THE IRISH LAND MOVEMENT.

To the Editor of The Toronto World. The Canadian public, as a rule, have very erreneous or inadequate understanding of the Irish land agitation and the issues matter. A violent suppression of the league, which has never as yet been declared illegal, is only the beginning of the task which lies by the superficial newspaper writers and platforn speakers, who manufacture our public opinion, and who have not given themselves the trouble to study the question from any deeper source than the equally superficial writers and talkers who pursue the same business in England, that the recent movement is merely Irish history repeating itself-that it is conducted in the same spirit and animated by the same motive as the "rising" in '98, the abortive movement in '48, and the more recent

It is stated the government, in view of the cases of land leaguers who escaped to England, consulted English and Irish law officers, who consider any attempt to encourage intimidation from England could be made the subject of indictment.

Gladstone is better, and it is expected to regard the question in the light of facts, that he will resume duty shortly.

Leo XIII. Receiving the Italian Pilgrims at Rome—Appealing to Heaven for Help. Leo XIII. Receiving the Italian Pilgrims at Rome—appealing to Heaven for Help.

Rome, Oct. 17.—The pope in his address to the Italian pilgrims at St. Peter's yesterday stated the deplorable state of affairs placed before him—the alternative of enduring the continual captivity, made harder daily, or the choice of going into exile. He, therefore, asked the Catholics to watch and pray for the liberty and independence of the pope. He concluded by saying he was no longer secure in his palace. He was outraged in his personal dignity in a thousand ways. The gravity and earnestness of the pope made a profound impression. He closed his address with his arms raised to heaven, as though imploring help.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—A Rome despatch says it is impossible to describe the enthusiastic cheers after the pope gave benediction on the occasion of receiving the Italian pilgrims in St. Peter's on Sunday. The pope looked thin, worn and anxious. A gang of roughs pelted the pilgrims when leaving the church of St. Vitale and shouted "Down with the vatican."

The Irish Revolutionists Said to be at the Bottom of It—Tendering Explosives as Freight, Which are Refused—Exottement Over the Event.

New York, Oct. 17.—The News says great excitement was created at police headquarters to-day on receipt of information from the inspector and captain of police that an attempt had been made last evening to burn the steamship Bothnia, last evening to burn the steamship Bothnia, of the Cumard line, lying at a pier in the North river. The fact was communicated to police officials by the agent of the Cunard line and officers of the Bothnia, that it was line and officers of the Bothnia, that it was believed that the attempted incendiarism was the work of Irish revolutionistes. Capt. McNichols of the Bothnia stated that some parties came aboard and scattered a fluid which burned over the runners on the passage-way, between the state rooms. The flames were discovered in time, and extinguished by the chief steward with assistance. Phosphorus was used and gasoline or other inflammable stuff. The parties left four bottles, which contained phosphorus. They were turned over to the phorus. They were turned over to the police. ANOTHER RAILWAY.

We hear talk of still another railway, to be built without government assistance but toward which the munuicipalities to be benefitted will be asked to give a bonus. It is to run a railway from Hamilton to Kingston, to go right into all the towns and documents were signed :villages along the shore. One great fault of the Western and Trunk is that many of their stations are from a mile to two miles from the town or village they serve. The new scheme is mentioned in connection with the Credit Valley, and fast and frequent trains are to be prominent fea-

It has been said that a good man struggling with adversity is a spectacle for the gods. The same may surely be said of the spectacle of the greatest man in England struggling with the demon of discontent in Ireland. Grander than anything pictured of the Homeric heroes, whose deeds and characters Mr. Gladstone has so artistically analyzed, is the spectacle of the grand old man, the greatest statesman that England ever had, trying to do justice to Ireland in spite of herself. No, let us not say that, either, not in spite of herself-but in spite of revolutionary leaders who are enraged at the bare prospect of the people taking kindly to the new land law. Ten years ago, three years ago, any man would have been counted "cracked" had he said that so liberal a scheme as the new Irish land law would be actually in operation. But now. when far more than was expected has been gained, the agitators turn round and say they will have none of it. They spurn as if it were dirt such a law of tenant right as English and Scotch farmers would think it something marvellous to obtain. Suppose there had been no new land law passed for Ireland, or even proposed in parliament, would the agitators have been any more enraged and irreconcilable than they are now They could not, surely; in fact it seems as if the passage of a land law does more to rouse them to fury than if all reform of the law had been peremptorily refused. But we are looking at the truly heroic spectacle of the great statesman, now in the closing years of his life, spending as it were his last breath in the gigantic and apparently thankless task to which he has set himself. Thankless, that is, as far as the irreconcileables are concerned, but not as regards the nation. Every patriot, every lover of Stephanie. his country-the three kingdoms-must wish success to the hero-statesman in the Beatrice and Thomas Duke of Genoa, the fight. A WIFE FOR A DOLLAR.

The good old days when a wife could be bought in a market place for a few shillings heavy drain upon the recources of the asso- or pounds belong to the historic past. In these degenerate days women have ceased to be valued so highly; the average man is selfish and conceited enough to imagine that whenever he wants a wife he ought not only to get one for nothing, but a small fortune along with her. Nor are many men now-a-days as chivalrous as the Roman Cato. George Laidlaw's bonus schemes. THE CITY DRAINAGE.

To the Editor of The Toronto World. SIR,—How long is the queen city to remain in the hands of an indifferent class of men, who, on the strength of advancing the sanitary condition of the city, have had no time to attend to it? At the next election let the people send to the council, not job-bers, but men who are independent in bers, but men who are independent in money matters, and whose character are worth sustaining. Let us have more such men as the one who so worthily fills the mayor's chair. Now for my ideas: We, first of all, want a house-to-house canvass to ascertain how many are drained and how many are not; then to force every owner of a house to have it properly drained at Sir,—There was something grotesquely funny in the position in which Sir Francis Hincks found himself the other day, in his eagerness to attack the author of a letter which appeared in these columns. He fell foul of the wrong man. In his usual haste front worth speaking of. But one never hears Canada spoken of down here. They all look upon it as an inhospitable country. For this reason. Montreal is only twelve or fourteen hours ride from here, and, as many Americans go there in the winter and experience the rigorous climate of that part of the province, they return with very unfavorable opinions of it. They can't be convinced that up Toronto and London way a different temperature is experienced. They hold the same opinion as Voltaire when he spoke of Canada as arpeats of srow. Their whole attention is at present directed towords Mexico, the rich trade of which they intend to wrest from the German and the proud man's contumely. But this democratic country, of the rich man's scorn and the proud man's contumely. But with us such men are happily few. It is, I doubt not, excessively tantalizing to one of Sir Francis Hinck's super-loyal temperament to be compelled to witness the rapid growth of that national sentiment which shall ere long erect Canada into an independent power, and lift her into that higher position among nations which she is both worthy of and able to maintain.

John Macdonald and the Hon. Alexander Mackenzie change not their political opinions, there is no fear of our connection with Great Britain being severed. And these two statesmen are the lirkbs that bind us, are they? Twas but the other day Sir John Macdonald threw away his long matured opinions, and triumphantly rode back to power upon the national policy cry; and in all probability the same statesmen would not hesitate to mount the more spirited steed, independence, at the opportune moment, and thereon ride back again. So here we have Sir Francis Hincks and the Globe standing almost alone fighting vainly against the national aspirations of stalwart youth. We are told that we have no representatives in parliament and there-fore can accomplish but little. But we have representatives in parliament who only await the signal from shore, when they will run up their colors to the mast-head and proclaim aloud their national sentiments. MADELINE.

BY FORLORN HOPE. "Was there ever such an unfortunate girl?" exclaimed Mademoiselle D'Ibervan as she threw herself, with evident annoyance, into the great old-fashioned hair-backed chair drawn up in front of the huge fireplace where blazed the great logs and faggots; for those were the days when our modern fireplaces, grates or stoves were un-known, and even if known, would have shocked the ideas of comfort and plenty hereditary to the old chateau.

The young chatelaine, despite the look of perplexity on her face, was certainly a pretty picture, as, curled up in the great arm-chair, with feet incased in high-heeled slippers with great crimson bows, nestling on the quaint tapestry footstool; and what with ruffles and panier and rare old lace and braids of hair, she looked not unlike one of our modern belles; for, after all, fashion, like history, repeats itself.

"Here am I, young, with a fair share of good looks, boasting I dare not say how many quarters of nobility, with lands broad and valuable, money and jewels at command, and yet perfectly miserable, tormented by the strangest fancies. Suitors havin old and young, rich and poor, and yet I dare yield myself to none for fear that my game or my wealth is what they seek, and not myself. This all comes from my being left an orphan. Had my parents lived, I suppose I should have been, as soon as I reached the proper age, presented to my future husband, and all would have been well. I wonder if I should have had any of these stupid fancies about love, etc., that trouble me now? Or better yet, had I born in the valley, I should have coquetted with Pierre and Silvain, listened

Two days afterwards, a plain carriage bearing the Ibervan arms, drove quickly into the little hamlet of V——, a dependence of the old baronial castle of La Roche, and in a few minutes all the village knew that Nina, old Nanone's daughter, had come to visit her old mother, bringing with her a fellow-servant, young and handsome enough to be a grand duchess, declared the loungers to be found even in that rural spot, and who had caught a present escapade.

Mademoiselle D'Ibervan had already been

Mademoiselle D'Ibervan had already been a week with old Nanone, and, owing to the inclement weather, had been kept within doors, until, at length, she had become weary of her assumed position. Then came dark forebodings. The peasants shook their heads mournfully, and spoke despondently of the terrors of a winter such as the severe fall indicated, and as Madeline listened she gradually began to realize that there might be more trouble than her own, and that there was work for willing hands. It was not long ere Madewilling hands. It was not long ere Made-line began the good work, for the peasants spoke freely before old Nanoe's nose, of their wants and sufferings, and to hear was to relieve, as far as lay in her power, and although the recipients of her bounty could scarcely connect the benefits received with the poor little peasant girl, yet they learn-

"You are leaving us, monsieur?" asked
Madeline, with an eagerness she would wil-

"Then why hesitate, monsieur; surely a woman who could win such a devotion cannot be so far below you but that you might raise her to your own level," cried Madeline, fargetting her own position in her desire to comfort her companion.

"Oh! Madeline! Madeline! you know not what you ask! Do not tempt me! Can you not see that it is you alone who hold my heart and my destiny? Think of the conflict that at this moment tears my heart, and have mercy!" cried the young hostess awaited the arrival of her guest in the room where my story first found her. She had not waited long when a step resounded through the hall, and the door opened to admit, not the old man she had expected, but George, Chevalier de La Roche.

"Madeline!" he cried, as he recognized the face despite the altered dress. "Made-line, what means this? Where is Madem-

The Philadelphia Times enumerates some of the methods in vogue among the hucksters to defraud their customers, which it may be useful for said customers to make a young man became more and more astonished at the grace, vivacity and gentlemess of the young peasant girl; for Madeline, despite her resolve, would forget her role and chat with the lord of the manor with a freedom she might have found it difficult, in her true character, to assume; for the work Mossione La Roche's father was lead to believe the measure is running over. with a freedom she might have found it dim-cult, in her true character, to assume; for although Monsieur La Roche's father was although Monsieur La say, the young peo-

A meeting was not difficult to bring about, for long since he had learned the daily routine of visiting and nursing.

As the sun went down behind the grand old mountains that encircled the lovely valley upon which frowned the old castle, Madeline hastily left the bedside of a poor old cripple, her especial protege, and was hurrying homeward when she saw the young man approaching. With the deference usually accorded to rank in those days, shedrew to one side of the road and dropped a courtesy as he passed. He was not pre-

Muzzling the Press in Turkey. Turkish newspapers do not get a great amount of news, and are compelled to throw away a part of what they do receive. The Levant Herald lately said, for example: "We are obliged regretfully to bury in the tomb of silence some important and interesting information received yesterday, together with a leading article connecting that information with the forecasts and comments which have lately appeared in comments which have lately appeared in our columns on the same subject." This was in obedience to an order of the government censor forbidding the publication of moblesse oblige?"

"Yes, sir," replied Madeline demurely.

"But you cannot understand all it implies, Madeline; and I can only tell you that it is that phrase that drives me hence."

"Surely, monsieur has done nothing to sully his fair fame?" questioned Madeline, eagerly.

"Not perhaps in your eyes, Madeline."

Frightened beyond measure, Madeline turned from him hastily, but remembering that he was leaving his home for her sake, she turned to the spot where she had left him, not daring to follow her, and said:

"Monsieur, forgive me, but I came to bid you stay, for it is, as you tell me, for love of me that you were going to the great to apital. Remain, for I leave here to-day, et et he break of day."

"You, Madeline! going?"

"You, Madeline! going?"

"Yes, monsieur. My conge expires to day, and Nina and I must return to the service of Mademoiselle D'Ibervan."

"My father's ward?"

"Yes, monsieur. Good-by, and may you forget me," she added, and before the young man could detain her she was gone.

In the early summer months Mademoiselle D'Ibervan was startled by the announcement that the Count de La Roche would visit his ward. Preparations had been accordingly made, and the young hostess awaited the arrival of her guest in the room where my story first found her. She had not waited long when a step re-

THAT BLOCK PAVEMENT.

The Yonge street block pavement is now an old theme, but it never seems to lose its interest or its power of stirring up the bile of all those concerned in it. One reabile of all those concerned in it. One reason for this, of course, is that the grievance is still in existence; the road is still blocked up and the merchants are still complaining of the loss of business sustained thereby. A meeting was held at Albert hall yesterday afternoon for the purpose of discussing the question. There were some forty or fifty present; the majority were Yonge street merchants, and there were besides a number of property owners, a sprinkling of merchants, and there were besides a number of property owners, a sprinkling of aldermen, and one of the contractors. Mr. Charles Bugg occupied the chair, and Mr. Charles Reynolds was appointed secretary. The chairman read the resolutions prepared at the preliminary meeting. Mr. Charles Durand moved the adoption of the first, which read.

"IT WAS THE CAT." ack Couster Flogged at the Central Prison Yes-terday Morning.

The notorious Jack Coulter of Kington received the first instalment of his fortyeight lashes at the central prison yesterday morning. Coulter belongs to a very bad family residing at Kingston, and on Sept. 15 last he attempted to outrage the person of a young girl named Annie Campbell in an unfrequented street at the limestone city. The villian was happily frustrated in the attempt by a gentleman passing by, and his arrest speedily followed. "TWA HOURS AT HAME," The Kennedys at Shaftesbury Hall-A Large And Delighted Audience. According to previous announcement, Mr Kennedy, the famous Scottish vocalist, opened his olio at Shafetsbury hall last night, and the weather muggy, rainy and disagree able as it was, did not prevent him from being received by about as large an audience as could be packed into the house. He was accompanied by his three daughters, Helen. Marjory and Maggie, and by two of his sons, Robert and John, the latter being a bright little fellow who apparently has only recently entered his teens.

Mr. Kennedy, though he looks somewhat older than when he last appeared before a Toronto audience, has not deteriorated in his profession, and his years seem to sit very lightly upon him. Persons who are fond of original expressions would remark that age cannot wither remark that age cannot him, nor eastom stale his cannot variety. It may almost be said of him that he resembles good wine, and that he is improved by repeated voyages across the Atlantic. His voice is as sweet and mellow, his facial gestures are as humorous, and his powers of mimicry are as true as they were he first made his bow before a Toronto when audience. With such assistance as he re ceives from the various members of his family, he is able to provide a unique en-tertainment, and one which does not readi-

The resolution was apoken to by Mr. Brid and Ald. Steiner after which Mr. Godson repeated the statements made by him at various times to the board of works. Mr. Jaffray replied to the attacks made on the committee of the property-owners association, and said that committee had made full enquiries which resulted in a verification of Mr. Godson's statements about the colar. Ald. Boustead rose to speak, but was interrupted by the secretary who said he had heard rumours of a comspiracy to burk the object of the meeting. A desultory discussion ensued, and then Mr. Bansley get up to speak. Being interrupted, on another gentleman claiming the floor, he said he would stand there all night but he would be heard. He and Mr. Durand then shouted at each other for a few moments, when the secretary rose. "Sit down, sit own," cried Mr. Bansley.

The introductory piece was "Oh, sing to me the old Scots' songs," which was folowed by "There's nae luck aboot the hoose." Everybody has has heard this song, and almost every Scotchman in Toronto has heard Mr. Kennedy sing it, but his rendering of it last evening was a decided advance upon those of former years and literally brought down the house. It was perhaps the only piece on the programme which shewed the singer's power of pathos, and suppressed sobs were heard from several parts of the hall. "The hoom o' the Cowdenknowes" was then given as a trie was perhaps the only piece on the programme which shewed the singer's power of pathos, and suppressed sobs were heard from several parts of the hall. The seemed to touch on a sore point and the room instantly resounded with cries of "The taxpayers, the taxpayers!" which continued for some time. Shortly afterwards the resolution was put and carried.

It was now growing dark, and the secretary, in order to read his minutes, had to walk up to the window, where he read the second resolution. Several gentlemen cried "Carried!" the chairman pronounced it carried, and the secretary was proceeding to the collection of the survey was proceeding in the suit was Mr. Kennedy himself, who gave five or six of his old specialties.

Miss Marpiory's "Twas within a mile o' Edinboro' toen," was piquant and bright, without being pretentious. Miss Maggie sang in several pieces, but her chief part in the entrainment was the playing of the piano accompaniments. Mr. Robert has a fine, rich tenor voice which bids fair to become better with time. His rendering of "Annie Laurie" and "The Macgregor's Gathering" were received with very great favor. A word of praise must be awarded to Master John, whose performances on the violin were very skilful, and highly creditable to a youth of his years. Of course, the strong card in the suit was Mr. Kennedy himself, who gave five or six of his old specialties. One word on the subject of encores. It is positively cruel to encore after a song like

INSURANCE

NON-FORFEITABLE LIFE INSURANCE

THE ÆTNA LIFE INS. CO. first introduced its Nonpublic in 1866. Previously thereto the universally prevalent objection to a man's insuring his life was found to be: "Oh, yes, it is all very one so long as one can pay his premiums, but when unable to pay move he loses all he has paid." And then would follow instances of neighbours cruelly robbed in this manner, after puying 5, to or 20 years. Not so, however, with the ACTAL'S NON-FORFITABLE POLICIES, we answered: and so fair a system some commended itself, and the ACTAL'S policies became popular. Some of their fee there have since been imitated by other companies, but it is an undenlable fact that no policy is more highly esteemed throughout the Dominion by those fortunate have since been imitated by other companies, but it is all thickness fortunate no policy is more highly esteemed throughout the Dominion by those fortunate enough to hold them, than those of the ÆTNA LIFE. Every ÆTNA policy how being issued in Canada contains a most liberal non-forfeiting feature, besides having its entire Reserve, or Re-Insurance Fund, annually and permanently deposited with the Finance Minister at Ottawa.

IN A PREVIOUS ADVERTISEMENT we have shown how mistaken was the representation of "greater results." when compared with the Eina's Nonforfeitable Endownen! Bonds, and the following figures will ajford proof that the other claim made-that it induces people to hold on to their policies—is equally groundless. They are from Prof. Cherriman's Insurance Reports, and relate solely to Canadian business transacted during the past three years:—

Members in good standing, Dec. 31st, 1877.... New entrants, less deaths, in 1878-79-80...... New entrants, less deaths, in 1878-79-80..... Dropped their insurance in 1878-79-80... Balance, increase of members in three years Members in good standing. Dec. 31st, 1880... From which it is plain that the two other companies increased their membership in three years by only 95 out of a possible 2.145—a little over 4 per 109: 5 During the same time the ÆTNA LIFE, with nearly 9.030 exposed to lapse, increased its membership by 1,838 out of a possible 2,754, or about 67 per 103: The difference in favour of the ÆTNA LIFE'S Non-forfeitable System is very rativing. It shows that when people are free to go or to stay, they prefer to stay with a good company; and that when they find their policies good for nothing if they stop paying, they are seventeen times more likely to pay no

All the ÆTNA'S Endowment Policies are Nonforfeitable after two Annual Payments, and all its Life Policies are so after three. For further particulars apply to WILLIAM H. ORR, Manager, Toronto.
