WON AT LAST.

CHAPTER XVII.

"Oh, yes—I remember. He is always lurking about and getting tipsy. Doctor Diaz told us, and poaching too. He fancied, I think, that he had something to do with shooting the keeper at Roxborough Chase. I'm glad we don't preserve at Chavasse."

I was out of the conversation. Without any doubt I was emphatically number three. If I had marched out into the rain again they would have known as little as they cared, but I did not exactly see the fun of doing that. Behind Nat's old chair there was another, still more dilapidated, and standing with its arms to the wall. I turned it round and dropped down into it, thinking that about the best thing I could do, all things considered, would be to go to sleep—or at least pretend to do so—until the arrival of the carriage. I put my hands into my pockets and closed my eyes drowsily, listening to the talk which went on by the fire—a talk which, to use an Irishism, began by silence, for it was some time before Nat said, touching the cut on her forehead—

"I hope this won't leave a horrid scar. Do you think it will, Doctor Yorke?"

"Oh, no; it is not deep enough for that! Does it pain you?"

"Oh, no; I can scarcely feel it! I am all right only that I feel I should turn giddy if I moved about. I am sure I could never walk to Chavasse. I wonder what would happen if there was no carriage to come for me."

"I should carry you, of course."

"Carry me? You couldn't!" I could imagine what Nat's raised eyebrows and indignant expression were like as well as I could what was the expression of Yorke's face as he answered her.

"Couldn't I? I should have to be a vast deal weaker than I am if I couldn't carry such a little scrap of a thing as you."

It was not a particularly respectful thing to say to a young lady, although she might have walked under his arm without doing more than slightly rumple her curly head, and knowing Nat as I did, I expected her to resent it. But no—she swallowed the speech as meekly as she had swallowed the brandy, and said nothing at all. The conversation might have been interesting to them, but it was hardly so to me—the pauses were too long. I was almost asleep in good earnest when Yorke spoke again.

"You are looking forward to Christ-

Psoriasis All Over Body

Doctors Said Incurable, But Now There Is No Sign of Disease, Thanks to Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mrs. N. Massey.

Psoriasis is one of the most dreaded skin diseases. It is a sort of chronic eczema. The itching caused is almost beyond human endurance, and doctors are accustomed to give it up as incurable.

But here is a case that was given up as pronounced incurable, but the result proves that Dr. Chase's Ointment almost works miracles in curing the worst form of itching skin disease imaginable.

Mrs. N. Massey, Consecut, Ont., who writes "For further information with what three doctors called psoriasis." They could not help me, and one of them told me that anyone offered me $50.00 to keep my money, as I could not be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and glad to say I am entirely cured, not a sign of a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this ointment enough."

The soothing, healing influence of Dr. Chase's Ointment is truly wonderful. It cures skin diseases, including ringworm and scores of such tormenting ailments are relieved at once and as certainly cured if the Ointment is used persistently. Mothers find Dr. Chase's Ointment invaluable in preventing various skin troubles (such as chafing, irritation of the skin and baby eczema).

iy with a pout she sunk out of sight again in the deep arm-chair.

"You might tell me!" she said, pettishly.

"Let me ask you a question, instead."

"Very well; but if it is a riddle, may I expect me to answer it? Go on."

"Suppose," said Yorke, turning his head so that I knew he must be looking straight at her—"suppose that here was a thing which, against your own sense and judgment, against your will almost, you had set your heart upon winning for yourself."

"Yes?" said Nat, faintly.

"Although you might feel sure that you could not win it, might know that it was unreasonable and almost ridiculous to ever fancy that you could have things been far different, yet it would not be very easy or very comfortable to stand aside and watch the efforts of another to gain what you could not?"

"I suppose not," came more faintly still from the depths of the arm-chair.

"And it would hardly be natural to you to think well or to think kindly of the person who you thought would win the battle which you had never dared to fight?"

"I say, old man!" I said.

"Yes?" he returned, looking round at me. "What is it?"

"Oh, nothing! It's all right, you know; but it strikes me that you rather forgot I was there, didn't you?"

"Slightly."

"H'm—so I thought. I've lavished a good deal of unnecessary sympathy upon you lately, I believe; and I think I'll go home and try to console the luckless Froude a little."

"N-o," returned Nat, in a quavering voice, which somehow made both my eyes suddenly fly open. "I think I'll say, 'Try yourself.'

"Did I? Do you remember how I looked?"

"As well as I shall remember to-morrow how you are looking now. You were taking stock of everybody—scoring down the result in your mind, weren't you?"

"Quite right. When we got home and I sat down and critise everybody."

"Myself included."

"Yourself included."

"And what was the verdict, may I say?" Yorke said, in an amused voice.

"Never mind, it wasn't very dreadful. You know I should not dare to disparage you in Ned's hearing; now we agreed that Alice Deepins was a darling—and so she is—an' hat Fraser Froude was horrid—and o he is," said Nat, decisively.

"What makes you think that?" asked Roger, rather quickly.

"I declare I hardly know. I think so, because I think him so, I suppose. But perhaps—with a quick change of tone—"you don't like to hear me say it. Do you like him?"

"I?" returned Yorke, in an astonished tone. "No; I agree most heartily with your verdict. There is no man in Whistlesford, or out of it, that I dislike as I do him, and I hope there never will be. It isn't pleasant."

It was not, judging from the tone of his voice; and it was perhaps a minute before Nat said, in a wondering tone, and with what I guessed was an equally wondering glance—

"Why? He has never offended you, has he?"

"Not intentionally, I dare say."

"And yet you hate him?"

"I did not say that."

"No, but you meant it. I don't hate him exactly, you know, although he is horrid, and will talk about his dreadful money all the time. I don't believe he ever thinks of anything else," said Nat, petulantly.

"Perhaps that is the most interesting thing he possesses," Roger returned, cynically.

"Oh, very likely; but it doesn't interest me at any rate! But tell me why you don't like him. Is it because of his eyes?"

"His eyes?" Roger echoed, and gave a short laugh. "I don't know anything about his eyes," he said.

"Well, I do. I know I don't like them. Is it because he will keep on smiling when he doesn't mean it?"

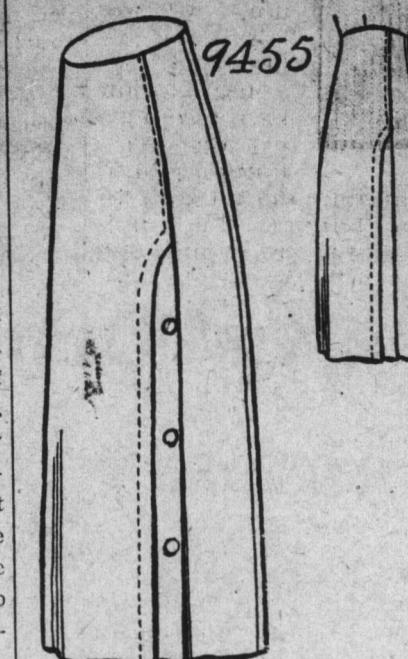

Yorke shifted in his chair; but gave no answer, and there was a short silence. Opening my eyes when I thought it had lasted long enough, I saw him staring gloomily enough at the fire, for he had moved his seat so as to bring his face well within my range of vision. Nat's too I could see as she leaned forward in her chair looking up at him eagerly. Present-

Attacking The Express Companies.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has issued an order requiring the express companies to show cause why the Commission shall not fix their rates, and has prescribed $32-000 tariffs.

In this action the Commission has proceeded one step farther than its custom in the consideration of freight charges.

Hitherto the Government has merely considered the reasonableness of carriage rates, but in the case of the express companies it declares that Federal authority may specifically fix prices.

Should the authority of the Commission be sustained a precedent will be established directly affecting railroads and steamship lines as well.

According to John Callan O'Loughlin, one of the most competent students of American legislation, the success of the Interstate Commerce Commission in this move would increase the agitation for Govt. ownership of traffic facilities and the railroad magnates themselves, he claims, "may consider the profit they receive too small to be worth the investment of so many millions and prefer that the Government may buy and operate their lines."

The express companies assert that the fulfilment of the Commission's plan will inflict a loss of $50,000 upon their business.

Franklin K. Lane, on the other hand, upon whose head chiefly rests the responsibility for the Government's move, accuses the express companies of unfair practices, and asserts that no other course will remedy the situation and protect the interests of the people—Herbert Kaufman in Women's World for February.

On Reactions.

By RUTH CAMERON.

It was the day after Christmas. The outer edges of the glamour of Christmas sometimes light up the day after, but the day after that, well, you know what it's like.

Molly, the little stenographer lady, was laboriously altering a waist which she had given her mother for Christmas. The Author-Man was showing one of his Christmas books to the Wants-to-be-Cynic, and the Lady-who-always-knows-somehow was stamping a batch of Christmas thank notes.

"Oh dear," sighed Molly. "I don't know what ails me. I feel about as blue as indigo."

"What's the matter?" inquired the Wants-to-be-Cynic. "didn't you find what you wanted in your stocking?"

" Didn't someone appreciate the tie you crocheted for him?" said the Author-Man with a capital-letter accent on the Someone and a meaning glance at the Cynic who has been noticeably less cynical of late, especially towards Molly.

" Of course, is wasn't that," Molly answered the Cynic. " I never had such a nice Christmas every way. I was just too happy Christmas and yesterday, and to-day I feel as if the bottom had dropped out of everything. Tell me what's the matter with me, Big Sister."

T he Lady-who-always-knows-somehow smiled. " It's just reaction, isn't it?" she asked. " We all feel it. Maybe not so much, because maybe we weren't so happy as you. Cheer up, Molly, you'll be back to normal in a day or two. I made up my mind a

DOYLE—FINN.

A very pretty wedding took place at St. Patrick's Church, Carbonear, Wednesday, January 29th, when Mr. M. C. Doyle, Purser of the S. S. Clyde, and Miss Mary M. Finn, daughter of one of our highly esteemed planters, Mr. Thomas Finn, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. The bride, neatly dressed in cream silk voile with black beaver hat, looked charming, whilst the bridesmaids, Misses Annie Doyle and Mary Finlay, looked charming in their neat attire. The groom was ably supported by the bride's brother, Mr. T. A. Finn. After the nuptial knot had been tied by Rev. Mr. McCarthy, the party returned to their respective carriages amidst showers of rice thrown by well-wishers of the bride and groom, who had assembled at the church to witness the ceremony. They then drove by way of Glory Lane to the home of the bride's parents, Water Street, where well spread tables awaited them. After the party had done justice to the sumptuous repast and brief congratulatory and complimentary speeches, dancing began and both young and old enjoyed themselves till past the midnight hour; after the very best wishes were again offered the newly wedded couple, they left for their future home at Crowley Street, where they were welcomed by the parents of the groom.

Both bride and groom were the recipients of many costly presents attesting to the esteem in which they were held. The writer joins their many friends in wishing Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Doyle a happy and prosperous voyage over the matrimonial sea.

Change!

Change! Change! The mournful story

Of all that's gone before!

The wrecks of perished glory

Blestwing every shore.

The shattered tower and palace,

That frown o'er every glen,

In broken language, tell us

Of the fleeting power of men.

Change! Change! The scythe is sweeping

O'er many a cottage hearth;

The sickled hand is reaping

O'er some scenes of household mirth.

The sheep is bound where daughters

Round their mother used to spin:

And where little feet did patter

Ful full out and in.

Change! Change! for all things au-

man!

Kingdoms, states of amplest wing

Have their flight and fall in common

With the meanest mortal thing;—

With beauty, love and passion;

With all of earthly trust;

With life's smallest wavelike, rushing,

Curling, breaking into dust!

Where arose in marble grandeur,

The wall'd cities of the past,

The sullen winds now wander

O'er a ruin hundled waste.

Rent is the palace splendid;

The owl, in silence, wings

O'er floors, where eye-attended,

Paced the sandaled feet of Kings.

But Mine, the ever-living,

From Time's each succeeding birth

Will receive some more of Heaven,

Will retain some less of earth;

More of truth and less of error;

Less of hate and more of love;

Till the world below shall mirror

All the purity above.

Notes and Comments.

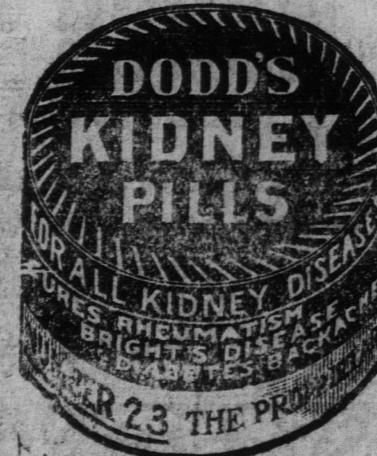

The graballs must go.

Why has the Morris Government put three more fish merchants in the Legislative Council?

Morris is making good for the graballs, but not for the bankers who need the Bait Act enforced. The latter want to know why the Morris Government has been so slack in enforcing the Bait Act.

The Board of Trade is quite emphatic in calling on the Morris Government to mend its way in respect of the enforcement of the Bait Act. Here is the Board of Trade opinion:

"The Council with every desire to conserve the welfare of the Colony."

have felt it their duty to make a strong protest against the diversion of the Floms from her bail protection service unless replaced by a suitable substitute. It is well known that the appearance of bait on our coast cannot be predicted with any certainty, and it frequently happens that when it is least expected, it strikes in abundance. After very careful inquiry, and the obtaining of the fullest possible information, the Council became convinced that a considerable quantity of squid had been carried to St. Pierre by the fishermen of some parts of Placentia and Fortune Bays; the Council are also credibly informed that a considerable quantity is now stored in St. Pierre for the use of the French bankers next Spring. Not only has this bait been carried in contravention of the law, but its presence in St. Pierre is a menace to the successful marketing of our Bank fish next year. The Council therefore urge as strongly as it is possible for them to do, that the law should in future be rigidly enforced, for it is only by the greatest possible vigilance that our wild fishes can be preserved for the use of our own people."

One would scarcely think it, but there are many kinds of eyeglass lenses. There are the old style double Convex and Concave, the Periscope; the improved Toric or Meniscus Lens; in these forms there are Spheres, Cylinders and Sphero-Cylinders, any of which may be combined with prisms. Then there is the Spherical Lens, an arrangement to lighten the weight of thick heavy lenses. In addition to the above there are the various forms of Bifocal Lenses, consisting of the Cement, Perfection, Split and Krypok Bifocal. All the above, can be had in various tints, smoked blue amber, etc., and ground in any forms—oval, full oval, round and other irregular forms. There is just one place in Newfoundland where you can have any of the above lenses made at an hour's notice, that is TRAPNELL, the Eyesight Specialist.

Another Tragedy Barely Averted.

This forenoon four men narrowly escaped being drowned while crossing Kent's Pond, on the Portugal Cove Road. They unwittingly walked over ice which was very thin, having been cut over Saturday, and all went in. The men were upwards of fifteen minutes in the water until their cries attracted two men who were cutting ice at some distance from them. The women folk residing at Bulger's, Burke's and Kennedy's were also attracted by their appeals for help and bravely went out over the ice with picks, sticks and ropes, which they threw to the men who were clinging to the edge of the ice. The men and women eventually rescued the imperilled men, who were much exhausted, and taken to homes near where they were given hot drinks and had their clothing dried.

Prosecution at Bay Roberts.

ACCUSED COMMITTED FOR TRIAL. On Saturday, nine residents of Bay Roberts, were arraigned before Magistrate Oke, charged with riotously and tumultuously obstructing a procession of Fishermen on January 17th, and that they assaulted and did bodily harm to several in the procession. The complainants were William Russell, all of Bay Roberts. The defendants are Abraham Parsons, Elijah Snow, John Snow, George Cave Snow, Edward Snow, Charles Parsons, Robert Mercer, Edward Snow (of James), and George North, all of Bay Roberts. Mr. F. A. Mews, on behalf of the complainants, offered depositions, which were taken by the Magistrate and the three complainants were sworn. Eight or nine witnesses also gave evidence. Mr. W. J. Higgins, counsel for the defendants, raised some objection to the evidence. Magistrate Oke committed them for trial before the Supreme Court. The prosecution made no objection whatever to the defendants being let out on bail to stand their trial. We understand that it is optional with the Supreme Court in cases such as this, on a conviction being obtained, to impose a fine, or imprisonment or to bind the defendants over to keep the peace.

LONDON, Feb. 2.

The annual report of Lloyds shows that 1912 was the most disastrous year on record. The total losses are likely to work out in the neighborhood of $36,250,000, which has to be borne by Lloyds and the Marine Insurance Companies. Had it not been for some remarkably fine salvage operations, notably the recovery of bullion from the P. & O. Liners Delhi and Oceanus, and the refloating of the C. N. R. liner Royal George, the losses would have been still heavier. The Titanic accounts for $10,000,000 of the White Star Canada, $645,000. Three other wrecks which entailed a loss of over $5,000,000. Notables among the wrecks were the River Meander, 300 miles off Halifax, and the Ikuil of the Thompson Line, $625,000. Altogether there were 6,031 casualties to vessels of 500 tons gross and upwards, collisions being responsible for 1,975, stranding for 1,746, weather damage for 1,168, damage to machinery 568, and fire explosions 399. No fewer than 223 ships, 12 British and 144 foreign, were lost. Every claim was promptly settled in full. Premiums, however, have been advanced both on liners and "tramp" steamers, while the value for tonnage insurance purposes has been increased. The White Star has just had to pay 29 shillings per cent. for a renewal of its policies, as compared with a 15 shilling rate prior to the loss of the Titanic. The line only insures vessels over $1,000,000 in value.

BERLIN, Feb. 2.

Owing to suffragette threats to wreck and ruin public property, the Royal Palaces at Kensington, Hampton Court and Holyrood are being closed to the public until further notice. The official notification was published this morning, but was silent as to the cause. As the palaces are favorite resorts, it is probable that the wrath of the people will be visited on the mischief makers whenever opportunity offers. Public museums and similar institutions will, it is understood, be also closed. This decision has been fully justified, as this afternoon a suffragette entered the Tower of London and smashed the glass case in the Jewel Tower with a piece of iron hidden in the sleeve of her coat.

At Birmingham six pillar boxes were fired by chemicals and many letters were destroyed.

A Seaside Reverie.

(By R. P.—N.)

I stood on the segregated shore,
Surrounding the ocean's bed,
A sullen silence reigned supreme,
When all living had fled,
And thought profound as eternity
Came with its myriad voices to me.

There lay the sea in quiet repose,
Like a giant fast asleep,
Not a ripple laved the rough sea coast;
No stir in the ocean's deep;
The mirror-beautiful scenery
Gleamed from the face of the silvery sea.

A blast came down from the mountain side,
Swift and fierce it seemed to be,
The giant quickly raised his head,
In a desperate mood was he;
He raged 'till nothing but foam was there
And the sweep of an angry sea.

Far on the crest of a mountain-wave
A ship soon came into view,
Sweeping along like a thing alive,
Cleaving the billows in two,
Speeding ahead through raging seas
With sails all set to catch the breeze.

Old ocean foamed and spouted and raged
As if on destruction bent,
It threw its billows ahead of the ship,
But still on her course she went,
And soon in safety reached the shore
Where dangerous seas prevailed no more.

Life is an ocean—changeable life,
Sometimes an unruffled sea,
Then come the storm-blasts and the strife
And we're pleased with nothing we see;

But if to duty we dare stand true,
Our Captain will guide us safely through.

LONDON, Feb. 2.

During a terrific gale between Hobart and Hobart, the passengers on the Liner Nairnshire gathered together while one of them sang "Roar of Ages." In the meantime women and children were screaming, and the vessel rolled fearfully. About midnight a huge wave tore off the sky facing the saloon door, and huge volumes of water threatened to drown the women and children within. On officer, with a little girl in his arms, had to climb the rigging to avoid the waves, which threatened to wash him and his charge overboard. An 80-year-old man was flung from the deck to the cabin. Sea after sea was shipped, but the crew worked like heroes. They had only a biscuit from Tuesday evening until Thursday evening. Appreciation of the remarkable seamanship of the captain took the form of an address, signed by all the passengers, and presented to the captain when the vessel reached Hobart.

Tragedy in Harbor

2 MEN DROWNED!

A Boat Containing Three Men Swamped—Jos. Moyst Saved.

A terrible tragedy occurred in the Harbor, Saturday evening, in which two lives were lost. The victims were Fred Jeans and Samuel Bartlett, aged seventeen and twenty-two, respectively. Joseph Moyst, uncle of Jeans, who also went through the awful experience while in the open boat, was saved.

The fatality was talked of on all sides yesterday and there was widespread sympathy offered for the bereaved families.

Joseph Moyst's Story.

The Telegram interviewed Joseph Moyst, the survivor of the accident, at his residence, 13 Barter's Hill. Mr. Moyst is the second steward of the Prospero, and the unfortunate young man Samuel Bartlett was bedroom steward on the ship, and resided on Monroe Street. Fred Jeans, the other lad drowned, aged 17 years and who lived also at 13 Barter's Hill, is a nephew of Mr. Moyst. According to the latter the three young men took a boat belonging to the S. S. Eagle from Bowring Bros. wharf to go out shooting sea birds. Each had a gun, and going down the harbour and also returning Moyst and Jeans rowed while Bartlett steered with a sculling oar. They had intended

To Go Outside

but it blew too strong and they only rowed a little outside Chain Rock when they decided to run back. The wind by the time they got out there blew a gale from the S. W. and there was a heavy top in the Harbour. The wind had driven a heavy body of slob ice which had made during the winter down the harbour and the boat was driven in amongst this. It was packed in close down by Shea & Co.'s and Hynes' piers and through it quite a heavy swell ran. For over an hour after they came in out of the Narrows the men worked to try and get the boat out of the slob but without avail, and all this time they

as they were drenched with the spray which went over their boat as she ran into the harbour and were chilled with the cold. They were within a few yards of Hynes' pier when a boy was seen on it and they called to him to go and tell some person to telephone for a tug as they were caught in the slob and could not get out of it. The boy ran to do as he was told and later a man which they took to be Mr. Hynes came and told them that a tug was coming. They were then over an hour in the ice and all this time they kept firing their rifles to attract attention and secure assistance but without avail until the boy appeared on the wharf. As near as he could remember it was going up for 5:30 p.m. when the tug John Green the tug came down taking a cut inshore and then slowed around and as she ran alongside the boat a man on the tug threw a line which Moyst caught and made fast to a ring bolt forward. He says the tug was coming half speed and did not slow down but took an outward cut through the slob and up the harbour in clear water. Sam Bartlett was aft, Fred Jeans was amidships and Jos. Moyst forward in the boat. He says they were hardly opposite A. J. Harvey & Co.'s premises when the boat began to ship water rapidly and Jeans yelled out to the tug hands that the boat was filling and sinking but received

No Response.

He says he is sure the tug was going at half speed and thelop coming on board the boat as she ran after the tug filled her before they realized it. Moyst said he called out twice that the tug would drown them all but no notice was taken. Suddenly, he says, the boat went over on her side, dipped under when Moyst grabbed the painter though up to his head in water and held on grim death. Immediately he found himself in the water he felt Jeans clinging to him with both his arms about his neck and thought his last hour was come. The lad, however, did not hold the grip long as the shock of the cold water was evidently too much for him and he was swept quickly astern and sank in a couple of minutes preceded by Bartlett who was the first to be swept out of the boat and who

Went Down Almost Instantly.

Holding to the painter Moyst climbed up to the stern of the tug hand over hand and was assisted to the deck by the men on the tug. In clinging to the painter and climbing up it his hands were badly cut and torn. He says that clinging to the painter and with the boat submerged he was towed almost from Shea & Co.'s to Harvey & Co.'s before he got in on the deck. Moyst says that chilled and exhausted as he was he twice sought admission to the tug's engine room but he was sent for warmth into the stokehold until the tug landed him at the wharf of C. F. Bennett & Co.'s where the boat was also left. When Moyst reached the tug's deck he said he saw one of the crew with a gaff trying to reach something floating in the water, but whether this was a cap belonging to one of the doomed or a body he could not say. He insists that had the tug slowed down when first they called out that the boat was filling all would have been saved.

Capt. James Roberts Story.

Capt. James Roberts of the tug John Green interviewed by the Telegram, said that on receipt by Capt. Strong of a telephone message from Mr. Hynes, he left Bennett's wharf about 5 p.m. Saturday, to go down the harbour and take a boat out of the slob. He found the boat with three occupants about 100 yards off Hynes' wharf, threw a line and without trouble towed her out through the ice and up the harbour. A stiff S. W. wind blew and there was quite a lop in the harbour. He had the wheel in the wheel house and James Ricketts and Andrew West were on the quarter deck looking out for the boat towing astern. He says the tug came up the harbour at a "dead slow" pace and when he heard the men cry out to stop he telephoned the order to the engine room and immediately ran astern from the wheel house. He noticed Moyst hanging onto the painter and saw one of the boys head above water but he sank in an instant. The men helped Moyst on board and then the tug went astern and came round and a search made for Jeans and Bartlett but no sign of either could be had. Capt. Roberts says that Rabbits and West of the tug, say that the cause of the accident was that the occupants of the boat became excited.

Crowded Forward,

sank her by the head and she filled and sank immediately. The gunwhale and side was beaten off the boat but this occurred after Moyst had gained the tug's deck. He further says that Moyst refused to give him the names of his companions in the boat when Orange Parade.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir.—The Orangemen held their annual parade at this place a while ago, which was one of the best that was ever held in this place. They left hall at Middle Bight, at 10 o'clock a.m., and proceeded to Manuels station headed by Bro. Edward Porter, on his white charger, and their fine brass band. On arriving at Manuels station, ranks were opened and the lower degree members countermarked up through the procession and proceeded to Fox Trap Church of England, where the church service was held and the Rev. E. K. H. Caldwell preached a very inspiring sermon suitable to the occasion. After service the society left the church and proceeded to their hall at Middle Bight, where the ladies had refreshments provided for the brethren to supply the inner man. After the tea was finished the W.M. Bro. Samuel J. Haines called the meeting to order, and after giving a few remarks on the splendid work of the society, he called upon the following: Bro. Samuel J. Haines, P.M., Chairman; address; Bro. Edward Porter, address and Bro. Samuel Eason, song.

SECOND PART.

Bro. Walter Rendell, address on Orangeism in the British Colonies.

Bro. John R. Martin, P.M., address.

RETURNED HOME.—Mrs. Thomas Hayes and grandson arrived home on Tuesday last, after a most enjoyable visit of four months to New York and in old Newfoundland.

The Chairman then made a few remarks and the singing of the National Anthem brought the gathering to a close.

Yours truly,

Wants It Stopped

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—I wish to call the attention of the Council to the disgraceful state of the drain on Monkstown Road, opposite Fleming Street. One of two residents living on the corner of Fleming Street, are constantly throwing filthy refuse into this drain and what seems incredible in this twentieth century, the residents use their drain for dumping "night soil."

Church goers, who used this street yesterday, had to pass this vile cesspool. The lack of sewerage connection is no excuse for such criminal conduct, as all refuse matter should be collected and taken away by the Sanitary Department. If the Council would prosecute all who throw refuse on the streets and compel the saving of same to be removed at night by the Sanitary Dept., a surprising reduction would be made in the number of cases of fevers and other diseases which abound. There are other places on Monkstown Lane which would benefit by the strict application of the law to the offenders as many children are constantly playing near these disease breeding spots. Where is our Public Health Officer? Why does he not protect the population against such outrages? Another matter which shows "something rotten in our civic administration" is the conduct of the Sanitary employee who work on Circular Road West. A visit to this street to-day will reveal the contents of about a dozen "as-pails" carefully spread all over the street, this abominable practice has been pursued all winter and common decency demands that it be stopped immediately.

Trusting that the Council will appoint a capable inspector for this section and enforce the law,
I am, yours etc.
PRO BONO PUBLICO.

Caught Napping.

Mr. Brown was rapidly acquiring the habit of staying out later at night than his wife thought was good for him. In fact, she began to grow quite unreasonably suspicious of his actions.

One day he would bring forward the excuse that he had been detained in the office; on another that, quite by accident, he had met with an old business friend. And then, his little repertoire of excuses at last exhausted, he came home and said that his partner had been taken suddenly ill, and he had been forced to sit up with him. Of course, Mrs. Brown did not believe this story. Still, try though she would, she could not elucidate the mystery. Accordingly, she commissioned little Tommy to see what he could do in the matter.

"And did you hold your sister's hand?" inquired Mr. Brown's young hopeful.

"No," replied the reminiscent parent, in an absent moment; "I only wish I had. D'you know, he held our aces twice."

"I've never loved a girl but you," Such was the young man's explanation.

If that," the maiden said, "is true, You go and get a reputation."

Wheat

BY H. L. RANN.

Wheat is a hardy cereal which is grown to the best advantage in countries where it gets so cold that the soil has to be cultivated with a blow pipe. The best wheat in the world is grown in the frigid zone of northern Canada, where frost can be found 2,000 feet below sea level.

Wheat is the father-in-law of the breakfast food industry, and has taken the place of a number of popular substitutes, such as shavings, sawdust and soy beans. If it were not for wheat, several of our most prominent and plethoric breakfast food magnates would have to get acquainted with work, instead of riding around in ecomium overcoats and writing advertisements addressed to people who are long on appetite and short on bright red corpulence.

Wheat was invented by the Chinese about 2700 B.C. The Chinese are a cautious people, so they fed the first crop to the missionaries, then sat down and waited for results. As none of the missionaries was seized with anything, more wheat was planted the next year and the hotel pancake was introduced. This teaches us that no nation which lives on hoary traditions, pancakes and chop suey will rise very high in the scale of human intelligence.

Wheat is sold by the bushel to shoestring speculators who buy it on margins and sell it with a sense of deep injury. It is very exciting pastime to margin 20,000 bushels of wheat with collateral consisting of a bicycle pump and a Round Oak stove, but it is done every day by fascinated cashiers who hug the stock ticker at the close of the morning service. The price of wheat is fixed at Liverpool in such a manner as to cause several melancholy advances in the cost of flour.

Next to fish, there is nothing so good for people whose brains need reinvigorating as wheat. If proof readers and compositors would eat two pounds of whole wheat for breakfast every morning, there would be fewer boneheads committed in the society column.

The First Lifeboat.

It is France says the "Westminster Gazette" that we are indebted for nearly every invention that pertains to saving life at sea. We learn this fact from an interesting book, "The Lifeboat and Its Story," by Mr. Noel T. Methley, F.R.G.S., published by Sidwick and Jackson. The first lifeboat designed and built upon principles which rendered her safer than other vessels was invented by a Frenchman, Monsieur Berrieres, in 1765. The first belt that would support its wearer in the water by Galac another Frenchman; and as early as 1757 we have records of a French method of resuscitating the apparently drowned. It was left, however, to other countries to bring their lifeboat service to a high state of efficiency before France made any organized effort in this direction.

Good For The Cafe.

The proprietor of the Cafe Edelweiss was faced with ruin. Somehow he had failed to hit the taste of the citizens of the little Bavarian town in which he carried on business, and he was at his wits' end to find a device for attracting the fickle public. Suddenly he hit on a brilliant idea. He inserted two advertisements in the local newspaper. One ran:

"Young man with large income desires to make the acquaintance of a young lady with a view to marriage. Money a matter of secondary importance."

The other ran:

"Young lady with 50,000 marks (later, more) wishes to marry a young man. A gentleman with good character, even if he is without means, will find an ideal home."

These announcements brought dozens of replies daily, and writing on behalf of the imaginary young man and the rich and also imaginary young lady, the proprietor of the Edelweiss made a rendezvous with all applicants in very naturally, his cafe.

The establishment hummed with life for a few days, until somebody smelt a rat, and the enterprising proprietor was forced to explain his method of filling it before the local magistrates.

When an old gentleman wagged his head and said: "Ah, so I thought when I was your age!" it is not thought an answer at all if the young man reports: "My venerable sir, so I shall most probably think when I am yours." And yet the one is as good as the other.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

Kaiser Intervenes.

NEW YORK, Noon.

A message to a New York Journal says the Kaiser has intervened at the last moment to make a last effort to prevent the resumption of hostilities in the East. He has communicated the German Ambassador his wishes and is backed by the Ambassador of the Triple Alliance. The Triple Entente is sympathetic and France is using her good offices with the Allies to urge upon them a consideration of the Kaiser's efforts. The Kaiser urges that the Allies shall accept Turkey's latest answer to the Notes of the Powers. In diplomatic circles scant hope is felt for the success of the intervention.

Found Drunk.

At 3:30 this morning Constables Bennett and Harvey found a young woman, in an advanced state of intoxication on George Street, and having in her possession a part bottle of whiskey. The officers had a hard time getting her to the police station as she put up a stubborn resistance and attempted to use a hat pin on them. It would be interesting to know how or where she obtained the liquor seeing that the previous day was Sunday and that the saloons had been closed for nearly 48 hours.

Westwood Does Damage.

PHILADELPHIA, To-Day.

The Hamburg-American liner Prinz Oskar, which sailed from here for Hamburg, has a large hole stove in her port bow, and a four-masted schooner, the City of Georgetown, is at the bottom of the sea as a result of a collision near Five Fathom Bank light, beyond Delaware breakwater.

Express Has a Rough Run

The Bruce express which left Port aux Basques at 11 a.m. on Wednesday arrived here at 11.30 a.m. to-day with 18 first class passengers and several second class passengers. The train was held up at Kitty's Brook from 3 a.m. Thursday to 10.30 Saturday night owing to the rotary clearing the Topsails having its axle broken.

A terrific blizzard—the like of which has not raged in that section for years—prevailed and the engine coming up to the relief of the rotary became stuck 60 yards from the water tank, and the men, who suffered severely, had to convey water to her in pails. The rotary is on the Y at Kitty's Brook. Near Norris Arm the water has overflowed the tracks for a long distance and covers them to the depth of over 3 feet. The train had to travel very slowly in this section where an engine is kept running to prevent the flood on the tracks freezing. The weather is the worst in that section for a number of years.
