitz and Ruef cannot take advantage of the decision for sixty days. The prosecution has twenty days in which to ask for a re-hearing. Then the appellate court will have ten days to consider the application. When this is done the prosecution will go through the same procedure in the supreme court, which will take the same length of time.

Consequently Schmitz and Ruef will still be kept in the county jail for two months at least. The news of the decision of the appellate court spread rapidly over the city, causing consternation in the quarters where they are held in others. District Attorney Langdon said Schmitz and Ruef will be prosecuted on other indictments that charge the public offences.

Today's decision will have the effect of invalidating the other four indictments, charging Schmitz as well as Ruef with extortion, and renders void the plea of insanity. When this is done the appellate court held that no crime has been committed.

By this reversal, it is feared that the prosecution has lost its hold upon Ruef, and that he will now refuse all overtures for immunity, wholly or in part, to testify in the bribery graft cases, and fight every indictment.

The reversal also means that Ruef 126 indictments, charging bribery, and forty indictments remain against Schmitz.

KILLED FOUR PEOPLE

Charge Laid Against An Italian Now Under Arrest in a Colorado Town

Florence, Colo., Jan. 9.—That Joseph Buffetti, Dominic Minichetto, Joseph Minichetto and Mrs. Frank Palmer, who mysteriously disappeared in this city three months ago, and their bodies then chopped to pieces, is the opinion of the police, as human lungs, thorax and piece of tongue have been found in the Arkansas river. It is believed that the other dismembered bodies are being scattered along the bed of the river by the swift current.

Tony Boveri, who is in jail charged with the murder of the Minichetto brothers, is said by the police to have confessed to killing a man in Italy before coming to America. In his house was found a bundle of letters addressed to Toni Neroni, and this is believed to be his correct name. Boveri was engaged in market gardening in partnership with the Minichetto brothers, and is accused by the police of having murdered them in order to obtain their money and other property.

Buffetti was an old man employed in the garden. The police believe he was killed because of the other alternative. He had kept a name added to the list of missing, and was quite as prevalent.

Among several old and feeble or very young persons, serious conditions have developed, but no fatalities have so far resulted in consequence of the strange epidemic.

Against Wage Reduction.—Montreal, Jan. 9.—About six hundred employees of Thomas Davidson, manufacturing chandeliers and glassware, went to work today because of a reduction of ten per cent. in wages.

Home For Prisoners' Wives.—It was a happy thought for the Duchess of Devonshire, formerly Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt, to have her London charities a home for the wives of prisoners serving sentences.

The plan is a commodious and finely appointed, and provides a means to encourage those who enter it for time to take up useful occupations to assist in their further maintenance.

A day nursery is also provided for use by prisoners' wives and their babies. This is a very useful form of charity, as frequently it is the families of prisoners who suffer most by the incarceration of the unworthy husbands and fathers.

BRITAIN BARRED OUT

Treaty of 1815 Keeps Her Out of "Most Favored Nation" List of the United States

New York, Jan. 9.—England's commercial relations with the United States are still governed by the treaty of 1815, which excludes her from the "most favored nation" list of 1815, according to a decision handed down by the board of general appraisers here today. Several importers of British goods protested against the tariff of $2.25 a gallon when French liquors were admitted for $1.75.

The board, however, held that Great Britain was barred by the treaty from "the most favored nation" list, and sustained the collector's charge.

COACHES OVERTURNED

Wreck of Sunset Limited Train on the Southern Pacific—Three Killed and 18 Injured

San Jose, Jan. 9.—Sunset Limited Express, No. 10, southbound on the Southern Pacific, running an hour late, was wrecked tonight at Tucker, 25 miles south of here. A passenger, Mrs. A. P. Boyd, of Portland, Oregon, and her little son were killed. A tramp is also reported killed. Eighty-one persons are being treated at the Gilroy hospital.

The cause of the wreck is unknown at this time. Two coaches were overturned on the tracks and one thrown into the country road.

Architects' Bill.—Ottawa, Jan. 9.—An important private bill is to come before parliament looking to the creation of a Dominion body to govern the profession of Architecture in Canada.

Alfred Stead is Alive.—London, Jan. 9.—It was announced on December 15, that Alfred Stead, son of W. T. Stead, editor of the Review of Reviews, was dead. This was an error. Alfred had recovered and is filling the position of Consul General of Roumania in London. His brother, William, died suddenly last month, and the mistake arose through confusing the name of the two brothers.

Collingwood Shipyard Closed.—Toronto, Jan. 9.—At a meeting of the Mechanics' union last night it was reported that the works of the Collingwood Shipbuilding company will be closed down for the winter. The company is said to have notified its men that wages would be cut five per cent, whereupon about 140 painters, riveters, wheelmakers and carpenters went on strike, and the company then decided to close down. About 250 men are idle as a result.

PECULIAR EPIDEMIC

Lansing, Michigan, Experiences Sudden and Mysterious Visitation of Sickness

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 9.—A special to the Free Press from Lansing, says: Whether from the flight of bacilli over the city or from some other unknown cause, Lansing was seized by a strange malady some time during Tuesday night, thousands of persons suddenly stricken with extreme nausea accompanied by acute intestinal troubles.

From midnight until morning and all during the forenoon, calls for physicians were incessant. Whole families were stricken. Two boys were found lying in the street, too ill to make further progress. The disease, which most physicians attribute to atmospheric conditions, yielded readily to treatment.

Fifty city teachers and hundreds of pupils were absent from school. All the stores were short of help. Secretary Schumway, of the state board of health, suspecting that something was wrong with the city water supply, took steps to have an analysis made, but it was not completed today. It was learned later last night that outside the waterworks zone the disease was quite as prevalent.

Among several old and feeble or very young persons, serious conditions have developed, but no fatalities have so far resulted in consequence of the strange epidemic.

SEA DISASTERS REPORTED

Towns on German Shore of the Baltic Suffering From High Water

Paris, Jan. 9.—The storm on the English channel, along the west coast of Europe, and on the North African coast is still raging, and many fishing boats have been lost. A despatch received here from Tangier says that two native passenger boats founded off El Arash, Morocco. Forty persons were drowned, including some Europeans.

MONOPOLY FIGHTS

Old Montreal Light Company Applies to Court to Maintain its Grasp on the City

Montreal, Jan. 9.—There was another development in the Montreal fight for cheaper gas and electricity today. A meeting of the city council had been called for tomorrow for the purpose of taking action on the offer made by the Robert company to supply electricity at a much lower rate than now prevails, the city attorney having decided that the offer of the Montreal Light and Power company to make rates according to a sliding scale was not an offer within the terms of the tender asked for. This ruling the local monopoly—out of the running, and so today they asked and secured from Judge Fortin an injunction preventing the council from acting on the Robert offer at the special meeting called for that purpose. As a result the tender of the Robert company goes over to the regular meeting on Monday, when any one alderman can veto it by postponing until the next meeting of the council, thus tying the matter up until after the elections on February 3.

Col. Hughes has another resolution deposed, but also in private or business operations, should be distributed as far as possible throughout the entire year.

PATIENTS IMPROVE IN THE SANITARIUM

Report From Superintendent Read at Meeting in Vancouver

Vancouver, Jan. 9.—A meeting of the Anti-Tuberculosis society was held yesterday afternoon in the board of trade rooms, at which the members present agreed to accept the construction of the British Columbia Anti-Tuberculosis society and thereby become a branch of that organization. Mr. J. Fagan was present and read an interesting letter from Dr. Irving, medical superintendent of the Tranquille sanitarium, in which he claims that the locality of Tranquille is one as nearly approaching the ideal as any that has yet been attained in any work in this direction. He states that the climatic conditions have for years been recognized by the medical profession throughout Canada and the United States as a pure, dry air, not subject to sudden changes and containing a minimum amount of moisture. The elevation, as one that has been decided by the Climatological Society of America as that best calculated to produce good results in the treatment of phthisis. At present eighteen patients are under treatment, all of whom have shown a marked improvement during the past month. Two new cottages are now being built, which will increase the accommodation by six. The letter closed with an invitation to all members of the society, or any others interested in the cause, to pay a visit of inspection to the institution.

MR. FOWLER'S DEAL

Stated in Commission Evidence That He Did Not Receive All the Money

Vancouver, Jan. 9.—"Have you been paid that $55,000 yet, the difference between the $170,000 for which you bought the Kamloops property from the Ashcroft Company and the $25,000 for which you sold it to the Kamloops Lumber Company and the Hon. Geo. E. Foster?" This is one of the more interesting of a thousand questions recently fired at the head of George W. Fowler, M.P., in a commission which has just been returned and filed with the Registrar of the Court. It was issued in the suit in which the Kamloops Lumber Company and Hon. Mr. Foster are seeking from the Ashcroft Water, Electric & Improvement Company the transfer of certain property mentioned in those historic and contemporaneous agreements.

Life-Saving Tug

FOR CAPE FLATTERY Well Equipped Vessel With Motor Lifeboat and Latest Appliances

The safeguarding of life and property off the entrance to the Straits of Juan de Fuca since the Valencia disaster of two years ago, has received attention on both sides of the international boundary. The Dominion, which had 26 life saving stations on the Atlantic coast, has established a station at Boundary Falls where the motor lifeboat, built at a cost of $10,000 in New Jersey, has been installed, and communications and aids to navigation have been improved. The United States government is following up this work with greater zeal. Pending the completion of a life saving tug to be stationed at Neah bay, the revenue cutter "Tussock" has been stationed there for life saving. An effort was made to have the United States government charter one of the tugs of the Puget Sound Tug Boat company for this work. The engineer-in-chief of the revenue cutter service, C. A. McAlister, in giving a description of the life-saving vessel to be provided, said in giving reasons for the necessity of the boat that in the past century nearly 700 lives have been lost in the immediate vicinity, to say nothing of millions of dollars worth of property. The climax came in the total wreck of the coastwise passenger steamer Valencia, from San Francisco bound for Seattle, which occurred in a dense fog on the night of January 22, 1906. This unfortunate vessel had overrun her distance and, failing to pick up the light at the entrance to the Straits of Juan de Fuca, ran aground on the rocks at the foot of a high cliff on an unsettled portion of the coast of Vancouver Island. One hundred and thirty-six were lost, many of which could have been saved had the accident occurred within reach of a life-saving station, or had some vessel of the necessary life-saving apparatus been in the vicinity, as the wreck did not get to pieces until over thirty-six hours after she had struck. It is the public press on the Pacific coast took up the record of this vessel and some means for saving lives in those waters. The President appointed a commission to investigate the cause of the wreck and to recommend some means whereby similar fatalities could be avoided. Numerous schemes were suggested, among them being international life-saving stations along the Vancouver coast. This, however, proved inadvisable, and finally, after mature consideration, the Board, in addition to suggesting additional lightships, coastwise telegraph and telephone lines, fog signals, wireless telegraph, etc., recommended that a first-class ocean-going, life-saving steamer or tug, officered and manned by the most skillful life-saving crew available, should be stationed at Neah Bay, which is within 5 miles of Cape Flattery and the entrance to the Straits, and the only available harbor in that vicinity, to be equipped with the best possible appliances of surf-boats and lifeboats with a wireless telegraph apparatus.

The life-saving steamer is being built at Wilmington, Delaware, at a cost of $139,057. She will be a large seafaring tug, 152 feet long, 39.6 beam, 29.6 feet deep and of 745 tons displacement, built of steel with double bottom. Her boat equipment will consist of two 24-foot metallic lifeboats, one 20-foot outer boat, one 15-foot dinghy, and one 17-foot metallic lifeboat. It is also provided with a motor lifeboat will be provided. The lifeboats will be of the self-righting and self-bailing type. There will be two pole masts, with a signal yard on the foremast. For life-saving purposes there will be rigged from the mainmast a breeches-buoy arrangement operated in a precisely similar manner and by the same kind of gear as has been successfully used for coaling ships at sea. It is expected that this gear can be used effectively for a distance of 1,000 feet, which should enable the tug to rescue shipwrecked persons, with safety, from any vessel which may be stranded on a reef or on the beach. The electrical equipment will be very complete, and will consist, in addition to the usual lighting outfit, of the Ardots system for night-signaling wireless telegraph and two powerful searchlights, one at each end of the deckhouse. The tug will have an average speed of 12 knots an hour, with bunker space allowing of 8,000 knots steaming should it be necessary to chase the ship to search for overdue or missing vessels. It is believed that the design contemplates the furnishing of every known device of any practical value, which can be of service in saving life at sea. Summarized, the special equipments of this vessel are as follows: Two self-bailing and self-righting lifeboats; life raft; line-throwing apparatus; Ardots system for night signaling; additional searchlight; wrecking apparatus for pumping out vessels, and fire-extinguishing apparatus.

On New Year's Day opened in Vancouver, B.C. the Japanese stores at the corner of Third and Broadway. The firemen were half dressed Japanese and they were very seriously explained that the knives were severely punished. There has been much talk in Vancouver of the Japanese people, whether to fear and hate each other, that should not exist in these happy borders built in Canada during a great advantage. If which is sent out of the work than when it is not are not yet railroads end grain to the seacoast. This will not be the case, but the wheat lands. They Canadian Northern, the Grand Trunk Pacific, and the other lines, are within a very short distance it is to be hoped, the fre than they are at present.

The grain merchants have shown that they will flourish like wheat in the United States at men would not have been.

The C. P. R. has been hundreds of men at work in Wellington and Alberni, that all will be done to up on Vancouver Island Victoria faster than any.

It looks as though to find something else to do are, we are told, but few have timber to sell. The Asia, Finland and Australia and Canada and the United States, Sweden and Norway. There is the greatest to take care of the British Columbia we have in the world. Every year many men are sent to grow and it will pay.

Lord Curzon on the True Imperialism

ORD CURZON of Kedleston, as president of the Birmingham and Midland Institute, delivered an address in the Town-hall, Birmingham. He took for his subject, "The True Imperialism."

In the course of his address Lord Curzon said he did not suggest that there was a false Imperialism, though he admitted that strange figures sometimes masqueraded under a disguise to which they could lay no claim, says the London Times. He spoke of the first place because he was a convinced and unconquerable Imperialist, and events had been called upon to spend the whole of his working manhood in the study or the service of empire, and to whom it had come to be a secular religion, embodying the most sacred duty of the present and the brightest hope for the future. His second reason was this, to what place could he come more likely to receive such a message with an enlightened and businesslike comprehension than here? The citizens of no other city had done more for industrial enterprise and a local patriotism that was almost Hellenic in its ardor had raised their town to a unique place among the great manufacturing capitals not only of England, but of the world, they had for the most part 20 years ago taken the lead in the movement of empire. They had nourished in their midst and had again and again sent out on his public mission the greatest Imperial statesman of this generation—the man of no other city who had agreed or disagreed with his particular views, it would be hard to deny that he was animated by a noble devotion to his country and an impassioned belief in its destinies, the man of no other city who had fallen away from other places and districts had fallen away from him, he believed to be equally in them and in him? From what platform suitable as that Town-hall, which was almost the central altar of the British democracy, should he address his countrymen in the endeavor to show them what it was that empire meant, in what sense it was vital to them, why it ought to be deep in their hearts and on their tongues, though never boastful, on their tongue? (Cheers.)

Growth of Empire

Proceeding to speak of the history or growth of the British Empire, he said two theories had been much in vogue to explain the facts. The first was the idea that the empire had been built up by a succession of wicked and unscrupulous men, that Empire-makers were a race, Commandment breakers, pirates, and Caesar or Napoleon possibly, he described them, but these characteristics had not been confined to the making of empires. If they looked at the list of the men who had carved out the British empire, they would find a list of the noblest spirits of humanity, and an almost Puritanical list of the most common qualities than those of the filibuster or the bandit. In India in particular, after a careful examination of the evidence, he held that no substantial case could be made against the well-known names of Warren Hastings, and that those who had added most to our empire there had been men with clean hands and a high moral purpose. The second theory, which he called the "falsification" theory, was summed up in the famous phrase that the British Empire was acquired in a fit of absence of mind, or in the more recent apothegm that what was won in a night might be lost in a day. It had needed many days and nights, even in the English Channel, to reach the British Empire. He would describe the empire as the result of an accident or a series of accidents, but of an accident that ineradicable and divinely implanted impulse, which he described as the "divine spark," which had set the English race into the uttermost part of the earth, and made him there the parent of new societies and the architect of unpremeditated creations. As a result of three centuries of such effort, the British Empire as we know it existed. About one-fourth of the world's population and more than one-fourth of the world's inhabitants were included in the British Dominion. It was the largest empire that now existed or that ever had existed, and it was the most interesting, the most magnificent, the most noble, the most just, the most humane, and the most generous of all that had ever been. There had also sprung, what he believed to be unique in the history of empires, a passion of loyalty and enthusiasm which made the heart of the remotest British subject beat in sympathy with the destiny which he shared, and caused him to regard that particular piece of colored bunting as the symbol of all that was noblest in his own nature and of the best that the world could offer. When Rome was threatened by the Gauls, she called to her standard her scattered legions from far and near, and they frequently rebelled and mutinied on the way. But there never rallied to her aid the offspring of her own loins, as Australia and Canada poured their volunteer manhood into South Africa.

Other Modern Empires

Great Britain, however, was by no means alone in her career of Empire. She started earlier upon the quest. But the example had found faithful followers, and expansion seemed to be the law of the modern world. It was not until the late nineteenth century that the cry of empire, or to protest that virtue was found or was more readily found in small communities, when they observed that other nations, alike the most autocratic and the most republican, were following a similar bent. If the expansion was capable of being regarded as Caesarism, and of being identified with the Imperialism of material rather than moral force, what was to be said of the Empire-making phase upon which America, the most democratic and hitherto the least Imperial of all great countries, had entered? He believed that even at this moment, if they were to poll the whole of the United States, they would find a large and possibly an overwhelming majority opposed to any concrete policy of Imperial expansion. But the same impulse was strong for the Americans. The same impulse that carried them early in the last century to the Rockies and the Pacific, now that the continent had filled up, was driving them further afield. It had compelled them to lay hands upon the Sandwich Islands, and to groups in the open Pacific, to assume charge of Puerto Rico, as they would ultimately have to assume charge of Cuba, to clutch at the Isthmus of Panama, and in the case of the Philippines to stretch their hands even to the shores of Asia. Political parties might denounce, and the more thoughtful Americans might deplore the expansion. But he doubted if any President, Democratic or Republican, would come to Congress with a proposal to revoke it. If there were, even in the case of a nation where there was a little of the instinct of militarism or aggrandisement as America, the country was found heading straight towards an Imperial destiny, was not the conclusion inevitable that the only way of avoiding it was by the obedience of the people to a general law, and that Providence, once pronounced to be on the side of the big battalions, was now found to be on the side of the big nations? In Europe the same lesson was taught by Germany, which had repudiated Bismarck's warlike policy, and had followed the path of Italy, which had barely achieved national consolidation before she started forth upon external expansion; and by France, the growth of whose colonial empire was only second to that of our own. Japan had been swept into the same vortex and could not resist the inexorable armistice. If the doom of small nations seemed to have dawned, at least the day of great nations seemed to have dawned. Amid these modern empires the British Empire stood distinguished not merely by its unique composition. It was not a mere grouping of territorial acquisitions, distinguished by the valor or bold fortune of the race. It was not a cluster of subordinate units grouped in deferential pose round an imperial centre. It was neither a military Empire, as was that of Rome, nor a Federal Empire, as was that of modern Germany.

The Imperial and the Anti-Imperial View

He remembered reading a few years ago a remark made by the present Prime Minister, that the object of his party was the strengthening of the centre of the empire, instead of wasting our force upon its outskirts. The first part of the sentence was sound thought, of danger, in the second, it showed in a flash the difference between the Imperial and the Anti-Imperial standpoint. To the Imperialist, the outskirts of empire—India, Canada, New Zealand, Natal, the Cape, the West Indies, the islands of the Pacific, were as important as London, Liverpool, or Birmingham. We ought not to think more of them, but we ought not to think less. If the Colonies had taken a similar line we should have had no Colonial forward movement in South Africa. If they should henceforth be invited to do so, we should very soon have no colonies to think about at all. If there were no colonies to think about, as America, Canada, Australia, and South Africa, would be invited to do so, we should very soon have no colonies to think about at all. If there were no colonies to think about, as America, Canada, Australia, and South Africa, would be invited to do so, we should very soon have no colonies to think about at all. If there were no colonies to think about, as America, Canada, Australia, and South Africa, would be invited to do so, we should very soon have no colonies to think about at all.

THE RHODES SCHOLARS

HE accompanying statement in reference to the past year has been prepared for general information. It is prepared to issue a similar statement annually.

The whole number of scholars at the beginning of the October term, 1907, was 180. Of these 187 were in actual residence; three were temporarily absent on account of illness, or for purposes of special study. They are distributed among the following universities as follows: Fourteen at Balliol, four at Christ Church, twelve at Queen's, eleven each at New College and St. John's, ten each at Exeter, Worcester and Hertford, ten at Oriel, eight at Magdalen, seven each at Brasenose and Lincoln, five at Trinity, two each at Corpus and Jesus, one each at Keble and St. Edmund Hall.

Twenty-eight new scholars were elected and entered into residence in October, 1907. Of these sixteen were from Australia, eight from Canada, five from South Africa, one each from Bermuda, Jamaica, Newfoundland and New Zealand, and five from Germany. No scholars from the United States were elected for 1907.

For 1907 seventy-three scholars were elected, forty-five of whom were from the United States, and twenty-eight from other countries, and one each from Bermuda, Jamaica, Newfoundland, and New Zealand. Three states of the American Union failed to supply qualified candidates. The three scholarships provided for Rhodes were not taken up.

The work of the scholars now in residence is distributed as follows over the different courses of study organized in the university:

Literae humaniores	24
Classical literature	18
Jurisprudence	28
Natural science (geology, chemistry, physiology and physics)	30
English literature	9
Mathematics	10
Modern languages	4
Reading for a pass degree	1

In courses more or less specialized or advanced than those for the B.A. degree there are reading:

For the B.C.L. degree	11
For the B.Sc. degree	11
For the B.Litt. degree	4
For medicine	3
For diplomas in economics	3
Research in chemistry	1
Reading law generally	2

Among the distinctions gained by scholars during the year are:

J. C. V. Behan (Quebec, 1904)—Chancellor's prize for Latin essay; elected official fellow at Exeter College.

J. C. V. Behan (Victoria, 1904)—Appointed law lecturer at University College.

W. A. Barton (New South Wales, 1904)—Vinerian Law Scholarship, £50 per annum for three years.

R. L. Robinson (South Australia, 1904)—Burton-Coutts Scholarship in natural science, £115 per annum for two years.

J. A. Thomson (New Zealand, 1904)—Appointed lecturer in natural science at St. John's College.

Henry Hinds (North Dakota, 1904)—Demonstrator to assist the professor of geology for 1906-7.

J. L. Walker (Western Australia, 1904)—Bacon Scholarship at Gray's Inn, £43 per annum for two years.

At the close of the academic year, 1906-7, the group of scholars elected in 1904 completed their scholarship period of three years.

Of the seventy-two original members of this group two died during their term of residence; one resigned his scholarship; three remain at Oxford on their own account, pursuing their studies; four German scholars, who were only able to remain at the university for two years, went down in 1906. Of the remainder a few took their final examinations as included in the report of the examinations of 1907 show the following results:

The following distinctions were gained in the course of the year: 1. In the final honor schools and the examination for the B. C. L. degree:

First class (8)—Literae humaniores—F. H. Forbes (Massachusetts, 1904); H. J. Rose (Quebec, 1904); natural science—chemistry, P. W. Robertson (New Zealand, 1905); natural science—(Geology)—R. L. Robinson (South Australia, 1905); history—J. H. Kirkpatrick (Alabama, 1904); theology—G. E. Barnes (Montana, 1904); W. L. Sperry (Michigan, 1904); examined for B. C. L. degree—Paul Kleffer (Maryland, 1904).

demands from India and the Colonies, would lead to a policy of military adventure or braggadocio was almost a joke. (Cheers). If, on the other hand, militarism were held to imply that upon every nation was imposed the obligation of self-defence, and that the national independence of the last resort upon the possession of adequate force, then he wished that we were rather more militarist than we were; for he held compulsory training to be of the essence of citizenship, and he thought that our empire would very likely some day break down unless it was applied. There was no call to draw the sword from the scabbard or to brandish it in the air. It was a common saying that he held India, by the sword, and in the last resort every dominion must rest upon the sanction of force. But when he went there as Viceroy he registered a vow that he at least would never use the phrase, for it seemed to him that we held India far more by moral force than by bayonets; and in seven years he was never unfaithful to his pledge. His army was strong in India, stronger than in any other part of the empire. But even there, unless we were foolish enough to impair the supremacy of the civil authority, militarism could not be a variation of the same charge was the allegation that Imperialism meant jingoism, which he took to be a swagging and aggressive attitude; or Chauvinism, an image for which most of us exaggerated national pride which found vent in the warlike words of music hall stage. But music halls were not the council chambers of statesmen, and cabinet ministers were not, or were not supposed to be, comedians, and he doubted if a public man would be found in any country who would conduct a policy in any such spirit. Even if there were, it would not be in the ranks of Imperialists that he should expect to find him. (Cheers). No generalization could be made more historically inexact than the statement that England was an Imperialist, or that Great Britain had been an Imperialist, or that Imperialism was militarism, which he saw defined in the dictionaries as an excess of the military spirit. He confessed that he was not a militarist, and that militarism, when it was with the utmost difficulty that we obtained recruits for our exceedingly limited army, when the soldier's uniform instead of being regarded as it ought to be, as a source of pride, seemed generally to be treated as if it were something to be ashamed of and hidden away, when we were so absurdly backward in military organization that every fresh war minister sought to distinguish himself by inventing a new military system (which commonly he passed into oblivion along with his author), and so deficient in military knowledge that we were to be without maps of the country which we were called upon to invade or defend, when it was notorious among foreign nations that a British government almost had to be kicked and cutted before it would consent to fight, and when, having gone to war, we only came through, if we did, after a series of deplorable blunders and blunders at the start—he said that to accuse such a people of being easily tempted

The Spirit of Empire

Great empires before now had sunk to small States. It might be that in the fulness of time the turn of England would come too. But at least let it be done of her own act, and in the plenitude of her powers. Whatever our politics, let us not voluntarily allow our locks to be shorn. In empire we had found not merely the key to glory and wealth, but the key to duty, and the means of service to mankind. Let us no more forsake empire than we would abjure our own souls. Such being the manner in which empire had been won and was now held, in what spirit should it be administered or regarded? The answer to this question he thought mainly of two Imperialisms. If they had an empire they must have Imperialism, Imperialism being the essence or spirit of empire. An empire could not be maintained without a basis of Imperialism, or a workshop could not run without a knowledge of mechanics, or a picture gallery without a sense of art. (Hear, hear.) He repudiated the many caricatures which were put forward with such suspicious alacrity by those who were enemies of Imperialism because they were enemies of the empire itself. Sometimes they were told that Imperialism was militarism, which he saw defined in the dictionaries as an excess of the military spirit. He confessed that he was not a militarist, and that militarism, when it was with the utmost difficulty that we obtained recruits for our exceedingly limited army, when the soldier's uniform instead of being regarded as it ought to be, as a source of pride, seemed generally to be treated as if it were something to be ashamed of and hidden away, when we were so absurdly backward in military organization that every fresh war minister sought to distinguish himself by inventing a new military system (which commonly he passed into oblivion along with his author), and so deficient in military knowledge that we were to be without maps of the country which we were called upon to invade or defend, when it was notorious among foreign nations that a British government almost had to be kicked and cutted before it would consent to fight, and when, having gone to war, we only came through, if we did, after a series of deplorable blunders and blunders at the start—he said that to accuse such a people of being easily tempted

ON SCOTTISH LOYALTY

ON Saturday evening the Royal Scottish Corporation held its 243rd St. Andrew's Day festival, at the Holborn restaurant, says the London Times. The object of the corporation is to relieve the poor of Scotland of honest and creditable record, in need, living within the boundaries of the Greater London district, more particularly the aged, the widowed, the infirm, the blind, and such as are in occasional and temporary distress. There was a very large attendance at the dinner. The Lord Chancellor, managing governor of the corporation, presided, and presided at the evening, "The Royal Scottish Corporation." He said the corporation had been for many generations the instrument by which those who had been fortunate in their career, and who were obliged to assist those who had been unfortunate even in spite of merit. The spirit of Scottish nationality had also been largely fostered—it could not be increased by any presence in England of the corporation; that was a feeling which now found expression everywhere. Since their proceedings commenced had come numerous telegrams from all parts of the world from their countrymen sending them greetings. (Cheers.) Probably in every part of the habitable globe at each of these meetings the circumstance he recalled that this year was the 300th anniversary of the Act of Union between Scotland and England.
