POETRY.

Alaska.

Six sleeps in a sleeper from Montreal,
And a moon or so from the end of the line,
And you stand at the foot of the great
"White Wall—"
That is white with the snows that fall,
And fall,
O'er the cedar dwarfed and the drooping pine
That grow at the feet of Alaska.

Old and wrinkled and cold and gray,
With her white pall pulled o'er her story breast;
Frowning and rigid and far-away,
She has ever stood, as she stands today,
In the desolate wastes of the wide
North-west—
Stands this lonely old woman, Alaska,
Unmolested for thousands of years,
Isolated, remote and alone;
Her hard face glacial with frozen tears,
While over her shoulders and in her ears
The winds of the North-Land wail and moan.

In the arms of old Mother Alaska—
A party of prospectors passed that way,
And they thought the old face had forgotten its frown,
And pausing, they lifted her white robe
away,
And found her treasure: "Ah, 'g't q'et
'g't q'et!"
Said the French-Canadian, kneeling down
At the feet of old Mother Alaska.

They told their story and men went wild,
And pawed their chateaus and joined the race.

The old croon jingled her gold and smiled,
And the gold-mad men of the world beguled
With a promise of fortune in that far place,
At the feet of old Mother Alaska.

But O, the rivers are wide and deep,
And the north wind breathes with a killing breath;
And over the mountains so rough and steep
The old dread reaper shall come and reap;
The zinc old reaper that men called
Death
Shall reap the white fields of Alaska.
—By W. H. Harris.

SELECT STORY.

When a Man's Single.

BY JAMES M. BARRIE.

CHAPTER XIII.—Continued.

It was the day of the Sunbury Regatta, but the party from the "Tawny Owl" twisted past the racers, leaving Dick, who wanted a newspaper, behind. When he rejoined them beyond the village, the boat was towing the post.

"Why," said Dick, in some astonishment to Rob, who was rowing now, "I did not know you could pull like that."

"I have been practising a little," answered Rob.

"When he came down here the first time," Mrs Meredith explained to Sir Clement, "he did not know how to hold an oar. I am afraid he is one of those men who like to be beat at everything."

"He certainly knows how to row," admitted the baronet, beginning to think that Rob was perhaps a dangerous man. Sir Clement was a manly gentleman, but his politics were a dangerous man, but his politics were a dangerous man, but his politics were a dangerous man.

"Being a sharp boy, Will noticed a cloud settle on Rob's face, and looking towards the clump of trees, he observed that Mary and the baronet were no longer there. In the next field two figures were disappearing, the taller, a man in a tennis-jacket, carrying a pall, and Sir Clement had been sent for water, and Mary had gone with him to show him the spring. Rob stared after them; and if Will could have got hold of Mary he would have shaken her for spoiling everything.

Mrs Meredith was meditating sending some one to the spring to show them the way back, when Sir Clement and Mary came into sight. They did not seem to be saying much, yet were so engrossed that they zigzagged towards the rest of the party like persons seeking their destination in a mist. Just as they reached the trees Mary looked up so softly at her companion that Rob turned away in an agony.

"It is a long way to the spring," were Mary's first words, as if she expected to be taken to task for their lengthened absence.

"So it seems," said Dick.

The baronet crossed with the pall to Mrs Meredith, and stopped half-way like one waking from a dream. Mrs Meredith held out her hand for the pall, and the baronet stammered with vexation. Simultaneously the whole party saw what was wrong, but Will only was so merciful as to put the discovery into words.

"Why," cried the boy, pausing to whistle in the middle of his sentence, "you have forgotten the water!"

It was true. The pall was empty. Sir Clement turned it upside down, and made a sorry of it.

"I am so sorry," he said to Mrs Meredith, trying to speak lightly, "I assure you I thought I had filled the pall at the spring. It is entirely my fault, for I told Miss Abinger I had done so."

Mary's face was turned from the others, so that they could not see how she took the incident. It gave them so much to think of that Will was the only one of the whole party who saw its ridiculous aspect.

"Put it down to mistakes," Miss Meredith, the baronet said to Nell; "I shall never allow myself to be placed in a position of trust again."

"Does that mean," asked Dick, "that you object to being sent back again to the spring?"

"Ah, I forgot," said Sir Clement. "You may depend on me this time."

He seized the pall once more, glad to get away by himself to some place where he could denounce his stupidity unheeded, but Mrs Meredith would not let him go. As for Mary, she was looking so haughty now that no one would have dared to mention the pall again.

During the meal Dick felt compelled to talk so much that he was unusually dull company for the remainder of the week. The others were only going now and again. Sir Clement sought in vain to gather from Mary's eyes

"That story will never die," Rob said, in a tone of conviction. "It will go round and round the world till the crack of doom. Our children's children will tell it to each other."

"Yes," said Dick, "and say it happened to a friend of theirs."

A field falls into the river above Sunbury in which there is a clump of trees of which many boating parties know. Under the shadow of these Mrs Meredith cast a table-cloth and pegged it down with salt-cellar.

"As we are rather in a hurry," she said to the gentleman, "I should prefer you not to help us."

Rob wandered to the river side with Will, who would have liked to know whether he could jump a gate without putting his hands on it; and the other men leaned against the trees, wondering a little, perhaps, why ladies enjoy in the summer time making chairs and tables of the ground.

Rob was recovering from his scare, and made friends with Mary's young brother. By particular request he soon began to realize the beneficial effects of the medicine; but my case was an obstinate one, and required the persistent use of the Compound for some months before I was able to move about. I am thankful to say I am so far recovered that I have commenced work again; and I am very hopeful that by continuing the use of the Compound a little longer, shall, please God, be restored to my wonted health and strength again. Surely you will prove an equal blessing to others similarly afflicted; and to such I say, "Give Paine's Celery Compound a trial. For what your medicine has done for me you have my most grateful thanks."

question from Mr Meredith, "I could get only a local paper. The woman seemed surprised at my thinking she would take in the 'Scoping Knite' or 'Wire,' and said, 'We've got a paper of our own.'"

"Read out the news to us, Richard," suggested Mrs Meredith. Dick hesitated.

"Here, Will," he said to his brother, "you got that squawk of yours specially to get the news from a boat to a punt ten yards distant. Angus is longing to pull us up the river unaided."

Will turned the paper round and roared.

"Here is a funny thing," he bawled out, "about a stick: 'A curious story, says a London correspondent, is going round the club to-day, about a walking-stick of a well-known member of Parliament, whose name I am not at liberty to mention. The story has not, so far as I am aware, yet appeared in print, and it conveys a lesson to all persons who carry walking-sticks with knobs for handles, which generate a peculiar disease in the palm of the hand. The member of Parliament referred to, with whom I am on intimate terms—'"

Rob looked at Dick, and they both groaned.

"My stick again," murmured Rob. "Read something else," cried Dick, shivering.

"Eh, what is wrong?" asked Mr Meredith.

"You must know," said Dick, "that the first time I met Angus he told me imprudently some foolish story about a stick that bred a disease in the owner's hand, owing to his pressing so heavily on the ball it had by way of a handle. I touched the story up a little, and made half a guinea out of it. Since that that note has been turning up in a new dress in the most unlikely places. First the London correspondents swooped down on it, and telegraphed it all over the country as something that had happened to well-known Cabinet Ministers. It appeared in the Paris 'Figaro' as a true story about Sir Gladstone, and soon afterwards it was across the Channel as a reminiscence of Thiers. Having done another tour of the provinces, it was taken to America by a lecturer, who exhibited the stick. Next it travelled the Continent, until it was sent home again by Paterfamilias Abroad, writing to the 'Times,' who said that the man who owned the stick was a well-known Alpine guide. Since then we have heard of it fitfully as doing well in Melbourne and Arkansas. It figured in the last volume, or rather two volumes, of autobiography published, and now, you see, it is going the round of the clubs again, preparatory to starting on another tour. I wish you had kept your stick to yourself, Angus."

that she had forgiven him for making the rest of the party couple him and her in their thoughts. Mrs Meredith would have liked to take her daughter aside and discuss the situation, and Nell was looking covertly at Rob, who, she thought, bore it bravely. Rob had lately learned carving from a hand-book, and was dissecting a fowl; murmuring to himself, "Cut from a to b along the line f g, taking care to sever the wing at the point k." Like all the others, he thought that Mary had promised to be the baronet's wife, and Nell's heart palpitated for him when she saw how gently he passed Sir Clement the mustard. Such a load lay on Rob that he felt suffocated. Nell noticed indignantly that Mary was not even "nice" to him. For the first time in her life, or at least for several weeks, Miss Meredith was wroth with Miss Abinger. Mary might have been on the rack, but she went so proudly eating bread and chicken. Relieved of his fears, Dick raged internally at Mary for treating Angus cruelly, and Nell, who had always dreaded lest things should not go as they had gone, sat sorrowfully because she had not been disappointed. They all knew how much they cared for Rob now, all except Mary of the stony heart.

Sir Clement began to tell some travellers' tales, omitting many things that were creditable to his bravery, and Rob found himself listening with a show of interest, wending a little at his own audacity in competing with such a candidate. By-and-by some members of the little party drifted away from the others, and an accident left Mary and Rob together. Mary was away from the others, and an accident left Mary and Rob together. Mary was away from the others, and an accident left Mary and Rob together. Mary was away from the others, and an accident left Mary and Rob together.

Mary's face was turned from the others, so that they could not see how she took the incident. It gave them so much to think of that Will was the only one of the whole party who saw its ridiculous aspect.

while on a tree-trunk like a woodpecker.

"Why?" he asked at last.

Mary shrugged her shoulders, but said nothing.

"You seemed exceedingly friendly," said Dick, "when you returned here together."

"I suppose," Mary said, bitterly, "that the proper thing in the circumstances would have been to wound his feelings unnecessarily as much as possible?"

"Forgive me, dear," Dick said kindly; "of course I misunderstood—but this will be a blow to our father."

Mary looked troubled.

"I could not marry him, you know, Dick," she faltered.

"Certainly not," Dick said, "if you don't care sufficiently for him; and yet he seems a man that a girl might care for."

"Oh, he is," Mary exclaimed. "He was so manly and kind that I wanted to be nice to him."

"You have evidently made up your mind, sister mine," Dick said, "to die a spinster."

"Yes," said Mary, with a white face.

Suddenly Dick took both her hands, and looked her in the face.

"Do you care for any other person, Mary?" he asked, sharply.

Mary shook her head, but she did not return her brother's gaze. Her hands were trembling. She tried to pull them from him, but he held her firmly until she looked at him. Then she drew up her head proudly. Her hands ceased to shake. She had become marble again.

Dick was not deceived. He dropped her hands, and leaned despondently against a tree.

"Angus—" he began.

"You must not," Mary cried; and she stopped abruptly.

"It is worse than I could have feared," Dick said.

"No, it is not," said Mary, quickly. "It is nothing. I don't know what you mean."

"It was my fault, bringing you together. I should have been more—"

"No, it was not. I met him before. Whom are you speaking about?"

"Think of our father, Mary."

"Oh, I have!"

"He is not like you. How could he dare—"

"Dick, don't."

Will bounced towards them with a hop, step and jump, and Mrs Meredith was signalling that she wanted both.

"Never speak of this again," Mary said in a low voice to Dick as they walked towards the others.

"I hope I shall never feel forced to do so," Dick replied.

"You will not," Mary said in her haste. "But, Dick," she added, anxiously, "surely the others did not think what you thought? It would be so unpleasant for Sir Clement."

"Well, I can't say," Dick answered. "At all events, he did not?"

"Who is he?"

"Dick, don't."

some equally central point. Two days work of a competent packer would have arranged the exhibit so that a few hours work would have unpacked it at Halifax. A far better exhibit could have been obtained in this way, with some little trouble to the secretary if it is true, but with almost no expense to the Association. The exhibit could have been disposed of in one or two ways either to some enterprising merchant at Halifax, or distributed among the children of the Halifax Poor Asylum, to whom a good apple would have been a treat indeed. All the $125 paid by the Exhibition Commission could have been paid in to the credit of the Association, and there would have been no need of an exhibition of that unselfish patriotism—so common to that small clique who control the F. G. A. when there is a little government money in sight. In conclusion I think as a member of the F. G. A. I am now entitled to ask Mr. Bigelow for a detailed account of that exhibit, the expenses of making it, the amount received for it when sold, and who received that amount.

Personal Mention.

(Contributions to this department will be gladly received.)

Mr. C. E. Starr returned home on Thursday last from Boston and vicinity where he has been spending a few weeks. Capt. Joseph Jones, who has been visiting his home in Wolfville for a few weeks, left on Monday morning for St. John, from which port he expects to go to sea again.

Messrs. Frank Graham, of Grand Pre, and T. M. Davidson, of Gaspereau, left on Wednesday for Klondike—the golden hub of the American continent. May they return soon with a generous supply of the yellow metal.

Miss Macdonald, of Pictou, who has been spending some weeks in Wolfville visiting her brother, Rev. P. M. Macdonald, returned to her home on Tuesday morning. During her visit in Wolfville she made many friends.

Mr. Harold d'Almeida, who recently returned from a visit to England, left on Monday for St. Andrews, N. B., where he takes charge of Sir William Van Horn's farm. Mrs. d'Almeida will remain in Wolfville for the present.

We understand that Prof. Caldwell has resigned his position at Acadia, and will leave in April for the Pacific coast. He has proved himself a good man in his department and will be greatly missed at the College and as a citizen as well.

Hokey.

On Monday the Victoria hockey team had decided to get a substitute for Ernest Johnson's place and had sent Annapolis word that their team would be there on Friday night, March 4th. But on Tuesday night Harry Johnson was taken down with measles. As Ernest Johnson still said he could not go, it was felt to be impossible to fill both places and with great reluctance word was sent to Annapolis that the game was off, but agreeing to pay for whatever advertising had already been done.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ACADIAN. DEAR SIR.—Very few men in Kings Co. will not be glad to read the complete and effectual answer to William Young's alias Ultra-violet, in the last issue of your paper. The "gen" of this young man in charging me like J. W. Bigelow and S. C. Parker with misappropriation of the funds of the Association, and posing as its best friend, would be colossal were it not so extremely ridiculous. Apparently Mr. Young's ambition is reaching out after public office and preferment, and he seems to work on the principle

A Successful Evangelist.

Rev. W. A. Dunnett, a Man Whose Good Work is Widely Known.

He Relates Events in His Career of General Interest—For Years He Suffered from Heart Trouble, and Frequently from Collapse—On One Occasion Five Doctors Were in Attendance—He Is Now Freed from His Old Enemy, and Enjoys the Blessing of Good Health.

REV. W. A. DUNNETT.

From the Smith's Falls Record. Throughout Canada, from the western boundary of Ontario to the Atlantic Ocean, there is no name more widely known in temperance and evangelistic work than that of the Rev. W. A. Dunnett. Mr. Dunnett has been the Grand Vice-Councillor of Ontario and Quebec in the Royal Templars, and so popular is he among the members of the order that in Montreal there is a Royal Templars council named "Dunnett Council" in his honor. For more than ten years Mr. Dunnett has been going from place to place pursuing his good work, sometimes assisting resident ministers, sometimes conducting a series of gospel temperance meetings independently, but always laboring for the good of his fellows. While in Smith's Falls a few months ago in connection with his work he dropped into the Record office for a little visit with the editor. During the conversation the Record ventured to remark that his duties entailed an enormous amount of hard work. To this Mr. Dunnett assented, but added that in his present physical condition he was equal to any amount of hard work. But it was not always so, he said, and then he gave the writer the following little personal history, with permission to make it public. He said that for the past thirteen years he had been greatly troubled with a pain in the region of his heart, from which he was unable to get any relief. At times it was a dull, heavy pain, at others sharp and severe. Often times it rendered him unfit for his engagements, and at all times it made it difficult to move. His trouble was always visible to the public and frequently when conducting service he would give out and doctors had to be called to attend him. This occurred to him in the Yonge street church, Toronto; the Baptist church, Woodstock, N. B.; the Methodist church, Carleton Place, Ont. On another occasion while preaching to an audience of 2,500 people in the Franklin Street Congregational church, at Manchester, N. H., five doctors had arrived and were in attendance before he regained consciousness. In all these cities and towns the newspapers freely mentioned his affliction at the time. Mr. Dunnett said he had consulted many physicians, though he said, to be entirely fair, he had never been any great length of time under treatment by any one doctor because of his itinerant mode of life. In the early part of the summer of 1896, while in Brockville assisting the pastor of the Wall street Methodist church in evangelistic services, he was speaking of his trouble to a friend who urged him to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and next day presented him with a dozen boxes. "I took the pills," said Mr. Dunnett, "and I declare to you I am a well man to-day. I used to worry a great deal over the pain about my heart, but that is all done now, and I feel like a new man." All this the reverend gentleman told in a simple conversational way, and when it was suggested that he let it be known, he rather demurred, because, as he put it, "I am almost afraid to say I am cured, and yet there is no man enjoying better health to-day than I do."

At that time, at Mr. Dunnett's request, his statement was only published locally, but now writing under date of Jan. 21st. from Fitchburg, Mass., where he has been conducting a very successful series of evangelistic meetings, he says: "I had had back from writing in regard to my health, not because I had forgotten, but because it seemed too good to be true that the old time pain had gone. I cannot say whether it will ever return, but I can certainly say it has not troubled me for months, and I am in better health than I have been for years. I have gained in flesh, hence in weight. I would prefer not to say anything about my appetite; like the poor, it is ever with me. Yes; I attribute my good health to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and you have my consent to use the fact."

"Why is a doctor never satisfied?" "He's used to see sickness." "Wonderful success, weren't he? When he told us about Balam and the sea, why, you could almost hear the sea talking!" "Small boy (out on errands) to Chemist—If you please, mister, you'll find the smell in the bottle, and I want two penn'orth on't." "Yes, there is plenty of room at the top, 'tis true," said the parental fish to its offspring, "but I'd advise you to stay down where you are!" "Miss Elders—Poor Sister Barker was a great worker, she will be sadly missed out of your church. Mrs. Kerryhawk—Yes; and she was so new!" "Frank—Some geonies in Birmingham has invented a nationless shirt." "Billy—Why, that's old. I've worn them ever since my wife learned to ride a bike." "Patsy O'Grady—Who was George Washington, grandpop?" "Grandpa O'Grady—Shure an' I dunno, Patsy—but the name sounds very much like he was a nagur!" "Spats—What makes infants look so wise? Secretaries—They are trying to make the women think they can understand the baby talk which the whole neighborhood springs on them." "Returning Suburbanite—You say the widow Sportfield has been made post mistress. What was her special aptitude for the position?" "Resident—Oh, knowledge of the local male, I presume."

"Do you read fiction?" "I sometimes look over the weather report." "I'm going to be one of them foot ball fellers some day," said Tommy, "so I can wear my hair so long that folk can't tell whether I forgot to wash my neck or not." "Tommy—Can we play at keeping store in here, mamma?" "Mamma (who has a headache)—Yes, but you must be very, very quiet." "Tommy—All right, we'll pretend we don't advertise." "She—How would you punctuate the following: "Bank of England notes of various values were blown along the street by the wind?" "He—I think I would make a dash after the notes." "Simpkins—Did you notice how sheepishly Wiggles looked when I asked him how the fare was at his last boarding place? Timkins—No wonder. They fed him on mutton chops three times a day as long as he was there." "Discursive Preacher—And now, brethren, having ended with the prophecies Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel and Daniel, where shall Hoses come in? Old Parishoner (rising)—"He can 'ave my place, parson, I'm gone' out." "A sailor was recently brought before a magistrate for beating his wife, when the magistrate attempted to reach his heart by asking him if he did not know that his wife was the "weaker vessel." "If she is she ought not to carry so much sail," replied Jack.

Cold Comfort.

The following anecdote recently unearthed from an old paper well illustrates the kind of comforters some well-meaning, but unthinking, people are.

It was in an English hospital. The chaplain was making his morning rounds when he met a porter. "How's Robinson this morning?" he asked. "Dead, sir," answered the porter. "Dead?" "Yes, sir."

"But why didn't you call me! I might have been able to comfort the poor fellow a little in his last moments." "He comforted in myself, sir." "Yes, indeed. And what did you say to comfort him?" "He said to him, 'Robinson, I'm pious, you know you're very sick!'" "Yes, says 'ee'."

"Robinson, I'll suppose you know you've been very wicked?" "Yes, says 'ee'."

"Robinson, I'll suppose you know you can't go to heaven?" "Yes, says 'ee'."

"Well, Robinson," says he, "you ought to be very thankful that there's a place provided for you fellows to go." "Yes, says 'ee'."

"And then 'ee' turned his face to the wall and died without even thanking us for comforting him!"

Home Dying Made Easy. Even a Child Can Dye With Diamond Dyes

Diamond Dyes Color Anything Any Color—Makes Old Cheeks, Gowns, Scarfs, and Suits Look Like New—How to Dress Well at Small Cost.

Diamond Dyes are a wonderful help to economical dressing. These simple home dyes will color anything any color, and they make cheeks, stockings, dresses, feathers, lace, curtains, etc., look like new.

Many of the Diamond Dyes are made from specially prepared dyestuffs, and in no other way can home dyeing be done so simply and satisfactorily.

They come in all colors, and the plain and explicit directions on the package make it easy for the most inexperienced to use them with success. Even a child can dye a sock, perfect color, if Diamond Dyes are used.

Do not risk your material with dye that claim to color both cotton and wool with the same dye, for it is impossible to get satisfactory results with dyes of that character. In Diamond Dyes there are special dyes for cotton and special dyes for wool, and they are all guaranteed to give satisfaction, if used according to directions.

Do You Know Your Letters? Any man who can read would probably resent such an imputation of ignorance as this question conveys. "Do you know your letters?" is what is asked the little tot when he or she first sets foot in school. But grown-up men and women may be pardoned for believing they are opening the truth when they answer "Yes" to the question. The chances are, however, they don't know their letters. Why has "A" its present shape? Stumped the first time! Every American ought to know that. A takes its shape from a picture of an eagle. It was once the picture of an Egyptian bird. D represented a man's hand. F was the horned viper. The two upper strokes are the remains of the horns, and the perpendicular line the body of the viper. H was once the emblem of a steve. We got our letters from the Phoenician alphabet, which in turn came from the hieroglyphic picture-writing of Egypt. So don't be so sure of your knowledge next time you are asked a simple question.

Lord Brougham's Industry. Lord Brougham was perhaps the most industrious man that ever lived. It is said that he once worked six continuous days—that is one hundred and fifty-four hours—without sleep; that he then nobly retired to his country seat, slept all Saturday night, all Sunday, all Monday night, and was awakened by his valet on Monday morning to resume the responsibilities of life and commence the work of the week.

Once when Sir Saml. Romilly was asked to write an essay on a subject of which he was master, he excused himself by saying he had no time to spare. "But," he added, "go with it to that fellow Brougham, he seems to have time for everything."

DEAR SIR,—I have been a great sufferer from rheumatism, and lately have been confined to my bed. Seeing your MIRAND'S LINIMENT advertised, I tried it and got immediate relief. I describe my reasons for having it to the wonderful power of your medicine. LEWIS S. BUTLER, Berlin, N.H.

Mr. Wiggles—I ordered two dinner sets sent home to-day. My wife—Two dinner sets? I why, Joshua Wiggles, are you crazy! What in the world do we want of two dinner sets? Mr. Wiggles—Why, didn't you tell me yesterday that you were going away next week to be gone a month? I want to have dinner enough in the house so that I won't have to wash any while you are away.

Many of the convicts in French prisons are paid for their labor, and earn about one shilling and five-pence a day. Half of this they are allowed to spend for extra food, postage, etc., and the rest is saved to be given to them on their discharge.

Miranda's Liniment Cures La Grippe. "George," said his mother, "why do you pay so much attention to that Middlefield girl? She has a face like an apple pie." "That's my favorite pie, mother," said George.

The roses of pleasure seldom last long enough to allow the lover of him who plucks them, and they are the only ones that do not retain their sweetness after they have lost their beauty.—Rider.

The meadow and most contemptible kind of praise is that which first speaks well of a man and then questions it with a "but."
