Twelve Causes of Neglect of Confession.

Acting upon the suggestion of a correspondent that a discussion of the causes of neglect of confession would result in a great deal of real good to Catholics, Rev. Ernest R. Hall, S. J., the learned editor of The Catholic Examiner, of Bombay, who has had long experience as a missionary, writes:

"The neglect of confession is of sufficiently frequent occurrence to make it a matter worthy of examination. We can think of twelve causes which may lead to neglect of confession. These are as follows: "1. Sometimes, in a few cases, it is the result of mere pique or sensitiveness. It happens that one day a particular priest has a headache or indisposition, or is worried out of his life for one reason or other—perhaps upset by some unusually irritating penitent, who would indulge in long rhapsodies about irrelevant matters, or would persist in whispering so low that it was impossible to hear a word. Under these vexatious circumstances the priest has spoken a little harshly or irritably, and the penitent has gone out in a huff, maliciously resolved never to go to confession again to that man at last; and perhaps never to go to confession again to any priest what-soever. Sometimes such a resolution is also made for reasons outside confession, as, for instance, the idea that Father S. and so neglects to salute me in the street, or to visit me at home, or has refused to receive my visit out of the usual time, or other. And so, by way of revenge, I resolve to have nothing to do with him, or perhaps to have nothing to do with priests at all. Of course this is utterly unreasonable. No one throws away a whole box of cigars because, forsooth, one of them is worm-eaten or burns hot and crooked. Still less will a man who finds his pipe stopped up one evening resolve to give up smoking for the rest of his life on that account. But the foregoing way of proceeding is no less absurd. Even if some unfortunate incident or some natural incompatibility of temperament repels me from having anything to do with one particular confessor, this does not prevent me from trying another with whom no such difficulty exists. Otherwise it comes to this: I am determined not to save my soul because Father S. and so is a nasty man. What could be more irrational?"

"2. Putting aside this foolish cause, it may be that some penitents, being of the sensitive nature, find confession very embarrassing, because of the imagined difficulty of the process and because they apprehend that they will be harassed or heckled by the confessor with awkward questions or demands difficult to meet. This difficulty often arises merely from the imagination, and chiefly from previous neglect of confession. Those who have been brought up well from childhood, and have practiced confession regularly ever since, find it quite simple, easy and natural. They regard it as a matter of course to tell the priest all that lies on their conscience; their training makes the preparation easy, and the completeness and clearness of their confession renders questions unnecessary. But if this early habit has been neglected, people feel awkward. They think it embarrassing to tell the secrets of their lives, it is some to examine their conscience, and difficult to express themselves. The only remedy is boldly to face the duty, make a careful examination of conscience, and then blurt everything out quite straight. When this has once been done, they will be surprised to find how easy the matter is and how ill-founded their apprehensions."

"3. Those who have absented themselves from confession for a long time often object that they cannot remember properly what they have done, or how often. They are not in the habit of watching themselves. They live by impulse, sometimes having their flag for a time and so on. How can they recall details? The answer is as follows: There is a difference between theory and practice in this matter. In theory the exact number, species and aggravating circumstances of each and every sin ought to be expressed. But this theoretical rule is tempered by another practical rule, viz., the penitent is bound to confess his sins only in such way as they present themselves to his own consciousness, and only with that standard of exactness which belongs to his temperament, character and habits. No man is bound to turn the examination of his conscience into a head-splitting drudgery. He is only bound to survey his sins with the same degree of care with which he surveys the ordinary affairs of his life. To take an instance: "How much and how often do you smoke?" You will tell me: "Well, I never kept a very exact record. I smoke a pipe regularly in moderation, perhaps three or four times a day. Besides this, I always have a box of cigars, and smoke one or two a day, off and on, as well as an occasional cigarette. I might guess that I got through a box of cigars a month and perhaps a pound of Reibolm mixture. Without watching myself and taking notes, I cannot tell you more accurately than that." Now, if the question were about a certain sin in confession. It would give the priest an approximate idea, and the best you can convey under the circumstances. No more is demanded than this ordinary case. And if, without gross negligence, some sins are forgotten or some mistakes are made, that practically does not matter. You have exercised a reasonable effort to give a true account, and that is all the Church requires. These remarks are, of course, not to be taken as an encouragement to negligence and slipshodness in confession, but only intended to remove from the mind all ideas that confession makes demands which are beyond the ordinary capacity of the penitent.

"4. As a help to method, the following lines can be suggested: Take the big sins first—those which are obvious and grave—impurity, theft, drunkenness, fighting or quarreling, hatred or wishing evil to others, slandering others, deliberate lying, gross neglect of family or business duties, inexcusable absence from Mass, omission of Easter duties, inexcusable neglect of fasting or abstinence. It is easy to settle at once what are the chief failings—perhaps only two or three out of the list. Then settle whether these sins were committed more or less daily, or weekly, or monthly, or only once or twice. Next rehearse the list very shortly—five readings. How often for each? Then go in and tell your tale. If you show signs of care in preparation, the priest will not bother you much, if at all. You can save all anxiety by simply saying, 'This is all I remember. Please ask me some questions. The priest will then put one or two—probably on those vices which you have not mentioned—and then you answer on the spur of the moment, just as you remember; and the whole trouble is over."

"5. There are some who have no difficulty in knowing a certain sin they have committed, but they have a painful dread of mentioning it. They go into the confessional with the full intention of confessing it, but somehow or other the words stick in their throat and they put it off to the last, and finally end in not mentioning it at all; and the absolution is over before they know where they are. This looks like a scrupulous confession, but it is not. A scrupulous confession occurs only when the penitent willfully intends not to tell the sin; whereas in this case he intends to tell it, but failed to do so out of sheer embarrassment and trepidation. Where this happens, there is one simple rule to follow. As soon as you realize that you have omitted that sin, interrupt the priest at once and say, 'Father, there is something else.' He will at once ask, 'Well, what is it?' And then if you reply, 'I don't like to mention it,' he will encourage you, or even suggest what it might be; and then all will be put right at once.

"Suppose, however, you forget this little dodge, and actually leave the box with the sin unconfessed. You need not on that account be disturbed or remain away from communion. You can either go in again and tell the priest at once or you can resolve to mention it next time you go. Next time you can simply say, 'There was something which I left out last confession, though I meant all the time to tell it, or whatever the case may be.'

"6. There are some who know well enough what their sins are, but they cannot break off their bad habit. They feel sure that they will go on committing it in the future, and that a good resolution is of no use. Hence, though they would really like to break it off, they stay away from confession because they think it would be humbug. This is wrong. No matter how sure you are of future falls, at least you can resolve to try to avoid them. A sincere resolve to try is all that is required. The Church does not demand from you a promise never to sin again, but only a firm purpose of trying not to sin again.

"7. Some go further. They cannot bring themselves to make a resolution even to try. The sin is so seductive, they enjoy it so much that they really want to go on with it. Of course, so long as they are in this frame of mind they cannot fulfill the conditions required for a good confession.

But they ought to work themselves up as far as a wish not to sin and a resolution to try and then they will be fit to go.

"8. Some, again, would like to give up a sin, but they find it so hard to keep out of the occasion which leads to it. They cannot give up the company which lures them to destruction, or the habit (say gambling or drink) which leads them to excess. Even here they ought at least to resolve to try to avoid the occasion. And if the resolve is sincere, they can go to confession even though they have great doubt as to whether they will succeed in keeping their resolution. If there is some very special difficulty in getting rid of the occasion, they should tell the confessor and ask his advice how to set. The resolution required in all these cases is a sincere wish to avoid the sin, plus a sincere intention of trying in a practical way to do so, to the best of one's ability. When this disposition is sincerely manifested to the confessor, he will happily refuse absolution, though, of course, each case has to be considered on its own merits. It is sincerity of purpose which makes a good confession, and conscious insincerity of purpose which makes a bad one.

"9. There are others whose neglect of confession comes from inherent pride, self-conceit or independence of spirit. They know that confession is a duty, but their lofty spirit refuses to undertake an act so humiliating and so repugnant to their self-esteem. Pride is essentially the spirit of absolutism. It does not mean that a man really thinks himself to be God; the facts are too obvious for that. But his head is swollen to such an extent that he practically goes about as if he were the supreme, and cannot stand even the thought of submission and obedience. He knows that he is only a servant in the house of the Lord, yet he gives himself airs as if he were an independent gentleman at large, and as if the whole of his Master's establishment belonged to him. Before such a man can be fit for confession, he must recognize this pride is a sin, repeat of it and be ready to confess it at the head of his list.

"10. Coming to another class, there are some who neglect confession not out of any special repugnance for it or difficulty involved in it, but out of sheer laziness and torpor of soul. They neglect confession just as they neglect everything else which causes trouble or requires effort. Such persons require spiritual tonic, such as a dangerous illness or the sudden death of a friend or relation, to give them a filip. It is, however, well to notice that spiritual torpor may sometimes come from bodily torpor—heavy condition of body or nervous debility, or overstrain. Such persons in the first instance want doctor's treatment—a change of air, a rest, a course of regular exercise, or a few bottles of phosphates to brace up their bodily system—after which there is a chance of spiritual revival also. In any case, they are, of course, bound to make an effort to perform their substantial duties, no matter how sluggish or flabby they may feel.

"11. There are others, again, who are energetic enough in all matters of pleasure, business or amusement; who will save themselves to death over some purely secular hobby or occupation, and are as keen as needles where it is a matter of this world's affairs; but who in the department of religion are as apathetic as a hedgehog, or even as dead as a doornail. These are the victims of mental atrophy. We can only recommend them to read 'Fortifying the Lysman' and see whether, in the light of the ideas there conveyed, they cannot revive their religious instincts once more—by taking the proper amount, first of intellectual, then of emotional interest in the things of faith.

"12. Finally, there are those who through the influence of non-Catholic surroundings come first to neglect the cultivation of their faith; and if they have not actually lost it, have let it grow so weak as to lose all practical influence on their lives. Either the infiltration of the principles of indifference or, vice versa, indifference has led to an implicit acceptance of the principles of indifference.

"Speaking in general, the more incidental the cause which leads to neglect of confession, the easier to be cured by external helps, such as advice, suggesting or criticism; while the more radical the cause, the more is the case out of the reach of external aid. Those who need curing of torpor, atrophy or indifference are, in fact, out of the reach of the clergy. If they are to be cured, they can only be encouraged to make an effort for themselves, otherwise they must be left simply in the hands of God. There is no doing anything with them."

KIDNEY

The kidneys form a very important channel for the outlet of disease from the system, carrying off accumulations that would otherwise poison the blood.

COMPLAINTS

The kidneys are often affected and cause serious disease when least suspected. When the back aches, speaks hoarse before the eyes, the urine contains a brick-dust sediment, or is thick and stringy, scanty, highly colored, in fact when there is anything wrong with the small of the back or the urinary organs then the kidneys are affected.

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

will cure you. Mrs. Frank Fox, Woodside, N.E., writes: "I was a great sufferer with backache for over a year and could get nothing to relieve me until I took two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills, and now I do not feel any pain whatever and can get and sleep well, something I could not do before."

There is no form of disease more prevalent than dyspepsia, and none so peculiar to the high living and rapid eating of the present day mode of life. Among the many symptoms are: Variable appetite, faint, gnawing feeling at the pit of the stomach, with unsteady craving for food; heartburn, feeling of weight and wind in the stomach, bad breath, bad taste in the mouth, low spirits, headache and constipation.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

Bourassa and Free Speech.

On Monday evening of last week 20,000 people assembled on Jacques Cartier Square, Quebec, to listen to speeches on the public questions of the day by Mr. Bourassa M. P. and others.

Mr. Bourassa is a Liberal, was elected as one and still claims to be such. What his object is in his present course is best known to himself; but he evidently has some message for the people of Quebec and that the people of Quebec are desirous of hearing him was evidenced at the meeting in question when they assembled to the number of twenty thousand.

The result of the affair is to make Bourassa a greater man than he was before. He could not desire anything that would bring him more into the public eye than the disturbance at his Quebec meeting.

obvious purpose of preventing him from being heard. What is the deduction? That Mr. Bourassa had some thing to tell that the Liberal party could not afford to have people hear.

The Pulpwood Question.

The Liberal newspapers are paying a good deal of attention to the pulpwood question, probably forecasting the adoption of an export duty on pulp and pulpwood by the federal government.

Next week the opposition leader will leave for Nova Scotia where on the 20th instant he will address the first of a series of meetings to be held during August, September and October in all the Provinces of the Dominion.

A NEW BRUNSWICK CONSULTATION.

To solve the New Brunswick difficulty Sir Wilfrid this week summoned his Parliamentary supporters from that Province to come and tell him whom they wanted for a Minister from home.

leadership has done its best to prevent, exposure and punish the plunder of the public domain in the West.

FROM PARLIAMENT TO THE PEOPLE.

At this stage of affairs audiences East and West will be glad to hear what Mr. Borden has to say for himself and his party on questions of transportation and the development of the national waterways and seaports.

HE MEANS WHAT HE SAYS.

The forthcoming series of meetings will enable the opposition leader to bring together these declarations and present them in a form where they can be taken as a whole.

SIR WILFRID'S PROBLEMS.

Meanwhile Sir Wilfrid Laurier has returned to Canada and is engaged in the difficult task of reconstructing his badly disorganized administration.

A STRUGGLE FOR OFFICE.

Among Ontario Members of Parliament ready to take office there are none whose superiority is admitted by the others.

A CONFESSON OF WEAKNESS.

The well organized attempt to break up Mr. Bourassa's meeting in Quebec this week indicates that the Laurier party does not consider itself too safe in that Province.

Mr. Borden has already taken strong ground in favor of reform in election methods, of the greater promptness in the trial of election petitions.

MR. BOURASSA AND THE SCANDALS.

But it was evidently true that the stone and egg throwing mob was carrying out the preconceived plan of the party machine in Quebec.

THE BOTTEN FOG ARGUMENT.

It is supposed that Mr. Bourassa intended to discuss some of these questions and to set forth his views on certain matters of policy.

HE WILL BE HEARD.

But the Liberals and their press over the country admit that the rotten egg policy is short sighted.

A Portland Maine despatch says:—At Seal Island, Nova Scotia, a few days ago, was captured a lobster the middle finger of whose tail bore an identifying mark made by the Maine fish commissioner two years ago, when a number of seed lobsters were liberated in Maine waters. The distance between the place where the marked seed lobsters were placed and the lobster in question was found to be about 120 miles.

The machinery for the royal mint is nearly all at Ottawa much of it in place. It is an elaborate outfit, and will bring the cost of the plant far beyond the estimate. The operation will also be more expensive than was expected. On the whole the privilege of making our own coins will cost the country at least $100,000 a year more than has been paid for getting the work done in England.

The bodies of Miss Eileen Hingston and Shirley Davidson drowned in the Laverance near Montreal on the 4th inst, were found on Friday last. Davidson's body was found four miles below where the accident occurred and Miss Hingston's body eleven miles below the scene of the accident. Davidson was an athlete, an expert swimmer and the best yachtsman on the St. Lawrence, but notwithstanding all this he was overcome by the treacherous element.

Word comes from Saqui Ste Marie Out. that Mr. J. B. Miller has discovered what is said to be the richest nickel deposit in Canada, near Worthington, in Northern Ontario. A vein one hundred feet wide and almost pure metal, was found. Cleveland and Pittsburgh capitalists, who are supposed to be close to the Standard Oil group, which controls the nickel field in Canada, are trying to get it.

With the prizes most within his grasp, Jabez Wolfe, the amateur swimmer, who had already made four unsuccessful attempts to swim the English Channel, was again deprived of his victory at Dover by an adverse tide on the 7th. Wolfe had accomplished a record swim from the South Foreland getting within three quarters of a mile of Cape Blanc, France, in fifteen and a half hours when the turn of the tide and an adverse wind carried him away from the head, and necessitated the relinquishment of his attempt, which was the second he made this year. R. D. Henton, of Liverpool on the previous day also attempted to swim the Channel, but gave up when four and a half miles from the French coast.

It is expected the new Canadian mint, when opened for business next year, will issue between sixteen and twenty Canadian coins a year. The royal mint in London is now coining sixteen million coins a year for Canada. It is understood there will be one new coin put in circulation, if not more, a new penny piece of the value of two cents and coined from nickel. Although nickel is one of Canada's great minerals, hitherto it has not been used for Canadian coinage.

A patient at the Misericordia Hospital at Edmonton while temporarily insane, made a dash for the window of his room in the operating ward and got out on the stone cornice a foot wide which runs around the building on a level with the window sill. Along this he walked for some time and finally reached a boiler at the corner of the hospital. Here he stood and commenced to address the people gathered in the street below. Nothing could induce him to abandon his perilous position, until some one produced a bottle of whiskey. This was irresistible.

The outside market yesterday was not very large. There were no oats on sale and hardly any pork. Potatoes were as high as 75 to 80 cents per bushel, and new hay changed hands at from 60 to 65 cents per cwt. Butter and eggs were the same as last week. Cherries were 15 to 20 cents a quart, raspberries 12 to 15 cents a quart, black currants sold for 12 to 15 cents a quart, blueberries were for 8 and 10 cents and gooseberries the same.

During the electric storm on Monday night the dwelling house of Frederick Webster, Ten Mile House, was struck by lightning. A window was torn out of the gable and other damage was done. Mr. Webster's mother was sleeping close to this window, and her bed was covered with broken plaster from the shock, but she escaped injury.

In consequence of the break down of a big Waterbury pump at the wheel-house at Point St. Charles, Montreal, great difficulty is experienced in trying to keep sufficient water in the reservoirs on the mountain. It is not denied that the city is threatened with something of a water famine.

A sensation was created at Regina on the 10th by the news that a number of boarders at a restaurant were poisoned by a solution of arsenic in the porridge consumed by them at breakfast. The restaurant proprietor lent a quantity of oatmeal to a Chinese proprietor of an adjacent eating house, the oatmeal was duly returned and was used for the morning meal. Eight guests who ate the porridge were seized with severe internal pain accompanied by vomiting. Three are in the hospital where their condition causes great anxiety. The Chinaman has been arrested.

At South Boston on the 9th inst. A thirteen year old boy, named Bernard, while swimming with some other lads, swam far out into the channel and after performing some feats failed to come to the surface. The other boys shouted for help and John F. Conroy, a swimming instructor came to the rescue. After diving four times he found the unconscious boy. To his saving boat took them ashore. Bernard was revived after an hour and a half steady work.

Advices from Frank, Alberta say—There begins to be promise of another coal famine during the coming winter, with the accompanying possibility that the export of the last winter may be repeated with even greater severity throughout the Northwest. Signs pointing in this direction are to be found in the condition of the coal supply. The coal shortage commenced to make its reappearance over three weeks ago, and has grown steadily worse, until for the past two weeks the mines of the Crow's Nest Pass have been most seriously hampered.

After a long and uninteresting debate, in which the leaders of the opposition indicated their intention of amending the measure in committee, the evicted Irish tenants' bill passed its second reading in the House of Lords on the 8th inst. A dramatic incident of the debate was the appearance of Lord Cairns-Rickards, the most hated landlord in Ireland, who, with bent and skrunken frame, outstretched shrivelled fingers and in a voice now shrill now husky with passion, denounced the bill in unmeasured terms as the "greatest sin of robbery." Every member of the House turned to watch the speaker, but his speech was drowned with chilly applause.

Get the Most Out of Your Food

You don't find out how much you eat until you are sick. A weak stomach does not digest food properly, and what it fails to digest is wasted.

Among the signs of a weak stomach are: uneasiness after eating, fits of nervous headache, and disagreeable belching.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Strengthens and tones the stomach and the whole digestive system.

You will be very glad later on when the years have brought perils, wholesome, refined views of life. You say too high a price for that kind of fun. It isn't worth it.

If a man respects you, and wants to make your acquaintance, he will find some one to introduce him. You may object.

Not long ago Aunt Bride heard a young woman at a working girl's club, and she said that the only way many girls could meet young men was on the street corners.

Such men are not worth meeting. Better stay an old maid to the end of time than marry one of them.

Besides, the contention wasn't true. There are always family connections and societies to which both men and women belong, and social affairs under church and other auspices, all of which bring young men and women together.

Certainly one may go to the other extreme in such matters. Common sense is a great help in most things. All of us have valued friends to whom we have never been properly introduced.

An accident or a long journey may throw people together in such a way that it would be absurd not to be friendly.

If people live next door in a small town, that is usually introduction enough. If a young man or woman work together day after day, in the same shop or office it would be absurd not to speak when they meet on the street.

But these are the exceptional cases. The wise rule is to insist on proper introductions, and to avoid unconventional ways of making acquaintances.—Aunt Bride, in Sacred Heart Review.

The Pope's Day

This year there is no talk whatever of the possibility of the Pope leaving the Vatican for the summer—neither for Castelgandolfo, or Montecassino or Venice.

Indeed, the makers of Papal anecdotes have just added this one to the already large collection: "Some of the newspapers say," remarked Pius X., on his birthday, "that it will be necessary for me to leave the Vatican."

The fact is that I never had any desire to do so. Outside these walls the world has very little to attract me." So while Rome is shunned by the stranger and abandoned by the native, Pius X. will continue to take his daily walk in the corridors or the gardens of the Vatican.

Though His Holiness may never appear in the streets of the Eternal City he has more opportunities than others for seeing Rome at its best.

He is always an unusual early riser, and in summer especially he is alert the very first in all the Vatican—usually at 4, and never later than half-past 5, so that he is able to see Mass at quarter to 5 or shortly after that. If His Holiness ever goes to the windows at that early hour his view taken in the great Piazza of St. Peter's directly underneath, the great silent city around, the storied Janiculum facing him and the Alban and Lavin hills in the distance.

After his meditation, Mass, thanksgiving, recitation of part of the office and frogal Italian breakfast, there are quite three hours before the time for receiving the Cardinal Secretary of State with his daily report on the great affairs of the world. At least one of these hours is occupied by the Pope in reading the daily papers. His Holiness has no great liking for newspaper clippings. He receives a great pile of them every morning, especially prepared for him and containing everything that has been printed throughout Italy during the previous twenty-four hours concerning the Church and the Holy See, but he is also provided every day with the entire copy of the principal newspapers of Rome and Italy, and he never fails to read the Catholic papers, especially the Osservatore Romano, the Difesa di Venio, the Corriere d'Italia, the Osservatore Cattolico, the Unita Cattolica, the Universale, the Croix. He does not read them all through, of course, but nothing of importance in their columns escapes his notice.

A great part of the Holy Father's day's work is done by the time that the majority of Roman citizens and even Roman congregations have finished breakfast. The Pope finds time for another glance at the papers before he retires for the night between half-past 10 and 11. It will be seen that it is a real hardship for the Holy Father to have to say a late Mass at half-past 7 or 8; hence it is only on Sundays, and not always even then, that outsiders are admitted to assist at his Mass.—Roma.

Risen from the Rank

Col. Sir John Harrington, who is now in this country, and who was entertained last week by the president at Oyster Bay, is the only envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary in the service of the British crown who has risen to that eminence from the lowest ranks in the army, having enlisted in 1834 as a mere private in the Middlesex infantry regiment.

At the age of 24, after successively holding the grade of corporal and sergeant, he received a commission as a second lieutenant, and fifteen months later was transferred to that picked body, the Indian staff corps.

Before long he volunteered for service as vice consul at Zillah, a pestilential place which serves as one of the depots of Abyssinia, the post in question being avoided, as much as the service of those who are ruled by higher principles.

Dr. McLaughlin, in a paper read the other day before a Catholic Total Abstinence Convention in Chicago, said he had long been convinced that bad cooking was a chief cause of drunkenness. We can echo his words. Let the women who want to keep their husbands and sons from the saloon look to their cooking, and try to acquire skill in that art if they do not possess it already.—Casket.

Literary Note

Monseigneur John Vaughan's fine paper on the danger of indiscriminate reading, in the Ave Maria for July 27, abounds in quotable passages, of which the following is all we can lay before our readers this week:

"The misfortune is that there is so much to attract us in what is evil. The mere knowledge that a fruit is forbidden is almost enough, of itself, to excite an immediate desire to taste it. The secret, drawn is always the one we are most anxious to pull open; and the hidden treasure the treasure we deem best worth finding. Besides, error is apt to clothe itself in an attractive garb of novelty and freshness, which truth—constant, changeless, everlasting truth—can never wear. To every doubt and to every problem there can be but one sound and reliable answer, but the unsound and unreliable and false answers are innumerable. They are of all colors and complexions, and may be served up so as to suit any inquirer, however perverted his taste and jaundiced his judgment. Hence, a writer whether of history or philosophy or religion, who has a purpose to serve and an axe to grind, and who is irresponsible to the claims of truth, possesses a thousand means of alluring and misleading and enjoining the unwary reader, which are not at the service of those who are ruled by higher principles."

If there be nerve derangement of any kind, it is bound to produce all the various phenomena of heart derangement. In MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS is combined treatment that will cure all forms of nervous disorders, as well as set upon the heart itself. Mrs. John Riley, Dour, Ont., writes: "I have been a great sufferer from heart and nerve troubles for the past ten years. After trying many remedies, and doctoring for two years without the least benefit, I decided to give Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills a trial. I am thankful to say that, after using nine boxes I am entirely cured and would recommend them to all sufferers."

Price 80 cents per box or 8 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.
