Technical and Bibliographic Notes / Notes techniques et bibliographiques

The Institute has attempted to obtain the best original copy available for scanning. Features of this copy which may be bibliographically unique, which may alter any of the images in the reproduction, or which may significantly change the usual method of scanning are checked below.

Coloured covers /

Couverture de couleur
Covers damaged/
Couverture endommagée
Covers restored and/or laminated /
Couverture restauree et/ou pelliculee
Cover title missing /
Le titre de couverture manque
Coloured maps /
Cartes géographiques en couleur
Coloured ink (i.e. other than blue or black)/
Encre de couleur (i.e. autre que bleue ou noire)
Coloured plates and/or illustrations /
Planches et/ou illustrations en couleur
Bound with other material /
Relié avec d'autres documents
Only edition available /
Seule édition disponible
Tight binding may cause shadows or distortion along interior margin / La reliure serree peut causer de l'ombre ou de la distorsion le long de la marge intérieure.

L'Institut a numérisé le meilleur exemplaire qu'il lui a été possible de se procurer. Les détails de cet exemplaire qui sont peut-être uniques du point de vue bibliographique, qui peuvent modifier une image reproduite, ou qui peuvent exiger une modification dans la méthode normale de numérisation sont indiqués ci-dessous.

Coloured pages / Pages de couleur

Pages damaged / Pages endommagées
Pages restored and/or laminated /
Pages restaurées et/ou pelliculées
Pages discoloured, stained or foxed/
Pages décolorees, tachetées ou piquees
Pages detached / Pages détachées
Showthrough / Transparence
Quality of print varies /
Qualité inégale de l'impression

Includes supplementary materials / Comprend du matériel supplémentaire

Blank leaves added during restorations may appear within the text. Whenever possible, these have been omitted from scanning / Il se peut que certaines pages blanches ajoutees lors d'une restauration apparaissent dans le texte, mais, lorsque cela était possible, ces pages n'ont pas eté numérisées.

THE SCRIBBLER.

MONTREAZ. THURSDAY; 19th.JULY, 1821. NO. IV,

> Ygnotis errare locis, ignota videre Flumina gaadebat.-OVlo.

To visit regiona, vast, nnknown, nntried Aud truce the hidden waters was hie pride.

Anter que todo esimi dama.-CALDERON. Above all else my fair I prize.

To give a brief and impartial review of thefew literary productions that owe their origin, to, or derive their interest from, Canada, having been announced as part of my plan, I will begin that department of my labours, with the first regular original work that I believe ever issued from the press in this country.

Relation dun Voyage à la Cốte du Nord-Ouest de $C$ Amerique Septentrionale dans les années 1810, 11, 12, 13, et 14.-par G. Franceizee, fils:

> Printed by C. B. Pasteur. 1820. 8vo. p. p. 284.

This is what may be called a matter of fact work; one of those from which geographers, historians, and naturalists derive the materials for their systems, descriptions, and histories. It has been often a matter of surprise that so few among the many who have traversed the almost unknown regions of the interior of this Continent, have, in any shape, tecorded, or rendered public, their narratives and observations. Yet whem it is considered that it is the love of gain, principally, if not entirely, that has led them to encounter the numerous difficulties of such enterprises; that they are little fitted by education, habits, or talents, for any thing beyond their immediate sphere of action; and that, in addition, the jealousy of commercial monopoly is ever alive to discourage, or suppress, the publication of any details connected with the lucrative pursuits which bring their traders in contact with the wonders of nature, the loci ignoti, and flumina ignota of the poet; it will cease to astonish. We ought therefore to hail with the greater pleasure, welcome with the more honour, and peruse with the more indulgence, whatever appears in such a shape as the work now under consideration. Mr. Franchere, undoubtedly appears to have had some talent for observation, and to be a faithful narrator of occurrences. There is much less, however, of description both of animated and inanimate nature, than might have been expected from the extensive fange of his travels, and the stupendous objects that presented themselves. In this respect his book is too scanty, whilst, it is, in other points, unnecessarily eked ont with individual details, such for instance as the list of the ship's crew, in which he embarked, and the superfluous, and superseded account of New- York, etc. which would not be unworthy of a regular bred book-maker. It is nevertheless an interesting performance, giving an account of places and circumstances, known to very few individuals ine this place, and entirely unknown to the rest of the world. The commercial expedition which he accompanied, sailed fiom New-York in September, 1810, and formed the first settlement at the mouth of the Columbia; on the North. West Coast: of America; the nariatives of which and of the:
voyage, occupy the ten first chapters. The occurrences there during the three succeeding years, take up six more. Thiree chapters are devoted to a brief account of the country, its natural pro, ductions, and of the natives, their manners, appearance, and language; and the seven last chapters relate the journey over land to Montreal. A great defect, and which must much diminish the yalue of the work as a book of reference; is the want of any kind of map, either of the River Co: lumbia, of the North West Coast, or of the Indian territories through which the author passed. Atthough the narrative, neither in its details, nor its language, is such as to rivet the attention of the reader throughout, yet it is sufficiently instructive and interesting to ensure the entire perusal of it, by whoever commences it, and who has any taste for the sort of reading to be found in all voyages and travels. There is no doubt tliat an English translation of it would be well received in London ; but it would be more so, if there were more commercial memoranda embodied in it; these the author has evidently studious avoided; not following in this respect the example of his ili' lustrious predecessor in this career, Sir Alexander Mackenzie; but perhaps he had his reasons, and which it may not be difficult to guess. To general readers, setting aside the few chapters descriptive of the country and the natives, the narrative of the massacre of the crew of the Tonquin; and the short account given of the expedition undertaken and completed in 1810:11, by Messieurs Hunt and Mackenzie, from the waters öf the Missount, to the mouth of the Colimbiaj, will be the most interesting; to which may be added the fots. Owing short extract récointing an adventure on the journey towards the Rocky Nountains, with which I will conclude the review of this tooks.
$\ll \overline{\text { wr }} 0$ sincrity after perceived some canoes which were. paddling 66 with all their might to overtake wis. As; however, we continned ${ }^{66}$ to proceed on our route, we beard a child's voice, calling out is "French to us to stop. We landed, and the canoes having come. $<\mathrm{np}$, we recognized in ope of them, the wifo and children of one, « Pierre Dorioñ, ${ }^{\text {a }}$ a hunter, whọ had been sent, with a party: of ejght " men under the command of Mr. J. Beed, to collept provisions * amongst the Suake Indiana. This woman informed us of the mi${ }^{66}$ serable fate of the whole party. She related that, in the courso. ${ }^{66}$ of the month of January, the hunters being dispersed about the "country, in order to set their beaser traps; three, pen, one of " whom wos her husband, were attacked by the natives. One of ${ }^{66}$ them, who had only been wounded, got back to the tent, where he. cc-died iu a few minutes, after having told her that her husband was 4. killed; that she had directiy taken two horses which had been left "s at the tent, and placing her two childrén also upon therp, had, ${ }^{66}$ with the greatest expedition, proceeded, to Mr. Reed's post, which. © was about five duys? journey from the place where, her hnubana. ${ }^{6}$ was killed; that to her extreme snrprise, and horror, she found ${ }^{46}$ tho bouse empty, and perceiving traces of blood, did not doubt * that Mr. Reed bad been mardered: that she then lost no time in * puraling her flight fowards the mountains to the south of the, 6 River Walapyala, where she passed the wiuter, killing the two e horses for the nourishment of herself and her childraņ that as 4 leogth, being destitute of provisions, she Led come to the reso${ }_{6}$ Iution of descending from the mountains, and proceeding to the ${ }^{6} 6$ banks of the Columbia Riyer, in the hope of meating with mora 4 humane natives, and who might suffer her to reside with them, 4 until the canoes arrived, which she knew would ascend the river. cin the spring. The Walawala Indians had in fact exeroised great *hospitality towards this woman and it was they, who brought ${ }^{66}$ her to $00_{0}$. We made them a few presents; to reward them for cs their hamanity and attention, and they went away woll batise 4 fied,?

Mr. F. says, that they did not doubt that this. massacre was a retaliation exercised upon them by the Indians, for the death of one of them who: had been hung for a thefi the preceding spring bya Mr. (with whose namee I will not soil mw paej) adding this short ${ }_{2}$ but sensible refection:

Abstract

- This fact, the màssacre of the crew of the Tonquiti, the unfor4 tunato end of Captain Cook, and many cther similar cxamplea, $4 t$ evince how much those Europeanas who come in contact with ${ }_{2}^{6}$ uncivilized tribes, ought ta avoid acting fowards them upon-a ${ }^{6}$ footing of too evident inequality, and punisbing their offences, "according to customs and codes of law, in which there frequently 4 exinta a mont extravagant disproportion between crimes sud their (T) puniqhmento ${ }^{?}$ ?

Another reflection can not likewise fail to present itself from this short narrative; namely, admiration of the courage, perseverance, heroism, and resources of the woman, who, emboldened by maternal love, encountered difficulties and fatigues that few men would have supported:

Upon the whole Mr. Franchere's wo k is deserving of more encouragement than, I believe, it has hitherto met with in these provinces, and ought to form part of every gentleman's library in Canada.

The Emigrant's Assistant, or remarks on the Agricultural interest of the Canadas; part I. by A.-J. Christie, A.:M. with an Appendif:

Montreal, N. Mower, Printer, 1821, p. p. 140.
This is the latest work that has appeared on this (locally) interesting subject, and undoutedly, as far as it goes, by far the best. The author has had abundant opportunities of becoming theoretically acquainted with his subject, and is now, it is understood, likewise practically engaged in the task (arduous to a literary man, ) of settling upon waste land; hence his second part, will, when it appears, probably add considerably to the value of the first.

The feature'which predominates in this pub: lication is the accuracy and plain intelligence of the actounts given of the various modes of tenute of land in Canada, and the measures to be pursued by the various classes of emigrants for obtaining their object; so that it can not but be eminently usefill to them who arrive in this country with a view to settle as husbandmen. The style of the work is simple, unaffected and clear, well adapted to the capacity of that class: for whose information it is chiefly intended. There are some few marks of haste (although it was announced a long while befove it made its appearance, ) about it, but none peculiarly prominent.: It may be considered as an omission in the appendix that a sötice which has been given in the: Upper Canada papers; by the Executive Council, :dated 7th February, 1821, has been overlooked; by which the period for completing the settlement-duty on such lands as have been grantedr to personsj' who have from sickness and other legitimate causes, been unable to fulliil that duty, is extended to two years from the date of the locations.

30

In stating the comparative adsantages between the seigneurial tenures and those-in free and common soccage, the, to Englishmen inestimable, privilege of a vote in the representation, which attaches to both, but from which it is contended, (and has been decided in Upper Canada, *) that the simple possesson of alocation ticket before the:grant has been perfected, is excluded is altogether lost sight of.

When the second part appears, it shall receive. that attention, which, it will, as well as the first; no doubt amply deserve:
'c'Pooh! pooh! what's all this P? says my sprighte: ly Irishiwidow, who came tripping in to giveime

[^0]an extra-official report of an immense coal-skuttle bonnet, she had just remarked upon a thin-faced lady, (though that was chiefly conjecture, as the face was as much hidden as the lady in the lobster;') 'now my dare old fellow, give us something like; a sweet song, or a pretty little story that's as true as-." "as that thou art a bewitching creature," interrupted I, and as a compliment to a lady never fails to put her in good humour; I persuaded her to fọrego the determined resolution she had expressed to tear up my poor "Scribbler" of to day, whilst I wrofe out for her the following lines, a juvenile production of Master Lewis Macculloh, a short time after he left sćhool.

the five senses, imitated from grecourt.

I hear my sweet Althea's witching voice;
Above divinest melody my choice;
Her breath's perfize I scent; the fragrant air
Of all sweet-smelling fowers beyond compare;
: $\mathcal{A}$ oieto her beanties, see her winning smiles,
Her beaming glances, :and her ariless wites;
'Then from her'moistening lip I taste sach drainghe
Of nectar${ }^{2}$ d love, that the all-porverful shafts
Of my more poiguant sense of feelligg seex,
Altiongh reality; yet half a dream;
Now on my fingers, if I'vé rightly told;
Here are iva sensed gratified fivefold:
As for the sixth-

Th Thank you, thank you, that'll do, stop there; and now for your story, but let it be short for I've no time," looking at the clock, "Ah," said I, following the glance of her bright sparkling eye. sido you know that when Fontenelle was asked what difference there was between a clockand a woman, he replied, a clock serves to point out the hours, and a woman to make us forget:
them!"-" But I've no time now to be after making you forget the time," retorted the lively beauty, and away she bounded with airy step and flying garments, that gave such glimpses as made me regret-I was not twenty years younger.

L. L. $\mathrm{M}_{\text {. }}$

N. B.-The aforesaid thin-faced lady is warn. ed against wearing the said bonnet any more; particularly, as her features, though appearing puny under such an enormous canopy, have the most intrinsic delicacy of expression and beauty, and ought not-to be buried, like Juliet in the tomb of the Capulets.

ADVERTISEMENT.

Wanted, a number of spruce young men, to stand at the church-doors, for the devout purpose of staring the ladies out of countenance. Nothing is required but a sufficient share of impudence, and a good coat, If, however, to these, be added a talent for making remarks aloud upon every lady as she passes, and for tittering so as to shew a good set of teeth, the applicant will be considered the better qualified for his station. Persons desirous of engaging in this husiness will please to take their stands next Sunday, for the purpose of giving a specimen of their abilities:

Mem. Those who have but, one Sunday coat may have it brushed gratis on the occuasion.

Also wanted,-A few loungers to pārade arm in arm, no less, than eight in a row, along the: Champ de Mars, every fine evening, or whenever. the regimental band is playing.

[^0]:    - By a majority of fiy̧e in the Hous of Assemply at York , in Etarch-last:

