CHAPTER XXVII.

"Yes," he said, as calmly as before; "I loved you. Why else should I have married you? I should have loved you to the end, while life lasted, if I had not learned what you had been. Even then I would have fought against that terrible knowledge and—remained with you, if I had not learned also that you were without a heart, that you had married me for a place in the world—for money."

He paused and looked gravely at her. All the while he had been talking to her, looking at her, he had been thinking of Decima; had been contrasting this woman, his wife, the adventuress with her vile past, contrasting her with the pure-minded girl who had just left him. It was as if an angel of light had flown from his side and a fiend in woman's shape had taken her place. His heart felt numbed with the misery of despair, with the utter hopelessness of the situation.

It was as if he had been suddenly awakened from an exquisite dream of bliss to find that his hours were numbered; or, worse still, that the rest of his days were to be spent in a darkness and anguish beyond words to describe. He had touched the key of the door behind him, and, half mechanically, he looked it and moved to the fireplace and looked at her again.

"I am sorry that you have compelled me to say all this," he said, with a courtesy more galling than any vituperation, any reproach, would have been. "Will you tell me what, having found me, you intend to do? I suppose you and your brother have made some plans."

She raised her eyes suddenly. "Did Morgan know who you were, that you lived here?" she demanded. Gaunt looked faintly surprised. "Yes," he said, quietly. "Was it not he who betrayed me? It would be like him, worthy of him. I did not bribe him, he was worth enough, I suppose."

"You—you bribed him? Then he knew all the time, and kept it from me. Kept it from me all the while he was pretending to look for you."

"Yes," said Gaunt, indifferently; for what did it matter now? "I bribed him, as you put it. I paid him to keep the secret of my identity. He discovered it."

She sprang to her feet. "You are a pretty pair!" she exclaimed, with a hard laugh. "So he has been taking money to—help rob me of my rights! Oh, I'll be even with him!"

"I have no doubt you will," said Gaunt, wearily. "But may I ask you to answer my question. What do you intend to do?"

"What am I going to do?" she said, mockingly, tauntingly. "Can you ask?"

He smiled. "Let that thought console you; let it content you. I shall say no word, utter no denial."

The calmness of his acquiescence startled her. She went closer to him, and looked at him keenly. "You are going away—out of England. Are you going alone, I wonder?" For the first time his calmness broke down. It was as if she had found the chink in his armor through which she could thrust an envenomed dagger.

She saw the change in his expression, and uttered a cry. "Ah, you are not! There is some woman!" She laughed discordantly. "Don't deny it! I can see it in your face! So, that's it! I can understand now!"

She stood before him, her face flushed, her eyes glittering. "What a fool I was not to have hit upon it before! There's another woman!"

He had regained his old calmness, and met her furious, taunting gaze with impassive sternness. No man could be more impassive, more stone-like than Gaunt when he chose. "You don't deny it!" she went on, scanning his face. "Ah, I know that look! There is some one else!"

I am going to have my rights! I am going to live with you!"

He made a slight gesture of dissent. "You can not do that," he said, gravely. "I could not live with you."

"You can't help it!" she said, jeeringly. "The law is on my side, and it shall help me. I'll go to law. I will go to a solicitor directly—I leave here. He shall claim my right, to have your name—my proper name—Lady Gaunt."

"I can not withhold that from you," he said, with perfect calm. "No; and I mean to hold you, too," she said, defiantly, gloatingly. "Where a husband is, there a wife has a right to be. You can't cast me off, and you shall not! I'll have my title, and—half your money!"

"Ah, yes," he said, almost to himself. "Yes; and I'll go into the world, the society my rank is entitled to, and I'll go as your wife, by your side. You shall take me and introduce me to all your relations and friends."

He smiled bitterly, coolly; and the smile seemed to madden her. "You refuse?" she said. "I refuse, yes," he said, grimly. "You may have all else you demand. The title, the money—far more than half of that which belongs to me; but no more. I could not face the world by your side."

She laughed stridently. "Could you not? We will avail myself of it. I will enter an action—compel you, yes, compel you to acknowledge me and live with me."

"You can not," he said, as if he were stating a simple fact. "I leave England in a few hours; I shall be beyond the reach of even your malice."

She sprang from the chair, upsetting it in her violence, and it fell against the small table, overturning it. It came to the ground with a crash, and the bric-a-brac was strewn upon the floor.

As she rose to her feet she uttered a cry, a cry like that of a wild beast balked of its revenge. Gaunt looked at the overturned table and curiously. A knock came at the door.

"Did you call, sir?" asked the maid outside. "No," said Gaunt; and she went away.

"Take care!" said Laura, hoarsely, as she pushed the hair from her forehead. "You don't know what I can do! You talk of your name—the disgrace and shame! I can drag it in the dust for you—and, by Heaven! I will, too! I'll tell the whole story! I'll fill the papers with 'Lord and Lady Gaunt's Case.' I'll make you a laughing-stock throughout England."

"Yes," he said, with a terrible calmness, "you can do that; and I have no doubt you will. But you can not compel me to live with you. And the world will understand why I do not."

Her face went white, and she ground her teeth. "What do I care?" she said. "I shall have had my revenge. You won't be able to show your face in England again; and I—I shall live here, shall be Lady Gaunt, your wife, your ill-used wife!"

He smiled. "Let that thought console you; let it content you. I shall say no word, utter no denial."

The calmness of his acquiescence startled her. She went closer to him, and looked at him keenly. "You are going away—out of England. Are you going alone, I wonder?" For the first time his calmness broke down. It was as if she had found the chink in his armor through which she could thrust an envenomed dagger.

She saw the change in his expression, and uttered a cry. "Ah, you are not! There is some woman!" She laughed discordantly. "Don't deny it! I can see it in your face! So, that's it! I can understand now!"

She stood before him, her face flushed, her eyes glittering. "What a fool I was not to have hit upon it before! There's another woman!"

He had regained his old calmness, and met her furious, taunting gaze with impassive sternness. No man could be more impassive, more stone-like than Gaunt when he chose. "You don't deny it!" she went on, scanning his face. "Ah, I know that look! There is some one else!"

She came and stood beside him, so close that the perfume he hated seemed to suffocate him. He caught his breath, but said never a word, and his silence increased her fury. "You to talk of shame and disgrace!" she said. "You hypocrite! You—you liar! Shame and disgrace, indeed! Yes, you shall have them, and not you alone, but she, whoever she is! I'll find it all out, drag her through the divorce court!"

He did not move a muscle, but stood regarding her with perfect calm. "Who is she?" she demanded. "You may as well tell me. One of your great lady friends—a woman of rank, or some common girl?" She paused for breath and looked round the room.

As evil chance would have it, her eye fell upon Decima's veil. It had come unfastened from the side of her hat as Decima had entered, and she had taken it off and laid it on the top of a cabinet.

Laura sprang to it, and seizing it, held it out to him. "Whose is this?" she demanded, hoarsely. "Why, she's here now—this moment—in your rooms!"

She sprang to the door of the inner room and tore at the handle. Then, when she found it was locked, she turned upon him.

"She's here—in that room. Unlock that door! Unlock it! I'm your wife, and I order you—" Her voice broke and faltered chokingly. Gaunt watched her—or say, rather, that his eyes were fixed on the veil. Remember how he loved Decima, how devotedly he worshipped her innocence and purity. He pictured this fury dragging out the girl he loved and covering her with vituperation and abuse. Remembered this, and bear with him, for he needs all your charity and clemency.

He sprang forward, and seizing her by the arm, flung her on to the couch. "Silence!" he said, as he tore the veil from her fingers. "Silence! You—desecrate—" He thrust the veil in his breast, and stood over her, panting and struggling for the mastery of his passion. "Do what you will," he said at last, when he had regained something like calm. "Do all you have threatened; but—but go now; leave me! It is not safe!"

His voice rose at the last words; they could have been heard plainly by any one who happened to be in the corridor.

She leaned back, rubbing the arm he had gripped. "Go! go!" she retorted, defiantly, tauntingly. "No, I will not go? Why should I? This is your house, and I am your wife! My place is here! I shall not go! And you can't compel me! I am your wife—your wife! It's that other woman who is hiding here, the other—"

She uttered a word that can not be written, and as it struck his ears, Gaunt raised his hand as if to silence her mocking, taunting lips. Then the hand fell to his side, and he said, hoarsely:

"If you will not go, I will! Stay where you are! Do not attempt to follow me! I—I can not answer for myself!"

He strode to the door and unlocked it, and looked at her for a moment. "Go!" she cried, with a strident laugh; "go to her, I say! This place is mine—mine! I am your wife! As for her—Shame and disgrace. You shall have enough of it—both of you—and to spare. I'll—"

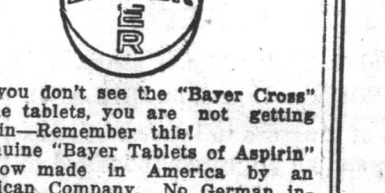

Gaunt took up his hat, passed into the inner room, locking the door as he did so. He looked round wildly. The room was empty. Decima was not there.

His brain was in a whirl; he scarcely knew where he was, what he was doing. All his thoughts were of Decima—to get her out of the place, out of reach of the demon he had just left. He looked round the room again. Her hat and jacket were not there. He went hurriedly into the next room—a bath and dressing-room. She was not there, nor was there any trace of her. The room adjoining was a kind of "den" in which he kept his guns and fishing-tackle—a bachelor's litter-room. She was not there. He looked round, and drew a breath of relief. She must have gone. It was just possible that she had not heard a word of what had passed between him and—his wife. Oh, God, his wife!

OTHER TABLETS NOT ASPIRIN AT ALL

Only Tablets with "Bayer Cross" are Genuine Aspirin

If you don't see the "Bayer Cross" on the tablets, you are not getting Aspirin—Remember this! Genuine "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" are now made in America by an American Company. No German interest whatever, all rights being purchased from the United States Government.

During the war, acid imitations were sold as Aspirin in pill boxes and various other containers. The "Bayer Cross" is your only way of knowing that you are getting genuine Aspirin, proved safe by millions for Headache, Neuralgia, Colds, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Neuritis, and for pain generally.

Aspirin is the trade mark (Newfoundland Registration No. 751), of Bayer Manufacture of Monocacetic Acid, dextro of Salicylic Acid. Handy tin boxes of 12 tablets—also larger sizes! "Bayer" packages can be had at drug stores. The Bayer Co., Inc., U.S.A.

Sydney Steel Mills Closed Down.

4,000 Men Out of Employment—Fistic Encounter in British Commons—Unionist and Nationalist M.P.'s Come to Blows—Murderers of British Officers Captured—Death Stalks Crowd at Football Match.

STEEL MILLS CLOSED DOWN.

SYDNEY, N.S., Nov. 22. When 25 railroad employees of the Dominion Steel Corporation served an ultimatum on the management today demanding a settlement of their wage differences before five o'clock, the company replied by closing down the various mills and ordering the banking of the blast furnaces. This action automatically threw four thousand men out of employment, pending settlement of the dispute with railroaders. It is estimated that it will require at least a week to get the furnaces in operation again, and it is believed that the big plant will be tied up for that period at least. The company in the meantime, it is understood, is making application to Ottawa for redress under provisions of the Industrial Disputes Act. It has been stated that lack of orders has been threatening operations of steel plants in Dublin on Sunday under guise of plants for some weeks past. For the past two years railroaders employed within the steel plant have been contending for the scale awarded all other railroaders in Canada, following the McAdoo award in the United States.

ROUGH STUFF IN THE COMMONS.

LONDON, Nov. 22. A violent scene occurred in the House of Commons this afternoon during the period of questions regarding the situation in Ireland. Joseph Devlin, Nationalist, and a Unionist member came to blows. The sitting was suspended. The altercation arose after Premier Lloyd George had addressed the House briefly on the subject, being followed by Devlin. The Premier, when he rose, said he shared with the speaker who had preceded him the horror all felt at the cold-blooded murder of unarmed British officers. The Government, continued Lloyd George, had resolved to suppress murder and conspiracy in Ireland. It was realized that to overcome such carefully organized and highly subsidized plots would take time, but the Government was convinced that despite recent happenings the Irish authorities were succeeding in breaking up the "gangs of assassins." The Premier said, however, that should experience show that the powers possessed by the Irish Government had proved insufficient for that purpose, the Government would have no hesitation in asking Parliament for such further authority as might be necessary to achieve that end. Devlin arose and asked why it was that when Sir Hamar Greenwood, Chief Secretary for Ireland, was asked a question he recited the horrible occurrences which had happened yesterday, and yet said nothing about the appearance of a military force at a football match? He was interrupted with loud cries of "sit down." Devlin retorted "I shan't sit down," and continued, "why has the House not been made acquainted with a report of these, of the entry of the military into the football field and the indiscriminate shooting of ten people. There were loud cries of 'Oh' from the House at this. Sir Hamar replied emphatically that he had been asked nothing about that question, but that he was prepared to answer. Devlin again arose, amidst angry cries of "sit down" and was endeavouring to speak when a member below him endeavoured to pull him down. Devlin lunged forward fiercely in an effort to shake off the hold of the member and the latter rising to his feet the two closed with each other. Other members came forward to separate the pair, but despite these efforts the two men struggled, Devlin losing his coat in the crush but still holding his own. "This is English courage and English chivalry to attack one man in six hundred." After a minute or two they were forced into seats by friends, and the speaker suspended the sitting. Upon resumption of the session Major John Molson, Coalition Unionist member for Gainsborough Division of Lincolnshire, who was Devlin's opponent, rose and apologized to Devlin, to the speaker and to the House, saying he was afraid he had allowed himself to be provoked and had forgotten himself. Devlin accepted the apology and assured Major Molson in this or any other matter that affected him in the House he had no personal feelings. His complaint was against the growing practice of the members taking out of order in relation to questions. The question he wished asked was why the Chief Secretary for Ireland had not recited all the incidents which occurred in Dublin on Sunday, instead of giving a part of the story? The minister had not told of the murder of ten or fifteen civilians, Devlin pointed out Sir Hamar said that question he was willing to reply and said the authorities had reason to attend the match in order to carry out the murders, consequently a mixed force surrounded the grounds. This force was fired upon and in firing back killed ten and wounded others. Sir Hamar also gave details of the finding of revolvers and the crushing to death of a man and woman, which later he regretted.

ASSASSINS CAPTURED.

LONDON, Nov. 22. Three of the assassins of the British officers in Dublin on Sunday were captured red-handed with their arms. It was announced in the House of Commons this afternoon by Sir Hamar Greenwood, Chief Secretary for Ireland. One of the assassins had been wounded on the head.

HARD TO BELIEVE.

LONDON, Nov. 22. Sir Hamar Greenwood, Chief Secretary for Ireland, declared in the House of Commons today that the plans of "paid assassins" discovered recently included destruction of life and property in England as well as in Ireland.

TOWNSHEND AN M.P.

LONDON, Nov. 22. Sir Charles Townshend, defender of Kut, was elected as independent member for Wrekin in the bye-election today. Sir Charles recently retired from the army because he was not given employment. It was rumored he would be given command of the anti-Bolshevik army of Wrangel.

FOURTEEN DEAD IN DUBLIN.

LONDON, Nov. 22. An announcement made this afternoon that assassinations in Dublin totalled fourteen while six persons, including Sinn Feiners, were injured during the attacks.

THIS AT A FOOTBALL MATCH.

DUBLIN, Nov. 22. Twenty-six persons are dead and seventy others are lying in hospitals as result of assassinations and wholesale shooting in Croke Park, where soldiers fired on the crowd which had gathered to witness a football game between Dublin and Tipperary teams. Dublin's assertions that reprisals would follow last night proved unfounded, and it is believed that government reports of three or four killings in the city after midnight were due to their confusion with outrages near Dublin. Aside from military activities and searching, including the Mansion House, armoured cars passing through the streets, and the fact that all thoroughfares leading out of the city were closely watched, Dublin and its vicinity were quiet today and it appeared that yesterday's outbreak, following the lines of other Irish disturbances, was not being sustained.

NOT BY PHYSICAL FORCE.

PARIS, Nov. 22. The French government will not oppose by physical force the return of former King Constantine to the Greek throne, which the Foreign Office now regards as inevitable.

Thousands Witness Dominion Sports.

BELL WINS MARATHON RACE.
The Prince's Rink was filled to capacity last night when the Dominion Sports, the first of their kind in Newfoundland, were held. The first event was started at 8.15 by Mr. W. J. Higgins, who was the official starter. Messrs. J. W. Morris, W. March and C. E. Hunt were judges, and Mr. A. McNamara was timekeeper. The private box was occupied by H. E. the Governor, Miss Armored Harris, and Capt. Saltmarsh, A.D.C. The events and their results were as follows:

1/4 Mile—(open) 1st T. Butler, time 1 min. 11 secs.
Entrants.—Butler, Egan and Kieley.
Between the first and second events there was a slight delay as the sawdust at the turns had to be removed.
1/4 Mile Intercollegiate—Entrants: St. Bon's—Phelan, O'Brien, Maher, M. C.—Mercer, Crumney, Milley; won by Phelan, time 1 min. 3 1/2 secs.
1/4 Mile Schools Under 16—Entrants: M. C.—Peters, Whelan, Hiscock, St. Bon's—Egan, Lynch, Slattery; 1st, Slattery; time 1 min. 9 secs; 2nd, Peters; 3rd, Lynch.
1/4 Mile—(open)—Entrants: D. McColl, P. Dobbin, J. Thorburn, H. Halley.
This proved quite a spirited contest although Thorburn and Halley dropped out after the 4th round. It was won by McColl, time 2 mins. 27 secs.
1/4 Mile Intercollegiate—Entrants: M. C.—Herder, Clouston, Nicholle; St. Bon's—Skinner, Halley, Murphy; 1st, Skinner; 2 mins. 26 secs; 2nd, Halley; 3rd, Murphy.
1/2 Mile—(open)—Entrants: W. Olsen, J. Jacobs.
The time for this race was very poor. Jacobs won by a very narrow margin, his time being 18 mins. 51 secs.
1/2 Mile Schools Under 16—M. C.—Puddister, Cowan, Clouston; St. Bon's—Rodgers, Cotter, Caul; 1st, Clouston; time 2 mins. 38 secs; 2nd, Rodgers; 3rd, Cotter.
Intercollegiate Relay Race—There were three entrants from each school for this race as follows:—St. Bon's—Phelan, Skinner, Egan; M. C.—Mercer, Crumney, Milley.
Each competitor was to run 2 laps. St. Bon's came an easy first. Their total time was 1 min. 33 secs.
1 Mile—(open)—Entrants: W. Garland, R. Barnes, M. Oliver, B. J. Evans,

"You are beginning to slump physically, I said to the face in the mirror."

"THE enormous strain of the war years had had its effects on me as on many thousands of men and women throughout the land.

"The excitement of business emergencies kept me so busy that I did not notice that I was losing out until one day when looking in a mirror I suddenly realized my condition. I could see then that I was rapidly approaching a nervous breakdown.

"About that time a friend of mine told me about what a large proportion of life insurance applications were being turned down because of physical disabilities resulting from the tense nervous strain of recent years.

"What was I to do?

"Well, my wife had noticed me being nervous and worried and had been at me for some time to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I had always been pretty well and had not much faith in medicine, but since I realized the serious condition of my system I decided to give it a try-out.

"During the first week I could not see much improvement, and was getting rather discouraged. I could not sleep, and had no appetite. Everything worried me so that I was continually nervous and irritable. But my wife saw to it that I did not miss my regular dose of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and by the second week I began to sleep better and to feel more cheerful.

"From that time on this restorative treatment seemed to build me right up. Of course I had a bad day occasionally when I felt down-hearted and irritable, but that goes with nervous troubles, and I could see that the progress was upward toward better health.

"I know now that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food saved me from a nervous breakdown. I used to think it was more for women, but now I can vouch for it as a nerve restorative for men as well as women.

"There must be many thousands of men and women in this country who are in just such a serious condition as I was, and who can benefit by my experience."

GERALD S. DOYLE, St. John's, Sales Agent.

W. Sullivan, A. Murray, P. Dobbin, J. Colliery.

This was quite a well contested race. Murray finished first in 5 mins. 36 secs., Dobbin coming second. Murray's performance was very creditable, considering that he had only had two tryouts previous to the sports, having only arrived here by the last Digby.

Intercollegiate Relay Race—(Junior) Entrants: M. C.—Peters, Hiscock, Whelan; St. Bon's—Egan, Lynch, Slattery. Won by St. Bon's, time 1 min. 36 secs.

1 Mile Intercollegiate—Entrants: M. C.—Johnston, Angel, Horwood; St. Bon's—Collins, Styles, Egan; 1st, Egan; time 5 mins. 25 secs; 2nd, Styles; 3rd, Egan.

High Jump—(open) Entrants: J. Kieley, C. Egan, E. Spry; won by C. Egan, ht. 5ft. 11inch; 2nd, Kieley; 3rd, Spry.

Whilst this was being run off, the 10 mile marathon was started, the entrants being J. Bell, B. Maunder, J. Chancy.

High Jump Intercollegiate—Entrants: M. C.—Mercer, Gullford; St. Bon's—Howlett, Egan, Skinner; won by Skinner, ht. 4ft. 11ins.; 2nd, Egan; 3rd, Howlett.

This being the last event, all interest was now centred on the marathon. Bell kept a fine pace right through, taking an easy lead over his opponents from the start. His time for each mile was as follows:

1st Mile	5.21
2nd Mile	11.07
3rd Mile	16.55
4th Mile	22.50
5th Mile	28.27
6th Mile	34.30
7th Mile	40.25
8th Mile	46.48
9th Mile	53
10th Mile	58.55

As will be seen from the above, Bell's time for the 10 miles was nearly 3 1/2 minutes better than Rogers' who won the Halifax marathon. After the finish of the marathon the prizes were distributed by Miss Armored Harris, who congratulated the prize winners upon the fine exhibitions they had given. The presentation of the intercollegiate cup, which was won by St. Bon's, was marked by an especially large amount of applause from their supporters who had turned up in full strength. After all the prizes had been distributed, Mr. P. F. Collins, the president of the Boat Club, expressed his thanks to His Excellency and to Miss Harris for presiding, and for taking such an interest in the sports generally. The playing of the National Anthem brought the sports to a very successful conclusion. The Committee in charge, and Messrs. Collins and Tobin in particular, are to be congratulated on the great success which crowned their efforts. During the evening Bennett's Band discoursed music whilst the K. of C. L.A. served refreshments. After the sports, a dance was held which proved a very enjoyable affair. The proceeds of the Tea go to swell the funds of the Columbus Ladies' Association and Mrs. Chas. Bulley and her capable assistants are to be congratulated on the great success of their efforts.

As the North Sees It.

(Twillingate Sun.)
ONLY IMAGINARY.

The drop in sugar price announced is not the wonderful reduction that many people believe, or the reduction that the Government desire to have them think.

The terms are that the F. C. B. has dropped the wholesale price of its rationed sugar from 23 1/4 to 23 1/2 for fifty barrel lots, certified cheques in the hands of the F. C. Board. Now 50 barrels at 23 1/2 cents comes to roughly $3700. What firm to-day is in a position to pay cash down three thousand seven hundred dollars on one item of stock only. And we take it that this reduction in price applies only to 50 barrel lots. Therefore the result will be that not a half dozen outport firms will be in a position to avail of this generous (?) offer. The result is that this "reduction" will not be a reduction at all.

The F. C. B. has no right to hold up the people of the country in this way, and the doors should be thrown open to the admission of the present low priced American sugar.

How is it the people of St. John's don't organize and throw the whole lot of this dirty sugar, and the F.C.B. with it into the harbor, we are at a loss to imagine.

A MOLASSES SUBSTITUTE.

Reports from Barbados point to a very poor cane crop this season and a shortage of molasses for Newfoundland with higher prices. Molasses, which is supposed to be the poor man's sugar, is already only within reach of the well-to-do.

With sugar falling as it is, there must surely be some other equivalent for molasses available at less than half the price of that article.

If the F. C. B. instead of monkeying with sugar and soaking the people of this country on its price, would turn its attention to securing some cheap and attractive substitute for molasses they would be doing the country some good. But then, the group of muddlers in charge of affairs would probably only muddle that, so on second thoughts they had better leave it alone.

However, it is time the question was taken up by somebody.

MR. COAKER WILL FIX IT.

Business men received messages here this week saying that Labrador fish is unsalable. Just how Mr. Coaker is going to cook up a satisfactory explanation for the meeting of Union Delegates at Port Union, which takes place in a week or so, will be interesting to discover.

Unless the delegates are most extraordinarily "easy," it seems probable that Mr. Coaker is going to have some very awkward questions to answer.

However, it may be that the Fish Inspectors will be chosen as delegates and they, of course, can have nothing, but praise for the way things have been handled to suit their pockets.

ALL HAIL!
Hail to the Spaniards! Welcome Christopher Columbus! again are the famous race re-discovering the New World.

While local fish buyers—at the head of them the greatest of the great, the man who said that "the price of fish is what Coaker makes it"—have been unable or unwilling to pay more than $6.50 to $8 in truck for Labrador fish, the Spaniard has arrived and buy fifty thousand quintals for $8 in good cold cash.

Welcome again Christopher Columbus!

Latest Rumours!

The latest political rumours going around town this week is to the effect that Hon. Sir E. Bowring has been offered the Governorship of Newfoundland, but so far has not decided on accepting the offer. That Hon. R. A. Squires is to be made High Commissioner in London for Nfld. That Hon. Mr. Warren is to be Colonial Secretary and Minister of Justice, and that Hon. W. F. Coaker will be Premier, Minister of Marine and Fisheries and Chairman of Railway Commission. Where these rumours came from we are not prepared to say, but for weeks past rumours similar to the above have been going around. Whether they are true or not time alone will tell. No one would be surprised if Mr. Coaker dropped his second anchor in the prime Minister's office, for it is not a fact that the "skipper" and mate left the old ship over a month ago and she has been drifting and there are breakers ahead, and she is almost upon "white nape shoals," and the storms are gathering around her, and darkness and distress is gathering over the land and the old ship is almost dashed to pieces. Yet there is hope. To the rescue then? Where is the brave man to come forward and board the old ship of state, give her "more chain" and save her from commercial disaster before it is too late?—Trinity Enterprise

Why Not?

In the fish business the Union Export Co. is offering for fish delivered at Port Union better prices than can be obtained either in St. John's or here. The company offers $11 for choice Spanish grade, $10 for merchantable, $8 for Madeira, $8 for choice Labrador, and $7 for prime Labrador. The sale of fish here is slow, and certain kinds are unsaleable. Heavily-salted shore fish can find no sale, and a small quantity of that made offered in St. John's could fetch but $4 a quintal. Large late caught Labrador, of good grade has been sold in small quantities at $10 a quintal. An exporter in Carbonear seems to have been the chief buyer of shore fish this fall in this locality. Respecting the Regulations: Can it be said that they are the direct and only cause of the slackness in the fish trade? Are there no other causes that tend to make a depression on that basis, is the primary cause of the present depression. If codfish is worth the price quoted by the Union Trading Company should it not be of the same value to the exporters in St. John's? If the Union Company requires the fish, cannot it purchase it here and elsewhere as well as at Port Union? There are questions that seem reasonable to ask in the face of the reports about the dead state of the fish trade in St. John's. Would it be pertinent to ask if some of the reason of the outcry in St. John's is not due to the fact that many cargoes of fish are now shipped from outports instead of going through the hands of the St. John's merchants?—Harbor Grace Standard.

The Herdsman and the Girl.

One of the prettiest legends of Chinese mythology is that of the weaver girl and the herd laddie who are said to be two stars in the sky. In far off days, the deity took pity on their loneliness in their conjugal bliss—this proves the date to have been very long ago in the days of "once upon a time"—that they neglected their tasks and were banished to opposite sides of the Milky Way, where they wink at each other all the year round, but are only allowed to cross for a brief spell of happiness on the seventh day of the seventh moon. On that night shy maidens place a few sticks of incense with some sweets and fruit on a table in the inner courtyard as an offering to the two stars, perhaps with an unexpressed prayer that in their own case the course of true love may run more smoothly than it did for the immortal lovers in the sky.

Obituary.

There passed peacefully away, at Fermeuse, on Nov. 19th, Thomas Moore, aged 85 years. Deceased was a native of St. John's, and was an able seaman, following the sea for many years. His last voyage across the Atlantic being in the Emma Jane, with Capt. Davis, since then he prosecuted the shore fishery. He married Miss M. Kenny, daughter of the late Andrew Kenny (well known planter) of Fermeuse. He resided at that place for forty-eight years, and was highly esteemed by all his fellow seamen and by all who knew him. He leaves to mourn his loss a wife, three daughters, and one son now residing in Boston. Funeral took place on Sunday from his residence, Riverhead, Fermeuse, R.I.P. Dearest loved one, we have laid thee in the peaceful grave's embrace; But thy memory will be cherished Until we see thy heavenly face. (Boston papers please copy.)

Famous Doors in History

Among the famous doors of history are the carved wooden doors of the Church of Santa Sabina, Rome, depicting in relief scenes from the Old and New Testaments. These are one of the most remarkable examples of early Christian sculpture extant. In the earliest times, as in Babylon, doors swung on sockets instead of hinges. In Roman days wooden doors were decorated with bronze and inlaid, as throughout the Middle Ages rich carved doors of wood adorned churches. In the Gothic period, wooden doors were decorated with wrought-iron hinges which were often elaborated into intricate ornamentation covering a large part of the door. The doors of the Cathedral of Notre Dame in Paris of the thirteenth century are the finest examples in this class. During the Renaissance in Germany and France, elaborately carved doors were among the most beautiful products of wood sculpture. Some of the old English doors were formed of narrow planks placed side by side and in dwelling houses generally, in the Middle Ages, the door were small and fairly simple, meant for strictly practical purposes and often provided with some means of defense. The doors of the Norman period were round-headed, while the thirteenth century came the doorway with the pointed arch and later the flattened arch. In the case of interior doors, splendid old polished mahogany doors were important features in some old English homes, and these were old oak doors of wonderful beauty, especially when found in oak paneled rooms.

The Queen of the Haruaks

While the Prince of Wales was touring in New South Wales his train stopped at a country station. He noticed an aboriginal woman dressed in European clothes and wearing a gilt and red plush crown on her head. It was royalty waiting to greet royalty. The negro woman was the Queen of the Karuah tribe of negroes. She had intended to walk 40 miles to the station to meet the Prince, but kindly residents motored her to West Maitland. The Queen of the Karuahs however, gravely in response to the Prince's greeting. Beside her stood a young Australian soldier, her son, who had served gallantly in the war. The Prince of the Karuahs had no reason to complain that the royal visitor from Britain failed to honor his mother or himself. The badge of the trenches on the breast of the son made the gilt and plush crown a thing of paths.

"Up in The Air"

The Star on Saturday was bowling of the way the Opposition had been "up in the air" at the bye-elections last spring. We do not attempt to deny that the Opposition was unsuccessful in these bye-elections, as at that time the people had no opportunity to see what sort of men they had elected to represent them. If the Government were quite sure of themselves now, it is quite certain that the Harbour Municipality would not be postponed any longer. But, unfortunately for them, they realize that public opinion has undergone a very great change in the past few months, and that not even the money paid out by the local commission is sufficient to elect their men in Harbour Main. Let the Government hold elections in that district and then we'll see who'll be "up in the Air."

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

THE TERRORS OF THE NIGHT.

What different people we all are in the day time and at night. I do not off hand remember just when Dr. Jekyll made his transformation into Mr. Hyde, but it seems as if it must have been at night.

And yet I do not mean to imply by that that we become wicked at night—just that we change!

We are more nervous at night. For one thing we are all more nervous at night. "The terrors of the night" is a phrase which carries a meaning to even the bravest of us. It is easier to believe in danger at night.

There is an odd example of the way we associate danger and the darkness. I have a friend who allows her two children, aged seven and 14 (one of whom can swim pretty well, the other at all) to paddle up and down the river in a boat. She even goes away for the day and leaves them to look after themselves, with the river as their playground. And yet when someone asked her to spend the evening at home on the next street, leaving the children alone in bed for a few hours, she would not do it. "Something might happen to them," she said with a shiver.

Yet I feel sure if the chances for her under the two circumstances could be compared, it would be seen that there was far more chance of something happening to them in the daytime than there was at night. It is simply the sense of danger that she brings. I think, that made her shiver.

Then Night Time Was Caved Time. I suppose it is a heritage from our most ancient ancestors—when night truly was a time for man to keep safe, in his cave and let the wild beasts have their way.

Most of us, also, are more emotional at night. We are less inhibited, more responsive. We are more easily moved, more sentimental than in the daytime. Any word will tell you that it is far harder "put over" an emotional play on the same kind of an audience at a matinee, than at the evening performance.

Certain functions of the mind work better in the evening and others in the daytime. For instance, I would say that the imagination was in better working order at night and the judgment in the daytime. For this reason any letter that one writes at night should always be re-read in the daytime before it is sent. And any plan formulated at night should be looked over in the cold light of day before it is put into action. Likewise no situation should be given up as hopeless until one has had a chance to think it over in the evening as well as the daytime.

We Know What Men Are Before Breakfast. Men are even more affected by this condition of dual personality than women. Everyone knows what men are like when they first wake up in the morning! Though women have the name of being more temperamental, they certainly are not so in this respect.

A World-wide Leader. Canada is being honored by a somewhat prolonged visit from General Wm. Bramwell Booth, the head of the Salvation Army throughout the world. The position that the Army holds today in the public eye was shown by the character of the reception given General Booth in Ottawa, where he practically began his Canadian tour. Shortly after his arrival General Booth was called upon by Sir George Meighen during the latter's absence in the West. Then there was a civic reception in the City Hall, at which Mayor Fisher presided. In the evening there was a public meeting. The audience assembled to hear the General, filled to overflowing the largest Protestant Church in the city. His Excellency the Governor-General presided and General Booth's reception in other cities were of like character. All this is a tribute to the Salvation Army whose years of labor for all sorts and conditions of men have won for it the respect of the world, and a tribute to its able and eloquent leader.

General William Bramwell Booth is the eldest son of the late General Booth, the founder of the Salvation Army, and upon the death of his father he succeeded to the command in 1912. He was born in Halifax, England, on March 8, 1856, and is, therefore, a man well advanced in years.

At the age of 18 he commenced public work in which he has now been engaged for forty-six years. He is both a pleasing and a powerful speaker, possessing a natural gift of eloquence which has been developed by use before many kinds of audiences. He has also found time to make several contributions to religious literature, most of which are written on the general lines of the work carried on by the Army. His wife is a daughter of the late Dr. Soper, of Plymouth, England. For many years she has been Commissioner and Leader of the Women's Social Work of the Salvation Army.

WALT MASON

THE GREAT BLESSING. I had a weary siege of sickness that called for pink and purple pills; my humble roll lost all its thickness when I had paid the doctors' bills. And pharmacists and well trained nurses were chasing to me up the road, and undertakers with their hearse were hanging round my sad abode. Now I am feeling vastly better, the gout and mumps have left my frame, likewise lumbago, cramp and tetter, though rheumatism still plays its game. No longer do I wear a plaster, there is no poultice on my form, and I'm not scared by bleak disaster, or by the ills that round me swarm. If one has health he is a caven to talk of grief and trouble sore, and croak, like Edgar Allan's raven, such balderdash as "Nevermore." Health is the only thing that matters, beside it other boons are vain, and men are surely mad as haters who kick when they are free from pain. Recovered from my indigestion, and convalescent from the itch, I face my tasks without a question, and life seems full and sweet and rich. Yes, ugly problems crowd around me, and threats and things invade my den, but they can't daunt me or confound me, for I am feeling well again.

Trade in Old Newspapers.

Some idea of the magnitude of the trade in second-hand newspapers in the Sumatra East Coast, is contained in a report by Carl C. Spamer, consul of Medan. In 1915 the imports of second-hand newspapers into Sumatra were 1,597,873 pounds; in 1916, 744,591 pounds; in 1917, 1,036,369 pounds; in 1918, 866,835 pounds; in 1919, 1,225,649 pounds; in 1920, from January to May, 1,044,107 pounds. These newspapers are largely used by Chinese tradesmen for wrapping and packing goods for local delivery. The markets demand clean full-sized newspapers, without coloured supplements, packed in bales of 250 kilos (about 550 pounds.)

THE LAUGHING BOY. Just laughing all the time it seems, Through the day and in your dreams; Everything you hear or see Somehow fills you full of glee; And your old dad watchin' by, Who has often had to sigh, Can't help softly chucklin' too Since the world's so gay to you.

When a boy is eight years old, Winter's not so very cold; Time was, Oh, so long ago, I was glad to see the snow; Dull the day or bright the sun, I could always have a fun, And full many a youthful day Just like you, I laughed away.

Nothing seems to fret you much, Light to-day is trouble's touch, Rain or shine, it's all the same, You can always have a game; Sorrows lightly pass you by, You still laugh when we must sigh, When you're eight years old, I guess, Everything spells happiness.

Watchin' you, so full of fun And forever on the run, Your old dad who's come to care And the burdens he must bear, Can't help watchin' that the years Will be slow to bring you tears, And he prays that all the while You will keep your merry smile.

Keep the twinkle in your eyes Even when you're worldly wise, Keep the love of all things good Even under sorrow's hood, Grow to manhood as you must, But in men retain your trust, And though burdens on your pile, Strive somehow to keep your smile.

West Coast Losers.

The letter of Mr. George Penney, senior partner and manager of the firm of John Penney & Sons, Ramea, one of the largest exporters of dry codfish on the South West Coast, throws considerable light, (hitherto obscured) on the working of the Fish Export Regulations and their relation to the minimum prices at which fish may be sold in Europe, subject to the will and pleasure of the Minister of Fisheries and his Advisory Board. It will be remembered that about shipping time, South West Coast exporters were forbidden to send away their new fish, caught in the fall of 1919 and spring of 1920 and made during the months of April and May, until such time as all the 1919 old fish unsold abroad, on the way in vessels and remaining in stores in St. John's and elsewhere, were disposed of. What this order meant to the South West Coast has already been told, in so far as the information was gleaned, and the story was not by any means over-written. Now first hand knowledge can be made use of. It is a great pity that those merchants of the West did not see their way clear to publish their ideas and experience long ago. Much of the mischief wrought by the now universally condemned regulations might have been avoided if not altogether prevented, had this course been followed. As it is never too late to mend, however, the letter referred to will doubtless cause some other losers to dilate on their experience in the European markets, under the guidance and governance of the Fish Export enactments, and thus show to all and sundry the harshness and injustice suffered by them in the course of legitimate trading.

In a front page article of the Advocate of issue November 10th, the appended statement (ex parte of course) is made: "Not one cent has been lost on fish this season by a shipper of fish to Portugal. . . . Not one quintal has been consigned. We challenge the Tory press to produce a signed statement from a licensed shipper contrary to the above."

The challenge has been accepted, and it is indeed pleasing to know that the Advocate has been given the lie direct by the firm of John Penney & Sons, the manager of which speaks with the authority of all the facts behind him, and does not hesitate to saddle the loss incurred on a cargo of codfish shipped by him, upon the bungling and incapacity of those who made the regulations, no less than upon the operation of the latter to the disadvantage of trade generally. Mr. Penney's vessel Edith M. Cavell, was laden with dry codfish—spring cure—early in the season, and her cargo should have been into consumption at least by August. But in consequence of hampering regulations and restrictions the ship was not allowed to sail until certain individuals in St. John's gave permission. For a whole month the 'Cavell' lay in Ramea Harbor with hatches caulked and battened ready for sea, but could not sail because cargo had not been sold outright at Government prices. This could not be done, but at length the schooner was granted sailing orders, with her cargo CONSIGNED. (Note Advocate statement that "not one quintal has been consigned.") True it was to the order of the Government agent Batstone at Oporto, but it was nevertheless a consignment. After arrival at original destination, this cargo was held up another month, and in addition there was a passage of seventeen days. Finally as it could not be sold at the minimum price to the Portuguese, the Minister of Marine and Fisheries and his Advisory Board, advised an acceptance of sixty-five shillings at the Spanish port of Alicante, which meant more time on the voyage before unloading could take place, as well as the extra expense of the vessel in making the trip from Oporto, through the Straits of Gibraltar. Here was loss number two on the cargo alone, to say nothing of the running expenses and disbursements of the carrier. And the end is not yet, for at the time of writing Messrs. Penney & Sons had not received advice that the 'Cavell's' cargo was being discharged. The loss on price alone, Mr. Penney figures at six thousand seven hundred dollars, all because of the foolish and unjustifiable restrictions imposed on the clearing of new fish from the West Coast, and his declaration over his own signature is the answer to the vicious statement of the Advocate that "not one cent has been lost by a shipper of fish to Portugal." No doubt other firms could, 'an they would, tell a similar story. In the best interests of Newfoundland they should also give their experience, so that the public might judge of the benefits (?) being derived from the regulations. Mr. Penney, for himself, has easily disposed of the Advocate's bombastic utterances.

Severe Weather Up Country.

Weather conditions along the Railway line during this past week have been very severe. On Sunday night the thermometer at Bishop's Falls, registered 5 below, the lowest temperature at this date since the Reid Company has been operating. West from Clarenville trains coming through from Port aux Basques have to use push ploughs to keep the road open as far as Grand Falls the country is coated with snow to the depth of several inches. All the ponds along the railway west from Clarenville are, according to train reports, frozen over and in places ice is almost two inches thick.

Festival of St. Cecilia.

Hr. Buffett, Nov. 22—Surrounded by all the solemnity and beauty of decoration was the Grand Mass of Saint Cecilia, Patron of Music, celebrated in St. Paul's Church, Port Royal, by the Rev. Francis A. Cacciola, Rector of St. Francis Xavier Church, Bar Haven. It was the morning of the festival of the great Saint and Virgin and Martyr. Music and song were the ceremonies of the Mass, which were conducted by the Pastor, Rev. Francis Cacciola.

100 Second-Class Passengers.

The steamer Kyle arrived in port this afternoon says the North Sydney Herald of Friday last, about thirty hours late on account of the derailment of an engine and tender at Cook's Brook, about 20 minutes run from Curlew, Newfoundland. The derailment, which was caused by a freight crew leaving the points of the switch open, put the train in such a place that it took a day to clear her. Besides a general cargo the Kyle brought 140 passengers, forty of whom were first class.

From the Westward.

The Glencoe arrived at Placentia at 5.30 p.m. yesterday with the following passengers: W. Barnes, Miss L. Wilcox, W. L. Maundor, E. Inkpen, Mrs. M. Cooper, J. Beasley, M. Nolan, W. Wight, Miss L. Ashbourne, Miss E. Weymouth, L. Shave, F. Carter and wife, R. Leth, J. Moskevitch, D. G. Kennedy.

Mr. Penney's Dutch Trunk.

At the Marine and Fisheries Department this forenoon a trunk which Mr. Penney brought with him from his recent trip to Norway, was being unpacked under the supervision of Mr. Clouter and some seven or eight officials of the Fisheries Department. Amongst the curios collected by Mr. Penney during his picnic are. Baked fish in bouillon, Stavenger sardines in tomato sauce, Fish Pudding and recipes for same, Anchovies, a package of white napes, tied with ribbon wire and scenic photographs. Samples of all these will, we understand be sent to Port Union, for the inspection of the convention. The Museum and the Fisheries Department will take the balance.

The "Fleur-de-Lis."

We thank the editor of the "Fleur-de-Lis", the official organ of the Boy Scouts of Newfoundland, for a copy of the latest edition of his very interesting paper. Amongst its varied contents is an open letter to the Boy Scouts of Newfoundland from Lieut. Gen. Sir R. Baden-Powell, Chief Scout, in which he pays a great tribute to the people of Newfoundland and urges the boys of the Island to live up to the reputation of their brothers and fathers. We note that the "Sportsman's Bulletin", published by the Remington Arms Co., is to be inserted each month in the "Fleur-de-Lis." On the whole, the editor and his staff are to be congratulated on their splendid little monthly.

Serious Conditions in White Bay.

Conditions in White Bay are critical, according to the most reliable information. People there are practically out of such foodstuffs as flour, butter, molasses. Kerosene oil is also not to be had and Cod Oil lamps are being used. In many places the people are now down to potato diet. If provisions are not immediately sent many will starve to death. This suffering is, we believe, not confined to the poorer class, as those with money cannot make purchases, the usual fall supplies not having been bought by storekeepers. In a very short while the bay will be frozen over, if it is not already so, and if no food reaches the people soon the consequences will be appalling.

Seven Cargoes Outside.

The seven vessels outside Oporto, have between them over 30,000 qtls. of fish, which according to Mr. Coaker, are all sold with not a cent loss to the shippers. The cargoes are: Faustina 4,110 Plumer 4,215 Smuts 4,658 Maude 4,276 Trenchard 4,180 Frances Moulton 6,300 Rita Cluett 2,883

MINARD'S LINIMENT RELIEVES DISTEMPER.

Much Activity in Fish Buying.

But no Satisfaction as to Rumoured Guarantee.

To-day along the water front there is a good deal of fish being handled, principally Shore, although several firms are buying Labrador. These include Messrs. Job, Hickman, Barr and Monroe. At the latter premises there is being loaded a vessel for market. The cull on the Labrador is rather strict averaging half and half Choice and Prime. Baine Johnston, Hickman and Crosbie, are handling a lot of Shore fish. Regarding the rumoured government guarantee against loss on the purchase of Labrador fish at $8.00, many fish merchants were interviewed to-day. Mr. Bishop, when the question was put to him, said he knew absolutely nothing about a Government guarantee. Mr. G. M. Barr, was also approached by a reporter of this paper for information, and he got it. The following is the interview: Reporter—"Is there anything in the rumor of a Government Guarantee against loss?" Mr. Barr (Moving) "There is lots of talk."

Regulation Made Fish of No Value.

Newfoundland-heavy salted-shore-cure-Labrador fish is hard to sell. A number of men with cargoes are now in port and the highest offer obtainable is $5.00 per qt., and that not at present, as most of the firms say they are filled up. A fisherman who had some 60 qtls. of this fish amongst his lot, which he was discharging at an East End premises, refused to sell at $5.00 and later sold it to his supplier for $6.00 per qt. White Nape Labrador is absolutely unaleable.

Attled With Huge Caribou.

TRAVELLER ATTACKED BY STAG.

Ronnie J. MacDonald, the once famous Marathon runner, who is now a resident of St. John's, is now recovering from a severe attack of rheumatism. He was attacked by a huge caribou while hunting in the mountains. The animal charged at him and he was forced to flee. He was severely injured and had to be taken to a hospital. He is now recovering from his injuries.

LABRADOR BOUNDARY SETTLED.

LONDON, Nov. 22. Signatures of the Canadian Attorney General and Newfoundland Attorney General are at last signed to an agreement settling the long standing boundary dispute between Canada and Newfoundland sent to the Privy Council in London for settlement. It will be a year, however, before the case is definitely settled, according to Warren, Newfoundland Attorney General, who with C. J. Doherty for Canada signed the agreement in London. "It is a case of most historical importance," declared Warren, who has been in London since the beginning of the year preparing Newfoundland's claim. "Almost invaluable wealth in water power, forests and minerals is in dispute, and the territory makes the possession there a question of tremendous commercial significance."

SMALL CRAFT NEGOTIATES ATLANTIC CROSSING.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22. A thrilling tale of the fury of the sea, as viewed and fought from the deck of a thirty-five foot schooner, was told here to-night by Captain Wm. Washburn Nutting, as he brought his trim little craft "Tippoon" safely to her Staten Island mooring. He had made fast the line and vessel had completed an eight thousand mile voyage across the Atlantic and returned in her long boat, which started from Baddeck, N.S., on July 18. "Tippoon" visited Cowes, England, during the international Motor Boat Regatta, proceeded to France and Spanish ports, and left Corunna, Spain, on the return trip, September 15. She stopped at the Azores. "Tippoon" ran into several storms, and several times Captain Nutting said she barely emerged safely. On one occasion she ran into a heavy cross sea, and lost her mizen mast and food supply. For three days the party lived on hard tack and water. Later a Spanish steamship was hailed and the larder replenished.

THE LEAGUE AND ARMENIA.

GENEVA, Nov. 22. Speaking to-day on resolutions demanding the intervention in Armenia by League of Nations, and supporting Lord Robert Cecil's demand that the Assembly appoint a committee to examine into means for ending hostilities between Turkish Nationalists and Armenians, M. Spalekovic of the Serbian delegation, recalled that the United States Senate at one time has approved the use of United States fleet to succor Armenians. It was recalled here that Senator Harding, was the Senator who supported the resolution. A. J. Balfour, of Great Britain, speaking on the resolution, said that if United States had been willing to take a mandate for Armenia, she had men, money and spirit to make her an ideal mandatory. The League has been unable to accomplish anything with regard to the Armenian situation, Balfour admitted, because the condition of Armenia, he argued, was not such as the League was organized to deal with. Balfour said an appeal must be sent to forty-one States of the League for a combined effort to save Armenia. Rena Viviani of France, following Balfour said, all were agreed that compassion would no longer suffice for Armenia.

DO ALL MY HOUSE WORK

Before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I could hardly get about.

Cobourg, Ont.—"For many years I have had trouble with my nerves and have been in a general run down condition for some time. I could not do my work half of the time because of the trouble with my monthly sickness. I was told of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound by friends and advised to try it. It has done me good, and I strongly recommend it. Since I have taken it I have been able to do all my own work, and I also know friends who have found it good. You can use these facts as a testimonial."—Mrs. ELLEN FLATTERS, Box 761, Cobourg, Ont.

Why will women continue to suffer so long as more than we can understand, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For forty years this good old-fashioned root and herb remedy which contains no narcotics or harmful drugs has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Ibrahim Pasha and the Thief.

The stories current of Ibrahim Pasha when he directed the affairs of Syria with Palestine, for his father, Mehemet Ali of Egypt, would alone fill a good sized volume. The following may serve as a specimen: A goldsmith of Jerusalem complained that his shop had been entered and rifled during the night and Ibrahim Pasha sent the town crier round to notify the people that at such and such an hour he himself intended to go to the scene of the trespass and do justice. When Ibrahim arrived, with the executioner in his train, almost the whole population was assembled to see what would happen. They watched him advance to the wooden door of the shop, upbraided it for neglect of duty in letting the thief pass and command it to reveal the culprit's name. There was, of course, no response and so he ordered the executioner to administer twenty lashes to the contumacious piece of wood. Then he went through the performance a second time, stooping down as if listening to a whispered answer, which seemed to enrage him, for again he directed the executioner to use the whip and strike hard. After putting the question a third time and again bending forward, his hand to his ear, he straightened up, exclaimed: "This foolish door wants to make me believe that it beholds the thief standing in the crowd with cowards from the shop still sticking to his clothes." No sooner had the words been said than one of the bystanders passed his hand over his vest and trousers. Ibrahim Pasha, on the alert for such a manifestation of guilt, cried immediately: "Arrest that fellow!" So unexpectedly caught, the thief confessed and received in double measure the flogging at first tentatively inflicted on the tell-tale door.

Beetle Undertakers.

Among other intelligent insects which exist in this country, perhaps one of the most wonderful are the "Necrophori," or "Burying Beetles." These little "undertakers" of the insect world will conscientiously inter anything which has been left dead on the ground. As soon as they smell the carcass of, say, a decomposed rat, field-mouse, or mole, these insects will immediately arrange for a burial party to parade. The little "grave-diggers" then get to work, and hollow out the ground underneath the dead body. When sufficient earth has been scooped from under the dead thing, a slow, lowering process begins. Little by little the rat or mole is sunk into the ground, and after about twenty-four hours the body is in a hole some five inches deep. But these burying beetles are not satisfied with that, and they continue to sink it deeper until, when about ten inches from the surface, they mount to the top and commence to cast earth on to the body. Having disposed of the dead, and completed the "grave" operations, the females now come along and lay their eggs on the tomb, where plenty of food is assured for the larvae. It is interesting to add that in one case a stick had been run through a dead rat, and the beetles busied themselves in first of all eating through the string before scooping out the grave in their usual manner. They got over all obstacles in the long run, and succeeded in their very difficult task of burying the rat.

Faulty English.

"Punch," England's great humorous weekly, has been paying some attention to the subject of grammar. In giving examples of incorrect or faulty English many questions appear that are in common use. For instance: Of all grammatical errors none provides "Punch" with more copy than the incorrect use of Pronouns. The pronoun, according to its definition, "denotes without naming," and it is therefore of the highest importance that the reader should have no doubt as to who or what is denoted by each pronoun. We may put this injunction in more homely words by saying "Never use a pronoun unless you know who or what is meant."

Failure to observe this rule was responsible for the following in a letter from a clerk to his employer: "I have been very billious all night and it has left me with a frightful bad head. I hope to shake it off to-day."

Other examples of the same error are: "Then gravely and with signs of the deepest respect, the vicar gave the good lady the prize. It was a moving spectacle."

"A great many married ladies wear their wedding rings until they become very thin."
"Throwing soap in the water is most damaging to its appearance." (Manchester Corporation Baths.)
"Captain S. was exactly like a thousand others of his rank. He was followed by a fox terrier with tan ears. He licked Eva's hand and flung himself on the boards at her side."
Some toys that expanded when blown up pleased the pygmies very much until one burst with a bang."
"At the time of the fire the thermometer stood at zero, and in endeavoring to extinguish it one fireman was frost-bitten."

The Meaning of Unbiased Opinion.

Editor Evening Telegram

Dear Sir,—I have often wondered what "Unbiased Opinion" meant, but yesterday in your paper Mr. P. J. Kinsella explained it so clearly that I am no longer in doubt. It means, according to Mr. Kinsella, a mind that can see all the misery and suffering on one side, and none on the other. Truly Mr. Kinsella has a wonderfully lucid way of explaining a difficult question. In one place he mildly suggests (of course he's utterly unbiased), that the document captured the other day may have been prepared for Sir Hamar Greenwood by enemies of Irish freedom. What an artful idea!

Again he says "It is of course well known to-day, and admitted by some English writers and unbiased historians of the Irish movement, that the atrocities said to be a part of the Sinn Fein effort to secure freedom for Ireland, have been traced to the ignoble manner of reprisals carried on daily by the "Black and Tan" and other determined factions to the detriment of the Irishman at home and abroad." Mr. Kinsella carefully overlooks the fact that reprisals cannot take place without cause, for the word means retaliation; but perhaps Mr. Kinsella doesn't know this, for if he does, his argument is an admission that the "Black and Tan" has had cause. (Or perhaps, being unbiased, that is what he meant.)

He also asserts that the "Irish Republican" Government holds a firm sway, the letter of law and order is followed. Wait a moment! let us see what he means by "the letter of law and order." A short time ago a proclamation was spread broadcast over the Southwest of Ireland, and the following is an extract: "The police should be avoided as more dangerous than plague, and more ruinous than any other group of ruffians to the morals of society. Let no Irish man or woman, with any sense of honour or principle be seen speaking to or in any way tolerating the existence of a 'peeler,' either in public or private. THIS IS NOT AN APPEAL BUT AN ORDER FROM THE IRISH REPUBLICAN GOVERNMENT."

If Mr. Kinsella means THAT by his "letter of law and order" he has a very naive way of expressing it. But perhaps some enemies of Irish freedom circulated that proclamation also. "How many of us" says Mr. Kinsella "see the misery that the reprisal movement has brought upon hundreds of innocent people." Now please don't contradict him! what if the Irish did kill a couple of hundred policemen? What is that compared to "innocent people?" Just think how awful it was when the Allies started reprisals on the poor innocent Hun! And—but what I wanted to say was—how unbiased Mr. Kinsella is!

Yours truly,
L. CULLEN.

The Song of the Fisherman.

I pen this song before I sail
Northward, where I abide, sir,
That all may know the feelings of
A man who's been denied sir,
Of that great bully, topnotch price
That "Labrador" would win sir,
If I the Regulations read,
And did the things therein sir,
And sure I did.

I washed it duly from the knife,
And cleaned the napes of black, sir;
From blood and slime to have it clean
I didn't spare a tap sir;
The sun and summer winds conspired
To make it look a picture;
And I had visions, Mr. Man,
That I would soon be richer
Than old John D.

Now hear me ye of Newfoundland,
Who've been so long bamboozled,
By cursed politicians, who
Should all be d—n well toseled.
I cannot sell, tho' here a month
With quintals ten times twenty,
Unless I take starvation fees—
Is this the promised plenty
For "underdogs"?

He made us believe the day that he Should win the reins of power,
The gifts of great prosperity
Upon our homes would shower;
We sang as we went on the "grounds"
"Oh what joyification
We'll have when Coaker gets the chest!"
But Lord, we got stagnation
With Want and Woel!

"I come to save the 'underdog'"
From merchant rule and grafters"
And when he spoke his gab was hailed
With cheers that shook the rafters,
But now he sits him down amongst
Those "rascals, rogues and robbers"
He's the Poo Bah amongst the crew
He dubbed so oft as "jobbers"
Of no account."

The fisherman who believed he'd boost
The "White Nape" high and higher,
Now trudges Water Street all day
And cannot find a buyer;
But still this raving ranters rants,
And yells "The price you're getting,
It double what it would, but for
The way in which I'm sweating
in ye're behalf."

Still he is boosted by a press
For which we're paying dearly,
They try to make us gulp the mess
(We're made subscribe, sir, yearly.)
But I give notice here and now,
That my subscription's cancelled
To any paper that is run,
Inspired, doped or spannelled
By "White Naped" Bill!

P.S.—When ignorance goes out to teach
The country what "It should and ought!"
No wonder that on every hand
Is ruin and disaster wrought.
North and the winter! who can tell
The stress we'll know, or who shall care?
But ye who trifle with our lives
Remember this one word,—Beware!

More Liberal Reforms.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—Perhaps Mr. Editor a few remarks from Ramea—not on fishery regulations, as you seem to have a good idea of the injury these have been to this coast—but on the subject of public works, and how moneys for that purpose are being expended here at present.

Last year the Advocate condemned the late Government in pretty forcible language for spending public moneys through commissioners, and claimed one of their Reforms would be to do away for ever with this practice.

Now, Mr. Editor, to-day there is 'in Ramea about $700 to be expended on the Government Works, and it has been placed in the hands of a commissioner who has at present four men working on the job, and rumors say no other person need apply.
Can it be that this work is being done
on the truck system?

Let it be understood that the term of the Road Board expired last November, but in June of this year, Mr.
Small, our M.H.A. wired the chairman to hold office until a Board was duly elected. We have no Board elected as yet, and the Board of 1917 have resigned, owing to the arrangements for expending the present
marine grant.

What about the Advocate's Reform
Policy? Will our representative explain? And while he certainly has our sympathy, we feel sure it has not been a full knock out.

Yours truly,
WEDDING GUEST.

SCALE OF FEES.

Every person receiving treatment in the General Hospital shall, after December 31st next, pay fees according to the following scale:
Persons admitted to the public wards $1.00 per day; persons occupying private rooms $10.00 per week, in addition to the daily fees of $1.00.

Every applicant for admission to the Hospital must bring with him or forward to the Superintendent of the Hospital certificate signed by a duly registered physician that such applicant is a proper subject for Hospital treatment.

Under the provisions of the General Hospital Act, 1915, all patients who are unable to pay fees shall be required to bring with them a certificate of their inability to pay, which shall be signed by the resident Believing Officer, or where there is no such officer, by a Justice of the Peace, or Clergyman or other responsible person. The fees of such patients thereupon become payable by the Commissioner of Public Charity by virtue of the said Act.

By order of the Board.

HENRY BLAIR

Milk-boy to Millionaire.

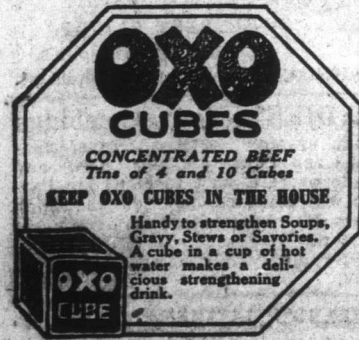

The romantic story of Samuel Knighton, a former Nottingham milk-boy, now an American millionaire, has just been told in his native city, says a despatch from Nottingham, England. Knighton left England for Canada thirty-four years ago. At the outset he had what is described as a rough time, and swindlers soon relieved him of all his ready cash.

Peniless, he struck out for the Red River region, where he encountered many heart-breaking set-backs. Returning to Winnipeg he was employed as a postman for some years. Then with his small savings he started a music business, achieving a moderate success by buying and selling pianos. This business prospered, and Knighton and his family formed an orchestra branching out into a sort of barn-storming tour of the settlements.

This brought moderate competence, and Knighton decided to make a bold bid to conquer the greater financial world. Taking over the Canadian agency of the New York Flour Syndicate, he realized the possibilities of grain supply, and determined to take a hand in the New York Produce Exchange. Since then Knighton and Sons never looked back. The firm is now a power in the Transatlantic produce market, and has branches in practically every country of Europe.

Fur-faced and cut brims are smart millinery notes. Black serge is embroidered in white porcelain beads. Imported fabrics are in bold and eccentric design. Triangular-shaped panels are a new whim of fashion.

Debts That Need No Payment.

English law does not recognize gambling or betting debts, as a general rule, although there have been exceptions. More peculiar is the fact that a barrister cannot sue for his fee. Most other countries have the same practice with regard to gambling debts as ourselves. Venezuela is one of the very few states in which such debts are collectable by law. In Holland you cannot sue for a bet made upon cards, but you can for one on a horse-race or any similar outdoor sport. In Sweden a physician cannot sue for his fee, while in Belgium a solicitor is in a similar position. By Chinese law, not only the doctor, but also the priest, the fortune-teller and clairvoyant are without legal remedy. All these debts are, however, looked upon as "debts of honor," and payment is rarely evaded. The same sort of idea with regard to debts of honor holds good everywhere else, and, absurd as it seems, a man who fails to pay a gambling bet of $50 is in a far worse position socially than another who goes through the Bankruptcy Court. France's way of treating bankrupts differs from ours. There a bankrupt is deprived of all rights of citizenship, which are not restored to him until he has paid his debts in full.

Canadian Merchant Marine.

We were informed recently by Mr. J. W. N. Johnstone, Newfoundland representative of the C.G.M.M. Ltd., that of the 101 boats contracted for by the Canadian Government, 35 had already been delivered. Two of these boats, the Canadian Miner and the Canadian Sealer, will be put on the Halifax-St. John's route, and a weekly service will be maintained starting on December 17th. Each of these two boats has capacity for 18,000 barrels. The first passenger ship of the line is the Canadian Fisher, which will be commanded by Capt. John Randell. This boat will have accommodation for 30 first-class passengers and will ply between Halifax and the West Indies. It has a dead weight capacity of 5,100 tons. The Canadian Government Merchant Marine Ltd. also intends to conduct a regular steamship service between Halifax and Real, Santos, Monte Video and Buenos Aires. The S.S. Canadian Sailor and the S.S. Canadian Signaller will ply between Halifax, Havana and Nassau. Later, regular services will be maintained between Halifax and India, Australia and, in all probability, Italy also. Any of the C.G.M.M. Ltd. boats will be diverted to call here to take shipments provided there is enough freight in sight.

"Lock Them Up!"

The above appeared in a recent issue of the Advocate, and it means that the editors of the City newspapers—not outports—are bold, bad fellows, because they are trying to enlighten the "underdogs" and the country in general on how the affairs of this country are handled to-day. Its really too bad to be "giving out" so much information. You must not do it, gentlemen, or you are going to be all "locked up," stock, lock and barrel. You know the people must be kept in the dark, you know that the fishermen must not know too much about the markets, the fish regulations, and the general affairs of the country. You must not be telling the people about the bungling men who made controlling sugar, and forced the people to the tune of 32c. lb. And above all you know that it hurts the feelings of the boss, to see all those things in the papers, when they should be kept out. You must not be talking about paying $10 and $12 for fish. You must not be saying anything about this thousand dollar increase to members of the House. You must not be saying anything about those picnics abroad by members of the government. And lots of other things you must not publish. Go easy, brethren, or you will all be "locked up."—Trinity Enterprise.

Requests of a Japanese Wife.

Considerable interest was excited in Tokio by the display at an exhibition given by the girls in a poster naming school in Tokio, of a poster naming eight requests which the Japanese wife of a to-day should make of her husband. To a Newfoundland girl the requests should seem modest in the extreme, the full list being as follows:

1. Please get up at the same time I do.
2. When you leave home, please tell me where you go.
3. Please let me know when you go out and when you return.
4. Please do not scold me in the presence of visitors or the children.
5. Please grant me a few privileges and some of my wishes.
6. Please give me a fixed sum of money, for my personal use.
7. Please refrain from doing in front of the children things which may set a bad example.
8. Please allow me certain hours for reading and study.

Why the Third Finger.

The idea that the third finger of the left hand is the only one upon which the wedding ring should be placed comes from the Greeks. They believed that a certain vein of blood passing directly from this finger to the heart communicated a peculiar intimacy and sympathy between that finger and the seat of the affections. These ideas have passed from land to land until we find in the early accounts of Christian marriages in England that the groom gave the

If you consider her a wise girl, say it with sage.
If you think her cold, say it with snow-drops.
If you desire to marry her, say it with a poppy.
If you know she has a sweet tooth, say it with candytuft.
If she impresses you as a sad girl, say it with rue.
If she is of a happy, joyous nature, say it with gladiolus.
If she seems a prunes and prisms sort of girl, say it with primula.
If you think her a sour, sharp-tongued old maid, say it with snapdragons, catnip and a century plant.

Holy Carpet of Mecca.

The ceremony incident to the departure of the holy carpet from Cairo to Mecca is dignified, imposing and spectacular, and seen in its progress through the bazaar in a native setting—perhaps as picturesque as any occasion to be witnessed in the Eastern world.

In reality, it is a continuing ceremony, beginning with its showing at a night event of great brilliance in the Mastaba at the Citadel, to its departure from Abbassia some days later by train for Suez. From there it is taken by boat across the Red Sea and then overland by caravan to Mecca. It was only a few days ago that it left Cairo on this year's pilgrimage, and word has already been received from Mecca that it has arrived in safety.

Each year the procedure is the same. It has been carried out for many years; doubtless it will be carried out for many years to come. It is the one big religious occasion of each year in Cairo, and is attended by immense crowds. Happening as it does, usually in summer, it is seen by few travellers from the West, to whom, as a rule, Egypt is a place to be visited only in the winter months.

The Holy Carpet, which is now a carpet at all, but a covering for the Kaaba in Mecca, is made in Abbassia, just outside of Cairo—a new carpet for each pilgrimage. It is made by expert workmen, whose whole time is given to its manufacture; it is of wonderful workmanship and value, and a thing of great beauty.

Of almost equal religious interest is the Mahmal, a magnificent ornamental object, canopied and curtained, like a palanquin for a camel, which is taken each year to Mecca.

Hundreds of years ago it carried a princess of Egypt on her annual pilgrimage to Mecca; since her death it has participated in every year's journey. Because of its age and associations it has come to be regarded with the greatest reverence.

It was necessary to get tickets for the showing of the Holy Carpet at the Mastaba, the first of the functions in connection with the departure. With these we drove toward the Citadel. The Mastaba is a low building at the foot of the Citadel, fronting on Mohammed Ali square, from which spot the actual departure took place. The carriage turned down the straight street leading to the Mastaba, roped off and lined with waving flags and ornamental lamps, whose light was almost dimmed by the glow of a great full moon. From somewhere came the music of an Egyptian military band, playing softly.

In the chamber within, once we had passed the white-uniformed Egyptian policeman at the door, we were before the Holy Carpet. The room was brilliantly lighted with great silver candlesticks and hanging lamps.

At first we were conscious only of the throng—the scarlet turbans of the Egyptians side by side with the bare heads of uniformed British officers—and of the luxurious rugs beneath our feet. Then we realized that the walls were draped with sombre black hangings, with here and there gorgeous green pieces worked with Arabic texts in brilliant gold and silver. The black was the Holy Carpet, heavy, rich, and exquisitely woven; a variation in the stitching giving it the two-toned effect of watered silk. It was only by approaching it closely that we could appreciate the perfection of the workmanship.

Adjoining was a long canvas pavilion, with sanded and carpeted floor, and in the center, bright in the blaze of many lights, was the Mahmal. Above it were many colored balls, emphasizing the gleam of the five silver balls at its corners and the apex of the canopy. It was dark red, worked with texts in gold embroidery. Guarding it from profane touch were swarthy police in white. Occasionally an Egyptian leaned forward, caressed it with his hand, then passed the hand over the face of his child.

The next morning the dusty level of Mohammed Ali square was inclosed with troops, foot soldiers and cavalry. In the center, on the ground, was the carpet in large pieces, stretched over curved frames of wood. Beside it squatted the men who were to carry it in procession through the streets. Across the square, opposite the pavilion of the Mastaba, we could make out the gold and red of the Mahmal. Behind the soldiers and high above the square, on the roofs and walls of the Citadel, was a crowd of spectators.

Presently the Mahmal, carried by a camel, whose snake-like head and legs alone were visible beneath his burden, entered the square, escorted by mounted and foot police. There followed seven holy men on camels in single file. Some were playing on shrill pipes; one carried a tiny drum, which he tapped in an absent-minded manner. They circled the Holy Carpet four times; then, leaving the square, stopped in front of the pavilion.

The representatives of the Sultan kissed the reins of the camel that back to the man leading it; the carriers by this time had raised the Holy Carpet to their shoulders; the cavalry and infantry swung into line, and the procession started. The Holy Carpet was taken to the Mosque El-Hassan; later to Abbassia. This also took place in Mohammed Ali square, and was similar in almost every detail to the ceremony of the departure of the Holy Carpet.

For this we went to the Mouski, the quarters of the native bazaars, through which the procession would pass, and there, standing on chairs in front of the diminutive cigarette shop of an obliging sheikh, waited for it to appear—the only Americans or Europeans visible in a crowd that packed tight the narrow street.

It was a hot, noisy, odorous crowd. Along came street vendors, selling a sweet that looked straw heavy with syrup; rattle of colored straw; pink dance caps with weird figures of paper pasted on their surface, and a variety of novelties for the children. Two women, elderly, stout, and unattractive, and inconsistently bedecked in gold necklaces and bracelets, came and begged, and were followed by a multitude of the halt, the lame and blind.

Suddenly, above the sea of heads—the white turbans and the scarlet turbans—a shaft of sunlight some distance away fell upon a cluster of banners approaching, and through the crowd wound a line of robed men bearing pennants on lofty poles and escorting the sheikhs of the principal

Oily skin and shiny nose

How to correct them

Do you know that the oil in your skin is necessary to keep it smooth, velvety, supple? This oil is constantly being produced by the glands of the skin. When it is too abundant the result is an oily skin and a shiny nose. You can relieve this embarrassing condition by using the following treatment as frequently as is necessary.

With warm water work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap in your hands. Apply it to your face and rub it into the pores thoroughly—always with an upward and outward motion. Rinse with warm water, then with cold—the colder the better. If possible, rub your face for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

This treatment will make your skin firmer and drier the very first time you try it. Use it as often as your skin requires, nightly if necessary, and before long you will see a marked improvement.

Get a cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap and begin tonight the treatment your skin needs. You will find Woodbury's on sale at any drug store or toilet goods counter in the United States or Canada. A 25 cent cake will last a month or six weeks.

mosques, each on horseback. There was a lull and the crowd closed in again. Then came mounted cavalry—the cavalry that was to escort the sacred relics across the deserts of Arabia to Mecca; brown men, browner than their neat khaki uniforms, in full service outfits, with blankets behind their saddles and canteens at their sides.

The crowd in the street jammed itself back into doorways and shops and stalls, miraculously escaping trampling. Again a lull; and then, with the sun glinting on its gold and red, came the huge Mahmal, rocking and swaying from side to side with the stepping of the camel until it seemed it would crash against the low latticed balconies overhead.

The crowd shouted and cheered. We could hear the heavy breathing of those nearest us; could see the gleam of excitement in their faces; could feel in the air the tenseness of the moment. It was not until the lumbering Mahmal turned a bend in the street and was lost to sight that the tension and excitement relaxed. And it was half an hour before we could get through the crowd, and plunging into a spice-scented passage which led us to windings through and between many ancient buildings, emerged into the open air—Cairo correspondence in New York Evening Post.

which the experts figured was laid to rest at least 4,000 years ago.

For Her Art's Sake.

Gabriele D'Annunzio, who has now declared Fiume to be an independent State, is a man who believes in having his own way.

When, for example, he was rehearsing his famous play, "The Martyrdom of Saint Sebastian," he insisted on the actress who was to take the part of the saint following a strict diet for months, till her figure suited his idea of the part.

Another actress was ordered by him to knock out one of her front teeth. When she protested he insisted that the character she was cast for must have a front tooth missing.

"You do not take your art seriously enough," he said; "here, read this!" So saying he handed her a letter he had received from a well known Italian actress in which she volunteered to have her eyes put out, if necessary, in order to play properly the part of a blind girl in another of his dramas!

Geographical Definitions.

"I have been teaching geography to my smaller pupils in a way that might be interesting to some other teacher," writes a teacher—the Family Herald and Weekly Star.

The two hands held open we let represent continents, the space around them water. Then by almost touching the thumbs, a strait is formed, and by bringing the thumbs entirely together an isthmus is made.

The ends of the first finger and the thumb touching form a lake, and the tip of the finger of the other hand forms a small island.

Then by using one hand only, the thumb is a peninsula, the space between the thumb and hand is a gulf or bay, and the tip of the middle finger is a cape or promontory. The hand flat on the desk represents a plain, and with the knuckles slightly raised, a hill is formed. Then by raising the hand on the finger-tips and wrist we make mountains. By doubling the fingers under the hand and raising the wrist we form a plateau. The children's belts represent the equator, their spines the axis of the earth and their heads and feet the poles. From this little drill the children have learned the definitions very quickly and have enjoyed the novelty.

Your Outline.

Learn to see yourself in silhouette. This can be done by placing your mirror in such a position that it shows you as much in sharp outline as possible, and to a large extent obliterates detail. In this way you can see if your hat is too large or too small, if your furs are too much for you, if the way you dress your hair is becoming to the lines of your face, or if your skirt sticks out like that of wooden Mrs. Noah of the nursery ark, when it should be a straight up and down tube-like affair—according to the mode of the day.

Fur, lace and brilliant ornaments are used on millinery. Belted scarfs with tuxedo collars and pockets are worn.

Colour and Precious Stones.

Diamonds are not always crystal clear, but vary greatly as to color and few of the precious stones are true to color. The famous Hope diamond is a real and most beautiful blue. Green diamonds are found, and others of a lovely crimson, but these are very rare. Black diamonds are common enough. Black pearls are rarer, but are found. Pink pearls are greatly prized. One of the finest in existence was found in a fresh water mussel in the Mississippi River and is valued at $15,000. OR the Pearl Islands, south of Panama, pearls are found which are lead grey and also green. New sapphire mines in the Rocky Mountains produce stones which touch the whole color scale from blue and red to an exquisite purple. In Rhodesia is found a topaz of a most lovely pale blue. Yet the chemical composition of the gem proves it to be identical in all but color with the yellow topaz. The colors of most gems are more or less fugitive. That is, under certain circumstances they are liable to fade. Take two rubies exactly similar, shut one in the dark, and leave the other exposed to full sunlight, and, at the end of two years there will be a distinct difference between them. The one that has been exposed to the light will be decidedly paler than the other. Similar results may be observed with both emeralds and sapphires. Garnets also will turn lighter, while in the case of the topaz, sunlight ends by dimming and dulling the color of this pretty stone.

Suddenly, above the sea of heads—the white turbans and the scarlet turbans—a shaft of sunlight some distance away fell upon a cluster of banners approaching, and through the crowd wound a line of robed men bearing pennants on lofty poles and escorting the sheikhs of the principal

A Gift
A 10-Day Tube of Pepsodent is sent to all who ask. See coupon.

Why Teeth Stain

You leave a film-coat on them

Most teeth are dimmed more or less by a film. Smokers' teeth often become darkly coated.

That film makes teeth look dingy, and most tooth troubles are now traced to it.

Millions now combat that film in a new, scientific way. This is to offer a test to you, to show the unique results.

You must end film

The film is viscous—you can feel it with your tongue. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays.

Ordinary brushing methods leave much of this film intact. So millions find that well-brushed teeth discolor and decay. You must attack film in a better way, else you will suffer from it.

It is the film-coat that discolors, not the teeth. Film is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Efficient ways

Dental science, after painstaking research, has developed effective ways to fight film. The world's highest authorities now approve them, after careful tests.

These ways are combined in a dentifrice called Pepsodent. And leading dentists everywhere now advise its daily use. A ten-day tube is being sent to everyone who asks.

Watch these new effects

One ingredient is pepsin. One multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva to dissolve the starch deposits that cling. One multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva to neutralize mouth acids as they form. Two factors directly attack the film. One keeps the teeth so highly polished that film cannot easily cling.

Pepsodent has brought a new era in teeth cleaning. It fights the tooth destroyers as was never done before.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the slimy film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coat disappears.

You will always brush teeth in this new way when you watch the results for a week. Cut out the coupon now.

Prehistoric Man 9 Feet High.

The other day scientists in Pennsylvania opened up a mound of the ancient race that inhabited that section and found the skeleton of a man between eight and nine feet tall. This mound, which was originally about 100 feet long and more than twelve feet high, has been somewhat worn down by time. The most interesting feature in the excavation was the mummified torso of the human body,

"A Contented Woman."

A Play Dealing With Woman Suffrage.

Last night the Clark-Urban Company again delighted their huge number of friends with a delightful rendition of a political satire, by Charles Hoyt, entitled "A Contented Woman." The play deals with the political career of the ambitious Benton Holmes who is nominated for Mayor and is opposed by his wife who is led into the affair by Aunt Jim, a raving suffragette. The comedy part of the production was amply distributed by Mr. N. S. Scoville who held the audience in convulsions of laughter with his original wit. Mr. Harnden Clark, as Benton Holmes, was all at home, whilst Miss Maizie Cecil did ample justice to the role of Mrs. Holmes, the contented woman. To-night the attraction will be another sparkling comedy, entitled "Nothing but Lies," by James Montgomery, who is also author of the recent comedy success, "Nothing But the Truth." In this play, however, the hero bets he will tell nothing but lies, and in doing so finds he has tackled a difficult job, for when he does tell the truth he discovers that nobody believes him. This is a bright piece with fun in galore.

Congratulates Bell's Managers.

Editor Evening Telegram

Dear Sir,—In congratulating Bell on his wonderful exhibition last night, I think it only fair that a meed of praise should also be extended to his manager, the popular Harry Raines, and his trainer, A. Harvey Thomas.

After Bell's misfortune at Halifax, these two lads lost not their faith in him, but night after night were with him at his training. Ducky's preconcerted signals to the runner by means of a kerchief last night would do credit to the professional coach of a varsity football team.

We do not wonder where Mr. Thomas got his running experience, for we know him to be fully capable of being able to run a baseball team, and also a fair maiden, with professional aspirations, but we do wonder where Mr. Raines got his, for if we remember rightly it was for not knowing how to run that he earned his D.C.M. and Cross de Guerre in the war.

However, gentlemen, to all three of you our heartiest congratulations are extended; and under such capable management, our professional marathons should seek fields afar to exhibit his prowess.

Yours very truly,
ONE OF THE STOVE LEAGUE.

COAKERISM---

What it is Doing and What it Has Done.

That the Squires Government has made some very serious mistakes is undeniable fact, that as a consequence it has come in for a great deal of criticism from the Opposition is also true. But, in spite of this, there is absolutely no excuse for the gross deceit, palpable falsehoods, rotten, personal abuse practised by the Government organs, the Star, the Advocate, Day after day these papers appear with their editorials ringing with abuse and falsehoods, and, by its mouthpieces, must the Government be judged.

Every Government has made mistakes, but few have made as bad mistakes as has this one. In fact, it has managed to put the country in a position in which it never has been before, even now, none can tell the outcome. Who is responsible for the present state of affairs? Is it the Government as a whole or any one man in it? On this point people are divided, there can only be one answer, there is one man dominating the Government. In his hands the Prime Minister is as so much putty, ready to be moulded to his will. That man is the President of the F.P.U.—Hon. W. F. Coaker. Nowadays, Mr. Coaker is an autocrat. No one dares question his authority. He does as he pleases, how he pleases, and when he pleases. The Prime Minister seems to be a mere puppet in his hands, and Coaker rules the roost. Now, as some ruler of Newfoundland, Mr.

Coaker is on a pedestal, like any demigod. He actually has refused to see fishermen who have called to see him with reference to their fish troubles. But Mr. Coaker was not always like this. There was once a time when he raved and ranted against the very men with whom he now associates and takes into his bosom. The Coaker who now raves like a maniac against the Opposition press, which he claims is responsible for damaging us abroad, is evidently not the same Coaker who roared against conscription and fought against the best interests of the country when the war was on. Surely he is not now that same Coaker the socialist who wanted the fishermen to rise and put the "grasping" merchants to flight. And surely the Morine whom Coaker attacks regularly in the papers of his "yellow" Journal, the Advocate, is not the same Morine who told Coaker, so straight forwardly, what he was, and put the truth so bluntly that the outraged President actually attempted to hurl an inkpot at his aggressor, with unfortunate results to himself? Coaker attacks Morine personally, and the Opposition in general, with all the venom at his command. Now, why should one so highly placed as our own prize "Czar" take all this trouble to attack his powerless enemies? The answer is easily found—because he fears them!

There is no doubt about the fact that Coaker runs the Government, and that as a consequence, we have been indicted with the Fish Regulations and the Food Control Board, amongst other things. Take the Fish Regulations. By means of these, Mr. Coaker has succeeded in antagonising all the fishermen save those, who have so much money in Coaker projects that they cannot afford to make any protest against anything he does. At the same time. In spite of the glowing accounts in the Advocate of his meeting last week, the fishermen who attended were not backward in showing their disapproval of what the Minister of Marine said and did. They were loud in voicing their opinion that the whole thing was a "cod." They did not want to hear about our trouble with the Consorzio, what they wanted to know was whether or not Coaker was going to keep his promise and pay the prices he offered for fish. But all the fishermen who went to Coaker in a last attempt to sell their fish were sent away with promises, more promises, always promises. What the end will be, no one can tell, but sooner or later the fishermen will organise and force Coaker to make his promises good. In the meantime, we hear that he intends to get the country to redeem them for him, by telling the merchants to buy fish at $8 and that any losses they may incur will be made good by the Government, an arrangement which which the country at large is not likely to look upon with any feelings of pleasure. It is a matter of some doubt as to whether or not Coaker will stay in power much longer. For the sake of the country, let us hope not. Some say that the Prime Minister has been underrated, that he has stayed away so long, that Coaker may have "rope enough to hang himself." Others say that, contrary to this, Coaker is working for the overthrow of Squires by attempting to gain the allegiance of the Premier's followers for himself.

He Can Do More and Better Work, Declares Morton

Quebec Man Says Tanlac Has Put Him In Fine Shape and He Feels Like New Person.

"Tanlac has relieved me of a condition that was getting to be alarming and has made me feel like a brand new man," said William Morton, a moulder employed by the St. Malo Foundry, Quebec, living at 462 Lavigne St.

"Since taking Tanlac I can do more and better work in a day and do it easier than at any time for years. I suffered from a bad case of stomach trouble, and for hours every day I was in perfect misery from the bloating and intense pains caused by gas on my stomach.

"I had awful spells of dizziness, when everything turned black before me, and was so nervous it was next to impossible for me to sleep at night. I had to force myself to eat enough to keep going and it was alarming the way I fell off my weight. All my strength and energy just seemed to be slipping away from me and nothing in the world but sheer will power enabled me to get through my work.

"But I began taking Tanlac and that was the best thing I ever did. For now I have a tremendous appetite and can eat anything I want and as much as I want and never suffer a particle from indigestion. I have gained eleven pounds in weight and feel so much better that there is simply no comparison. I just can't say enough in praise of Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, in Paradise by Mrs. Martin F. Byrne, in Upper Gables by Heber Andrews, in Portland by H. Haines, in St. Joseph, Salmonier, by Mrs. J. Gush, in Miramichi by Exploits Valley Royal Stores, Ltd., in Flat Island by William Samson, in Jamestown by Christopher Haines, and in Lewisporte by Uriah Freake—adv.

Currents Events Club Lecture.

At the Current Events Club last Saturday afternoon a paper was read by Dr. Lena Wilson, (daughter of A. Wilson, Esq.) who has recently returned from Edinburgh, where she graduated, and is now Newfoundland's only lady doctor.

The subject chosen by Dr. Wilson, "Welfare Work," was an appropriate introduction to the work in which our women are actively engaged this week, and in her address to the Club Dr. Wilson dealt with some of those forms of public service, and laws concerning women and children. It was with much interest that the members recognized the thoroughness by which these problems are solved in Edinburgh. At the conclusion of the address Lady Horwood called for a vote of thanks, which was heartily accorded by all the members present, who appreciated Dr. Wilson's kindness in acceding to their request for a paper, as much as the subject matter with which it dealt.

To speak for English methods in child welfare we had an illuminating address last year by Miss Lecky, of London. For Scotland, we have now had Dr. Wilson, and on Saturday next we hope to hear Mrs. Gosling speak for St. John's, and what we are trying to do here for those little ones that have so poor a chance in their struggle for existence.

Old Ladies' Home.

The Cowan Mission "Home for Old Ladies" is now practically filled up, as another inmate of the Poor House was taken into the Home recently and we learned yesterday that the last vacancy will probably be filled today. The old ladies now in residence are enjoying the peace and happiness which, if it were not for the Cowan Mission, they would not have done. In the meantime, although donations of clothing are coming in, there has been practically no response to the request for monetary donations. The Cowan Mission has no intention of making a house to house canvass for funds, but they will be very grateful for all voluntary contributions, large or small. It is to be hoped that this deserving institution will meet with more success in its appeals than it has heretofore.

Another Sign of the Times.

Recently nearly seven hundred men were paid off at the Bell Island Iron mines and there is very little chance of their resuming work for some time. The majority of those put out of employment are from Conception Bay, although quite a number are from St. John's. There is no work here for these men to do, so it is probable a great many of them will have to go abroad.

A Family Mix-Up.

Halleybury, Ont., Nov. 19.—By her marriage here Monday, Miss Christina McAulay, daughter of Major N. J. McAulay, becomes a sister-in-law of her step-mother, and at the same time her husband is brother-in-law and son-in-law of his bride's father, Wilfred McKee, the groom, is a brother of the present Mrs. N. J. McAulay, second wife of the Major, and Miss McAulay is a daughter of the Major by his first wife. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. A. Spencer, pastor of the Methodist Church here.
