CANCER ON THE LIP

AYER'S

"I consulted doctors who prescribed for me, but to no purpose. I suffered in agony seven long years. Finally, I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. In a week or two I noticed a decided improvement. I continued by this until I felt better. I am now as well as the day I began. I am after taking the Sarsaparilla, and I am the last trace of the cancer disappeared."

SAYS:

"I have been for many years very much troubled with indigestion and dyspepsia, have tried a great many different kinds of patent medicines, and have been treated by a number of physicians and found no benefit from them.
I was recommended to try AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. I obtained a bottle, and I must say I have found very great relief, and have since taken two more bottles and now feel that I am entirely free from indigestion and would strongly recommend all my fellow sufferers

"Where is the landlady? I asked.
"He is out," answered the small man,
and he went on with his writing.

"Well, perhaps you can answer my question; I came to see Mr. Stevenson."

"The small man dropped his pen, arose, and, extending his hand, said:
"I am Mr. Stevenson."

"This was my introduction to this remarkable man."

Then Mr. Timmons told me how Mr.
Stevenson came to write his famous novel.

Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.

The novel was written on this island for the training of medicine. Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde lived in Honolulu, and you will perhaps meet him before you go. That novel was the offspring of a bitter dangerous war between Father Daniel and Rev. Dr. Hyde, D. D., who has charge of the mission school in this city for the training of medicine. The conflict between the priest and Dr.
Hyde waxed warm, and Mr. Stevenson espoused the cause of the Catholic priest.
He threw his whole soul into the conflict, and for a while it seemed as if he were likely to have a religious war. Dr.
Hyde, a fine, finely-formed, highly cultured gentleman, was, as the world was, and he was in the pulpit and through the press until the conflict became personally bitter.

"Mr. Stevenson had up to the time of this controversy, it seems, entertained a high regard for Dr. Hyde, but as the world was, he found him a dual nature. At times he thought the doctor the very perfection of a gentleman, a scholar, and a Christian; at others he seemed a very demon. This idea seemed to grow with his morbid fancy, and he conceived from it his wonderful novel."

I was anxious to meet Dr. Hyde, the man who so strangely inspired the wonderful novel, and when I did meet him I was impressed that he was more Jekyll than Hyde. He is a tall, finely-formed, highly cultured gentleman, and a scholarly appearance. He is secretary of the Social Science Club, a meeting of which I had the pleasure of attending, and at which place I met him.

This club, by the way, is composed of the most scholarly men on the island.
President Dole is a member, and attends the meetings regularly. In addition to myself there were other American guests present, the most prominent of whom were United States Minister Willis, and the captain of the warship Bennington.

At this meeting Dr. Rodgers, Secretary of the Labor Bureau, read an able paper on the labor problem, which was thoroughly discussed and commented upon.

One cannot but realize the force of Americanism in the club. Chief Justice Judd, of the Supreme Court, and Professor Alexander, the historian, are members of the club and were born on the islands, yet they, with the others, argued the question from an American standpoint.

The meeting was at the residence of Dr. Hyde, and, although I studied him closely all evening, I discovered none of the "incarnate fiend," which Stevenson represents Mr. Hyde to be in his novel.

It was while living at Sans Souci that Robert Louis Stevenson conceived and brought out his wonderful book, and I decided to visit the famous resort. To reach Sans Souci I had only to take the Waikiki street car, go to the end of the line, and walk the rest of the way. The ride is a pleasant one, and well worth the time and ten cents it costs to make it. It was about two o'clock in the afternoon when I boarded the car driven by a native and went rolling along the street past the government grounds and buildings past pretty houses half hidden by graceful swaying palms, ferns, and the rich tropical foliage, past banana plantations and groves of tall cocoanuts, for long stretches with the sea beach on one side and a delightful grove on the other.

The manager of the famous resort showed me the room which had been occupied by Jules Verne and Robert Louis Stevenson, also the tables at which they wrote, and narrated some anecdotes about them. Their rooms fronted on the beach.
After we had returned to the hotel, I lunched, and was joined by Mr. Thomas E.
Evans, a gentleman who is stopping at Sans Souci. Mr. Evans, who is a Royalist of the most pronounced type, is a Canadian by birth. He was prominent in pushing the lottery scheme to which the missionaries objected so strongly.
Mr. Evans claims that he was not aware of a lottery on the islands than for thousands of dollars to go out of the country every year to lotteries in other countries. At the time of the overthrow of the Queen he was in the city of Chicago closing up a company of the lottery. The Chicago people were to pay the government five hundred thousand dollars a year for twenty-five years for the franchise. Of this sum one hundred thousand dollars was to be expended in scale to San Francisco, one hundred thousand dollars for the Oahu Railroad, twenty-five thousand for the encouragement of tourists travel, seventy-five thousand for improvement of roads and bridges, and one hundred and twenty-five thousand for the support of Royal Harbor. Mr. Evans did not state what was to be done with the other seventy-five thousand dollars, though it was probably to be used as pin money for the Queen. The royal-widow's visions of Mr.
Evans with other Royalists were all dispatched by the sudden revolt of the missionary element, and the subsequent overthrow of the Queen.

The Royalists are still very bitter against the Republic. They always refer to it contemptuously as the Provisional Government, and the adherents of it are style P. G. S. But they all have great respect for President Dole. I have met many of the circles to solemnize marriages in a drawing-room, by the bright light of many candles. The happy couples and their guests were seated at the table, and the bride and groom, the bridegroom, and the bridesmaids were present. At this last report, in houses where the traditions of the past are yet held in reverence, a curious old custom is observed. A new satin slipper, chivalrously supposed to be the bride's, is passed round, and used as a drinking vessel by the bridegroom's friends, who drink the bride's health in the days of olden times. The custom was during the first three months of her widowhood, and he very often does so. If her husband dies, he becomes the guardian of her children, and may compel her to return to his house. But in this strangely unadvanced country, "none of these privileges are retained by a married woman's mother."

All of our marriage rites of which we have ever heard, that described to us the other day by a lady who has passed many years of her life in Burma, certainly bears away the palm of consciousness and sweet simplicity. Here it would appear to be upon the dusky lady that the pleasing duties of courtship devolve. She sees a youth whom she deems calculated to make her happy, and forthwith offers him a stick of candy. If he accepts her proposal, he promptly takes the token of affection, and they are thereby made man and wife. There is no further ceremony, and no witnesses are necessary. In the act of eating alone this most primitive marriage rite consists—so we are assured! But, if on the contrary, the youth has no mind to enter the estate of matrimony with the proprietor of the proffered stick, he merely assures her—with a fine consideration for her feelings not always shown in more advanced countries—that he is not kind of candy is not in his taste; and with that the whole matter is at an end. She, presumably, goes consoled

HAWAII, THE "PEARL OF

Sans Souci and the Government Buildings, with Reminiscences of Jules Verne and Robert
Louis Stevenson.

The most celebrated hotel and bathing place in the islands is Sans Souci, which is near the famous Diamond Head. Sans Souci has had for its guests some of the most famous literary men of the age.
Mark Twain spent a good deal of his time while on the islands at this place.
Jules Verne and Robert Louis Stevenson were at their homes. The latter, in writing of this cool retreat, said:
"If any one desires such old-fashioned things as lovely scenery, quiet, pure air, clear sea water, good food, and heavenly sunsets hung out before his eyes every evening over the Pacific and the distant hills of Waianae, I recommend him cordially to the Sans Souci."

I found several gentlemen at Sans Souci who had very vivid recollections of Stevenson. He is described by all as a small man weighing, perhaps, less than one hundred pounds, and an inveterate cigarette smoker. It is barely possible that nicotine poison hastened the end of this strange, mysterious, gifted man.

Mr. Timmons, city editor of The Honolulu Star, said:
"I met Mr. Stevenson while he was here, and was very strangely impressed by him from the first. I learned that he was at Sans Souci, and went to call upon him. Reaching the quiet place, I crossed the lawn and entered the house proper.
One was in sight but a small ordinary-looking man, who sat at a table writing."

"Where is the landlady? I asked.
"He is out," answered the small man,
and he went on with his writing.

"The small man dropped his pen, arose, transporting a family from one land to the other. The average Chinaman remains in this country from three to seven years and then goes back to China, to spend an equal length of time there, and again return.

The next day in company with Mr.
Timmons I visited the government building proper. It is a large building, two stories in height, with lofty ceilings and a broad stairway. There is a large hall below, ornamented with handsome life-size portraits of Kamehameha I. and his wife, Kamehameha II, III, and IV, and their wives, and Kamehameha V. These comprise all the great rulers of the nation. The upper hall is decorated with fine portraits in oil, most of them life-size. There is a fine portrait of Queen Victoria, the grand daughter of John Young, the mate of an American ship who was the trusted adviser and general of Kamehameha I. There is a full life-size portrait of King David Kalakaua, one of our Queen Liliuokalani, or Mrs.
Dole, as she is now called, and her deceased husband, John O. Dominis.

There is also a full life-size portrait in oil of Admiral Farragut, who was very much admired by King Kalakaua.
Legislative hall, committee rooms, and council chambers, with the various rooms of the cabinet, and a large building. The building before the revolution which overthrew monarchy, was known as the Palace, and is even yet so called by some, though monarchy is rapidly passing away, and the spunky little republic is every day becoming more firmly seated in the saddle.

The government buildings and all the departments are guarded by soldiers.
The standing army, composed exclusively of white men, numbers about two hundred regular soldiers. The national guard and the Citizens' Guard swell this army to about two thousand fighting men. They have two Gatling guns, two Hotchkiss rapid firing guns, two brass six pounders, and some iron field pieces.
Their force is sufficient to protect the island from internal troubles and from filibusters.

Their greatest dread is of Japan. The Japanese, since the late victory over China, have given utterance to some portentous threats against the Hawaiian islands for discriminating against them.

With a fleet of gunboats, a few heavy guns, and two or three war-ships the Hawaiians could easily defend the islands against the Japanese. Their harbors are in excellent condition for fortification. Pearl Harbor and the harbor of Honolulu have prominent, such as Koko Head and Diamond Head, which, if fortified, would be impregnable barriers against warships.

Different Forms of Marriage.

In nothing do natural traits vary more than in the habits attending marriage, and the social customs that are observed in honor of that rite. In Russia, it is the "proper thing" in fashionable circles to solemnize mar-

held in reverence, a curious old custom

is a very remarkable remedy, both for INTERNAL and EXTERNAL use, and wonderful in its quick action to relieve distress.

One lonely little worshipper, whose eyes were big and gray, whose brown hair came almost to her waist in two fluffy braids and whose dress reached just to her show tops, had to say the amens and make the responses for the great, rich parish of St. Christendom, one morning not very long ago.

ONE LITTLE WORSHIPPER.

BUT IT WAS SAID, 'OF SUCH IS THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN.'

It was shortly before 9.30 o'clock that Dr. Snively's congregation came tripping up Dearborn avenue with a little red prayer-book under its arm. And the congregation pushing open the big swung door, saw with some misgiving that the dozen or so worshippers who usually are present at the week-day morning service, had not yet arrived.

But she, nevertheless, tip-toed shyly down the aisle and slipped into her accustomed seat, which is just to the right of the chancel steps, and having knelt to say the little silent prayer for forgiveness and grace, she waited. Ten minutes passed, and fifteen minutes and twenty minutes, but still nobody came to morning prayer. But it never occurred to her that if the rest of the world was fit not to worship, she, too, might be justified in omitting the duty. So she looked steadily up at the great stained windows where the sun streamed through in radiant patches of purple and gold.

Just as she was beginning to think she must have made a mistake about the hour for service, Dr. Snively looked in from the vestry. When he spied the congregation he smiled very tenderly, and came down to the pew where his faithful parishioner sat. And she looked up somewhat abashed, and he said:— "Don't go away, Edith, for we will have service in a few minutes." Then he went back into the vestry and soon reappeared, clad in his vestments. He knelt at the altar an instant in prayer and then rising and turning toward the congregation, which also had risen, he spoke that exordium of morning service which begins:—"The Lord is in His holy temple; let all the earth keep silence before Him."

Then, as the ritual says it shall be, "the minister shall kneel and say the Lord's prayer, the people still kneeling and repeating it with him." After that "Dr. Snively said:—"O Lord, open Thou our lips, and the very small person in a very scared voice said:—"And our mouth shall snow forth Thy praise."

Then they said the anthem and the psalms appointed for the day, and of the psalms it happened that there was a petition in which David invoked the direct penalties on his enemies, and the words of it sounded very strange as the child uttered them, skipping the hard, long ones, and putting infinite sweetness into David's terrible maledictions.

The Gloria, the Te Deum, the lessons of the day, the Creed and all the other offices of the service followed, not a thing being skipped or omitted by the priest or the little girl who were worshipping all alone in the beauty of holiness. And when it came to the beautiful prayer of St. Chrysostom, the minister repeated with peculiar solemnity that part of the petition which says:—"And Thou who dost promise that when two or three are gathered together in Thy name Thou wilt grant our requests, fulfil now, O Lord, the desires and petitions of Thy servants as may be most expedient for them."

Then he blessed the kneeling child very gently and the congregation departing at peace with all the world, was soon on its way to Lincoln Park, where the skating was said to be very good.

They do practically make the same thing when they allow domestic animals to be exposed to cold blasts and feed heavily with grain to keep them warm. The grain is then burned just as truly as if it were put in a furnace. The only advantage of the grain is that it is consumed inside the animal, and the heat it furnishes is less subject to waste.
