A Child of Sorrow.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

"Water? Here, I don't know whether you ought to have it, and I don't give it to you without Lucy. It would be more than my life's worth, for she'd be like a tiger-cat over her whelp. I'll send her."

Lucy came in, pale and calm, but very gentle. She gave him a small quantity of water; and, as he took it, he looked at her long and steadily; then he turned over and closed his eyes.

Perhaps he had not been altogether unconscious all the time; for certain little things came back to him, as it were: the touch of her hand, the touching of her hair against his cheek, the look that beamed from his eyes. Love has a knack of radiating, of making itself known to the dullest and the most insensible, by such touches, such looks.

He turned to her, again, his eyes resting on hers musingly, as if he were pondering something.

"You've been very good to me, Lucy," he said in the hollow voice of fever and weakness. "You've pulled me through this; you've—he moistened his lips and stretched out his hand, cool enough now, but still shaking—"you've been an angel, not only now, but all through this business—an angel; better! a woman—a true woman! By Heaven! I think you're the best, the truest girl in the world; and there aren't many of them! Lucy, would you like to be my wife? I'm a poor, broken-down wretch, with half my life wasted, with the other— But if you'll take me for what I am, I'll be grateful, and try and make you a good husband. What do you say, my girl?"

She had sunk down beside him, her hands clasped, her lips set, her face which had been pale, now burning with a blush, now pale again.

"No, no!" she panted. "You don't know what you say, I—I your wife? Oh, no, no! You don't mean it. You don't know what you're saying—the fever—"

"The fever's gone, I'm sensible enough," he said, gravely. "Sensible enough to know your worth. You are worthy of a better man, Lucy; but if you'll take me—"

His hand sought hers and took it in his weak grasp. She shook all over like a leaf.

"Let me go!" she breathed. "You must not—I cannot—"

"You mean that you do not care for me, that you do not love me? Oh, well, that is easy enough to understand; but I'm sorry; for my own sake, mind you. Come, say 'Yes, Lucy. For it seems to me that I belong to you. Take the life you have saved twice. Come, Lucy."

He tried to draw her to him, but he would have been powerless to have done so; it was her love, her overwhelming love, that swayed her to him and drew her head upon his breast.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

When David Jones had got well out of sight of the Dartford station, he quickened his pace and rode—not for Milda Wolda, but in the direction considerably to the south of it, and after a long ride struck the Melbourne road. It was the only road from the city to Milda Wolda, and, as may be imagined, was very little used. Every now and then David got down from his horse and examined the track, and presently he came upon the recent hoof-marks of a horse, one horse; this puzzled him, because as there were two ladies, there should be two horses. He pondered over this while his own horse was resting and feeding; then he rode on again, and after awhile he reached a station on the track, where he was accorded the usual welcome. He put up his horse and took a meal, and while he was smoking his pipe with great zest, he asked a few questions casually: were many people on the road, who had passed lately? and so on.

"No; we have not had many travellers lately," said his host; "in fact we have had a rather slack time. A man rode by yesterday, a man on a black horse, a good 'un. He looked like a kind of parson, and said he was going to Melbourne."

David Jones pricked up his ears. Could this be the parson who had married Robert Broseley to Miss Carington?

"Any ladies with him?" he asked.

His host shook his head.

"No; he was quite alone; he only stopped for a bit and a sup; said he was in a hurry. I haven't seen a lady on the road for a goodish time."

"There is no other way of getting to Melbourne, say from Milda Wolda?" asked David Jones.

He was answered in the negative.

"This is the only road; in fact, it is the only road to anywhere; you'd have to go over the hill, and that would be a fool's line. Why, what's your hurry?" he asked, as David Jones rose, knocked out his pipe and tightened his belt.

"I've got to be getting on," said the little man, simply; and, thanking his host, he mounted and rode on; but after a mile or two he made a detour and rode back towards Milda Wolda, carefully examining the road, at intervals; but there were no signs of any horse excepting that of the parson.

He rode and rested, saving his good animal, as only an Australian and an Indian know how, and after awhile touched the Milda Wolda property; but he kept away from the station and rode up one of the slopes which gave him so complete a view of the plain that it would be very difficult for anyone to cross it without David Jones seeing him. He was picking his way along the slope, when his sharp eyes caught sight of something white fluttering beside the stream below.

He sat and looked at it for a moment or two and then he rode down to it. It was the piece of paper in which Carrie's sandwiches had been wrapped, and the little man's sharp eyes soon traced out her and Robert's footsteps and the marks of the horses' hoofs. But here he was faced by another problem; for one set of hoofs went in one direction, to Milda Wolda, and the other, after following them for some time, branched off on a line at right angles. After considering this problem, he decided to follow the track of the smaller hoofs which he judged to be those of a lady's horse. That a lady had been there, where he had seen the paper, was certain, for beside the paper was a thin piece of string; and David Jones knew that Robert Broseley was not the sort of man to tie up sandwiches, even if he went so far as to wrap them in paper. But why only one lady? where was the other?

He was riding on as he turned this question over and over, and presently he came upon the hoof-marks which proceeded from the direction in which he was going and which got mixed up with the marks which he was following; they were, too, evidently made by the same shoes whose tracks he had found on the Melbourne road.

"The parson again," he muttered. "He came to meet her, whoever she is; and he's gone, by jingo, and left her to go on without him. That's strange!" He pulled at his grey beard and rubbed his head reflectively. "And where's she going? There's no station in this direction, there's nothing that I know of; and it don't lead to nowhere. Well, I'll soon see. A lady riding solitary and alone and going—nowhere!"

His horse was beginning to show signs of weariness and he had to ride slowly; the sun was sinking, night-fall would be upon him; and the problem still unsolved! Then, suddenly, in the midst of his perplexity there arose the neigh of a horse; his own pricked up its ears and answered joyfully, and the little man's heart rose again; for something told him that the neigh came from the horse he was following.

Now, all unconscious of the approach of a rescuer, Carrie and Milda sat hand in hand waiting for and dreading Robert Broseley's return. After he had left them the two girls had clung together, almost speechless, for some minutes. It was Milda who first recovered her self-possession; and, reversing the usual order of things, it was she who soothed Carrie, instead of Carrie soothing her.

"I'm all right, indeed I am all right, dearest!" she assured her. "I was only frightened—oh, very frightened—but I am not afraid any more, now that you are here. How did you find me, how did you come?"

Carrie told her, and Milda listened, repressing a shudder as she realised how cunningly Robert Broseley had plotted her capture.

Then she told Carrie all that had happened to herself, and, as she went on, Carrie's threatened collapse passed away and gave place to a burning anger and indignation.

"The villain! the scoundrel!" she exclaimed. "He must be mad to think that he could force you to marry him. You marry him, while Byrne—"

The crimson flooded Milda's face, and she drew a deep sigh. If Byrne could only know the peril she had been in, was still in!

"And he will come back," said Carrie; "come back with that man, the clergyman! But he can do nothing now, now that I am with you; a hundred clergymen should not marry you to Robert Broseley, while I am here. But what shall we do, Milda? We are shut up here, we are prisoners. Think of it, and this is the twentieth century! It's more like a novel than the truth. Is there no way of getting out?"

She sprang to the window and shook the heavy shutter, but it was strongly barred from the outside, and, of course, resisted all her efforts to open it. The thick door stood as steadily, and she came back to the fire and looked round her despairingly.

"And I am so hungry!" she said, presently, as if she could not help it. "And you, Milda; when did you last have anything to eat? I suppose he doesn't mean to starve us; or was that part of his plan?"

She went to the locker and uttered a cry of satisfaction as she lifted the lid.

"No, there is some food here," she said; "here are some biscuits and some dried beef and some tea. Come, we are better off than I expected."

She made some tea and put out the food on the table, and persuaded Milda to take some.

"Here is a piece of bread, but there is nothing to cut it with."

She looked round the hut for a knife, but there was nothing nearer to one than an axe, which lay in a corner, covered by some mealy sacks, and had evidently been forgotten.

She broke the bread and moistened it with some of the tea, and they ate that and some of the biscuits. And then they sat before the fire, hand in hand, too tired, too oppressed by anxiety to talk. The hours passed; Carrie felt herself falling asleep, but shook herself and sprang to her feet. It would never do to sleep; she wanted to meet Robert Broseley all alert, with all her wits awake. She fell to pacing up and down, like a prisoner indeed, and in the course of doing so she moved the rug on the couch and caught sight of the revolver.

"Why, what is this?" she exclaimed, looking at Milda.

Milda coloured, and her face went pale and her lips set resolutely.

"It is his," she said. "I snatched it from his belt. I—I nearly shot him."

"You did!" exclaimed Carrie, flinging her arms around her and giving her a hug. "But why didn't you quite? I would have done so."

"I did better," said Milda, almost inaudibly. "I kept it for myself."

Carrie shuddered.

"But we've got it still!" she said, setting her teeth, her eyes flashing. "I shall have no scruples, as he will find. We've got this revolver and we've got—yes, there's the axe there."

Milda looked at it absently; then she sprang to her feet and caught up the axe.

"Carrie!" she exclaimed, her eyes alight, her bosom heaving with sudden hope. "The axe! And we never thought of it! Oh, how stupid women are compared with men! Don't you see?"

Public Notice!

The attention of the public is called to the seriousness of the COAL situation.

There is at present in St. John's a quantity of coal ready for immediate delivery. Those who are able to stock coal for the coming winter would be well advised to secure same immediately.

Coal which has to be stored for autumn delivery is liable to be much more expensive because of possible shortage of supply, shortage of tonnage and because of an additional charge for cost of storage.

Buy now and you not only save money for yourself, but you help to keep the price of coal from soaring to an excessive figure during the Winter and early Spring when navigation is closed.

Blood Poisoning

SO INSIDIOUSLY does blood-poisoning develop that we never know when to expect serious trouble from a mere scratch or simple wound. By promptly cleansing the injured part and applying Dr. Chase's Ointment you can be sure that the wound is thoroughly antiseptic, and that no poisonous germ can live to cause serious development.

Mr. Torger Olson, Melro, Sask., writes:—"Last fall I got a sore on my finger in thrashing, and it must have got poison in it. I went to the doctor twice, and he gave me different medicines to use, but they didn't help. The sore grew worse all the time, until it spread away up over the shoulder. It certainly was a bad-looking sore. Finally, I read of Dr. Chase's Ointment in your Almanac, so I got a box, and I had only applied it twice when I felt relief. I used this box and got another, and the two boxes cured me."

The healing qualities of Dr. Chase's Ointment are proven by its phenomenal success as a cure for eczema, salt rheum and other forms of skin disease which defy all ordinary treatments.

Veteran of Four Wars

BURIED WITH MILITARY HONORS AT HOLYROOD YESTERDAY.

Far from the sound of bursting shells and all that is great and horrible on the battle scarred fields of France and Flanders, there passed to the Great Beyond at the peaceful little village of Holyrood, on Friday last a veteran of four wars in the person of the late Staff-Sergeant Patrick E. Timmons, of the Canadian Overseas Royal Construction Corps and of the Princess Patricia's Light Infantry. Few men, if any, in this country have had such a varied experience of wars and world-wide travel as the late Patrick Timmons. From his early childhood days he was of a mind to roam and with that desire to see the things of the world he left his home when but a mere lad, not quite fifteen years of age. After varied experiences in other lands he happened to be in the United States in the year 1898 when that country declared war on the Spaniards. Enlisting with a New York Regiment he proceeded to Cuba and passed through the famous battle of Santiago. In 1900 he fought with the Americans through the Boxer War in China. On his return to the States he received his honorable discharge from the American Government. He then proceeded to Vancouver, B.C., where a regiment known as the British Columbia Horse was being raised to help out England in the war with the Boers. After passing a stiff examination he was given a place in the ranks and for the next two years he lived a soldier's life on the deserts and plains of South Africa. After seeing this war over he returned to Canada and after receiving his discharge again followed the sea and for twelve years sailed in and out of many ports in many lands, being practically around the world twice. During part of the time he commanded an American Revenue Cutter doing duty along the Alaskan Coast. He later purchased an auxiliary schooner and did a good business in the halibut and salmon fishery at Prince Rupert, B. C. In the summer of 1914, when hostilities commenced, he sold out his business and left by the first boat for Vancouver where he enlisted with the Princess Patricia's Light Infantry. Since known as the immortal Princess Patts. Shortly after reaching France he received a transfer to the O. R. C. Corps as mentioned above, and at the battle of Ypres was badly wounded by shrapnel and gassed. On December 28th, 1915, he was placed in the hospital in England where he remained for 8 months. On September 22nd, 1916, he arrived in this city by the S. S. Florizel, ill of health and broken in body. While his features showed still visible signs of the effects of poisonous gasses, he remarked calmly to a Telegram reporter that his fighting days were over and he hoped for the rest and quiet surroundings of the old homestead.

AT REST.

As a mark of respect to the veteran of four wars a firing squad in charge of Lieut. Fraser, consisting of nineteen men and six sergeants, left by yesterday's express to attend the funeral. Arriving at Holyrood the party proceeded to the late home of the deceased where the prayers for the dead were recited by the Rev. Fr. Finn. From there the funeral procession proceeded to the R. C. Cemetery in the following order:—

Firing squad with arms reversed. The remains accompanied by six Sergeants as pall bearers. Immediate relatives and a large gathering of the general public.

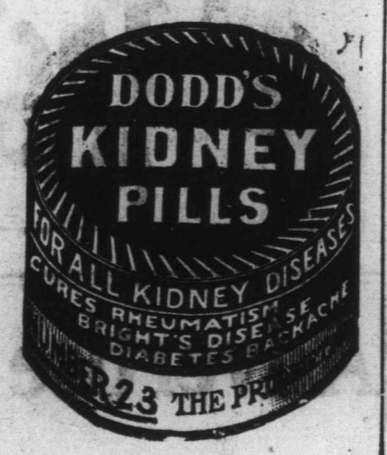

Over the open grave the firing squad under Sergeant Edwards discharged three farewell volleys while Bugler Bugden sounded the Last Post. The firing party returned to town by the regular excursion train last night.

Football Matters.

Hot discussion took place at a meeting of the Football League held Saturday night. On a majority vote it was decided that a third round be played. The St. Andrew's and B. I. S. will play this evening.

For the benefit of the Cigarette Fund for our Sailors and Soldiers, the same will be played on Thursday evening by the "Old Boys."

The Star uniforms will be left at the disposal of the players at St. George's Field.

Hospital Patient

Refused Passage.

Yesterday morning at 11.30 o'clock the ambulance from the East End Fire Hall arrived at the railway station with a patient from the General Hospital named Hubert Nowotzky of Smith's Square, T.B., who for the past two months was confined to the Hospital suffering from an injured hip and was being sent home to rest, as further surgical treatment was not required for some time. On being taken from the ambulance to the train he was refused admission to the first class car unless he was accompanied by a nurse or some other person to look after him, he being unable to walk or stand. The train officials state that it is not their business to attend to patients going to and from the General Hospital and that Hospital authorities should have seen that the patient in question was accompanied by a competent person. While they are willing to help, and often do assist such people when in trouble, they claim it is unfair to ask them to accept the responsibility. We understand that Mr. Eli Whitway, whose business it is to attend to such matters, was confined to his home yesterday suffering from a severe cold.

Girls' Holiday Club

HELD SUCCESSFUL SALE.

At the Presbyterian Hall on Saturday afternoon the Holiday Girls' Club held a successful tea and sale in aid of the Khaki Guild. The splendid sum of one hundred and thirty dollars was realized and those taking part are to be congratulated on the success achieved. The cake table was in charge of Miss Jean Campbell; candy table, Miss Stella Perlin; variety table, Misses Mary Syme, Edith Scandrett and Jessie Dempster; ice cream table, Misses Clara Perlin and Dorothy Knight; the grab bag table was most profitably run by Miss Mary Rogerson.

At the Legislature.

Both branches of the Legislature will meet this afternoon, the Lower House at 3 o'clock and the Legislative Council at 4.

In the former Chamber the Business Profits Tax Bill will be considered in Committee, put through its final stage and sent to the Upper House where it will be discussed at length this evening and to-morrow.

Recent developments such as the stuffing of the Upper House with new members are naturally causing wonderment and astonishment and the ultimate outcome of this piece of political machination will be eagerly awaited.

The Premier and Confederation.

Denies Alleged Correspondence With Sir Robert Borden.

Dear Sir,—In Saturday's issue of your paper, in a letter signed "Patriot", the following statement is made:—"If Confederation with Canada is not a live issue with Premier Morris, what was the meaning of the correspondence between him and Premier Borden, which was found in the office of a certain Canadian newspaper in June last and which, after it was found, was made the subject of debate in the Canadian House of Commons?"

In relation to this statement I desire to say that it is wholly and absolutely without foundation, as far as I am concerned. I never had any correspondence with Sir Robert Borden in relation to Confederation, directly or indirectly, or with any other person in Canada at any time. As far as I am concerned the item has no foundation in fact.

I would be grateful, therefore, if you would give this denial the same publicity in your paper as the statement itself received.

Yours faithfully,
B. P. MORRIS.

The Grenfell Inquiry.

On Saturday we published a petition presented to the House of Assembly by the International Grenfell Association, which was in fact a counter-petition to that presented early in the session by certain parties, but were obliged by pressure of other matters to omit comment of any sort. Possibly the same reason, added to the fact that the first "sensational" of the affair has passed, accounts for the smaller emphasis and publicity that has been given to the reply than was allowed to the charge. This should not be. We are not permitted to go into the merits of the questions that have to be decided, but we are justified in supporting the demand of the Association, who did not ask for the inquiry in the first place, that it be a full one, sufficient to elicit and make public all the facts and commensurate with the seriousness and importance of the charges. Technically, perhaps, abstract justice might be satisfied with the mere proving or disproving of those charges, a verdict of guilty or not guilty; and such a verdict might be reached in any trifling magisterial inquiry conducted in hole and corner fashion. Neither the Association nor the public wants this, nor, it would seem, the accusers, who chose the highest audience in the land before whom to lay their grievance. The Grenfell Association is a large and important body, enlisting in its cause the services of very eminent men and the generosity of thousands outside the Colony, and doing work the value of which to the country no one can deny. If it employs doubtful or illegal methods the fact should be fully exposed; if not, it should not be left under a suspicion in any mind which is certain to injure it much and the country a great deal more. We trust that the Government will take the proper course and appoint a commission of inquiry whose findings will have the greatest possible weight.

But the Association ask, and are justified in asking, something more than a process which may easily dwindle down to question and answer over a few more or less trifling points. They are accused of abusing Customs privileges and of other illegalities.

Mr. Crosbie, however, let fall another gem unnoticed, strange to say, of the Advocate. "He couldn't think," the report tell us, "of a more equitable or reasonable tax. Business men were allowed their living expenses, all their business expenses and $3,000 off their net profits." We will not accuse Mr. Crosbie of uttering an intentional falsehood in this sentence, about the most idiotic that has yet issued from the experts: we will credit him with honestly believing what he says. We thought we had almost exhausted the possibilities of this wonderful Act. Far from it. We are now informed that it allows the fortunate taxpayer his living expenses! A new thing in taxes and wholly to be commended. Is Mr. Crosbie quite sure it doesn't also give him an allowance for, say, automobiles and salmon-fishing? It is greatly to be desired that the present session do not end too quickly. Not half the members of the House have yet spoken on the Profits Tax. If the rest can only emulate in some degree their leaders, there will be a number of illuminating statements on business in general and the tax in particular worthy to be collected and perpetuated. They might be gathered into a volume, a sort of "Handbook of Finance" or "Parliamentary Guide for Budget Makers" for the use of political generations to come. The only danger would be that future generations, stumbling upon it, would mistake it for the extravagance of a would-be humorist.

Passing of a "Soggarth Aroon."

Rev. A. P. O'Hurley, Christian Brother, quietly entered into his eternal rest at the Monastery, Mount St. Francis, yesterday morning and his passing is a great loss to the educational life of the Colony in general and St. Patrick's Hall Schools, in which he spent over forty years of his useful life, in particular. He was the oldest Christian Brother in the country and taught school here the longest. He was the second of the Order to have his life closed in the land of his adoption, the only other being Rev. Bro. Byrne, of St. Bonaventure's College, who died some five years ago. Born in Dublin on September 9th, 1855, at the age of 14 he began the teaching profession in the Noble Order of which he was a prominent and estimable member. After laboring in Kilkenny, Ireland, for five years, he came to Newfoundland and taught school with the other pioneers, Rev. Bros. Holland, Tobin and Mitchell, who set the seed here, in the old Orphan Asylum and later in St. Patrick's Hall. He saw this institution, modest and small when it was first launched, make wonderful strides all down through the years. It had justified its existence at the outset but soon outlived its usefulness and to-day, due to the self-sacrificing efforts of the deceased and his associates, a splendid building and a commodious suite of school rooms, not inferior to any on this side of the Atlantic, can be seen. Yet despite this rapid growth and advancement the demands at present for the admission of pupils cannot be accommodated.

Brother O'Hurley, as he was best known, was a typical "Soggarth Aroon." Some of his kindly and tender ministrations towards the young children were almost incredible; his memory will be cherished by those whose privilege it was to come under his care and who owe their success in life both here and abroad to the thorough and complete training they got. Perhaps the best epitaph that could be written of Bro. O'Hurley was that he gave up his life for the instructing and uplifting of the young, though he always had a comforting and consoling word for the wayward ex-pupil, whose career he followed closely and was always interested in. The Monastic life of the deceased was very influential and worthy of emulation. Though a man of exceptional ability and attainments he did not aspire but to be an ordinary Brother and to carry on the training of the young. Latterly he did little routine teaching, but spent most of his time imparting religious duties, a post which he was eminently fitted for. By his pupils he was honoured, respected, beloved and those whom he taught, past as well as present pupils, will, no doubt, be deeply moved on hearing of his passing.

The beautiful attributes of the character of the "Soggarth Aroon" were perhaps only best known to his monastic associates. Deceased had been ailing only a few days. He was the last of his family, three brothers having predeceased him in recent years. The death of Rev. Bro. O'Hurley will mean a loss to the R. C. Church and to the State.

At 10 a.m. to-morrow Requiem Mass will be celebrated at the Cathedral, after which interment will take place at Belvidere. The deepest sympathy of the community will be expressed to the Brothers of Mt. St. Francis.

Garden Party at Job's Cove A GREAT SUCCESS.

Despite the very unfavorable weather an unusually large number of people attended the Garden Party at Job's Cove on August 15. The programme for the day was very attractive and the items were so arranged as to afford the greatest amount of enjoyment. All the afternoon, teas, ice cream, refreshments, etc., were sold by the ladies who worked unspairingly for the success of the festival. The winners of the various competitions were cheered heartily, as they received their prizes and walked proudly away.

The chief event of the afternoon was a football match between Job's Cove and Ochre Pit Cove. The game was fast and exciting. In the first half Ochre Pit Cove scored once through Gillingham, whilst P. Colbert succeeded in notching up two for Job's Cove. The second half taking pattern from the first ended the same. B. Colbert and P. Colbert scoring one each for Job's Cove, and J. Tobin scoring one for Ochre Pit Cove. Thus when the final whistle sounded Job's Cove team was victorious by a score of four to two. Mr. Leo English was referee, and although everybody did not quite agree with some of his decisions, yet he satisfied a great majority.

A dance held in the school, proved a great attraction for all lovers of terpsichore, and was attended by 120 couple. Those who were in charge are to be congratulated upon the success of the affair.

Lieut. Len Stick For India.

Mr. J. R. Stick, manager of the Royal Stores dry goods department, received a message from his son Lieut. Len Stick, now in the Old Country, stating that he was leaving for India in a few days. It will be remembered that in February of this year the British Government asked for officers to volunteer for the Indian service; Lieut. Stick made application and after considerable time was notified that he had been accepted and to prepare for his trip to the Far East. It was hoped that the gallant officer would be given home furlough before leaving to take up his new duties, as he is not likely to get an extended furlough for the next five years, that being the customary length of service required by officers attached to the Indian forces. On arrival at his destination he will enter an Indian college where he will study the languages and habits of the natives. There is a splendid opportunity for rapid promotion in this branch of the service, but it requires the right kind of a man to fill the job, and if past experience count for anything we bespeak for Lieut. Stick a brilliant career. As a private Len Stick is registered as No. 1 of the first 500 volunteers to answer the call in 1914.

The Gas Range!

The Gas Range means comfort for the housewife; shorter kitchen hours for her, and a cleaner kitchen. It is a great mistake to think that cooking with gas is expensive.

Whenever a woman becomes used to gas for cooking, thoughts of a coal or wood stove fill her with gloom. A Gas range is so much easier to operate, so efficient for all kinds of cooking, and so much cleaner, that the idea of going back to the old style methods is decidedly unpleasant. Yet in winter many housewives think they must use a coal or wood stove, because there is no other way of heating the kitchen. THERE IS ANOTHER WAY AND IT IS FAR BETTER THAN THE OLD. Two "Nines" and a Crowd V. The Empire.
(From the London Daily Mail, July 28th.)

The turf arena of classic Lord's invaded by a shouting crowd; a wonderful blue bank of hundreds of wounded soldiers; a din of sticks rattled on tins, horns, megaphones, and other instruments of encouragement and discouragement; enthusiasts who danced epileptically; enthusiasts with four-inch-square U.S.A. flags in their hat-bands; palanquins of Canadians who chorused scornfully, "N o w, then, you Yankees!"; a puzzled, somewhat lonely minority of Londoners on the stands; grey-clad players padded like crusaders; and in the middle of the playing field a mascot white goat in a brilliant red coat!

That was the scene at Lord's on Saturday afternoon when Canada, by 12 to 3, beat the United States in the great baseball game before then thousands of spectators.

If the ghost of any old M.C.C. habitué glided on Saturday afternoon into the pavilion, what happened? Can ghosts swoon?

Baseball, it may be said, forthwith, is a superb evolution of our British game of "rounders." It is partly a game played between two "nines" (corresponding to our cricket "eleven"). It is still more a game played by the two "nines" and crowd against the umpire (who was Mr. Frederic William Wile). It is a stirring, glorious game, incomparably livelier than cricket, for players, for spectators, and, above all, for the umpire.

"Rattling" The Umpire.
A baseball crowd thoroughly "rattles" the umpire even before the game starts. The umpire stands and smiles (or pretends to smile) while megaphones tell him his deplorable past and his disgraceful future. If he takes off his mask the "rooters" beg him to put it on again lest his features provoke bad weather; if he resumes his mask the "rooters" implore him to take it off and "give the ball a chance." An expert told me that Saturday's umpire was an excellent umpire, just and equitable as Rhadamanthus, but it made no difference. He was an umpire—that is enough for a baseball crowd.

As Canada's score modulated the roar and din of the "rooters" waxed greater. They were delirious in joy or delirious in anger. Among the group of players sat a Canadian officer with a megaphone. Every time Canada scored the officer leapt like a ram upon the grass, crying through the megaphone, "Hold me down! Hold me down!" When six runs had been scored the crowd sang "One Two, three, FOUR, FIVE SIX" in a crescendo chorus. They repeated the chorus, adding a number each time, until the twelve runs were scored. The climax of hectic excitement was when a "home run"—right round the three 90 feet base of the "diamond"—was scored.

In the middle of that transcendental uproar the American caught me lighting a pipe. He begged me to refrain. "It is not considered dignified," he urged, "to smoke pipes at baseball matches." It was during this climax of enthusiasm that the goat, who had hitherto maintained calmness, ended a war dance by charging his soldier leash-holder.

Baseball is a great game. It is high time that we imported it into Britain. The after-war "gate money" public will demand something less staid and prolonged than cricket. Baseball is as swift, brave, and skilled a game as exists. It is packed with thrills, it has not a dull minute.

CLEANING AND DYEING.
THE MANAGER: Say, kid, why don't you take a shower after the game? We're just as much entitled to use them baths, you know, as the home team.

THE RECRUIT: Well, boss, I'd like to but I'm afraid. Too many baths are dangerous to a fellow's constitution.

THE MANAGER: Wrong idea, son. Don't you remember the old saying: "Cleanliness is next to Godliness?"

THE RECRUIT: That may be, boss, but how about that sign over across the street—the one that says "Cleaning and Dyeing."

YER OUT!
A feir fanette sat on a ballplayer's knees. He made a nice "hit" and was working the "squeeze." He was on to her "curves" and was winning the dame. When old umpire Dad "Threw him out" of the game.

FRIDAY NIGHT.
Owing to the fact that Thursday night has been found to be the most convenient for the big "FAGS" game the game between the Wanderers and B. I. S. will therefore be played on Friday night.

FRENCH MAKE PROGRESS.
PARIS, To-day.
The French last night made further progress in Belgium. North of the road between Birschoote and Langemark. It is officially announced that they captured a strong point of support east of Steenebeke River. German attacks on Aisne front were repulsed. On the Verdun front, the French in a brilliant attack recaptured the positions recently taken by the Germans and completely re-established their lines.

AUSTRIANS BOMB FAMOUS VENETIAN BUILDING.
ROME, To-day.
Austrian airplanes which bombarded Venice last Tuesday dropped explosives on a civil hospital which forms part of the famous school of St. Mark. This school with its neighbor statue of General Barattolomeo Celsoni and the celebrated Church of St. John and St. Paul, containing the monumental tombs of the Doges, is considered one of the greatest wonders of the world. The chief ward in St. Mark's School, with its magnificent fifteenth century coffered ceiling, was struck by a bomb. One-third of the ceiling was destroyed, the falling fragments causing victims among the patients underneath. Fortunately no artistic damage was done either in the hall below or to the facade. The latter is decorated with unreplaceable sculptures and bas-reliefs. All the fragments of the ceiling were carefully assembled and will be preserved for reconstruction later.

ALLIED AIRMEN BOMB BELGIAN TOWN.
SAN VANGENT, Holland, To-day.
The terrific explosion of bombs dropped by the Entente Allied airmen in a raid shortly before midnight on Selzaet, a Belgian town on the Dutch frontier, 18 miles north of Ghent, awakened all the inhabitants of the town. German anti-aircraft batteries were very active, some of their shrapnel bursting over San Vangent. Ghent, which in normal times has a population of 170,000, was raided by the Entente Allied aviators.

DEEP TRENCHES AND DUGOUTS PASSING AWAY.
BRITISH FRONT.
France and Belgium, Aug. 19th.
The beginning of the fourth year of the war finds the Germans rapidly making radical changes in the methods of defence along the British battlefield in Northern France and Belgium. The continuous lines of wonderfully constructed forward trenches with deep dugouts in which lived and fought great numbers of men, are fast passing into the discard. The enemy is adopting a system of scattering his advance forces over a great depth of cunningly constructed strongholds. The myriad shell holes along the front now conceal innumerable small and more isolated garrisons of men, who formerly fought shoulder to shoulder along great stretches of picturesque ditches, through which the communication was not broken for miles. This alteration has been brought about by the ever growing preponderance of the British artillery, which buried the German front line trenches under an avalanche of shells and left the defence nothing but heaped furrows of earth and rendered the famous dugouts man traps, in which countless thousands have lost their lives without a chance of fighting back.

Continuously the deluge of breaking steel make repair work to the trenches impossible, and as the Germans were gradually pushed back, they of necessity were forced to invent another means of stemming the ever advancing tide. So that it has come to be the depth of the defences upon which the German depends in many places rather than the strength of his first line trenches. The recent allied offensive East and North of Ypres, disclosed many examples of this new scheme of fighting, which bids fair to take the place of the tactics of the past three years. Whenever the German front line trenches have been untenable, or where the British attack is expected one finds a new order of things the first German lines now consist of strong outposts concealed in shell craters or copes, and a considerable distance apart. Back of these outposts are chains and shell hole posts, each consisting of two or three craters connected by underground passages that often lead to dugouts. As the entire territory is pitted with holes this is easy of accomplishment, and it may be presumed that the Germans figure that it will be hard for allied observers to pick out the defended shell holes from thousands there scattered about. Where time has allowed, the Germans have made the shell hole defences with elaborate care. Each nest is heavily protected by barbed wire, and the chambers beneath are reinforced with timbers and concrete. In these infantry lurk with machine guns and rifles ready to rush out and begin firing if an attack is launched against them. The defences within Lens and its suburbs are striking examples of the German tendency and depend more and more upon large numbers in semi-isolated garrisons, rather than a mass of their men in trenches, where they would be at the mercy of the British artillery. Lens is a city of concrete and the ground beneath is honeycombed with tunnels. Almost every building has been destroyed by the Germans and the ruins have been fortified with machine gun emplacements. So long as the Germans remain on the defence, it is improbable that they will return to the methods of warfare inaugurated when they swept forward and were pushing the Allies. Hard fighting among these new German defences has given rise to many thrilling incidents. In the battle about Langemark, on the opening of the latest offensive, a young officer and twenty Somerset men had got through Langemark and were forging ahead along the road to the north, when they encountered two strong concrete redoubts one behind the other, which were still firing into the town; the Somersets surrounded the first redoubt and under a cruel fire assaulted it with bombs and machine guns and forced the garrison of 30 Germans to surrender. They then started for the second redoubt. One by one they fell and when finally the stronghold was reached there remained only six men and the youthful leader. The officer hurled two bombs through the narrow opening into the redoubt and threw two more against the steel door, but without effect. Rushing up to the door he hammered with his fist and called out fiercely for the Germans to surrender. Thereupon followed a remarkable scene, the door being thrown open and forty-two Germans filing out with hands raised. With them was a Yorkshire man who was wounded and taken prisoner two or three days before. The remnant of the little British line collected its 74 prisoners and returned to its own lines.

NAVAL BATTLE COMING?
BERLIN, To-day.

EXPLOSION IN QUEBEC.
MONTREAL, To-day.
One man dead and six more or less seriously injured is the known human toll taken in a terrific explosion or series of fifty-two explosions on Saturday morning at the Power Plant of Curtis & Harvey Co. at Dragon, Quebec, that literally smashed most of the houses in the village, broke windows and shook houses miles away. There are fears that more may have been killed or injured, as it has been practically impossible to ascertain definitely the full extent of the loss, owing to the condition of the destroyed buildings, and the fact that the employees got as far away as possible from the scene of the disaster. Two hundred and fifty men were in the plant when the first explosion occurred. The dead man was Gordon Shortcode, an English expert foreman. The monetary loss is placed at two millions. It was an accident pure and simple, due to chemical reaction in the flaking section of the plant and not to neglect or any defect.

CANADIANS VICTORIOUS.
CANADIAN HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Sunday afternoon.—The enemy has accepted defeat, temporarily at least, since the virtual destruction of his storming columns which sought to penetrate our new position at dawn yesterday. There has been no organized counter attack. The German artillery is still active. Our gun positions have been subjected to a bombardment with gas shells. The regulation gas mask affords complete protection, and although it is not so easy to serve the guns when masks are worn our gunners are still able to find their targets. The tired infantry are resting, enjoying the bright sunshine and cooling breeze. Their condition is vastly better than after Vimy Ridge. The whole fourth Prussian Guard Division has been used for the recent counter attacks and the losses suffered make it of no value as an attacking force. After the supreme effort on Saturday morning between four and five hundred bodies were counted along a single brigade front. The enemy commissioned officers put the blame for their disaster largely on the shoulders of green officers, who exposed their commands in close formation to our artillery and machine gun fire. The N. C. O.'s are very much disgusted at being captured by a few Canadians. As a matter of fact the captors of some of these guards units numbered much less than the prisoners they brought in. Now that our men have had time to explore Hill 70 its hidden strength is being disclosed. There are many dugouts forty feet or more down in chalk, where nothing short of an earthquake could disturb the occupants. Machine gun posts were everywhere. In chalk pits alone a body of no less than 260 men had over twenty machine guns. Our attack was so sudden that some of these guns never were in action. The enemy's information as to our intention to attack was very accurate.

Danish Steamer Refloated.
The Danish steamer Fredericia, which went ashore at Burnt Cove Head, between Renewes and Broad Cove, early on Saturday morning, was towed off at 9.30 a.m. yesterday by the s.s. Petrel and Meigle, which were despatched to the scene on Saturday. The latter ship is reported to have run on a sand bank while attempting to rescue the Dane but was soon after refloated and assisted the Petrel in towing the stranded ship back into deep water. The Fredericia was built a little over a year ago and is 760 tons net. The damage done was slight. It is also reported that local parties have made an offer to purchase the ship.

Calling People "Spleeny."

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

"Yes I suppose she isn't very well but I think she's inclined to be rather spleeny. She thinks an awful lot about her health. I think she'd be better off if she'd 'spudge up' a bit and not think so much about herself." So I heard one woman characterize another the other day.

The woman characterized had been visiting the other and had had the misfortune to have an attack of a chronic malady during the visit.

She Is One Of Those Terribly Healthy People.

The woman who did the characterizing is one of those people who are born of hardy stock, have abundant vitality and think it "all nonsense" for other people not to be as abundantly healthy as themselves.

This trick of fancying that the other fellow is spleeny when he does not feel up to the mark is one of the commonest human frailties.

We know he isn't well, but we can't help feeling that if we had the same ailment we would stand up under it better, would throw it off more bravely, would not act so depressed (and depressing). Why, we can remember perfectly well times when we felt just as bad as he does and wouldn't give in to it.

Maybe He's Bearing Up Wonderfully.

And there's the rub. How do we know we felt just as bad? How do we know just how he does feel. Maybe, to do even as much as he does, to bear up even as well as he is bearing up, is performing prodigies of self-control.

quest. How on the face of the earth can we know?

I once had a great lesson in this which has helped me ever since. Some years ago a relative of mine with whom I was living had a bad attack of tonsillitis, a disease with which neither of us had had any experience until then. She was completely felled by it. For a while I nursed her willingly and did her share of the work, and then I began to wonder if she weren't a little bit spleeny because she didn't seem to have more ambition to get well, didn't try to make herself eat, didn't push herself a little harder. Yes, I'm not proud of it, but to tell the truth such were my hidden feelings.

I Found Myself In Her Place.

And then the germ reached me and I also succumbed. I also felt that deadly lethargy, that miserable inertia that hangs like a weight upon one's every movement, almost on one's every thought. And then I knew how unjust I had been.

And that is why I am more careful nowadays how I adjudge people spleeny, more sceptical when I hear other people pass that judgment.

The codfish multiplies faster than the common house fly, and scientists tell us that it is nothing unusual to see a preoccupied mother codfish sitting patiently on 5,000,000 eggs in a cramped attitude. Why is it that nature allows the codfish to hatch out so many eggs and yet limits the self-sacrificing setting hen to one dozen, including a porcelain decoy?

THE CODFISH.

The codfish is a coarse, salt-rising animal which grows near Boston, Massachusetts, and is eaten in an absorbed and diligent manner as far west as the railroads go. Great diligence is required in eating a codfish which has not been thoroughly shredded, as it consists almost entirely of long, compound bones which cannot be swallowed without causing a feeling of deep personal annoyance.

The codfish has a fascinating history. It was discovered by two of the Pilgrim Fathers who went fishing on Sunday and caught an adult codfish with a spoon hook, eating of the same soon afterward. Their impressions of the codfish are not obtainable, as they were found on the beach a few days later considerably defunct. This affair aroused an unreasoning prejudice against the codfish, and for years the serving of the succulent codfish ball was considered a greater crime against the laws of the colony than thinking out loud in a grove which nobody else had ventured into.

It is fond of the Little Neck clam, which it swallows, roof and all.

Personally, the codfish has little or no refinement of character, and will eat anything from a cold chisel to a carp. It is fond of the Little Neck clam, which it swallows, roof and all. Yet nobody ever heard of a codfish complain of indigestion, which teaches us that the human stomach is one of the most overestimated articles in common use.

The codfish grows to be almost as tall as a man and weighs as much as one hundred and fifty pounds, including the rich veins of rock salt which run through it. There is nothing winsome or attractive about the average codfish, as it has no forehead to speak of and a countenance which rarely lights up with a gleam of intelligence. The older codfish wear a thin, straggling beard and run heavily to bone and muscle. All of the creamed codfish served at hotels west of the Mississippi River have reached the age of four-score years and ten, and have a flavour similar to that of scalloped sawdust.

FRIENDLESS.

"Gee whizz," I hear the kaiser sigh. "I'm tired of war and all its works; I have no friend beneath the sky, outside of Bulgars and of Turks. Before I sprang this world wide scrap, to spread my kultur far and near, I was a rather well-liked chap, on this and 'other hemisphere. In all the arts I then excelled, I used to paint, I used to draw; with admiration critics yelled, when they my masterpiece saw. I used to write majestic hymns, and great musicians, when they heard, would go away on halting limbs, and shoot themselves without a word. I used to follow useful ends, I piled the chisel and the lyre; ach, then my world was full of friends, who came long journeys to admire. My curves were then, so smooth and fine, men tried to emulate my stunt; they brushed their whiskers just like mine, and tried to wear a War Lord front. Also, those days are drowned in gore, and lyres have given place to dirks, and I must herd forever more with Bulgars and with greasy Turks. No matter who may win the fight, Herr Haig or old man Hindengrad, the world will say to me good night—I'm in too bad, I'm in too bad!"

THE MORNING WALK.

Did you ever dress hurriedly and rush out into the crisp morning air for a jaunt before breakfast? Maybe you are a business woman and are obliged to do this every morning of your life, except Sundays, and on that day you prefer the luxury of your warm bed. You have earned it and deserve it, but there are hundreds of women who do not open their sleepy eyes until noon and drag themselves around the house, until dinner time in a kimono.

If ever they experienced the ecstasy of the crisp wind whipping their pallid cheeks, if ever they knew the thrill of filling their arms with crimson leaves or pine boughs or holly, if ever they allowed themselves the joy of hurrying over the frozen earth with the red blood tingling in their veins they would never more don the kimono in the morning when they arise. They would be up early in their outdoor costume, and hustle out into the grand joyous open.

Trying is believing; no words can convince as easily as the experiment.

Your Boys and Girls.

An indoor snow-ball battle will furnish amusements on days when an outdoor one is impossible and it is as disastrous as it sounds. Put all the furniture in the corners of the room. Then take a quantity of old newspapers and let the children crush them into huge balls. Have them divide into sides. Place them on each side and let the bombardment begin. The sides which sends the larger number of balls to the other side in a given length of time wins.

A paper railroad is a quieter form of amusement. The children cut the paper into strips about half an inch wide; then these strips are laid on the floor, end to end, and held in place by pins stuck lengthwise into the carpet. Single or double tracks running over books or hassocks, and little paper houses can be "built" for stations. Groups of these placed at intervals along the railroad, may be the cities and villages. The trains can be paste-board boxes and spool wheels, and the passengers can be paper dolls.

FRENCH REPULSE GERMAN ATTACKS.

PARIS, Aug. 18. After violently bombarding the French positions German troops last night made consecutive attacks on the French trenches in the Priest Wood, west of the Muerthe and Moselles River and in the Vosges Mountains to the east of Badoviller and north of Celles Sur Plane. The French official report issued to-day says all the German assaults were repulsed and that the Germans suffered heavy casualties. German surprise attacks on the Aisne front, it is announced, also failed.

OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

LONDON, Aug. 19. The official statement from British headquarters in France reads: In addition to the unsuccessful attack northwest of Lens, reported in this morning's official statement, the enemy made two other counter attacks this morning on this front. One was east of Loos and the other in the neighborhood of Hugovood. In the first case the enemy's attacking troops were caught by our barrage and machine gun fire at short range and were driven back in disorder with heavy losses. In the second attack also the enemy's infantry, though supported by flamethrower, failed to reach our trenches. On the Ypres battle front the hostile artillery has been quieter during the day. The strong west wind yesterday again told against our airplanes, giving the machines damaged in combat east of our line little chance of reaching their objectives. Bombing raids and the policy of harassing the enemy's infantry with machine gun fire was continued actively by us. Observation work for our artillery was carried out all day, and an unusually large number of photographs were taken. In the air fighting twelve German airplanes were brought down and eighteen others were driven down out of control. Twelve of our machines are missing, two of which collided during a fight and fell within the enemy's lines.

WAR OFFICE STATEMENT.

LONDON, Aug. 19. A statement given out by the war office to-day reads: "We carried out a successful local operation this morning southeast of Ephey, in which we captured the German trenches in the neighborhood of Gillemont Farm and took several prisoners. Last night our raiding parties entered the enemy's positions southwest of Havincourt and returned with a few prisoners, after inflicting heavy casualties on the hostile garrison. On the night of Thursday and Friday enemy aircraft bombed the British casualty clearing stations. Ten wounded German prisoners were killed and nine wounded by German bombs.

GERMAN DESTROYER ON FIRE.

LONDON, Aug. 19. The Admiralty announce that a hostile destroyer and two mine sweepers were badly damaged by British naval forces. British warships were not damaged. The announcement follows: Some of our light naval forces scouting off a German light on Aug. 15th sighted an enemy destroyer at 9.45 a.m. Fire was opened and the enemy destroyer was chased. She was seen to be repeatedly hit and to be on fire, but she escaped through the mist over the mine field. The enemy mine sweepers were sighted shortly after the sighting of the destroyer and a heavy fire was opened on them. At least two of the mine sweepers were seen to be very severely damaged, but similarly with the destroyer our ships were unable to follow them owing to mist.

WORK OF CANADIANS.

Canadian Headquarters in France, via London, Aug. 19 (By Stewart Lyon, Special Correspondent of the Canadian Press).—The most fierce engagement of the Canadian front since the beginning of the war is gradually coming to a triumphant end by the exhaustion of the enemy. Since the capture of Hill 70 and St. Laurent on Wednesday morning, the men defending their newly won positions have been compelled to stand by almost without cessation to meet the counter attacks. The leaders of the German troops are utterly regardless of the lives of their men. As soon as one division has spent itself in a frantic and futile effort to recover the lost ground another is sent forward to the sacrifice. The Fourth Guards were cut to pieces in yesterday's counter attacks and during the night a new division, the 220th was brought up passing through their own lines, without stopping these fresh troops. Attacks at 4.30 o'clock Saturday morning on the Hugo Wood sector, north of Hill 70 was accompanied by a projection of the enemy liquid fire and gas. Our watchful artillery turned upon the Germans an effective barrage which caused heavy losses, but they continued to advance with the utmost determination. The prisoners now number over eleven hundred. One of the most heroic deeds put on record in the Canadian corps since the war began is that of a runner of Colonel Ormonder of the Alberta Battalion. The company to which he was attached was hotly engaged near the chalk pits and he was given a message to take back to the battalion headquarters over ground on which shells were falling continuously. He had not gone far when he was seen to fall and another runner was at once sent with a duplicate of the message.

KORN/LOFF TELEGRAPHS HAIG.

London, Aug. 19 (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency).—Reuter's correspondent at British headquarters in France telegraphs. General Korniloff has telegraphed Sir Douglas Haig as follows: "I have the honor to inform you that I have taken over the command of the Russian armies. I am convinced that on the re-establishment of strict discipline, the Russian armies will devote all their powers at an early date to assist the efforts towards the attainment of the common objects which unite us." General Haig replied assuring General Korniloff of the best wishes of himself and the British armies for the complete success of General Korniloff's great task as well as wishing confidence in the Russian armies and the victory of the allied cause.

GERMAN ATTACKS BREAK DOWN.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 19. German troops yesterday attacked the Russian positions near the village of Stakhavey, on the Vilna front, but according to the Petrograd war office, the attacks broke down under the Russian fire. On the Roumanian front the Austro-Germans several times assaulted the Russo-Roumanian lines south of Grozochiti, in southwestern Moldavia, but were repulsed. The battle in the Slanic region lasted all day and ended in the evening with the Teutons being repulsed.

GERMAN AIRPLANES IN TROUBLE.

THE HAGUE, Aug. 19. Two German airplanes, each carrying three men, landed near Wincaten late to-day. One was in flames and the other was shot down by the Dutch soldiers. The occupants of the machines were uninjured.

PORTUGUESE.

LONDON, Aug. 19. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency).—Captain Ferriero Simah, Portuguese military attache, who has just returned from the front in France, says the Portuguese troops are very content and had plenty of comforts and supplies and hitherto had not lost an inch of the ground entrusted to them. He added that the Portuguese troops had been mobilized for home service in the colonies, notably Africa, where Portugal was bearing all the expense of her own campaign.

AMMUNITION PLANT EXPLODES.

MONTREAL, Aug. 19. A serious explosion has occurred at an ammunition plant at Dragon, between Ottawa and Montreal. It is believed 250 lives have been lost.

AIR RAID ALARM SOUNDED.

PARIS, Aug. 19. An air raid alarm was sounded at 3 o'clock this morning. The sky was clear and within a quarter of an hour the hum of defence airplanes could be heard as they circled over the city. At 4.05 the bugles were sounded, indicating the danger was over.

GERMAN TROOPS REPULSED.

LONDON, Aug. 19. The German troops in Flanders were completely repulsed by the British after sharp fighting, according to the British official statement issued to-day.

GREAT ACHIEVEMENT.

British Front in France and Belgium, Aug. 18.—Another phase of the battle of Flanders has ended and the Allies are looking back on one of the greatest achievements of the war. The attack against the Germans east of Ypres, which resulted in such sanguinary fighting has not, to be sure, accomplished the advance desired, but the push to the north of here represents one of the remarkable accomplishments of the year. The French yesterday were consolidating the positions won Thursday and the British were establishing themselves well beyond Langemarck, their forward positions being about half a mile to the east of that place. Fighting is still continuing at various points where the Germans are attempting to regain the lost ground, but the positions remain much the same as at the close of Thursday's heavy battle. In Lens theatre the operations of the Canadians yesterday added still another strong section of the German defences to the positions already wrested from the enemy. The Canadians attacked a strongly fortified trench system just a little to the northwest of Lens and after several hours of hand-to-hand fighting, captured it. The assault was on a front of approximately 450 yards and the Germans made determined resistance, because of the importance of the position which formed part of the defence of the city itself. The Canadians attacked with bombs and bayonets. For four or five hours the fighting surged back and forth, first one side than the other gaining a hold. The Germans finally abandoned the fight. The enemy territory beyond Langemarck already is showing the effect of British artillery fire. The guns have been moved forward rapidly and are giving excellent support to the infantry in advanced positions. The concrete redoubts which dotted the region to the west of Langemarck are fewer. Instead one can get a glimpse of the green cultivated fields of Belgium, a striking change of scene from the ground over which the British have just fought. Most of the German snipers who were concealed in shell holes and remained behind the British advance having surrendered, one redoubt which gave trouble: that of An Bon Cite, southwest of Langemarck, surrendered after being surrounded for many hours by bombers who waited for an opening of one of the steel trap doors to throw in high explosive bombs. The Germans saw the situation and mustered courage to open the trap door far enough to call out that they surrender. While less success was achieved by the British on their right wing, the story of the fierce battles are reflecting much credit on the troops which went into the attack, and no more bitter fighting has been recorded in recent days than occurred in a nearby wood. The London troops fought their way into the wood and held on.

ENEMY COUNTER ATTACKS FAIL.

LONDON, Aug. 18. The enemy to-day delivered another counter attack against our recently captured positions northwest of Lens. He was again completely repulsed. There was considerable enemy artillery activity during the night in this neighborhood and also northeast of Ypres.

SUCCESSFUL AIR RAID.

LONDON, Aug. 18. The Admiralty announces that another raid was carried out about midnight Thursday by the Naval Air Service on the railway station and junction at Thourout, a town in the west of Flanders, eleven miles southwest of Bruges. Fires were caused and it is thought that an ammunition dump was hit and the railway damaged. Many tons of bombs were dropped. All the machines returned safely.

NEW APPOINTMENT.

LONDON, Aug. 18. The appointment of George J. Wardle, as Parliamentary Secretary of the Board of Trade is welcomed by the press opposed to the Stockholm Socialist Conference as indicating that he accepts the attitude of the Government with regard thereto. His acceptance of the office is regarded as the more significant, as he accompanied Arthur Henderson, who recently resigned as member of the War Council, and James Ramsay MacDonald, Chairman of the Labor Party, on their recent famous visit to Paris, since which time he has not declared his views. The appointment of Geo. H. Roberts as Minister of Labor, necessitates his seeking re-election in Norwich. Other appointees do not incur the obligation of re-appearing to their constituents.

RAILROAD STRIKE FEARED.

LONDON, Aug. 18. There is considerable danger of an immediate strike involving about half the engineers and firemen employed on British railroads, the main point at issue being the recognition of the principle of an eight-hour day, although the demand does not necessarily include making the principle effective during the war. Those concerned number about forty thousand and belong to the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen. This Union is distinct from the much larger national union of railway men, which is involved.

For the Council's Attention.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—Since John Anderson has been so good in getting for us the Daylight Bill, we are enabled to go into the country along Monkstown Road, which is now one of the nicest roads in the East End, and walk along the country lanes inhaling all the lovely odors of flowers and new-mown hay with which we fill our lungs and also get the nice cool breezes off the rivers and ponds which is refreshing after the great heat experienced on Water Street. All along this road we see people are doing up their gardens with lovely flowers thus making the thoroughfare a pleasure to walk on. After having been in the country enjoying everything and getting our lungs full, the night being warm we do not trouble to get home too early and at 11.30 we went our way home along Monkstown Road and what a difference! When we get to the bottom of Maxse Street what an odor greets our nostrils from two unsightly cans stuck in the middle of the sidewalk, a perfect disgrace in such a nice locality spoiling the harmony of the whole surroundings. A little farther over a party had to remove two good houses because sewerage wasn't in them, and now two houses are built on the same site with all appliances in them. Why are these cans allowed to adorn the sidewalks of Monkstown Road. Come, Mr. Gosling have a law for all, not a law against one individual and let the other go free. Fair is fair. If you intend to take a walk any night between 11 and 12 along Monkstown Road look out at the bottom of Maxse Street and have the strongest scent in McMurdo's store on your handkerchief ready to take one long sniff or else you will be sorry, and also keep on the other side.
Yours very sincerely,
SUNNY SIDIE.
