in a short while sought his own. His dark face was very sad looking. Terry gave orders to have all things brought to them, then he and Jack sat looking at each other as friends sometimes do after a long separation. Jack, as usual, was the first to wish a change. 'Terry, did you get my letter?"

And have I to go over it all again Dear bless me what a lot of work for nothing. Well, I told you if you left, I would fall in love, and so I did. But, Terry, I do not feel so lamentably silly now that you did the same thing. And just think you told her so, too. Do you know when I saw you give her that kiss I thought I was a bomb about to explode. You did it so artistically though, it gave me an illustration I intend to profit by. That delicious little moment of hesitancy just before the consummatation was, or is, entirely original, and so Terry-like. You always did all things slow after all.' "Hush Jack, you confuse me. Tell me of your own experience."

"Yes." Well, I fell in love ten minutes after you left. I was just putting away my handkerchief after drying the tears your leaving caused, when along the platform came a peach all rolled up in lace. At first I thought it one of those lovely glinting visions one sees at times when light shines through tears, and I blinked to clear my eyes, but no, it was quite real, lace and all. The sorrowful throbbing of my heart changed to a quick tatoo, to keep time with her steps, and all was lovely. I think I forgot you quite. Well, I met her; she met me. The gods were good and helped us. In a week we were engaged and n August we will be married. She left yesterday for a trip to England and my heart is very sad. Oh, Terry! she is an

"Well, Jack, I am glad you found comfort so soon. How do you like but speculate on how you came to be in such close proximity to a woman." "Terry, see Shem has brought all my own clothes. I am so glad, and he let my hair loose, too."
"You poor child, those stiff clothes must have been a sore trial to you. Now, Jack, what do you think of Zell?" "Are the backwoods inhabited by odesses of beauty like that, attended by herculean knights like said Shem?"

"I found them both there, but come Jack, speak with Zell, not at her, as you call her Zell; her name is Ambrose."

"May call her Zell," mimmiced Jack.

"High and mighty as usual, old boy.

She rested her head against Shem and pleted. A companion suitable for Zell was difficult to find, but a dear old lady Jack still stood staring at them, speech-less. Terry returned and all went to had been discovered, quite by chance, who undertook the care and teaching of the carriage he had secured. At last they were by themselves, away from her. It was the evening before Terry was to leave, and he and Zell were enothers. Zell sat by Terry, and as was the custom, lay her head on his shoulder. This was to leave, and he and Zell were engrossed in saying good-bye.

"Do not be so quiet; you make me sad. I will be back in thirty days at most. If you would only cry, it would be better than this voiceless grief."

"Alas! Terry, it is not only your leaving me that makes me full of sorrow, but since I have been here with Mrs. Odell, I find I am not as other women are. I am not a companion for you. What would I do if you tired of you. What would I do if you tired of

of me?"
"Zell, what would I do if you tired of me? There was that handsome, dashwell let me see what proof can I give you? Ah! now I have it. Jack, my boy, I did more then just appropriate a woman, I told her I loved her."
"Dear old Terry. It was not so much what you said that proves you are Terry, but that inimitable coolness of I met you, and heat and some dash in the carrying was into our very home. What if Zell should find him more in harmony with her tastes than her Terry. Nonsense aside though, I love you Zell. I knew when I met you, and before I loved you, that you were not as other women are, in any way. You won my love, my first delivery."
"Here we are, Jack, never mind the delivery, help us out, we are tired."

The carriage had stopped at the private entrance to the hotel, and without attracting attention they selected a the springtime of your life. > Shem, and Jack came, and a general farewell follow-ed. Terry was to leave very early in the morning. Time passed slowly. It was a trying disappointment to Terry that Zell could not write. She studied hard and made a very satisfactory pupil, but she was often discouraged. She was a great success as a hostess, and Jack delighted to repeat to her the words of commendation he heard spoken of her in every drawingroom. Jack had come to like Zell in what he called "a shockingly sensible way" that he could not quite understand. One day Zell was sitting in the

and his words brought and his words brought tears to many eyes. One year has gone. Jack is married. Terry and Zell Denver are happy. Some say in a very practical way. They had not gone for a trip, but just settled down and lived sensibly one whole year. Now in the month of June they were going away to spend the summers—but where? Only to spend the summer—but where? Only those who were going with them knew the where. To his summer residence, north of Peterboro, was all the public knew. Shem, Jack and Nettie Boyd, orth of Peterboro, was all the public knew. Shem, Jack and Nettie Boyd, Mrs. Odell, another woman and an old friend of Terry's, a Dr. Meade, were the guests who had been asked to go with him to the Tarn for the summer. They are all settled at the Tarn, Zell and Terry with their attendants in the house, the guests at Ish mael's cave. The story of Zell's life was a never-dying interest to all, and long as an often had they searched for the records of Ishmael's work but found nothing. One morning Terry and Shem the strolled around with Shem time. At ten they had unwas now a little after and red and a little sad.

They were restless and worried, and it was not of choice they stood there alone. "Mrs. Denver will see you now, sir."

CHINESE LITTLE FEET.

To-day there was a great fete in the Chinese garden outside of Shanghai. It was a dragon festival. In the procession was a gaudy dragon sixty feet long. Here I saw women with all kinds of feet—little feet four inches long, medium feet, and big feet. I find there is no caste connected with little feet. Poor "Yes, yes. It is common to see women in rags hobbling along on stumps of feet as ungainly as a man walking on wooden legs. If it were not for the jinrikshas and wheelbarrows many of them would never go a square from home. They are proud of the deformity, and grin all over when an American lady notices them.

Sarsaparilla, and take no other. Health is CHINESE THEOLOGY.

There are so many sects of Christians in China and Japan, each teaching a different belief about Christ and the Trinity, that the poor Chinaman is all mixed up. First the Methodists, Baptists and Catholics asked the heathen to worship Christ as God. Then the Unitarians taught that Christ was only a good man, like Buddha. Then Edwin Arnold, the great agnostic, came and put Buddha over Christ, made Buddha "The Light of Asia." Going down to Ceylon, Mr. Arnold showed his adoration for the tooth of Buddha, kept there as a relic. too precious to be trifled with. The man who tries to be the kind of Christian that everybody wants him to be will become very weary in the limbs before he gets to heaven.

Miramichi Advance

Beginning with the issue of November 6th, 1890, when the ADVANCE

Seventeenth Year of Publication The publisher made an important change in the terms on which the paper is furnished to Subscribers. These include

1st. Strict adherence to the system of cash in advance for all subscriptions. 2nd. The reduction of the price

One Dollar a Year

It is to be particularly understood that all outstanding subscription accounts due after November 6th, 1890, are to be settled on the old terms, viz., $2 per year, the advertised credit rate.

I have made the foregoing changes in the business of the ADVANCE The first is because many patrons who have been given credit, have abused the privilege to such an extent as to make the business of publishing the paper a non-paying one, and it is necessary, in my own interest and that of those who do pay, that I should no longer continue to furnish the AD JANCE to those non-paying subscribers. The second reason is, that I wish to meet the competition of the city weeklies, which are made up from the type of the dailies and, therefore, cost little for production in comparison with a local paper like the ADVANCE, the type of which must be set up especially Having now published the ADVANCE for nearly 19 years, and endeavored to make it a creditable representative of Miramichi and North Shore enterprise-a paper which may be taken into any household without fear that it has catered to sensationalism at the sacrifice of that cleanliness of matter, which is too often neglected by the press of the day-I have reason to hope the foregoing announcement will meet with general approval and be the means of largely increasing the circulation and influence of the paper.
