The Broken Circle!

CHAPTER VII.

"She must have known what she was writing," replied the general. "She was sweet-tempered, and never complained, but she died young, and of no complaint to which men could give a name. She was not happy, and she asked me to save you."

Martin Ray stepped forward. "I will not allow you to speak in that fashion," he said. "Their mother loved me, and they love me; you will never set my children against me."

"I have no wish to do so," said the general coldly. "Knowing your true character, as I suspect my sister knew it before her death, I can imagine you to be quite unfit to have the charge of young girls; therefore I bring their mother's message to them, and they can make their choice."

"Why am I unfit?" cried Martin Ray, his face white with rage. "In what way?"

"I judge you from your father's character. You are without honor, honesty, and loyalty. You are the very ring-leader of sedition; treason is a natural atmosphere to you. You live on the hard earnings of the people whom you misled. You spread disaffection, rebellion, ruin, misery, and death wherever you go."

A low cry came from Leah's lips. It seemed to her that those words of her uncle's gave life to a horrible spectre that had always haunted her.

"It," continued the soldier, "you were honest. I should have some respect for you. But you are an impostor. You, and such as you, live on the hard-earned pence of the men you deceive. If you gave to the people, instead of taking from them, one right penny, you would have a little faith in you."

"I have given my life to the cause I have at heart," rejoined Martin Ray.

"The cause of anarchy and rebellion—the cause of revolution, which you would spread like a firebrand all over the land. How many men's lives have you to answer for, Martin Ray? You have kept yourself safe; but how many men have you slain by your teaching? You have found men vain and weak, ready to listen to anything which appeared to lighten their burdens; and what have you taught? Did you ever teach a man to be patient, to rest content with the condition in which Heaven had placed him, to work soberly, honestly, and justly? No. You taught him to long for his neighbor's property, to rebel against rightful authority, to look with envious eyes on all those above him, to brood in sullen anger until murder ran riot in his heart. Those who are your doctrines."

"Whatever they are, I believe in them," said Martin Ray.

"Many young men owe their ruin and death to you," continued the general. "You have urged them to rebel; you have seen them suffer loss, seen them condemned to prison, to exile; yet you have never paused, nor taken pity, nor spared."

"I have done my duty," declared Martin Ray.

"You are not a fit person to have charge of girls like these. You would sell them heart and soul to further your cause," and Leah shrank at the words, a sudden pain piercing her heart. "You value their youth, their fresh, sweet grace and beauty, only so far as they will help you and lure men to your belief whom you cannot teach yourself. I declare to Heaven," he continued, passionately, "that I am relieved and grateful to find them as they are! I should not have been surprised had I discovered that you had, even young as they are, tried to make platform orators of them."

The random shot went home to the very heart of Martin Ray, and blanched Leah's face with a great fear. This was indeed the furnace of fire which she had longed to be free.

"My children are my own," said Martin—"to do as I will with."

"They are not all your own," rejoined General Hatton, "A dead hand is stretched out from their mother's grave to save them. They belong to her, dead though she may be, as much as they belong to you. They have no business with you; you are no fitting guardian for them. Those two girls have good blood in their veins. Their ancestors were loyal; they gave their lives for the safety and well-being of the throne that you are trying to overthrow; they lived and died in the service of the royal race that you would destroy." His anger seemed to increase as he went on. "I," he continued, "make no boast. I have served my country and my queen as an honest soldier and a loyal man. What could I have but loathing and contempt for one who is the greatest traitor and the worst foe to the royal house that I serve? Light and darkness, day and night should meet and embrace, rather than that I should tolerate you."

HINTS OF SPRING.

WALT MATON

I long have wished that Spring would come, for winter makes me weary; I hate to hear the wild winds hum from arctic regions in my ears; but at the dawn of spring-time sweet, I'm longing for December, for there are rugs that I must heat, and stoves I must dismember. Housecleaning and its deadly snares I gladly would abolish, for I must carry out the chairs, and rub them down with polish. Oh, I forgot housecleaning chores, when I was wildly singing of birds and bees and other birds that gentle Annie's bringing. I clean forgot the brooms and mops that make life also-rainish, when I was calling on the cops to make the winter vanish. The women now impatient wax, they're restless and uneasy; they long to renovate our shacks and make existence cheesey. I'll have to carry out the chairs, and scrub the door and casement, and pack big bureaus up the stairs, and ranges in the basement. And when I'm on my spavined knees, some punk utenas swinging, not all the birds in all the trees can cheer me by their singing. The women yearn to tear apart the house in which I'm dwelling; in vain for me the tulips start, in vain the birds are yelling. I look upon the drifted snow, I mark its gleam and glitter, and how I hate to see it go, to feel that it's a quitter!

Postman's Palace.

In the village of Hautenves, in France, may be seen what is probably the strangest edifice in the world. It was built by F. Cheval, a postman, and represents 45 years of continuous effort.

Cheval saw a book containing pictures of wonderful mosques, castles, and palaces, and decided to erect an edifice of his own. He collected gaily colored stones from a river, boulders, cement and lime, and started.

For 45 years he spent almost the whole of his spare time on his self-imposed task. He put in 70,000 hours

Headaches Gone

Perhaps you can imagine what this means to one who has suffered terribly with headaches for ten years.

Read about it in this letter. Mrs. Tena A. Smith, Country Harbor Cross Roads, N. S., writes:

"I feel that if anyone can recommend Dr. Chase's medicine I certainly can. I suffered for ten years from severe headaches, and although I took all kinds of headache powders they just relieved me at the time. I became very nervous and run-down, and everything seemed to trouble me. I have taken eighteen boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and it has made an entirely new person of me. I feel that I could not have lived without it. I do not have one headache now for every hundred I used to have, and my nerves are good and strong. I just weighed 107 pounds when I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and now I weigh 121. Knowing what this treatment has done for me, I cannot too highly recommend it to others."

THE MIDDLE OF THE NIGHT.

"Was ever anything quite so bad as it seemed in the middle of the night?"

I very much doubt it. Even such final and awful calamities as the death of some loved one seem more unendurable then. Not because the thing itself looks any worse. It couldn't. But just because we have less strength to bear up under it.

A woman who has had a great anxiety come into her life in the last few months told me that she got along pretty well in the day time but that in the middle of the night she woke up and lay for about two hours thinking of her troubles—wondering what the outcome was to be, searching for some way out.

She could not have told me anything that would have made me more anxious about the way she is going to get through this difficult time. For I know of no habit in the world that can work such havoc with body, mind and spirit as that one.

The Very Worst Time to Think. There is no time in the 24 hours when one is less competent to deal with one's troubles than in the watches of the night.

In the first place, one's strength, mental, physical and spiritual, is at its lowest ebb at that time.

In the second place, one is ruled by emotion rather than judgment.

In the third place, lack of anything to distract one's mind and relieve the tension of thinking of something unpleasant results in the mind's traveling at a terrific rate, racing like a motor power disconnected from the engine.

If all the accidents that are planned in the watches of the night were carried out the next day I have an idea that the earth would, in a fair way, be depopulated.

And the worst thing about such a habit is that it feeds on the weakness that it creates. Do it one night, you tire yourself out, and the next night are less able to control your mind.

How to Stop Yourself.

The best time to stop is the first time you are tempted to let your mind go in the middle of the night. But it can be stopped at any time.

Tell yourself over and over again that there is no use thinking over in the night because all your thoughts are distorted. Say to yourself, "I will wait until morning and things will look different then."

Don't let your mind get started racing. Think of anything else but the fatal subject. Remind yourself of your own smallness in the scheme of the universe and see if that does not make your concerns seem a little less worthy of such mental turmoil.

Remind yourself of the fact that you are hurting yourself and making yourself less able to avert whatever evil you dread. Think of some book you have read during the day. Reconstruct some far off scene in your mind. Do anything to keep off the fatal subject.

It's Hardest at First.

It's not easy, I won't tell you that. But there is this comfort. Every victory makes the next victory easier. If you have had the habit of lying awake a couple of hours and cut your wakefulness down to an hour and a half, you will find it easier to get it down to an hour, and gradually to eliminate it altogether. And no matter what other riches life may bring you, none will more add to the sum of your happiness than this power of mind control.

Reparation Conditions Granted Germany.

Græco-Turkish Armistice Advised --- Imperial Troops May Intervene --- Numerous Bergs South of Cape Race.

MORATORIUM GRANTED GERMANY.

PARIS, March 22. A partial moratorium was granted Germany for her reparation payments for 100 days. The plan carried with it specifications that Germany raise 500 million marks (paper) in her budget, stop exportations of capital, make the Reichsbank independent, radically reduce expense and submit to a system of supervision. If these conditions are not fulfilled by April 21 the moratorium may be revoked.

URGE ARMISTICE.

PARIS, March 22. The Allied Foreign Ministers convened here have sent telegrams to Greece and Constantinople urging an armistice between the Greek and Turkish forces facing each other in the Minor.

SEPARATE THEM WITH IMPERIALS.

LONDON, March 22. The British Government have to consider whether it will be possible to give a cordon of imperial troops between the warring elements along the Iberian frontier. Winston Churchill stated in the House of Commons to-day.

DEFINITE SPLIT.

DUBLIN, March 22. It was officially announced by the Republican organ here to-day that the Irish Republican Army Convention, the holding of which was recently forbidden by Arthur Griffith, President of the Dail Eireann, will be held in Dublin on Sunday as arranged. The announcement was taken here to mean a definite split in the Republican ranks has come. According to Constance Roderick O'Connor, Director of Engineering at Headquarters Staff of the Irish Republican Army, eighty per cent of the Army's members believe that the Army has been "let down" and Dail Eireann has been bound to the Republic oath by agreement to include Ireland in the British Empire.

DANGER FROM IMMIGRANTS.

BERLIN, March 22. Canada and the United States as well as Central Europe must be on guard against the introduction of cholera and typhus through immigration of Russian refugees, says a warning issued to-day by Dr. Schelsinger, of the German Red Cross.

INTERESTING PORTRAITS DISCOVERED.

ROME, March 22. What are believed to be contemporary portraits of St. Peter and St. Paul have been discovered in a hypocaust or underground structure of the Roman epoch.

CHURCHILL DEFENDS AIR MINISTRY.

LONDON, March 22. During the House of Commons debate on air force estimates yesterday, Winston Spencer Churchill stoutly defended the need of a separate air ministry, and said Great Britain's inferior position had largely disappeared, making progress in air navigation of the highest consequence not even second to the navy. Vital sea battles in the future, he said, would be fought by aeroplanes from ships.

LIMITING SPEECHES.

WASHINGTON, D.C., March 22. One hour limit on speeches went into effect to-day when the Senate proceeded with the discussion of the Four-Power Pacific Treaty under the unanimous agreement, which calls for vote on ratification Friday.

LAFOLETTE ASSAILS TREATY.

WASHINGTON, D.C., March 22. The Four-Power arrangement was assailed by Senator LaFollette as a scheme of Great Britain and Japan to secure the co-operation and protection of the United States "in further schemes of exploitation and imperialism" in a speech on the resumption to-day of the treaty debate in the Senate. He declared it would bind the United States to support the policies of London and Tokio against such outside powers as China, Russia and Germany.

ARMY REDUCTION APPROVED.

WASHINGTON, March 22. The House to-day approved reduction of the United States regular army to 115,000 men.

ICEBERGS FARTHER SOUTH.

BOSTON, March 22. Icebergs have drifted further south this year than last, and are within fifty miles of the trans-Atlantic west-bound route. Bergs are now 300 miles southeast of Cape Race.

LORDS AMEND IRISH TREATY.

LONDON, March 22. The Government was defeated in the House of Lords to-night by the adoption of an amendment to the Irish Free State Bill to guarantee pensions to Irish civil servants. The vote was 42 to 40. The fate of the bill is not necessarily involved. The amendment will doubtless be rejected by the Commons, and when the bill is returned to the Lords the rejection will probably be accepted. Lord Lansdowne said on Tuesday that

Valuable Coal Deposit.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—Having heard much talk of a coal mine, that some company in St. John's was working at Marley's Cove, T.B., and being in that vicinity a few days ago, I made a visit to the scene of operations, and was agreeably surprised to find that the reports I had heard were not exaggerated in the least. Mr. James Rendell, who is Vice-President of the Company in charge of operations there, and with a crew of eight men, has since November driven a slope 100 feet long into the side of the hill, about 20 feet from where the seam crops through the surface. After looking around the place a little while, and having a cup of tea in the comfortable mess-house, which the Company have built for their men, I asked for and obtained permission to go down into the slope. One of the men was sent with me to carry a light to guide us on our way down. I had gone but a few feet when I was compelled to stop and gaze with wonder at the sight which met my view. On either hand, above, below, and in front of me seemed to my eyes to be nothing but coal. I was told by my guide, however, that where I was standing, the seam did not carry sufficient pressure, but that as they went further down, the quality improved. I was also informed that the slope which I visited was driven mainly for the purpose of determining the general direction and depth of the seam, and that the results were quite up to expectations. I had the pleasure of seeing some of the coal burning in a stove at the camp, and to my mind it had the appearance of anthracite. One thing puzzles me about this business, and that is the secrecy that has been maintained. True the Company has issued a Prospectus offering shares for sale, but they seem to have been quietly passed around to friends, and no advertising has been done. Is it the purpose of the promoters to let a few of their personal friends in on a good thing, and then sell out to some foreign concern who may find it to their interest to keep it locked up? What is our Government doing in the matter? At least the Minister of Agriculture and Mines should investigate and see what is being done, so that the country may reap some benefit therefrom. So far as I can learn, the Company is composed of men of limited means, but who have faith enough in the proposition to risk their money in it, and if so, they deserve to get encouragement for their efforts. However, after seeing the place, Mr. Editor, I feel sure that those people are on the right track, and I am backing that opinion with my money. Here's success to you gentlemen of the Trinity Bay Mining and Development Company, and let us hope that in taking care of our own interests, you will not forget that you also owe something to our dear old Terra Nova, and that you will make her interests identical with your own. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your courtesy in permitting these few rambling remarks, I beg to subscribe myself as

How it is Being Done at Carbonear.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—Will you please allow me space in your esteemed paper to make a few remarks on how things are going on over here. Well, Sir, we are getting some of those hard earned taxes refunded to us in the shape of relief work on what is known as the Breakwater. Our M.E.A. is an expert in the general management of labour on relief work. He sees to it that his ring is not omitted from getting a full share of the work. We had a Road Board election some time ago and practically all new members were elected. The three who were running for the Chairmanship disagreed and the result is nobody was appointed. However, the three are now acting in their turn as timekeepers and foremen on this marine relief work. These men are not entitled to the work, and it should be left in the hands of some of our hard working fishermen-planters, who this year are finding it hard to make both ends meet owing to the cut in the price of codfish. It is not justice that those who are the backbone of the country should have to make room for those soft jobbers. But being friends of Mr. Penny, no others need apply. That grand speech from the Throne at the opening of the Legislature was as bald and as bare as the Pole Heads of Trepassery. It says, however, that there is a small surplus left. What about last year's loan of six millions? And where are the big profits that are obtained from Liquor Control? Are they squandered on party picnics, etc? And yet we are to have another six million dollar loan, which leaves no hope of reduction in taxation. We are being led to death with taxes. At the present rate it will not be long before we will all be on the pauper's list. The fishermen who are the bone and sinew of the country, are not being given a chance to live by a reckless government, whose aim is raising loans and levying taxes to squander on an army of officials. Thanking you for space, Yours sincerely, OBSERVER. Carbonear, March 16, 1922.

A Notable Theatrical Farewell.

Covent Garden Theatre, on March 23, 1833, was the scene of one of the most notable and, at the same time, saddest of theatrical farewells, when the house was crammed to its utmost limits. On that night Edmund Keen and his son Charles stood together for the first time upon the London stage as Othello and Iago. Brandy had long before shattered the reputation, the genius, and the health of the older actor, who had been very ill throughout the winter, and was utterly unfit to sustain the great fatigue and excitement of such a night; but he went to the farewell, in which in the old days he used to stir the very souls of the spectators. He broke down at the words—"Othello's occupation's gone!" Then, gasping for breath, he began: "Be sure, thou—unable to proceed, he fell upon his son's shoulder, moaning—"I am dying—speak to them for me." And so the curtain descended upon him for the last time.

Man Breaks Arm.

Yesterday afternoon a man named Robert James, whilst coming down Barter's Hill, slipped on the ice and fell heavily. Several persons who were passing ran to his assistance and brought him to a nearby residence, where a doctor being called, it was found that the man's right arm had been broken at the elbow.

Schooner J. W. Miller at Halifax.

CAPTAIN REPORTS SEAMAN KILLED—BODY BURIED AT SEA.

Yesterday Messrs. Crosbie and Co. received a message from Capt. Stan Duder, of the schooner J. W. Miller, reporting the accidental death of a seaman named William Rice, a native of Cape Broyle. The schooner is now at Halifax on the way to this port from Bahia, which port was left on January 18th. The message states that Rice was struck by a falling block, on February 18th, and died as a result of his injuries. His body was buried at sea. The deceased is learnedly unmarried. On receipt of the message, Mr. J. Peters wired Rev. Father Maher of Ferryland, particulars of the happening. The J. W. Miller is making a long passage to this port having met very bad weather. When he coast was reached the vessel became jammed in the ice, but managed to make Cape Pine. Captain Duder found it impossible to get down the shore and was obliged to run for Halifax, where he is awaiting a favorable opportunity to reach his destination.

Programme of Interest at the Nickel.

LARRY SEMON SEEN IN HIS GREATEST COMEDY.

Yesterday's show at the Nickel was up to the usual mark of photoplay excellence. Larry Semon, the celebrated Vitaphone comedian was seen to advantage in one of his latest pictures, "The Fall Guy." For genuine fun and merriment this picture lacked nothing. The feature attractions was, however, a Paramount-Artcraft picture, "Let's Be Fashionable," featuring Douglas MacLean and Doris May. They have the roles of a newlywed pair, who rent a bungalow in a fashionable summer resort colony and make strenuous efforts to break into the swift society set. Being novices at the game, their attempts result in some humorous complications that persist until the two decide that it is better to be happy than to be fashionable and settle down to a life more in keeping with their pocketbooks. "Let's Be Fashionable" is the work of Mildred Conside and was directed by Lloyd Ingraham. Wade Boteler, Geo. Webb and Norris Johnson are included in the supporting cast. It is a Paramount Artcraft release and mighty good entertainment.

Accident at Seal Cove.

LEG FRACTURED BY BOULDER. Whilst engaged working on a steam shovel at Seal Cove, a resident of the place, named Eli Dawa, was badly injured yesterday by a huge stone which fell and crushed his leg. The man was working in a pit at the time and without warning a boulder which became loosened slid down the declivity and knocked him senseless. The injured man was brought to the station, and later arrived in town by special train. Dr. Paterson, who was in attendance, found that the man's left leg was fractured below the knee. The patient was removed to Hospital to have the limb set.

Injured Whist Skylarking.

BOY FALLS OVER GALLERY. Yesterday evening a lad named Kennedy, was somewhat badly hurt by a fall received whilst skylarking with another youth named Murphy. Both boys were wrestling on the gallery at the entrance to the Star Movie Theatre, when Kennedy fell to the ground, a distance of some 10 or 12 feet. The lad was rendered unconscious and had to be brought to the Hospital for treatment.

Driver Thrown From Truck.

HORSES BOLTED, BUT NO DAMAGE DONE. Whilst proceeding to this morning's fire at Casey Street Mr. Chaplin, driver of the Central Fire Station, was badly shaken up by being thrown from a horse truck. The shooting of the vehicle, when it arrived at the foot of Garrison Hill, threw Chaplin from his seat. The only other occupant of the truck was standing on the rear platform operating the cutter and the horses being without a driver dashed down Church Hill and turned into Duckworth Street East. They were brought under control near Dr. Mitchell's Surgery. Inspector General Hutchings had Chaplin conveyed to the Police Station where an examination by Dr. Mitchell proved that no bones were broken, but that the man was suffering from a severe shock.

GOVERNMENT BREAKS SILENCE—PREMIER ATTEMPTS EXPLANATION—SIR MICHAEL CASHIN MOVES ADJOURNMENT.

The Government broke its long silence yesterday afternoon, and after the Minister of Justice had paved the way for the Premier, the latter attempted an explanation of the revenue paragraph in the Speech from the Throne...

WHO STOLE THE CARPET?

Mr. Walsh in presenting a petition from his district, suggested the formation of a joint committee to deal with all petitions. On motion of the Prime Minister, the House then went into Committee of the Whole on the Loan Resolutions...

A WEAK DEFENCE.

Hon. Mr. Warren opened the debate on the Address in Reply, attempting a weak defence of the Government. He was unfortunate in the choice of his words, for when he characterized the Speech from the Throne as being "critically correct," he unwittingly hurled a boomerang which later returned on himself.

A CHINAMAN'S CHANCE.

He later referred to Cold Storage and said he hoped he might be able to institute it in Fortune Bay. Mr. Bennett—"Well, you won't have a Chinaman's chance at the next election if you don't do something."

A SPLENDID SPEECH.

Mr. J. R. Bennett made a splendid reply to the Government spokesman, in which he repudiated any tax of disloyalty and said the Government were merely pulling the wool over the people's eyes. It was a brilliant and responsible government. The people were taxed so that they could no longer bear the burden.

CRITICALLY CORRECT.

With sarcasm of the most biting nature, Mr. Higgins made the Government members simply squirm. Seizing upon Hon. Mr. Warren's unfortunate phrase, "critically correct," he used it as a whip with which he simply flogged all the arguments used by the Government. It was "critically correct" that half the Executive Council was abroad; it was "critically correct" that there was a Minister of Marine and Fisheries, but he had not entered his office for months; it was also "critically correct" that a wireless from Brazil would cause some of the Government members to vote one way, and the cracking of a whip, to send the dog team in a fixed direction. This last statement wrung an impassioned protest from Mr. Jennings. He was not a dog, and would not be called one. He was told by Mr. Higgins that if he kept on the way he was going he would be surprised to find where he would end.

THE PREMIER'S REPLY.

The Prime Minister was not happy in his role of Government apologist, and was frequently interrupted from the front row of the Opposition benches. He explained the misleading statement concerning the revenue by quoting from the Budget Speech of last year, and this was the only defence he could offer.

S. W. Coast Isolated.

NO MAILS FOR WEEKS—HARBORS ICE-FREE. A disgraceful condition of affairs exists on the South West Coast, which for over three weeks has been as completely isolated as if it were situated at the North Pole. This applies particularly to Burgeo, where the harbor is free of ice and yet no attempt has been made to get a mail through. Of course, with the House in session, the various members of the Government have to expend so much time preparing the speeches they never deliver, that such important matters as mails simply cannot be touched.

War Memorial Billiards.

SIX GAMES PLAYED. There was a marked improvement in the games in the War Memorial Billiard Tournament which were played yesterday. Six games were played in all. The biggest break for the day was 32, made by T. Ryan (Star). Alterations were made to the table before yesterday's games were played, and as a result, faster, and more interesting games took place.

Rev. Dr. Jones

HOLDS MISSION AT HALIFAX. Enticing weather and the advance of the Lenten season united in taking Halifax people to their churches on Sunday and places of worship in the city were crowded at all services. The evening services in particular received record attendances and streets in the vicinity of churches were thronged with people during the before and after service periods.

The outstanding religious event of the day was the mission at Trinity Church, being conducted by Rev. Dr. Edgar Jones, of Newark, Delaware. A mass meeting for men was held at four o'clock in the afternoon and was very largely attended. Lieutenant Governor Grant presided and a male quartette assisted in the programme. Dr. Jones' topic was "The Flaming Eyes of God." A similar meeting, for men only, will be held next Sunday afternoon when the mission will be concluded. Last evening Dr. Jones addressed a meeting that crowded the church to its very doors. His topic was "The Rebuilding of Altars," and Dr. Jones pointed out the necessity, in times of great mental stress, for people to re-dedicate their minds to God, lest they slip away from the Christian life for various causes such as great prosperity, great hardship or indifference. Representative of the close of the meeting, said he wished every young man in Halifax could have heard the address. There was an after meeting for which some two hundred people remained and consecrated their lives to the service and love of God, having been so deeply moved by the address of the Missioner. The mission will continue, with four meetings daily, until next Sunday evening.—Halifax Herald.

KYLE REPORTED.—The following message was received last evening from the S.S. Kyle:—"Position at 4 p.m. 60 miles S.W. by South Channel Head. Ice open, making good progress."

Stafford's Phorotone will cure Coughs and Colds. For sale everywhere.—mar23.

Report From Sealing Fleet.

TERRA NOVA HAS 15,000

Last evening's messages to sealing ship owners advise that the Eagle and Ranger have gone East towards the seal patch located by Major Cotton. The Seal was reported on Monday night as steaming for this patch, but since no report has been received. From a report to the Reid Newfoundland Company, the prospects for the Viking getting a full load appear good. The ship has 8,000 stowed and between 8,000 and 9,000 on pans. The following are the messages of last night:—

BOWRING BROTHERS.

Eagle.—(Wednesday p.m.)—Patch cleaned up. Left at 10 a.m. for Cotton's patch. Steered a S.E. course 15 miles, struck patch hoods. Then steered N.E., took 10 whitecats. At 7 p.m. stopped for the night. Will advise prospects in the morning.

Ranger.—(Wednesday p.m.)—Steaming East for Cotton's patch. Position 6 p.m. 30 miles East Cape Bonavista, 2,600 on board.

Terra Nova.—(Wednesday p.m.)—Working in same sheet we panned on the 16th. Hauled on board to-day 2,500. Thirty or forty pans still out. Position same as yesterday. Without a swell will take us two days more to clean up.

Viking.—(Wednesday p.m.)—10 miles N.N.E. St. Paul's, in whaling ice, seals scarce. Men have panned 1000 to-day, picking up pans. All well.

Neptune.—(Wednesday p.m.)—30 miles N.E. Cape Bonavista, making fair progress. Ice very heavy, in large sheets. Took 100 to-day.

Thetis.—(Wednesday p.m.)—Killed 11,000 seals to-day. Estimated 11,000 on board. Position 50 miles East of Cape Bonavista.

NOT REPORTED.

The Seal, Diana and Sagona did not report. A message from the latter ship is expected by the Reid Newfoundland Company to-day.

TO POSTAL TELEGRAPHS.

Via Pogo.—All ships report all crews on board and all well.

FROM PORT AUX BASQUES.

The Reid Newfoundland Company received the following from their wireless operator at Port aux Basques:—"Viking killed 1,500 to-day. Took on board 3,000. Now stowed about 8,000 and between 8,000 and 9,000 on pans. Going around picking up pans."

Wesley Debating Club

ANNUAL DINNER HELD. The annual dinner of the Wesley Debating Club was held last night in the Green Lantern. Over 70 members and guests were present. Mr. A. E. Pelley, President of the Club, occupied the chair. All the speeches were exceptionally good and gave ample proof of the good effect which the Club is producing. During the evening songs were rendered by Messrs. F. Neville and B. R. Taylor. Mr. Max Cotton presided at the piano. The Toast List was as follows:—

HIS DIARY.

March 22nd. In the afternoon, I to the House. Hon. W. R. Warren and Sir R. Squires did make a defence of the Cabal, which I did think a very poor one. My wife will talk of nothing but Woman Suffrage, which I laugh at, and tell her how it is a very silly tad. She did fly into a rage at this, and did throw a vase at me, which, I think, the first time in three years, that she did do such a thing. So to the Wesley Debating Club dinner and did make a speech, which I could do now as well as any man were I able to make a trial of it at home. Very mild to-day and much rain.

Church Charities Concert

A fairly large audience attended the concert in aid of Church Charities held in the Lecture Hall of Gower Street Church last evening. The artists who so generously contributed of their talents were in good form, and merited the applause that greeted their efforts. The programme included instrumental solos by Mr. Gordon Christian, A.T.C. M., and Miss Helen Earle, and vocal selections by Mrs. Christian, Mrs. Garland, Miss Herder, Miss Hutchings, Miss Maund, Miss Barnes, and Messrs. Stanfield, Glass, Steele, Tucker and Courtney; and readings by Mr. Holmes and Miss Barnes. Mr. Christian and Miss Tait were the accompanists. During the evening candy and ice cream were sold and the amount received added considerably to the funds.

Business Men Charged.

NON-PAYMENT OF INCOME TAX. Several business men appeared before the Magistrate this morning on summonses issued by the Department of Justice on the request of Assessor O'Reilly. All were charged with failure to pay income tax. Those who appeared in court, promised to pay up. Some men against whom summonses were issued, were ill and the cases against them were postponed until March 30th. One, who failed to appear will be arrested.

Advertising Lecture.

Ladies of the Women's Suffrage Committee spent the morning on Water Street, distributing leaflets and venturing to-night's lecture, and attempting to inspire others with their own enthusiasm. It is expected that they will be a large attendance at the College Hall to hear Mrs. Trounson speak, as she is a woman of wide knowledge and experience of social questions.

Repairing Westland.

Major Cotton did not fly to Charles' Brook on Tuesday to bring assistance to Capt. Syd Bennett and the Westland plane, as the weather was stormy. Instead, he sent a slide with two mechanics and the necessary outfit for effecting repairs. No message has since been received but it is presumed that repairs to the Westland have now been effected.

McMurdo's Store News.

THURSDAY, March 23. Now that Spring appears to be coming at last the uses of a good shampoo liquid needs only to be mentioned to bring it to the notice of people who may be interested. It is therefore with pleasure that we recommend our Emulsified Coconut Oil Shampoo, now very well known, but not yet employed by every possible user. Of course, some people prefer a powder or soap; these are fully entitled to their opinion. But every season the number of users of Liquid Shampoo preparations increases, and we strongly suggest a trial of our Emulsified Coconut Oil. Price 40 cents a bottle.

Post Office Robbery.

Heavy sentences were passed yesterday on the men implicated in the recent robbery at the General Post Office. The man who stole the goods, which consisted of mail bags, carrying letters, was sentenced to 18 months. The other accused who was charged with receiving the stolen goods pleaded that he had bought them out of pity for the man who took them, not knowing they were stolen. He was given six months. The value of the stolen goods was over $100.

Fire Destroys Stable.

AFTER MIDNIGHT BLAZE BRINGS OUT FIREMEN.

An alarm from Box 38 brought the Central and West End Fire Companies to Casey Street shortly after 1 o'clock this morning. The fire was discovered in the upper storey of a stable owned by Mr. J. Tobin. Two horses, which were kept in the building, were removed, and after a short while the blaze was subdued. A motor car which was stored in one end of the stable was badly damaged and the hood totally consumed. The all-clear signal was rung in about a half hour after the alarm. Much difficulty was experienced by the firemen in reaching the fire especially by way of Brazil's Square, where the motor truck stalled, and prevented the horse-drawn apparatus, which followed from getting through. To the last of those engaged in clearing the street the blame for this can be laid.

McGill Club Banquet.

NEWFOUNDLANDERS

IN MONTREAL.
The annual banquet of the Newfoundland Club, McGill University took place on March 9th at the union. Great preparations were made to assure the success of the function, and amongst the invited guests were Prof. Stephen Leacock, Lt.-Col. E. M. Regeant, Dr. W. H. Hatcher, Dr. C. J. Crowdy, Dr. J. Thompson, and Mr. Chas. Whitten. The following report slipped from the "McGill Daily" was sent us by Mr. L. J. Jackman president of the Club for 1921-22:—
"The Newfoundland Club held its annual Dinner last evening in the Union, attended by a large enthusiastic audience. Dr. Hatcher proposed the toast to McGill, and was followed by Prof. Stephen Leacock with his usual good wit and humour interspersed with more serious thoughts. The toast to Newfoundland was proposed by Dr. Crowdy, whose pleasant reminiscences of earlier days proved most enjoyable to his audience. Mr. Whitten President of the Newfoundland Society of Montreal replied to the toast to Newfoundland, and spoke of her war record. The toast to the Graduates was proposed by Cashin, Med. '23, and replied to by H. H. LeMessieur, Arts '22; C. F. Davis, Arts '22 and C. B. Fox, Med. '22. The evening finished with a hearty McGill yell. This dinner brings to a close the third year of the Club's existence at McGill, and the Executive are to be congratulated on the success of the past year."

Woman Suffrage Meeting.

A very successful drawing-room meeting was held yesterday afternoon at Mrs. H. McNeill's, 41 Queen's Road, where a large gathering attended to meet Mrs. K. E. Tronson, of London, England. Mrs. Tronson, Secretary for the International Woman Suffrage Alliance, a woman of wide experience and high attainments, lectured in Paris and Hanover, as well as London, is an excellent lecturer. She has filled positions of great responsibility and importance, having been lecturer in the London County Council Schools on Economics and having contributed largely to the London and Provincial Press. At the beginning of the war Mrs. Tronson filled an important position in the Shell Factory, Waltham Abbey, and was afterwards promoted to the office of Chief Superintendent of Aeronomy Department Outstations Ministry of Munitions of Great Britain and Ireland, in charge of thousands of shells. Mrs. Tronson is gifted with a most address and is a most interesting and sympathetic personality. Her husband, who was a captain in the R.F.C., "Hope," but lost his life when that ship was blown up. St. John's is fortunate in having the opportunity of hearing so talented and experienced a lecturer, and no one should miss hearing her speak on Woman Suffrage to-night in the Methodist College Hall.

Obituary.

MISS ESTHER ANNIE HALLERAN.
At noon, yesterday, at her late residence, Monkstown Road, there passed the Great Beyond Miss Esther Annie Halleran, at the ripe old age of 80 years. Miss Halleran was a native of St. Mary's, but resided with her uncle and aunt, the former being the late Captain Terence Halleran, who was one of the pioneer seafaring captains of Newfoundland. The deceased lady was noted for her great charity, kindness and generosity, and was one of the old school now so rapidly dying out. In her early days her home was one of the most hospitable in Newfoundland and she may well offer a silent prayer for this estimable lady. The funeral will take place to-morrow (Friday) at 11 o'clock from her late residence corner Catherine Street and Monkstown Road.

Rotary Club.

PRIME MINISTER'S ADDRESS ON EDUCATION.

Sir Richard Squires addressed the St. John's Rotary Club on Tuesday last, 21st inst., on Education, the substance of his eloquent address being herein contained.

Sir Richard congratulated the town on the organization of the Club, as the experience in connection with Rotary Clubs elsewhere was that their existence tended to the development of a better public spirit, and a more hearty co-operation in connection with business matters. He said he appreciated very much the courtesy of Major Gardner, the chairman for the day, in giving him an opportunity to be present at the Club's weekly luncheon, and to participate for a few minutes in the general cheer and enthusiasm which prevailed.

AN APPROPRIATE TOPIC.

The topic of education had been suggested to him by the Chairman, as one upon which the Club would like to hear a few casual remarks. The topic was a most appropriate one for the Rotary Club, because the Club itself was an educative organization. Its motto was a motto of service, not merely service for self, but public service. He had been struck with one of the mottoes of the Club which he had seen posted on a huge placard in large letters in Times Square, New York city. The same motto he also saw likewise prominently posted in the cities of Boston and Montreal. It read as follows: "This is our country, yours and mine. We fought for it. Now let us work for it." That was primarily an educative motto. It was a call to service. If there was one call more than another that the whole world needed at the present moment, it was the call to work. Work was infinitely harder than fighting, though fighting was very much more dangerous, both mentally and physically. The educational problem of Newfoundland was one of extreme gravity, and like other major problems, received comparatively little public discussion and prominence as compared with trifling problems. It was disheartening to a public man to see the time and effort and publicity which were continually given the trivial and incidental things, and the paucity of thought and effort in matters of great magnitude. The question as to whether a person should or should not attend a Sacred Concert on a Sunday evening is a matter upon which important and influential sections of the public occupy a very large amount of time, both their own time and that of others. If the same amount of enthusiastic energy were devoted to the consideration of such major problems as education, public health, and that class of public service which induces every labourer, mechanic, professional and public man to fill every fleeting minute with sixty seconds' worth of distance run, the burden of the grave and pressing problems of Newfoundland would be lessened and some real advancement would be made in the development of the desire of us all, and that is, to make Newfoundland a place worthy of our own lives and worthy of the lives of our children.

A DIFFICULT PROBLEM.

Our educational problem was one of extreme difficulty, due, first to the lack of funds, and second, to the isolation of our people. The Premier read a comparative statement showing the per capita appropriation of money for education in Newfoundland and that of the various provinces of Canada. He pointed out that the entire Island of Newfoundland, from the standpoint of population, amounted to only a third-rate city, but from the standpoint of providing schools it meant that there had to be about 11 hundred schools scattered around the coast line of six thousand miles. It was absolutely impossible to expect efficiency in the education of the people under such physical conditions. Necessary education in Newfoundland did not mean that which we call higher education. The number of students from Junior Associate up represented probably one hundred and fifty to two hundred only out of a total of fifty-five thousand children now going to school. Education did not mean mere ability to read and write; it meant the development of the mind. There were many people in the Island of Newfoundland, so-called illiterate, men who could not read or write their own names, who had a more developed mind and sounder judgment and were a greater asset to the country than a number of those who had who would be called an advanced education. He referred to the fact that the boy and girl sent to an isolated section of the country as school teachers at an absurdly low salary very often found it impossible to raise either the educational or social standard of the community in which they went. The duties of the teacher were far more than the mere teaching of reading, writing and arithmetic; they included the setting of a standard for the children, which would be helpful to them generally in the formative period of the development of their character.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

SEISMIC SHOCKS.
ST. LOUIS, MO., March 23.
A severe earthquake shock has visited Missouri and Illinois.

MAINTAINING THE RECORD.
BELFAST, March 23.
One man was shot on New Lodge Road, making twenty-one dead, forty-seven wounded since March 11.

A BARGAIN.
NEW YORK, March 23.
The steamship Javary, libelled by prohibition officers for violation of the Volstead Act, was sold at public auction yesterday for $15,000 to the Garland Steamship Company. The ship was built at a cost of $300,000.

BOTTOMLEY IN THE TOILS.
LONDON, March 23.
Horatio Bottomley, member of Parliament, and former publisher of John Bull, now on trial, charged with having misappropriated 5,000 pounds sterling, belonging to the Victory Bond Club, had two additional charges preferred against him yesterday. One relates to the purchase of the former German submarine Deutschland, for which Bottomley is alleged to have taken 15,461 pounds from an estate of which he was trustee. The other allegation is that he fraudulently converted to his own use, 100,000 pounds with which to purchase bonds for the Victory Bond Club.

A HUGE ARMY.
ST. LOUIS, March 23.
More than 730,000 railway employees have already entered the alliance of railway and mine workers.

GENERAL STRIKE IN DENMARK.
COPENHAGEN, March 23.
Thirty Danish Trade Unions have voted to declare a general strike on April 1, in relation to the general lockout of February 15, affecting nearly all industries and 150,000 employees. The situation grows steadily worse, with all public works closed, and soldiers have been ordered to protect voluntary workers.

THAT IS THE REASON.
VANCOUVER, B.C., March 23.
Notification has been received from Washington that United States Government will permit entry into United States of General G. Semenov, Siberian Cosack leader, and his wife. Semenov proposes to negotiate a loan for the Siberian Regime.

FROM BAD TO WORSE.
LONDON, March 23.
The situation on the border, between Ulster and Southern Ireland, is going from bad to worse, and is such that some trifling incident might draw the rival forces into a conflict, which would shatter all prospects of peace in Ireland, says the Dublin correspondent of the Times. "The tragic irony of the situation," he added, "consists in the fact that the vast majority of Irishmen of all parties deplore the situation, but seem unable to avert it. Each side takes daily some measure of defence which they regard as legitimate, but which produces prompt retaliation from the other side, with the result that political passions are intensified, and pleadings of common sense fall to naught."

AFTER THE SHIPWORM.
NEW YORK, March 23.
The campaign to exterminate the shipworm now said to be threatening the Eastern Seaboard, after boring its way through millions of dollars worth of marine property in San Francisco

CONTRARY TO ORDERS.

DUBLIN, March 23.
The Irish Republican Army Convention is held Sunday, as announced yesterday, it will be "contrary to orders of General Headquarters Staff," declared Richard Mulcahey, Minister of Defence in Dail Cabinet, when questioned last night. He said nothing, however, of any intention of trying to prevent this meeting, which was recently forbidden by Arthur Griffiths.

VATICAN REPRESENTED.
LONDON, March 23.
The Rome correspondent of the Daily Herald understands that the Russian Government has granted a request from the Pope that the Vatican be represented on the internal commission for relief in Russia, headed by Dr. Fridtjof Nansen. Seven Papal delegates are going to Russia shortly, he adds, and the Pope may also send a personal mission to Volgarion.

VENICE INUNDED.
LONDON, March 23.
A Central news despatch from Venice says a tidal wave, last night, inundated the city, water rising to a depth of more than three feet in some of the public squares.

PEACE WEEK DESIGNATED.
CHICAGO, March 23.
The City Council, to-day, designated the week from April 2 to 8 as a Canadian Week, to celebrate the one hundred and seventh anniversary of peace and uninterrupted social and business intercourse.

BRITISH SUB GOES TO BOTTOM.
LONDON, March 23.
The British submarine H-42 has been lost with all hands in the Mediterranean, says an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Gibraltar to-day. The sub collided with a destroyer during maneuvers. The ordinary complement of the submarine was twenty two men. She was built under the war emergency programme of 1918-19, and displaced upwards of 500 tons.

STEAMER SINKING.
MARSEILLES, March 23.
The United States freight steamship West Caruth is reported sinking, this morning, seventeen miles east of Cherbourg, said a wireless asking for help.

SEAL DID NOT LOCATE PATCH—ONE SCHOONER CLEARS.
Messrs. Beane Johnston & Co. received a message this morning from Capt. Jacob Kean of S.S. Seal stating that following the direction given by Major Cotton he has steamed 21 miles to the S.E., where he came up with some hood seals. As these would be on the outside of the whitecoats it was useless to proceed further, so the ship steamed inwards. Major Cotton reported spotting the patch on the 16th inst., and it could scarcely be expected that the seals would be still in the same position.

Foreign Exchange.
(As Published by Hawes & Co.)
The Portuguese escudo is now worth 434, and the Greek drachma has suffered a decline, 106 now being required for the pound sterling. The low value of the drachma may be judged when this rate is compared with the par value of 25 to the pound. The Italian lira and the Spanish peseta have not fluctuated recently.

MINARD'S LINIMENT FOR GARGET IN COWS.

Death of James Goldie.

LONG IDENTIFIED WITH NEWFOUNDLAND.
Messrs. Rothwell and Bowring, Ltd., had a wire from Lincoln Goldie, Esq., of Guelph, yesterday, announcing the death of Mr. James Goldie, formerly the senior member of the well-known flour milling firm of James Goldie, Co. Ltd., Guelph, who have been shipping flour to the Newfoundland trade for some forty years. Mr. Jas. Goldie was the son of the firm's founder and one of the pioneers of Guelph City. Of late years he had lived with his brother Roswell Goldie, and niece, Miss Frances Goldie at Guelph, after he and his brothers had sold out all their interest and good will in the old mill, to a new corporation organized by the Morrow interests. The late Mr. James Goldie always took a keen interest in any Newfoundlanders visiting Guelph, and after the big fire of 1892 in St. John's his mill contributed a generous gift of flour to the fire sufferers. Lincoln Goldie, Esq., formerly of the Canadian Wheat Board and a member of the Royal Commission appointed recently to investigate the Wheat trade of Canada, is a brother. The flour trade and commercial circles of Canada have altogether too few of this high type of business men as was personated by the late James Goldie and whose passing is universally regretted.

Shipping Notes.
S.S. Rosalind reported at noon yesterday giving her position as 5 miles west of Cape Race. The ship is encountering heavy slob ice and is obliged to steam slowly.

S.S. Sable I. arrived in port at 9.20 a.m. The ship sails at 9 a.m. to-morrow for Halifax.

S.S. Maple Dawn has put into Bay Bulls on account of ice conditions.

S.S. Sisto has not reported since leaving port.

Schr. Over the Top left Barbados to-day for here with a cargo of molasses to Bishop & Sons.

Schr. Carl S. has arrived at Gaultois from Rose Blanche fishing grounds with 450 quintals codfish.

Schr. Laverna has arrived at Grand Bank from Boston with a cargo of coal and small merchandise.

S.S. Wynocote, which was to leave Glasgow for this port enroute to Boston, will not come here, it is learned, but will go direct to Boston.

Sable I. Arrives.
S.S. Sable I., which arrived in port this morning, reports meeting dense fog and heavy ice on the passage from Halifax. The ship on several occasions was obliged to stop for hours owing to ice conditions. Fog made navigation difficult and land was not sighted until the narrows was reached. The ship brought the following passengers:—Mrs. W. J. Naufrs, Mr. W. A. Munn, Jerome Kelly, W. H. Taylor, N. Snow, Geo. Nicholas, J. C. Andrews.

Norwegian Fisheries Depressed.

The Fisheries have had an extraordinarily difficult year. Costly ships and motor boats were acquired during the war, as well as expensive apparatus. And as the selling conditions have been poor for many years, it is understandable that their position is precarious. During the war the State guaranteed the sales, and the losses were transferred from the fishermen to the country. Now the difficulties have descended over the fishermen without their having the means to ward them off. The most regrettable thing is that, just when markets were needed more than at any other time, the prohibition policy of the Government has forced us into a trade war with our best fish markets, Spain and Portugal, and for this season big lots of stock-fish are lying unsold. An arrangement has, however, presumably been arrived at with Spain, and the position may thereby be eased a little, but not a great deal, as the agreement only lasts until April 1st, 1922, and, besides, Spain has the right to put on 25 per cent. to its minimum duty tariffs.

What the final result of this commercial war will be is not known yet, but one thing is certain, and that is that the Norwegian fisheries are sustaining heavy losses as long as it lasts, as it is a difficult matter, not to say impossible, to find other markets for our stock-fish.

The herring catch has for the most part been sold to Central Europe and Russia, but the prices obtained are so miserable that they do not cover the cost of production. The prospects for the coming winter's fish is, as will be understood, anything but good. The canning industry (fish and herring) has, on the contrary had good business lately. The old stocks have been emptied and there is a steady demand at acceptable prices.—Scandinavian Shipping Gazette.

Electrical Lectures.

A series of very interesting Electrical Lectures has been arranged under the auspices of the new Electrical Engineering College. These lectures will be given by the technical specialists of this city, and will cover all phases of Electrical Engineering, from electric lighting and power distribution, up to long distance telephony. The second lecture, which is scheduled to take place to-morrow night at the Grenfell Hall will be on "Railway Electrification." It will be illustrated by means of a moving picture film depicting the progress made in electrifying a large number of the railways in the United States. Admission will be free, and it is hoped that a large number of our young men will be present as this lecture promises to prove not only exceedingly interesting, but also of great instructional value.

Supreme Court.

(Before Chief Justice Horwood.)
In the matter of the petition of the Newfoundland Wholesale Dry Goods Co., praying that David Cohen of Bonne Bay is insolvent, and that he may so be declared. Mr. Curtis for insolvent moves that the matter be adjourned until May 15th. Gibbs, K.C., for the petitioner consents. It is ordered accordingly.

Quaint Origins of Everyday Phrases.

To eat humble pie is a common enough phrase. Everybody knows its meaning. But few people know how we got it. It should be really "umble pie." The "umbles" are the heart, liver and other entrails of a stag, which, at hunting banquets, were made into pies for the hunt servants. The familiar gilet pie is a small edition of an umble pie.

To give an employee the sack means of course, to dismiss him. Formerly many classes of workmen kept their tools in a sack, which the employer minded. When the latter handed it back empty to his own use it was intended as a hint for him to pack up and begone.

Because Admiral Sir John Wallop thoroughly defeated the French fleet in a great battle fought more than five hundred years ago, we still speak of "walloping" a person.

We call a set of spirit decanters, visible but locked up in a case, a tantalus. The original Tantalus was a mythical king of Lydia, who was condemned to perpetual thirst while almost within reach of water. To tantalize, meaning to tease or torment, has a like derivation.

The game we know as tennis was formerly called bandy. Hence the phrase to bandy words, or blows.

It is usual for big firms nowadays, when paying their employees, to place each person's weekly wage in an envelope. Before envelopes were invented the money was placed in a screwed-up piece of paper. Hence the slang term "screw" for wages or salary.

The original Drury Lane Theatre was built on the site of a cockpit. Which is why we call the back portion of the ground-floor of a theatre the pit. A penny gaff, meaning a low-class place of entertainment, is a relic of the old cock-fighting days. The gaff was the iron hook with which the cocks were goaded on to attack one another.

The saying "not worth a rush" dates back to the days before carpets were invented, and the floors were strewn with rushes. When an honourable guest was expected, fresh green ones were cut and spread—but people of little consequence had to be content with rushes that had been used, while still humbler folk got none at all.

Mad as a hatter should properly be mad as an ass. "Mad" formerly represented the idea of reasonlessness. The pig was therefore originally the equivalent of "reasonless as an ass"; the latter word being formerly spelt and written "mias."

Group Marketing of Farm Products.

CALIFORNIA EXPERT DETAILS SUCCESS OF CO-OPERATIVE SYSTEM IN U.S.

(Toronto Mail.)

Describing the success of the co-operative marketing in California, A. Sapiro, of San Francisco, one of the founders of the system, declared that thousands of farmers and cotton growers, who less than ten years ago were practically penniless and lived in a condition of poverty, are to-day the most prosperous group of farmer in the United States. The movement of California, which had its origin in the formation of co-operative organizations, composed chiefly of farmers, he said, had extended to fruit and cotton growers and had been responsible for the creation of better profits for the producers who readily recognized that the principles of the system properly applied served to minimize the dumping of vast quantities of produce which from a financial viewpoint proved disastrous to the farmer and beneficial to the speculator who in turn "squeezed handsome profits out of the retailer and the consumer." Mr. Sapiro argued that it was in the interest of the consumer to get behind the farmers who are courageous enough to adopt the principles of co-operative marketing, adding: "The man in the city must help the farmer to become prosperous. The farmer must do his level best to bring himself up to the same plane of efficiency and organization such as characterized the promotion of the large and influential corporations of the world."

Mr. Sapiro described the success attending co-operative marketing in many of the leading European countries, many of which are extending their markets to this side of the Atlantic, to the detriment of the farmers of Canada and the United States. Mr. Sapiro said that before the cotton growers of South Carolina adopted the principles of co-operative marketing the average net income of a grower was less than $300 a year. He explained that for twelve years the farmers had experimented with various systems of co-operating in marketing their products, finally realizing after numerous hard bumps that co-operative marketing by commodity and not by locality was the proper method to pursue. Under the system of local organizations the danger of the producers was to glut the market which offered the best prices. The system proved disastrous. Eventually these organizations merged into one big federation which served as a clearing house. He declared that the farmer who fails to realize that the marketing of his products is a group problem will be a failure all his life.

Danger of Glutting Market.
"The speculator is not always to blame," Mr. Sapiro emphasized. "He merely stands aside while the producer overloads the market unconsciously, thinking it to his advantage to make big shipments which ordinarily under sane business principles as applied by a large corporation would be distributed over a period of time. The farmer is the big loser, which causes him to wonder why. The answer is simple—he lacks the knowledge of how to market his products systematically and to his advantage financially. The heavier the market is glutted with any particular commodity the more individual mill-hennies he creates in the cities. The latter take advantage of the cold storage plants, and when the proper time comes the products are marketed at big profits."

Mr. Sapiro explained that the California farmers and fruit growers had made rapid strides in the matter of raising the grade of their products as a unit of successful merchandising. While taking care of the needs of the markets in Canada and the United States they had also reached out for new markets in European centres, with which they traded as a group and not as individuals. Their success was due mainly to abandoning the old system of quoting prices at the point of production. They had discovered that in marketing their products to the best advantage they benefited largely by consideration of supply at the point of consumption. The speaker detailed the wonderful achievements of the egg producers' association in this connection and showed that eggs shipped

Music's Magic Medicine.

By A DOCTOR.

Roughly speaking, two-thirds of the complaints that human life is heir to in the twentieth century are due to the excessive strain that modern business imposes upon the nervous system.

It is common enough to hear folk say that they are "run down," or feel like a "ret rag," and that they need a tonic. True enough, they need a tonic, but when they use that word their minds usually conjure up visions of the bottles of physic in my dispensary, which, quite frankly, is merely wasted upon them.

When folk get that "run down" feeling it is merely the result of the strain to which their whole nervous system has been exposed, and so long as the world goes along at its present headlong pace there will be no rest for those whose nerves are not made of the proverbial cast iron.

Drugs are of little use in assisting the nerves to regain their necessary vigor. In most cases they merely act as a temporary stimulant which is wholly unnatural to the mind—the organ that controls the entire nervous system.

When the Mind Works Overtime.

What is needed is something which will so act upon the mind that its action will be something in the nature of a soothing syrup, something which will help the mind to forget that it has been working overtime.

And there is nothing better for this than music.

In music we have one of the finest tonics in the world, and, skillfully applied, it has been known to work wonders with those suffering from nervous disorders.

Even the performances given by amateur societies have been known to benefit jaded nerves, but the best results are obtained from high-class instrumental music played by those who have a wide knowledge of tone values.

If you are musically inclined, don't imagine that because you feel "fagged out" after a day's work that an hour or two at the piano is going to be too much "for" you.

As often as not you will find that you will be materially benefited, not so much, perhaps, because you have been playing particularly restful music, but because the mind has been brought into direct contact with a diversion.

So if you are feeling depressed and your nerves jaded, remember that one of the surest ways of making yourself fit again is to go and hear some good music. There is plenty of it about today, and the price of admission is surely worth a week of sleepless nights.

What Really Did Happen at Scapa Flow.

HERE IS REVEALED FOR THE FIRST TIME HOW THE MOST SENSATIONAL GERMAN COUP OF THE WAR WAS WORKED. (By ADMIRAL VON REUTER, Chief of the German Fleet at Scapa Flow.—In Cassell's Magazine.)

ADMIRAL VON REUTER'S ANGER.

The order already issued was amplified and altered to suit the state of mind of the crews, and this new edition was dispatched the same afternoon by British packet to the ships and torpedo boats.

It took us till the afternoon to edit and make copies of this new order, so that I did not receive the news published by the British Press until towards evening. The Times, of June 16, contained the following announcement:

Official Summary.—"Under the provision of a financial arrangement, Germany is prepared to surrender not only the surface warships demanded, but all ships of the line."

According to this the German Government, with the intention of completing the sale, had offered to surrender not only all the surface ships demanded, but all ships of the line, consequently those of the interned fleet as well. For the second time, therefore, within a brief period, the German fleet had been humiliated by being offered for sale.

I was most deeply hurt by the fact that for all these last months we had been upheld by the belief that the government would insist upon the return of the ships. Instead of that it had offered even more ships than the Entente demanded!

I was not going to sell my hands with this dirty business, and assumed that my officers would share my views—the government might send out its own representatives, men whose sense of honour would perhaps be less keen. I wrote out a wireless telegram to the German Government saying that we officers and higher officials objected to the sale of the fleet, that we would not participate in it, and demanded to be recalled and sent home before the sale was completed.

According to English regulations this wireless message could only be dispatched the next day, Saturday, June 21, between 8 a.m. and 9 a.m. by the first British packet, to be submitted to the British Admiral. At the moment when my message was delivered, the admiral and his fleet had weighed anchor and were going out of harbour. I had asked him to dispatch it with all possible speed. I do not think that it was conveyed to the German Government; the later events of this day probably prevented this.

The number of the Times quoted above contained on page 11 further news that, after the answer to the German counter-proposals had been dispatched, the German Government had been granted a period of five days in which to sign the Peace Treaty or refuse it. In this period the three days' notice required for terminating the armistice were included. As, according to the British Press, this answer had been sent on June 16, I had to count upon the possibility that the armistice would have come to an end on Saturday without any special notice being given. I guessed the time would be Saturday noon, as it is natural to let an armistice lapse at midday, so as to have several hours of daylight for any advance of troops that might be contemplated.

THE SINKING OF THE FLEET.

The summer solstice—sunshine and calm—heralded a gloriously warm and windless summer's day.

Towards 10 a.m. Captain Oidekop announced that the British Admiral had left the harbour, putting out to sea with battleships and destroyers; further, that according to the English Press, the Entente had refused to buy the German ships and demanded their unconditional surrender; lastly, that the German mail torpedo boat might be expected in Scapa Flow the following afternoon. I gave the order to hoist the prearranged signal: "Sink ships at once!"

Owing to the reduced number of the crews, communication by signal was arranged to take place only during certain hours of the day. The connection between the ships being broken at this particular moment, it had to be reestablished; the result was that some time elapsed before the signal was circulated throughout the fleet, and confirmation received from the ships and the officers commanding torpedo boats. Confirmation of the order had been received from all by about 11.30 a.m.

"ABANDON SHIP!"

In the meantime I kept the crew of my flagship, the Emden, in ignorance of the order to sink the ships. As usual, two packets were lying alongside, and in addition a tank ship had begun to pump her supply of water into the Emden's tanks. It would have been impossible to hide anything from the crews of these vessels, for I anticipated great excitement among the Emden's crew, once the order was made known. The former would have given the alarm, recalled the British Admiral, and interfered with the sinking of the other ships.

Shortly after twelve noon the Friedrich der Grosse began to show an ever increasing list, and at the same time she commenced to settle; her boats were already launched and lay astern. How clearly and vigorously the sound of her ship's bell reaches us across the water, giving the signal: "Abandon ship."

We saw the crew get into the boats and shove off. The Friedrich der Grosse heeled over farther; streams of water pour through the open side windows into the interior—a few minutes more and she capsizes and sinks to the bottom. The air rising through her funnels forms two great whirlpools—then all is still. Only bits of wreckage float on the deserted spot. It is sixteen minutes past twelve.

The sound of her bell seems to have suddenly awakened all the other ships to life—as if they had only been waiting for this signal. On all sides greater activity is displayed. Here the boats are being launched, there the crew are dragging their heavy bags to the ship's side, elsewhere they man the boats and put off from the ships with a parting salute of three cheers. A British guard boat, which had been lying for some time in the neighbourhood of the Friedrich der Grosse and had probably been watching with a good deal of interest and excitement the extraordinarily heavy list of that vessel, was started by the bell signal and the subsequent manning of the boats. When all of a sudden the great ship sank close by her, before her very eyes, she was so taken aback that, wildly and unthinkingly, she opened fire on the unarmed and defenceless occupants of the boats, although they flew the white flag. At the same time she set her steam whistle going, and its terrified and plaintive tones rudely roused the crews of the other guard boats from the somnolent condition into which they had slipped naturally enough, seeing that it was a warm summer morning and the admiral was away.

As is usually the case with untutored minds when terrific calm is suddenly succeeded by intense excitement, they lost their heads and blindly attacked everything that seemed to them to differ from the ordinary state of affairs. A panic had broken out among them, and to this the British destroyers which had not left the harbor also fell victim. It was lucky that, as ship after ship was sunk—the König Albert, Moltke and Brummer quickly followed the Friedrich der Grosse, and others were on the point of going down—the number of boats filled with survivors assumed such proportions that in their confusion the British ships did not know which boat to fire on first. In rapid succession they attacked one boat after another; thanks to this continual change of aim their fire wrought less destruction than might otherwise have been the case.

GERMAN FLEET'S LAST VOYAGE.

The sinking of the Friedrich der Grosse and the Brummer, which lay just behind the Emden, threw the packet boats alongside the latter into a state of great excitement. The crew of the Emden were below deck at dinner, and consequently knew nothing of what was happening in the harbor.

Now, however, the time had come to give the order to sink the Emden too. Under the direction of the captain the valves and broadside tubes below the water-line were opened; the water poured in. One of the British packet boats wanted to put off, probably for fear of being sucked down when the Emden sunk. But I detained it until the crew of the Emden had all been safely taken aboard.

I decided to go to the British Admiral in command ashore and get him to put a stop to the firing. As I was ignorant of the whereabouts of the admiral's official residence and also of the landing-stage, I embarked with my staff on the other British packet boat, which had been placed at my disposal for paying visits to my ships. We were landed in a bay with rocky shores.

From far away we had described a motor-car rusing to meet us at full speed. In it was seated a young gentleman in tennis flannels. He was pointed out to me as the officer in command ashore. He seemed to me to be a bit young for the job. I begged him to put a stop to the firing at once. He was tremendously excited, hardly listened to me, and did not, I am sure, understand a single word I said. He rushed away, returned almost immediately with a camera, flung himself into a fast boat that lay ready, and sped out of the bay. I assumed that he would stop the firing, but in this I was mistaken.

The British drifter was to take us back to the Emden. As we left the bay—the tide was still falling—we ran aground on a sandbank. All efforts to refloat the heavy, clumsily-built craft were unavailing, even though I added my personal exertions to those of the rest. The hills of the bay hid our ships, only my admiral's flag on the Emden gleamed in solitary glory above a group of hills. Would it never disappear? We may have spent an hour on this sandbank, out of sight of all that was happening in the outer world; at last, as the tide rose, we got afloat again, and could leave the bay.

What a sight! Before us the Grosser Kursturm towered. With a crash both her cables broke, the ship fell heavily to port and capsized. The red paint on her bottom shone forth far over the blue sea.

Many positions had already been "abandoned" for the voyage down into the depths.

British destroyers, the foam flying from their bows, entered the bay. One of them lay alongside the Emden and tried to break her cables and tow her into shallow water. The Emden sank but little deeper at first. I relinquished the idea of rejoining the Emden, and gave the order to the drifter to steer for the Bayern; her crew were floating about in the neighbourhood of the vessel, sitting or lying on life-buoys. We took them on board. Immediately after the Bayern listed heavily; here, too, the water pours into the ship through the wide-open side windows. In a few minutes the bulwarks are under water. The huge ship capsizes and goes to the bottom flying the German flag. Her crew raise three cheers in honour of her last voyage.

Now on the light breeze there comes the sound of firing from the British destroyers, trying to stop the work of destruction on our torpedo boats. A fierce and bitter fight was fought then. The Sixth Flotilla had a particularly hard time. Owing to untoward circumstances it had not received the signal to sink the ships until late; not until the British, who had lost their heads at first, had recovered their calm. On receipt of the signal to sink the ships, every torpedo boat had run up a new flag. The keys of the flooding cocks, the slide valves of the condensers were flung overboard. The water rushes in gurgling and hissing, soon the floor-plates everywhere are under water. The boats list! The open side windows dip down to meet the surface of the water. Greedily the water rushes in! Here a boat rears and then sinks; there another as it capsizes, crashes into a neighbour; a third and fourth go down on even keels. In the open bay of Scapa Flow the ships capsize and sink on all sides. Of fifty boats forty-six were sunk. A tremendous achievement! I wanted to go to the torpedo boats when the British battleships hove in sight. At full speed, with decks cleared for action, they rush towards us, their 38 cm. guns trained upon the remnants of my fleet.

Now the most urgent thing to do is to go to the British Admiral and get him to stop the firing. . . . It grows less and gradually dies away. In the background the large cruisers are fighting their last battle. The Seydlitz capsizes; on the Derflinger and the Von der Tann the bulwarks or forecastle are already under water; it cannot be long before their suffering is at an end.

Only the Hindenburg still lies square upon the water, but she has begun to settle. I remember that her captain wanted to sink her on an even keel, so as to be quite certain of saving his men.

Of the battle ships only the Baden and the Markgraf are above water, the former has a list, the latter is apparently intact. The Emden is still afloat, so is the Nurnberg. The Frankfurt seems on the verge of sinking. Suddenly the Bremen capsizes as she is being towed by British destroyers. Her brave commanding officer, Lieutenant Schacke, has after all been successful in sinking her, although she had been manned by a British crew. On my way to the British Admiral's flagship, boats with the survivors were still being taken in tow.

I was deeply moved and full of gratitude to my courageous officers and brave crews, who had succeeded so brilliantly in carrying out my orders. All these magnificent ships and torpedo boats, once the pride of the German people, were done for—sunk! How much intelligence, how much technical skill and experience had gone to the making of these great ships! A development of unsurpassed magnitude had come to an end; it had found a watery grave.

Alongside the British flagship, which had just anchored, there was a regular mix up; patrol boats, drifters, guard boats, ships' boats—they all crowded alongside, everyone of them agog to report that the German fleet had gone to its grave. At last my drifter succeeded in forcing a passage, and coming alongside; a gangway ladder was let down for me. I went aboard the Revenge and was received by the British Vice-Admiral Sir Sydney R. Freemantle.

Concluded.

Pictures 25,000 Years Old.

Prehistoric Men Were Quite Clever Artists.
The remains of the earliest men who lived upon this earth are extraordinarily few by the side of the remains of the animals that lived at the same time, and whose flesh the men ate.

For a while this puzzled investigators, but now we know why it is so. The lower animals, as the result of prolonged drought, write M. and C. H. B. Quenard in their book "Every-day Life in the Old Stone Age," used to dash into the muddy bed of a river or lake, and being too exhausted to drag themselves out, would sink in the water, settle in the mud, and become beautiful skeletonized fossils.

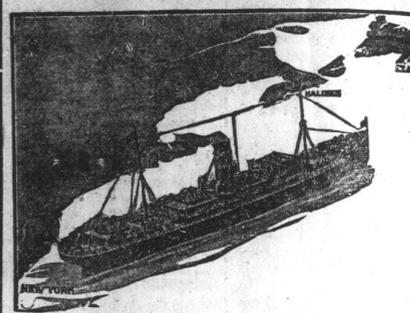

Man did not do this. He mostly chose to die in the open. So his remains are seldom found.

But a few years ago a discovery was made in a cave in Spain, which started the scientific world.

This cave, or rather series of caverns, long sealed up from human eyes, on being accidentally broken into, proved to be a sort of prehistoric National Gallery. Drawings and paintings of many extinct animals, and of some existing creatures—bulls, bison, deer, and horses, for example—adorned its walls. Many of the animals are drawn with arrows sticking in their bodies; and on some the heart, lungs, and other organs are picked out in red ochre, proving that the artists had at least some knowledge of anatomy.

The men who painted these pictures lived between 25,000 and 20,000 B.C.

When Sir Stephen Hill Was Governor of Newfoundland—An Ideal Address in Reply.

It is sometimes instructive, as well as interesting, to recall incidents of the past, especially in times like these when contrasts are sharply drawn and strikingly suggestive. I particularly refer now to the "Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne" delivered by His Excellency the Governor Sir Stephen Hill at the opening of the Legislature early in February, 1917, when the Hon. Charles Fox Bennett, Prime Minister—little more than half a century ago.

"MEN WHO THEIR DUTIES KNEW." Our "Conscript Fathers" in those days didn't begrudge the time and trouble involved in the preparation of such an important document as the one in question. They had the courage to express the views they entertained, even when they were not entirely in accord with the sentiments voiced by the Sovereign's representative. The five members of the Lower House who composed the Committee to draft the "Address in Reply" on that occasion were big men mentally and physically—"men who their duties knew, but knew their rights and dared to maintain them." Such stalwart standard-bearers of the great Liberal Party are not so much in evidence at the present time, either here or anywhere else. The Address reads as follows:—

May it Please Your Excellency: We, the representatives of Her Majesty's loyal subjects, the inhabitants of Newfoundland, beg to thank your Excellency for the gracious speech with which you have been pleased to open the present session of the Legislature, and for the uniform courtesy which has marked your Excellency's intercourse with the House of Assembly during your administration of Newfoundland.

We agree with your Excellency that the happiness and prosperity of the people of Newfoundland are a source of deep gratification, and we cordially share in your Excellency's congratulations upon the good fortune with which Divine Providence has blessed a large portion of the people of the Colony during the past year. We shall endeavor to promote its future welfare by every means in our power.

The departure of the Imperial Garrison from Newfoundland is a matter of regret, but was in some measure anticipated and rendered unavoidable by the long-contemplated policy of the Imperial Government, to which your Excellency refers; but we have no doubt from the peaceable and order-loving character of the people, as evidenced by the absence of crime and the empty cells of our prisons, that the proposed new Police Force will be found amply sufficient to preserve order.

We share in the pleasure expressed by your Excellency on the increase of Agriculture in the Colony, and trust that continued progress in this direction will be made during the present year.

The destruction of large quantities of forest timber and of individual property by the extensive fires which ravaged a considerable portion of the country last summer, supplemented by damages done to roads and bridges by the heavy rain and wind storms of September last, occasioned much uneasiness and considerable expenditure of the public money. It is satisfactory, however, to know that the outlay necessary for the repairs and rebuilding of roads and bridges injured or totally destroyed, has been of immediate benefit, not only to the unsuccessful fisherman of the Labrador coast, but also to many of those who suffered by the disasters referred to.

The House of Assembly regret that the published notices calling for tenders for two efficient steam vessels for the Coastal service resulted in no offer acceptable to the Government; but we hope with your Excellency that future efforts in this behalf on the part of the Government will meet with success.

We regard the employment of a steam vessel on the Labrador coast during the summer, for the purpose of disseminating information respecting the fishery there, as of the utmost importance, and shall give to it our earnest consideration. We thank your Excellency for the promise that the public accounts for the year, and the estimates for the current year, shall be laid before us. We shall make due provision for the public service. It is gratifying to learn, that the Revenue of the past year, reached £207,790; and not less so to be informed that notwithstanding the remission of £12,000 taxes on flour and bread, the Government will not only be enabled to meet all current expenses, including about $3,000 for repairing damages by flood and fire, but also to pay off the balance of the floating debt, amounting to $14,000, leaving besides a balance to the credit of the Colony of $25,898. We regard this as a most satisfactory condition of the finances. We thank your Excellency for the promise that the Geological Report shall be laid before us. Your Excellency's suggestion as to the procuring of a suitable building for the purpose of a public museum, wherein may be deposited a collection of the various productions of the Colony, together with the fossils and minerals now in the possession of Mr. Murray, shall have our favorable consideration; and we beg to assure your Excellency that we fully appreciate the importance of opening up the interior of the island by making roads, not only as means of giving employment to the poor, and inducing a still more extensive cultivation of the soil, but also as giving facilities for mineral investigations in fields yet unexplored. We thank your Excellency for the promise that despatches received from Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonies shall be laid before us. In conclusion, we trust we may respectfully assure your Excellency that we are duly mindful of the grave responsibility of the duties which devolve upon us as the representatives of the people, and that nothing shall be wanting on our part to secure harmony between the respective branches of the Legislature. We cordially unite with your Excellency in the prayer that our councils may always be guided by the wisdom of the Divine Providence.

Secrets of Westminster Abbey.

Many strange secrets are associated with Westminster Abbey, where Princess Mary's wedding was solemnized. How many people have heard of the Chapel of the Pyx, where the remains of the original Abbey, founded more than a thousand years ago, are to be found? The entrance to the chapel is in the East Cloister, near the Chapter House, and it is secured by seven massive locks, five of them being concealed. The door is lined with human skins, said to be those of Danes.

This portion of the Abbey is the least accessible. It may not be entered, even by the Dean, without the attendance of officials from the Treasury.

A doorway in the Little Cloister, opening into a passage called the Slupe, leads to what is believed to be England's oldest garden. The garden has been cultivated for over 800 years, and is as peaceful and as well kept to-day as it was when the monks of Edward the Confessor's time trod its ordered lawns and paths.

Beneath the Chapter House is an apartment which has long been under lock and key. It is in the possession of the Government, and was formerly used as a storeroom for the Regalia. Seven centuries ago the room was broken into by thieves, a circumstance which resulted in the Abbott of Westminster and forty-eight of his monks being sent to the Tower on suspicion.

If you stand in the Poet's Corner and face westward, you will see one of the most carefully guarded rooms in the Abbey. This is the Monument Room, which almost from the beginning of the Abbey's history has been a repository of valuable documents. Of priceless worth, these records, including many famous charters, have in late years been classified, and where necessary, renovated. They are kept in a series of ancient chests and presses, just as they were in the days of long ago.

In the Abbott Islop Chapel is one of the most remarkable waxwork collections in the world. It comprises effigies of famous men and women, from Queen Elizabeth to Pitt and Lord Nelson. The figures were carried in the funeral processions of monarchs and great statesmen, and are distinguished for the historical value of their wearing apparel rather than for accurate delineation of the features.

A Midnight Walk. Visitors to Edward the Confessor's shrine will notice a massive chest suspended within the stonework. This chest opened many years ago was found to contain the bones of the sainted king, together with some rare and fine examples of the early English Jeweller's art. Peyps records a visit to this shrine, and also the curious fact that "by particular favor," he held the body of Henry V's queen in his arms, her tomb being open at the time.

Probably no other religious edifice holds such a motley assemblage of dead persons as the Abbey. Lying alongside kings, queens, and statesmen are the merest nonentities, among them a would-be murderer, a pugilist, a laundress, a plumber, a butler, and a poultry farmer—"First Groom of Queen Anne's Poultry Yard."

TARTAR.

"Tartar" is a lime-like substance that forms on the teeth. It is composed of saliva, phosphate of lime, etc., and becomes attached to the teeth near the salivary duct. It is porous like a sponge and holds particles of food which decompose and taint the breath with an offensive odor. This tartar once formed increases, always in the direction of the gums; first inflaming them, then causing them to puff up and recede from the teeth, and finally by absorption of the bony sockets, to cause good, sound teeth to drop out for want of support.

THE GALLERY GODS. The critic in his easy seat. Found little in the play to charm: The jeweled lady on the street. Who leaned upon her escort's arm. Said this, while waiting for her car: "How tedious such dramas are." But down four flights of stairs there came A throng of youth with eyes aflame In all that they had seen that night. The gallery gods had fought delight.

Time was, with them I stood in wait To reach those topmost wooden seats. Had set from seven o'clock till eight. (Now the most tedious of feasts). And laughed and joked the time away Until the orchestra should play; And when at last the curtain rose, We sat entranced from start to close. A happy youthful throng back then, Glimpsing the stage's famous men.

We loved the drama, and we paid Our hard-earned quarters to behold Its purple and its red brocade. And live the stories it told; We did not sit in easy chairs, But madly raced four flights of stairs To struggle for a seat from which We could look down upon the rich. We gloriol in triumphant truth, Beholding it through eyes of youth.

But I am older now and sit No longer thrilled by all I see, I find less sparkle in the wit— The play's not what it used to be. To-day I view through eyes of Age The passing glories of the stage, And having reached the aisles of ease, I am more difficult to please. Are surfeited with pleasure, nods At joys which thrill the gallery gods.

Romans Used Fireworks

Fireworks are as old as gunpowder and there seems to have been displays of fireworks in Rome centuries before gunpowder was used in war. There is much uncertainty as to the time of the invention of gunpowder, though the date of its application to military uses seems to be established as some time in the fifteenth century. There are claims that explosive powder that was a mixture of charcoal, sulphur and saltpeter, was used by the Chinese centuries before the Christian era.

The industry of making fireworks and the business of setting off elaborate displays are sometimes called "the art of pyrotechny," the word "pyrotechny" being compounded of two Greek words meaning "fire art."

There is an extensive literature on the subject. References may be found in the writings of anilius and Vespius to the fact that fireworks were set off in connection with the circus in ancient Rome, and Claudianus, who wrote in the fourth century, mentions "whirling wheels and fountains of fire" in connection with the celebration of certain festivals. Fireworks, and which should not be confounded with mere bonfires, were set off as spectacles and ceremonies during the reigns of Henry VII, Henry VIII, Elizabeth and other English monarchs. In those early English days dragons spouting fire were a popular form of fireworks. In a book written on the subject in 1648 there is a reference to "trees and fountains of fire sent high up into the air."

Few industries have shown more development within a century than that of making fireworks. The firework-makers have not only made important contributions to the art themselves and refinements made by others in chemistry and mechanics.

The colors given to fireworks are produced by mineral salts, copper being made to produce green and blue; barium, green; sodium, yellow; calcium, red, and strontium, crimson. These salts are arranged in combination with meal gunpowder and the recipes for star compositions, rockets, squibs, Roman candles and the like are almost without number. Among the "set pieces" are portraits, lettered designs, "tree guns," fountains, palm trees, mosaic work and ships.

Fire Worshipper's Temple.

A prehistoric Temple office worship has recently been disclosed to view by excavation in the Mesa Verde National Park, Colorado. It contains a large circular pit filled with ashes, in the middle of a rectangular court. The discovery was made by an exploring party of the United States bureau of ethnology, led by Dr. J. Walter Foykes. The structure, of which to-day only a ruin remains, stood on a rock shelf of the same canyon in which the famous Cliff Palace is located. Dr. Foykes has named it the Fire Temple.

Hitherto it has not been known that the ancient cliff dwellers were fire worshippers, though the Hopi Indians, who are their undoubted descendants, have religious rites in connection with the kindling of "new fire," which they celebrate in July and November of each year. The fire is always started with a primitive "fire stick" or drill, rotated in a notched board. It is presumed that the prehistoric cliff folk had a fire priesthood (as the Hopi have now) and that certain caves close by the Fire Temple were the residential quarters of the fire priests. In the temple is a secret chamber, excavated beneath the rock floor, and painted on a wall of another room is a figure supposed to represent the fire god. At the east and west ends of the above mentioned court are stone benches, which evidently were used for seating spectators at ceremonial performances in the court. The walls of the west room of the temple are covered with paintings of mountain sheep—an interesting fact, inasmuch as imitations of the horns of those animals are worn by members of the Hopi Order of Horn Priests when nowadays they take part in the rites of the "new fire."
