I need no other priest

I need no human ear

On Him I cast my care :

Beads, relics, martyr's shrin-s ; Herdships 'neath which the spirits fainte,

I need no priestly mass,

My soul to anneal, my guilt to efface,

When this brief life expires : Christ died, my eternal life to win.

His blood has cleased me from all sin.

No purgatorial fires,

I need no other dress,

I urge no other claim,

No passport do I need teside.

Than his imputed righ cousness

In Him complete I am :

Heaven's portals at that word fly wide :

Bowels Versus Brains.

Yet still, sore burdened, pines : Christ's service yields my soul delight, Boy Hs yoke, His burden light. I need no other book To guide my steps to heaven, Than that on which I daily look. By God's own Spirit given : And this, when He illumes our eyes, Unto salvation makes us wise."

To Him, Him only I confess, Who only can absolve and bless I need no prayers to sain's,

Than one High Priest above ; His intercession ne'er has ceased Since first I knew His love ;

Through that my faith shall never fail,

Even when passing death's cark vale.

In which to pour my prayer ; My great High Priest is ever near, HALIFAX, N. S., WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1869.

The fervency and power of her prayers, during those meeticgs, will long be remembered by those who were present. Her last illness was ber death, and though up to a short time previous to her decease, she did not think that her sickness was unto death, yet, when asked what were her feelings in view of that event, she said "All is well, for Jesus sustains me." She exhorted all who came to see her that they should make their peace with God, saying "What would I do now, if it were not for this blessed salvation that God, through Christ affords me." in Bedeque. And many of the Ministers who have laboured upon that Circuit, will remember her as a true friend and sincere christian. Her husband, familiarly known as "Good old Natty Wright" and six of her children preceeded her in the crossing of the flood. Many of whom gave hope in their death. Susan Ashbury's Faith BY THE AUTHOR OF 'ANDY LUTTRELL.'

The class-meeting, was held at Sister Susan Ashbury's ; everybody loved to go there, for Susan was a real sister in the Lord ; there was nothing sham about her, and everybody knew it Sister Asbbury's parlor was very plain but her homely carpet seemed woven of threads of sunshine. The sweet lustre of cleanliness, and the beauty of order, as well as good taste and simplicity in the arrangement of things, made every body say 'O; how pleasant '-made everybody rest from care, and feel an unwoated cheerfulness, that came into that equare, low-ceiled room Sister Ashbury lived alone, but no one even thought of her as being lonely. She was ' Susan even to the minister, and Aunt Susan' to all the children in the neighbourhood. I wonder if I can set her face forth-that dear, lovely old face, that had meekly and tender'y smiled on the fifty-six years God had given her, every one of which she had made a blessing to somebody.

A pale face, banded over the low, smooth fore head with white hair that shone like silver. She had brought this angel like screnity, that clung to her, out of a great battle with effliction, that had left its marke upon the locks that were once black as the raven's wing. Her mouth seemed formed to say gentle things her eyes went to your soul for their sweetness, and a certain shadow that seemed to say ! I too have suffered.'

Seeing her in her sombre suit of gray, with the Quaker fold of her muslin peckbandkerchief, and the purity that clung to all her outer habiting, one would instinctively turn to her, for love, for help, for consolation. As I said before, the class-meeting was held at Sister Sugan Asbbury's. The leader a young man full of s-al, a cheery, healthy, hearty Christian, toking himself to task more often than be needed because of his propensity for merriment and julity, looked forward to class meeting night as a soul feast. The Lord spread his table there with the finest of the wheat, he often said, and steps, seeking to undo, with God's help, the sometimes filied him with more joy than he could wrong she has done. well hold.
