

IN MEMORY OF BISHOP MEDLEY.

The Volume Published by Rev. Canon Ketchum—A Tribute by a Layman.

The biographical work, just issued from the press of Messrs. J. & A. McMillan, and written by the Rev. Canon Ketchum, rector of St. Andrews, on the life work of the Right Reverend John Medley, late bishop of Fredericton and Metropolitan of Canada, is so full of church interest that a single newspaper article is incapable of doing it justice.

As an example of imitation the clergy have in this work no doubt a great deal to learn in the way of untiring industry, in the unceasing toil which attended the good Bishop's labors while visiting all parts of his diocese, when roads were often all but impassable, in all seasons of the year, winter and summer alike, submitting to all sorts of privation in his places of rest—no hotels, no accommodations in fact for one who had been reared in comfort—not to use the word luxury—in his old home, Exeter—even we might say up to the day of his leaving England, and that only the year before,—1845.

But the book must be read to be appreciated—it is a field full of flowers of the highest cultivation, although the thorns and thistles of life are contained therein, as well as the sweet and fragrant blossoms which strewed the Bishop's pathway every where he went throughout his diocese during the long period of forty-seven years.

The Rev. Canon Ketchum has thrown his soul into the work, and has risen from his desk with laurels as unfading as the memory of the good Bishop, which shall last for many generations to come.

Having heard of the addresses recently delivered in Fredericton at a public meeting held at the Church Hall for the consideration of what is called the "Metropolitan Memorial Fund," the Lord Bishop in the chair; and as Progress also learned that the addresses of Canon Ketchum, Archdeacon Brigstocke, Sir John Allan, Rev. Mr. deSoyres and Mr. G. E. Fenety— all delivered from the platform—were very able and to the purpose, we took the liberty of writing a note to the latter gentleman (knowing that he had more leisure than the others) asking him if he could or would furnish us with an outline of his remarks made on the occasion, as we know he was better acquainted with the career of Bishop Medley than any other living person. Canon Ketchum, perhaps, excepted, and thus enable us to deal more fully with the biographical work before us, as we felt that what Mr. Fenety stated would cover all the ground requisite in the life of so good a man as the Bishop.

Mr. Fenety said he had been called upon by the committee to second the resolution moved by the Rev. Archdeacon Brigstocke, and he did so with a great deal of melancholy satisfaction, melancholy he meant under the circumstances of the occasion in the great loss we had all alike experienced. We had met to consider the ways and means in connection with the memorial to be erected to our late Metropolitan, the character of which had been presented to us, by circulars, in a two-fold form,—viz, a monument to be placed in the Cathedral, and a fund for the endowment of a missionary canonry—the cost of the first to be $5,000, as near as may be, and of the second $20,000. Those circulars were printed and circulated throughout the diocese, as we may suppose, some six months ago, and what has been the response up to this time? According to the financial statement, just read by Mr. Schofield, the sum collected and subscribed amounted to something like $2,800. This he thought was a long distance off from the total amount required, but he did not despair of the full sum being raised in time. He fully agreed with the remarks just made by his honor, Mr. Justice Hanington, that no time should be lost in pushing the subscriptions throughout the diocese—for as time went on people grew cool, if not indifferent to the great object we all had in view and so we ought to strike while the iron was hot. He (Mr. F.) was fully sensible of the truth of this utterance, for promptitude in action was half the battle gained.

Archdeacon Brigstocke, said the speaker, in his excellent address just delivered, called the late Bishop a great man; and so he was—not great in the sense that the world accounts greatness. He was not great as a soldier in the battle field called into activity through the strife of nations, whose laurels are reaped over the death groans and miseries of his fellow creatures, the victims of just, or unjust, aggressions. He was not great as a statesman, or politician. He was not great as a member of the bench or the bar, nor was he great in the field of letters although in this he held a high place. In none of these professions, or callings, all of which taken separately, or as a whole, not always up to the standard of great moral accountability, was he to be considered. But he was a great man in a far higher sense than any just named; he spent his services and talents in a field that had to do with our immortal destinies—viz., the church militant, one of the great captains of the noble army of martyrs, for he never flagged or tired for an instant in the great work he had undertaken and continued up to within a few weeks of his death. In saying this much little more need be said. But Bishop Medley was great as a theologian—great as a pulpit power—great as an administrator of the affairs of his diocese, whether as chairman of the Synod, or in conducting the details of the parishes wherever called upon to advise; and also as a preacher he was great—in holding his congregations in wrapt attention, through the beauty of his diction, his seductive voice always well modulated, the simplicity of his language and yet faultless composition. He was great as a composer of church music—his anthems, inroads, Te deums, hymns and chants, are equal to the best we have in our church choir books. Then he was good as he was great. His heart was filled with christian love and charity towards all. A strict churchman himself, yet tolerant in spirit toward all who differed with him in creed, doctrine or practice. He was liberal in his offerings, a free giver to the poor—a friend to the fatherless and the widow—always ready to assist in a good cause—untiring in his visits to the sick and afflicted, sparing not himself in season or out of season—whenever he could do good, he went and administered consolation by words, and administered charity in fact. Facts might be mentioned here said the speaker, if time permitted. Then he died among us. His ashes repose beneath the shadow of the eastern end of the beautiful Cathedral reared through the ardour of his great christian faith and industry. And here said the speaker, he wished to emphasize this point, viz, his death and burial in our midst. When at the Lambeth Conference in England a few years since, some of his old friends asked the good Bishop if he intended to retire from his Episcopate and spend the latter years of his life in his old home, now that he had a coadjutor. He replied by quoting from the first chapter of the book of Ruth: "adapting the passage to suit the occasion; "And Ruth said, intreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee; for whither thou goest I will go; and where thou lodgest I will lodge; thy people shall be my people and thy God my God. Where thou diest will I die; and there will I be buried."

This certainly, said the speaker, was a matter of comfort to us all. How different with his predecessors in the episcopate. With the exception of Bishop Binney they all went to England when their end was drawing nigh. At that time Nova Scotia formed part of the diocese of Nova Scotia. The Bishops were Dr. Charles Inglis, Dr. Stansar, Dr. John Inglis. The speaker did not find fault with those dignitaries retiring from their labours and finding rest in the soil of England—it may have been unavoidable. But our good Bishop resolved from the beginning of his episcopate to staff down in the home of his See and lie beside it when the time came, until the final resurrection.

Now I ask this highly intelligent audience, said the speaker, composed as it is, in a large measure of the representative clergy of every parish in the diocese, would you shorten our arms in this great work—that of preserving the memory of our great and good Bishop by some specific act or memorial worthy of the subject, when by united effort so much may be done in the way of gathering in the needed amount? He was satisfied that this gathering would prove to be a revival of the spirit of our forefathers when the whole business was fresh in the minds of churchmen six months ago; and that it will not be long ere we hear of the whole amount being raised, and a practical illustration of our good feelings in the cause be demonstrated. If we look abroad we shall see how they do things in other places. Montreal and Toronto, to say nothing of other cities, contain monuments to departed statesmen, or politicians, amounting in some cases to fifty thousand dollars and even more. While the speaker said, he had no objection to such tributes being paid to the memory of politicians, he could not avoid stating how much more should a whole diocese be actuated (comprising 40,000 churchmen) by a spirit even more generous towards the memory of one who had done so much for a whole people, even bringing light out of darkness in the obscure corners of a province. The noble Bishop Brooks of Massachusetts had not been dead a month when the sum of seventy thousand dollars was subscribed by his people towards the erection of a monument to his memory, on Copley Square fronting his church; and it is said this amount will soon be augmented to a quarter of a million. True, the needs of the diocese of Fredericton were great and many; but where there is a generous spirit there is a worthy response. He could call to mind a dozen churchmen in the diocese who might give one thousand dollars each towards this fund and not make the amount. But let the comparative poor as well as the rich, as God has prospered them, come forth and cast their money into the treasury towards the erection and consecration of the noble work projected. Above all things let no time be lost. While memory holds dear and fresh the noble works of the departed, this is the time for active effort.

Canon Ketchum deserves much credit for the careful and sustained effort necessary to collect and arrange material for such a volume, which speaks well for the capacity and efficiency of the press of Messrs. J. & A. McMillan. To one acquainted intimately with the beautiful surroundings of the Cathedral and with the kindly features of the late metropolitan it is a matter of regret that the photographs from which the engravings were made could not have been selected differently—for there are views of the cathedral and its grounds when nature looks its best and then photographs of the late Bishop Medley which do full credit to the vigor and expression of his countenance.

The volume is for sale throughout the province and from the publishers, Messrs. J. & A. McMillan. Price $2.

THE QUEEN'S LAUNDRY.

How The Washing For The Royal Family is Done Every Week.

It may not be generally known that the Queen has a special laundry, but such is the case, and it would be difficult indeed to pick a more picturesque spot than that occupied by the Royal Laundry on the borders of Richmond Park.

At the entrance to the drive is a pretty, ivy-covered cottage, beyond which it is impossible for the unauthorized stranger to pass, as the Royal Laundry is almost as jealously guarded as the bank of England, and the drive itself in summer-time is rendered beautiful by the greenery and masses of red roses on either side. Arriving at the laundry, it is found to be a large, but rather unpretentious ivy-covered building, and upon entering it the usual smell of soap and soda peculiar to "washing day" is very much in evidence.

Along each side of the passages are large, well ventilated cupboards, in which the several kinds of soap are kept, tons of which are bought at a time, and tremendous chests filled with soda and carbonate of soda are to be seen.

The ordinary linen, consisting of towels, tablecloths, etc., arrives at the laundry in huge square baskets. These are then emptied, the contents sorted, compared and checked with the lists accompanying them.

The personal linen of the Royal Family is sorted in a special room, the wooden boxes containing it bearing brass plates upon which is inscribed the owner's name and number of the box, such as "The Queen, No. 16," "The Princess of Wales, No. 21," etc.

The washing apparatus is of the most perfect and recent manufacture, and of the wringing, drying, and mangling machinery is most complete.

In every room order and the strictest cleanliness are observed, and the different operations are conducted with clockwork regularity and despatch.

When the clothes are properly dried, they are placed in big heaps, each heap belonging to a different palace. Most of the linen is prettily marked in red cotton, O.H., B.C., B.P., with V.R.L. above, but some of the markings are now done in blue ink, and stamped in gold. How the Royal linen wears, the date 1860 may be noticed on some of the tablecloths, which are of exquisite fineness especially made for the Queen, and the designs are exceedingly pretty, consisting as they do of ingenious combinations of Her Majesty's monogram and the rose, thistle, and shamrock, together with a number of Royal armorial bearings.

Some idea may be gathered of the extent of the Royal Laundry when it is mentioned that the Queen's annual washing bill amounts to very nearly £5,000.

He Finally Got Fitted

A theft, amusingly ingenious in its conception, took place a short time ago at the Grand Hotel, Paris. An elegant-looking gentleman lodging at that well-known establishment, and giving his name as Sir James N., Bart., went into a fashionable boot and shoe shop in the Boulevard des Capucines, and ordered a pair of the handsomest boots that could be made; no expense was to be spared, and the boots were to be sent home on a certain day by ten o'clock, as the purchaser was to leave for Marseilles by the 12.40 train. After that he went to another bootmaker on the Boulevard des Italiens, and ordered a second pair of boots—precisely like the first, which were to be sent home on the same day as the others, but at three o'clock, as he was to leave for Brussels at five.

Punctually at the appointed hour, bootmaker No. 1 appeared with his boots. Sir James examined them, and found them splendid, admirable, not in the least dear, but the left boot hurt him a little. Would not the bootmaker take it home, put it on the last, and stretch it slightly? He could bring it back the next morning, as Sir James was obliged to delay his departure for twenty-four hours, owing to pressing business.

Of course, the obliging tradesman complied with the wishes of his aristocratic customer, and walked off with his solitary boot.

In the afternoon bootmaker No. 2 entered, and the same process was repeated, only this time it was the right boot of which the customer complained, and which the bootmaker carried off to stretch. The next morning the two luckless tradesmen met face to face, each with an odd boot, their charming and aristocratic customer having taken his departure by the night train for London with the other pair.

Secrets of Snake Charming.

A snake charmer can, by a simple motion of his hand, make a moving snake stop instantly. The reason is this: A snake is the most timid animal. His eyes, as has been said before, while dull to color and form, are quick to motion, especially if it is rapid. If any large thing moves very quickly toward him, he gets frightened and scurries off; while at a certain distance the motion stops him if he is moving. He stops him momentarily, fear, or the wish to see what it is that moves. Hence he glides on, unconscious of the charmer's presence near him so long as the latter remains perfectly quiet; the snake doesn't know him from a tree or a rock. But when he gives a sudden evidence of life, the snake is astonished, and immediately remains stock-still.

In India and Africa the charmers pretend the snakes dance to music, but they do not, for they never hear it. A snake has no external ears, and perhaps gets evidence of sound only through his skin, when sound causes bodily vibration with him to vibrate. They hear also through the nerves of the tongue, but do not at all comprehend sound as we do. But the snakes eyes are very much alive to the motions of the charmer, or to the moving drumsticks of his confederates, and being alarmed, he prepares to strike. A dancing cobra (and no other snake) is simply alarmed, he prepares to strike. A dancing cobra alarmed and in a posture of attack. He is not dancing to the music, but is making ready to strike the charmer.

A Summer to Talk About.

TALK OF THE THEATRE.

This week has been barren of theatrical performances in either the opera house or institute. She is announced for next week in the opera house.

Despatches to the daily papers confirm the story of the difficulties of the Tyrone Power company in Montreal, and I notice that one of them states that the personal baggage of the different members of the company is pledged in several quarters. The company say that their hard luck in St. John handicapped them in Montreal, and this, together with mismanagement, placed them in their present plight.

A hitherto unknown dramatist named P. J. Cooper of St. Louis has written a tragedy of the Mississippi, called "The Spanish Priest." The peculiar thing about it is that the names of all the characters are reversible, spelling the same backward or forward. Thus: Oradrod, Bernreb, Dardrad, Cardrac, Cornaroc, Dramard, Egrafarge, Ludodul, Sullus Dod, Hallah and Gazzag Polylop. There are others of equally manufactured and un-American appearance.

Arrangements have been completed for a tour of this country next season by Mrs. Langtry, under the management of Joseph P. Reynolds, who directed her former tour. She will open her season in October at the Hollis Street theatre. Mrs. Langtry's last appearance in New York was in April, 1889, when she played "Lady Clancarty" at the Grand Opera house. The next week she appeared in the same piece in Brooklyn, and soon afterwards was taken ill. After her recovery she returned to Europe. There was talk of her coming over in 1891, but the engagement was broken off. It is not yet known what Mrs. Langtry's repertoire for her tour will be nor when she will be seen in New York.

A letter written by the late Edwin Booth to a young man who wanted to be an actor has recently come to light. He advises the applicant for advice to do anything rather than go on the stage, and says: "An art whose professors and followers should be of the very highest culture is the mere make-shift of every speculator and boor that can hire a theatre or get hold of some sensational rubbish with which to gull the public. I am not very much in love with my calling as it now is and, I fear, will ever be."

The Congressionalist says in speaking of the death of Edwin Booth: "It is a notable event in the life of any people when one who is generally conceded to be the finest exponent of any great art passes away from the stage of action and life. Hence the significance of the death of Edwin Booth. By his decease the loss seems to be unusually severe, for it is confessed by men of his own profession that he has no, or very few, imitators at a time in the history of the drama in this country when intellect and character are most needed. Mr. Booth living helped to elevate the ideals of his profession. Though dead, may he yet speak!"

Says the London Sketch: Miss Marie Tempest is back in England. I met her the other morning, looking wonderfully well most becomingly dressed, and in excellent spirits. No doubt she knew her costume became her; women mostly do. Miss Tempest has thoroughly enjoyed her last American trip, which has been a great success, "full houses all through." As the fair singer informed an interviewer that the Americans never tolerate a "poor artiste," but simply walk out, leaving artists and empty benches to get on as best they can, we may conclude that Miss Tempest is not a poor artiste and is aware of the fact. Such knowledge may be one of the reasons of Miss Tempest's radiant spirits. A good opinion of oneself is an excellent tonic.

Tones and Underones.—Where did you (after a few days absence)—Where do you learn that new piece? Emily—It is a new piece, ma. The piano has been tuned.

Mme. Antoinette Sterling has been singing with great success in Australia. The receipts from one concert in Melbourne were $2,000.

Adelina Patti received an almost life-size portrait of the prince of Wales in answer to her congratulatory note on his son's approaching marriage.

Contralto—Only think of it! I was engaged three times in my last song. The audience (spitefully)—Yes, the audience recognized that you needed practice.

Perhaps the most expensive piano ever made in England was that bequeathed by his father to the present Marquis of Breadalbane. Americans, however have been known to give $35,000 for one in a splendidly decorated case.

Probably Sisieretta Jones, "the Black Patti" she is often called, receives the largest income of any colored woman in America. She is paid $150 a week from Nov. 14 to June 1. Her contract requires her to sing from five to seven times a week.

Miss Constance Sims Reeves possesses a glove worn by her father on his farewell appearance, soiled with the ribbon from the numerous bouquets which were handed to him. Shortly after the event evening she was offered no less a sum than $20 for it.

A pretty story is told of the widow of the great Schumann. Whenever she is going to play any of her husband's music in public, she reads over some of the old love-letters that he wrote her during the days of their courtship, so that, as she says, she "may be better able to do justice to her interpretations of the spirit of his work."

Madame Albani may deservedly be considered the most desirable of England's professional vocalists for concerts whose raison d'être is some charity. At one such gathering she sang "Home, Sweet Home" so pathetically that a lady in the audience, moved by the charm of the Canadian's voice, immediately gave a thousand pounds to the charity.

Patti has once more returned Craigynos, but before she left London a party was given at Mr. Alfred Rothchild's where the singer had a great triumph. At Supper the diva sat on one side of the Prince of Wales surrounded by the Duke of York, the Duchess of Teck, and others of the nobility. Patti was almost moved to tears when the Prince of Wales proposed her health. An admirer of hers says that she has a memory without an equal, since it forgets the weak points of her friends and brings out only the good ones.

Mascagni the composer of "Cavalleria Rusticana," was born thirty years ago, not in Leghorn, but in a village near it, and came from a poor family. A companion who grew up with him at Leghorn says that he was a happy, good-natured boy, but careless with little persistence at anything except music. He had shown the ruling tendency of his nature by composing pieces before he was ten. A national exposition took place in Milan in 1881, when he was seventeen, and Mascagni contributed to its musical department a two-act opera or cantata, which secured an honorable mention.

A medallion to the memory of Jenny Lind is to be placed in West Minister Abbey. The place selected for it is immediately under the statue of Handel. In the interpretation of whose works Mme. Lind-Goldschmidt found her greatest delight. The medallion cost about £240, and will be paid for by public subscription. Jenny Lind was a great favorite with Queen Victoria, who showed her consideration she has given to no other singer except Mme. Albani. Before the death of "the Swedish Nightingale" she asked to be wrapped, when laid in the coffin, in a shawl which the Queen had given her, a wish which was respected.

A POINTER FOR TOURISTS.

Something of Special Interest to those in Search of Rest and Renewed Health.

The tide of summer travel to the lower provinces has now fully set in. Not hundreds, but thousands have come from the United States to spend a few weeks or months among the pleasant vales or by the cool shores, of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island. Among them are many who come simply for enjoyment, but there are doubtless many also who are in search of renewed health. These could not come to a better summer climate, or to a region where the conditions are more favorable for the restoration of physical energy and mental power. But favorable natural conditions are not the only requirement in very many cases. A thoroughly debilitated or broken down system needs an active internal agent to cooperate with external agencies in re-vitalizing the blood and imparting new life and force to the nerves, so that the subject may in a comparatively short time overcome the effects of overwork, mental worry, dissipation, or whatever may have brought about the state of ill health. Fortunately the visitor to the provinces this summer can secure the restorative agent necessary to a speedy and complete renewal of health. The marvellous success that has attended the introduction of Hawker's nerve and stomach tonic is without parallel in this country, as thousands familiar with its health giving power gladly testify. As a blood builder, as a nerve strengthener and general health restorer Hawker's nerve and stomach tonic is rapidly attaining the first place. It has already won that position in these provinces and now goes on conquering and to conquer in the western provinces, the United States and England.

Tourists visiting St. John, especially those in a poor state of health, should call at the Hawker Medicine Co.'s offices and laboratory, at Prince William street, and secure a supply of their standard remedies, which are supported by testimonials and endorsed by leading physicians in the United States as well as Canada. Every druggist in the provinces sells these standard remedies. It is not saying too much to predict that many a visitor to the provinces this year will regard as the most noteworthy and profitable of his or her experiences that he or she discovered the Hawker remedies, and through the use of some one of them discovered also the way to a complete restoration of health. No more valuable souvenir of a summer outing than this could be hoped for by any man or woman.

THE POPULAR WHEEL.
As The Demand For Bicycles Increases The Quadrant Sales are Greater.

Of the hundred and one different makes of cycles imported into Canada during the past two years probably no machine has created a more favorable impression than the "Quadrant," manufactured by the Quadrant cycle Co., of Birmingham, England—the acknowledged leader of the world for the past 10 years in tricycles—it has gained a reputation for excellence second to no other machine in existence. The Quadrant Co. make it their boast that they have never found it necessary to employ "amateurs" for the purpose of booming their wheel. They regard that sort of thing as deceptive—affording no criterion whatever as to the qualities of roadster machines. The "Quadrant" cycles today contain many active, living patents of the company's own invention, and although many makers have copied, yet are the "Quadrants" in many respects distinctly superior to all. The double crowned front fork and oval tubing is undoubtedly a strong feature, and one which will commend itself to every rider. The extraordinary sale of these machines in Canada this year is not to be wondered at after all. Messrs A. P. Tippet and Co. general agents for the Quadrant Cycle Co. for Canada, are firm believers in printer's ink, and having, moreover, the utmost confidence in this machine, they heralded its sterling qualities far and wide. Indeed, they pushed matters with so much energy as to cause their competitors positive dismay. It will interest our readers to know that this was the machine that carried off first honors at the public competition in France against thirty-one other makes of wheels, both French and English. It was also the choice (by an independent chooser) of all the wheels in the city of Chicago when awarding the prize to the winner of the annual Pullman road race.

The Quadrant Cycle Company are to be congratulated that their agency is in such good hands. Messrs Tippet conduct their business on principle, and spare no effort in their power to please the most fastidious buyer. Intending purchasers will make no mistake with the "Quadrant." It is in all respects a grand machine.

FOR CHURCHMEN TO CONSIDER.

The remarks made by PROGRESS last week, on the want of action in regard to the MEDLEY memorial, have met with warm approval from churchmen who realize the danger of further delay in the matter. They recognize that the criticisms have been made in no unfriendly spirit, and that the complaint is not without just cause. If anything is ever to be done, it is time a beginning was made. That among the 45,000 members of the church of England in this diocese less than three thousand dollars has so far been subscribed, is a fact that speaks for itself. Such comment as has been made cannot be gainsaid by any churchman who desires to see due honor paid to the memory of the late Metropolitan of Canada and first Bishop of Fredericton.

Nor do we think there can be any other than a beneficial effect from the strictures upon the methods of the Diocesan Church Society in permitting ground to be lost and parishes deserted while there is available money lying at interest to carry on the work in part at least. The fiscal policy of the controlling spirits may be sound, but starting the masters of finance in the face of the fact that the Church of England in New Brunswick has retrograded rather than advanced in the last decade. In every other province of Canada, except Prince Edward Island, it has made an advance. In the adjacent diocese of Nova Scotia its percentage of increase from 1881 to 1891 was larger than that of any other religious body, but while the rate of increase there was nearly seven per cent, the rate of decrease in this province was nearly eight per cent. The census of 1891 showed not only smaller numbers here than there were ten years ago, but fewer than there were twenty years ago, though there was an increase in the ten years between 1871 and 1881.

These are not pleasant things to be considered by those who wish peace and prosperity to the church, but they are facts and are public property. They cannot be disguised. There is no reason why they should be, for they are no argument against the present or future of the church as a whole, since all over Canada it has held its own better than any other body except the methodists, and has very closely approximated the proportionate increase shown by that flourishing denomination. The figures, as regards New Brunswick, simply show that there are local causes for the dropping behind.

Nor does it seem difficult to find the causes, or at least some of the more prominent of them. It is true that in some of the parishes which do not lack for incumbents there has been, and still is, a spiritual stagnation, because rectors are in charge who do nothing to advance the work of the church, and are in some instances hindrances to its growth. This, however, must be more or less the case in any diocese, but were there even more of such men here than there are, their existence would not account for the falling away. Churchmen, as a rule, are loyal to their church as long as they have the church among them. They may not be satisfied with their rector, but they do not change their allegiance on that account. The body may be torpid, but the members are still there to be counted in the returns. Very different is it, however, when the field is abandoned and the mission becomes vacant perhaps for years. Then, as stated last week, the younger generation seek new affiliations, and the territory becomes more difficult to regain as the years pass by. One would think that the last course to be taken would be to mark the territory as abandoned in the first instance, or to solemnly report year after year that much was needed but nothing done.

It may be sound theology to say that they but waste their words who at any time predict that the church is in danger from this or that, because the church is of God and He will guide and preserve it. Such a theory may be very complacently preached and heard in a prosperous city parish, and it must of necessity be accepted by all who believe the Anglican communion to be included in the visible apostolic church. The church of England, indeed, is prospering in other provinces, but what is the matter with it in New Brunswick? Admirable as may be a calm faith in it as "indefectible in the long run," as Dr. LITTLEDALE asserts, something in the way of prompt, earnest, and intelligent work seems needed in this diocese. These may be plain words, but the facts seem to demand that plain words be used.

THE WAYS OF JUSTICE.

A case of what is probably sound in law, but notoriously deficient in justice, is reported from New York state. In May, 1889, JAMES BURNS was convicted of robbery in the first degree and sentenced to three years in Auburn penitentiary. It is likely enough the punishment fitted the crime and that the man deserved what he got. He either did or did not. If he did he should have served out his sentence, but if there were circumstances rendering leniency desirable, he should, if sooner released, have been considered as discharged for all time from the punishment attending that particular crime. In January last, however, Governor FLOWER released him, after he had served for something more than three years, on the condition that he abstain from the use of intoxicating liquors for five years from that time. The other day BURNS was arrested for intoxication, whereupon the judge sent him back to prison to serve the rest of his sentence, a period of nearly ten years.

If BURNS had been sentenced to thirteen years imprisonment for drunkenness, one can understand how he might have been released on the condition named, and how he might be resentenced for again offending. So, too, had he again shown himself to be a robber it would have been evidence that he had been released too soon, and he could have been sent back to further atone for his crime. As it was, however, having been liberated on the theory that he had been sufficiently punished for robbery, he now goes to prison for a much longer term, simply because, like many another, he failed to keep his pledge and was unfortunate enough to get drunk.

The administration of justice in this age is illogical and inconsistent at the best, but this is an unusually pointed instance, in which there is neither logic nor justice.

THE CASE OF FATHER ADAMS.

Whatever view may be taken of his course, the secession of Rev. HENRY A. ADAMS, of New York, from the "episcopal" church to the church of Rome, is an event of considerable importance in the history of religious thought on this continent. Father ADAMS, though a young man, had attained a great deal of prominence, and was looked upon as one of the coming preachers of America. Some months ago PROGRESS referred to certain phases of his work at the Church of the Redeemer, when he exchanged places with his curate because he recognized the latter was the better fitted to be rector. Father ADAMS, as he was called, relinquished a salary of six thousand dollars at Buffalo, to accept one of two thousand dollars at the Church of the Redeemer, New York, and this small stipend he divided with his curate. He was a very earnest worker, with apparently every faith that he was fully a catholic in the American church as derived from the church of England. His church had all the accessories of catholic ritual and he claimed to teach "the faith as it was before Rome added to it or protestantism subtracted from it."

In a letter which he has sent to the press, Father ADAMS says he has changed his communion "because there is no other logical deduction from all the facts of which my reading and my observation and my life have made me aware." He states that external evidence and internal heart ache have moved him steadily for years and years. What seems to have been an important factor in hastening the step is the vestry system, by which he claims rectors are intimidated, harassed and forced to conduct the service as a few who control the management of affairs direct. His language on this point, and his assertion that the system crushes out the faith of earnest men, is very emphatic, as is his view that the successful rectors are those "who have been able to keep everybody among them. They may not be satisfied with their rector, but they do not change their allegiance on that account. The body may be torpid, but the members are still there to be counted in the returns. Very different is it, however, when the field is abandoned and the mission becomes vacant perhaps for years. Then, as stated last week, the younger generation seek new affiliations, and the territory becomes more difficult to regain as the years pass by. One would think that the last course to be taken would be to mark the territory as abandoned in the first instance, or to solemnly report year after year that much was needed but nothing done.

It may be sound theology to say that they but waste their words who at any time predict that the church is in danger from this or that, because the church is of God and He will guide and preserve it. Such a theory may be very complacently preached and heard in a prosperous city parish, and it must of necessity be accepted by all who believe the Anglican communion to be included in the visible apostolic church. PELHAM'S PARAGRAPHS.

And now, when the sun mounteth high in the heavens and entereth the sign of Leo, appeareth the Summer Girl in all her grace and glory. She cometh forth as a flower and as a flower fadeth when Autumn's chills approach. Whence she cometh and whither she goeth no man knoweth. She appeareth in wonderful garments, of many hues. Russet shoes are upon her feet and upon her nether limbs are Russet stockings to match. She daintily and coyly stoeth these—to appreciative eyes. She is beautiful to look upon and dangerous to meddle with. She is a match for the summer young man with the striped coat, the duck pants, the red shoes and the deadly cigarette. Yea, she is more than a match for him. She shimmereth and shineth along beaches. She lieth in wait among the rocks. She watcheth the hankerchief. She playeth ball with the heart of the young man and laugheth aloud in her innocent glee. Annon she walketh demurely amid paths veiled and secluded. She holdeth in her hand a book—of the contents of which she knoweth not. She lieth down and studyeth hard—but her eyes sweepeth the horizon, she scenteth the game from afar. She eateth much of the ice-cream and of soft summer things—but she is not soft—no, not at all. She drinketh also of summer drinks. She playeth tennis. She driveth and boatheth and sporteth in varied manner. Of the cost of these things she knoweth not. The young man, he knoweth—a little—but not very much. She hypnotiseth the young man and intoxiceth his brain. She troubleth not about brains herself but she is wise—very wise—and she loseth not her grip—no never at all. At the season's close she marryeth the young man—sometimes—perhaps, when she disappeareth it may be that she goeth to conduct a winter campaign in other regions, for she ceaseeth not—she goeth on somewhere—always—until.

Twenty-eight years ago today the laying of the first Atlantic cable was successfully accomplished and telegraphy scored its greatest practical triumph. We are living in the electric age. Hesiod, the father of didactic poetry in Greece, in his poem "Works and Days" describes five successive ages of the world, during which it was peopled by five distinct races, with different characteristics. These he describes as the golden race, the silver race and the iron race, the hercule race and the iron race. But Hesiod lived a long time ago and although he might and poetically divide previous time into five periods, he never dreamt of looking far ahead into the nineteenth or twentieth centuries anno Domini, and seeing all the wonders that would be when the "electric race" peopled this earth. How insignificant are the Stone Period, the Bronze Period and the Iron Period, into which archaeologists divide up five, when compared with the Electric Period, into which we are now fairly entering. Man has discovered a new force and harnessed it up to do his work. What it has done and is doing we can see but what is still coming, who can tell?

MIXED AS TO SUNDAY.

While it has not yet been pleaded that the Halifax ball players mistook Sunday for some other day of the week, it seems quite possible for even devout people to get mixed in regard to days now and then. An English paper tells that, not long ago, "at the parish church in the Weald of Kent the bells had been rung for morning service and the congregation were seated awaiting the arrival of the vicar. As he failed to put in an appearance, the churchwardens, after waiting for a considerable time, proceeded to the vicarage. Contrary to their expectations, they found their pastor there in his usual health, but from some unexplained cause, he had forgotten the day was Sunday."

Some of the St. John lawyers may remember a similar case of confusion of time on the part of a judge of the city court, several years ago. This judge, who dignified and adorned the bench, was most punctual and precise in regard to his duties. But one Tuesday morning when ten o'clock arrived he failed to appear. The lawyers, constables and litigants were alike amazed, and when another half hour passed with no sign of him or explanation of his absence, they were very much alarmed, and a messenger was despatched to the judge's residence to learn what calamity had overtaken him. The messenger found him calmly seated by the fire, quite unconscious of the fact that the day was court day. The previous day had been Ash Wednesday, and the judge had attended church so faithfully that when he awoke the next morning he evidently got the idea that he had been keeping Sunday, and that the week had only begun.

All reports be true, it is quite possible that some of the McNab's Island sports did not know the next morning whether the following day was Monday or the middle of the next week.

THE SILVER QUESTION.

In view of the coming session of congress summoned to deal more particularly with the Silver question in the United States, the following notes made from an article in the North American Review by Hon. Edward O'Leach late director of the U. S. Mint on "Silver legislation and its results will be of more than passing interest. They really give in brief the history of silver and its different value at different dates in the neighboring republic. In 1873 Congress abolished the silver dollar and five years later commenced the purchase and coinage of silver. The act of August 4, 1886 authorized the issue of silver certificates in denominations of $1, $2, and $5 under the operations of which the large certificates rejected by the banks and the general public were replaced by small ones until 90 per cent of all the silver certificates outstanding were in denominations of $10 and less. The following table shows the variation between the market price and the actual value of silver at different dates since 1878-

Table with 2 columns: Date and Market price of silver per ounce. Data points for February 28, 1878; May 29, 1880; April 1, 1886; March 22, 1893.

The present silver law, passed July 14, 1890 (improperly called the "Sherman Act") required the purchase by the treasury department, monthly, of 4,500,000 ounces of silver, payment to be made at the market price in new legal tender notes. June 1st, 1893 there were $380,069,081 silver dollars and silver certificates in circulation. June 1st, 1893 there were 335,977,323 United States notes redeemable in gold. There were 132,506,183 Treasury notes redeemable in gold, June 1st 1893 with only $95,000,000 of an available gold reserve.

The latest reported movement of the Women's Christian Temperance Union in the United States is to frown upon and interdict a root beer, which, so far as can be learned, is a "temperance drink" in the most rigid sense of the word. There are some explanation of the matter beyond what appears in the despatches, but it is probable the interdict is on the same principle as the refusal of Miss WILLARD to drink Apollinaris water, because it was something in a bottle. The W. C. T. U. is doing good work, but it would do better and command a wider influence if it fought the vice of liquor drinking with some reference to human nature.

PROGRESS CLUBBING LIST.

A number of the best magazines and papers in the country have at various times asked PROGRESS to make a combination clubbing figure with them, at which it would be possible for both papers to induce new subscribers. PROGRESS started its clubbing list with the Cosmopolitan a few days ago, and from this date will add to the list until it includes the very best literature in the country. The publisher of PROGRESS will send it one year to any subscriber in combination with any of the publications in the following list at the prices set opposite them, under the column "Club Price":

Table with 2 columns: Magazine Name and Club Price. Includes Cosmopolitan and Progress, Donahue's Magazine, Ladies' Home Journal, etc.

Remit by Post Office or Express Order to Edward S. Carter, St. John, N. B. Always state with what number you wish the magazine to begin.

AN INTERESTING TWO PAGES.

Judging from the number of inquiries that we are in receipt of continually about engraving it will be news to many of those who see the beautiful reproductions of the grounds of the Rothesay Collegiate School on the 10th and 11th pages of this issue to know that they were all executed through PROGRESS Engraving Bureau. Last year the management of the school issued a beautiful calendar which gave anyone who saw it a correct idea of the school and this year the publication in PROGRESS of the same views with some later ones will give it a much wider introduction to the public of the Maritime provinces. The more intimate the acquaintance becomes the better for all parties.

A NEW COOK BOOK.

The Young Housekeeper's Guide is a neat pamphlet compiled by Mrs. C. H. Martell and Miss J. T. Hamm and published for the benefit of the Fairville Baptist church. Its contents are full of interest to either the young or the experienced housekeeper, and its recipes have evidently been selected with much care. The pamphlet is attractive in appearance and is an excellent specimen of the work of printer E. J. Armstrong.

FIFTY TWO NOT IN IT.

There was a vacancy for a junior in the Bank of New Brunswick last week, and several young men appear to have got the tip from friends to be first as applicants. The position is worth $200 or so a year and there was no less than 53 applications filed. There appears to be a prevalent idea that a bank clerk's lot is indeed a happy one.

PICNIC AT REED'S POINT.

Brussels Street Baptist church Sunday school picnics Thursday, July 27th, at the beautiful grounds of Hugh McCormick's, Reed's Point. Two steamers will leave in the morning, and one in the afternoon, thus affording many who cannot get away early, a chance for an afternoon outing.

LENDING A HELPING HAND.

Mons. Saint-Saens, the famous and eccentric French composer, tells a graceful and interesting anecdote of the helping hand extended to him by Rossini, when he was only a beginner in his career. "I had just composed," says he, "a fragment for the flute and clarinet. Rossini, invited a great crowd of people to his house, and had my piece executed by Dorus and Leroy. As the author of William Tell had said nothing, everybody concluded the piece was his own composition; and when it was over, the applause was tumultuous; all hands were waved around Rossini; everybody congratulated him with enthusiasm. The master, with a mischievous smile, took me by the hand and presented me to the company. 'The work,' he said, 'is by this young man.' 'The applauders were somewhat disconcerted, but it was then too late to take back the praise they had lavished on my fragment.'"

PROGRESS CLUBBING LIST.

A number of the best magazines and papers in the country have at various times asked PROGRESS to make a combination clubbing figure with them, at which it would be possible for both papers to induce new subscribers. PROGRESS started its clubbing list with the Cosmopolitan a few days ago, and from this date will add to the list until it includes the very best literature in the country. The publisher of PROGRESS will send it one year to any subscriber in combination with any of the publications in the following list at the prices set opposite them, under the column "Club Price":

Table with 2 columns: Magazine Name and Club Price. Includes Cosmopolitan and Progress, Donahue's Magazine, Ladies' Home Journal, etc.

Remit by Post Office or Express Order to Edward S. Carter, St. John, N. B. Always state with what number you wish the magazine to begin.

AN INTERESTING TWO PAGES.

Judging from the number of inquiries that we are in receipt of continually about engraving it will be news to many of those who see the beautiful reproductions of the grounds of the Rothesay Collegiate School on the 10th and 11th pages of this issue to know that they were all executed through PROGRESS Engraving Bureau. Last year the management of the school issued a beautiful calendar which gave anyone who saw it a correct idea of the school and this year the publication in PROGRESS of the same views with some later ones will give it a much wider introduction to the public of the Maritime provinces. The more intimate the acquaintance becomes the better for all parties.

A NEW COOK BOOK.

The Young Housekeeper's Guide is a neat pamphlet compiled by Mrs. C. H. Martell and Miss J. T. Hamm and published for the benefit of the Fairville Baptist church. Its contents are full of interest to either the young or the experienced housekeeper, and its recipes have evidently been selected with much care. The pamphlet is attractive in appearance and is an excellent specimen of the work of printer E. J. Armstrong.

FIFTY TWO NOT IN IT.

There was a vacancy for a junior in the Bank of New Brunswick last week, and several young men appear to have got the tip from friends to be first as applicants. The position is worth $200 or so a year and there was no less than 53 applications filed. There appears to be a prevalent idea that a bank clerk's lot is indeed a happy one.

PICNIC AT REED'S POINT.

Brussels Street Baptist church Sunday school picnics Thursday, July 27th, at the beautiful grounds of Hugh McCormick's, Reed's Point. Two steamers will leave in the morning, and one in the afternoon, thus affording many who cannot get away early, a chance for an afternoon outing.

MOONLIGHT ON THE FLUSHING.

A moonlight excursion on the steamer Flushing is announced for Monday evening. A band has been engaged for the occasion, good catering has also been arranged for in fine weather and a goodly company are only needed to ensure a pleasant trip. The excursion is in competent hands.

USEFUL AND OF INTEREST.

The Delineator for August has been received from Geo. H. McKay and is as usual full of matter that is both useful and interesting. Everybody should have it.

PICNICS.

The attention of those interested in picnics is called to the Shore Line Ry's announcement, on page 8, of dates still open in August.

"PROGRESS" IN BOSTON.

PROGRESS is for sale in Boston at the Kings Chapel News Stand, corner of School and Tremont streets.

LENDING A HELPING HAND.

Mons. Saint-Saens, the famous and eccentric French composer, tells a graceful and interesting anecdote of the helping hand extended to him by Rossini, when he was only a beginner in his career. "I had just composed," says he, "a fragment for the flute and clarinet. Rossini, invited a great crowd of people to his house, and had my piece executed by Dorus and Leroy. As the author of William Tell had said nothing, everybody concluded the piece was his own composition; and when it was over, the applause was tumultuous; all hands were waved around Rossini; everybody congratulated him with enthusiasm. The master, with a mischievous smile, took me by the hand and presented me to the company. 'The work,' he said, 'is by this young man.' 'The applauders were somewhat disconcerted, but it was then too late to take back the praise they had lavished on my fragment.'"

ST. STEPHEN AND GALATI.

[Progress is for sale in St. Stephen by Master Edith and at the book store of G. S. Wall in Calais at O. P. Frost's.]
July 19.—Last evening the handsome residence of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Graham, was the scene of a grand and festive occasion of an "At Home" and reception, given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Graham, who are spending a fortnight here before leaving for their home in Missoula, Montana. The hours for receiving their guests were from eight until ten o'clock, and precisely at eight the guests began to arrive, and were received by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Graham, Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Graham, Miss Colter, Miss Alice Graham and Mr. Harry Graham, who stood in a circle in the deep bay window in the reception room, from which hung a large basket of pink and white roses. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Graham, (the bride and groom), standing in the centre, directly under it. The floral decorations of the reception room were lovely, the windows and mantles were banked with most ferns and roses, indeed roses were used in such profusion that it might be called a "rose" reception. Refreshments were served throughout the evening. The supper room and table were a marvel of floral loveliness, and were designed and arranged by Mrs. C. H. Clarke, who has a genius and exquisite taste for floral decoration. Over the table was suspended a large ball made of yellow and white flowers, from this ball trailing vines that reached the table, which was edged all around with yellow and white roses; ferns were scattered over the cloth, and baskets of roses were placed in every direction. The mantle and windows were also banked in yellow and white roses. At each end of the table stood tall candelabras, with yellow shades, which threw a pale yellow light over all, and gave a soft moonlight effect. The beautiful grounds about the house looked like a glimpse of fairyland, so numerous were the bright lights and gay colored lanterns, and the pretty gay summer costumes of the lovely young girls who strolled about, made one fancy it was a rhapsody on a large scale. There were about two hundred and fifty guests present. The toilet of the ladies were exceedingly elegant, but it would be simply impossible to describe them all they were so varied. Mrs. Henry Graham wore a reception dress of rich black silk heavily trimmed with jet. Mrs. Walter Graham looked most fair, and beautiful in her wedding gown of ivory silk, en train, and richly trimmed with point d'arches lace, and carried a bouquet of white roses. Miss Colter wore a handsome dress of black silk and lace. Mrs. Graham looked very graceful and pretty in a pale yellow satin gown, made empire style, with a bouquet of yellow and white roses. There were many other elegant costumes, the most noticeable being that of Mrs. Fredric Barper, who wore a net black velvet train over white satin point lace and diamond ornaments.

Mrs. Bolton, rich black lace costume and diamond ornaments. Mrs. Mitchell, violet and black brocade silk, richly trimmed with black lace. Mrs. C. H. Clarke, pretty costume of cream colored and grey silk. Mrs. S. H. Blair, rich black satin adorned with lace, diamond ornaments. Mrs. Hazen Grimmer, pale heliopsis silk, richly embroidered in a darker shade. Mrs. George J. Clarke, black lace costume trimmed with cream colored ribbons. Mrs. E. K. Aizer, black and satin costume. Mrs. Waterbury, pretty dress of black lace and silk.

After the older guests had departed the orchestra played waltz music and the younger guests enjoyed waiting for two hours. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Graham, much to the regret of their friends, leave here early next week for their home in Montana. Mrs. John D. Litchford, who has been visiting her aunt, spent a few days with Lady Lyle. Mr. Max Kalish, of New York city, is visiting friends in Calais.

Mrs. Teed's parties are always very pleasant from the reason they are generally original. This evening, the guests were entertained with singing, recitation and instrumental music, and towards the latter part of the evening, the amusing game of "animals" was introduced. Mrs. W. W. Jones, and Rev. J. T. Bryan, were the successful winners, of the first prizes, which were given to Mrs. W. W. Jones, and Mrs. Howard McAllister, and Mr. R. W. Grimmer enjoyed the honor of the "booby" prize. The drawing room, was beautifully decorated with flowers, and the grounds and house were hung with Japanese lanterns, and as the evening was warm many of the guests strolled about the grounds or sat on the piazza. Supper was served soon after twelve o'clock, and the party for their respective homes, having spent a most delightful evening.

The young ladies of Christ church congregation have arranged an evening party, to be held on Monday evening of next week on the grounds surrounding the residence of Mrs. Sarah E. Stewart. July 19.—There have been very few weddings to chronicle in Moncton lately, but matters matrimonial seem to be looking up, and last Thursday evening two of the most popular young people in town set sail on that sunlit sea, the shores of which are beyond the horizon's "utmost purple rim," and the waves tipped with gold. The two voyagers were Miss Laura L. Knight, second daughter of Mr. W. B. Knight, of this city, and Dr. G. T. Smith, also of Moncton. The ceremony took place in the Central Methodist church and was performed by the pastor, Rev. John Read. The wedding was a very quiet one, but the church was filled to the doors with the friends and well wishers of the bride and groom, and the drawing room, which was the scene of the beautiful and charming ceremony, shortly after seven o'clock the bridegroom entered the church from the vestry, and a few moments later the bridal party, preceded by the ushers, Messrs. Avard Bright and Fred Wilbur, entered at the main door and were greeted by the wedding march from Lohengrin, played in a masterly manner by the organist, Professor Watts. The bride who is tall and fair, with a slight graceful figure, wore a pretty travelling dress of light grey, trimmed with velvet, and round hat to match. Both bride and groom were unattended. As the wedding party passed down the aisle the floral gate was thrown open, and the wedding party drove direct to the station, where numbers of friends assembled to speed the bride and groom on their journey with good wishes and showers of rice, as the St. John express carried them to their destination. The bride's train, which will include Fredericton and parts of Cape Breton and Nova Scotia. BATHURST.

[Progress is for sale in Bathurst at McGinley's Grocery store.] JULY 19.—A very enjoyable party was given on last Thursday evening by Mrs. J. F. Barry to a number of her young friends. The amusements were dancing and games. Some of the dresses worn by the ladies were very pretty and becoming. Mrs. Barry wore a pretty black silk dress, with fish net overskirt. Miss O'Brien, in whose honor the party was given, looked well in a black lace skirt and heliotrope silk waist. Miss Minnie Burns wore a very becoming dress of pale blue silk, with pale pink trimmings. Miss O'Brien, a pretty pink veil. Miss Gerlie Meahan, a pretty grey dress with shot silk trimmings. Miss Dot Meahan looked very pretty in a dark green silk, with pale pink trimmings. Miss Laura Meahan, pretty green dress, trimmed with green silk. Miss Bella Mullins, a neat grey dress. Her many Bathurst friends wish her happiness and perseverance in her new life. Mrs. E. The church fair held by the ladies of the B. C. congregation began on Tuesday and is to last for a few days. The attendance was very good indeed and everything carried out successfully. The refreshments were all that could be desired and the ladies deserve much credit for their untiring efforts and attention. The concert given in the evening on the grounds was very well conducted and served to bring before the audience some of the young talent. The clergyman present at the fair were His Lordship Bishop Rogers and Rev. Father Knight of Chatham, Rev. Father Mihan of Amherst, Rev. Father Ed. Meahan, Montreal, Rev. H. H. Meahan, Moncton, Rev. Father Morrissey, Bathurst, and Brother Prudent of New York, who is spending part of his vacation here. HARNARY RUDGE.

The good folk of Granville propose having their annual picnic on Tuesday next, and those who are invited to our annual picnic, in fact among other things, there seems to be quite a musical element here just at present. We have an orchestra which would do credit to a much larger place. It is composed of the following performers: Mr. Harry Beaudry, Organist; Mr. J. G. Harrison, Mr. Wm. Lilly, Violin; Mr. Robert Parkin, Cornet. There were three religious services held here on Sunday. Mr. Raymond, a divinity student occupied the pulpit in St. Anne's church in the morning and preached to a large congregation in Prince Wales school-house in the evening. The orchestra supplied the instrumental music. Mr. Dunlop, a divinity student at Acadia, delivered an instructive and earnest discourse in Church's hall on the same evening. Miss Balcom played the organ.

Mr. and Mrs. Hobart, and two children of New town, Mass., are guests at the Waverly. Their many friends are glad to welcome Rev. Mr. Sweet and family back again after a year's absence in England. In fact among other things, there seems to be quite a musical element here just at present. We have an orchestra which would do credit to a much larger place. It is composed of the following performers: Mr. Harry Beaudry, Organist; Mr. J. G. Harrison, Mr. Wm. Lilly, Violin; Mr. Robert Parkin, Cornet. There were three religious services held here on Sunday. Mr. Harvey Hood Catarrh, Heart Failure, Paralysis of the Throat. "I Thank God and Hood's Sarsaparilla for Perfect Health." "Gentlemen: For the benefit of suffering humanity I wish to state a few facts: For several years I have suffered from catarrh and heart failure, which got so bad I could not work and could scarcely walk. I had a very bad spell of paralysis of the throat some time ago. My throat seemed closed and I could scarcely utter a word. The doctors said I was cured by heart failure, and gave me medicine, which I took according to directions, but it did me no good. My wife urged me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, telling me of Mr. Joseph C. Smith, who had been cured. At Death's Door but was entirely cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. After talking with Mr. Smith, I concluded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. When I had taken two bottles I felt very much better. I have continued taking it, and am now feeling excellent. I thank God, and Hood's Sarsaparilla. L. B. HEDD, LACEYVILLE, O.

NEWCASTLE. JULY 19.—Mr. and Mrs. Percy Chestnut, are the guests of Mrs. Will Mitchell for a few weeks. Mrs. H. M. Williston of Halifax, is visiting Mrs. E. P. Williston. The most enjoyable picnic of the season took place last Saturday afternoon, when Mr. E. Z. Walker had invited a large number of young friends to participate in an excursion on board the "Rustler." The merry party left town about three p.m. including in the dance while on the steamer, and landing at Bathurst about five, where a lunch was served, after which the young people enjoyed a ramble round the picturesque banks, and returned about six o'clock, feeling thankful to Mr. Walker as a kind and generous host. Miss F. C. Kingsley of St. John, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Mitchell.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Gardner, intended going to their son, Rev. Alfred Gardner, who is at present in the district of Niagara. Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Gardner, intended going to their son, Rev. CANADIAN PUBLISHING AND PORTRAIT CO. Rooms 15 and 17, Walker's Building, Canterbury Street, St. John, N. B. Halifax: 102 Hollis Street. SHELDIA. WANTED.—A Sheldiac correspondent for Prounce. Applications should be made to the editor at once. SHELDIA CAPE.

JULY 20.—The School of English picnic of the Cape and vicinity, held at C. F. Hainington's grove, Thursday, was largely attended. An unusual number of visitors were present including several ladies of St. Andrew's congregation, Sheldiac. The usual violent exercises so common at picnics found no takers here, as the ordinary exercises of this kind and a seemingly endless programme of sports monopolized the entire afternoon. The so-called tug-of-war between the married and single men was an interesting feature, but it was not half as interesting as the contest between the ladies and half their number of the opposite sex. Of course the ladies won, but the defeated were sufficiently thoughtful and cruel to say it was through the assistance of a sea captain that the contest ended in a tie. Rev. Mr. Bart was master of ceremonies throughout.

The spacious residence of Mrs. N. Cannon was the scene of a very large card party and dance Thursday evening. The affair was an unlooked-for success socially and in point of numbers. Dancing continued until almost two o'clock. Mr. John Scovill is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Scovill. Hon. Judge Hainington drove through from Dorchester today and is staying at the old homestead. Sheldiac division No. 15, S. of T., has inaugurated a new feature for the good of the order. The members arranged an excursion by land or water at least once a week to some point of interest, and if the word of the recording scribe is an indication no excursionist is ever dissatisfied. The growth of the division is also said to be making rapid progress as a result. Mrs. M. J. Stevens and family, of Dover, are spending the summer here, the guests of Mrs. H. Cannon. Miss Hainington of St. John, was the guest of Rev. Mr. Bart this week. Mr. Percival Willard of Moncton, spent Sunday at the "Elms," the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Willard. Driver Daniel McQueen and his tally-ho was the medium by which a party of young ladies were rapidly conveyed to Moncton, one day last week. Barring the weather, and a slight mishap to the coach, everything passed off in an enjoyable manner—at least so say the young ladies. H. W. Murray, formerly teacher of the Madras school here, has bid good-bye to his friends this week. He carried with him a gold headed cane, as a reminder of his stay here. The young men of the Cape met last Saturday evening and formed the Young Men's Club. The following officers were elected to guide the destinies of the new and promising organization: President, Daniel A. McQueen; vice president, Reginald H. Welling; secretary, Fred H. Glashy; sergeant-at-arms, O. B. Mills; sentinel, Albert Bateman. A reading room and debating class are features of the club. American visitors continue to arrive daily, and few if any of them are disappointed in the scenery, culture and view of the country hereabouts. School teachers, too, are wonderfully numerous.

AMHERST. [Progress is sold in Amherst by Master Charles Hillcoat, and at the music store of H. A. Hillcoat.] JULY 19.—The Misses Tighe gave an unusually pleasant five o'clock tea on Thursday afternoon at their home on Victoria street. The weather was most favorable for the gay event, and the guests in their pretty summer gowns looked very happy. I understand the tea was in honor of Miss Giffin of Kentville who has been their guest of the Misses Tighe for the past month. Mrs. Richmond entertained a party of merry little guests on Wednesday afternoon, for her little nieces the Misses Weldon. As it was after the form of afternoon tea and garden party combined, no doubt there was an immense amount of pleasure for all present. On Friday afternoon Mrs. Gass gave an afternoon tea to quite a large number of Miss Hiett's young friends. Mrs. Gass was a most attentive hostess and catered to the tastes of the little visitors in a most appreciable way. Miss Belle Hickey went to St. John last Wednesday to visit friends. Mrs. George Hillcoat left on Thursday to spend a few days with her old friends in Sussex. Mrs. McKinnon and daughter, Lucy, went to Halifax on Saturday on route for Shelburne. Miss Catter entertained a few of her friends at what on Friday evening, at her home on Victoria street. Miss Chipman of Boston, is very welcome among our recent arrivals; she will spend the summer vacation with her aunt, Mrs. Black. Miss Gwen Main returned home last week, from a visit to the Misses McGill, New Glasgow. On Friday afternoon, Mrs. N. Curry gave a delightful lawn party at "Seven Gables." Mrs. Curry is among one of our most charming hostesses, and her pretty home affords lots of space for all an amusement that go to make summer entertainments a success. Miss Campbell returned from a lengthy visit to Boston on Thursday, to the great delight of her many friends. On Saturday, Miss Grace Fullerton gave an afternoon tea to quite a large number of Miss Hiett's young friends. Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Williams and family, arrived at the Methodist church on Sunday, and were also present at the socially on Friday evening for the church, which was a very great success; the supply was far exceeding the demand that they had to take the following evening to make a clearance sale, which was certainly a very propitious outlook for the new pastor. Spruce cottage on Monday afternoon was the resort for our fashionably young belles to participate in a very merry garden party given for the Misses Sullivan. Miss Mary Quigley who has been visiting Halifax since the closing of Wolville school, returned home on Tuesday evening accompanied by Miss Kennedy and Miss Parsons who will remain here guests for a time. Mr. Rogers and niece Miss Eliza Moore returned on Monday from a trip through the Western counties. No longer than two weddings are reported to take place in September, with a charming possibility of a third one, which if all be true I hear, will keep society on the move for a few weeks to have all Harris in residence, the majority of which were matrons who were very smartly gowned. Miss Moore and friend, Miss Whitehouse of New York, were very pretty frocks indeed; Mrs. Fred Bent, Cincinnati, was also among the guests among whom were Mrs. Rufus Bent, Mrs. E. Chapman, Mrs. A. Chapman, Mrs. Hatchford, Mrs. T. R. Black, Mrs. D. Douglas, Mrs. Mills, Miss Fowler, Miss Dimes, Miss Strickland, Miss Bent and Miss Harding. The excursion to Halifax was favored with copious showers, but quite a number went from Amherst and enjoyed the trip immensely. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Hans Logan, Dr. C. Morse, G. A. Munro, and Miss Strothand, on route for their home in Annapolis. Mr. E. Biden has gone on a short business trip to New Glasgow. Mrs. James Moffat and daughter, Miss Edna, leave next week for a trip to Vancouver, and will visit the Fair on their return. M. M.

ANAGANEC. JULY 19.—Miss Nettie McNaughton, (teacher), is spending the summer months with her parents at their residence, "The Lilacs." Miss Agnes Ryan of New York, is visiting her friend, Mrs. Davidson, at L. C. R. depot. Misses Annie and Agnes McAnessy, school teachers in Albert county, are spending their summer vacation with their mother at Portage. Miss May McRobbie of St. John, is at present visiting her friends, the Misses Davidson on "Apple Hill." Mrs. Claude Price and little daughter, Helma Marguerite, were visiting her sister, Mrs. Davidson, at the station on Tuesday of this week. Miss Ellen Stewart, who has had charge of the school here for the past term left for her home in Newcastle, Quebec county, last week. Mr. and Mrs. John P. Bell of St. John, are at present boarding at the "Portage House" at Portage. Mrs. James McNaughton and daughter, Miss Edna, spent the past month at "Floral Cottage," left for his home on Friday last. Mrs. James McNaughton at "The Lilacs." Mosquiro.

IT IS THE DULL SEASON.

THE WARM WEATHER AND ITS EFFECT IN MASSACHUSETTS.

Nothing is going on, but there is plenty of Crime and Consequently News-Freeze People and Their Growing Influence in New England. Boston, July 17.—What they call the dull season, the dry, dreary, monotonous summer in the cities, is now setting in, in earnest. Yesterday was one of those days when people wilt like flowers touched with frost; when, as one of the papers in referring to yesterday's humidity says, white dresses bright and well starched, grow limp at noon, and are shapeless and clinging, like wet rags at supper time.

It was one of those days which drive people to the seaside and mountains, which make them leave in a hurry that they forget to lock the doors, and makes it necessary for them to report at police headquarters when they return. Warm weather is conducive to crime.

The reporters say this is the beginning of the dulllest period of the year for news, the time when there is "nothing going on" in the city; people generally are not interested in anything in particular, and those who make the news are out of town. The newspaper men at the seaside "own the papers," and the composing rooms are continually short of capital letters—for the run on names, you know.

But news is not dull. The papers are filled with light summer reading, the police are furnishing it, and a constant reader cannot help coming to the conclusion that this is a bad country, surely. Warm weather is conducive to crime and so are hard times. When both come together the police have to hustle. During the last few weeks there has been a veritable reign of terror around the Back Bay. A gang of thieves is keeping up a record of one break a day. They work in the day time too. Watch the houses; know every inch of the ground; wait till a house is empty; then go in and do a good day's work, as they look upon it. The silver question and the tariff do not seem to effect this business in the least.

This state of affairs is not confined to Boston. The climate is much the same all over Massachusetts, and each town and village has been keeping up its end. The result is, most people lock doors and windows or go to sleep with one ear open.

But this is not all. Murders, "mysterious disappearances," forgeries, embezzlements and suicides are all being written to death, and the only variation the people get in the news line is the discussion of warm weather politics.

Governor Russell is going to step down next fall, and nearly every other city and town in the state has a citizen anxious to take his place. Every city booms its man, and candidates for Governor are thicker than society items at a sea-side hotel.

Travel this year, naturally runs in the direction of Chicago. Excursion parties are leaving every day, and now that the railroads are beginning to cut rates, the west-bound throng will grow in numbers. But for all this, the prospects are good for a rash to the provinces.

The beauties of Nova Scotia; its Annapolis valley, and its old English city; its lakes and rivers, fish and fruit are being lauded to the skies, in the advertisements of the steamboat companies, and the thousands of people who have made the trip, are doing even greater work as advertising agents. But it is all Nova Scotia, one seldom hears anything about New Brunswick. The steamers and railways running into New Brunswick, are apparently not so anxious for business as might be expected, and if tourists do happen to strike St. John they must go there by mistake. The agents of the boats running into Yarmouth and Halifax show activity that cannot fail of effect. They catch all the people looking for new sights and scenes, and have besides, the glowing pen pictures and cuts in their literature, the additional advantage of thousands of people who are ever ready to give a word picture of Nova Scotia, the moment an acquaintance suggests a vacation, or "wonders who will go." The temperature strikes them favorably, and the cool evenings are remembered. So is the chill on the waters of the Bay of Fundy.

I met a man the other day, who said he had never been on a beach in his life in summer time, without going in bathing, except on one occasion. That was when he visited St. John in August a few years ago, and went down to the Bay Shore. The water was too cold. It has been estimated that there are 500,000 provincials—people from the Maritime Provinces, living in New England, and about 20,000 in Boston alone. How many of these will go "down home" this summer? It's hard to say, but a large majority of them will go, sure. The rest will do an amount of talking which will be equivalent to sending substitutes to swell the throng.

There are enough provincials here to receive recognition as an important factor in the life of the country, and this is becoming recognized more and more every year. There has been very little organization among the provincials, but the last attempt at it seems to be proving a success. Where the people are scattered all over the country it is difficult to get them together, for in Boston, as everywhere else—there are little circles in which people move. The sons and daughters of the Maritime Provinces, however, is a growing society, and the reunion held at West Medway, July 4, the first that had ever been attempted was a success. The branches of the societies in the smaller cities, however, seem to flourish to a greater extent than the society here in Boston, and the number of people who come from a distance was surprising. It was large enough to make the Boston papers realize the importance of giving it space in columns crowded with independence day celebrations, and even illustrate the affair.

Among the members of these societies are many men who have been successful here. And Providence at some future time will tell more about them.

The Finger of Mercury

Adopts in palmistry assert that the length of the fourth or little finger is the most important sign in the hand. There is no great man—no man who rises in importance in any line of life—without a long and straight little finger. The type of finger, whether spatulate, pointed, or very nearly square, causes the capacity to be directed into very different channels; with the long spatulate little finger success in business will result, while the long pointed one denotes tact and the management of people. This, indeed, is the finger of "wheedle." The old saying "to turn people round your little finger" is, like most old proverbs, the result of continued and close observation, and in the case of the long pointed Mercury—as Ben Jonson, in the "Alchemist," calls the fourth finger—is undoubtedly entirely true.

Taking Mean Advantage.

A workman was telling one of his friends about the satisfactory manner in which his hens kept him supplied with eggs, when to his surprise his friend informed him that he had fitted up an apparatus with a trap-door in the bottom for his hen to lay in. "The egg drops through the trap-door into a basket of shavings, and then," said he, "when she turns round to examine the egg she has laid she thinks she has made a mistake. She accordingly lays another, and repeats the performance until she is tired. I generally get six eggs a day," he added; "try it—it pays."

MONEY IN NEWSPAPERS.

BITS OF THE HISTORY OF LEADING JOURNALS IN HALIFAX.

What the Old "Recorder" Has Done for the Blackadars—The Story of the "Chronicle" and Its Peculiar Management of Recent Years.

HALIFAX, July 17.—The ups and downs in the newspaper world; its successes and failures; and its vicissitudes generally, are quite in keeping with the record of other industrial and professional careers in the world. The rich or influential newspaper publisher or editor of today may be in a very different position tomorrow or in the course of a short time—and vice versa. The history of two of the leading daily journals in Halifax furnishes interesting reading to those who care at all for an insight into such matters. And most people like to know all they can of a newspaper, of its proprietorship and management.

The events of the past two years in the office of the "Morning Chronicle," and the fortunes that have been made for its proprietors by the Halifax "Acadian Recorder" during the past fifteen or twenty years, is what has suggested this idea.

Twenty years ago, or a little more, the Recorder was a feeble newspaper indeed. It was then fifty years old, but its age was its chief merit. In the face of enterprising competition it was far in the rear in the race for popular favor. Its two proprietors, H. D. Blackadar and C. C. Blackadar, were barely able to make a living, so the latter was appointed Queen's Printer for this province. But the liberal party lost control of power in 1878 and after some years of service, Mr. Blackadar was dismissed from office. Times had changed, and the nature of competition among the evening papers of this city was different. He went back to the Recorder, and the two brothers resumed work with their coats off. The result is that now both men are rich. C. C. Blackadar has just completed the finest residence in the city, charmingly situated on Pleasant street, while H. D. Blackadar, who comes second to his younger brother in wealth, lives in a commodious mansion in the north end. C. C. Blackadar's fortune is variously estimated, but he is worth at least $200,000. He is a director in the Union Bank, in the Gas company, and in other enterprises, and is a shareholder and investor in a dozen or more profitable undertakings. All that money has been made in a newspaper,—by careful, economic management, and with a field in evening journalism in which in some particulars they had no competition. That is the record of fortunes made in a newspaper in this city. Enterprising is not to be thanked for it, but favoring circumstances, economy amounting to cheese-paring, close supervision of every department of their business, and hard work generally, has won for all Blackadar brothers a fortune each.

The story of the "Morning Chronicle" is entirely different. Its interest now centres in the events of less than the last two years. There is something almost of romance in what has taken place. The paper was started about sixty years ago under the name of "The Nova Scotian"—a weekly. Subsequently Hon. Wm. Annand controlled the journal, and it became a tri-weekly under the name of the "Morning Chronicle." Next it was made a daily. William Annand died, and the paper passed to his son Charles Annand. Now the last named is gone, and the "Chronicle," by his will, passes to the two sons of Charles Annand—F. W. and C. J. Annand. John Dunn is sole executor of the estate. Now comes the narration of the events of interest to those who have been onlookers.

John Dunn was the faithful business manager, and the managing editor during all the years that elapsed from Hon. W. S. Fielding's entrance into politics down to two years ago, when H. W. Freeman became business manager and Robert McConnell was appointed managing editor. Mr. Dunn began in the "Chronicle" composing room and rose to his final position at the head of affairs. He was thoroughly acquainted with every department of the business and for thirty years as manager practically had its sole control. Charles Annand made money in the "Chronicle" in those years—which he lost and regained more than once by outside speculations. In one of those enterprises he met a young man of twenty-five or so, H. W. Freeman, the son of a dyed-in-the-wool tory of Queens county. The young man himself was a pronounced conservative. But he worked Charles Annand so that in a few months he was appointed manager of the "Chronicle," the leading liberal paper of Nova Scotia. He knew nothing of newspaper work, but nevertheless Mr. John Dunn was superannuated, and given permission to remain in the office, but with really nothing to do besides attending to a little private business. Young Freeman was head man and Dunn was very soon made to feel it. Indeed the former was so domineering and overbearing that the poor old ex-manager found his life in the office anything but comfortable. This was the more galling when Dunn saw the utter ignorance of the newcomer. In a few months their relations were such that the two met as seldom as possible. In the meantime Robert McConnell was employed as managing editor. He had been on the "Moncton Transcript," and for the last five years on the "Montreal Herald." About a year ago Charles Annand went to England to negotiate the sale of a gold mining property he had developed. He succeeded in this and was reported to have made a large amount by the deal. The news of the deal was closely followed by tidings of Charles Annand's death. Then came the will, and the "Chronicle" and all the property was left to the two sons already mentioned. One of the sons, Fred, was farmer in Grand Pre; the other was doing nothing particularly out west. The romantic part of the will as regards the "Chronicle" was that John Dunn was made executor. So Freeman, who had carried it with so high a hand, was once more the servant of him whom he had slighted as far as he could. John Dunn was re-instated in full control for eighteen months at least. He demanded from Mr. Freeman, as one of his first acts, Charles Annand's papers, etc. One of the documents he so received was a letter addressed to "John Dunn" and marked "to be opened after my death." But it had been opened by others in whose custody it was, and its contents learned. It provided for a bequest, not mentioned in the will, to be paid to two friends of the deceased in Halifax. It was only a few months after Mr. Dunn assumed control as executor when Freeman received notice that his services would no longer be required. The young man accordingly left, and ex-manager was once more at the head of affairs. The "Chronicle" is now in a rather peculiar position as regards its ownership and its staff. Neither of the two sons, who in eight or ten months will take over the property, know the rudiments of the work, and without Dunn at their backs could not run the business department for a week. One of them has gone on a visit to England, and the other to Chicago. Both have large capacities for money-spending. The editorial and reporting departments are both completely in the hands of outsiders. Mr. McConnell, after his six years there, has become a Montreal man. Mr. Taunton, the news editor, also now hails from Montreal. Mr. Boves, news editor of the evening edition, is a New Brunswicker.

The changes of the past two years in the "Chronicle" office, the ups and downs of those in its control, are just as likely as not to be duplicated within a year or so. Important changes are certain—one of the most likely that of the proprietorship. Who shall own it? It is a good property. It will prove itself such if it continues to stand the spending abilities of the two young proprietors who leave the management entirely to Mr. Dunn.

VERY SUCCESSFUL WORK.

What the Diligent Church Workers Have Done at Springhill Mines.

A Springhill, N.S. correspondent of Progress writes that the Dominion Day celebration was a great success, and more than 2,000 people patronized the grounds, $550 being added to the Church of England building fund. He adds: "During this seven years pastorate of our rector, Rev. W. C. Wilson, the church has made great progress. Seven years ago it was sadly usual to assemble in the old church with a congregation of about a dozen but now we crowd the large hall in our Parish House every Sunday evening. Almost all the members of our congregation are poor and none are wealthy, but they give very liberally. During our rector's pastorate the contributions etc. have increased at least 400 per cent. When he took charge there was a debt of $1,000 on the rectory and some of the congregation advised the sale of it, as it seemed hopeless to attempt the clearance of the debt. What battle God wrought? The debt is paid.

"The Parish House built and opened last year has a reading room well supplied with dailies, weeklies, and magazines. There are rooms for orchestral club, games and smoking, ladies guild, committees, cooking school, Kindergarten, and large hall for lectures capable of seating 350 persons which is used at present for services. It is well furnished and adapted for its various purposes. It is a centre of activity. The Kindergarten and booking classes are a great success largely owing to the ability and energy of Miss Fugh the Principal. "The Cottage Hospital will be ready for opening on Nov. 1st. The furnishings will be first class and there will be accommodation for fifteen beds. Almost all the money necessary for the building and furnishing has been raised by the rector amongst his friends. It will be open to all as far as accommodation will allow and it is hoped that our wealthy brethren in the Diocese will give liberally for the endowment of the beds and successful carrying on of this "good Samaritan" work. Amongst the incorporators are the Bishop of the Diocese, Rural Dean Harris, Mr. R. G. Leckie, and A. R. Dicky M. P.

"The new church is a perfect gem, second to none in the diocese and will be opened and consecrated on All Saints Day, Nov. 1st. We owe a new and beautiful church, parish house, and cottage hospital almost entirely to the exertions of the Rector. We have done what we could for the building up work but that amounts to little, barely enough to build the foundations of our buildings and seat the church. Since the beginning of the year the men have raised $700 towards the desired 1,000 for the seating and etc. of the church, and the women have raised the desired $350 for furnishing the chancel, and fittings for electric lights; in addition to current expenses.

"The most important result of our rector's work under the good hand of God is seen in the deepened spiritual life of his people. We have over 100 communicants. With increased numbers and wealth we have grown in the spirit of giving and good works."

How They Squeezed the Banker.

Robert Carrick, one of the wealthiest bankers in Glasgow, was very tight fisted. One day three gentlemen waited upon him, who were collecting subscriptions for a new hospital. He subscribed two guineas, and when the collectors were unable to suppress a remark as to the paucity of the sum, he said:—"I cannot afford any more."

"The three gentlemen called next on Mr. Milquham, one of the leading manufacturers in the town. "What is that?" exclaimed the latter. "Carrick is only giving a couple of guineas?" "On being told what Carrick had said, he forthwith took up his cheque-book and wrote out a cheque for £10,000 and sent a clerk to cash it at the bank. Five minutes afterwards the banker called at the manufacturer's, quite out of breath, and exclaimed:—"What is the matter with you, Milquham?"

"With me? Nothing!" was the reply. "But these gentlemen have just told me you could not afford two guineas for the hospital: 'Halloo! P. I thought 'is myself, 'things are looking fishy at the bank; I must make haste and withdraw my deposit.' Carrick asked to see the subscription list again, put down his name for fifty guineas, and Milquham tore up his cheque."

A simple test by which to distinguish butter from margarine is to draw three or four pieces of ordinary sewing cotton, slightly twisted together, through the piece to be tested, set light to it and blow it out almost immediately, and smell the smoke. If it is margarine, it will have the peculiar smell of a newly-extinguished tallow candle, but with butter there is no such smell.

If a piece is chipped off the outside, it must be plugged with ivory, using the cement for holding it.

The largest room in the world under one roof, and unbroken by pillars, is at St. Petersburg. It is 120ft. long by 150ft. in breadth. By daylight it is used for military displays, and a battalion can completely manoeuvre in it. Twenty thousand wax tapers are required to light it. The roof of this structure is a single arch of iron, and it exhibits remarkable engineering skill in the architecture.

In Paris there are more than 65,000 cabs and carriages for hire, and a person can ride all over the city of light for a song. Each driver is required to furnish strangers with a card, by which they can see the regulation rates, and in the event of a disagreement he must drive to the nearest policeman and allow a complaint to be entered against himself. There is one peculiarity about the Parisian cabman—he seldom attempts to cheat. When trouble arises it is generally due to a misunderstanding, and not to a desire to take advantage of strangers.

The pasture freaks usually referred to as "fairy rings" or "fairy circles" are generally composed of one or more circles of tall, green grass, separated from another circle equally as luxuriant by an intermediate strip of earth destitute, or almost destitute, of vegetation. A second class, and which is by far the less numerous, is a "fairy circle" of healthy-looking grass which gradually enlarges year by year, always in the form of a perfect circle. Their cause is attributed to the spread of the spores of a species of fungi which proceed by an annual enlargement from the centre outward; for in the other species, a gradual encroachment upon the centre of the circle.

PAPER AND ITS USES.

The Various Forms in Which it is Made to Do Good Service. Hardly any substance lends itself so readily to a multitude of uses as paper, which is, indeed, now treated as a sort of universal raw material, out of which nearly everything can be made.

Eastern nations have long known the extreme adaptability of paper for many purposes, which we are only beginning to recognize. The Chinese and Japanese make much use of it, but they are far outstripped by the Koreans, whose paper is made from the bark of a bush of the mulberry order. Besides the ordinary uses for writing and for books, they make of it string, lanterns, umbrellas, shoe soles, hats, boxes, coats, etc. They cover their floors, walls and ceilings with it, and, stretching it on frames make it serve for doors and windows.

Paper being a bad conductor of heat, a light and warm addition to the bed-clothes may be got by spreading a newspaper or two between the blankets. In Germany this quality is practically recognized by the manufacture of paper, bed-quits, which are very warm, and a great deal cheaper than those in general use.

Paper stockings are another German invention. A Berlin shoe-trade journal describes them as made of a specially prepared paper stock, which rapidly absorbs moisture, and keeps the feet dry and warm. The constant temperature thus maintained in the shoe is a great preventive of corns.

An ingenious native of St. Helens has devised a paper pipe, which is moulded from wood pulp or sheets of absorbent paper. The pulp is simply pressed into shape and dried. When paper is used it is wrapped round a core, and afterwards shaped by pressure. In either case the bowl is provided with a lining of porous earthenware to prevent burning.

Paper horse-shoes have acquired some repute in Germany. They are made from sheets of a particularly tough parchment-like paper, compressed and cemented together by a special paste. Such horse-shoes are impervious to water, and, as they are more elastic than the ordinary kind, they improve the horse's walk.

A greater achievement in the construction of paper is that of an American dentist, who guarantees that they will wear well, and last a lifetime. A Lubek dentist has also made teeth of the same material, and a set of these is said to have been in use for thirteen years, and to be still as good as ever.

The paper wheels, of which a good deal was heard at one time, do not really contain much paper in their construction. The space between the tire and the hub is formed to contain a mixture of paper pulp with other materials, the whole being forced in under enormous pressure, which is maintained until the composition is set. It is, however, necessary to have a series of radiating spokes connecting the hub and the tire, so that the paper is used only as a filling in a not very essential place.

It will be readily understood that when paper is taken in the pulp stage, whether that consists of rags, wood fibre, or other ingredients, it is capable, by the addition of various substances, of being moulded and compressed into many forms. At Bergen a church has been built of paper-pulp, compressed by powerful machinery, and water-proof with a solution containing lime as one of its chief constituents.

The pulp may indeed be compressed to the solidity of stone, and has been described a portable hospital made of this compressed paper pulp, or "papier-mache," which is large enough to contain twenty beds. It is easily put together, and when taken down forms a load for three trucks, which are planned to form the base of the building when erected.

A Swiss manufacturer has built a paper factory chimney 50ft. high. It is built of bricks made of compressed paper united by a silicious cement. It is intended to provide a paper dome for the new observatory building now being erected at Greenwich. The material is well adapted for roofing, and has been frequently used for roofing, but never on so large a scale. The dome with its steel frame-work will weigh over twenty tons, and yet will be so contrived that it can be revolved by a very slight pressure.

For decorative purposes, where strength and toughness are required, "cartonnage" or stone paper is largely used. This is made of paper cuttings boiled with glue, plaster of Paris, and whiting, forming a composition which moulds beautifully, is light and yet very strong, and forms an excellent ground for painting. The latest use to which paper has been put is as a substitute for window-glass. The panes of this specially-manufactured material are milky-white in appearance, and while they intercept the light rays, they understand to be a desirable feature for the construction of greenhouses.

Some of the uses of paper are in process of working out, by which it is expected that from the ordinary wood or other pulp from which paper is made all sorts of textile tissues can be produced, equaling the best cotton goods in every respect. In 1880, silk, made from wood pulp, has exhibited, and the perfected process is now about to be put in operation on a commercial scale, at Besancon, in France.

Captain Julian Viand, the sailor-Academicien of France, is generally credited with having taken his pen-name of "Pierre Loti" from the Japanese word for violet. This is wrong, as anyone with a knowledge of that tongue knows. The truth is that Loti is a Maori word descriptive of a beautiful Polynesian flower, and was the name bestowed on the young lieutenant, when stationed at Tahiti, by the ladies of Queen Pomare's court.

Among the Queen's chief enjoyments at Osborne is the sea bathing, which is arranged for the Royal Family in a peculiarly safe and convenient manner. Passengers by the steamers between Portsmouth and Southampton seldom fail to notice an abnormally large barge moored at the end of the jetty which protrudes into the Solent from the private grounds at Osborne. This vessel is so arranged that, when desired, the water rushes into it and forms a spacious bath, as comfortable as it is safe.

The Gaskwar of Baroda's rise from the ploughshare to the throne is like a romance. After the deposition of Mulhar Rao, the Indian government decided to allow Jumnabai, the childless widow of the Gaskwar, to allow the Hindu custom in regard to the succession; and after very careful enquiries concerning the habits and surroundings of her various relatives, Jumnabai intimated her desire to adopt the collateral branch of the family. The choice was approved by the government, and the youth was taken from the fields and placed under English tutors. He proved an apt scholar, and has since justified his selection.

Oscar Wilde, whose latest dramatic effort, a play entitled "A Woman of No Importance" has recently been produced in London, is by no means a tyro in this branch of literature, although of course "Lady Windemere's Fan" was the first of his works to attain prominent success. Some time ago two of his plays "Vera" and "The Duchess of Padua," were introduced to American playgoers. Mr. Wilde was born on October 16, 1856, and was educated in Ireland, afterwards going to Oxford, where, amongst other honors, he obtained the Newdigate prize for the best English poem. He came to London at twenty-three years of age, and by his daring attacks on conventionalism, rapidly reached that position in society which he has since held.

THE INDEPENDENT ORDER OF FORESTERS is far and away the BEST Fraternal Benefit Society in the world. It was founded in Newark, New Jersey, on the 17th June, 1874, and has spread all over the United States and Canada, and is now being extended to Great Britain, New Zealand and Australia.

Unexampled Progress and Prosperity of the Independent Order of Foresters, as shown by the following figures:

Table with columns: Date, No. of Members, Balance in Bank, No. of Members, Balance in Bank. Rows include Oct. 1882, Jan. 1883, July 1883, etc.

Membership May Est., 1893, about 52,000. Balance in Bank, $680,000.

The total number of applications considered by the Medical Board for the month of April, 1893, was 1000; May, 1890, and for the year ending 31st December, 1892, was 18,247, of whom 17,028 were passed, and 1,219 rejected.

The cause of this unexampled prosperity and growth of the I. O. F. is due to the fact that its foundations have been laid on a Solid Financial Basis, and every department of the Order has been managed on business principles, thereby securing for all Foresters large and varied benefits at the lowest possible cost consistent with Safety and Permanence.

At date all Ben. Est. have been paid within a few days of filing the claim papers, amounting in the aggregate to the princely sum of One Million Five Hundred and Fifty-four Thousand Eight Hundred and Eighty-five Dollars. Notwithstanding the payment of this large sum, as well as all the management expenses, including large sums for planting the Order in new territory, there remains the handsome cash balance in the treasury of over Half a Million Dollars.

Benefits which you may obtain by becoming a Forester: FOR YOURSELF.—The fraternal and social privileges of the Order. 2 Free medical attendance. 3 Total and Permanent Disability of $500, $1,000 or $1,500. 4 A benefit for your old age of $100, $200 or $300 a year. 5 An Encowment Benefit payable on reaching your expectation of life of $1,000, $2,000 or $3,000. 6 Sick Benefits of $2 to $5 per week. FOR YOUR FAMILY.—1. Funeral Benefit, $50. 2. Insurance Benefit of $1,000, $2,000 or $3,000.

The cost of admission to the Order in most Courts is only $7.00 to $9.00, according to the amount of insurance taken, besides medical examination fee, which is $1.50 if you are taking only $1,000 of insurance, and $2.00 if taking $2,000 or $3,000. There is only one assessment each month.

IN THE LAKE DISTRICTS.

GLIMPSES OF REAL LIFE AMONG THE ENGLISH PEASANTRY.

They are living as their forefathers lived centuries ago—Ancient Stone Built Habitations and their Attractive Interiors—Some Odd Characters.

KESWICK, England, July 10, 1893.—My friend had to do with the railway service; took me to the Annan station-yard; secured a huge shunting engine with stoker and driver for our use; we were soon reeling and crashing across the great Annan bridge connecting Scotland with England; and our strange conveyance for eight-seating among peasantry at last halted with hoarse challenges beneath the gray and echoing gables where, on the English side of the Solway, tiny, stone-built Bonness looks out upon Scotland and the Firth, just where, nearly 2,000 years ago, the great wall of Roman Servius came to an end because of the unconquerable Gaelic hordes of the wild, barbaric North.

At one window we saw the face of a hardy man passed middle aged, and we straightway knocked at his wide, low door and were bidden to enter. Among these humble folk the coming of strangers at any time or hour is not reckoned an intrusion, but rather a pleasure; and there are no bolts and locks upon the doors of any peasant's habitation in all this English Alpine country. They are trustful and simple and good in the face of all friendly approaches, but hard and dreadful as their own mountain scaws and fells where wrong is found beneath friendly addresses.

This man was a universal type of the lake district peasantry. He was much more than six feet in height, and as he moved about the large, low rooms, his head just escaped the huge oaken beams of the ceiling. His hair was soft, silken and bouffant; flaxen where the silver had not yet come; and with his full, fine beard suggested a strain of the old Norse blood. His forehead was high, wide, white. His eyebrows were bushy, but fine and glossy, above large eyes of lustrous light, blue-deep set, steady and almost mournful in their gaze. The nose was strongly-cut, truly classic, and the mouth was large, but characterful and firm. The sort of a head set upon a huge and perfect frame, stout as the timbers of his centuries-old habitation, gave a man who looked straight at you and made you, despite yourself, look straight at him in return.

The interior of this Cumbrian peasant's home was as characteristic and fine as the appearance of its sturdy old possessor. The large room where we sat was the "fire-house" or living-room of the habitation. It was fully eighteen feet wide and twenty-five feet long. All the door and window casements, the ceiling beams and the timbers about the fireplace had been hewn out of solid oak. The floor was of the same huge slate slabs as the roof, and these were so clean from scrubbing that they shone like dusky mirrors beneath your feet. There were many windows, no two in range, all little and eplaced inwardly, the sides of each of their stone apertures as white as snow; and the sash of each was half hidden by milk-white muslin. Huge settles of oak with fleeces or chintz-encased covers were ranged along the low white walls. In one corner, its face yellow with age, solemnly ticked an eight-day clock, its clumsy frame built into the two abutting walls. In the centre of the room was a long, strong table, with huge legs, cross-pieces and braces, worn and polished from use; and its great top was plain, with a hole in one-half its length being provided, as I have found entire tables in the peasant homes of Brittany, with square, oval and circular depressions, in which the food of the children and birds was served perhaps an hundred years ago, when even pottery was a luxury, and only the peasant master, his wife and the elder sons and daughters knew the use of the rudest delf.

More curious than all else was the entire side of the "fire-rook" containing the fire-place, in which, though our visit was in midsummer, there was a cheery, comforting blaze. A huge arch sustained the bowed cottage wall. This stone arch was really the base of the chimney. In its centre was the open fireplace hung about with chains, hooks and cranes, and at each side was a narrow splayed window, like those of a castle turret—tiny outlooks from this peasant fortalice of a snugger; and the dark mouth of the chimney above must have been nearly six feet across. I have found the same old arrangement in the cottages of old clachans in the Hebrides, in the Scottish Highlands, and in the ancient half-deserted weavers' village of Gattonside, near Melrose, beside the Tweed. The slabs of the floor in front of this fireplace were decorated with grotesque figures and designs, one of Noah's dove, and scroll work in ochre and vermilion chalk, an universal home-side custom among the lake district peasantry.

The chairs were huge and high and of oak. The bureaus and dressers, quaintly decorated with shining pewter and strange old bits of china-ware, were high, narrow and sprawling-legged, and all of mahogany. The beds—for one for the house master occupied the corner of the room—were high, huge and strong enough for the repose of giants and were of strangely carved oak, inviting vistas through low-ceilinged "leantos," each one doubtless built in a different century, and each provided with many tiny windows with deep casements, through which could be caught a glint of blossom, a spray of foliage, or the lichened gray of some ancient structure; the whole a dream of sweet old age, centuries-old rooting to the very rocks of the hills, endless content and unbroken repose. No wonder it is that the heart of the wanderer, when coming upon scenes like this, for the moment thrills with longing to end his pilgrimages, and bide for aye where the bitter struggle of life may no more come within such windows, storm-defying walls!

This picture of a single peasant home at ancient Bonness-on-Solway is one of even tone with thousands of others, from the Scottish border down through the mountain dales and passes of the grand lake district, across Cumberland and Westmoreland, past Morecombe Bay, almost to the River Lune in Lancashire. Its peasant owner was a "statesman." That one word is the key to his splendid self-poise, his simple, strong nature, and to the simple comfort and fixeness of his environment. It is true of them all. These "statesmen" are peasants absolutely possessing the soil which they till. There is no tuit-pulling, head-ducking or knee-cringing among such as these in England or any other country. In the ancient feudal times the barons were often in sore stress to repel the Scottish border incursions, or to make equally baronous forays of their own. No provide retainers who would fight to the death for these barons as well as for their own mountain-side, rock-hewn cabins, it was found a wise thing to parcel out the lands in tiny bits to hirelings; and these villain retainers were in time enfranchised. They were only bounden to their liege lords for military service in defense. When feudalism passed away the villain land-owners remained freemen and possessors in fee of the little "estates;" hence "statesmen," the noblest peasantry of all Europe, and a wondrous though singularly unbecoming example to the remainder of Britain in its endlessly perplexing agrarian problems.

You will seldom find a detached and isolated habitation. From a hall a dozen to a score will croude together in some poverty dell, and beneath the ironing height of a dreary scaw, nestle along the side of foaming ghyll, crouch closely together in the verdure of some narrow pass, or stand like a clump of mossy rocks beside some shadowy upland tarn. Whenever found, many of their peculiarities are common to all. You will always find them beneath the shade of lofty sycamore trees; and when the leaves of these are gone, there is always near the cottage the green of the fir-trees to gladden the eyes in winter. Do not believe there is a peasant's home in the entire lake district where the wimpling sound of near running water is not endlessly heard. The orchards are large and bountiful. The stout-walled gardens are splendidly kept and fruitful. There are always comfortable outbuildings for cattle; walled and covered sheep folds to withstand the most pitiless mountain tempests; invariably a tidy stone shed for the many lives of bees which distill from the mountain heath the sweetest "henny" in England; and in summer time every cottage wall is a mass of flaming roses. Every one of these habitations is a museum of ancient house utensils. The oldest one known to man, the quern, is here; all implements of the weaver and spinner are here; the antique "filling" boards are here; and I have also often found in these habitations the uisher, that most ancient of Gaelic and Celtic drinking vessels, as I have seen upon them in the cabins of the Hebrides or the west of Ireland.

When folk have stood still so long and have so steadily tended all change, they usually furnish most interesting studies in their daily lives, customs and folk-lore; and yet these people are singularly lacking in a strongly-marked picturesque quality aside from that found in their unyielding tenacity to the home and actual ownership of the soil, their universal thrift and integrity, and their almost soddnessness of calm and repose. They were never boisterous, roystering folk, and to the day the dalemen of one valley may have no acquaintance with or knowledge of those of another valley, unless the huddled homes of the latter happen to lie along the moorland path leading to the nearest market town. Partly accounting for this is the unbroken custom of never "living off." People of the same blood and family name occupy entire districts, and are sufficient unto themselves. This is occasions grotesque nomenclature of identification. One is known as Jack o' t' Scaw; another, Jen o' t' Rigg; another, Myles o' t' Beck, another, Barrow-back't (bent-backed) Boab; another, Fratchin (quarrelsome) Ned; and still another, Billy, who is never a Billy. These are likely to be heads of families and grave old men. The names come along with them from boyhood and every one accepts his neighborhood designation as he does his increase of children or flocks and herds, in dignified though proud content.

Some other distinctive ancient customs are still found in the remoter districts. The "watching" of the dead, almost identical in manner with the Irish wake, is universal. Courting is facilitated by the household retiring, after putting out the lights, and leaving the "font" or lovesick couple upon the "long-settle" of the "fire room" to their hearts' content, at which modern delicacy may stand aghast; but this manner of matings proves sturdy and true. Funerals furnish heroic feasts. At a few of the mountain towns "hirin'" still survives, when the maidens who wish to engage at service stand in groups at the market-place; but they will no longer hold in their hands the wisp of straw, which was the olden badge of servitude. On Shrove Tuesday the boys still ferociously play "Beggarly Scot," a game based on the forays of the old-time borderers. "Shaking-bottle," containing a decoction of licorice and water, is common with all children on May day. Kurn-winning, or the Harvest Home festivity, continues general. Youthful "pace-eggers" appear a fortnight before Easter, sometimes in grotesque costumes and carol demands for colored eggs, which are never refused. The smiths of the district will not heat iron or strike nail on Good Friday, in memory of the nails used in the crucifixion; and the beautiful old custom of "rubbearing" or strewing the church with flowers on its patron saint's day, survives only in this almost idyllic and wholly pastoral region.

A HALIFAX MIRACLE.

INTERESTING STORY OF A LADY WELL KNOWN IN THIS CITY.

After Two Years of Suffering She Has fully Regained Her Health, and Tells Her Story That Others May be Benefited.—The Testimony of a Leading Druggist.

Camille Flammarion, the great French astronomer, in his new story "Omega; or The Last Days of the World," which is now being published in the Cosmopolitan Magazine, gives the press of the future a very hard hit. Whether or not the great astronomer may be right in his view of the press of the 24th century, one thing is certain, the world of today is more largely indebted to the press for glories to promote the highest civilization, than to any other human agency. Great discoveries in all branches of scientific research are chronicled with a faithfulness that enables the multitudes to enjoy to the greatest extent the benefits accruing therefrom. The newspapers of our land have for many months past contained accounts of miraculous cures effected through the agency of that marvellous medicine known to the world as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. A large number of these stories have been published in the columns of the Critic, and have no doubt been read by the majority of our readers with full assurance of the truthfulness thereof, and yet we imagine there have been a few who have doubted, and who have not been so much interested in the experiences of people miles away from Nova Scotia as in those of their own province. Now, however, The Critic can give an account of a recent cure, the facts of which we can guarantee as being true in every particular.

One day some time ago, some members of the Critic's staff were discussing in the editorial sanctum the merits of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, when one of the staff called upon Mrs. Robert Ainslie, who had been many cases in which the medicine has undoubtedly been very beneficial, but hardly miraculous. "Well," said the first speaker, "you know Robert Ainslie of this city, do you not?" His wife was only too happy to be known to others the wonderful properties of the medicine which had done her so much good.

"How long were you ill, Mrs. Ainslie?" asked the reporter. "I was taken with a severe attack of pneumonia, some two years ago," said the lady, "which lasted for about three months, and left me a wreck of my former self. Just seventeen weeks from the time I was first prostrated until I could put my foot on the floor, and even then I was unable to walk about I was but the shadow of the woman I had been. 'Death of the nerves' was the name the doctors gave the disease from which I was then suffering, and indeed it seemed at one time that I would not survive. I visited the Spa Springs at Middleton, drank the mineral water and took the baths, but all to no effect. Finally I was advised by a friend, who herself had been greatly benefited by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, to try this wonderful remedy. Although I confess, I had little faith in this or any other medicine, I purchased a box of the celebrated Pink Pills and began taking them according to directions, and took box after box, until I had taken eight. I found I was becoming fat, and as I was then in excellent health I took no more, and have since then been well and strong."

Mrs. Ainslie's story although given in her own words, conveys but a faint idea of the faith she has in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to which she feels she owes her present excellent health. Mrs. Ainslie informed the Critic representative that she had recommended Pink Pills to some twenty-five or thirty of her friends throughout the province (in which she has an extensive acquaintance), and in some cases had purchased several boxes of the Pills in Halifax for people living in country places.

"I understand, Mrs. Ainslie, that you yourself manufacture a medicine which is highly spoken of?" "Yes," said the lady, "I do. My dyspepsia cordial is well known in Nova Scotia and even further away." This struck us as a case in which "physician heal thyself" might have been applied, but it goes to prove that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have a power to strike at the root of disease that other medicines, be they ever so good in their place, have not. After thanking Mrs. Ainslie for her kindness in giving us the above, hearty recommendation of the medicine, we proceeded to interview Mr. Hamilton, of Messrs. Brown Bros. & Co., druggists, of this city, from whom Mrs. Ainslie had purchased the Pink Pills. This course was taken not that we in the least doubted the statements made by Mrs. Ainslie, but simply to satisfy any sceptical ones among the readers of The Critic, who, not being acquainted with the lady, might feel that they would be assuredly made doubly sure. Mr. Hamilton said he remembered Mrs. Ainslie when she purchased the first box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She was then much debilitated and had been very ill. He also remembered her coming to him when she had taken a half dozen boxes and testifying both by her words and appearance to the good they had accomplished in her case. Mr. Hamilton stated that there was more of Dr. Williams' famous Pink Pills sold by his firm than any other medicine, and that they were frequently bearing from their customers of the wonderful beneficial results of the treatment.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are manufactured by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., of Brockville, Ont., and Schenectady, N. Y., a firm of unquestioned reliability. Pink Pills are not looked on as a patent medicine but rather as a prescription. An analysis of their properties show that these pills are an unfailing specific for all diseases arising from an impoverished condition of the blood, or from an impairment of the nervous system, such as loss of appetite, depression of spirits, anaemia, chlorosis or green sickness, general muscular weakness, dizziness, loss of memory, locomotor ataxia, paralysis, sciatica, rheumatism, St. Vitus' dance the after effects of la grippe, all diseases depending upon a vitiated condition of the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to the female system, correcting irregularities, suppressions and all forms of female weakness, building anew the blood and restoring the glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. In the case of men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of any nature. These pills are not a purgative medicine, they contain only life-giving properties, and nothing that could injure the most delicate system. They act directly on the blood, supplying its life giving qualities, by assisting it to absorb oxygen, the great supporter of all organic life. In this way, the blood becoming "built up," and being supplied with its lacking constituents, becomes rich and red, nourishes the various organs, stimulating them to activity in the performance of their functions and thus eliminates disease from the system.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold only in boxes bearing the firm's trade mark and wrapper (printed in red ink.) Bear in mind that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are never sold in bulk, or by the dozen or hundred, and any dealer who offers substitutes in this form is trying to defraud you and should be avoided. The public are also cautioned against all other so-called blood builders or nerve tonics, put up in similar form intended to deceive. They are all imitations, whose makers hope to reap a pecuniary advantage from the wonderful reputation achieved by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Ask your dealer for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and refuse all imitations and substitutes.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company from either address at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50. The price at which these pills are sold makes a course of treatment comparatively inexpensive as compared with other remedies or medical treatment.

WOMAN and HER WORK.

Amongst the many temptations towards small breaches of etiquette, I think one of the very strongest is the inclination to button one's gloves on the street, which somehow seems deeply implanted in every female mind. It isn't good manners and we all know very well that it isn't, and also that it has a careless, untidy look, to see a woman scurrying along, with her umbrella thrust under one arm, her purse slipping down under the other, her elbows pressed closely to her sides to prevent her property from slipping away altogether, and her fingers struggling frantically with the buttons of her gloves. I know how it looks only too well, and how it feels too; because I always do it myself when I am alone. There is a reasonable prospect of not being caught. Some observant critic, whose name I cannot recall just now, but who had either travelled or read a great deal, considered this feminine peculiarity worthy of a note because he made the remark that—a Frenchwoman always buttoned her gloves in her bed-room, an Englishwoman buttoned them on the stairs, and an American woman invariably buttoned hers on the street. I don't think he had ever been in Canada, because it he had, he could not have helped making some remark, good, had, or indifferent about Canadian women, because they are possessed of sufficient individuality to make a very definite, and usually very favorable impression upon strangers. But I am afraid he would have classed a good many of us with our American cousins, as far as open air glove buttoning goes, and I sincerely trust I may never meet him on the street or elsewhere, until my gloves are securely fastened. I know very well how bad the habit is, and I really mean to reform just as soon as I have time, but meanwhile the prospect of saving one minute is very tempting to a busy woman, who is always a few minutes late and has to steal a few moments somehow or other in order to catch up; and it does seem almost a wicked waste of time to sit deliberately down in your own room and calmly button your gloves, when life is so short and you might be at least a block further on your way, by performing that little office between your own gate and the first street corner.

What do you think of it girls? Are any of you offenders against this law of etiquette and it so are you too, going to reform, or like myself, continue to offend when you are on a quiet street and reasonably certain nobody sees you? It seems very hard to imagine the petted darlings of New York society going about without even a pretence of gloves, but nevertheless that is precisely what they are doing this summer; even the lightest of silk is considered too much of a burden to be endured, on my lady's dainty hands this hot weather, so she only wears her rings. Of course I don't mean to say the fashion is general in New York proper, but it is almost so, in Newport, Saratoga and most of the fashionable summer resorts. Several efforts have been made, to revive the hideous and disfiguring lace mitts, as a sort of compromise between a glove, and ungloved condition, but they have all proved unsuccessful, and I fancy the reason is, that most of us have sufficient sanity to know that unless our hands are lovely enough to serve as models for a sculptor we cannot stand the test of hiding the prettiest part of them, and trusting the attractive portion, the finger ends, out into the rude light of day. Two thirds of a taper finger with rose ribbed nails, might not look so sad, when displayed at the end of a very delectable glove finger, but picture the effect of a chunky square topped digit, and a thick set thumb! Terrible! And the worst of it is, that about five per cent of us possess fingers of the first named pattern, and the rest of us have to be content with the other kind; so we had better make up our minds to bless the man who invented silk gloves, and thankfully array our hands in the product of his genius.

I do not think I ever remember the fashions lending themselves so gracefully to all sorts of economical contrivances, as they do this year. Perhaps at first sight the envious observer, especially if he happened to be a man, would be inclined to pronounce the prevailing modes the height of extravagance, with their flounces, ruffles, ruches, puffed sleeves, and expensive looking lace bustles and berths; but these very furbelows are blessings in disguise, and help the girl who has more ideas than dollars to be well dressed at a very little expense. Indeed any girl, or woman, who is at all "handy" with her needles, can scarcely fail to be well dressed now, however small her income may be; and this week I am going to talk to the girls who have to count each dollar, yes, and often earn that same dollar before they spend it.

In the first place a bodice and skirt made of the same piece of goods, or even of the same material, is the exception now, instead of the rule, and the girl who possesses a skirt of either navy blue, or black storm serge, made with one of the new deep belts can vary it almost endlessly by wearing different colored blouses with it, and if she is lucky enough to have enough material left over to make an Eton jacket to match the skirt she is rich indeed, and provided against almost all emergencies. For best, she can have a blouse of wash silk, either cream color, or some of the new sprigged, or dotted silks which can be purchased now for 40 to 45 cents a yard, and on bargain days even cheaper, three yards will be ample for a blouse even with full sleeve puffs and wrinkled collar and belt, if needed, but the deep belt on the skirt does away with the necessity for a belt of the blouse material, which has the objection of soiling soon, and being very difficult to wash. If the Eton jacket is to be worn much with the blouse, frills over the shoulders of the latter, are out of the question, as they should only get crushed and be terribly in the way, but they can be added if necessary, and the blouse only worn without the jacket.

Victoria lawn of good, but light quality can be got for sixteen cents a yard, and with lace and muslin, handkerchiefs are very cheap now, so they may be lavishly trimmed with either at very slight expense, but if this is beyond the purse of the girl I am writing for; always supposing she is clever with her needle, she can trim her blouse much more fashionably and delicately with hemstitched ruffles of itself; no trimming is prettier or more popular than hemstitching, but it is rather slow and particular work. I described such a blouse in the spring and it was a very pretty little garment indeed trimmed with one deep frill around the neck reaching just over the shoulders, another finishing the sleeves, and the third falling in a frill from the belt.

For cooler days a blouse of challie in black ground with pink, lavender, or yellow spray is useful and the list may be concluded with one or two pretty pink, or blue shirting blouses, or shirt waists. Thus one girl is provided for almost all seasons except winter, and yet she has practically but one dress. For a best dress nothing can be prettier than a challie; if our girl can only afford an economical dress it had better be black, with either lavender, pale yellow, or pale pink flowers, and then, at very little extra expense she can have two boxes for it, one of itself and the other of cream challie, with flowers of the same color as those in the skirt and sleeve puffs, shoulder frills, or bertha of china silk in the same shade. This will smarten up the dark skirt wonderfully, and be as good as two costumes. But if she can afford to indulge in a pretty gown, once in a while, without thinking too much of utility, I would advise her to gratify her taste by getting one of the lovely cream and heliotrope, cream and yellow, or cream and brown challies, which make up so prettily with silk to match the prevailing tint of the flowers with which they are strewn.

It must be remembered that such a dress if taken care of during the summer and not hacked too unmercifully, will come in very usefully during the winter as a sort of second best evening dress, for quiet parties as it is far from being an extravagant venture, even for a poor girl.

Two pretty but cheap prints at twelve cents a yard, made one with a round, and the other with a square or pointed yoke, finished with a deep frill which narrows in front and back, but is very deep on the shoulders; full skirts with from one, to three flounces, and puffed sleeves; may complete a wardrobe of which no girl need be ashamed as far as dresses are concerned.

Now as to the modelling or "making over" of last year's dresses, for gray and pink trim the skirt with three folds, placed four or five inches apart. Make deep puffs for the sleeves, and a frill to imitate a round yoke; instead of wearing the basque over the skirt, reverse it, and place the frill over the basque; make a wrinkled collar, and belt of the shot material, and the dress will be in the height of the fashion.

Any scraps of lace which may be lying around, in a fair state of preservation, will be most useful either to brighten up a dull worn dress, or to make into a dainty bonnet, with the addition of a few flowers, and a now and loop or two of ribbon, the lace should be carefully wired, the two upper edges tacked together to form a sort of double-edged insertion, and arranged in standing loops and ends worn thus, it is very fashionable, and seen on the best imported hats and bonnets.

It will be difficult to get accustomed to belts an inch wide, after wearing them nearly up to our waists for so long, but the belts on the newest silk bodices are not more than that width, and many of them are oddly finished with three rows of white "baby ribbon" stitched on. They are lined with very stiff canvas, and fasten in the back with a stiff looking double bow.

HOME MADE WINES.—St. John.—Thank you very much for your excellent budget of recipes. It was so good of you to take all that trouble, and you are the only person who has yet responded to my request for home recipes. I have no scruples whatever about the home made wines, and would be glad to have the recipes. ASTRA.

Silk from Trees. One of the greatest curiosities of the Panama isthmus is the vegetable silk tree. It is a plant that grows from fifteen to twenty feet high, and in appearance does not differ greatly from other trees, but the inner bark is a perfect silky fibre—long, smooth and strong. The natives separate it by some method best known to themselves, the process resembling that of beating flax. When once it is separated and spun into threads, it can be woven into a fabric so closely resembling silk that it is difficult for anyone not familiar with it to distinguish between the two. This species of silk goods is in high favour on the isthmus, and a Colombian belle is never happier than when she is arrayed in a gaily-coloured dress made from the trees in her father's yard.

PATRON:

LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR OF NEW BRUNSWICK.

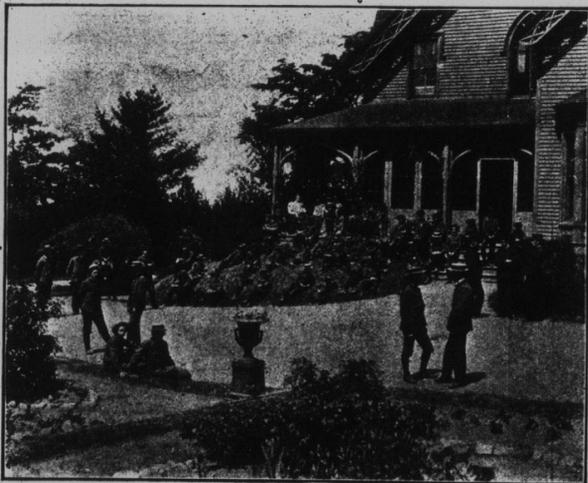

SOUTH RESIDENCE (SIDE VIEW).

The South residence is a very large, well built house containing the Dining room (610 sq. ft.), Principal's Study, Reception, Matrons' and Store rooms, two large Kitchens, Bath room and eight Bedrooms, besides Servants' apartments. It is heated by a furnace from the basement. Eighteen of the older boys occupy this house under the immediate charge of the Principal.

THE DRILL COMPANY.

Much importance is attached to the drill exercise, largely because it inculcates prompt and unquestioning obedience to orders, and also because of its great value in "setting up" and training a lad to walk properly. Every boy is required to parade for one hour twice a week and to learn the exercises and movements laid down in the Field book for company drill. Each boy is armed with a very good imitation rifle and belt (specially imported from England for his purpose) while the officers carry swords. The company of '92-93 has obtained a great deal of credit for precision and discipline.

GENERAL PARADE.

DRESS. All the boys of the Rothesay School are required to adopt the College dress as soon as possible after their entrance.

This consists of Norfolk jacket with short pants in dark Oxford grey with black military braiding around the turn down collar and cuffs.

The overcoat is a short navy blue refer and the cap a plain scotch glengarry or straw in summer.

This uniform dress has been found to be a decided benefit, first because its great durability and the special adaptation of its color to a school boy's hard wear, and secondly its distinctive and quiet gentlemanly appearance, is far superior to a diversity of fashion and color. Then again it aids very much in Drill and other purposes of discipline, enabling a master at a glance to see whether proper attention is being paid to neatness.

The Rothesay Collegiate School.

THE ROTHESAY COLLEGIATE SCHOOL was established in the year of the Great Fire of St. John under the supervision of the Rev. Canon Partridge, D. D., then rector of Rothesay, and its "old boys," many of them having passed through the Universities and Royal Military College, are now to be found in widely different parts of the world. It was the intention of the founder that this should become the Diocesan Church School for Boys in the Diocese of Fredericton, and in this view he was supported by the late Metropolitan who became its patron and visitor and retained that office up to the time of his death. It was not until September, 1892, however, that the increasing necessity for a Resident Church School for Boys in this Province, made it desirable to reorganize the R. C. S. upon the new basis, and the wonderful progress it has made since that time has amply justified the departure from the old lines. At the close of June '92 there were 32 boys on the roll, and at the end of this year just closed the roll stood, Residents, 34, Half-residents 5, and 15 day boys. Total 54. The Rector, the Rev. G. E. Lloyd, retains the personal control over every detail of the school life and is assisted by an able staff of young men specially selected with a view to moral influence and discipline.

The aim of the Rothesay school is three fold. First, to impart such religious instruction as will develop a manly, practical, straightforward Christian character. Secondly, to afford an intellectual education equal in all respects to the best that can be obtained. Thirdly, to give such thorough physical training as will fit a boy to enter upon life possessing the first requisite—a sound body.

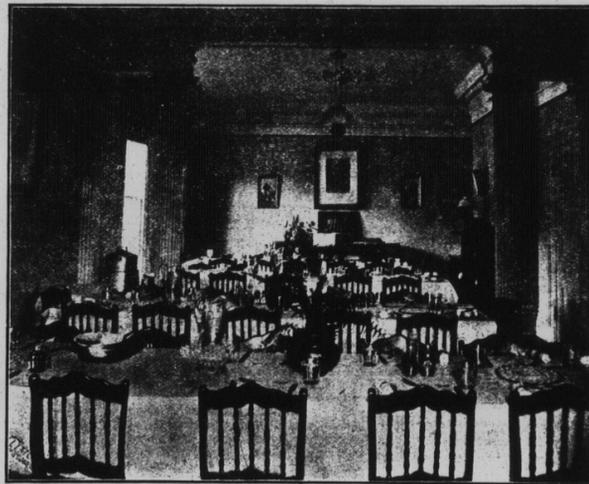

The Place.

Few places are better adapted to the needs of a resident church school for boys than Rothesay. Situated about nine miles from the city of St. John, upon a hill overlooking a magnificent stretch of the Kennebecasis river (which at this point is more than a mile wide) it possesses advantages not to be surpassed in the Maritime Provinces. It has a grand climate, scenery remarkable for its beauty and the whole place is thoroughly healthy. The hill upon which the buildings stand is composed of a gravel formation and is always per-

NORTH RESIDENCE (FRONT VIEW).

The North residence is exactly the same in measurements and style as the South residence, having been built from the same plan. It is separated from the South house by a lawn tennis court about 40 yards wide and is under the charge of the Rev. T. B. Smith, B. A., the Vice Principal. It is reserved entirely for the younger lads and has room for 22 boys, with their masters and the assistant matron.

THE DINING ROOM.

The general Dining room is a spacious apartment in the South house of some 610 square feet, and is handsomely finished from floor to ceiling. A liberal diet is provided and the tables are laid as far as possible like a boy's own home. All the members of the staff from the Principal downward dine at the head and foot of their respective tables and partake of precisely the same food as the boys. Any ungentlemanly bearing is thus prevented, and both quantity and quality of food, properly prepared is thereby ensured. The engraving shows the ordinary four "form" tables with seating for fifty boys.

THE CRICKET AND FOOTBALL TEAMS.

From the first Cricket and Foot-ball have been the standard games of the school, to the exclusion of baseball, and every effort is made to encourage a skilful knowledge of both games.

For Cricket the school possesses two good teams which during the last year have won a good deal of credit for their all round good play. They are dressed entirely in a dark navy blue suit and present a very neat appearance in the field. It is strongly recommended that every boy should have a good cane handed bat as a part of his belongings. In foot-ball the record has been even better, the R. C. S. team having won every match played.

SOUTH GARDENS.

BEDROOMS. There are five bed rooms in each residence set apart for the boys, and each has two windows and commands a fine view.

They are high with plenty of sunshine, and are neatly finished with paint and paper. Every boy is provided with a six foot wire woven bedstead with hair-mattress and feather pillows and his own chair. Each boy has his own bureau containing three large drawers covered with white oil cloth upon which is placed a full set of washing china and the looking glass.

The floors are neatly painted but every boy is expected to bring his own rug to place beside his bed. Each boy is responsible for his quarter of the room and may hang upon the walls whatever framed pictures he may possess.

NORTH DRIVE.

SKATING. By permission of John Taylor, Esq., the school lads have the use of a large overflow from the stream for skating. This alone is used till the ice has attained a thickness of at least three or four inches when the whole stream is used. It is sheltered from the wind and provides many an hour of healthy exercise both to Masters and Pupils during the winter months. Last winter a novel feature was the "drill" with skates upon an immense sheet of ice on the Kennebecasis witnessed by a large number of friends.

SOUTH WALK.

WALKING. Though no lad is permitted to leave the bounds without permission they have unlimited range over a beautiful area of maple and beech woods, through most of which a fine trout stream makes its way over many rapids and falls to join the Kennebecasis river.

CRICKET FIELD.

THE CRICKET AND FOOTBALL. Up to the present time a large field about 500 yards from the school comprising some four acres of land has been set apart for this purpose but on account of the fine view the ground is being changed to the front field. A gentleman writing to a Toronto paper recently said that the view from this ground rivalled many of the far famed views of Scotland and the Continent.

A large space, some 140 yards long and 70 yards wide, is now being laid out for a running track and within this enclosure the cricket field is being turfed down for use next season.

fectly drained and dry. The society is of the very best, being made up almost without exception of the professional and business men of St. John with their families and employes. There are no stores or attractions of any kind where a lad could contract doubtful habits, and (while it is far enough from the City to prevent the possibility of anything of that kind) it is near enough to be easily and quickly reached in case of necessity or permission being granted.

The Buildings.

The College residences stand within fifteen minutes' walk of Robtessay station on the main line of the Intercolonial Railway. Some sixteen trains a day pass and re-pass between Halifax and St. John, and the colors (royal blue and white) may be seen floating from its fifty foot flag staff as the train passes by.

There are three buildings, a school room and two large residences with 48x82 ft. frontage, standing within 40 yards of each other and facing south and west. The plan is that now being very generally adopted by many of the best English schools, known as the house system, by which all the buildings are kept separate and distinct. Each house has its two masters, a matron, some twenty boys and two or three servants. This method aims to give the nearest approach to the home circle and family life, with the individual supervision of each boy's habits and character, and effectually does away with the objections raised to the "dormitory" or "barrack" system in resident schools. All the older boys are in one house and the younger in the other.

Religious Instruction.

The religious instruction is under the personal care of the rector and is that according to the Church of England. Morning prayers are always taken from the shortened forms of the Prayer Book, whilst in the evening it takes the form of a family devotion. Every effort is made to make the plain common truths of Christianity and the duty to God and man a living reality, so that our boys may become men whose lives shall be beyond reproach for integrity and uprightness.

Literary.

Thorough instruction is given in all the branches of a sound English education upon which to build, in Classics, Mathematics and Modern Languages. Boys are prepared for the Matriculation examinations of any University, and for entrance into the professions of Theology, Medicine and Law. A large amount of success in this way has been won by the school in the past, and last year the "First" place in the Province was taken by one of the Robtessay boys for entrance to the University of New Brunswick. There is also the Commercial department for those who wish to enter business life without the University course.

Special care is taken to have regular supervision of the preparation of lessons during the evening hours of private study, a master always conducting this work.

Recreation.

During the time set apart for play no boy is allowed to go to his room (except from sickness) and every effort is made to prevent "idleness." Ample time is allowed for exercise, but it is so broken up that very little trouble has been given on this score, one form of sport following another with renewed zest as the seasons change.

Medical Instruction.

The year just completed has been remarkably free from sickness until the last two weeks before Closing Day when one of the St. John boys bringing out the mumps sent 9 of our boys down on the sick list. The medical officer twice every week makes a visit for examination and every boy has temperature, pulse, and tongue, together with a remark about the general state of his health entered each week upon the health register.

Reopening For 1893-4.

The school will reopen for the next year's work on Saturday, September 2nd, and every boy is expected to be in his place by Tea time of that day. Parents wishing to have their boys entered for the coming year should apply to the Rev. Principal at once, giving all the particulars as to age, character, educational standing, and probable length of course desired.

There will probably be twelve vacancies this year. Of these, ten are graduating with credit to themselves, seven go into business and three into the University of New Brunswick. One returns to Scotland and one has been withdrawn. For those places six applications have already been sent in and the remainder will probably be taken up shortly, but no boy will be either admitted or retained whose moral conduct does not come up to the standard. The Principal reserves to himself the right to remove at once, without warning, any boy who does not satisfy him in this respect. The moral tone of the whole school will always be placed before an individual boy.

In conclusion, the Institution has every reason to be satisfied with the results of last year and with the interest manifested in its welfare by its many warm friends and supporters.

NORTH GARDENS.

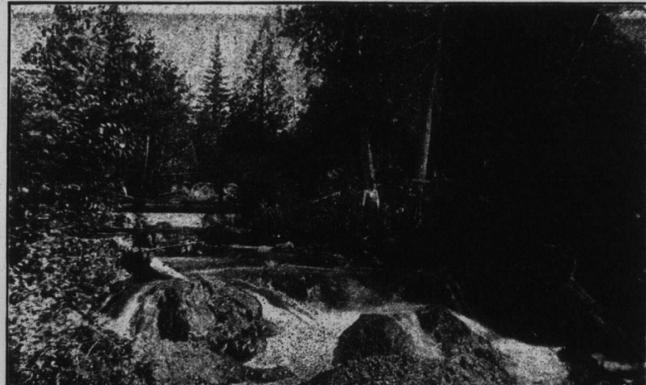

THE GROUNDS. The Robtessay School estate covers an area of some 200 acres, all told, of which about 120 is in fine hardwood and stream, very suitable for school range grounds. On the south and west fronts of both residences the ground is laid out in large garden beds and filled with shrubs and flowers.

The walks are laid down in blue gravel and everything is done to preserve its distinct homelike appearance. There are plenty of trees to act as wind guards in winter, but they appear to take away from the actual size of the houses in the views. The photo-gravure shows the garden in front of the north residence giving at the same time a distance view of the Juniors' tennis court.

SOUTH DRIVE.

SWIMMING. During the months of June and September, the Kennebecasis River is as a rule quite warm enough during the afternoon for swimming, and every boy (unless prohibited by his parents) is encouraged to learn to swim as soon as possible. There is a fine sandy shore extending far out, before the 5 feet depth is reached. No lad is permitted to enter the waters at any time than at the swimming time (3.30 p. m.) and then every precaution by the presence of a Master, is taken to ensure perfect safety. This year there was hardly a boy who could not swim before he went home.

THE RAPIDS.

FISHING. While it is not expected that the value of the stream as a fishing ground will long survive the combined attacks of 40 boys, its pretty curves and falls will always be a strong attraction in their leisure hours, and though there is plenty of water in the stream, in no case, within the boundary of the school property, is it deep enough to cause any fear of accident.

TENNIS COURT.

TENNIS. Until the year '92 hardly any opportunity presented itself for the institution of a Tennis Club among the boys owing to the lack of a suitable ground. As will be seen by the photo engraving, the school now possesses a very good court between the North and South residences. It is surrounded on all sides by a pretty cedar hedge, with larger maple and other trees, to shade from the western sun, and with its covered stand it makes a very pretty nook seldom placed at the disposal of school boys.

HIS NERVE SAVED HIM.

At a quarter to four on the afternoon of March 6, 1887, the paying cashier of the Bank in the city of London, cashed a check for £2,000 drawn by the highly respected firm of Floyd, Gow & Co. of Fenchurch street, merchants. It was presented by the manager of the firm. There were twenty men in line behind, and the transaction did not occupy two minutes. Floyd, Gow & Co. could have had £10,000 as well as £2,000 had they wished.

At five minutes to four the manager of Floyd, Gow & Co. handed in his book and check amounting to £1,000. The paying cashier looked up as he heard his voice. He changed color; but he didn't cross the room and ask Floyd, Gow's manager if he had been there ten minutes before. He called someone to take his place, and disappeared into the secretary's room, and within twelve minutes the police were at work on the case.

The check presented at a quarter to four was a forgery, and the man who presented it some "dummy," who had made himself up like Mr. Smith, of Floyd & Co.'s. This was not a difficult task. The counterfeit man was the same height as the original and about the same make. Smith had not spoken a hundred words to the cashier during the five years his firm had dealt with the bank. He was a man to waste time in idle gossip. But he was well known by sight to every official in the bank. He always wore a blue serge office coat whatever the weather. He always wore a silk top hat, and it invariably worked its way to the back of his head before he had worn three minutes. He never saw him at the bank without his gold-rimmed eye-glasses and his tightly-rolled umbrella. Smith had a friendly nod for the patrons he knew in a business way, but he seldom spoke a single word to any one.

The paying cashier had been done with his eyes wide open. It was his first offence, but that only made it worse in his own eyes. However, he moved so quickly that there seemed every chance of the thing being caught. Officers were sent to every railway terminus; they searched the hotels and every likely place for a man to try and change his clothes. If the fellow had not some safe hiding place selected in advance, the chances were more than ten to one against his making an escape.

In room No. 25 of Cremorne's Private and Commercial Hotel, which I will admit was not a first-class establishment, but still good enough for a traveller earning £4 a week, I read most of the particulars given you above in the evening paper. The officials had done their best to keep the whole affair dark until some clue was gained, but the reporters had been too much for them. This anxiety on the part of the press to publish the latest details often facilitates the escape of criminals, who can thus learn many little facts they are glad to make use of, and which enable them to make counter-moves for their own safety.

I had come in from my round of calls utterly tired out, and, reaching my room, I pulled off my boots, lighted a pipe, sat down with my feet on the bed, and this bank business was the first thing which caught my eye as I glanced over the paper. I had just finished the article when the night porter came up.

"Heard about the bank swindle?" he asked, as he entered my room without the preliminary trouble of tapping.

"Just read it."

"Cool chap, wasn't he? And I say, there are a couple of detectives downstairs now. They say they've shadowed him here, and they're going to search the whole place. They are on the floor below now, and will want to come in here for a minute."

He had hardly finished speaking when the men appeared. I was a head shorter than Floyd's manager. I was thin while he was stout, and I was young while he was middle aged. But those old sleuth hounds came in on tiptoe, looked at me out of the corners of their eyes and sat down on the edge of my two chairs to question me, the bigger of the two taking the precaution to place his seat between me and the door. It was fully a quarter of an hour before they had finished, and then they seemed to take it as a personal injury that I hadn't committed the crime. Queer fellows those detectives! Since then I have felt conscious stricken over not doing something which would send me to prison for their glory.

Before my visitors left, one of them suggested with a wink to his comrade that I might as well be taken along on general principles, as there was no telling what the bank got the best of before? They have no mercy. Last year over twenty banks closed their doors in the face of depositors. Every failure was brought about by some kind of fraud. And don't flatter yourself that you owe a duty to the public. The public would let you starve or freeze and not move a finger. You won't get any thanks, whatever you do for them. The public will deny that it owes you anything. The public would rob you of your last shilling. You owe a duty to yourself. It is to take a change of air. And now's your chance. Preserve the present state of your health; that's my advice, and very good advice, too."

"All of which means," I interposed, "that you will shoot me if I give the alarm."

"Who are you?" I gasped, faintly, taking no notice of his offer.

"Well, that's a fair question," he replied. "I suppose you've got a right to ask. For the last three hours, up to a minute ago, you was the man under the bed, and now I'm the man on the bed, and, sitting the action to the word, he laid himself out to full length."

He was a cool hand. I knew human nature well enough to know he had plenty of nerve behind his cheek. It wasn't all put on. As he lay there I noticed a revolver in his hand. Then I began to understand. The evening paper had a portrait of Smith, and I saw this was his double. It dawned on me all of a sudden that he was the identical chap.

"You were under the bed when I came in?" I queried, as we sat looking at each other, and I was wondering how to ring the bell.

"Exactly," he replied.

"And you heard what the porter said, and the detectives?"

"Every word."

"And to come to the point, you're the man they want?"

"I am."

"How the dickens did you get here?"

"I didn't choose the abode for its comfort," he said, "nor for its company. I had other plans in fact. But they miscarried. A pal of mine lost his nerve at the critical moment and left me in the lurch. I dodged into this hotel in search of a temporary asylum, and it looks as if I'd found a lunatic asylum. Did you ever see £2,000 in one place? It's a refreshing sight. See here?" His impudence was maddening, but I dared not move. He watched me with his piercing eyes, and though he was toying with his revolver carelessly enough, I saw he had his finger on the trigger all the time. He bent over from the bed and picked up a bundle of notes from the floor.

"This means a visit to the tailors, quail on toast with champagne, a long trip to America or the continent, and he fondly parted the money. 'So they've got an account in the papers have they?' I'd like to read it. Thanks."

He skimmed through the article with evident enjoyment, now and then chuckling to himself. Then he said:

"Pretty close shave that."

"I'm sorry for the cashier, but I suppose he will wriggle out of the responsibility somehow. Excuse my asking the question, but what do you do for a living?"

"I'm a traveller in calicoes."

"Married?"

"No."

"Ever been abroad?"

"No."

"Look here, old chappie," he went on, with easy familiarity, as he stretched himself on the bed, "you've given me shelter, and I'll do you a turn. Hand in your resignation and come with me. It will do you good and open your eyes. This little pile will do us first-class for a year."

His impudence disgusted me. I was gradually recovering from the shock his appearance had given me.

"I'll see you hanged first, you cheeky villain." I shouted. I'm not making touts with bank thieves and jail-birds. Your trip will end in prison, if it doesn't start there."

"Two peppery, altogether to peppery, for the head traveller to a respectable firm," he quietly observed. "And do you think I'll be arrested, as you know so much about it?"

"Certainly. I'm going to take you downstairs and hand you over to the police."

"That's a lie," he said, as he swung his feet off the bed and stood up. "I don't blame you for refusing a trip to America, but please don't make an idiot of yourself in other ways."

"How do you mean?" I asked, also getting up and trying to keep my head.

"Just look at things straight, and you'll see. I'm no chicken. Having played for a stake and won it, I am not likely to let myself be bullied by a kid like you. I'm willing to put my liberty against your life if it comes to that, although I hope it won't. I'm armed, as you see. You're not, so keep your back hair on. Even without a cocked pistol for you, being the larger of the two."

"You cold-blooded scoundrel," I muttered, as I realized his power, and the utter hopelessness of the whole situation.

"No, don't call names. It's low," he said, pleasantly. "Let's consider what is your path of duty. I've got the best of the bank. And how many people have you bank got the best of before? They have no mercy. Last year over twenty banks closed their doors in the face of depositors. Every failure was brought about by some kind of fraud. And don't flatter yourself that you owe a duty to the public. The public would let you starve or freeze and not move a finger. You won't get any thanks, whatever you do for them. The public will deny that it owes you anything. The public would rob you of your last shilling. You owe a duty to yourself. It is to take a change of air. And now's your chance. Preserve the present state of your health; that's my advice, and very good advice, too."

"All of which means," I interposed, "that you will shoot me if I give the alarm."

I handed over a much worn suit. "Rough a sight fit, but it will do," he said. "Here's £5 for it."

"I don't want your dirty money," I said savagely.

"Don't be faintly. It's silly. Now, then, to wrap up the money in a newspaper, and then I'm off. Look here, my boy, take this hundred; it will make up for any little inconveniences I have caused you."

"I'd start first."

"Oh, come now, you're too good for this world. What are you going to do when I leave the room?"

"Kick myself for an ass and then go to bed, more likely."

"Go to bed without the kicking part. You are a very sensible young man, you may take my word for it. If I'm arrested I'll say nothing about what happened here. Ta, ta."

He reached the doorway and then he turned.

"Here's a present for you," he sang out, and his revolver on the wall. "It's no use to me. I lost my cartridges getting here. Adieu," and he was gone.

I locked the door and sat down. After a quarter of an hour I slipped into bed. The next morning I awoke with a fearful headache. I went to my dressing-table, and found a note pinned to it. It was the £100 in ten pound notes.

Did the man get away? Yes. He walked down-stairs and out into the streets, and the detectives never got a clue of him after that night. He probably went straight to Liverpool street and took the train to some suburban district. About the money, I returned it to the bank by post, and that part of the business is still worrying the detectives. I could tell them a thing or two, but I won't.

HEART FAILURE, FAINTNESS, ACUTE DYSPESIA.

Complete Nervous Prostration, with HAWKER'S NERVE & STOMACH TONIC. A LADY'S EXPERIENCE. Mr. Wm. Thompson of Musquash, N. B., says: "For 3 years past my wife has suffered with Acute Dyspepsia accompanied with complete nervous prostration and a smothering sensation about the throat which frequently produced an attack of faintness. She became weak and nervous, lost all energy, and had a constant feeling of dizziness. She suffered with intense pain in the stomach after eating, which was usually followed by the smothering sensation about the throat and fainting spells. She tried a great many remedies and was treated by the doctors for some time, but obtained no relief. She became so discouraged that she gave up all hope of ever getting better, when our neighbor suggested that she try HAWKER'S NERVE AND STOMACH TONIC AND LIVER PILLS. She secured some of these pills, and after taking a few she obtained immediate relief from the distressing symptoms, and has continued to improve ever since until today she is as well as ever, and can enjoy her food without fear of suffering. I cannot speak too highly of these valuable medicines which have restored my wife to health and strength and saved much suffering and expense."

Dr. Henry M. Spike, Rector of Musquash, N. B., says: "I am personally acquainted with Mr. Thompson's case, and am generally satisfied that the medicine which I recommended to her produced such remarkable results."

Sold by all druggists and general dealers. TONIC 50 cts.; PILLS 25 cts. Manufactured by the HAWKER MEDICINE CO., Ltd. St. John, N. B.

F. G. BLACKLOCK, of Cape Spencer light station, tried all kinds of remedies for rheumatism, but did not find almost any relief, and at last got Dr. Hanning's German Remedy. Before he had finished a bottle he could walk without a cane. This marvelous painkiller is a positive cure for Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sprains, Strains, Bruises, Colic, Chills, Cramps and all pains and aches, either internal or external. An invaluable household remedy. Sold everywhere. Price 50 cents.

Dr. J. S. NICKERSON, an Officer of the International S. S. Co., says: "For years I have suffered with Catarrh, and spent hundreds of dollars on Doctors and Patent Medicines until my case was pronounced incurable. I was finally cured by Hawker's Catarrh Remedy, which I consider to be worth its weight in gold. I would not be without it at any price."
